

Epitome of the ancient history of Persia ... / Extr. and tr. from the 'Jehan Ara', a Persian manuscript, by W. Ouseley.

Contributors

Ahmad ibn Muhammad Ibn 'Abd al-Ghaffar, Al-Kazwini al-Ghifári.
Ouseley, William, 1767-1842.

Publication/Creation

London : Cadell & Davies, 1799.

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/r344ganb>

License and attribution

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

10392/A

2/-

AHMAD IBN MUHAMMAD IBN

ABD AL-GHAFAR

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2017 with funding from Wellcome Library

<https://archive.org/details/b28777645>

The RUINS of PERSEPOLIS

*"Is this your joyous City whose antiquity is of ancient days?"
"They set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof, and he brought it to ruin". Isaiah. 23.*

87119

EPITOME
OF
THE ANCIENT HISTORY OF PERSIA.

EXTRACTED AND TRANSLATED FROM THE
ZEHAN ARA, A PERSIAN MANUSCRIPT,

By W. OUSELEY, Esq.

“ Καλλιστη και μεγαλη των εν τη Ασια
“ η τε Κυρου Βασιλεια.” ΞΕΝΟΦ.

London:
PRINTED BY COOPER AND WILSON,
FOR MESSRS. CADELL AND DAVIES, STRAND.

1799.

TO
SIR ROBERT CHAMBERS,
KNIGHT, LATE CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE
SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE
IN BENGAL,
AND PRESIDENT OF THE
ASIATICK SOCIETY,
THIS WORK
IS INSCRIBED
BY
HIS FAITHFUL FRIEND
AND OBEDIENT SERVANT,
WILLIAM OUSELEY.

ERRATA.

Page 23, for Ferbadoan, read Ferbadcan.

— 52, for Balufes, read Balafes.

— 87, line 9, after curious add a full stop.

DIRECTIONS TO THE BINDER.

The View to face the title-page.

The Map to face the half-title, at the end of the preface.

PREFACE.

THIS little Work presents itself to the Publick without any affectation of intrinsick importance, and merely as the herald of another; yet the Orientalist and Antiquary may be pleased to see, for the first time, an Epitome of Persian Annals, in the original language of a native historian.

The want of such a Work induced me to seek, among my Manuscript Chronicles, the most concise and comprehensive account of the ancient *Iranian Sovereigns; and the following pages are the result of my inquiry. To the Persian text and the English translation, I thought it necessary to subjoin some collateral illustrations from other manuscripts. This task, during the performance of it, became a regular examination of each King's reign: And although I studied to keep my Work within the compass of a single and a small volume, and resolved to derive my illustrations entirely from sources unexplored hitherto by European writers ; yet, by an imperceptible accumulation of extracts, the superstructure became too vast for so slight a foundation as the original text.

* The Persian Empire, in general, is properly called ایران Iràn. The word Persia is derived from Pars, the name of a province, the most remarkable as being the usual residence of the Kings. This name, in modern compositions, is most frequently written Fars, after the Arabian manner.

I could not, however, prevail on myself to throw away what had been acquired by laborious perseverance, or to reduce that which seemed necessary to the illustration of obscure passages, I had collected a mass of extracts, which not only were, in a peculiar degree, useful and curious, on the Antiquities, Philology, and Geography of Persia, but threw such light on many important and interesting points of Sacred and of Profane History, as I had never expected to find in any post-Mohammedan authors.

To whatever degree the Reader's curiosity may be excited by this declaration, I make it with the confidence of one who conceives, that eight or nine years spent in close application to the study of Eastern Languages and Literature, have enabled him to appreciate justly, after repeated perusals, the value of his own manuscripts; and I entertain not any apprehensions that the future publication of those extracts will disappoint the Reader's expectation.

As the original text of the Jehan Ara (which is here given with little more than the English translation) was found inadequate to the mass of notes and illustrations, I extended my plan, and chose, as a suitable ground-work, that Section of the Leb-al-towarikh,* which contains the ancient annals of Iràn. This work I selected from a multiplicity of other Tarikhs, both greater and smaller; because it comprises within a moderate compass, more useful and important historick information, less intermixed with fable and romance, than any other. The frequent mention in M. D'Herbelot's Bibliothèque Orientale of the Leb-tarikh, is a sufficient testimony of its excellence; and it is without doubt the same book which Pietro della Valle once intended to translate.†

* لب التواريخ

† “ Di tradur da Perfiano in Toscano un libro
 “ che chiamano Midolla delle Historie, & e un breve
 “ compendio della historia di tutti i Re della Perfia
 “ da Adam infin'a Sciah Tahmasp.” Lett. 12. 1621.

Having given, from this Work, the original text of the Persian Annals, with a translation, I shall proceed to illustrate the reign of each King in regular succession, by examining the traditions recorded in various rare, ancient and authentick manuscripts—slightly noticing such as have been already printed or translated, and deriving my materials, as I before said, from sources hitherto unexplored by Europeans. It were, indeed, unpardonable in me to repeat a twice-told tale, or incroach upon the labours of another; since few libraries, either publick or private, afford a more ample stock of original matter than my own Manuscript Collection; acquired through the kindness of friends residing in the East—undefatigable perseverance in transcribing, and diligence in inquiry—and, I must acknowledge, a degree of expense, far beyond that which sound prudence would have prescribed to one whose purse but seldom overflowed.

Of the Historical Works, or Manuscript Tarikhs, from which I have principally derived my materials, I shall here subjoin the titles—naturally beginning with mention of Tabari's "Great Chronicle," the most ancient أبو جعفر محمد بن جرير by تاریخ کبیر

Abu Jaffer Mohammed ebn Jarir, surnamed
 الطبري Altabari, from Taberistan in Persia—where he was born, Anno Hegiræ 224, (A. D. 838.)
 His Work is frequently quoted in Persian manuscripts by the title of Tarikh Jafferi, or Tarikh ebn Jarir.

and most excellent of all. It is comprised in two large volumes, containing a general history of the Asiatick World from the Creation, the Persian and Arabian annals, with the Jewish records, interspersed with many curious traditions which must have descended to the venerable Historian through some other channel than that of the Koran. Tabari, though a native of Persia, composed this admirable Work in the Arabick language. Fortunately, however, it underwent a Persian translation within a few years after the author's death—for the original Arabick is no longer to be found.*

* Some scattered fragments of it still exist— See Ockley's History of the Saracens; D'Herbelot; and my catalogue of the Oriental Manuscripts in the British Museum, Oriental Collections, Vol. II. p. 185.

But the Antiquary may console himself for this loss, as the Persian translator has added to the text of Tabari much curious and important matter. From the original work, Elmakin, an Arabian writer, has principally compiled his Annals of the Saracens, beginning with that epoch at which my researches end, the age of Mohammed. I have used three copies of Tabari, all fine manuscripts; following, in general, one brought from India, and given to me by that most ingenious Orientalist, Jonathan Scott, Esq. This copy (in two folio volumes) was transcribed in Persia, A. Hegiræ 850, (A. D. 1446.)

Having dwelt so long on this article, I shall briefly mention the other Tarikhs which I have consulted;

not observing in this place any chronological order, as a more full and regular description of them shall be prefixed to my Illustrations.

Tarikh Moagem, تاريخ معجم a very elegant and flowery composition, interspersed with poetry; containing the History of Persia till the time of Nushirvan.

Tebkât Nâsseri, طبقات ناصري
 “This precious work,” says M. Anquetil du Perron,* “is of the year of “the Hegira 655, of Christ 1257;”
 yet my copy, the only one I have as yet seen, is dated 650, سنه خمسين
 (of Christ 1252.) It contains

* Mem. Acad. Inscrip. Vol. 31, p. 379.

the History of Asia, Jews, ancient Arabians and Persians, Khalifs, Mohammedan Kings of India, Persia, Khorassan, &c. to the descendants of Gengiz Khan.

Tarikh Gozideh, تاریخ کزیده, a most excellent compilation of Asiatic History, by Hamdallah Mustoufi, author of the Nozbat al Coloub. It concludes with an account of Cazvin, his native city.

Rozet al Sefa, روضة الصفا, a general History of the Eastern World; in seven (sometimes in nine, or twelve) volumes, by Mirkbond, who lived in the fifteenth century. A geographical index is subjoined to the last volume.

Khelassut al Akbbar, خلاصة الاخبار, an abridgment of the Rozet al Sefa, by Khondemir, the son of Mirkbond above mentioned. My copy of this abridgment consists of above 1200 pages, quarto.

Habib-al-Seir, حبيب السير a general History of Asia, by the same Khondemir: a most valuable composition, in several volumes: the copy which I have used, consists of four volumes of unequal size.

Zein-al-akbbar, زين الاخبار, a very curious and extraordinary work; containing the ancient History of Persia, Jewish, Christian, Magian and Hindoo religious facts and ceremonies, annals of the Mohammedan Kings and Khalifs, geographical anecdotes, and chronological tables, &c.

Tarikh Kapchak Khani, تاريخ قپچاق خاني so called after the author, Kapchak Khan Kuli Beig, of Balkh; who has most ingeniously written the History of Asia from the creation of Adam, of the Deluge, Moses, Christ; the Greeks and Romans, from the time of Alexander; Arabians, Copts, Chaldeans, &c. &c.; the Khalifs, Mohammedan Kings of Persia, Hindooftan, Tartary, &c. down to the year 1137 of the Hegira (of Christ 1724.) The latter part of this work affords many curious historical anecdotes concerning Balkh, Bokhara, the countries bordering on the river Jihoon (or Oxus), &c.

A very excellent Tarikh, the title or author of which I am not yet able to ascertain; it begins (after the usual bismillahi) with the words بعد از حمد الهي and contains an account of the Creation, the Prophets and Patriarchs, ancient Kings of Persia, the Khalifs, &c. to the year 951 of the Hegira, (of Christ 1544.) This manuscript bears the impression of M. Le Gentil's Persian seal.

