Dear Sir

In reply to your letter concerning M<sup>rs</sup> Morgan I regret to say that she has again relapsed into almost the former condition she was in before her stay at the Retreat. I cannot see how her poor husband can possibly pay this heavy debt of £10.

His wages are very uncertain and the expenses of a house with a sick wife are more than he can meet. Morgan is a principled man and consequently it must be a bitter trial to him to be in debt. Mrs Morgan is so centred in her own ailments that she never considers where her husband can find money to pay the debts that she so readily contracts.

I sincerely wish I could give you a hope of future payment, but I fail to see how it can be accomplished under present circumstances

I am dear Sir

Faithfully yours inf.<sup>o</sup>

J. M. Stanislaus
