Dear Mr. Wright,

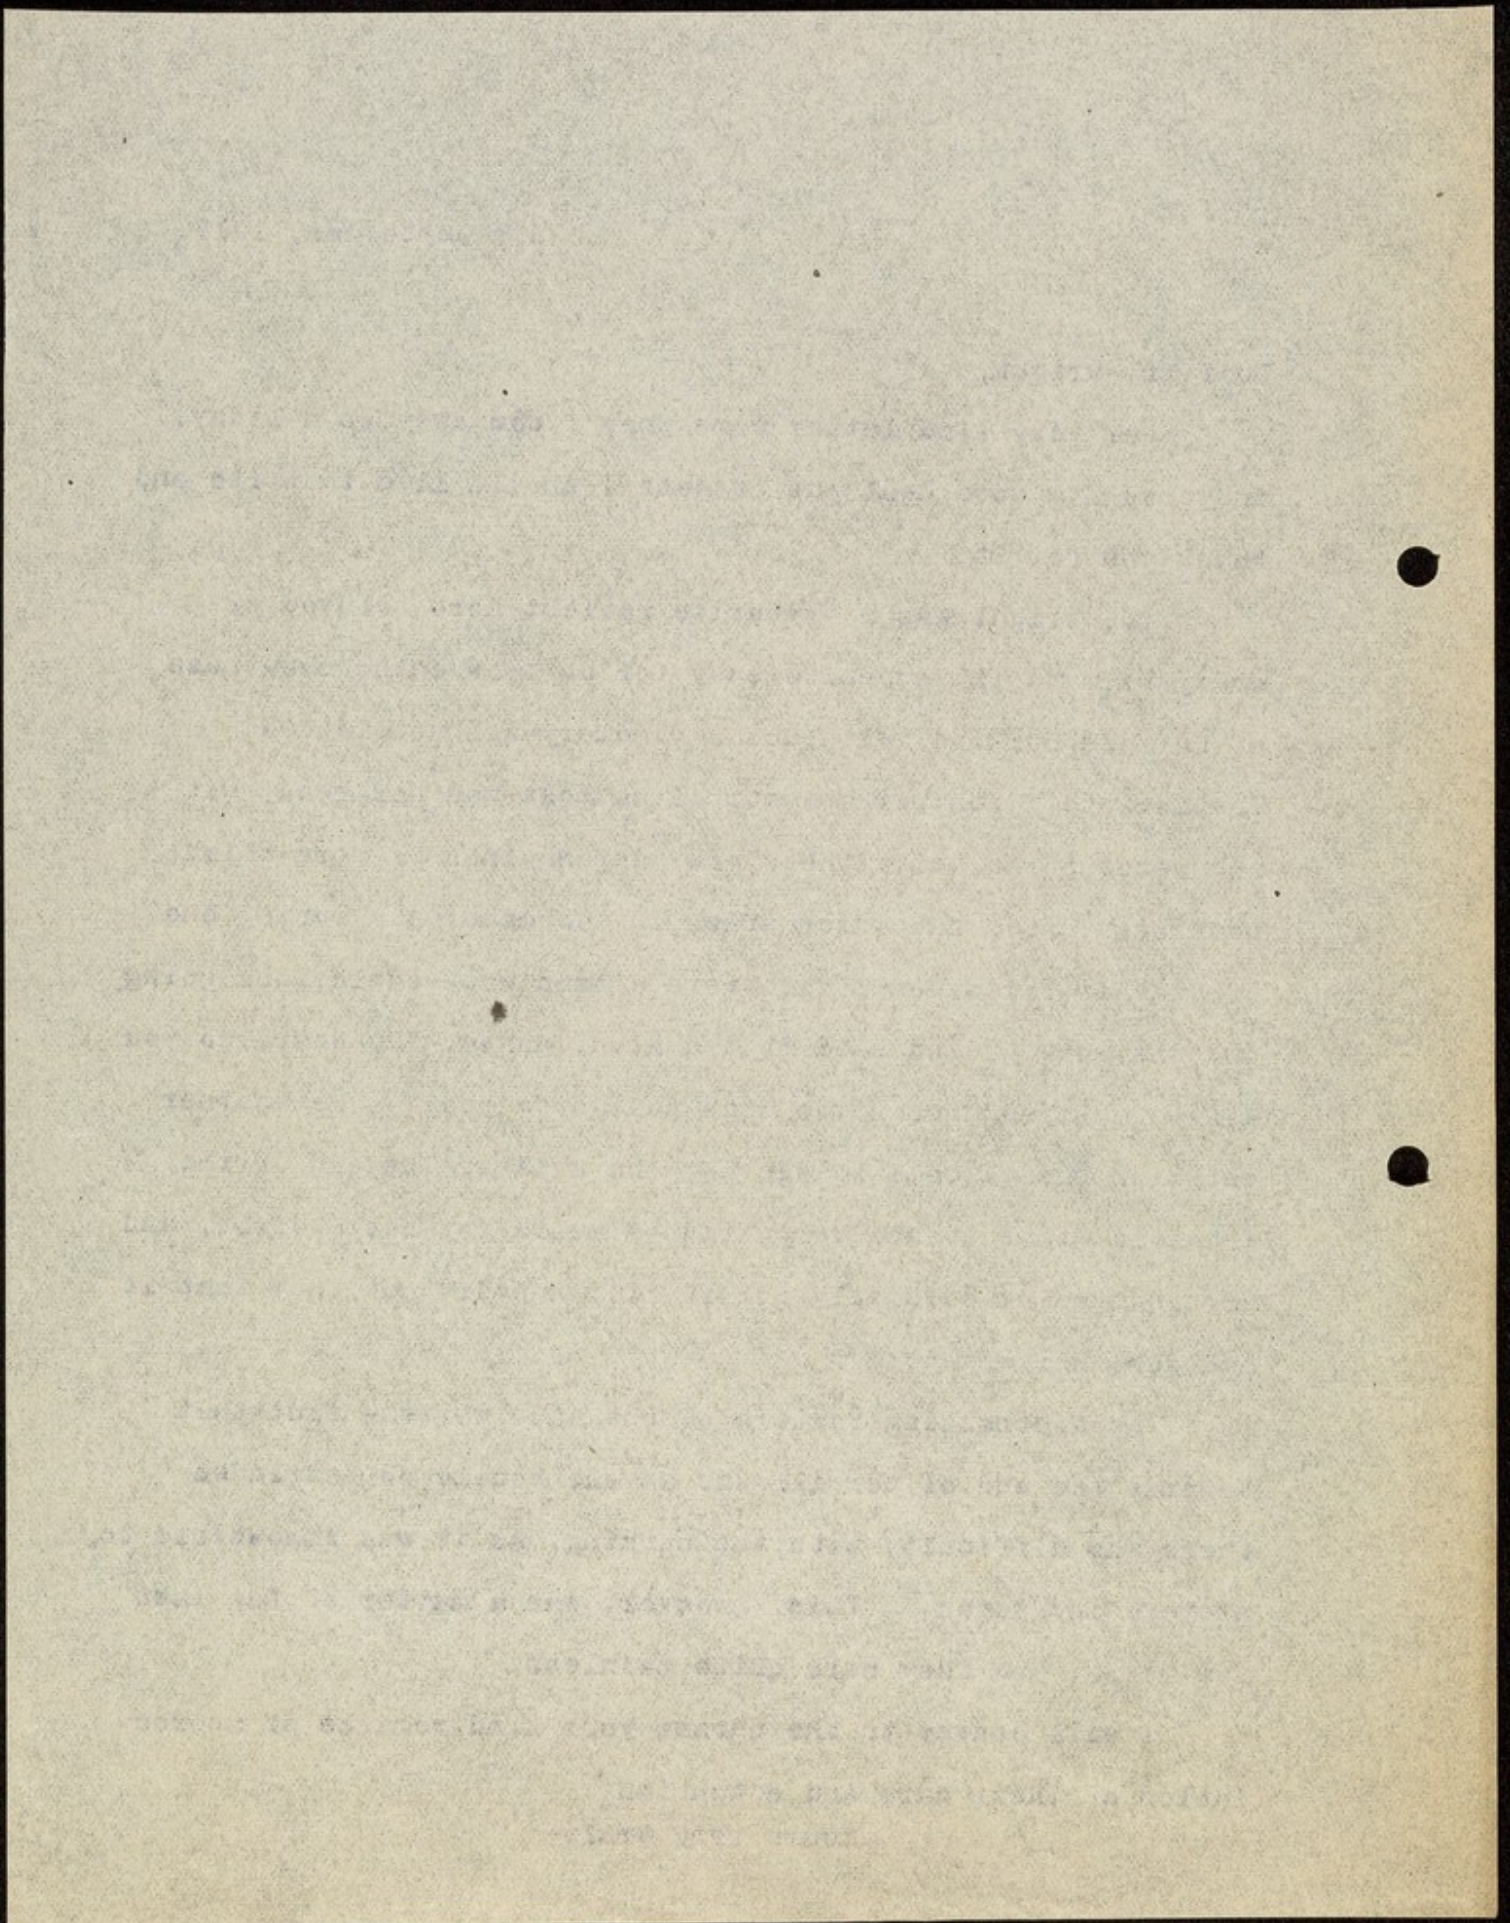

Your very kind letter came when I was away on holiday, and though a good deal out of date I should like to write and thank you for it.