Another very curious and valuable Tarikh, or History of the Patriarchs, Prophets, ancient Persians and Arabians, Mohammedan Princes of Persia, Arabia, Hindooſtan, &c. to the year 773 of the Hegira, (A. D. 1371.) Of this work I cannot discover the title;

it is a large folio volume, and begins abruptly أما بعد بدانکه حق تعالی

Tarikh Subah Saduk, تاریخ صبح صادق a general History of the Asiatick World, ancient and modern, by Mohammed Saduk, of Isfahan; in four large volumes, folio: a very rare and valuable work.

A folio volume, imperfect both at the beginning and ending. It contains a variety of most curious historical anecdotes, some of which shall be translated in another work.

Tarikh Alfi, تاریخ الفی or The Chronicle of a Thousand Years, (i. e. after Mohammed;) a very excellent compilation of Asiatick history, in three large folio volumes. The beginning of the first volume affords some anecdotes of Yezdegerd, and the invasion of Persia by the Musulmans.

The Nizam al Towarikh, نظام التواريخ a very curious epitome of Persian history, by Abou Saied Abdallah ben Almouelli.

Tarikh Nizam al Molk, تاريخ نظام الملوك or Seiaset wa Seir al Molouk, سياست و سير الملوك a celebrated work, composed about the year of the Hegira 485, (A. D. 1092.)

Merat al Aulum, مرآت العالم or Tarikh Bakhtaver Khani, تاريخ بختاور خاني a general history of the ancient and modern Sovereigns of Asia, by Bakhtaver Khan; in two large quarto volumes.

The Dabistan, دابستان of which part has been translated in the New Asiatick Miscellany of Calcutta.

But few of these historical compositions in prose, afford more useful or curious information to the Persian Antiquary, than the great Heroick Poem of Ferdoufi, فردوسی intitled شاه نامه Shah Nameh, or Book of Kings, composed in the tenth and eleventh centuries of the Christian Æra,* from some original annals in the Pehlavi language, which escaped the general destruction of Persian books when the

* Ferdoufi died, A. Hegiræ 411, (A. D. 1020.)

Musulmans invaded and conquered Iran. This celebrated work contains, in more than sixty thousand distichs, the ancient records of Persia, from Caiumuras to Yezdegerd, interspersed with astonishing fiction and delightful romance. But from the traces of real history, which frequently appear, I am induced to suspect that the Chronicle of Tabari was not unknown to our Persian Poet: this suspicion I may be allowed to entertain, without derogating from the authority of those Pehlavi annals above mentioned; since I am well persuaded, that even at this day, many valuable manuscripts, in the ancient language of Iran, still exist in that country, and may yet reward the labours of some inquisitive and ingenious traveller.

From three fine copies of this admirable work,* I have derived much curious information. I have occasionally used, also, the two Persian abridgments of this work; the first of which M. Anquetil du Perron styles “Tavarikh du Schah Namah,”† an epitome, by Tavakhol Housseini; this is, however, the work usually denominated Mun-

* One of these is peculiarly beautiful; a very large folio, written in Persia, and decorated with a variety of most splendid and extraordinary paintings: what it originally cost in Iran, I cannot ascertain; but it appears from a note, that one thousand rupees, (about 100*l.*) were paid for it in Bengal.

† “Tavarikh du Schah Namah, abregè rare et précieux,” &c. Zendavesta, Tom. I. Appendix DXXXVI. The learned Wahl, in his “Altes und Neues Vorder and Mittel Asien,” &c. (p. 203, 204) has confounded this with the Shah Nameh Nefr, hereafter mentioned.

tekhyb Shab Nameh, منتخب شاه نامه or Muntekhyb Shemshir-Khani, شمشير خاني composed by Tavakol Beig, and dedicated to Shemshir Khan; it contains, in almost every page, some verses of the original Shab Nameh. The other abridgment is that quoted by the learned Hyde, in his Relig. Veter. Persarum, as “rarissimus liber,” intitled Shab Nameh Nesr, شاه نامه نثر This work was composed for the use of
 Dr. Hyde, by desire of the English Agent at Surat. The Parfi, whom he employed, mentions this circumstance in the preface, and in some wretched verses which he has subjoined at the end: the abridgment, however, is very ingeniously executed, in the most pure and easy prose. Of this work, which is preserved in the British Museum,

there did not exist a second copy until I obtained permission to transcribe it.*

Of Nizami's five poems, † three afford some curious matter: the Sekander Nameh, سکندر نامه or History of Alexander—the هفت پیشر Heft Peigur or Seven Forms, containing the romance of Baharam Gour—and Khosru

* Some extracts from the Shah Namah Nesr have been published in the Oriental Collections—As I have nearly translated the whole work, it will probably be soon offered to the lovers of Persian Antiquity and Romance.

† A sixth poem is sometimes added to the پنج گنج or Five Treasures of Nizami, as his works are emphatically styled. Of these, I shall hereafter give a full account; following the most ancient of three fine copies in my own Collection, transcribed A. Heg. 767, (A. D. 1365.)

Shireen, خسرو شيرين or the story of Khofru Parviz and his celebrated mistress Shireen—the Aineh Sekandery, اينه سڪندري or Mirror of Alexander, by Emir Khofru—and the خرد نامہ سڪندري Kherd Nameh Sekandery, Alexander's Book of Wisdom, by the celebrated Fami, furnish some passages on the Macedonian Conqueror's history.

From the Beharistan, and other works of the voluminous Fami,* I have

* Besides copies of this author's works in distinct volumes, I am so fortunate as to possess the whole, consisting of forty different compositions in prose and verse, Arabick and Persian, all uniformly written, and bound in one large volume; transcribed with such exquisite accuracy and eleextracted many curious illustrations; some also I have found scattered through the various works of Ferid-eddin Attar, such as his جواهر الذات Fouabir Alzat—خسرو گل Khosru Gul—لسان الغيب Lesan al Ghaib—منطق الطير Mantuk al Tair, and the others.

Besides the work of Emir Khosru above mentioned, his نه سپهر Neb Speher—هفت بهشت Hesht Behisht—شیرین خسرو Shireen Khosru, &c. afford historical matter; also the Bostan, Gulistan, Rifalehs, and other compositions of Sadi—the جام جم Faum- gance, and illuminated in such a splendid manner, that one of its late possessors paid for it, in the East, a sum nearly equivalent to 140 guineas.

i-Jem, or Cup of Jemsheid, by Aubedi— the Hadiket of Senai, حديقه سنائي—
 the Mesnavi of Gelaledin مثنوي
Roumi; and many other poetical works which the limits of this Preface will not allow me to enumerate.

The geographical treatises, from which I have chiefly derived my illuf-trations, are, that admirable work, the Nozbat al Coloub, نزهت القلوب by Hamdallah Mustoufi, whom M. D'Her-belot styles "Le Geographe Persan." مسالك و ممالك The Mesalek u
*Memalek—the عجائب البلدان

* Of this most valuable work I have given a short description in the Appendix: my translation of it will, I hope, be ready for publication in four or five months.

Ajaieb al buldan—the شیراز نامه Shiraz Nameh; a most curious and rare manuscript, quoted by Kæmpfer in his *Amœnit. Exot.—the هفت اقلیم Heft Aklim—the تحقيق الاعراب Tabkikh al Irab, a geographical dictionary, by Mohammed Saduk Isfabani—the Ajaieb al Makbloucat عجایب المخلوقات—the تحفة العراقيين Tohfut al Irakein, by the celebrated Kbacani—the Ajaieb al Gheraieb, عجایب الغرایب—the geographical index at the end of Mirkbond's Rozet al Sefa, and many others.

In Philological explanations I have used a variety of manuscripts; to enumerate which, would extend this Work

(* P. 301) I have reason to believe that this copy is the same which Kæmpfer brought from Persia.

beyond the limits prescribed: the principal of these, however, are the dictionaries or Ferbungs, intitled Fe-bangeeri, برهان قاطع - جهانگیری Borhan Katea - كشف اللغات - Kashf al Loghat - رشیدی - سروری Sururi - لطایف اللغات - Reshidi - بحر الجواهر - Babr-al-Jouahir, &c. Many curious Philological Remarks I have likewise found in miscellaneous works, such as the Behari Sekhun, بهار سخن - Sherah Sekander Namah, شرح سکندر نامه - Nefaias al Akhbar, نغایس الاخبار - Sherah Khakani - شرح خاقانی - Zekhoret al Molouk - ذخیرة الملوك - Abklak Nasser - الاخلاق ناصری - Wakaat Matoul - وقعات مطول - Negaristan of Fouini - نگارستان - a most excellent work of the same title, by Al Gbuffari (author of the Jeban Ara); and a third Negaristan, by Ali ben Taifour Bustami. I must also acknowledge my frequent obligations to the Lyrick and Soufi Poets, for assistance in my Historical and Antiquarian Researches. The allusions of Anvari, Hafiz, Saieb, Naziri, Oorfi, Helali, Firokbi, Shems Tabrizi, Kemal addein Isfabani, and a multiplicity of others, to anecdotes of ancient History and Mythology, have sometimes served to illustrate the most obscure passages of the prose writers; even the dull and voluminous commentaries on the Koran, and unwieldy folios of Mohammedan Law, have not been without their use; and something has been extracted from the numerous works of fiction and romance, which often exhibit very pleasing representations of Asiatick manners ; I allude to such as the انوار سهيلي Anvar Soheily—the خاور نامه Khawer Nameh—the قصه امير حمزه Kisseh Emir Hamzeb—چهار درويش Chehar Derveish, the Four Dervishes—the بختيار نامه Bakhtyar Nameh—the بستان خيال Bostan-i-Khoyal—the نگار زيبا Negar Ziba, &c.

