The gentlewomans companion, or, A guide to the female sex: containing directions of behaviour, in all places, companies, relations, and conditions, from their childhood down to old age ... With letters and discourses upon all occasions. Whereunto is added, A guide for cook-maids, diary-maids, chamber-maids, and all others that go to service. The whole being an exact rule for the female sex in general / By Hannah Woolley.

Contributors

Woolley, Hannah, active 1670

Publication/Creation

London: Printed by T.J. for Edward Thomas, 1682.

Persistent URL

https://wellcomecollection.org/works/v3fudf8u

License and attribution

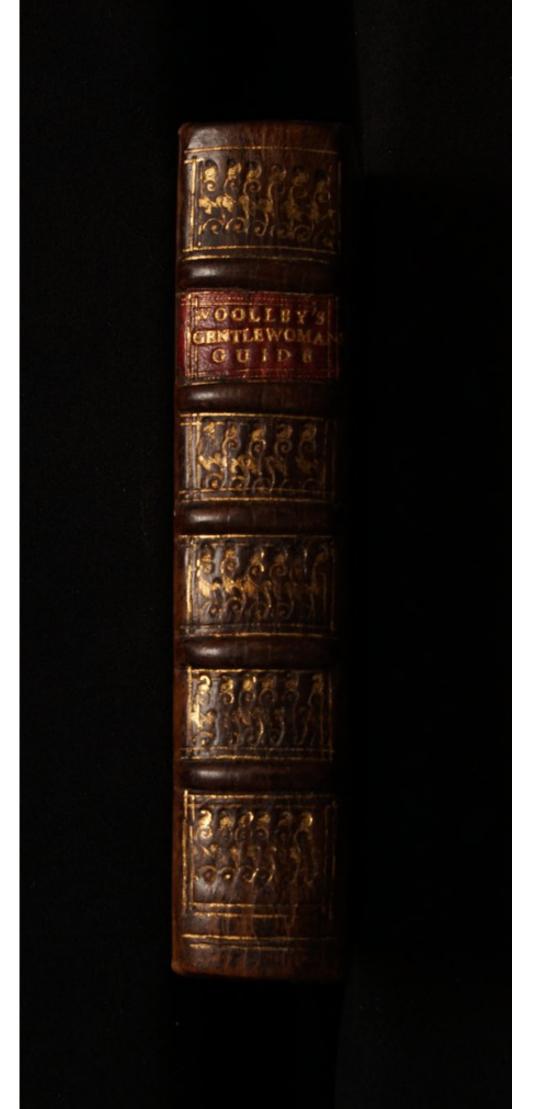

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection 183 Euston Road London NW1 2BE UK T +44 (0)20 7611 8722 E library@wellcomecollection.org https://wellcomecollection.org

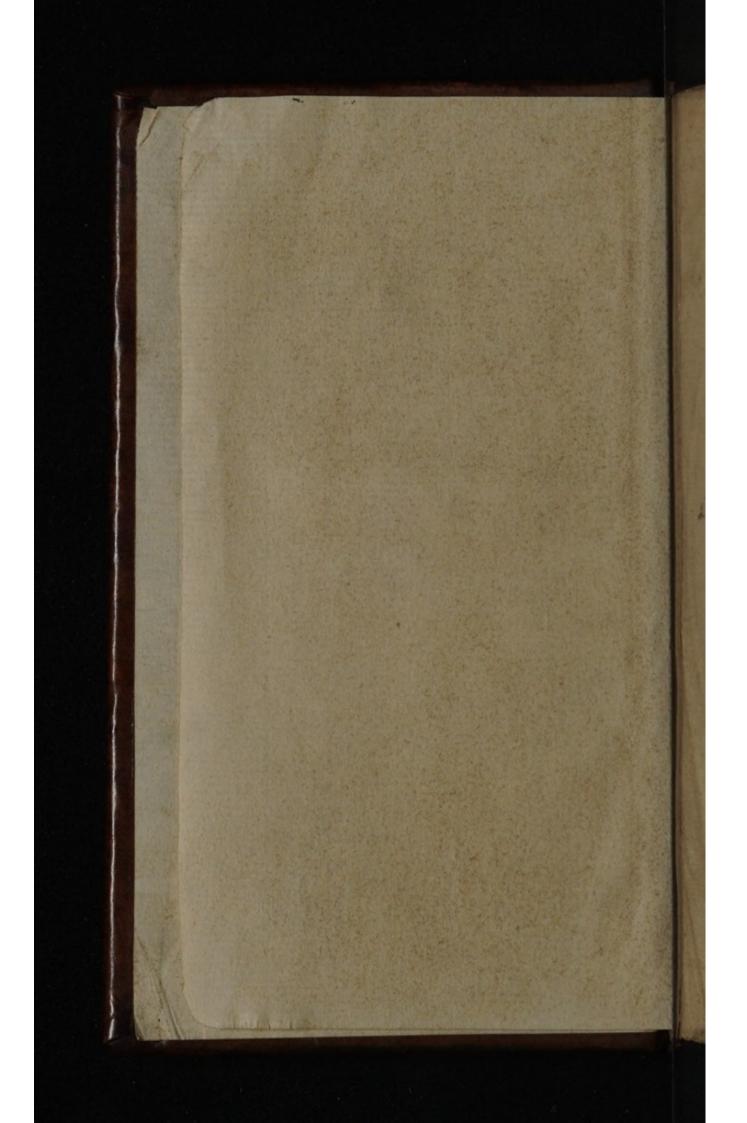

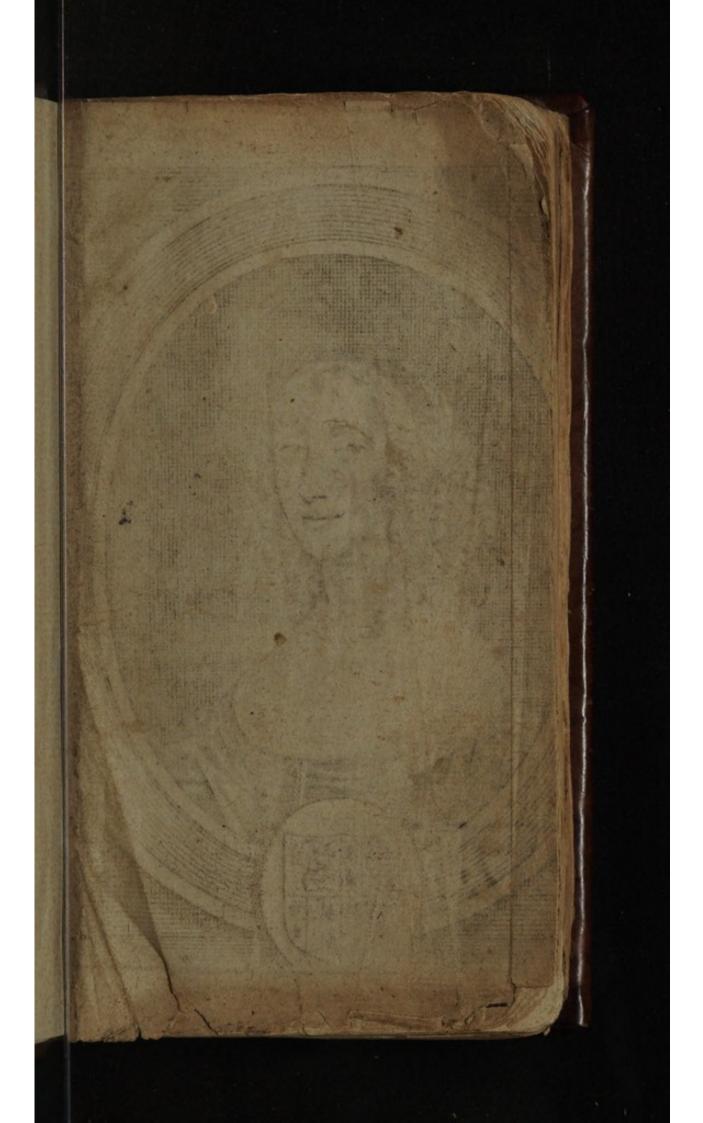

IA 1W50 53427/A Jan 1 3278 1/2

Gentlewomans Companion;

GUIDE:
TOTHESEX:

Directions of Behaviour, in all Places

Companies, Relations, and Conditions, from their Childhood down to Od Age:

Children to Parents.
Scholars to Governours.
Single to Servants.
Wirgins to Suitors.
Widows to the World.
Married to Hosbands.

Prudent to all.

With LETTERS and DISCOURSES

Whereasto is added, A Gurde for Cook-maids

Dairy-maids, Chamber-maids, and all others that go to Service.

The whole being an exact Rule for the Female Sex in General.

The THIRD EDITION.

By HANNAH WOOLLET

LONDONPrinted by T. Hor Edward Thomas at the Adams nd Even Little Brittamn 682

To all Young Ladies, Gentlewomen, and all Maidens whatever.

Have formerly fent forth amongstyou two little Books; the first called, The Ladies Directory; the other, The Cooks Guide. Both which have found very good Acceptance. It is near Seven years since I began to write this Book, at the desire of the Bookseller and earnest intreaties of very many worthy Friends; unto whom I owe more than I can do for them. and A 2

And when I considered the great need of fuch a Book as might be a Universal Companion and Guide to the Female Sex; in all Relations, Companies, Conditions, and states of Life, even from Child-bood down to Oldage; and from the Lady at the Court, to the Cookmaid in the Country: I was at length prevailed upon to do it, and the rather because I knew not of any Book in any Language that hath done the like. Indeed many excellent Authors there be who have wrote wrote excellent we'l of fome particular Subjects herein treated of. But as there is not one of them hath written upon all of them; fo there are fome things treated of in this Book, that I have not met with in any Language, but are the Product of my Thirty years Observations and Experience.

I will not deny but I have made some use of that Excellent Book, The Queens Closet; May's Cookery; The Ladies Companion; my own Directory and Guide; Also, A 2 the

the second part of Youth's Behaviour, and what other Books I thought pertinent and proper to make up a CompleatBook, that might have an Universal Usefulness; and to that end I did not only make use of them, but also of all others, especially those that have been lately writ in the French and Italian Languages For as the things treated of are many and various, so were my Helps.

I hope the Reader will not think it much, that as the famous Limner when

he

he drew the Picture of an Exact Beauty, made use of an Eye from one, of a Mouth from another; and so cull'd what was rare in all others, that he might present them all in one en tire piece of Workmanship and Frame: So I, when I was to write of Physick and Chirurgery, have consulted all Books I could meet with in that kind, to compleat my own Experiences.

If any shall wonder why I have been so large upon it, I must tell them, I look

A 4

upon

upon the end of Life to be Usefulness; nor know I wherein our Sex can be more useful in their Generation than having a competent skill in Physick and Chirurgery, a competent Estate to distribute it, and a Heart willing thereunto.

The like Apology I have for my Prolixity about Cookery and Carving, which being essential to a true Houswife, I thought it best to dwell most upon that which they cannot dwell without, unless they design design to render themselves insignificant, not only in the world, but in those Families where they are.

As for what concerns Gentlewomens Behaviour, I have the concurrent advice and directions of the most able Professors and Teachers, both here and beyond the Seas; yet durst not be so airy and light in my Treatise about Ladies Love and Courtship as some of the French Authors have been, but have taken out of them what I found most A 5 taking Gentry. The like I may say for Habits and Gesture; I am not ignorant of the vanity of some Mens stiles upon these Subjects; and that young Ladies are too apt to take what may gratisie their Fancies, and leave what may better their Judgments about true Behaviour.

I know I may be cenfured by many for undertaking this great Design, in presenting to all of our Sex a compleat Directory, and that which contains se-

feveral Sciences: deeming it a Work for a Solomon, who could give an account from the Cedar to the Hyfop. I have therefore in my Apology to the Bookseller, declared how I came to be of Ability to do it, reciting to him the grounds of my knowledg in all those Sciences I profess; and also what practice and experience I have had in the World, lest any should think I speak more than I am able to perform. doubt not but judicious persons will esteem this Effay

Essay of mine, when they have read the Book, and weighed it well; and if so, I shall the less trouble my self what the ignorant do or say.

I have now done my Task, and shall leave it to your candid Judgments and Improvement; your Acceptation will much encourage London, Nov. 10.

Your

Most humble Servant,

HANNAH WOOLLEY.

THE

TABLE.