Mrs. Wright was a favourite patient here beloved by everyone, and it was quite easy for us to see the sweetness of her disposition, although her memory was so clouded. The feature which perhaps struck us most was her ready wit and sense of humour; there are many sayings of hers which have been noted and which stick in the memory. During one of the air raids when there were a good many explosions going on, she woke up and said to the night nurse, "My dear, do you always make so much noise when you go to bed?" On another occasion when I came to see her she said at the end of the interview that it was very kind of me to pay her a visit, and she thanked me cordially for it, but she did not know that it had done her any good.

The distressing feature of the case was the fact that towards the end of her illness as she became so bedridden there was difficulty with the nursing, as it was impossible to prevent bed sores. This, however, was a matter of the last few weeks, and they were quite painless.

I will convey to the nurses your kind remarks of appreciation of their care and attention.

Yours very truly,

Dear Dr Price

I feel that I should like to take this opportunity of writing to you to express the feeling of warm indebtedness to you that my wife & I feel for all the care & kindness bestowed by yourself & the members of your staff upon my dear mother during the last years of her life.

The fact that I was unable to have her nearer to me was always a source of keen regret but it was none the less a great comfort to feel that she was being so well looked after I tenderly cared for at your hands. I wish you could have known her in her prime. To me she will always remain the most perfect type of self-sacrifice & warm devoted devotion & wisdom. Physically she was always frail but her indomitable will enabled her to accomplish much more than most others who had far more strength & she was the centre of a large circle of relatives & friends who always turned to her for counsel & guidance.

I know that she had at the Retreat a copy of Witherings British Poetry. Do you know whether it is still there because if it is I should greatly value it & like to have it, for she had it for the greater part of her life & from it she taught me in years past the rudiments of a science which is to me

When in London the other day
my brother & I agreed that if there are one or two nurses who were more particularly concerned in

Again thanking you & with kind

11th July, 1917.