Many topographical notes, and incidental references to the ancient History of Persia, are scattered through some of those Tarikhs which contain the Annals of modern Mohammedan Princes ; among these are the Aulum Arai, علام آراي an History of the Abbassides, in three large volumes—the تاريخ عاصم كوفي Tarikh

Aufim Cufi—the اكبر نامه Akber Nameh—the تيمور نامه Timour Nameh—the طبقات تيموري Tebcat Timouri, &c. also in Biographical works and collections of Anecdotes, the various تذكرة الشعراء Tuzkerreh al Shoara, or Lives of the Poets—the تاريخ ابن خلكان Khalkan, the تاريخ بarmekian Tarikh Barmekian—the مجالس الهمومنين Mujalis al Momenin, &c.

There is another class of Manuscripts which I have attentively perused, yet sparingly quoted; because, though numerous, they afford but little, and even that little is of questionable authority: I mean those feeble compositions in modern Persick, said to be translations from the ancient Zend and Pehlavi, which European travellers procure from the Parfis of Surat, and of which the learned Dr. Hyde and M. Anquetil du Perron have given us sufficient specimens.

Had I not hopes of discovering some works of infinitely greater value than the Sadder, Erdaviraf Nameh, or the Zend-a-vesta, (as we have it in French) of Zoroaster himself, I should consider any further attention to the ancient dialects of Persia, as a misapplication of study, and a waste of time: these, however, have contributed, with the various manuscripts before mentioned, materials for my future work, of which the title will be nearly as follows: “ Illustrations of Persian His- “ *tory and Antiquities—*or an attempt “ to reconcile the Ancient History and “ Chronology of Persia (according to the “ dates and traditions, preserved in “ manuscripts of that country) with the

“ Hebrew, Greek, and Latin Records.”

This work will comprise,

I. An introductory essay on the study of Persian history, antiquities, and romance.

II. A descriptive catalogue of the manuscripts which have furnished materials for the work.

III. That section of the Leb al Towarikh which contains the ancient History of Persia, from Caiumuras to Yezdejerd; given in the original Persian, with an English translation on the opposite pages.

IV. The Illustrations, &c.; in which are collected from all the manuscripts before enumerated, the various traditions and anecdotes of each king's reign; collated with those preserved in the Old Testament, and in the works of Greek and Latin writers; chronological, geographical, and philological observations, &c.

V. An Appendix, consisting of several miscellaneous articles, chronological tables, extracts from rare and ancient manuscripts, remarks on the antiquities of Persepolis, examination of Zend and Pehlavi manuscripts, funeral rites, fire worship, Manichean and Mazdakian heresies, archery and horsemanship of the Persians, musick, painting, sculpture, vestiges of Hebrew and Greek in the Persian language, &c.

Such are the outlines of my future Work, which, if I can judge by the materials already collected, will form two large quarto volumes, each containing at least 400 pages, besides maps and views, plates of inscriptions, medals and gems, engraved alphabets of ancient characters, and specimens of writing, fac similes from miniatures in manuscripts, &c.

I shall not here enumerate the Greek and Latin works which I have examined and collated; but I must acknowledge my frequent obligations to the Authors of Hebrew Scripture, —obligations, indeed, more frequent than those can possibly imagine who have only skimmed the surface of Oriental Literature, or plucked its flowers without gathering the fruits: I was myself surpris'd to find the most ancient and authentick of the Persian historians, prove, unconsciously, no despicable commentators on the Bible.

Of these historians, many allude to, and describe as still visible in their days, various stupendous and interesting monuments of antiquity, unnoticed by Europeans. To ascertain whether they exist at present, and to satisfy some doubts on the subject of those already described by travellers, I have resolved to visit Persia (if Providence continue to bless me with life and health) whenever some necessary domestick arrangements, and the Works on which I am now employed, shall have been completed.

London, August, 1799.

The Tarikh Jehan Ara, جهان آرا which has furnished materials for the following Work, is an octavo manuscript, purchased at Shiraz in the year 1787, by my ingenious friend, Captain William Francklin, author of the Tour to Persia, in which he has quoted it on the subject of Persepolis. During his residence in Bengal, it accidentally fell from a boat into the Ganges, and a few words have been rendered illegible by the wet; where such occur in the following extract, they are expressed by asterisks. On his return to England in 1797, Captain Francklin obligingly gave me this, with many other valuable manuscripts. The author is Cazi Ahmed al Ghuffari, قاضي احمد الغفاري of Cazin; who, according to the Tarikh Bedaoni, died on his return from the pilgrimage to Mecca, when setting out from Daibul, Anno Hegiræ 975, (A. D. 1567.)

He was also author of the Negaristan; a most excellent compilation of historical anecdotes, of which I am so fortunate as to possess a fine copy, written by his own hand, and replete with his marginal notes; it is a large octavo manuscript, and was brought to Europe by Jonathan Scott, Esq.

From the Jehan Ara, which contains a general History of Asia, Patriarchs, Prophets, Jews, Arabians, Persians, Kings of Tartary, Hindooſtan, &c. from the earliest times till the year of the Hegira 972, (of Christ 1564), I shall have occasion to give various extracts in a future Work.

- 1 Jebel or Irak Agemi
- 2 Farsistan
- 3 Khuzistan
- 4 Laristan
- 5 Kirman
- 6 Sejestan
- 7 Zablestan
- 8 Khorasan
- 9 Penjab

A
MAP
 of
PERSIA
 or
IRAN
 ایران

60 E. Lon. from Ferro 65

Scale as Stroud.

صحيفة اول
از نسخه ثانی تاریخ جهان آرا
در احوال
ملوک عجم قبل از اسلام

THE FIRST CHAPTER OF THE
SECOND SECTION OF THE TARIKH JEHAN ARA,
CONTAINING THE HISTORY OF THE PERSIAN
KINGS BEFORE MOHAMMEDANISM.

در احوال

ملوک عجم قبل از اسلام

سطر اول

پیشدادیان یازده تن ملکشان
دو هزار و چهار صد و پنجاه
سال

کیومرث بن دلولود بن امیم
بن ارفخشذ بن سام بن نوح علیه
السلام الهنقب بگلشاه یعنی

EPITOME

OF THE

Ancient History of Persia.

THE FIRST DYNASTY,

Or, The eleven Peishdadian Kings, who reigned 2450 Years.

1. Caiumuras—the son of Dula-ved, the son of Ameem, the son of Arfakhshad, the son of Sam, the son of Noah, to whom be peace. His surname was Ghil-shah, which signi-

والی خاک* سلطنت اوسی سال
اصطخر فارس و دماوند و بلخ از
منشآت اوست

هوشنگ بن سیامک بن
کیومرث لقبش پیش داد شهر
سوس و شوشتر خوزستان بدو
منسوب است حکومتش چهل
سال

طهورث بن هوشنگ لقبش
نجیب و بعضی رساوند یعنی

* The compound Ghilshah, according to the Persian idiom, may also signify "the King formed of Clay." The Magians affirm that Caiumuras was the first man; and some have supposed him to be the King of Elam, mentioned in Genesis xiv. Thus, Adam, אדם from red fies the “Lord, or King of Clay.” He reigned thirty years. The cities of Istakhar in Fars, Damavand, and Balkh, were founded by him.

2. Housheng—the son of Siamek, the son of Caiumuras. He was surnamed Peishdad; and is said to have built the cities of Sùs and Shuster in Khuzistan. His reign was of forty years.

3. Takmuras—the son of Housheng. His surname was Nejeib, and, according to some, Resavend, which clay אדמה (Pagnin. Robertf. Clavis Pentat. &c.) Perhaps a resemblance may be found between Caiumuras and כדורלעמר Chedorlaomer.

تهام سلاح گفته آما مشهور دیوبند
است آمل مازندران و اصفهان
و بابل از آثار او اشتهار دارد
زمان حکومتش سی سال

جم بن هوشنگ لقبش شهید
است یعنی نورانی ایام اقتدارش
هفتصد سال آثار او همدان و طوس
و تهام اصطخر است*

پیوراسپ بن مرداسب بن

* Of this city, supposed to be the ancient Persepolis, it does not appear that any vestiges now remain, except the ruins of Chehil minar, چهل منار or the "Forty Pillars;" which the modern Persians generally call Takht-i-Jemsheid, تخت جمشید, "the throne of Jemsheid." See the frontispiece.

signifies “ Armed at all points ;” but he is generally known by the title of Dive-bend. The cities of Amol in Mazanderan, Isfahan, and Babylon, are monuments of his greatness. He reigned thirty years.

4. Jem—the son of Housheng ; was surnamed Sheid, the meaning of which is “ brightness, or splendour.” The years of his reign were seven hundred. The vestiges which remain of him, are the cities of Hamadan and Toos ; also Istakhar, the building of which he completed.

5. Piurasp—the son of Merdasp, the son of Rikavend, the son of Barf-

رکاوند بن بارسره بن ناح بن
 فروال بن سیامک بن کیومرث
 خواهرزاده^ء جهشید لقبش ضحاک
 است معرب ده اک یعنی صاحب
 از آثار او کنک بابل است اوان
 استیلای او هزار سال است

فریدون بن آبتین بن ایقان*
 بن جهشید لقبش موید و بعضی
 کی گفته اند یعنی منزله از الایش
 و متصل بروحانیات و اول کسی
 که ملقب شد بدین فریدون است

* I beg to advise very critical readers (few others, I believe, will take much interest in the matter) that the pedigrees of those early Kings are differently recorded in various manuscripts, and extremely obscure in all.

ereh, the son of Nah, the son of Feraval, the son of Siamek, the son of Caiumuras ; he was the son of Jemshaid's sister, and called Zobac, which in the Arabick language is Dobac, and signifies “ Master, or Lord.” Of his works, the Kenek or Tower of Babel is one. The time of his dominion was a thousand years.