TNtroduction, page 1.
The duty and qualification of a Governess to Gentlewomens Children, 5.
vernejs to demice Tife and Abilities Ashort account of the Life and Abilities of the Authoress of this Book, 14.
Good Instructions for a young Gentlewo-man, from the age of Sixto Sixteen, 4.
Advice to the Female younger fort. 25.
The duty of Children to their Parents, 32.
Of a young Gentlewomans deportment to her Governess and Servants in the Family,
What Qualifications best become and are Of a Gentlewomans Civil Behaviour to all forts of People in all flaces, 49.
Of the Gait or Gelture,
Of the Government of the eye,
" The cheech and Complement, 2.
Choice and general Rules for a Gentlewo-mans

mans observation in Conve	rsation
with Company, Rules to be observed in walking wi	thPer-fons of Honour, and how you or behave your self in congratulati condoling them,	80.
Of Habit, and the neatness and pr	operty thereof. Of Fashions, and thei culous apish imitation,	82.
Of New Fashions,	93.
of New Fashions, Of young Gentlewomens fit hour	s and times for their Recreations and	Pleasures, and how to Govern then therein,	122.
What Recreations and Pleasures ar	e most fitting and proper for young Gen	tlezvo-
men,	125
fitting and proper for young Gen men, Of the guidance of a Ladies love an	adfan-
6y ,	131.
The Gentlewomans Mirrour, or P	aterns
for their imitation of such famou	es Women who have been eminent in	Piety and Learning,	148.
Of Marriage, and the Duty of a I	Vife to ner Husband,	150.
Of Women's Behaviour to their Ser-	vants,
and what is to be required of	them
	in

in the House, or what thereunto	apper-tains.	164.
Terms for Carving all forts of M	eat at
Table,	170.
Quaint Directions for the Carvin	g of all manner of Fowl,	172.
Artichoaks Fried,	176.
Artichoaks stewed,	ibid.
An Almond-Pudding,	177
An Almond-Pudding in Guts,	ibid.
An Almond-Tart,	178.
Almond-Cream,	ibid.
Apple-Cream:	179
Apricocks green Baked,	ibid.
Barley-Broth,	1 80.
Bisk,	ibid.
Beef-Hashed,	183.
Beef A-la mode,	ibid.
Beef Carbonadoed,	184.
Beef baked red Deer Jajmon	in Pies
Pasties, either Surloyn,	Bisket ,
Buttock or Fillet, larded o	r not ,
AGE 18 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	ibid.
Beef Collared,	185.
Brawn, how to make a Collar,	186.
Brawu made of a Sucking-Pig, oth	persways called a Souced Pig,	100.
	Calves-

The same of the sa
Calves-headroasted,	189.
Calves-foot Pie, or Neats-foot Pie	ICO.
Capons Souced,	191.
Calves-Chaldron Mince-Pies,	152.
Capon or Chicken in white Broth,	ibid.
Chicken-Pye,	40000000
Clouted-Cream,	193.
Cabbidg-Cream,	194.
Carp stewed,	ibid.
Carp Marinated,	196.
	197.
Carp roasted,	198.
Deer, Red and Fallow, roafted,	ıbıd.
Deer Baked,	199.
Egg Minc'd-Pye.	ibid.
Florentines on Paste, or without Paste	,ibid.
Flowers of all sorts Pickled,	200.
Grapes and Goosberries Pickled,	ibid.
Geese Boiled,	ibid.
Hashes several ways,	201.
Hashes of Neets-feet, or any Fee	t as Calves, Sheep, Deer, Hogs, Pi	os. or
Lambs,	202.
Hashing of any Feet.	ibid.
Hares Roufted without and with Skin,	ibid.
Tanana	22 42 7
Fellies of Several Colours, for all	204.
jenies of jeonal Cousins, for all	JETTS
	071

The state of the section of	1 of Soudd Meats, and to be eaten a-	1
tone Polu-	_
Land or Sea Foul how to boil them, 206.
Land Fowl the maller fort, bow to both a Plover, Quail, Black-birds, Rantes,	51
Thrushes, Snites, Wheat-ears, Larks, and Sparrows, ibid.
Marrow-Pudding in a Dish baked, garnished with Puff-paste, 207
Mutton hashed the French way, 208
Marinated Mullet, Bace, Gurnet or Rochet, ibid
Mullets Fried , 209
Mullets or Bace baked, ibid
Mushrooms Fried, 210
Mushrooms Stewed, 211
112111111111111111111111111111111111111
Trems-1008 nos Donnes
1 TAGNES TONE TOOL IN THE Neats tongues an excellent way how to dry them, Neats-Tonques roafted. 213
1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	200
Neats-Tongue Mince-Pye, 214
A Norfolk-Fool, ibid
Oysters stewed,
Oysters Fryed, 1010	- 22
Oyster Pyes, 216	*
Oyster's Pickled, 217	1
Ox	-

Ox-cheeks Baked in a Pye,	ibid.
A Calves-Head-Pye,	218.
Puff-paste, the best way how t	o make it,	ibid.
Panado's,	219:
Posset of Sack, or White-Wine,	the helt manner,	ibid.
Pumpion-Pye,
Pig roasted with the Hair on,	220.
Pidgeons Boiled.	221.
Pike Boiled,	222. ibid.
Pike stewed,
Pike Souced,	223
Pike roafted,	224.
Quaking Pudding	ibid.
Quince-Pyes,	225.
	226.
An excellent Restorative for a Back.	and the second
Carlot and the control of the contro	227.
A most incomparable Broth or Dri
a sick Person, Rice Tart,	ibid.
	ibid.
Rice Gream,	228.
Another excell ent and rare Cream,	ibid.
Several excellent Sawces for J	everal
Dishes, and for Green-Geese,
Salmon roasted.	232.
Salmen Fried.	ibid.
A STATE OF THE STA	Souft

Souft Veal, Lamb, or any joynt of Mutton, Kid, Fawn or Venison, 233 1076 ILing I was Taffety Tart, 234
Transfers homes to recorder will the version was To make Beel - Rum of Line 1
Venison, Warden-Tart, C. C. alla Meat for every
A Dill of Laws of Just able Iviews Mouth in the Year. 236.
Tribute for Fasting-days or Lent,
Month in the Year. Bills of Fare for Fasting-days or Lent, 236. 236. Bills of Fare for Fasting-days or Lent,
An Introduction to Physick and Chyrur-
An Introduction to I byjeto and 220.
What is to be observed by a Gentlewoman before she undertakes the adminstration of Physics 227.
What is to be observed by a Germen fratis before she undertakes the aamingstate tion of Physick, tion of Physick, A most approved receipt for a Quartan Ague, Ague, Pleeding at the Ague, 231.
For a sudden and violent Bleeding at the Nose,
No.6 232.
Nose, To stop the Bleeding of a Wound, ibid.
I A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A
An aproved Medicine of London-Mid- wives to break and heal Womens fore ibid.
ibid.
Decalife
An excellent way to dry up a Womans Breaft,
An infallible Receipt to increase William Wo

The state of the s	-
Womens Breasts, Against a stinking Breath,	ibid.
Against a stinking Breath.	224
For a Cancer in a Womans Breaft,	234.
For young Children, who by reason	of the 1 Hughnels of their I toube and	3 7
fand nor go.	on Der
ft and nor go, An approved China-Broth for a sumption, A most exellent felly for the Consum	£35.
Sumption.	2011-
A most excellent felly for the Confum	230.
attended to the second second	prion,
An excellent Comforter for the Stor	237.
and belper of Digestion,	nach,
A well-tried Medicine for the Cor	230.
the Feet or Toes,	ibid
An excellent Diet-drink for the Sp	Did.
to purge the Blood, and clean	ale it
the said of the sa	ibld,
A Remedy for the Dropfie , wheth	or hot
A Remedy for the Dropsie, whether	2001
Annthoy ton the Date	3/
For the Web or Pininthe Eye,	240.
To Cleanse the skin of the Face, and	ibid.
it look beautiful and fair,	ibid.
How to ripen and heal a Felon or	Whit
clof,	- A
How to cure the Bloody Flux,	241. ibid.
A Cure for every fort of Gout,	2000
	242. How 11010

The state of the s
How to cure the Green Sickness. 243:
An Universal Medicine of wonderful use both for Men and Women, 244.
Against the Yellow Jaundies, 246.
Against the Itch. ibid.
Against the Itch, Against Kibed Heels, ibid.
What is best to be administred to one sick of the Measels. 24.7.
To take away the Heat of a Burn or Scald, 248.
For a Scald-Head, ibid.
For a Scara Head,
For one burnt with Gun-powder, ibid.
A very safe Clister to be used by either
- Man or Woman, who is much bound or costive, 249.
How to cure old Sores on the Legs, which have been of so long standing that the Bones have appeared, ibid.
An excellent way to dissolve the Stone, 250.
Away not only to prevent but to cure the Tooth ach, or to make an aking Tooth fall out of it self, ibid.
How to order a Woman with child before,
in, and after her Delivery, 251.
An excellent Cordial for Women troubled drive.

10		-
The same of the sa	with swooning Fits in Travel, Of Candying, Conserving and Pr	253.
	ing;	256.
	Barberries Preferved,	ibid.
	Pears Preserved,	257.
	Green Pipp ins,	ibid.
1	Black-Cherries,	258.
I	Mulberries,	ibid.
ł	Oranges and Lemmons,	259.
i	Goosberries	ibid.
1	Roses or any other Flowers,	260.
ı	Cherries,	ibid.
ı	Apricocks,	261.
l	Green Walnuts,	262.
ı	Eringo-Roots,	ibid.
ı	Ennula-Campana-Roots,	263.
1	Conserve of Roses.	ibid.
	How to Candy all forts of Flowers a grow with their stalks on,.	265.
2000	The helt and most appropriate to	266.
	The best and most aproved way to Plumbe, Proper Colours for Fruitage,	ibid.
1	Quince Marmalade,	267. ibid.
	The state of the s	268.
	Syrrup of Roses,	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF
1	Syrrup of Coltsfoot,	100 (0.00 (0.00)
TOTAL PROPERTY	A CONTRACTOR OF THE PROPERTY O	Of
	AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PARTY OF	300

of Distillation,	27I.
Dr. Stevens bis famous Water,	272.
Aqua Mirabilis.	273.
An admirable Water against the st	one m
the Kidneys.	274.
An excellent Water for the Worms,
An excellent artificial Wine like	laret
	276.
An Oyntment for any Wound or Sor	,2//·
A Sear-cloth for all Aches,	Tolu.
What things belongs to a Country	Jenitemoman; of Dairies, and making	Butter and Cheese,	278.
and Cheese, How to make your ordinary	clouted
1 YOA.992.	202.1
To make fresh Cheese in Cream,	ibid.
Cream of Codlins,	283.
To make a Funket,	ibid.
To Gentlewomen who ferve Per	fons of Quality,	285.
To all Maidens who desire to be Ch.
Maids to Persons of Quality,	290.
Instructions for all Nursery-Maids	DAMES TO SELECT
	THE PERSON NAMED IN
ble Families, Instructions for all Chamber-M	291.
Complement in City and County	N acad
Gentlewomen in City and Country	1,294
To Nursery-Maids in London	or esjewhere,

where,	296.
To Cook-maids,	298.
Under-Cookmaids,	The second of Dairy-maids	300.
	302.
Laundry-maids,	303.
House-maids,	304.
Scullery-maids,	305.
Writing Letters, 307, topag
Ibe Resolute Lover: A Pasteral logue,	240
Addresses of Love and Service, fr	349.
notice to Amelia	E-
rotus to Aurelia,	352
A merry Dialogue verween an ing	enzous
Gentleweman and a Poetaster	or Ri-
11161	255.
A form of Discourse at a casual m	eeting
between Silvester and Sylvia,	260
A method of Courtship on fair an	id ha monrable terms	- 6-
nourable terms,	301-
An impertinent and lying Tran	vellers
Discourse with his witty and	10cose
Mustress,	364.
Mistress, A Gentleman accidentally hapning	intoa room where a Company of Ladies	were
the state of the s	369.
swomen in Oir and County; 204.	200.
The state of the s	712 777

THE

THE

Gentlewomans Companion:

OR,

AGUIDE

TO THE Female Sex

The Introduction.

HE right Education of the Female Sex, as it is in a manner every where neglected, fo it ought to be generally lamented. Most in this deprayed later Age think a Woman learned and wise enough, if she can distinguish her Hustbands Bed from anothers. Certainly Mans Soul cannot boast of a more sublime Original than ours, they had equaline

Pardon the Severity of this Expression, since I intend not thereby to infuse bitter rebellion into the sweet blood of Females; for know, I would have all such as are entred into the Honourable State of Matrimony, to be loyal and loving Subjects to their lawful (though lording) Husbands. I cannot but complain of, and must condemn the great negligence of Parents, in letting the fertile ground of their Daughters ly fallow, yet send the barten Noddles of their their Sons to the University, where they stay for no other purpose than to fill their empty Sconces with idle Notions to make a noise in the Countrey. Pagans of old may teach our Christian the defi Parents a new lesson. Edesia an Infidel, taught her Daughters Learning and Mo-ref-

18-ood

ave uraoyal

mot

the

ting or ly their rality. Cornelia, hers (with the Greek Tongue) Piety. Portia, hers (with the Learning of the Egyptians) the Exemplary Grounds of Chastity. Sulpitia, hers (with the knowledg of several Languages) the Precepts of Conjugal Unity. These, though Ethnicks, were excel-lent informers of Youth, so that their Children were more bound to them for their Breeding than Bearing, Nurturing than Nursing. Emulation of Goodness is most commendable; and though you cannot hang up the Pictures of these worthy Persons, so that their Memories may live with you; however, imitate their Vertues, that their Memories may live fresher in you. All Memorials being Materials, be they never so durable, are subject to frailty, only the precious Monuments of Vertue survive

Thus

time, and breath Eternity.

Thus as ye take good Examples from others, be ye Mother patterns of Vertue to your Daughters, let your living actions be lines of their Direction. While they are under your command, the error is yours not theirs, if they go aftray. Their honour should be one of the chiefest things you are to tender, neither can it be blemish'd without some soil to your own credit.