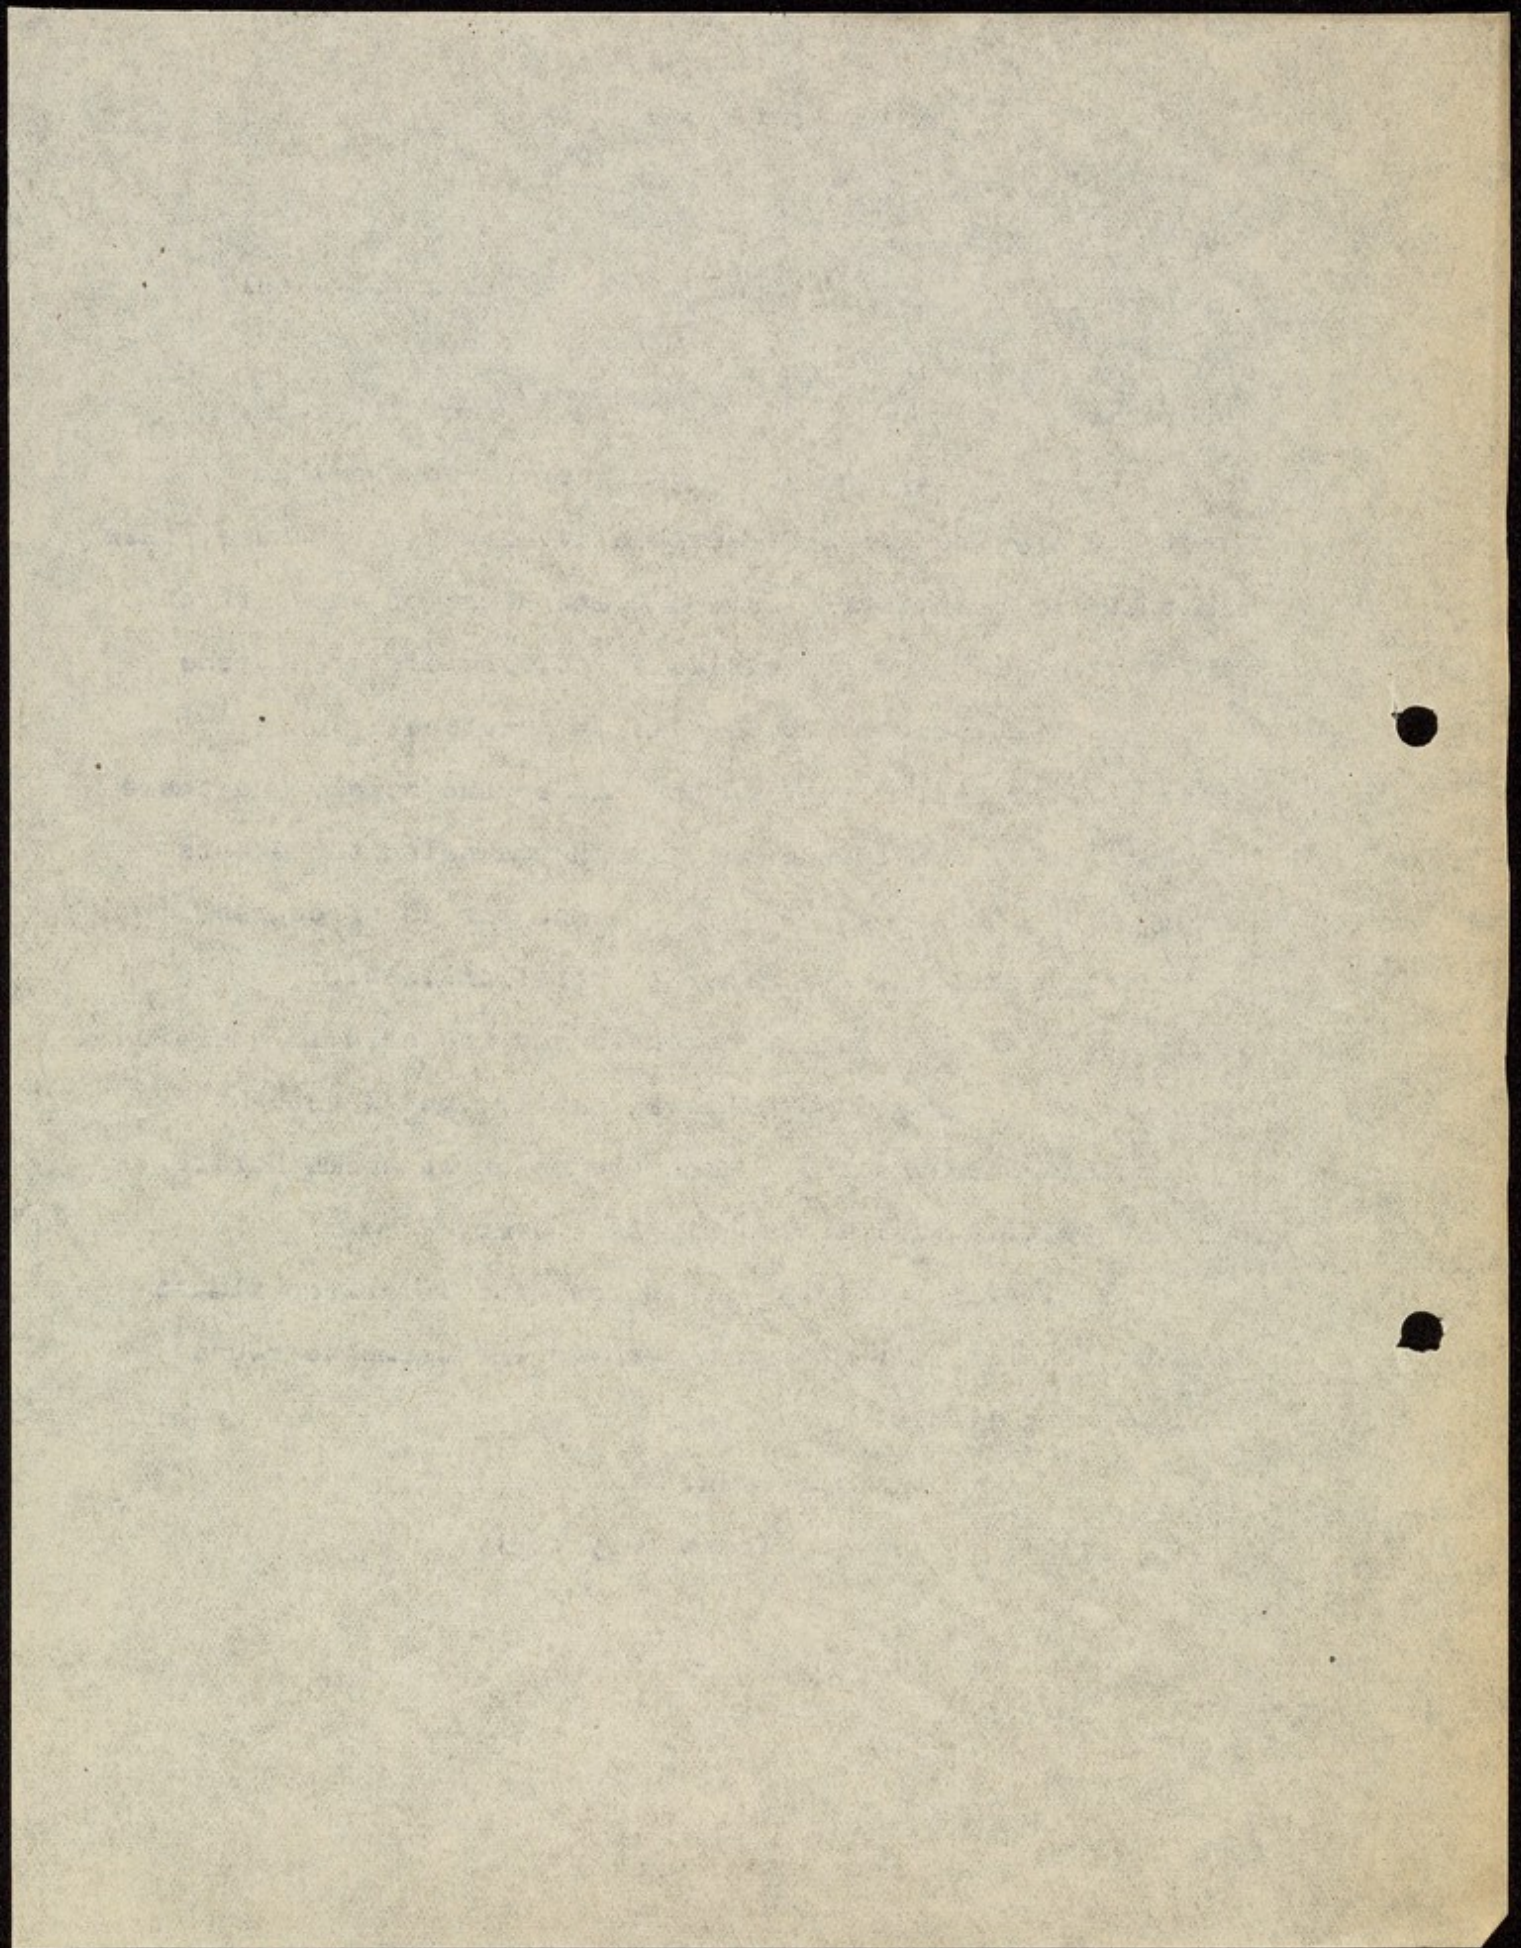

Dear Sir,

After nearly ten years confinement to bed I am sorry to say that Mrs. Wright has developed a bed sore, this in spite of unremitting care day and night on the part of the nurses. The difficulties of nursing are great, she has become contracted so that it is practically only possible for her to rest on one hip or the other, and there is complete incontinence which means changing the sheets every few minutes day and night; and she is of course extremely frail and her general nutrition is bad. This does not give her any trouble and the sore in question appears to be only a superficial matter, but I thought you should know about it, the more so as it seems hardly likely that it will thoroughly heal over.

Mrs. Wright barely speaks now, and is asleep almost the whole time, now and then however she seems to rouse and talks a little.

I remain,

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Wright,

Just a line to say that at the present time Mrs. Wright seems very comfortable and her pulse is firm. Last night her temperature rose to 102 for no apparent reason. There is really nothing fresh to say, except that we expect she will pass away in one of these attacks of extreme feebleness, but so far as we can judge there is no immediate cause for anxiety.

July 20, 1911

Dear Friend,

Your letter was submitted to the Committee on Tuesday and the questions raised were carefully ~~reconsidered~~ considered. I am requested to explain that the Committee think the sum proposed is no more than is justified, considering the large amount of care and attention Mrs. Wright receives. She is very frail, and needs most careful nursing. You are under a misapprehension in thinking that a nurse sleeps in her room. On the contrary, her feeble condition demands almost constant attention throughout the night as well as by day. It was because so much special care was needed that the change from a dormitory was required.

I hardly think you realise the cost of individual care such as is given in this case. Nowadays nurses do not work very long hours, and when continual care is needed additional nurses have to be found for relief duty during meals and leave of absence. Besides the nursing, there are establishment charges and the cost of medical attendance. Hence, the fees proposed are reasonable and are certainly not greater than would be charged in similar institutions under similar circumstances.

With regard to the patients having similar quarters in the West Villa, one is a Friend, two others are closely connected with Friends, and the fees paid are relatively the same.

It is quite true that members of the Society of Friends are admitted at reduced rates, but this assistance is only given when their friends are in reduced circumstances and are unable to pay the cost. We have at the Retreat some 40 Friends "recommended" by their Monthly Meeting, who pay only 12/- weekly, and seeing that we have practically no income from endowment it would be impossible to undertake this charitable work on behalf of the Society if Friends and others able to pay were not charged full fees, equivalent to the market value of the accommodation given.