6. Feridoun—the son of Abteen, the son of Aican, the son of Jemshaid ; he was surnamed Mouid, and some styled him Cai, which signifies “ pure,” free from blemish, and approaching to spiritual perfection. Feridoun was the first who received so honourable a title. The ramparts and

از آثار او بارو و خندق
شهرهاست ملکش پانصد سال

منوچهر بن ^{میشخور} بن دیرک
بن سردسک بن ایرک بن سک
بن فرکورک بن ایرچ بن فریدون
لقبش فیروز ملکش صد و بیست
سال

نودر* بن منوچهر لقبش آزاده
حکومتش هفت سال

افراسیاب یعنی جناح الطاحونه
بن پشنک بن رادشم † بن تور

* Or Nudar, نودر according to the Tarikh Gozideh, and other manuscripts.

† In my copy of the Tebkat Nasseri it is written دادشم Dadshem; in some Tarikhs, also, Zadshem.

ditches of towns were devised by him. He reigned five hundred years.

7. Manucheber—the son of Meishkhour, the son of Deiruk, the son of Serdfuk, the son of Irek, the son of Sek, the son of Refek, the son of Ferkourak, the son of Iretch, the son of Feridoun. His surname was Firouz; and his reign of one hundred and twenty years.

8. Nuzer—the son of Manucheher; was surnamed Azadeh. He reigned seven years.

9. Afrasiab—(this name signifies the wings or sails of a mill); was the son of Peshunk, the son of Rad-

بن فریدون استیلایش بر ایران
دوازده سال

زو بن طهباسپ بن منوچهر
آثار او در* رودخانه است در
دیاربکر مشهور بآب زاب ملکش
پنج سال

گرشاسف بن زو بعد از فوت
پدرش شش سال بهر اسم سلطنت
قیام نهوده دولت پیشدادیان باو
منسی شد

* More correctly Do, دو two; alluding to those streams or branches of the river Tigris which the Arabians call Zabein, زابین or the Two Zabs.

them, the son of Tour, the son of Feridoun, His reign over Persia lasted twelve years.

10. Zav—the son of Tahmasp, the son of Manucheher. Of his works, is that canal in the province of Diarbekir known by the name of Aub-i-Zab, or “the waters of Zav.” He reigned five years.

11. *Gurshasp—the son of Zav. After the death of his father, exercised for six years the imperial functions. With him the honours of the Peishdadian race became extinct.

* Or Gurshasp. گرشاسپ The Arabians not having in their alphabet the Persian P, substitute for that letter an F, or B; and sometimes a T,

سطر ثاني

در ذکر کیانیان ده تن زمان
تسلطت ایشان هفتصد و سی و
چهار سال

کیقباد بن زاب بن زو بن
طهباسب لقبش کی یعنی جبار
و در زمان او جیحون میان ایران
و توران حد شد و رستم بن
زال جهان* پهلوان شد دار
السلطنت اش اصفهان ایام حکمش صد سال

* Jehan Pehlavan became a title of distinction : it was equivalent (says the Leb al touarikh) to the modern title Emir al omrah, or Chief of the Nobles.

SECOND DYNASTY.

Of the ten Caianian Kings, whose Empire lasted seven hundred and thirty-four Years.

1. Cai Kobad—the son of Zab, the son of Zav, the son of Tahmasp; he was surnamed Cai (or Ky), which signifies “mighty.” In his time the river Jihon (the Oxus) was the boundary between Iran and Touran (Persia and Tartary); and Rustam the son of Zal flourished; the most illustrious hero of the world. Isfahan was the seat of his empire; and he reigned one hundred years.

کیکاوس بن کیتباد لقبش
 نبرد یعنی لم یمت و آن بکثرت
 استعمال نمرود † شد و از کمال
 ضلال در صندوقی در آمده
 ببال کرکسان میل آسمان کرد
 و از بین غافل * * * * * بر آسمان
 * یزد * * چه پر * آرد مور از
 آثار او عفر ‡ دیار بکر است مدت
 حکومتش یکصد و پنجاه سال

کیخسرو بن سیاوش بن

† Ferdousi alludes to an ancient tradition that Nimrod and Kaus were the same.

شنیدم که نمرود کاوس بود

‡ Called also Tel-i-afferkoun, according to the Tarikh-moagem: it was a lofty pile or heap erected at Babel, for the purpose of astronomical observations, by this Kaus, or Nimrod.

2. Cai-Kaus—the son of Cai-Kobad; his surname was Nimurd, which, in the Arabick language, is lam yemat, or immortal, corruptly altered into Nimrod. Having, from the excess of foolish pride, endeavoured to ascend into the heavens, borne aloft in an ark (or throne) on the wings of eagles, † from this he vainly * * * * One memorial of him is Affar, in Mesopotamia. His reign was of an hundred and fifty years.

3. Cai-Khosru—the son of Sia-

† In the manuscript, Kergus, a fabulous bird of immense size, resembling in many respects the Phoenix. (See Oriental Collections, Vol.

کیکائوس لقبش هبایون مادرش
 فرنکیس دختر افراسیاب آخر
 بامداد پیران ویسه بایران آمده
 بانتقام پدر افراسیاب را بکشت
 مدت ملکش شصت سال

لهراسف بن اروندشاه بن
 کی نشین بن کیقباد چون در
 بلخ نشین داشت لقبش بلخی
 است از موثر او تعیین مواجب

II. No. I. p. 96.) According to Ferdoufi in the Shah-Nameh, the birds which Kaus employed, were پچه عقاب young Eagles. The whole fable originated, probably, in the fondness of this King for astronomical studies; as he declared that he would explore the secrets of the spheres, "and reckon one by one the stars of Heaven." Ferdoufi.

همان اختران سر بسر بشهرم

vesh, the son of Cai-Kaus ; he was furnamed Humaioun ; and his mother was Ferankis, the daughter of Afrasiab. Having at last, with the assistance of Piran Veiseh, penetrated into Persia, he slew Afrasiab, in revenge for the death of his father. He governed during sixty years.

4. Lobrasf,* (or Lobrasp)—son of Arvend-shah, son of Cai-Nisheen, the son of Cai-Kobad : from his original residence in the city of Balkh, he was furnamed Balkhi. Of his institution, is the establishment of

* Our author in this name, and in Gushtasp, affects the Arabian mode of writing, by which the Persian P is changed into F.

لشکر است مدت ملکش صد و بیست سال

کشتاسف بن لهراسف لقبش
هربد یعنی عابد النار در زمان
او زردشت که نام اصلی او*
دعداست و دعوی پیغمبری کرد
از آثار او قلعه سهرقند است
سلطنتش صد و بیست سال

کي اردشیر المشهور به بهمن

* According to the Zertusht Nameh, Zoroafter was of the race of Feridoun ; his father's name Pourshasp, پورشاسپ and his mother's Doghdu or Doghdoui.

که زرشت فرخنده را مام بود

مرا م سعدرا دغدوي نام بود

military stipends. His reign lasted an hundred and twenty years.

5. Gushtasf, (or Kishtasf)—the son of Lohrasp, was styled Hirbed, or the Minister of Fire. In his time Zerduht, whose family name was Daada, pretended to the gift of prophecy. The castle of Samarcand is one of the works which remain of Gushtasf, who reigned an hundred and twenty years.

6. *Cai-Ardesbir—generally called

* Artaxerxes Longimanus, or Μακροχρεῖς.—From some curious passages in Tabari, he appears to be the Ahasuerus of Scripture, who “reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, over “ an hundred and seven and twenty provinces.”

بن اسغندیار بن کشتاسف
لقبش دراز دست از آثار او
بندکوار فارس است مدت حکمش
صد و دوازده سال

هبای بنت بهمن لقبش
آزادچهر از آثار او هزارستون
اصطخر و شهر جربادقان است
مدت ملکش سی و دو سال

داراب پدرش بهمن و مادرش
هبای* بنت بهمن از آثار او

* Persia is not, I fear, the only country whose ancient annals are stained by the registry of imperial incest. Those who, in defiance of chronology, suppose Queen Homai to be Semiramis, may here find an additional argument in favour of their identity.

Bahman, the son of Asfendiar, the son of Gushtasp; he was surnamed Dirazdest. One of the remaining memorials of him is Bandukvar, in Fars. He reigned an hundred and twelve years.

7. Homai—the daughter of Bahman; was surnamed Azadcheber. The vestiges of her are the thousand columns at Istakbar, and the city of Ferbadsan. Her reign lasted thirty-two years.

8. Darab—his father was Bahman, and his mother Homai, the daughter of Bahman. The memorials of him are the institution of اسب پیام و برید است مدت ملکش

دوازده سال لقبش اکبر است

دارا بن داراب لقبش اصغر
است آثار او شهر ابهر است
ملکش چهارده سال

سکندر بن داراب بن بهمن
لقبش ذوالقرنین مادرش دختر
فیلقوس پادشاه روم در حکمت
شاکرد ارسطو از آثار او هرات و
بردع* اران و اسکندریه است

* Berdaa, according to some romances, was the Shehrizenan شهر زنان or City of Women, the capital of Nushabah, Queen of the Amazons. This place is described as a terrestrial paradise by Nizami, in his Secander Nameh.

post-horses and couriers. The length of his reign was twelve years; and his title was Akber.

9. Dara, (Darius)—the son of Darab; he was surnamed Afgher. The city of Ebber was founded by him; and he reigned fourteen years.

