BOXING NIGHT AND UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE 1882

SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT OF

HERR JOSEPH DRASAL,

The Tyrolean Giant, aged 32 years. The Tallest Man in the World, measuring EIGHT FEET FOUR INCHES.

ALSO
COLONEL D. ULPTS,

The Tyrolean Midget, aged 22 years, measuring 34 inches high. First Appearance in England.

HERR JOSEPH DRASAL, the great Tyrolean Giant, measuring 8 feet 4 inches in height, was born in Holleschan, near the Tyrol, Austria, in 1850, and is consequently 32 years of age. His parents belong to the Agricultural Class, and he is himself a landed proprietor, being possessed of several freehold farms. He is also a Town Councillor in his native place.

A great deal of persuasion was necessary to induce him to leave his home and exhibit himself, but he has done so with greatest success, creating quite a furore in Vienna, Berlin, Paris, Brussels, etc. His intellectual capacities are fully developed and he is a very shrewd business man. He is well proportioned, and strong on his legs, and is undoubtedly the tallest man that has ever been exhibited. To give an idea of the enormous size of his finger, we may mention that a two-shilling piece will pass through the inside of his signet ring. He is fairly educated, and speaks the following languages well; German, Slavonic, Russian, Polish, Hungarian, and a little French. He will appear in his National Costume, in conjunction with Colonel Dietrich Ulpts, the Tyrolean Midget, who was born in Innsbruck, Tyrol, in 1860, (hence 22 years of age,) and is only 34 inches high. His parents belong to the bourgeoisie class, and occupy a very respectable position; they are ordinary sized people. The Colonel is a wonderful mimic, and a good musician, and will give a specimen of his talents on a London stage. He is well educated, having been employed in an Insurance Office as a Cashier, he speaks English, German, and French, and is remarkably good looking, particularly bright and very intelligent, which makes him a great favourite amongst the ladies.