I may add that every effort is made to keep the Retreat fully abreast of the times, and there are no rates to fall back upon to meet capital expenditure. In times past improvements could only be made by borrowing money, and though the loan is slowly being repaid the Retreat is not free from debt. The West Villa, in which Mrs. Wright lives, provides accommodation fully as good as any in the kingdom.

I hope, with this further explanation, you will see the matter in a different light, but if on further thought you still feel that it is necessary to raise the question again, I shall be glad to re-open the subject with the Committee.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,

Max A. Wright Esq.

My brother Hamilton
Wright & I have been consulting together regarding the increased fees now charged by your committee for our mother Mrs Alfred Wright.
I am writing this to let you know that I am in thorough agreement with my brother in considering that the enormously increased charge - double what it was previously - is much more than we could reasonably have expected.

You mention that the fee equal those paid in a somewhat similar case
by a lady who is not a

Friend. I had always understood that members of our Religion society possessed advantages which others did not.

Surely the alteration of having a room to oneself & of having a nurse to sleep in the same room does not represent an additional cost of more than £150 per annum!

Like my brother, I quite fail to see how this can be & feel that it is more than it is reasonable to expect us to pay.

May I ask you to be good enough to reconsider the matter. Very sincerely yours
Max Ayrault

July 6, 1911

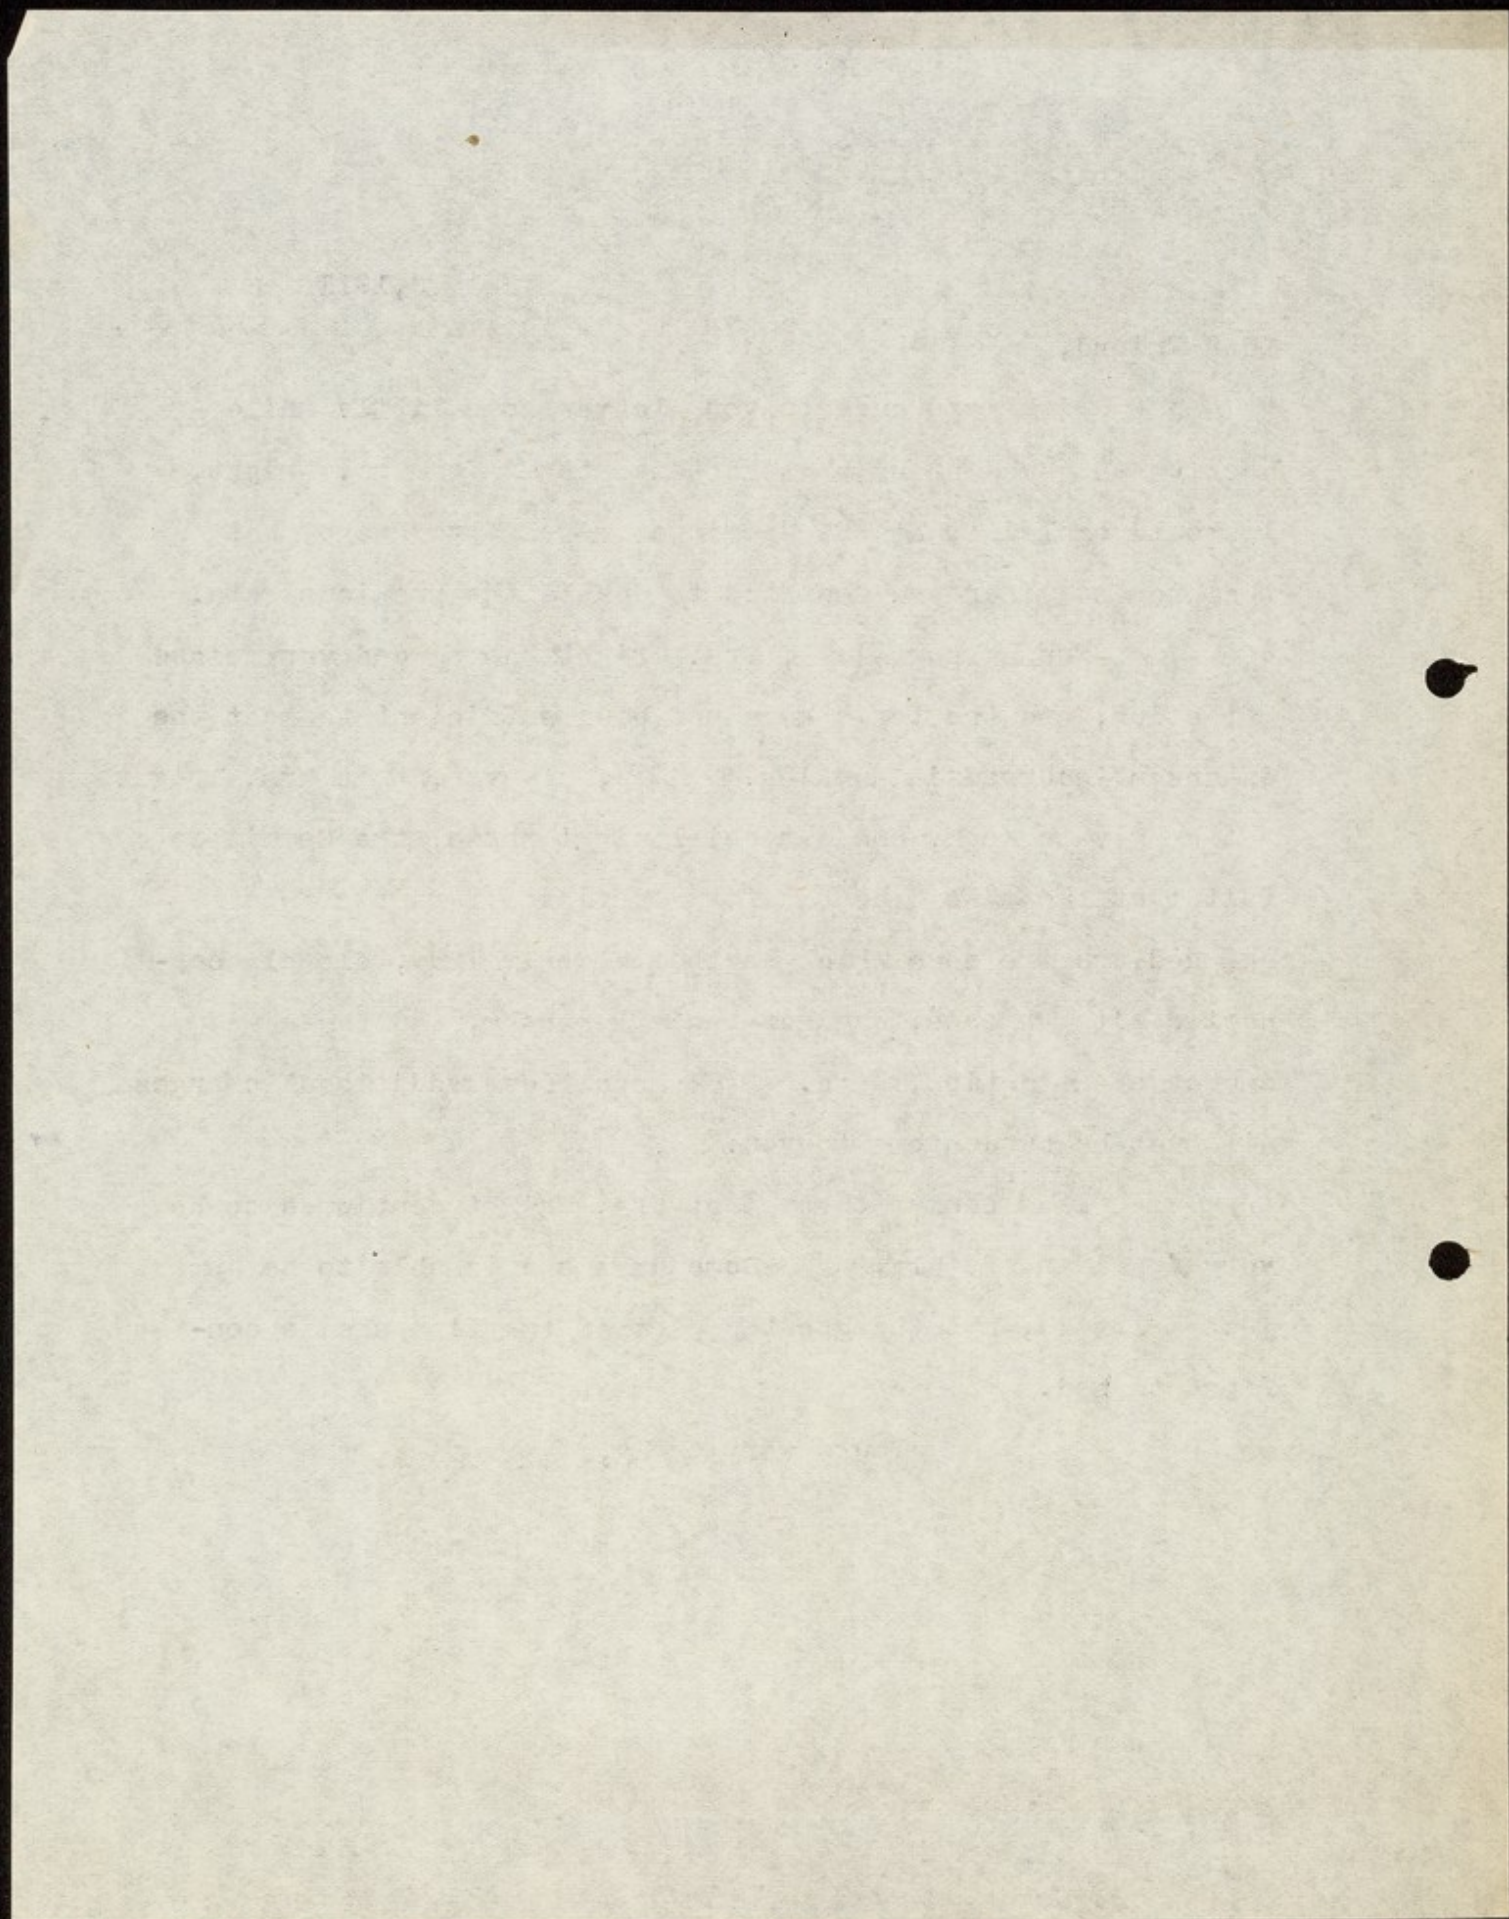

Dear Friend,

With reference to your letter some little while back, on the subject of the increased terms for Mrs. Wright, I should explain that the Committee were quite aware that the proposed increase amounted to double the previous rate.