10. Secander—the son of Darab, the son of Bahman; he was called Zu'l'Karnein. His mother was the daughter of Philip the King of Greece. In philosophy he was the pupil of Aristotle. The vestiges remaining of him, are the cities of Herat, Berdaa in Aran, and Alexandria. He reigned over Persia four-

استیلایش بر ایران چهارده سال
وفاتش در شهرزور* مدفنش
اسکندریه †

* Shehr-zour. Between Holvan and Mosul:
it is called by the modern Turks Shehrzoul.

† It is not surprising that the Persian traditions on the life of Alexander should be vague and discordant, since the Greek historians acknowledge the obscurity of this subject. “ Of “ Alexander,” (says Arrian, Proem.) “ various “ persons have recorded various things; nor is “ there any one of whose history there have “ been more writers, or writers more disa“ greeing one with another.” ἄλλοι μὲν δὴ ἀλλὰ ὑπὲρ Ἀλεξάνδρου ἀνεγράψαν, ἕδ' ἔστιν ὑπὲρ οὗ πλείονες ἢ ἀξυμφωνότεροι ἐς ἀλλήλους. Our Persian author has followed Ferdoufi in describing Alexander as the son of Darab, by a daughter of Philip;
but the more ancient and authentick Tabari,
declares him the Macedonian monarch's son;

teen years. His death happened at the city of Zour; and the place of his interment was Alexandria.

and Nizami adopts this tradition, rejecting two others on the subject, “ tales which want confirmation, in the vanity of whose story there is no truth.”

در این هردو گفتار چستی نبود

کزاف سخن را درستی نبود

(See Persian Miscellanies, p. 79.) All the Eastern traditions, compared with those of the Greek and Latin writers, I shall offer to the publick in a “ History of Alexander.”

سطر سیوم

در بیان ملوک الطوائف *مبین
در دو حرف

حرف اول

در اشکانیان دوازده تن ملکشان
صد و شصت و پنج سال

اشک بن دارا الاصغر در وقعه
پدر در ری طفل بود بر انطخشن
رومی خروج کرده اورا بعد از
حرب بکشت و بر قسطنطین رومی

* The kings of the various provinces, among whom Alexander divided the Persian Empire. Of these were the Arfacides, or Parthian Kings.

THIRD DYNASTY.

Account of the Kings called Molouk al towayuf, divided into two Sections.

SECTION I.

Of the twelve Ashkanian Kings, who reigned an hundred and sixty-five Years.

1. Ashek—the son of Dara, surnamed Afgher. During the transactions of his father's reign he was a child at Rey. Having taken up arms against Antakhash* the Grecian, he slew him after a battle; and de-

* Antiochus.

که بانتقام آمده بود * * * *
* * سایر ملوک الطوائف فایف
آمده ملکش پانزده سال

اشک بن اشک بن دارا در
عهد او بنی اسراہیل زکریا پیغمبر را
علیه السلام بکشتمند و او از
ایشان انتقام کشیده ملکش شش
سال †

بهرام بن شاپور یازده سال

پلانش بن بهرام هم یازده سال

† Our author, or more probably the transcriber of the manuscript, has omitted in this place Shapour, شاپور Saporess, who succeeded Ashek, and reigned, according to the Leb al towarikh, six years ; or sixty, according to others, who place the birth of Christ in his time.

feated Constantine the Grecian, who had come to seek revenge. * * * *

And Ashek made himself pre-eminent among the other kings ; and reigned fifteen years.

2. Ashek—the son of Ashek, the son of Dara. In his time the children of Israel put to death the prophet Zachariah, to whom be peace ! for which he punished them. He was king six years. (Succeeded by Shapour, the third king.)

4. Baharam—the son of Shapour, reigned eleven years.

5. Palash—the son of Baharam, likewise reigned eleven years.

هرمز بن پلاش شانزده سال

نرسی بن پلاش چهارده سال

فیروز بن هرمز هفده سال

پلاش بن فیروز دوازده سال

خسرو بن ملاد بن نرسی
هشت سال

* Sir William Jones, in his "Short History of Persia," (the object of which was merely to prepare the reader for that of Nadir Shah,) has not thought it necessary to mention the names of more than the first and last monarch of the Ashkanian Dynasty. The annals of this period are, indeed, very obscure, yet not uninteresting; their obscurity seems to demand illustration.

6. Hormuzd—the son of Palash, reigned sixteen years.

7. Narfi—the son of Palash, fourteen years.

8. Firouz—the son of Hormuzd, seventeen years.

9. Palash—the son of Firouz, reigned twelve years.*

10. Khofru—the son of Molad,
the son of Narfi, eight years.

* According to a very curious manuscript Tarikh (of which I have not yet been able to ascertain the title or the author) موضع لار (in Laristan) از آثار او است. "The city of Lar (in Laristan) was founded by him."

پلاشان بن پلاش بن فیروز
بیست و دو سال

اردوان بن پلاشان سیزده
سال

خرفثانی در اشغانیان از
دزیه* فرهرز بن کاوس هشت نفر
ملکشان صد و پنجاه و سه سال

اردوان بن اشغ بر اشکانیان
خروج کرده سلطنت از دست
ایشان بدر برد ملکش بیست و سه سال

* This son of Kaus, according to that excellent dictionary, the Cashf-al-loghat, and other works, was properly called فریبرز Fa-riboz.

11. Palashan—the son of Palash, the son of Firouz, twenty-two years.

12. Ardavan—the son of Palashan, reigned thirteen years.

SECTION II.

Of the eight Afghanian Kings (or second Race of the third Dynasty) proceeding from Dezieb Ferberz, the son of Kaus. Their empire lasted an hundred and fifty-three years.

1. Ardavan—the son of Afhegh; having revolted against the Afhkanians, snatched the sovereignty from their hands, and reigned twenty-three years.

خسرو بن اشغ شانزده سال

پلاش بن اشغ دوازده سال
حضرت عیسی در عهد او بوجود
آمد

کودرز بن پلاش بن اشغ
سی سال بغضی کوبند که واقعه
زکریا علیه السلام در ایام او بوده

نرسی بن کودرز بیست سال

کودرز بن نرسی * ده سال

* In the manuscript Heri; an error which I have corrected on the authority of Kapchak Khan, the Leb-al-towarikh, &c.

2. Khofru—the son of Ashegh, was king sixteen years.

3. Palash—the son of Ashegh, reigned twelve years. In his time the holy personage Jesus was born.

4. Gudarz—the son of Palash, the son of Ashegh; his reign lasted thirty years. Some say that Zachariah, on whom be peace! existed in his days.

5. Narfi—the son of Gudarz, reigned twenty years.

6. Gudarz—the son of Narfi, ten years.

نرسی بن نرسی یازده سال*

اردوان بن نرسی بعد از
سی و یک سال سلطنت در
جنگ اردشیر بابکان کشته شد
و آن طایفه بدو منقرض گشتند

* Narfi reigned fifteen years, according to the Habib al feir; and در زمان حکومتش
“ during his
“ reign the Greeks attempted to invade Persia.”

7. Narfi, the son of Narfi, reigned eleven years.

8. Ardavan—the son of Narfi, after a reign of thirty-one years, was slain in a battle with Ardeshir-Babegan; and the third Dynasty of Persian Kings became extinct with him.*

* I must acknowledge, in the words of D'Herbelôt, “que cet endroit est le plus embarrassé & le plus obscur de toute l'histoire de Perse.” (Art. Aschganian.) Yet I think it possible, by a minute examination of the Greek, Latin, and Persian writers, to reconcile the various traditions with historical and chronological truth.

سطر چهارم

در ذکر آل ساسان که ایشانرا
اکاسره نیز خوانند سی و یک تن
ملکشان پانصد و بیست و هفت
سال

اردشیر بابکان بن ساسان
تا هفده تن همه ساسان نام
داشتند بهمن ابن اسفندیار و
او بیابکان جد مادری که بانی
شهر* بابک کرمانست منسوب شد
و چهل سال سلطنت کرد و از

* There are several towns, according to the Mesalek-ù Memalek, which some reckon as belonging to Fars; others to Kirman. The learned Wahl, in his excellent map of Persia, places Babek at the Fars side of the line which divides these provinces.

FOURTH DYNASTY.

Account of the Race of Saffan, called also Akafreh. Thirty-one Kings, who reigned five hundred and twenty-seven Years.*

1. Ardesbir Babegan—the son of Saffan. The name of Saffan continued for seventeen generations, from Bahmen the son of Asfendiar. He was surnamed Babegan from his maternal grandfather, who built the city of Babec in Kerman: he reigned forty years. Among the memorials

* Or the Kesris; an Arabick plural (corrupt) from كسري

آثار او اردشیر خوزه* فارس و کواشیر کرمان و اهواز خوزستان است †

شاپور بن اردشیر لقبش تیرده
ملکش سی و یک سال از آثار
او کوره شاپور فارس و نیشاپور
خراسان و شادشاپور قزوین و
چند شاپور خوزستان

هرمز بن شاپور لقبش بطل

* Ardesbir Khuzeh, or Khureh, called also Fawr, and Firuzabad.

† This king, whom we call Artaxares, “came forth,” (says Tabari) “and dwelt in “Istakbar, when, after the reign of Alexander, “four hundred years had elapsed; or, according “to the Christians, five hundred and twenty;
“or, according to the Magians, two hundred “and sixty-six.

which remain of him, are the cities of Ardeshir Khouzeh in Fars, and Guashir in Kerman, and Ahwaz in Khuzistan.

2. Shapour—the son of Ardeshir; his surname was Tirdeb; he reigned thirty-one years. Of his works are Koureh-Shapour in Fars, Nishapour in Khorassan, Shad-i-Shapour in Casvin, and Jond-i-Shapour in Khuzistan.*

3. Hormuz—son of Shapour; he was surnamed Batel, and reigned

* Texeira, whose Spanish epitome of Mirkhoud is particularly erroneous and defective in the Sassanian history, places Shapour (Xapur) before Ardeshir. (Relaciones, &c. p. 117.)