I have known some inconsiderate Mothers, and those none of the lowest rank and quality, who either out of the confidence of their Daughters good carriage, or drawn with the hopes of some rich Suitors to advance their Marriage, have usually given too free way to opportunity, which brought upon their Daughters name a spreading infamy. Suffer not then those who partake of your image, to lose their best beauty. Look then to your own actions, these must inform them; look to your own examples, these must contarm them. Without you, they cannot perish; with you they may. What will you do with the rest that is left, when you see a part of your self loft:

There is no instruction more moving, than the example of your living. By that line of yours they are to conform their own. Take heed then lest the damp of your own life extinguish the light of your Childrens. As you are a kind Mother to them, be a careful Menitor about them; and if your business will permit, teach them your felf, with their Letter's good Manners. For there is an in-bred, filial fear in Children to their Parents, which will beget in them more attention in bearing, and retention in holding what they bear. But if it be inconsistent with your conveniency, and that you must commit the Tutelage and Education of your Children to a Governess, give me leave to inform you what she ought to be.

The Duty and Qualifications of a Governeß to Gentlemens Children.

They who undertake the difficult Employ of being an Instructress or Governess of Children, should be persons of no mean birth and breeding, civil in deportment, and of an extraordinary B3 winning winning and pleasing conversation. They should not berash in expression, nor severe in correcting such as are under their charge; but instruct them with all mildness, chearfully incouraging them in what they are injoyn'd to perform; not fuddenly striking, nor startling them with a loud rebuke, which causeth in some an aversness to what they should love, imbittering all the former delight they had in learning. Whereas if you wooe them with foft words, you will foon find them won by the testimony of their good works.

There is so much servility in rigor and restraint, that of consequence there can be no greater enemy to Ingenuity and good Nature. Fools are to be always baul'd upon, and blows are fitter for beafts than rational creatures; wherefore there can nothing more engage an ingenious generous soul, than chearfulness and liberty; not over-frightned. I have often observed the many ill consequences which attends an unadvised severity. A Gentlewoman of my acquaintance, who was well born and bred, and every wayaccom-

plisht

plisht for a Tutoress to young Ladies, lost all her employment in that faulty, by her irresistable passion. Another in Dorset-shire being somewhat aged, and suspecting her strength was not able to grapple with active youth, call'd up her Maid to her assistance, with whose belp she so cruelly chastissed a young Gentlewoman for some fault she had committed, that with grief and shame she died in a little time after. Many more instances I could insert, but I shall sorbear to publish surther the shame of such inconsider at erashness.

As I must condemn the insolent severity of such a Governess, so I must not let pass without reproof the tyranny of some Mothers, whose presence makes their Children tremble, without the commission of a fault, by which means they many times with their imperiousness frighten their love into an abborrency of their sight; to be sure they make them tell many a lie to excuse their negligence, (which otherwise they would not do) only that for that time they might escape the rigor of their punishment. Yet I would not have any mistake me in my

B 4

per-

perswading young Gentlewomen to be ufed mildly and tenderly, that I intend thereby their over-indulgence, so as to let their tender age rust in sloth and vanity; all that I would have a Mother do, is, that The would be moderate in the correction of an offence, left by correcting one, the commit another, and so transgress that positive command in Holy Writ, Parents provoke not your Children to wrath.

A Governess is to study diligently the nature, disposition, and inclination of those The is to teach; and so by suiting their bumours, make their study the more facile, by how much it is more pleasant to them; praising such and such of their own age, that are thus and thus qualified, which will breed in them an emulation to tread in their foot-steps. If she finds any addicted to reading, let her ask the Question, What she thinks of such a Book (he bath read? By the Answer she may eafily conjecture at the strength of her Intellect: If she find her a Lover of Conversation, it will not be amiss to ask what the thinks of fuch a Gentlewoman or Gentleman, whose Vertues she hath a great esteem esteem for; when she hath return'd an answer to the demand, let the Governess require a reason for her so saying; which in the approving or condemning, will not only make the Scholar cautious of what she delivers, but give a great insight both into her dispositions and understanding.

Whatever she doth, let her have a special care in obstructing the growth of evil manners, and ingraft the good; stifle in the very birth those corruptions which will grow in the purest natures, without an indefatigable circumspection.

Countenance not an untruth by any means, especially if they stand in it; this is a very great vice, and argues an inclination impudently vicious; there is a fault contrary to this, and shall be reckoned in the number of infirmities, when by an over-modesty and too-much bashfulness, a young Maid cannot hold up her head when spoken to; and if askt a Question, would blush, as if by some gross miscarriage she had lately contracted a guilt. This sudden alteration of the countenance, may breed an undeserved B 5 sufficion, and therefore it ought to be corrected discreetly with good instruction. Favour not obstinacy by any means, for flattery in this case will spoil the Gentlewoman.

Be the incessant tormenter of hersloth, lest by proving burdensome to others, she at length become so to her self; by which means her understanding starves, and her body contracts an Hospital of Diseases. This you may remedy by suffering her not to sleep over-long, lest the spirits be over-dull'd, as well as by too little rest.

If the season be dry, walk them in the Fields, if not, some moderate exercise within doors, which will be instrumental in keeping them from the knowledg of the Physician. And now since Nature only gives us a being, and Education a well-being, the Parent or Governess ought to have a special care how she seasons youth with what is most conducible to the orderly and prudent management of the concerns of this life; let such a foundation be therefore laid, which may sufficiently promise the Parents a happy issue, when when their Children shall arrive to maturity of age. Letters undoubtedly is the first step to the perfection of knowledge, by which means they come to improve their own understandings by the help of others: Reading furnisheth them with agreeable discourse, and adopts them for the conversation of the most in genious, without which I know not how the fancy can be supplied with what is acceptable to the Auditor. How little would conversation signifie, did not reading on all occasions find matter for discourse. The want of which hath made to many Country Gentle-women stand like so many Mutes or Statues when they have happened into the company of the ingenious; their quaint expressions have feem'd to them Arabian Sentences; and have stared like so many distracted persons, in that they could hear the found of English, and yet understand but here and there a word of their own Language. The confideration hereof is fufficient one would think to make the propolterous suspicions of some to vanith.

12 The Gentlewomens Companion, or vanish, who vainly immagine that Books are Womens Academies, wherein they learn to do evil with greater subtilty and cumning; whereas the helps of Learning, which are attained from thence, not only fortifies the best inclinations, but enlargeth a mean capacity to a great perfection.

- Having thus proved, That the readding Books doth much conduce to the improving the understanding of young Gentlewomen, it behoveth the Governess to be careful in her choice of them. In the first place let them read some choice pieces of Piety, which may inflame their bearts with the love of God, and kindle in them ardent defires to be early followers of the Doctrine of Christ Jesus. Let there be a strict watch to keep unviolated the two gates of the Soul, the Ears and Eyes; let the last be imployed on good and proper Subjects, and there will be the less fear that the Ears should be supriz'd by the converse of such who delight in wanton and obscere discourses, which too often do pleasantly and privately infinuate them-

themselves into the Ear, carrying with them that unwholsome air which infects and poysons the purity of the Soul.

I know it will be expected what fort of Books of Piety, I would recommend to the perusal of these Genthwomen; London affords such plenty of them, I know not which to pitch on; not to trouble you with too many, take these which follow: Bishop Ushers Body of Divinity. Mr. Swinnocks Christian-calling. Mr. Firmins Real Christian. Mr. James Janeways book, intituled, Accquaintance with God betimes; and his Token for Children when they are young.

Some may imagine, that to read Remances after such practical Books of Divinity, will not only be a vain thing, but will absolutely overthrow that fabrick I endeavoured to erect: I am of a contrary opinion, and do believe such Romances which treat of generosity, gallantry, and virtue, as Cassandra, Cletia, Grand Cyrus, Cleopatra, Parthenisfa, not omiting Sir Philip Sydney's Arcadia, are Books altogether worthy of their Observation. There are sew Ladies men-

tion'd

tion'd therein, but are Character'd what they ought to be; the magnanimity, virtue, gallantry, patience, constancy, and courage of the men, might intitle them, worthy Husbands to the most deserving of the female fex. Thus having qualified them for reading, you should so practice them in their pen, as not to be ignorant in a Point de Venice, and all the Productions of the Needle, with all the curious devices of Wax-work, Rock-work, Mos-Work, Cabinet-work, Beugle-work, &c. and in due time let them know how to Preferve, Conferve, Distill; with all those laudible Sciencies which adorn a compleat Gentlewoman.

Having thus characteriz'd in part, what a Governess ought to be, I shall with your leave and patience give you some account of my self.

A Short account of the life and abilities of the Autheress of this Book.

Would not presume to trouble you with any passages of my life, or relate my innate qualifications, or acquired, were it not in obedience to a Person of Honour, who engag'd me so to do if for no other reason then stop the mouths of such who may be so maliciously censorious as to believe I pretend what I cannot perform.

It is no ambitious design of gaining a name in print (a thing as rare tor a Woman to endeavour, as obtain) that put me on this bold undertaking; but the meer pity I have entertain'd for such Ladies, Gentlewomen, and others, as have not received the benefits of the tyth of the ensuing accomplishments; Thefe Ten years and upwards, I have studied how to repair their loss of time, by making publick those gifts which God hath bestowed upon me. To be useful in our Generation is partly the intent of our Creation; I shall then arrive to the top of the Pyramid of my Contentment, if any shall profit by this following Discourse. If any question the truth of what I can perform, their Trial of me I doubt not but will convince their Infidelity.

The Things I pretend greatest Skill in, are all Works wrought with a Needle, all

Iran-

16 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

Transparent Works, Shell-work, Moss-work, also Cutting of Prints, and adorning Rooms or Cabinets, or Stands with them.

All kinds of Beugle-works upon Wyers, or otherwise.

All manner of Pretty Toys for Closets.

Rocks made with Shells or in Sweets.

Frames for Looking-glasses, Pictures, or the Like.

Feathers of Crewel for the corner of Beds.

Preserving all kind of Sweet-meats wet and dry.

Setting out of Banquets.

Making Salves, Oyntments, Waters Cordials; healing any Wounds not desperately dangerous.

Knowledg in discerning the Symptoms of most Diseases and giving such Remedies asare fit in fuch Cafes.

All manner of Cookery. Writing and Arithmetick.

Washing black or white Sarsnets.

Making Sweet Powders for the Hair, or to lay among Linnen.

All these and several things beside,

too

dy to impart to those who are desirous to learn.

Now to the intent I may increase your wonder. I shall relate how I came to the knowledg of what I Profess. When I was fourteen years old, I began to confider how I might improve my time to the best advantage, not knowing at that age any thing but what reason and fancy dictated to me. Before I was Fifteen I was intrusted to keep a little School, and was the fole Mistris thereof. This course of life I continued till the age of Seventeen, when my extraordinary parts appear'd more folendid in the eyes of a Noble Lady in this Kingdom, than really they deferv'd; who praising my Works with the appellation of Curious Pieces of Art, was infinitely pleas'd therewith. But understanding withal, that I understood indifferently the smooth Italian, and could fing, dance, and play on feveral forts of Musical Instruments, she took me from my School, and greedily entertained me in her House as Governess of her only Daughter. Unto this honourable Per Con

Person I am indebted for the basis, or ground-work of my Preserving and Cookery, by my observation of what she order'd to be done. By this Ladies means I came acquainted with the Court, with a deportment suitable thereunto.

The death of this Lady gave me a fit opportunity to be entertain'd by another no way inferiour to the former, with whom I lived feven years. At first I was Governess to those of her Children, whose forward virtue sufficiently declared the goodness of the flock from whence they came. Time and my Ladies good opinion of me, constituted me afterwards her Woman, her Stewardes, and her Scribe or Secretary. By which means I appear'd as a person of no mean authority in the Family. I kept an exact account of what was spent in the house. And as I profited in Externals, fo I treasured up things necessary for my understanding, having an happy opportunity fo to do, not only by hearing. that ingenious and agreeable discourse interfac'd between my Lady and Persons of Honour, but also by inditing all her Letters:

Letters; in the framing and well fashioning of which (that I might encrease my Ladies esteem) I took indefatigable pains. There were not any who both wittily and wifely had publish their Epistles to the view of the world, whom I had not read, and on all occasions did consult: those which I placed in my greatest esteem were the Letters of Mr. Ford, Mr. Howel, Mr. Loveday, and Monsieur Voiture.

But that which most of all encreast my knowledg, was my daily reading to my Lady, Poems of all forts, and Plays, teaching me as I read, where to place my accents, how to raise and fall my voice, where lay the emphasis of the expression: Romances of the best sort she took great delight in; and being very well-verst in the propriety of the French Tongue, there was not any thing published by the Virtuosi of France, which carefully and chargeably she procur'd not; this put me upon the understanding of that Language, she was so well experienc'd therein, which is as great an Ornament for young Ladies, as those learn-

20 The Genlewomans Companion, or ed Tongues, of which the Academical Studioso boasts a more than a common understanding.

Here as I learned hourly Courtly Phrases and Graces, so how to express my self with the attendancy of a becoming air. And as I gather'd how to manage my Tangue gracefully, and discreetly; so I thought it irrequisite to let my hands to lye idle. I exercised them daily in Carving at Table. And when any sad accident required their help in Physick and Chyrurgery, I was ready to be affishing; in those two excellent Arts in this place I acquired a competent Knowledg.

In short time I became skilful, and stayed enough to order an House, and all Offices belonging to it; and gained so great an esteem among the Nobility and Gentry of two Counties, that I was necessitated to yield to the importunity of one I dearly lov'd, that I might free my self from the tedious Caresses of a many more.

