Dear Mr. Jacobs,

£50. 10. 6. @ 5%

I am very pleased indeed to hear such a good account of your brother. When I left he was steadily improving, and now it would seem that he is really convalescent.

With regard to the account; at the end of the present quarter when the tradesmen's accounts have all come in, the Secretary will be able to make up the books, and a cheque will be drawn for the balance owing to you. This has to be passed by the Committee and it will, therefore, make it some time about the middle of October, which I hope will be all right.

I remain,

Yours very truly,

Dear Dr. Pierce,

I am pleased to tell you that my brother is Splendid. He is settling down to work again, & I am hoping, that if he continues going on, as he is at present, there will be no necessity for him to go back to the Rheumatism again.

I should like to thank you, Dr. Mackenzie & all the Members of your Staff, for the Care & Attention to my brother while under your Care.

I paid my brother's care up to the end of Sept., so that there will be something like £40 to refund & support you will see to this at your convenience. With kind regards

Yours Sincerely
M. Jacobs

20th May, 1916.

Dear Mr. Jacobs,

Just a line to say that on examining your brother this morning I find his tongue is cleaner than it has been all along, and on the whole I feel satisfied that it is better that he should not smoke. I think the indigestion and loss of weight are a factor of his illness, and that tobacco in his case is really harmful, and I am encouraging him to keep off if as much as possible.

He was quite energetic this morning and was working away quite early. The sad part of it is that he lacks stability and after a day or two he so frequently relapses.

I remain,

Yours very truly,

will be good enough to give orders that he may have this.
With kind regards.