ملکش دو سال از آثار او رام هرمز خوزستانست

بهرام* بن هرمز لقبش درگار
ایامش سه سال و سه ماه است

بهرام بن بهرام لقبش شاهنده
یعنی صالح ملکش بیست سال

بهرام بن بهرام لقبش سیستان
شاه ایامش چهارده ماه

فرسی بن بهرام بن بهرام
لقبش نخجریان سلطنتش نه
سال

* Baharam—called Varanes and Vararanes
by the Greek and Latin writers.

two years. Ram-Hormuz, in Khuzistan, was built by him.

4. Baharam—the son of Hormuz ; his surname was Dergar ; and he reigned three years and three months.

5. Baharam—the son of Baharam ; he was styled Shabendeh, i. e. upright, just ; and reigned twenty years.

6. Baharam—the son of Baharam ; his surname was Seistan-Shah ; and his reign lasted fourteen months.

7. Narfi—the son of Baharam, the son of Baharam ; his title was Nakhjerkān. He reigned nine years.

شاپور* بن هرمز لقبش هوبه
 سینا یعنی شانہ سوراخ کن و
 عرب اورا ذوالاکتاف گفتند چه
 شانہ † ایشانرا سوراخ کردی مانی
 نقاش در زمان او بود او دعوی
 نبوت کرده تخته که آثرا ارژنگ
 گفتندی و تہامی نقاشان روی
 زمین از تتبع آن عاجز بودند
 بمعجزہ آورد و از بدایع صنایع
 او پیراہنی بود کہ چون

* Tabari's very curious account of the battles and treaties between Sapores, and Julian (the apostate) and his successor Jovian, throws considerable light on the Greek and Latin histories of those emperors—(See Zosimus, Ammian, Marcellinus, &c.)

† Mani, Manes; founder of the Manichean

8. Shapour—the son of Hormuz ; his surname was Hubeb Sina, that is, the breaker, or piercer of shoulders ; and the Arabians style him Dhu-l'ectaf, because he caused their shoulder blades to be pierced and broken. Mani the painter existed in his time, and, assuming the character of a prophet, exhibited as miraculous the tablets called Arzenk, so admirably painted, that all the fairest objects on the face of the earth, in comparison with these representations of them, seemed to fade away. Also, among heresy ; the history of which has been ably investigated by the learned Beaufobre. Some curious anecdotes, however, of this heresiarch and impostor, still lurk in Persian manuscripts.

پوشیدندی نهایتاً شدی و چون
از تن بدر آوردندی ناپیدا
بودی آخر بر دست شاپور کشته
گشت از آثار شاپور شهر قزوین
و تورج شاپور که آنرا عسکر مکرم
گویند در خوزستان مدت
سلطنت او هفتاد و دو سال*

اردشیر برادر شاپور لقبش
جمیل ملکش ده سال

* Having been born after his father's death, the years of his reign correspond to those of his life. This is noticed by Bizarus, in his excellent compilation "Rerum Persicarum Historia," (p. 112.) "cum tot annos regnasset, quot etiam vixerit," (seventy years, according to this historian.) Our writers place the death of Sapore in the year of Christ 380.

the rare productions of his ingenuity, was a certain shirt, which whilst he wore he was visible; having taken it off, he became invisible: he was at last put to death by the hand of Shapour. The memorials of this King are the city of Cazvin, and Toureb Shapour,* which is also called Ofkermekerrum. He reigned seventy-two years.

9. Ardesbir—the brother of Shapour, was surnamed Jemil, and reigned ten years.

* My copies of the Hest-aklim and Nozbat al Coloub, write it differently. The former says, that this city was called Teshker (or Neshker)

شاپور بن شاپور ذوالکتناف
لقبش کرمانشاه ملکش سیزده سال

یزدجرد که بقول اکثر ارباب
خبر پس بهرام است لقبش
بفارسی زفت و بزه کرد بعربی
اثیم و مجرم ملکش بیست و یک
سال و نیم

بهرام* بن یزدجرد لقبش ثور

after a son of Tahmuras, but that having fallen to decay, شاپور ذوالکتناف بتجدید عمارت
Shapour Dhu' فرمود و مورج شاپور خواند
"lectaf caused it to be rebuilt, and called it
" Mourage Shapour.

* The reign of Baharam has furnished subjects for a variety of entertaining and curious romances, both in prose and verse; such as the

10. Shapour—the son of Shapour Zu'lectaf; his title was Kerman-shah; and his reign of thirteen years.

11. Yezdejerd—who, according to the greater number of historians, succeeded Baharam; was surnamed, in the Persian language, Zefet, and Bezokurd; in the Arabick, Athim and Mejerum. He reigned twenty-one years and a half.

12. Baharam—the son of Yezdejerd; his surname was Gour. He هفت پیگرد Hest peigur of Nizami, the هشت بهشت Hesht Behisht of Emir Khosrù, the هفت منصر Hest Munsur of Hatifi, the Kiffeh Baharam Gour, قصه بهرام گور and others; besides his history in the Shah Nameh.

بغایت پهلوان و عادل و عیش
دوست سلطنت او شصت و سه
سال

یزدجرد* بن بهرام لقبش
سپاهدوست ایامش هیزده سال

هرمز بن یزدجرد لقبش
فرزانه ملکش یک سال

فیروز بن یزدجرد لقبش
مردانه از آثار او فیروز بهرام ری
است ایامش ده سال

* The Isdigertes of the Greek and Latin writers, who change the names of his successors into Hormisdas, Perozes, Bleses, Balusses, or a was a valiant warrior, a just man, and a lover of festivity and sport. His reign lasted sixty-three years.

13. Yezdejerd—the son of Baharam; he was styled Sipah-dost; and the years of his reign were eighteen.

14. Hormuz—the son of Yezdejerd; his surname was Firzaneb; and his reign of one year.

15. Firouz—the son of Yezdejerd; he was styled Murdaneb. One of his works is Firouz Baharam, in Rey. He reigned ten years.

Hobalas; Cabades, or Cavades; Zamaspes, Chosroes, &c. (Vide Procop. Agath. Bizar. &c.)

پلاش بن فیروز لقبش کرانهایه
ملک او پنج سال

قباد بن فیروز لقبش نیک راي
سلطنت او شصت و چهار سال
مزدک پیشوای ملاحده در زمان
او خروج کرد آثار او ارجان کوره
کیلویه و حلوان است

جاماسب بن فیروز لقبش
نکارین

کسری بن قباد لقبش
انوشروان* و ملک العدل سلطنت

* Written also نوشیروان. The ruins of his magnificent palace, the Aivan (ایوان) or Tauk-i-Kesri, کسری طاق are still to be seen near Madaien (the ancient Ctesiphon) on the banks of the Tigris.

16. Palash—the son of Firouz ; his title was Keranmaieb ; and his reign lasted five years.

17. Kobad—the son of Firouz ; was surnamed Neekrai, and reigned sixty-four years. Mazdak, the rebellious founder of an heretical sect, existed in his time. The place called Arjan Goureh in Gilouieh, and Hulwan, are remains of his works.

18. Jamasp—the son of Firouz ; was surnamed Nekarein.

19. Kesri—the son of Kobad ; his surnames were Anushirvan, and Molk al adel, or the just king. He او چهل و هشت سال و پیغمبر

 ما صلوات الله علیه در عهد او
 متولد شد در سال هشتم از
 میلاد آن حضرت آن پادشاه
 عادل فوت شد از آثار او رومیه مداین است*

هرمز بن انوشروان مادرش
 قائم دختر خاقانست لاجرم لقبش
 ترک زاده گفته اند ریژک و زورمند
 و سفاک بوده چنانچه در ایام
 حکومت که دوازده سال و کسری
 است سیزده هزار و شصت کس

* According to the Zein al akhbar, he caused Muzdak the heresiarch to be fled alive; and in the course of one day put to death eighty thousand of his followers.

reigned forty-eight years ; and our prophet (Mohammed) on whom be the blessing of God ! was born in his time. In the eighth year after the birth of that holy personage, this upright monarch died : and vestiges of his works are at Roumieh in Madaien.

20. Hormuz—the son of Anushirvan ; his mother was Kakim, the daughter of the Khakan, from which circumstance he was called Turkzad ; he was so wicked, tyrannical, and blood-thirsty, that in the twelve years of his reign, thirteen thousand six hundred persons of il-

از اشراف عجم بحکم او کشته
گشتند قتلش در سال بیستم
از میلاد

خسرو* بن هرمز لقبش پرویز
یعنی مظفر رسول علیه السلام
در زمان او مبعوث گشت و آنرا
حضرت اورا بدین مبین دعوت
فرموده نکرید بلکه مکتوبات
اعضا* برا درید و بفر* * *
* * در عظم شان و کثرت اسباب

* The reign of Khofru Parviz, like that of his predecessor Baharam Gour, affords many curious subjects of Romance. See "the Loves of Khofru and Shireen," translated by me from the Shah Nameh Nefr, in the Oriental Collections, Vol. I. p. 218, &c.

lustrious rank, among the Persians, were put to death by his command. He was, himself, slain in the twentieth year after the birth (of Mohammed).