In the time I was a Wife, I had frequent occasion to make use of all, or most most of my aforenamed qualities; and what I exercised not within my own roof, I used among my neighbours, friends, and acquaintants.

That which qualified me as a Governef for Children as well as any thing yet
I have mention'd, was the great knowledg
I had in the humours, inclinations, and dispositions of Children, having often had acone time above Three score in number under my Tution.

Besides, as I have been the Mistriss of many Servants, so I have qualified them with my Instructions to be Mistriss to others; the major part of them living very comfortably in a married condition.

As I have taken great pains for an honest livelyhood, so the hand of the Almighty hath exercised me in all manner of Afflictions, by death of Parents when very young, by loss of Husband, Children, Friends, Estate, very much sickness, by which I was disenabled from my Employment. Having already given you an account of the daty, and requisite endouments which ought to be in a Governess, and how qualified I was my self in that trouble-

ingiving young Ladies such Rules which long experience and observation hath taught me, which may be as their perfect guide in all ages and conditions, the practice whereof will assuredly imbalm their Names here, let their stedfast faith in Jesus Christ only crown them with Glory hereaster.

Good Instructions for a young Gentlewoman, from the age of Six to Sixteen.

I hall suppose your Parents have not been so remiss in their Duties, as not to furnish your tender Age with what it is capable of understanding; and therefore do not question but that you can read well, sow and write indifferently; but I would have, long before you artive at your teens, your first Age water'd with the wholsom and sound Doctrine of Fearing God. Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth; that thou mayst have, with David, in thy later days this comfortable testimony of thy self, From my youth up have I loved thy Law.

I cannot bewail enough the careless neglect of Parents in this matter, who think neither God nor Nature doth tie them to further regard of their Children than to afford them food, and make them strut in the fashion, learn them to dance and sing, and lastly, lay up a considerable sum for some person whom they value by his greatness, not his goodness; but how far that care falls short of what is required from Parents, I appeal to the sad effects thereof, profaneness towards God, and a contempt of his people, and not only a daily breach of his hely Laws, but the Laws of Civil Society.

Above all things, let the fear of God be improved in you. Omit not by any means the Duty of Prayer Morning and Evening, and forget not to read some not stit

ere-

can

Be very cautious in the choice of your Companions, and when your Age adapts you for Society, have a care with whom you confort, for report will bruit what you are by the company which you bear.

Would you then preserve those precious odours of your good Name, consort with

24 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

with such whose Names were never branded, converse with such whose tongues for immodesty were never taxed. As by good words evil manners are corrected; so by evil words, are good ones corupted.

Make no reside there where the least occasion of lightness is ministred; avert your ear when you hear it; but your heart especially, lest you harbour it.

It is proverbially said, Maids shoud be seen and not heard; not that they should not speak, but that they should not be too talkative. A Traveller sets himself out best by discourse, but a Maid is best set out by silence.

For your Carriage, let it be in a Mediscrity, neither too precise, nor too free. These simpring, made-faces partake more of Chamber-maid than Gentlewoman.

Being grown up, you may possibly be wooed to interchange Favours; Rings or Ribbans may seem trifles, yet trust me they are no trifles that are alm'd at in those exchanges. Whreefore let nothing pass from you that may any way impeach you, or give others others advantage over you. It is probable that your innocent credulity may be free from the conceit of ill as theirs from the intention of good; but these intercourses of Courtesies are not to be admitted, lest by this familiarity an entry to affection be opened which before was closed. It is dangerous to enter parley with a beleaguring-enemy; it implies want or weakness in the besieged.

ur

nhore

ies.

OU

ers

Presuming on your own strength is a great weakness; and the ready way to betray your self to dangers, is to contemn them. Presumption is a daring sin, and ever brings out some untimely birth, which, Viper-like, is the destruction of its Parent. I shall desist here in this place from giving you more Rules of Cautton and Good behaviour, having design'd another, wherein I intend a more Copious Relation.

Advice to the Female younger fort.

I Neline not to floth, and love not to laze in Bed, but rife early; having drest your self with decency and chanliness, prostrate your self in all humility upon upon your bended knees before God Almighty, befeeching his Infinite Majesty to forgive you whatever fins you have committed in deed, word, or thought; begging protection from the sin and evil of that day, and his boly affiftance in the profecution of good all the days of your life. Having faid your Prayers, then on your knees ask your Parents Bleffing; and what they shall appoint for your Breakfast, do you by no means dislike or grumble at; walte not too much time in eating thereof, but hasten to School, having first taken your leave of your Parents with all reverence. Do not loyter by the way, or play the truant; abuse none whom you meet, but be courteous and mannerly to all who speak with you. Leave not any thing behind which you ought to carry with you, not only things you learn in or by, but also Gloves, Pocket-Handkerchiefs; and have a special care of any thing that may mischief you by the way.

26 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

When you come to School, falute your Mistris in a reverent manner, and be fure to mind what she injoyns you to do mo of a or observe. You cannot but live well if you conform to what you hear. Be not offended if your Governess advise you rather what is most fitting than what is most pleasing; for such is the property of a good Instructress. And these are to be entertained with such indeared respect, as their speeches (be they never so tart) should not incense you; nor their reproofs, be they never so free, distaste you; having done this, salute civilly your School-fellows, and then apply your self to your Book, Work, Writing, or whatever else you are to learn.

Show not your ill breeding and want of manners, by eating in the School, especially before your Mistris.

nt ur

on ike ike

to eof

not the beak ind not tal-

and may

VONT

dbe

o do

of

Mind what you are about, and neglect not what you are to do, by vain pratling in the School; make no noise, that you may neither disturb your Mistris or School-fellows.

When you are called to read, come reverently to your Mistris, or any whom she appoints; avoid reading with a tone, huddle not over your lession, but strive to understrand what you read; and

C 2

read

read to plainly, distinctly, and deliberately, that others may understand; if you are doubtful of a Word carefully spell it, and mistake not one Word for another; when you have done, return, shewing your reverence, to your Place. Whatver Work you take in hand, doir cleanly and well, though you are the longer about it; and have a care of wasting or bing any thing that appertains thereunto. Sit upright at your Work, and do not lean or loll; and forbear to carry Children in your arms out of a wanton bumour, for these, whilst you are so young, may incline your Body to crooked ress. If you Write be careful you do not blot your paper; take pains in the true forming or cutting your letters, and endeavor to Write true and well after your Copy. Preserve your Pens, spill not your Ink, nor flurt it on your own or others cloths. and keep your fingers from being polluted therewith.

Returning from School, make hafte home, not gaping on every idle object you meet with by the way. Coming into the House, apply your self immediately to your Parents; and having saluted them according to your duty, acquaint them with what proficiency you have made in your Learning that day; be not absent when Dinner is on the Table, but present when Grace is faid; and fit not down before you have done your cheisance to your Parents, and the company then present. Keep your Cloths from greafing, by pinning or keeping your napkin tite about you; and receive what is given you, thankfully. Be not talkative at Table, nay, nor do not speak, unless you are askt a question. Eat not your meat greedily, nor fill your mouth too full; and empty your mouth before you drink; and avoid smacking in your eating: Greafe not your fingers, as those that are it wenly, up to the knuckles. You will show your self too saucy by calling for sauce or any dainty thing. Forbear putting both hands to your mouth at once; nor gnaw your meat, but cut it hand my, & eat sparingly. Let your Nose and hands be always kept clean. When you have dined or supt, rise from the Table, and carry your trencher or plate with you, doing

701

afte

hiest

into tely

to

30 The Gentlewomans Companion, or doing your obeisance to the company; and then attend in the room till the rest rise.

In the Intervals of School-time, let your recreation be pleasant and civil, not rude and boisterous.

Sit not before your betters, unless you are so desired, and unless you are at meat, Working, or Writing.

Be no make-bate between your Parents and their fervants; tell not a lye in any case, or mince it into a plausible excuse to save you from the hand of correction.

Going to Bed make no noise that may disturb any of the Family, but more especially your Parents; and before you betake your self to rest, commit your self into the hands of the Almighty; desiring his Infinite Majesty not only to watch over you in the night, but preserve you for, and assist you in the duties of the ensuing day.

If the Poor beg at your Father's door, though you cannot your self supply his necessities, yet you may do it by perswading your Father or Mother, which may be the sooner induced to it by observing

your

your early and forward inclination to Charity.

Get that Catechism the Government has made choice of for you, by heart; by the practice of which you will be enabled to perform your duty to God & man.

Behave your felf in the Church reverently, giving an awful regard to what facred truths the Minister shall deliver for your future observation and practice; and do not proclaim publickly to the whole Congregation your levity and vanity by laughing, talking, pointing with your finger, and nodding, or your careless contempt of Gods word by drowsiness or sleeping.

Do not despise the aged, but rather honour them for their antiquity; and indeed you have but little reason to contemn old people, if you consider this, that you will be old if God shall think fit to continue your days to the length of theirs; and therefore would not be so serv'd your self.

God inable you to observe and practice what I have here already laid down, and give you yielding hearts to the exercise of what shall hereafter follow to the glory of God, the unspeakable comfort of your Friends, and eternal salvation of your immortal Souls.

C 4

o

Thus I have given you general inflructions as to your learning and deportment: Give me now leave to infift in particular on the duty-you owe your Parents.

The duty of Children to their Parents.

THE duties of a Child (Male or Female) to Parents, may be branch'd out into these particulars; Reverence, Love, Obedience, (specially in Marriage) assisting them in their wants, nay all these considered as a due debt to the worst of Parents.

You ought in the first place to behave your self towards them with reverence, respect, bumility, and observance; and although their instrmites may tempt you into a contempt of them, yet you must not despise them in your behaviour, nor let your beart entertain an undervaluing thought. What instrmities they have, you must endeavour to cover and conceal.

ceal, like Shemand fapbet, who whilst cursed Cham endeavoured to disclose the nakedness of their Father to publick view, they privately covered from the light of others, that which they debarr'd their own eyes to look upon. It is a great fault in our days, and too frequently practifed, for youth not only to deride the imperfections of their Parents, but forge and pretend more than they have, that their counsel and correction may feem rather the effect of weakness, than good judgment in the punishing their Childrens errors. They think they then best express their wit, when they can most flout and abuse gr. v. Counfil. Let fuch; if they will not practice the exbortations, yet remember the threatnings of the Wifest of men, Prov. 30. 17. The eye that m cketh his Father, and dispifeth to obey his Mather, the Ravens of the Valley shall pick it out, and the young Eagles Shall eat it.

Thus as your behaviour ought to be respectful to them, so ought you to show them all the demonstrations of love imaginable, striving to do them all the good

C 5

YOU

you can, and shunning all the occasions of their disquiet. This you are obliged unto by common gratitude; for they were not only the instruments of bringing you into the world, but of sustaining and supporting you afterwards; if you could but rightly weigh the fears and cares that are required in the bringing up a Child, you would judg your love to be but a moderate return in compensation thereof.

This love is to be exprest several ways: First in all kindness of behaviour, carrying your self not only with awe and respect, but with kindness and affection, which will encourage you to do those things they affect, and make you avoid what may grieve and afflict them.

Secondly, This love is to be exprest in praying for them. The debt a Child owes her Parents is so great, that she can never make satisfaction, unless she call God to her aid and assistance, by befeeching him to multiply his blessings on them. Do not for any tempor al benefit, or to be freed from the severity of thy Parents, wish their death. God in the the Old Testament hath denounced death and destruction to the Curser of his Parents, and therefore certainly will not let thy ill wishes toward them go unpunished; certainly they who watch for the death of their Parents, may untimely meet with their own.

The third duty we owe them, is Obedience; this is not only contained in the fifth Commandment, but injoyned in many other places of Scripture. This obedience extends no farther than to lawful things, otherwise it is disobedience, and offends against a higher duty, even that you owe to God your Heaveniy Father. How little this duty is regarded, daily experience makes evident; the careful Mother having her child no longer under her command than under the rod.

Wherefore think not, though grown up to Womans estate, that you are freed from obedience; and let not your motive thereunto be out of worldly prudence, searing to displease your Parents, less they should diminish your intended Portion, and so be a loser thereby; but let your obedience be grounded upon conscience of duty.

But

But of all the acts of dischedience, that of Marying against the consent of Parents is the highest. Children are so much the Goods and Chattles of a Parent, that. they cannot without a kind of theft give themselves away without the allowance of those that have the right in them; and, therefore we see under the Law, the Maid that had made any Vow, was not suffer'd to perform it without the confent of the Parent, Numb. 30.5. The right of the Parent was thought of force enough to cancel and make word the obligation even of a vow; and therefore firely it ought to be so much considered. by us to keep us from making any fuch whereby that right is infringed.

A fourth duty is, To minister to, and assist your Parents in whatever necessities or insirmities God Almighty shall think sit to instict upon them. It may be thy Parent is weak or decay'd in understanding, supply his or her wants according to the ability, since in thy insancy thou didst receive the same benefits from them. When an insant, you had neither strength to support, norunderstanding to guide your self, but was supply'd with both by your indulgent Parents; wherefore common gratitude, when either of these becomes their case, obligeth you to return the same offices back again to them.

And as for the relieving their Poverty, there is the same obligation with the former, it being but just to sustain those who had maintain'd thee.

How then shall those answerit, who will not part with, or circumscribe their own excesses and superfluities for the relief of such to whom they owe their being and well-being; and worse it will be with those who out of Pride deny their Parents, being themselves exalted, searing lest the lowness of their condition should betray the meanness of their birth.