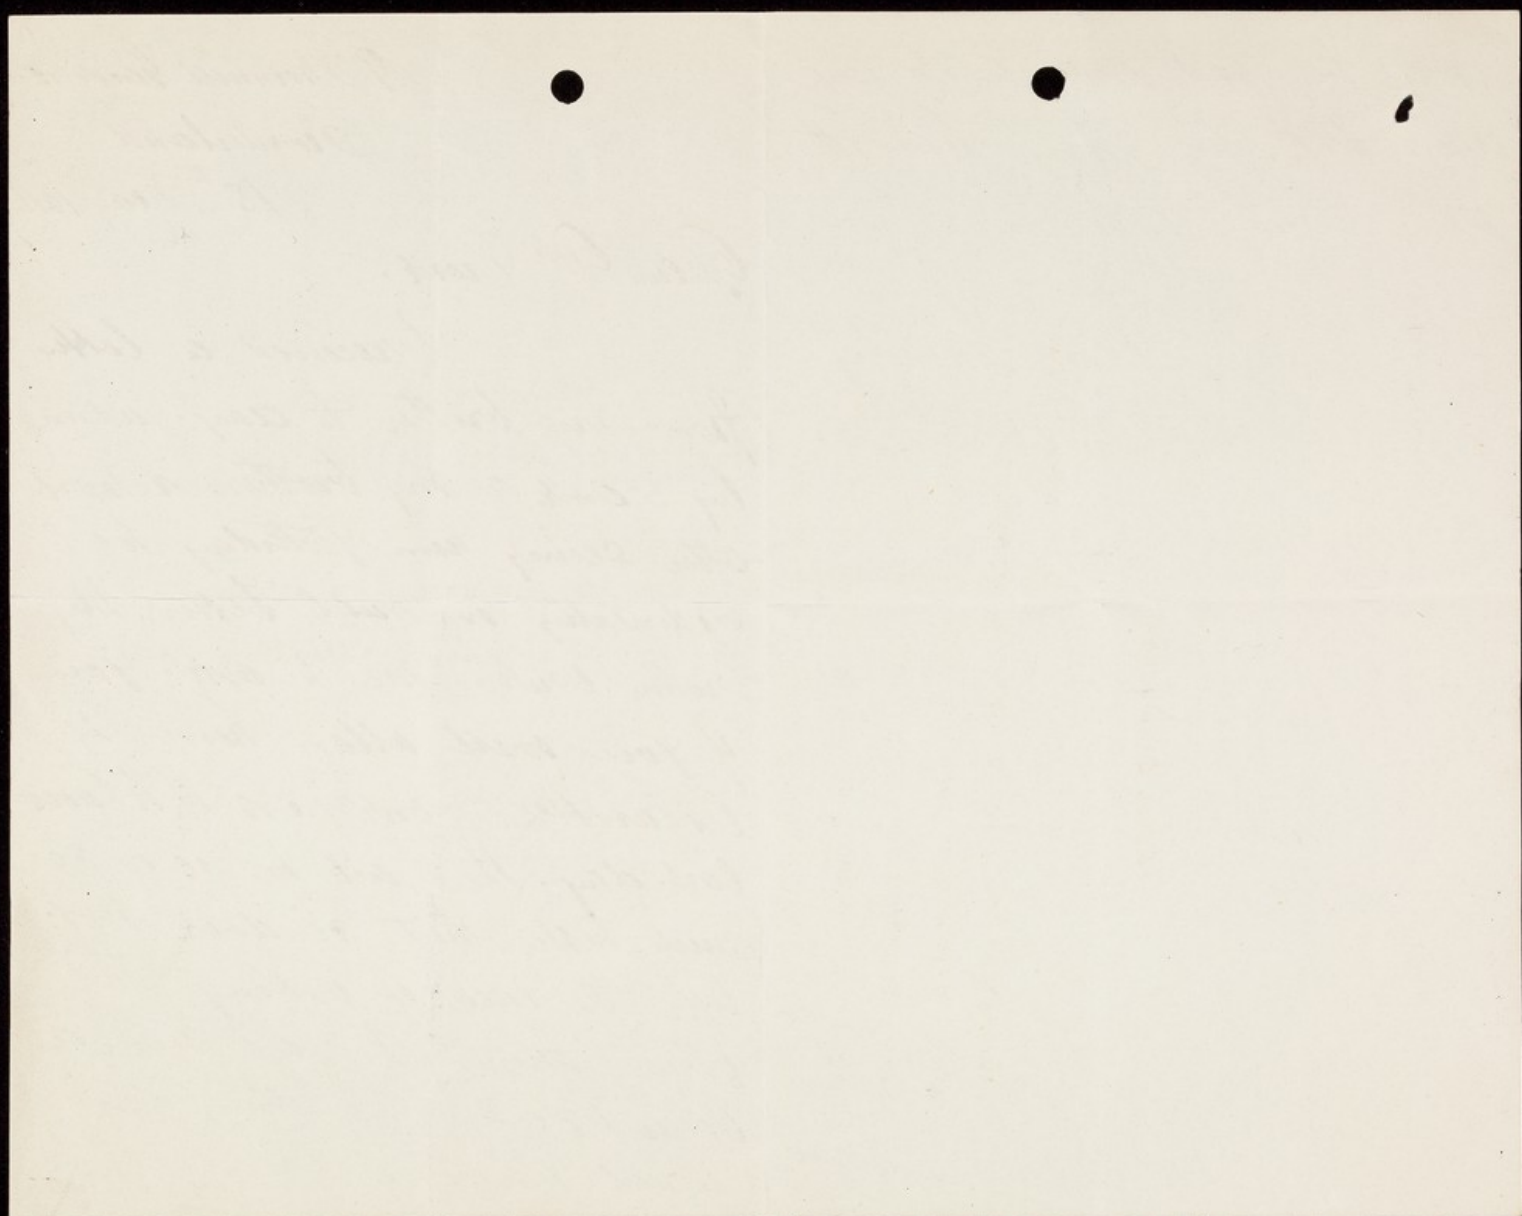

Yours Sincerely
Mr. Jacobs

Dear Dr. Pierce.

I received a letter

by Sam's, & my brother's report.
after seeing him yesterday, he evidently is much better. My brother writes me, to ask you if you will allow him 4
Cigarettes, & one pipe of tobacco each day. the fact is, he is so much better, that he does not like the idea of asking the other patients to give him a Cigarette. If you think his request advisable, perhaps you

19th February, 1916.

Dear Mr. Jacobs,

I cannot report very much improvement yet. Your brother is restless, and he has been specially miserable just now, as I have been knocking off his tobacco. He is always smoking or sucking a cigarette and as his tongue is furred I have stopped him smoking. I cannot think that this craving is morbid like the craving for alcohol which he hashad, and we think it best to go through with this patiently.

I have had a long talk to him, and he seems to be on the eve of making some disclosure, but nothing comes of it. As far as I can judge he blames himself wrongly for things that have happened in the past and turns them over and over in his mind, and he seems quite unable to occupy himself rationally for long together.

Dear Mr. Jacobs,

It will be perfectly all right for you to send a letter of enquiry every week or oftener if you wish; we will gladly furnish information, but it is better not to attempt a regular report apart from a letter of enquiry.