21. Khofru—the son of Hormuz ; he was surnamed Parviz, or the Victorious. In his time the prophet, to whom be peace ! entered on his divine mission ; that holy personage invited the king to the true faith, which he rejected, tearing in pieces the letter (of Mohammed.) * * * *
 And Persia, from his magnificence, and the superabundance of all necessaries, arrived at the summit of its glory. It is said, among other

افراط کرده از جمله کویند همواره
 پانزده هزار کنیز مطربه و شش
 هزار خواجه سرا و بیست هزار و
 پانصد اسپ بارگیر و استر زیني
 و نه صد و شصت فیل در سرکار
 او حاضر بود و چون سوار کشتي
 دویست کس بامجبرها در حوالی
 او رفتندی و هزار سقا بر ره گذار
 او آب بشیدندی و از نظرایف
 که او* داشت کاسه بود که
 هر چند آب از آن خوردندی
 کم نشدی و پنجه از عاج که

* Tabari, whose chronicle contains a chapter on the subject of this King's treasures, describes his celebrated horse, Shebdiz, the Bucephalus of Persian romance, which he says was brought originally from Greece; and he adds, that his figure was carved in stone, by order of Khofrù, at Kirmanshaban (Beisutoun.)

matters, that he constantly kept in his palace fifteen thousand female musicians, six thousand household officers, twenty thousand five hundred horses and mules for the saddle and for baggage; also, nine hundred and sixty elephants. Whenever he rode forth, two hundred persons attended him, scattering perfumes on every side, whilst a thousand sekabers (water carriers) sprinkled with water the roads which he was to pass. Among the works of ingenuity which he possessed, was a certain cup, in which the quantity of water was never diminished, how much soever a person drank of it; also, an (expanded) hand of ivory, which, whenever a

هرگاه او را فرزندی شدی آنرا
 در آب نهادندی مقارن ولادت
 آن پنجه در هم آمیدی و طالع
 معلوم شدی و پاره طلا داشت
 که بطریق موم نرم بودی و
 دست مالی که چون جرکین
 شدی بر آتش انداجتی پاک
 شدی و در عهد او فیل سفید
 در ایران بچه آورد و مثل بارید
 مطربی که سخن او * * * شد است
 و محبوبه همچو شیرین که بخوبی
 مثل است او را بود آخر در
 هفتم ساعت شب سه شنبه دهم
 جهادی الاول † سال هفتم از هجرت بر دست پسرش شیرویه کشته شد child was born to him, being immersed in water, closed, and exhibited the conjunction of stars presiding at the infant's birth, and thus the horoscope was known: he had likewise a piece of pure gold, pliable and soft as wax; also a napkin, which, when soiled, and thrown into the fire, became clean. In his time, white elephants brought forth young ones in Persia. What person, in harmonious powers, resembles his musician Barbud? or, who in beauty is equal to his mistress Shireen? At last, in the seventh hour of the night, on Tuesday the tenth of Jemad-al-awul, the seventh year of the Hegira, he was slain by the hand of his son, Shirouieh.

قباد بن خسرو لقبش شیرویه
بعد از پدرش شش ماه زندگانی
کرد

اردشیر بن شیرویه لقبش
کوچک ملکش یک سال و نیم

کسری بن قباد بن هرمز
بن انوشروان لقبش کوتاه است

پوران دخت دختر خسرو پرویز
لقبش سعیده طعام* پورانی بدو

* This explains a passage in Mirkhond, the obscurity of which is acknowledged by the learned De Sacy, in his Histoire des Saffanides, “ Je n'ai trouvé aucuns renseignements sur le
“ mot Pourani.”

22. Kobad—the son of Khofru; he was furnamed Shirouieh,* and lived six months after his father.

23. Ardesbir—the son of Shirouieh; his surname was Kouchek; his reign of one year and a half.

24. Kesri—the son of Kobad, the son of Hormuz, the son of Anushirvan, was furnamed Goutab.

25. Pouran-dokht—the daughter of Khofru Parviz, was styled Saiedeh. Meat cooked in a particular manner

* The Ferhung Sururi, Borhan Kattea, and other dictionaries, inform us that he was also called شارویه Sharouieh.

منسوب است و حضرت رسول
در عهد او رحلت فرمودند
پادشاهی او شش ماه*

آزرمی دخت خواهرش لقب
او عادل ملکش چهار ماه

فرخ زاد بن خسرو پرویز لقبش
بختیار ملکش یک ماه

یزدجرد بن شهریار بن خسرو
پرویز لقبش ملک الخیر در صفر
سال یازدهم هجری بر تخت

* Our author has totally omitted the name of Fashendeh, جشنده who, by Mirkhond, and a few others, is said to have reigned a short time after Pouran-dokht. Some further omission or error appears likewise in this place, as at the beginning of the fourth Dynasty he mentions 31 kings, yet enumerates but 28.

is called Pourani, after her. And the holy prophet in her time departed this life. Her reign lasted six months.

26. Azermi-dokht—sister to Pou-ran-dokht, was furnamed Adeleb; and reigned four months.

27. Ferokh-zad—the son of Khofru Parviz, was furnamed Bakhtyar; and reigned one month.

28. Yezdejerd—the son of Shahryar, the son of Khofru Parviz; he is called Molk al akhir, or the last King. He ascended the throne of the Persian monarchs, in the month

کاسره نشستہ مبدا تاریخ
 یزدجردی آن سال است چون
 اسلام قوت گرفته بود مسلمانان
 مرتبه مرتبه الکاهی اورا مسخر
 کردند از دست ایشان بہرہ
 گریختہ و در انجا در شہور سنہ
 اثنی و ثلاثین کشتہ شد و آن
 طبقہ قدیم بدو انقرض یافت*

* Here properly ends the ancient history of Persia—as the death of Yezdegerd was followed by the surrender of Istakhar, and the other chief cities, to the Musulmans.

Sefer of the eleventh year of the Hegira,* which is the beginning of the Yezdejerdean æra. As the true religion had prevailed, and the Mufulmans by degrees reduced the power of Yezdejerd, he fled from their hands to Merou; and there, in the month † Shehur, of the thirty-second year of the Hegira, he was put to death: and with him the ancient race of the Persian kings became extinct.

* A. D. 632.

† A. D. 652—According to the Subah Saduk, the Tarikh Alfee, and other works, this King's death happened in the 31st year of the Hegira.

CHRONOLOGICAL REMARKS.

Of the number of years assigned to the reigns of particular kings, the Persian historians so considerably disagree in their accounts, that any attempt to reconcile them, at present, would exceed the limits which I have prescribed to this Epitome. Much confusion may have arisen from mistaking the years of a king's life for those of his reign; to what extent it has prevailed, will appear from the following general statements of each Dynasty's duration, according to various records, differing in their calculations from the Tarikh Jehan Ara.

The first Dynasty, or the Peishdadian, lasted,

According to an anonymous Tarikh,
2441 years.

Tarikh Hamzeh ben Hosein Isfahani, 2470 years.

According to a manuscript catalogue of Persian kings, annexed to a fine copy of the Shah-Nameh, British Museum (No. 5600) 2481 years.

Tarikh Behram Shah ben Murdan Shah, 2734 years.

The Second Dynasty, or the Caianian,

According to the manuscript catalogue above mentioned, 534 years, six months.

Anonymous Tarikh, 684 years, four months.

Tarikh Kapchak Khani, 752 years.

Anonymous, 770 years.

Third Dynasty, or Afhcanian, with the Afghhanian, lasted,

According to the Jehan Ara, 318 years.

According to the manuscript catalogue before mentioned, 200 years.

Anonymous Tarikh, 217 years.

A Ravaiet, or book of Parfi traditions, 265 years.

Tarikh Moagem, from different chronicles, 430 years.—Another calculation, 268 years.

The Leb al Touarikh, 350 years.

Tarikh Gozideh, 380 years.

Hamzeh Isfahani, 394 years.

Tarikh Moagem, from different chronicles, 430.

9. Baharam ben Murdan Shah, 469
years.

Fourth Dynasty, or Saffanian,

According to Baharam ben Murdan
Shah, 456 years, one month,
twenty-two days.

Hamzeh Isfahani, 457 years, three months, seven days.

Anonymous Tarikh, 484 years, six months.

Leb al Touarikh, 521 years.

Tarikh Kapchak Khani, 521 years.

Merat al Aulum, 521 years.

Manuscript catalogue, 542 years.

I reserve for my future work, a more minute calculation of each particular King's reign, taken from the Tarikh Tabari, the Tarikh Moagem, the Subah Saduk, the Rouzet al Sefa, the Khelasset al Akhbar, the Zein al Akhbar, the Nizam al Towarikh, and many other records, which I shall endeavour to reconcile with the dates of European chronologers.

APPENDIX.

No. I. Account of the Plates in this Volume.

The frontispiece represents those ruins at Istakhar, which are generally called چهل منار Chebel Minar, "the Forty Pillars," or تخت جهشید Takht-i-Jemsheid, "the Throne of Jem-sheid.” Most travellers and antiquaries suppose Istakbar to have been the ancient Persepolis, and these columns the remains of Darius’s palace: the natives sometimes call them Khaneh Dara خانه دارا “the House of Darius,” as Kæmpfer informs us. Of the view given by that most ingenious traveller, in his Amœnitates Exoticæ, p. 325, the frontispiece is a reduced copy.

The Pehlavi gem, represented in the vignette of the title page, is supposed to be placed (without any regard to proportion) on a fire altar, of which the idea is taken from medals of the Sassanides. As even a vignette may be rendered instructive, I have given, on the upper part of the altar, some of the arrow-beaded or Persepolitan letters, from Niebuhr, Kæmpfer, &c. ; so that the young student of Persian antiquities may have before him, at one view, specimens of the two most ancient characters of Iràn. I have placed, as guardians of the altar, an Azhdeha, ازدها or Dragon, and the Simorgh, سیمورغ a bird of immense bulk and strength, both imaginary creatures, whose names are well known to the readers of Persian romance; their figures are taken from paintings in the Shah Namah and other manuscripts.

The gem (of the real size) is from a paste in Mr. Tassie's collection; and thus described in his Catalogue, Vol. I. p. 67, No. 679: "Sardonix—a figure

“ in a long robe, with a globe or “ lotus on the forehead, holding a “ small cup in the right hand : In the “ field are the sun and moon, with an “ inscription,” &c. An engraving of the gem, enlarged, is also given in the second Vol. pl. XIII, but the characters are inaccurately imitated; they appear on the paste to form two words, which I would read thus, using Hebrew letters to describe the Pehlavi :

אתון שחפוחרי in modern Persick اتون شہپوہری Atoun Shabpoubri, signifying “ The fire-genius of Shapour.”