Lastly, that I may conclude this Discourse, assure your self, That no unkindness, fault, or powerty, of a Farent, can excuse or acquit a child from this duty; although the gratitude due to a kind parent be a forcible motive to make the Child pay his duty, yet though our Parent were ever so unnatural, yet still we are to perform our duty, though none of that tye of gratitude lie on us.

Take this for all, Honour and obey thy natural Parents in what condition foever; for if they cannot give thee riches, yet thy Heavenly Father hath promised thee length of days.

Of a young Gentlewomans deportment to her Governess and Servants in the Family.

If your Parents have committed you to the care and tuition of a Governess in the house with you, think with your self, that this person whom I must now call my Governess, is one whom my Father and Mother have elected and entertain'd for my education, to lessen their own trouble, but not their tender care of me. Therefore it I obey her not in all things requisite, I transgress the commands of my loving Parents, and displease God in abusing their kindness.

Next, consider within your self, that this person who is constituted the guide of my actions, is such a one as they are con.

or those who have recommended her, to be sit in all Points to perform this charge committed to her; therefore in obedience to them I must and will obey her and sollow those good examples and precepts she shall lay downfor my better information.

If she seems somewhat harsh, reserv'd, and abridgeth your freedom, yet let not your green years be too forward in condemning her, nor let not the ill counsel of inferiour servants perswade you against her; lest by so doing you betray your want of reason and good nature, and detract from your Parents worthy care for you.

If you have just cause of complaint, yet speak not maliciously against her, but truly and opportunely impart your grief; by this means she will be either removed from you or regulated by their commands. Be sure therefore that your complaints be just, lest you should have one in her stead who may more justly deserve your confure, and so make your self unhappy by your Parents sears of having a Child that is Refractory.

ctory. Besides, think thus with your self, that too often complaining makes dull and careless the Auditor; and instead of extracting compassion, it creates a jealousie of an ill disposition.

If your Governess be a Woman in years, honour her the more; if young, you may promise your self more freedom with her; yet if I may advise, I would not have a person too young to have such a charge, for they will have sufficient to do to govern themselves, therefore the more unfit to govern others; besides youth will be the more easily induced to submit rather to their Elders than their Equals.

What I now declare is the fruit of experience, having had too great a charge in this nature, when I was very young; and do know how defective I was then in my duty, since I became a Mother of Children, having now more tenderness to youth; and can speak it knowingly, that a mild moderate way is to be preferred before rigor and harshness, and that correction of words is better than that of blows.

Give

Give me leave, Gentlewomen, to wish you a good Governess, not such a one as I have been, but as I could or would be now. I can now with a greater sense look back upon my faults, than I could discern them when first committed: Thus much to your Governess. Now to your Maid who is to dress you.

Be not prevish or froward to her, but sweetly accept her endeavours, and gently admonish her of her neglects or errors; if she be good natur'd and willing to please, this carriage will oblige and command a constant diligence from her; otherwise you will cause her to serve you only for her own ends, and with an eye-service; and whilst you are making a wry face in the Glass, she will make an-

Be courteous to all the Servants belonging to your Parents, but not overfamiliar with any of them, lest they grow rude and sawey with you; and indeed too much familiarity is not good with any, for contempt is commonly the product thereof.

If you can do any Servant good in any thing, thing, either in mitigating your Parents anger towards them, or presenting their humble perition for them, be not slack in so doing; for by this means you will purchase to your self both love and homour.

If any poor body sue to you to beg in their names that which is not unfit for them to ask, do not deny them, and God will not deny you your requests: Do good to all, and turn not your face away from the indigent; but let your charity extend to their relief and succour.

Be courteous to all people inferior to your quality; but in such a way, that they may know you understand your self, and this will be a sweet kind of commanding reverence from them, and will give you the character of a good and humble spirit; assure your self it is better to be good than great. Majesty mixt with modesty and humility forcibly commands the service of all; but pride and imperiousness, though in a great person, breeds scorn and contempt in the heart and songue even of the meanest Peasant. It God hath blest you with birth and fortune above others, others, be fure your virtue shine with greater lufter than others.

Despise not those who have not so great a portion of wit and wealth as you possess, but think with your self, to whom the Lord gives much he requires much from. As God made nothing in vain, so he gives nothing in vain. That person is not to be trusted, who doth not endeavour to improve what he is intrusted withal. If you have wisdom, boast not thereof, but give God thanks, and use it to his Glory and your own comfort.

What qualifications best become and are most suitable to a Gentlewoman.

I Have already endeavour'd to prove, that though Nature hath differ'd Mankind into Sexes, yee she never intended any great difference in their Intellect. This will evidently appear not only from those many arguments learned Cornelius Agrippa hath laid down in a particular Treatise for the Vindication of the Excellency of the Female Sex, but likewise from the many learned and incomparable Writings of Famous Women.

men, ancient and modern, particularly Anna Comnena who wrote the Eastern History in Greek, a large Folio. Nor canwe without great ingratitude, forget the memory of that most ingenious Dutch Lady Anna Maria a Schurman, who was so much admired by the greatest Scholars in Europe for her unparallell'd, natural and acquired parts, that there were very few (as the great Salmafitts, &c.) who did not frequently correspond with her by Letters. Her Opuscula or smaller Works are now extant, printed in Holland in Latine, Greek. and Hebrew, in which there is a small Tract, proving that a Womans capacity is no way inferiour to Mans in the reception of any fort of Learning; and therefore exhorts all Parents who are not much necessitated, not to let their Children spin away their precious time, or pore on a Sampler, till they have prickt out the date of their life; but rather instruct them in the Principles of those Learned Tongues, whereby they may at pleasure pick lock the Treasuries of Knowledg contained in those Langua_ ges, and adapt them for the conversation and discourse of most Nations.

I need not go out of our Native Country, to produce you Examples enough of our own Sex for your imitation and incouragment in treading the paths of Learning; I shall forbear to speak of the incomparable worth and pregnant parts of some Gentlewomen, lately deceased, as Mrs. Philips the ingenious Translatress of Pompey, &c. fince what is extant of hers, or her Contemperaries, will more at large express their matchless merit; nor shall I eulogize or praise the living, nominating any person, lest I be thought one partially addicted to flattery. Yet give me leave to say, 1 could instance not a few, who (to the glory of our Sex, and the place of their Nativity, if occasion modestly required) would not blush to answer a Capricions Virtuoso in three of the most useful Tongues spoken or understood, that is Latin, French, and Italian.

ler ts, at the ler all ity re-

we

of ey

125

es

I desire not to hyperbolize; it is probable they may not be so expert in the anatomizing an Insect, or the the discovery of some monstrous production, as these Epidemial Wits are; yet for ought I know, may find out many monstrosities in their brain, whilst they are subtilly plumming the depth of their self-admired understanding.

Now since it may hence appear, Ladies, that you have no Pygmean Souls, but as capable of Gygantick growth as of your Male opponents; apply your self to your Gramar by time, and let your endeavours be indefatigable, and not to be tired in apprehending the first Principles of the Latin Tongue. I shall forbear to give you Rules for attaining the perfect knowledg thereof, but leave you to that Method your Tutor or skillfull Governess shall propound for your Observation.

I need not tell you the vast advantages that will accrue hereby, your own experience will better inform you hereafter. However I shall hint some, as first, your understanding the Latin Tengue will inable you to write and speak true and good English, next, it will accommodate you with an eloquent stile file in speaking, and afford you matter for any discourse; lastly, you will be freed from the fear of rencountring such who make it their business to ransack a New World of Words to find out what are long and obscure, not regarding how insignificant, if they carry a rattling sound with them. Thus these Fops of Rhetorick, spawns of non-intelligency, will venture the spraining of their Tongues, and splay-footing their own Mouths, if they can but cramp a young Gentlewomans intellect.

Our English Tongue is of late very much refined, by borrowing many Words from the Latin, only altering the termination, these you will never perfectly understand without the knowledg of the Latin, but rather misapply or displace them to your great discredit, although you should consult all the English Interpreters that were ever extant.

At all

ur

WI

TC.

25

tin

and it wert like

And as our Mother Tongue hath finified her expressions with the Roman Dialect, so to make them the more spruce and complacent, she hath borrowed rowed some choice words from other Nations, more especially the neighbouring French, whose Tongue you must in no sort be ignorant of, if you intend to speak with the air of the Court or like the quaint Oratresses of the Court air.

It is no small benefit which will accrue to you by learning the Italian; for by reason of our Gentries travelling into foreign parts, occasioned by our late unhappy and inhumane home-bred distractions, these two Languages are generally spoken in England; insomuch that a Court-Lady will not be induced to esteem a Friend, or entertain a Servant, who cannot speak one of them at least: and that you may not despair of a competent knowledg of either, or both, without going into those Countries, where they are naturally spoken, know there are many excellent Masters who teach here in London those Languages, but more especially that sober and learned natural Italian Seignor Terriano; and that unimitable Master of the French Tongue, Monsieur Mauger, both which have publisht their Gramars; the

the first a large and useful Italian Dictionary also. Both these Countreys have been happy and may be justly proud in producing so many learned and ingenious Men; so many, should I nominate them with their deserved Encemiums, this small Treatise would swell into Volumes; I shall therefore pass them over, but would not have you their Writings, where you shall find plenty of every thing, which shall either tickle your fancy, or further your understanding. Having thus adapted you for conversation, let me next show you your deportment therein.

Of a Gentlewomans civil Behaviour to all sorts of people in all places.

Painter of old being about a Draught of most absolute Beauty, propounded for the acomplishment thereof half a dozen of the most exquifite and wonderful fair Maidens he could find, that he might steal from each those charms and features which he thought were most powerful; but

he

50 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

but I will assure you, a greater assistance is required in the framing and fashioning of a Woman, whose behaviour should be such as to please in all companies. Whatsoever Nature can afford, or good manners inform, come short of this purpose. In this Subject the fairest Ornaments are most necessary; among which what I have already exprest, are highly to be prized, which with the aggregation of all the best qualities can be desired, are the proper things, which as in their Center, must termininate in Countersa-

COT

100

31

The first thing I judg most necessary, and do wish, with Socrates, were in you Ladies, as he desired in his Pupils, are Discretion, Silence and Modesty. But this is too general; wherefore since Conversation (after the milk) is the first and chiefest thing, both Animal as well as Rational Creatures, do most desire and delight in, I shall first advise as to choice of Company; next, your Carriage therein, both in Gesture, Look, Speech and Habit.

No wonder all Mankind is so generally inclined to Conversation, since Life without Society is more insupportable than Death; it is Discourse makes us pass over our tedious bours and days with delight. What a Defart would this World feem without company! and how dangerous would it prove were we not cautious in our election! For example is more forcible than precept; thus by ill company you may gain a bad custom, which all good instructions shall never root out. But should you be so prudent as not to follow their evil example, yet by affociating your self, you will inevitably contract a suspicion of being as bad as they; this made the Philosopher Tay, Shew me thy Companion, and I will tell thee what thou art.

Be not easily induc'd to enter into discourse with strangers, for nothing argueth levity and indiscretion more than that. Consort your self with your betters as near as you can, yet do not despise your equals; but in a most especial manner avoid all familiarity with your inferiors; if Female, in a little time they will thereby be drawn to D 2 slight flight you; if Male, they will be encouraged to attack your honour unlawfully, or subtilly insinuate themselves into your affection; whereby though you are as high in fortune, as honourable in Birth, you may stoop to so low a contract, that forgetting your self by the incessant importunities of their over-blown desires, you are overcome, and so become a grief to your friends, a shame to your selves, and a lamentable spectacle of reproach and serrow to that worthy Family, from whence you had your O-

Affect not the vanity of some, in being seen in publick too frequently. Thus many excellent Ladies have exposed themselves to the mercy of the Tempter, who otherwise had stood impregnable in the defence of their Chastities. You think, it may be, and intend no harm in your Promenades or Walks; but by so doing, you give too often occasion for ling, you give too often occasion for line, you give attention to some wanton smutty story.

Consult not too much with youthfulblood and beauty, lest they prove too dangerous enemies to be your Privy-Councellors.

Be not guilty of the unpardonable fault of some, who never think they do better than when they speak most; in tring an Ocean of Words without one drop of reason; talking much, expressing; little. Much like that Woman D. Heylin unhappily met withal, in his younger years, with whom he was constrained to travel a long fourney in a Coach: So indifcreetly reserved she was at first meeting, that tendring his devoir of a falute (as is customary) she would not admit thereof; so speechless withal at hist, as if a vow'd resolution had tied up her tongue to the strict observance of an everlasting silence; but the next day, the so far presumed on the slenderness of the acquaintance, that, though she was so filent before, she then opened upon their setting forward; and the continual click of her Tongue never ceast till the Sun was set; which the motion of her Tongue and the Doctor's watch, kept exact time for eleven hours; and not with-Standing

U

of

at-

54 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

standing her seeming modesty in refusing a dife, did now voluntarily prompt him to a close embrace.

As I would not advise you to be overrefire'd, so give not too loose reins to liberty, making pleasure your vocation, as if you were created for no other end than to dedicate the first fruits of the morning to your Looking-glass, and the remainder thereof to the Exchange, or Play-bouse. Many of our Sex are too blame; who have no fooner ting'd their faces artificially, than some Attendant is dispatcht to know what Plays are to be atted that day; my Lady approveth of one which she is resolved to see, that she may be feen; being in the Pit or Box, the minds not how little the observeth in it, as how much to be observed at it. If the novelty or goodness of the Play invite them not, then what Lady Fashionmonger? or what Lord Beauty-bunter?

