It should be noted that the majority of samples falling within Grades 2—4 were taken from new mains in the course of sterilization prior to them being brought into supply.

Eighteen samples of water were submitted to the Counties Laboratory, London, to test plumbo-solvency. These were reported as satisfactory.

SEWERAGE.

AVETON GIFFORD. Work on constructing a new sewage outfall for this village is still in progress.

BLACKAWTON. The Council's Consulting Engineers have been asked to submit a scheme for extending the sewer in the village so that large quantities of surface water can be eliminated to prevent flooding of the sewage works.

CHARLETON. The sewer at Frogmore has been extended for 60 yards so that a number of houses can be drained into it.

CHURCHSTOW. A scheme for draining the village of Churchstow is being prepared.

CHIVELSTONE—EAST PRAWLE. Further information having been requested by the Ministry, a further scheme is being prepared to construct a rotary filter to treat the effluent from the sewage outfall before being discharged into the stream.

EAST ALLINGTON. A quantity of surface water which was entering the sewers and flooding the works has been taken out and diverted to other channels.

MALBOROUGH. A new scheme to deal with the sewage from properties on the northern side of the village and from a nearby camp is progressing satisfactorily.

SOUTH MILTON. A revised scheme for dealing with the drainage of this village is in course of preparation.

STOKE FLEMING. The work of extending the sewer to the north of the village and the construction of a new sea outfall has been completed with satisfactory results.

STOKENHAM—CHILLINGTON. A scheme is also being prepared for dealing with the drainage of this village. At present, the sewage discharges into septic tanks which are inadequate, and causes a grave nuisance.

STOKENHAM—KELLATON. The sewage of this village is discharged into a septic tank but with the increased drainage from the Council houses, it was found that the existing works were inadequate to cope with the extra quantity of sewerage.

A new outfall works was therefore designed with settling tank, rotary filter and sludge beds.

This scheme has now been completed and the old system abandoned.

THURLESTONE. Owing to rough seas, this sea outfall was very badly damaged. The concrete surround to protect the pipes was extensively broken up and in some places the pipes themselves cracked. New pipes have now been inserted and the concrete surround replaced.

The Council provide a fortnightly collection of incombustible household refuse throughout the district. This is disposed of in five refuse tips within the area.

An order has now been placed for the delivery of a larger and more modern type vehicle.

The Council is still actively engaged in the collection of salvage throughout the district, and a special collection is made for this purpose.