Atoun, in Pehlavi, according to M.
 Anquetil du Perron,* was synonymous with Ader, or Atere; “ the several

* Zend a Vesta, Vol. I. Disc. Prelim. cccxcxi.

“ fires which have appeared to men “ under particular forms, and the “ Genii themselves, who preside over “ those fires.”* Thus the Atoun Bour- zin, in two passages of the Boun debešb,† is styled Ader Bourzin, in the Ieschts
Sades,‡ where, and in other parts of the Zendavesta, we find the Ader of Beb- ram, of Gosbasp, &c. The figure seems to be that of a female: in the Vendidad Sadè we find an address to female spirits: “ Je prie ces femelles, assem- “ bleé toujours vivante,” &c.§

* “ Plusieurs feux qui se sont montrés aux hommes
 “ sous des formes particulieres, & des Genies mêmes
 “ qui president a ces feux,” &c. Zendavesta,
 Vol. II. p. 24.

† Zendav. Vol. I. Part II. p. 41.

‡ Zendav. Vol. II. p. 24.

§ Zendav. Vol. I. Part II. p. 91.

From the Ferhung Borhan Katee (which, like the Ferhung Jebangeeri, has a very long and curious article on fire-worship) it also appears that the same word signified a fire-temple, and the angel or Genius that presided over it. Thus we find, that اذر گشاسپ Azer Gushasp was the name of a fire temple erected by Gushtasp at Balkh, &c. و نام فرشته است موکل بر آتش
 “and it is the name of the angel that “superintended, or presided over, the “fire.”

If the authority of M. Anquetil du Perron be admitted, my explanation of this gem will, probably, be found satisfactory: I offer it, however, (as every conjecture on doubtful matters) with extreme diffidence, and shall most readily adopt any well-founded emendation.

The MAP, though small, will serve to shew the relative situations of the provinces and chief cities of Persia. I have devoted some months to the construction of another, comprehending the same extent of country, but so enlarged in scale as to occupy a space of six feet by five. This will contain many hundred names of towns, rivers, mountains, ruins, rebats and caravanferais, wells, monuments, &c.; inserted from original manuscripts, which are not to be found in Mr. Wabl's very excellent map,* nor in any other hitherto published.

* Prefixed to his "Altes und Neues Vorder und Mittel Asien," &c.

Vol. I. Leipzig, 1795, (octavo.)

In the head-piece, prefixed to this Appendix, are representations of three gems, of the real size, taken from impressions in paste. Of the two uppermost, the original cornelians are preserved in the British Museum—one represents a female with a child on her lap; some of the letters are defaced, but the name of הרמזדי Hormisdi, هرمزدي appears sufficiently legible in Pehlavi; the other characters seem to form אפסתאן apistan, اپستان alluding, perhaps, to the infant state of Hormisdi, at the breast* of his nurse or mother, whose name may probably be added. Not having yet had leisure to study the inscription attentively, I shall not, in this place, offer any further conjectures on the subject.

* Pistan, پستان the nipple, breast, &c.
ابستن Abisten, to bring forth, to lie in, &c.

For the same reason I present to the reader, without any observation, the figure of a winged Lion, with a Pehlavi inscription.

The third gem, is described in Tafie's Catalogue (Vol. I. p. 74) as an Oriental garnet, containing "The " portrait of an Indian chief—with " Indian characters, something like
" the Sanscrit." As I suspect the characters to partake more of Pehlavi than Sanscrit, they are here submitted to the inspection of Antiquarian Orientalists.

The rude outlines, which the reader will perceive in this head-piece, represent the combat of Rustam with the Dive Sefeed, or white giant; reduced from a painting in my Shah Nameh, of which a large engraving will be found in the Oriental Collections, Vol. II. p. 53; and another combat of some warrior with a monster, winged and horned, from a Persepolitan seal in cornelian, preserved, with many others of the same kind, in the British Museum. Similar combats are sculptured on the marbles at Persepolis; and it is possible that the ancient heroes celebrated in the Shah Nameh, and represented in these sculptures, may be the same.*

* This opinion I before offered in some remarks
“ On the antiquities of Persepolis, Istakhar, or Chelminar.” Oriental Collections, Vol. I, p. 167.

No. II. The following passage was by accident omitted in printing the foregoing pages: it concludes the account of Ardesbir Babegan, p. 43.

و نرد از مخترعات اوست و لهذا
عرب آنرا نرد شیر میگویند

“ And NERD is of his invention;
“ for this reason the Arabs call it
“ Nerdsbir.” The word Nard or Nerd, according to the dictionaries Luttayef al Loghat, Jehangeeri, Kashf-al-loghat, &c. signifies a well known game, (draughts, perhaps backgammon), and the pith of a tree.

The invention of draughts is generally ascribed to Buzurjember, the vizier of Nushirvan, who did not reign until three centuries after Ardesbir: this vizier introduced chefs, an Indian game, into Persia; and the Ferhung Borhan Kattee informs us, that Buzurjemher devised Nerd, on the plan or in imitation of chefs; but that Nerd was played with two dice, and, according to some, was of a more ancient origin.

III. It appears from the Tarikh Moagem, and the Nozbat al Coloub, that the Bandukvar, (or more properly Band-kouar) mentioned in p. 23, was a mound or dyke, erected by Ardesbir Babman, to raise or convey water, for the little but pleasant town of Kouar, كوار in the province of Fars.

Account of the Geographical Persian Manuscript, intituled Mefalek ù Memalek.

Having mentioned in the preface, (p. xxiv) my future translation of the Mefalek ù Memalek, I shall here give a short description of that manuscript, which is equally ancient as it is rare and curious. Although I have not yet been able to ascertain the author's name, it is evident, from two passages in the work itself, that he must have existed before the year 424 of the Hegira, (of Christ 1032); for, in his account of Spain, he describes the Ommiad Dynasty as still governing in that country; and adds, that “The “ Abbassides have not yet snatched it

“ from them ;” he must, therefore, have written before the year above mentioned, when the reign of the Ommiades ceased.

In another part of his work, describing Maweralnabr, or Tranfoxania, he informs us that he conversed with a respectable personage who had attended Nasser Ahmed in his battles.

This Prince, of the Samanian Dynasty, was invested with the government of Maweralnabr, by the Khalif Motamed, Anno Hegiræ 261, (A. D. 874) ; and if our author could have spoken with a contemporary of Nasser Ahmed, we may reasonably date the composition of his work early in the fourth century of the Mohammedan æra, between the year 900 and 1000 of Christ.

It appears that he visited, himself, many of the places he describes : confining his work to the limits of Islam (the Mohammedan world), he begins with a general description of its seas, the western regions of Africa, Spain, Egypt, Syria, Palestine, Arabia, Mesopotamia, Irak Arabi, Khufistan or Sufiana, Pars or Farfistan, its five Kourebs or districts, fire-temples, ancient castles, rivers, cities, roads, and distances from various towns to others ; the air, water, soil, &c. of Farfistan ; inhabitants ancient and modern, manners, dialects, religions, &c. ; extraordinary buildings and monuments of antiquity ; Istakhar, &c., produce, taxes, revenue, &c.; description of Kirman, cities, mountains, roads, &c.; part of Sind and Hind; Armenia, Arran and Azerbaijan, rivers, roads, hills, &c.; Kouhestan, Irak Ajemi, Taberistan, Khorasan, Dilem, Mazanderan, Khozr, or the regions bordering on the Caspian Sea; Maweralnahr, or Tranfoxania; deserts between Fars and Khorasan; Sejestan, its lakes, rivers, roads, cities, &c.; Ferghanah, Samarcand, Bokhara, Balkh, &c.

Thus he describes the route from Shiraz, شيراز to Kattab, کتته on the road of Khorasan:

“ From Shiraz to Dukak, دوقاق
 “ 6 farfangs—from Dukak to Istakbar,
 “ 6 f.—from Istakbar to Pir-

- “ Kuriab, پيرقریه 4 f.—from Pir- “ Kuriab to Kobendiz, کهنديز 6 f.—
 “ and from Kobendiz to Dhey-bend, “ Dhey-bend 8 f.—from Dhey-bend to “ Aber-koub, ابرقوه 12 f.—from Aber-
 “ kou to Dhey-shir, ديه شير 13 f.—
 “ from Dhey-shir to Hawer, حور 6 f.—
 “ from Hawer to Kelaa قلعه مجوس
 “ Majious, (the Castle of the Magi), “ which is now in ruins, 6 f.—and
 “ from Kelaa Majious to the town of “ Kattab, کته 5 f. &c.” The city of Istakbar still existed when our author
 wrote ; for he says,

اصطخر شهر يست نه خواره
 و نه بزرگ قديبتر از چه شهرها
 پارس است فراخي آن قدر يك
 ميل بود و پادشاهان پارس انجا

مقام داشتند و اردشیر انجا
بوده است و در خبر می آید که

“ Istakhar is a city, neither small “ nor great; more ancient than any “ city, whatsoever, of Pars; in extent
“ about one mile; and the Kings of “ Pars had their dwellings there; and “ Ardesbir resided in that place; and
“ there is a tradition that, &c.”

In another chapter he classes the statues, inscriptions, and buildings at Istakhar, amongst the wonders of Persia.

But any farther notice of the Mesalek u Memalek would be here unnecessary, as my translation of the whole work, in one volume quarto, will, I hope, be ready for publication at the close of the present year.

This book is complete, and is identical with the copy in the India Office
Library, although p. 92
bears no indication that it is the end of the book.

01