Shun all affectation in your behaviour; for Virtue admits of no fuch thing in her gesture or habit, but that which is proper, and not enforced; native or decent, and not what is apilly introduced.

There-

may

Therefore fince nothing better befits you than what is your own, make known by your dreft, how much you hate formality. To this end play not the Hypocrite with your Creater, in pretending to go to Church to serve him, whereas it is to serve your selves in the imitation of some new fashion. That which becometh another well, may ill become you: You deserve in your preposterous imitation, fuitable correction with the Ass in the Fable, who seeing the Spannel fawningly to leap on his Master, thought that the like posture would alike become and oblige him; which he adventuring to put in practice, alarm'd the whole Family, and was foundly beaten for his unadvised folly. Affectation cannot be conceal'd, and the indecency of your deportment will quickly be discovered in publick Societies; wherefore behave your felf to discreetly abroad, that you may confer no less a benefit on fuch as fee your behaviour, than you profit such as shall observe your carriage at home. Express in publick such awell-becoming Garb, that every action, may deserve the applause & imitiation of all that are your company. Let your conceits be nimble and ready, & not temper'd or mixt with lightness; let your jests be immocent and seasonable without the least capriciousness; let your discourse be free without niceness; your whole carriage delightful and agreeable, and flowing with a seeming carelesness. Thus much in general, let me now come to particulars.

Of the Gait or Gesture.

IT is an easie matter to gather the difpesition of our heart, by the dimension of our Gait. A light carriage most commonly discovers a loose inclination; as jetting and strutting, shew haughtiness, and self-conceit. Were your Bodies transparent, you could not more perspicuously display your levity than by wanton Gesticulations.

Decency, when she seeth Women, whose modesty should be the Ornament of their beauty, demean themselves in the streets or elsewhere, more like an A-tores, than Virtues Imitatres; she endeavours

them look back to preceding times, and there they shall find Women (though Pagans) highly censured, for that their outward carriage only made them suspected. A Vail (no Vizard-mask) covered their face, modesty measured each step, and so circumspect were they in general of their carriage, lest they should become a scandal or blemish to their Sex.

Their repair to their (prophane.)
Temples was decent, without any loofe or light Gesture; and having entred them, constant and settled was their be-baviour. Quick was their pace in the dissach of aconomick or houshold affairs, but flow in their Epicurean visits or extravagant Gossipings. How much more should you in these purer Christian times affect that most which most adarns and beautisieth? Eye your Feet how they who so proudly exalt themselves on the surface of the Earth, are but Earth; and are the daily Porters which carry their earthly frame nearer its Earth.

With what apish gestures some walk,

D 5

to discover their lightness; others like Colloss's, discovering their ambition and haughtiness? How punctually these, as if they were Puppets, who are beholding for their motion to some secret Artissee? These unstaid dimensions, argue unsettled dispositions. Such as these, discretion cannot prize, nor sound judgment praise. Vulgar opinion, whose applause seldom receives life from desert, may admire what is new, but discretion only that which is neat. Having thus spoken what is requisite in Gasture, I shall next treat how the Eye ought to be governed.

Of the Government of the Eye.

As Prudence is the Eye of the Soul, so Discretion is the apple of that Eye; but as for the natural Eyes, they are the Casements of the Soul, the Windows of Reason: As they are the inlets of Understanding, so they are the outlets or discoverers of many inward corruptions. A wanton Eye is the truest evidence of a wanding and distracted Mind. As by them them you ought not to be betray to others view, your imperfections within; so be not betray'd by their means, by vain objects without: This made the Princely Prophet pray so earnest'y, Lord turn away my eyes from vanity. And hence appears our misery, that those eyes which should be the Cisterns of sorrow, Limbecks of contrition, should become the lodges of lust, and portals of our perdition. That those which were given us for our Assistants, should now become our Assistants, should now become An unclean Eye, is the messenger of an unclean Heart; wherefore confine the one, and it will be a means to rectifie the other. There are many Objects a wandring Eye finds out, whereon to vent the disposition of her corrupt beart.

en

fo

the of A of a hem

The Ambitious Eye makes Honour her object, wherewith the torments her felf, both in aspiring to what the cannot enjoy; as tikewise, in seeing another enjoy that whereto her self did aspire. The Covetous makes Wealth her object; which she obtains with toil, enjoys with sear, forgoes with grief; for being being got, they load her; lov'd, they soil her; lost they gall her. The Envious makes her Neighbours flourishing condition her object; she cannot but look on it; looking, pine and repine at it; and by repining with envy, murders her quiet and contentment. The Loose or Lascivious makes Beauty her object; and with a leering look, or wanton glance, while she throwethout her lure to catch others, fhe becomes catcht her felf.

Gentlewomen, I am not insensible, that you frequent places of eminency for resort, which cannot but offer to your view variety of pleasing Objects. Nay, there where nothing but chaft thoughts, staid looks, and modest desires, should harbour, are too commonly loofethoughts, light looks, and licentious desires in especial honour. The means to prevent this malady, which like a spreading Canker, disperseth it self in all Societies, is to abate your esteem for any earthly Object. Do you admire the comeliness of any Creature? remove your Eye from thence, and bestow it on the contemplation of the furperexcellency of your Creator. Put

Put a check to the stragling disposirionof your Eyes, lest Dinab-like, by straying abroad, you are in danger of ravishing. Now to preserve purity of Heart, you must observe a vigilancy over every Sense; where, if the Eye, which is the light of the body be not well disposed, the rest of the Senses cannot chuse but be much darkned. Be affur'd, there is no one Sense that more distempers the barmeny of the Mind, nor prospect of the Soul, than this window of the Body. It may be faid to open ever to the Raven, but seldom to the Dove. Roving affections, it easily conveys to the Heart; but Dove-like innocence, it rarely retains in the Breaft. The very frame of your Eyes may sufficiently inform you how to govern and guide them. For it is observ'd by the most curious Oculists, that whereas all Irrational Creatures have but four Museles to turn their Eyes round about; Man 2lone hath a fifth to draw his Eyes up to Heaven. Do not then deprefs your Eyes, as if Earth were the Center of their happiness, Lut on Heaven the Haven of their

115

ut

their bliss after Earth. To conclude, so order and dispose your Looks, that censure may not tax them with lightness, nor an amorous glance impeach you of wantonness. Send not forth a tempting Eye to take another; nor entertain a tempting look, darting from another. Take not, nor be taken. To become a prey to others, will enslave you, to make a prey of others will transport you. Look then upward, where the more you look, you shall like, the longer you live, you shall love. From the management of the Eyes let us next proceed to Speech.

Of Speech and Complement.

THE Eye entertains it self not with more Objects than the Invention furnisheth the Tongue with Subjects; and as without Speech, no Society can subsist; so by it we express what we are; as Vesells discover themselves best by the sound. Let Discretion make Opportunity her Anvil, whereon to fashion a seasonable Discourse; otherwise, though you speak speak much, you discourse little. It is true (Ladies) your Tongues are held your defensive armour, but you never detract more from your honour than when you give too much liberty to that slippery glib member. That Ivory guard or garrison, which impales your Tongue, doth caution and instruct you, to put a restraint on your Speech. In much talk you must of necessity commit much error, at least, it leaves some timeture of vain glory, which proclaims the proud Heart from whence it proceeded, or some taste of scarrility, which dispoils the wanten Heart from whence it streamed.

A well disposed Mind will not deliver any thing, till it hath rightly conceived; but its expressions are always prepared by a well-season'd deliberation. Think not I would have you altogether silent (Ladies) in company, for that is a misbecoming error on the other side; but I would have you when you do speak, to do it knowingly and opportunely.

A faying of a Philosopher will not be unworthy of your comemoration, who who seeing a silent guest at a publick Feast, used these words, If thou beest wise, thou art a fool; if a fool thou art wise in bolding thy peace. For as propriety of Speech affords no less profit than delight to the Hearer, so it argues difcretion in the Speaker.

By the way, let me advise you never to tye your self so strictly to elegancy, or ornament; as by outward trimming, the internal worth of right understanding should be altogether forgotten, and so your expressions savour of some absurd impertinency. This were to prefer the rind before the pith, and the sound of words before solid reason.

That excellent precept of Esclesiasticus, though it was spoken in general, yet I know not to whom it is more particularly useful than to young Women.
Thou that art young, speak, if need be,
and yet scarcely when thou art twice asked. Comprehend much in few words; in many, be as one that is ignorant; be as one that understandeth, and yet hold thy tongue.

Volubility of tongue in these, argues either rudeness of breeding, or boldness of expression. Gentlewemen, it will best become ye, whose generous education hath estranged ye from the first, and whose modest disposition hath weaned ye from the last, in publick Society to observe, rather than discourse, especially among elderly Matrons, to whom you owe a civil reverence, and therefore ought to tip your tongue with silence.

Silence in a Woman is a moving-rhetorick, winning most, when in words it woeth least. If opportunity give your Sew argument of discourse, let it neither taste of affectation, for that were servile; nor touch upon any wanton relation, for that were uncivil; nor anything above the Sphere of your proper concern, for that were unequal. This will make your Discourse generally acceptable, and free you from prejudicate censure.

传

Choice

Choice and general Rules for a Gentlewomans observation in Conversation with Company.

Before Ishall direct you in a method for civil converse in Society, it will not be improper to give you an acount of Civility, and in what it consists next, the definition, circumstances, and several kindsthereof, lastly, the difference of things decent and undecent according to custom.

Civility, or gentle plausibility, of which I intend to give you information, is in my slender judgment nothing else but the modesty and handsome decorum, to be observed by every one according to his or her condition; attended with a bonne grace, and a neat becoming air. It lyeth not in my power to lay you down rules and precepts for the procuring this charming air, and winning agreeableness. Nature hath reserved this to her felf, and will not bestow this inexpressible boon, but to her choicest favourites, and therefore I do not fee how Art with her utmost skill can imitate it to any purpose.

I contess this very much engageth the Eye and sometimes doth very subtilly steal into the affections; but we rest too much on a trifle, if we do not endeavour to make our selves more grateful to the Eye of Reason. It is not barely the outward ornamental dress, or becoming address which is the true principle and form of a compleat Gentlewoman; there is something more required, more substantial and solid, which must discover the disposition of her Soul, rather than the gesticulations of her Body. Were it not for this, alas what would become of a great many to whom Nature hath prov'd an unkind Step-mother, denying them not only convenient use of members, but hath thrown on them deformity of parts; these Corporal incommodities would make them pass for Monsters, did not the excellency of their Souls compensate those irreparable defects; their minds being well cultivated and polite, their actions may be as pleafing as those of the band somest; that Lady that is so unfortunate in the one, and so happy in the other, may say, with the Poet: Si

ut

lt

m ng er.

to

X-

OW

eit

Si mihi difficilis formam Natura ne-

Ingenio forma damna rependo mea.

In English thus:

If Nature bath deny'd me what is fit, The want of Beauty I repay with Wit.

But whether you are afflicted with any natural or accidental deformity, or not, you can never be truly recomplished till you apply your self to the Rule of Civility, which is nothing but a certain Modesty or Pudor required in all your actions, this is the Virtue I shall labour to describe, which description I hope will be sufficient to direct you towards the acquisition of that agreeable deportment which hath the power to conciliate and procure the applause and affection of all sorts of People.

The definition of Civility may be thus understood; it is a science for the right understanding our selves, and true instructing how to dispose all our Words and Actions in their proper and due places.

There are four circumstances which attend attend Civility; without which, according to its Rules, nothing can be done exactly.

First, Ladies, you must consult your years, and so accordingly behave your felf to your age and condition.

Next, Preserve all due respect to the quality of the Person you converse with-

Thirdly, Consider well the time. And,

lastly, the place where you are.

he of

ın

ur

ur ill

he nt nd all

HIS

ght

in-la-

ich nd

These circumstances relating to the knowledg of our felves, and all perfons in all conditions, having respect to time & place, are of fuch great consequence, and necessary import, that if you are deficient in any of these, all your actions (how well soever intended) are the rags of imperfection and deformity. I shall find it somewhat difficult to prescribe the exactrule of Civility, so as to render them compliable with all times, places, and persons, by reason of variety of Customs: You may fall accidentally into the Society of some exotick and forreign person of quality, and what may seem civil and decent in you, may feem undecen: & ridiculous ridiculous to another Nation. Nay, should you observe and practice in your behaviour what hath been applauded for useful and profitable, and commended to posterity for a Gentlewomans laudible imitation, may decline or grow altogether contemptible in our critical and curious Age. In short, nothing is so intrinfically decorous, but the experience or capricio of a phantastical Lady will alter or explode. By reason of this variety I think it altogether requisite to treat of it as it stands at this time in reputation among such who call themselves Christians, and accordingly reduce these Notions into practice.