For a long time, Mrs. Wright has needed very close attention, and the terms have not been sufficient to meet the expenses incurred in nursing. Now, however, that Mrs. Wright has a private room, and a special night nurse, the Committee felt that the time had come for a revision; and the fees charged are the same which another elderly lady, closely connected with Friends, who has a similar room, and the same amount of attention, pays. We hope these additional charges will not be burdensome to you.

I am sorry to say that Mrs. Wright continues to be very frail and feeble. Some days she is able to be up just a little, but the greater part of the time she is confined to bed.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Wright,

I am writing to explain that I think the time has now come to make some different arrangement respecting the nursing of Mrs. Wright. She is becoming increasingly feeble and requires much more supervision than she did. Hitherto she has generally been nursed in dormitory with others, but I think it will be more comfortable and satisfactory for her to have a private room and a special nurse during the night. We have tried this for the last few days and it is certainly working better. In the day time she is mostly in bed, and this room, with a south aspect, is very pleasant for her.

I should like to know whether there is any objection to an increased fee under these new arrangements. I think the Committee would expect to be paid about six guineas a week. At least this is the fee charged for an elderly lady under exactly similar circumstances.

Mrs. Wright is more confused in mind, and you will understand that she is also feeble in body, but there is no immediate cause for anxiety.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Wright,

Sept. 29, 1903

Dear Mr. Wright,

Mrs. Wright is continually appealing to go back to her home, and there is no doubt she is very much better. Her memory is not altogether reliable, but still it is wonderfully better than it was. She is very frail, and requires a good deal of personal attention, and I think it is no unlikely that away from Institution care she might become more difficult to manage. On the whole however she gives us very little trouble and I should not be surprised if a nurse could not manage her very nicely now that she is used to being under control by nurses.