We think it will be well for Mr. Jacobs to have his meals more regularly, and to give up eating odd things at odd times. I think you have frequently sent him little luxuries, and we will arrange that he only has them at regular times. His tongue is still furred, which shows that his digestion is not good.

With regard to letters, I should think that he has almost had too many. Could it not be arranged that one or two members of the family act as correspondents, and that the correspondence is limited to them. The stream of letters he had when he was here before did not do much to help him and were really unsettling, and I do not think he ought to be expected to write more than one or two letters a week. The same applies to visiting; I should think a visit not more than once a week or perhaps only once a fortnight, would be best.

Mr. Jacobs is doing fairly well, though he has severe waves of depression, when he is very miserable, otherwise he is pretty well.

I remain,

Yours very truly,

St. Lawrence, 1910.

Dear Mr. Jacobs,

Dear Dr. Buzzard,

Many thanks for your note respecting Jacobs. I had some misgivings when I advised him to go away with his brother that he would not do very well. I do not think he is quite as bad as he was when he first came here, but the position is very unsatisfactory. He gets sudden short waves of depression for no apparent reason, and then brightens up.

For a very long time he has had a strangely furred tongue, and we have been unable to clear this up. I cannot but think that his digestive organs have something to do with this malady. The drinking appears to be entirely symptomatic.

There is a sort of feebleness of character which I do not like about the case, and it makes one think that it is something more than an ordinary case of melancholia.

I saw yesterday a Mr. Jacobs who has been with you for a time, and whom I found in a very depressed condition with certain delusions of persecution, etc. I strongly advised the brother to take him back to you as I thought it was likely that certification would be necessary before long. Dear Mr. Jacobs,

I am very pleased to hear an improved account of your brother and trust that he will steadily proceed towards recovery. If he could become interested in some regular work or some employment which occupied his thoughts without causing much mental strain it would, I feel sure, be quite good for him.

I hope his digestion is better than when he was here. That seemed to be an underlying cause, which I wish we could have been more successful in removing.

Dear Mr. Jacobs,

Your brother is certainly better to-day; he is gaining weight, and is clearly beginning to improve.

We have found by experience that constant change of scene is undesirable in cases of melancholia. Patients do badly when travelling, as they require rest rather than the fatigue of constantly seeing new things and visiting new places. I have told Mr. Jacobs this, and explained that when he is really convalescent it will be quite suitable for him to travel if he wishes.

considering I should like you to tell me if desiring him say every week will at all interfere with him getting better. They are glad of course he is away - We are a large family & each one is
just anxious to see him.
He has already had
three of his brothers
there & I do not know
if it is wise to continue
it. Of course we shall be guided by what you say I receive letters
from him frequently

Sometimes I think he is improving & the next letter is just as well & all the time is spent for much improvement
• Also should you please say if receiving letters & visiting friends is too much for his present state?
as we only intend doing anything
that is beneficial & his improvement.
I do trust there is hope & we are ever with kindest & cordial thoughts for his anticipation? Love

You will have heard that your patient arrived safely this morning, and we have been keeping him in bed to-day as he seemed tired. He has taken his meals well so far.

I have not yet made a careful examination, but he seems a good deal depressed and decidedly restless, unable to keep his attention on anything for long and getting in and out of bed. Dear Sir,

You will have received a telegram stating that my patient will come to you voluntarily tomorrow (Wednesday).

His name is David Jacobs; he is a Jew and 33 years of age, and lives with his brother Mr Maurice Jacobs at 9 Thornhill Gardens, Sunderland.

Six or seven months ago he lost his wife unexpectedly and has been very depressed since then, not taking any interest in his business, and for the last month has occasionally taken too much alcohol though he never took any before, being an extremely good steady young fellow. Now he thinks people are talking about him and has said he would do away with himself, although to me he denies any intention of doing so.

He is coming in voluntarily. He will probably require to be certified. His brother will come with him and will sign the necessary papers. They wish him to have a separate room at night and are willing to pay six guineas (£6-6) a week. They will probably arrive early in the afternoon and will be glad to be spared any formalities at the lodge.

Mr Jacob's father had some brain mischief for many years before he died as an old man, and one of his sisters was somewhat depressed, but none of the family so far as I know required special treatment.

N.B.—The charge for Board, Lodging and Medical care is payable quarterly, in advance. Disbursements by the Institution on behalf of patients, and other exceptional expenses, are charged in the following quarter's account. A residence of less than a month is charged as a month.

In the event of the death, removal, or discharge of a patient before the expiry of the quarter covered by the last payment, the surplus amount is returned by the Retreat.