This Modesty or Civility we speak of, take it according to its truest acceptation, is little else but Humility; which being well practis'd by Persons of Quality, is sufficient to stamp an everlasting impress on them of Virtue and Civility. And this Humility consists not only in a moderate and submiss opinion of our selves, but in preferring the satisfaction and commodity of other persons before our own; and that so ingeniously, first by not provoking or disobliging any one; to be of this disposition, is to be not only esteemed modest but good-natur'd; the benefit that will redound to you hereby, may incite and encourage you to the practice of this shining-Virtue: for as there is nothing will render any one more insupportable, and lessen estimation among all, than Insolence and Vanity; so nothing recommends more strongly to the good opinion and affection of all, than affability and submission.

geniously

ed de nce alty of on

eak ac ity an an oring the ring

This virtue of Humility, above all others, hath this great priviledg in extraordinary emmence. I have known fome, who having been endued with a more than an ordinary measure hereof, have been so far from being accused for their formal indecencies, and other errors, which otherwise might have been objected to their disparagement, that every one endeavoured to excuse them. I have known, on the other side, a proud and an imperious carriage (though the person was adorned with much breeding, and beautified with with all the usual ornaments

by few, because displeasing to most, and hardly welcom to any. Modesty therefore is the effect of Humility, as Civilty and the gratefulness of our Actions is the effect of Modesty. To conclude this Chapter, I shall add the difference or discrimination between things civil and uncivil, convenient and inconvenient, decent and undecent.

For the better understanding hereof, a good natural judgment is required in a Gentlewoman for the perception & discerning the various qualities of things; for want of this, she may many times fall into a mistake, and commit gross absurdities.

In the next place, it is necessary that you take an exact observation of what is own'd and establish for civil or uncivil, in the place wherein you are.

Lastly, You must have a special regard, not to confound Familiarity with Civility. To persons of Quality in a higher rank than your own, be very attentive to what they say, least you put them to the trouble of speaking things twice. Interrupt them not whilst they are speaking, but patiently expect till they have done. Have a special care how contradict them; but if finding them in an error, and necessity obligeth you to inform them of the truth, first beg your excuse; but if they persist therein, contend not, but refer your further discourse till another opportunity.

When it comes to your turn to speak to intelligent Ladies, entertain them not with things you understand but imperfeely. If you find the company more; facetious and witty than your felf, leave the discourse to time, and be filent, contenting your self to be an attentive hearer: if you will run the hazzard, be fmart and pithy, comprehending much, in few words, and be not the vain imi, tatrix of those who affect to have the whole talk; and when their mouths are, once open, can never thut them again. If you are obliged to complement any great person, do it as briefly as possible; and return your answers rather in Courtships, than in any prolix discourse. Avoid especially that rudeness that is too frequently practifed among fome, who think

2

are

74 The Gentlewomans Companion, or think they are never heard, unless they come up so close to the face, as to run. against your nose; in that case you are to pray hear tily their breath be sweet, or you faint irrecoverably.

Let not your vifits be too long; and when you think it convenient to retreat, and that Lady you vifited will do you the honour to accompany you out of the Chamber, do not seem to oppose it in the least; that would imply she understood not what she went about; but you are only to testifie by some little formality how undeferving you are of that great bonour.

When you enter into a room by way of visit, avoid the indiscretion and vanity of a bold enterance without ceremony, but do it quietly and civilly, and when you come near the person you would salute, make your complement, and render your devoir modestly, and with fome gravity, fhunning allbauling noise or obstreperousness.

The Ladies which do you the civility of rising when you come in, do not difplace, by affuming any of their Chairs; but make choice of another seat; observing still, not to sit down till they are most in their places: it being a great indecerum to seat you self in that case, whilst any person which gave you that respect continues in a standing-posture.

It is an intollerable incivility to enquire what they were talking about; or if you fee any two or more discoursing or dialoguing together, to interrupt them by hastily asking what they said last.

If you are in a mixt company, and you are qualified with those Languages (the knowledg whereof I have advised you to prosecute) speak as little as you can: but be sure you do not hold a difcourse in that Language the rest do not understand.

It is not civil to whisper in company, and much less to laugh when you have done. The generality of Gentlewoman are suspicious, and somewhat conscious, and are apt to surmize what was never intended, and to apply to themselves what was meant of another; by which means they have conceived so great a displeasure, as never to be irradicated or removed.

I need not put you in mind of those documents you learned every day when you were ebildren; that is, when ever you answer negatively or affirmatively, to give always the titles of Sir, Madam, or My Lord. It is very unhandsome, when you contradict a Person of quality, to anfiver him with, It is not so; if you are necessitated thereunto, do it by by circumlocution as, I beg your Honours pardon: Madam, I beseech your Ladiship to excusemy presumption, if I sayyou mistake, &c. If any dicourie you complementally, and run out into some extravagant expressions in commendation of your Perfin, it is a breach of civility if you should say, Pray forbear your jeers, my back is broad enough to bear your flours; but fay, You strangely surprize me, Sir; or, I am confident, Sir, what you now express, is rather to show your wit and ingenuity, than to declare any thing worth a taking notice of in me. If your love and respect to a Lady's Person, obligeth you to reprove a fault in her, do not fay, Madam, you acted the part of a mad woman. in doing such a thing, but, had such a thing been left undone, you had neither difobliged your self or friends.

Take special care of speaking imperiously to your Speriours, but rather doit in some indefinite manner; as instead of saying, Come, you must, do, go, &c. say, Come Madam, if you think it convenient, or if it stand with your Ladiships pleasure, we will go to such a place, or do such a thing, in my opinion such a thing is requisite to be done, if it saits Madam with your approbation.

As it is a great argument of indifcretion in a Gentlewsman that would be thought prudent and wife, to talk much in praise of her Relations in the presence of Persons of Honour, so it is very unhand-some to seem affected or over-much pleased in hearing others speaking largely in their commendations.

There is a certain ambitious vanity that possessed the minds of some of the younger fort, who being nobly extracted, think they add to the beneur of their Parents, when having occasion to speak of them in bonourable company, they never mention them without their titles of

E 3

Ho-

Honour (though we ought always to speak of them with respect) as, My Lord my Father, My Lady my Mother; in my opinion every jot as ridiculous, as for young Gentlewomen of twelve years old to call them Dad and Mam. Avoid, as a thing very improper, to fend commendations or messages to any Person by your Superiour; you may make choice of your equals for that purpose, but chuse rather your Inferiour.

In relating a story, do not trouble your Auditors with the vain repetition of, Do you understand me, mark ye, or observe me; and do not accustom your felf to the empty tautologies of faid be, and faid fhe.

Be backward in discourse of minding any one of any thing which may renew their grief, or perplex and trouble their Spirit.

Carelesly to nod, gape, or go away whilst one is speaking, is both an act of incivility and stupidity; to laugh, or express any Tom-boy trick, is as bad or worse; be careful therefore you do not pat or toy with her that fits near you, nor do not that childish or foolish thing which may provoke laughter; lest the company, being indisposed for such idle diversions, take distaste at you, and look upon you as the subject of their forn.

It is very ungentle and indifcreet, to peep over any Ladies (boulder when the is either Writing or Reading; or to cast your eye seriously on any one's papers lying in your way.

ot

X.

Of

not 100

do

Let it be your principal care, of not intruding upon persons in private discourse, which will be discovered either by their retirement, their whiftering, or by changing their discourse upon your approach: having observed either of these signs, make it your business to withdraw, left you incur the censure of indiferetion.

If the person you visit be sick, and in bed, let not your stay be long : for fick persons are unquiet; and being tied up to Physick, and controul'd by its operations, you may offend them by their being offensive to you: you must remember likewise to speak low; and urge him not to answer as little as you can-

E. 4.

In

80 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

In company it is ill-becoming to break out into loud and violent laughter, upon any occasion whatever; but worse by far, to laugh always without occasion.

Rules to be observed in walking with Persons of Honour; and how you ought to behave your self in congratulating and condoling them.

If you walk in a Gallery, Chamber, or Garden, be sure to keep the left hand; and without affectation or trouble to the Lady, recover that side every turn. If you make up the third in your walk, the middle is the most honourable place, and belongs to the best in the company; the right hand is next, and the left in the lowest estimation. If the Lady with whom you walk, hath a desire to sit down, to the intent she may repose her self; if you pretend any difference between persons, it would be very ridiculous and slighting to leave her to her rest, whilst you continued walking on.

If you understand a person for whom.

you

you have any difference or respect, meets with a subject or occasion of rejoyeing or forrowing; Civility requires you fo to conform your fif, that this Lady may be fully perswaded of your affection, and how much you are concerned in all her affairs; and as your countenances, fo ought your babit testifie the sentiment of your beart, as well as words and actions. How preposterous would it appear to the meanest capacity, for any out of a ridiculous non-confermity, who hearing of some joyful and successful accident which hath befaln some Noble Family of his or hers acquaintance, repair thither with all the sypmtoms of forrow and melancholy in the countenance; and on the contrary, if it be in mourning, or under any eminent affliction, to express all the signs of joy and satisfacti-022 ?

And now since I have toucht on Cloths; I think this a fit place to give you an account of what kind of babit is most necessary for a civil, sober, and modest conversation.

E 5

of

Of Habit, and the neatness and property thereof. Of Fashions, and their ridiculous apish imitations.

HE neatness and property of your Clothes, may be faid to shew a great part of your breeding. Property, I call a certain suitableness and convenience, betwixt the Clothes and the Person; as Civility is the framing and adapting our actions to the satisfsction of other people. And indeed the fuitableness and comeliness of your Habit, makes the greatest discovery of your virtus and discretion; for it must consequently follow, that a ridiculous Garb is the most certain indicium of a foolish person.

Now if you desire to be exact, you ought to proportion your Clothes to your shape, condition, and age; and not to run into excesses, stimulated thereunto by too much exactness, or an overvalu'd conceit. And indeed it is a great fault in our Sex, being very much inclin'd to pride it in fin with what our merciful Creator bestow'd upon us made-Woman first to sin, and the leaves thereof made her first covering.

ng ser ad he ad of où

to ind

ere.

20

5 3

ach

加

1 115

10

How careful ought you to be in your Habit, since by it your modesty is best expressed, your dispositions best discovered? As none can probably imagin, such to have modest minds, who have immodest eyes; so a Maid cannot be accounted modest whose attire openly proclaims arguments to the contrary. It matters not whether the quality of your Habits be Silken or Woollen, so they be eivil and not wanton.

Pardon me, I am not of that Cynical and Merofe temper of some, who affirm all gorgeous apparel is the attire of sin; but if it be a sin, I am perswaded the quality of the person extenua as the quality thereof: For I read, that noble and eminent persons were in all tine; admitted to wear them, and to be distinguished by them; neither indeed is the sumptuousness of the Habit so reprehensive, as the phantastickness in respect of form and sassion, which of late hath been so much affected, that all sassion is an amanner exiled.

I shall not trouble my self with what the glittering Bona-Robas of our times think, but I am consident it is Civility which adds most grace, Decency which expresseth best state, and comelines in attire, which procures most love. These misconceived ornaments are meer deformities to virtuous minds. Forreign fashions are no baits to catch them; nor phantastick rather phanatick dressings, to delude them. Decency is their choicest livery, which sets them forth above others gaudy pageantry.

Those whose erected thoughts sphere them in an higher Orb than this Circle of frailty; those whose spotless affections have devoted their best services to goodness, and made modesty the exact mold of all their actions, will not easily be induced to stoop to such worthless brainfick lures.

Now such of you whose generous descent, as it claims precedence of others, so should your vertuous demeanor in these four things which I have already spoken of, viz, Gesture, Look, Speech, and Habit, improve your esteem above.

humbly where ever you are; in Look, by disposing it demurely; in Speech, by delivering it modertealy; in Habit, by attiring your felf modeltly.

Frown not on me, Ladies, that I seem to be thus severe in reproving the excess of Apparel; yet I do not deny, there is a kind of priviledg in youth for wearing fashionable Clothes, Jewels and Diamonds, which Nature (who doth nothing in vain) hath provided; and what so ever some maliciously may whisper to the contrary, the use of Apparel is to dignifie the Wearer, and add more beauty to the Creature, provided the Apparel be not above the dignity of her that weareth it, nor doth exceed the Artibmetick of her Revenues.

But whilst I seem to give you (young Gentlewomen) some allowance of liberty in your clothing; for indeed it is impossible there should be youth without some vanity; yet I know not how to excuse the vain custom, now so much in fashion, to deform the face with black Patches, under a pretence to make it appear

appear more beautiful. It is a riddle to me, that a blemish should appear a grace, a deformity be esteemed a beauty: I am consident were any of them born with those half Moons, Stars, Coach and Horses, and such like trumpery, by which a Lady becomes a stranger to her self, as well as others, she would give more Money to be freed from them than a seven years costly expence, in sollowing the fashion, would amount to.

It must not be denied but that the indulgence of Nature hath left a greater liberty to Women, than unto Men, in point of curiofity in Apparel. A priviledg which Men ought not to envy them, because whatever imbellishment shebestows on her own beauty, is to be supposed an effect of that great love the would shew to Man, by endeavouring and studying how to shew her self most complai-Sant, grateful and acceptable to Man. And yet Nature hath limited this priviledg of Women with strict Laws. The dictate of this natural Law is, That no Woman use any habit or form of Attire but that which contributeth to her truelt STATE truest beauty. For since the fall of the first Parent hath subjected them to the necessity of apparel, they must ever remember to wear it as an ornament of decency, and not of vanity. But if we shall examine the present fashions by the standard of this rule, we shall find, to the amazement of sober thoughts, a new-born Law of Custom to have defaced the reverend old Law of Nature.