When the Commissioners in Lunacy were here some little while back they expressed the hope that Mrs. Wright could go away on trial. At that time there was some talk of her going to Cardiff, but Mrs. Wright distinctly objects to going there, saying that her place is with her husband. I am aware that he is in an exceedingly feeble condition and himself under the care of nurses. Would it not be possible, however, to arrange for Mrs. Wright to return home with a special nurse to look after her.

It is impossible for me to do more than make a suggestion of this kind, as I am so ignorant of the circumstances. You will, however, understand that now the old lady is better able to understand her circumstances one would be glad for her to be nearer her own people whom she longs to see.

Dear Sir,

Mr. Harrington Wright of this village has given me your name. I understand his mother is now, or has been staying with you.

I want to lay my brother's care before you, and then to ask if you would receive him, and upon what terms?

Owing to some very serious monetary losses, he has for the past few months been getting into a very depressed condition, and three weeks ago, it was decided that a specialist must be consulted, who pronounced him to be suffering from severe melancholia, and further that the arteries showed a good deal of wear & tear. He ordered his removal to a nursing home, and thought it advisable for him to have two nurses ^(day & night) in case of an impulse of suicidal mania setting in, although he has shown no signs of such.

He has now been there 3 weeks in bed, and yesterday I found him greatly improved, quite rational. in fact he has always been so - and he had been up for 2½ hours the day before, was to get up yesterday, and today to go for a short walk.

Now this is costing more than he is able to pay, and his Doctor agrees that the knowledge of this fact will tend to retard his complete restoration to normal condition, ^{so} and his wife is anxious to effect a change as soon as possible.

The Home he is now in is not suitable for such cases, necessitating as it does the payment of special nurses, but where one nurse can watch many cases, the
