INTRODUCTION

The Year 1970 passed in contemplation of the Redcliffe-Maud proposals for the reform of local government. The changes proposed centred on the organisation of large all purpose ("Unitary") Authorities and the virtual elimination of district councils as local authorities with any real power or responsibility. By now, after a change of government, entirely different, almost diametrically opposite, ideas for reform are current. Under these plans a process of combination and redrafting will generally increase the size of the areas administered by district councils and the principle of two tier administration so familiar in county areas for so long will be continued.

It was not to be expected that any kind of local government reform would please everybody; and the current proposals certainly do not have any appeal at all to smaller authorities likely to be submerged in larger ones, or to Boroughs which fear a loss of their identity in the process of reorganisation.

From a purely partisan viewpoint, it is to be hoped that whatever emerges from the "revolution" will retain at least those features of Public Health and Preventive Medicine administration which have proved successful in the past. It is nearly a century since the present system was organised and public health legislation was consolidated in the 1875 Act, so that some reform was long overdue. There is, however, much discussion, particularly in academic circles of a being called the "Community Physician" and a real possibility that he will oust the Medical Officer of Health in the new Jerusalem, the estimated date of birth of which is in April, 1974.

It is true that the "Sanitary Inspector" did not lose either his importance or his identity when he became the "Public Health Inspector" in 1956. A simple change of name is therefore perhaps not of critical importance, but the qualifications, interests and responsibilities of the Public Health Inspector and of the Medical Officer of Health (under whatever designation he may eventually find himself labouring) have always been complementary and they have worked side by side in most authorities in harmony. The arrangement by which the Public Health Inspector works "under the general supervision of the Medical Officer of Health" is no longer justified, and it is to be hoped that he will emerge as a Chief Officer in his own right. It would certainly be a backward step if the Public Health Inspector of the new district authority were to find himself under the control of a Superintendent Public Health Inspector of the upper tier authority.

Introduction (contd.)

It is difficult to pick up any periodical or newspaper nowadays without finding frequent references to sexual emancipation, freedom, licence, call it what you will. The public has become accustomed to the discussion of human sexual relations and indeed to their explicit portrayal on stage and screen. Sex education of children is now passing into the hands of people (some of them peculiarly poorly qualified to give advice or instruction to anyone young or old) who seem more anxious to establish their own reputation as uninhibited than to convey the right sort of protective information to young people.

There is an increase in sexual promiscuity particularly among young people who are being encouraged to form "stable relationships" outside or before marriage. The consequence of this increase (and also the irrefutable proof of it) is an increase in the incidence of venereal diseases now officially classified as "sexually transmitted diseases". The fact of this increase has received nothing like the publicity that it warrants because the operators of the mass media believe the public finds the subject distasteful. Consequently young people are abysmally ignorant of the risks they run in pursuing the sexual freedom so irresponsibly recommended to them, and it cannot be too strongly emphasised that every casual sexual contact can lead to infection, and every infected person should seek immediate diagnosis and treatment if the spread of the infection is to be controlled. Treatment is free at special clinics and anonymity is assured.

STATISTICS AND SOCIAL CONDITIONS

The District is an agricultural and residential one occupying the North-Western corner of West Sussex. The Counties of Hampshire and Surrey lie to the West and North respectively, Chichester Rural District to the South, and Petworth to the East.

Apart from agriculture, there are other minor industries providing employment, and holiday traffic brings a considerable amount of trade to hotels and cafes.

When dealing with a small population such as that of this District, a certain random fluctuation from year to year in Birth and Death Rates is to be expected. This is illustrated by the figures for the last ten years shown on page 11.

Of the total deaths recorded during 1970, 289 or 86% occurred in persons aged 65 years or over, and of these, 216 or 64% occurred in persons aged 75 years or over.

The chief causes of death in order of frequency were :

	1970	1969
(i) diseases of heart & circulatory system	133(39%)	123(43%)
(ii) neoplasms ..	56(17%)	52(18%)
(iii) cerebrovascular disease ..	53(16%)	43(15%)
(iv) respiratory diseases (excluding pulmonary tuberculosis)	51(15%)	29(10%)

These four causes accounted for 293 or 87% of the total deaths.

The table on page 9 shows the age, sex distribution and causes of death in 1970.

During the year deaths exceeded births by 150, and the Registrar-General's estimate of population at mid 1970 showed an increase of 410 over the 1969 estimate.

Death Rates per 1,000 population from :

	1970	1969

During the year the work of building the new sewage works at South Ambersham to replace the out-dated works at Midhurst was commenced and a survey was carried out of the drainage arrangements at properties in the parishes thought capable of being served by the new Works. At Graffham, out of 208 properties inspected, 115 were found to have unsatisfactory drainage arrangements; in the Norwood Lane area of East Lavington, out of 35 properties inspected, 21 were found to have unsatisfactory drainage arrangements; and at Keyshott, out of 113 inspected, 40 were found to have unsatisfactory drainage arrangements. In the light of this survey, the Council decided in September to instruct the Consulting Engineers to submit a report on the possibility of sewerage these areas.

It was estimated that the number of houses in the district still relying on pail closets at the 31st December, 1970, was 92 compared with 124 at the beginning of the year.