I cannot imagine whence our Ladies borrowed that monstrous and prodigious custom of patching their faces; if they did borrow it from the French, they did ill to imitate such, who it may be made use of the fashion out of pure necessity, & not novelty; having Frenchpimples, they needed a French-plaifter. Meer need taught us at first to build Houses, and wear Clothes, which afterwards were used for ornament: Who then can tax their witty-pride(although justly we may the imitation of the English Gentry therein) which could so cunningly turn botches in to beauty, and make ugliness handsome? I know not but but that the fashion of wearing Farthingals of old, were politickly invented to hide the shame of great bellies unlawfully pust up; and of late the large-topt stockkings with supporters to bear them up, were a good excuse for some hot gallants, in that they stradled much when they walkt the streets; whereas, poor Gentlemen, they could do no other wife.

I have read, that the Indians did accustom themselves to print the volume of their bodies all over with Apes, and Monkies, and other Beasts I know notwhether. our Ladies have endeavoured to epitomize their Works, and abridg them into the narrow compass of the Titlepage of their own faces. But sure lam, that they are much beholding to the ingenious Artist, whose skillful hand much exceeded his who writ the Ten Commandements and Pater-noster (to be legibly read) within the compass of a Penny. Such a one is able to vie with. Wonder it self, since he can pass a Camel through the eye of a Spanish Needle without a Miracle; and contract a Coach Coach and Horses into the narrow dimension of four Gnats.

By the impertinent pains of this curious Face-spoiling-mender, the Exchanges (for now we have three great Arsenals of choice Vanities) are furnished with a daily supply & variety of Beauty-spots (with many other things, whose Names are only known to the Inwentor and Buyer); and these Patches are cut out into little Moons, Suns, Stars, Castles, Birds, Beasts, and Fishes of all forts; so that their Faces may be properly termed a Land-skip of living Creatures. The vanity and pride of these Gentlewomen hath in a manner abstracted Noab's Ark, and exprest a Compendium of the Creation in their Front and Cheeks. Add to this the gallantry of their Garb, with all the ornamental appurtenances which rackt Invention can discover, and then you will say, there wanted nothing except it be that which a Roman Writer said was wanting to the accomplishments. of Poppea Sabina (Mistris to bloody Nero) That she was defective innothing. but a vertuous mind. Mediocrity Mediocrity in most things is the best rule for your observation: As in mode and fashion you are to avoid profusion, so you are to shun singularity: The one as well as the other, will render you ridiculous. I would not advise you to be obstinate, and altogether oppose the torrent of the fashion then in being : for example, should you now wear a Farthingal, or narrow brim'd Hat with a long crown, and a strutting Ruff (it is not long fince fuch things were in fashion) a fack-pudding could not attract more Boys after him, than would follow you. Or should you always keep in one fashion, you would be laught at for your fingularity, almost as much as others for their profuseness.

gancy, incline somewhat to the Mode of the Court (which is the source and foundation of fashions); but let the example of the most sober, moderate, and modest, be the pattern for your imita-

Those who are too remote in the Countrey, or hindred by any other impediment quaint themselves (if they can) with some prudent person who is frequently there, and by her pattern and direction order your habit with reference, as near as may be, to your quality, age, and estate. Your own wit and ingenuity may so contrive your clothes, as to retrench a great part of the luxury of a fashion, and reduce it to suit with your convenience, modesty, and Christian deportment.

I have already declared, your babits ought to be adapted to your conditions;

25

nd ade

ex-

14-

the

it is easie to judg of the truth of this Rule, if you consider how preposterous you would appear (being nobly born) drest in the habit of a Dairy-maid, or for a Scullion to be array'd in the dress of a Ladies daughter; this would be looked on no other than a Masquerade, or a Christmass Mumming. As it is very unfit to suit your selves unsuitable to your condition, so 'tis likewise as to your age. For an old Woman to habit her self as yourtfully as a Gentlewoman of sisteen, is as improper as to sing a wanton song is as improper as to fing a wanton fong at a Funeral. For a young Woman to clothe

92. The Gentlewomans Companion, or clothe her self in the habit of a grave and aged Matron, is as preposterous as to weep and mourn at a merry Gossping.

Proportion therefore your Clothes to your Bodies, and let them be proper for your Persons. I could not forbear to laugh heartily, when heretofore I saw a little Man lost in a great Band; nor can I now abstain from laughter, when I see a Man of small stature with a monstrous broad brim'd Hat; I have often thought the Hat hath walkt alone, and that the narrow Breeches and short Coat shrunk, for fear of the Hats greatness, into an exact sitness for an overgrown Monkey or Baboon.

Agreeableness therefore ought to be exact, and adequate both to age, per son and condition, avoiding extremities on both sides, being neither too much out, nor in the fashions.

Now least I have been too rigid concerning Apparet, and so have justly incurr'd the displeasure of some Ladies, I am ever bound to respect for those singular savours they have from time to time confer'd on their poor Servant: want; I shall endeavour to make them amends for it, without wronging my Conscience, in this ensuing Chapter.

Of New Fashions.

to

OF

en

nen nd

be

00

ot,

明如

in,

eD

M AN at first was left at liberty to be his own Taylor, and had the whole World to furnish him with all sorts of Materials, both for Stuff and Trimming, and so made his Clothes as he thought fit and convenient.

Hence it is apparent that he was the first fashion-inventer; some of his posterity imitated him, and others them, and we others; since then fashions seem to be left at liberty, I think no wise man should reprehend them, unless inconvenient and ridiculous.

If Womens palates are not confinable to one fort of meat, why should their fancies to one particular mode? Nature is the Mistris of Variety; shall we then be so ingrateful to her various kindness, as to rest in the enjoyment of one individual? She made all things for strength, use and ornament; and shall we be so slothstothful and negligent, as not to contemplate their worth, and applaud them in our due use?

It is true, we never heard any thing of Apparel till sin sent Man in an errant to seek for it; at first it was chosen for a covering for our first Parents shame; but their progeny beside that, have since found a decency therein. And certainly good Clothes are not displeasing to Heaoven; had they been so, God would never have commanded the Garments of his High-Priests to be glorious and beautiful; not only to be rich in the outward Materials, but richly wrought with the best eye-pleasing colours, and refulgent with precious Stones and Fewels.

The Peacoks starry train we cannot look on, but we must incline to admiration; and that the glory thereof may not be useles, Nature hath given that bird an excellent art to spread it to the best advantage.

I may be bold to say, Ladies, you fin more in the fordidness of your Apparel, than in its splendor; and you will not lose in your reputations, by being cloth'd a little above your rank, rather than altogether beneath it. A feweller when he would enhanse the price of his Commodity, sets his precious Stones to the best advantage; and the richer they are, the greater is his endeavour and care to grace them in the luster. It's true, a Diamond will sparkle in the dark, and glitter, though unpolisht or ill set; yet we think the excellency of the cut, or water, can never cast abroad its rays too much.

Let me ask the gravest and most prudent Matron living, whether it be not only convenient, but necessary, that as occasion shall require, young Gentlewomen should be finer than ordinary, as upon their addresses and visitings of persons of quality, on days of publick fea-Sting and joy, and on folemn and facred meetings. Socrates, though a serious and four Philosopher, being askt the question, Why one day he was so unusual fine and brave? answered, That he might appear handsome to the handsome. We ought in our Clothes to conform our felves to those with whom we do converse. Besides of and the not mi-

96 The Gentlewsmans Companion, or

Besides, we commonly guess at the fatness & goodness of the soil, by the grass which we see upon the ground. Since most then judg by outward apparencies, it is requisite to provide for a good estimation, even from externals.

I have heard of some profuse Gallants, who have spent all their money, yet prudently and for credit, have kept good Clothes to their back, otherwise they might have hoop'd for a Dinner and look'd for a Lodging.

If there were not a due respect to be had, according to rank and quality, what use would there be of Scarlet, Velvet, Cloteb of Tissue, Silk, Sattin, Fewels, and precious Stones of all forts? They would he accounted superfluous, and rather burdens than benefits to the World.

This is a Maxim undeniable, That Nature doth nothing in vain. Certainly then she had never produced such multiplicity and quantity of excellent and inestimable things, but for our use and ornament: Yet withal remember the saying of Demonax, who seeing a Gallant brave in the sashion, and insult with his Feather, whispered these words in his ear, The Silk and fine Clothes you boast of, were spun by a worm, and worn by a Beast, before they came on your back, and yet the Worm continues still a Worm, and a Beast a Beast; and the Bird in whose tail was the Feather you wear, is a Fowl still. There are some persons whose Gallantry of Apparel can never hide the fool, from them, whil'st others do grace and are graced by every thing they wear. Yet still we must conclude, that comely Apparel is to be prefer'd before what is costly or conceited.

Some choice Observations for a Gentlewomans Behaviour at Table.

Gentlewomen, the first thing you are to observe, is to keep your Body strait in the Chair, and do not lean your Elbows on the Table. Discover not by any ravenous gesture your angry appetite; nor fix your eyes too greedily on the meat before you, as if you would devour more that way than your throat can swallow, or your stomack digest.

F

98 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

If you are invited abroad, presume not on the principal place at the Table, and feem to be perswaded with some difficulty to be feated, where your Inwiter hath chosen in his opinion the most convenient place for you. Being a Guest, let not your hand be first in the Dish; and though the Mistress of the Feast may out of a Complement desire you to carve, yet beg her excuse, though you are better able to do it than her felf.

In carving at your own Table, distribute the best pieces first, and it will appear very comely and decent to use a Fork; if so touch no piece of meat without it.

I have been invited to Dinner, where I have feen the good Gentlewoman of the House sweat more in cutting up of a Fowl, than the Cook-maid in roasting it; and when the had foundly beliquor'd her joynts, hath fuckt her knuckles, and to work with them again in the Diff; at the fight whereof my belly hath been threee quarters full, before I had swallowed one bit. Wherefore avoid clapping your fingers in your mouth and and licking them, although you have burnt them with carving. Take these more especial Rules according to the ne west and best mode for Carving.

If Chicken-broth be the first dish, and you would help your principal Guest with a part of the Chicken, the best piece is the breast; the wings and legs are the next; and of them, the general opinion of most is, That in all boil'd Fowl the legs are look'd on as chief.

As to all roasted Fowl, those which are curious in the indulging their palats, do generally agree, that flying wildfowl are much tenderer than tame-fowl, and quicker of concoction; such as scratch the earth, and seldom use the wing, the legs are to be preferr'd before any other part; the wings and breasts of wildfowl are best.

The ordinary way of cutting up a roast food, is by dividing the four principal members, beginning first with the legs; and be not tedious in hitting the joints, which you may avoid by well considering with your eye where they lye, before you exercise your knife.

lead water tere of a manufacture to the second tere of a manufactu

F 2

Th

100 Gentlewomans Companion, or

The best piece to carve to the best in the company, of the larger fort of Fowl, as Capons, Turkies, Geese, Duck, and Mallard, Pheafant, Dottril, Cock of the Wood,&c. is the piece of the breast, observing always to cut it long-ways toward the rump. But do not cut your Oranges long-ways, but cross.

Since in Butchers-meat there are few ignorant of the best pieces, it will be to little purpose to give you an account of them in this place; for my design is to treat of that which is not commonly known: however, without deviating from my intention, take these marks which follow.

In boyled or roasted Beef, that which is interlin'd or interlarded with fat, is most to be esteemed; and the short ribs being most sweet and tender, is to be preferred before any other.

Cut a Loin of Veal in the middle, and present the Nut or Kidney as the best part in the whole Foynt. Thrust your knife into a Leg of Mutton a considerable depth, above the handle, to let out the gravey; and begin to cut on the inside, as if you intended to split it; in the joynt on the other side, is a litthe bone fit to be presented, and in great estimation among the Curious.

I heard of a Gentleman coming from hunting, and falling into a friend? House, complained he was extreamly hungry; the Mistris thereof replied, That she was very forry she had nothing to accommodate him with but a cold Leg of Mutton. His appetite being very sharp, made him commend that Foynt beyond any other; whereupon it was brought: but finding that choice bone remaining still untoucht, refused to eat a bit : being demanded the reafon, Madam, said he, the sharpness of my stomach shall never make me feed uncleanly; for I am confident they must be Bores and Clowns that first handled this Leg of Mutton, or else their breeding would have taught them not to have left untoucht the choicest bit in the whole joynt. I cannot but applaud the jeft, but I must condemn the rudeness of the Gentleman.

A Shoulder of Mutton is to be cut semicircularly

102 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

flap; the Pope's eye (as it is commonly called) is a choice bit both in Leg and Shoulder.

In a reasted Pig, the dainty most approve the ears and divided faws, the neck and middle-piece, by reason of the crackling. In Hares, Leverets and Rabbets, the most esteemed (called the Hunts-mans piece) is by the sides of the tail; and next to that, is the back, legs, and wings, improperly so termed.

Some who efteem themselves the Virtuofi for rarity of diet and choice provision, esteem (in Fish) the bead, and what is near about it, to be the best: I must acknowledg it in a Cods head, with the various appurtenances, dreft secundum artem, sparing no cost; such a dish in Old and New Fish street, hathmade many Gallants pocket bleed freely. As also, I approve it in a Salmon or Sturgeon, the Jowls of both being the best of the Fish, likewise in Pike or Carp, where note, the tongue of this last named is an excellent morfel; but in other Fish you must excuse the weakne is of my knowledg. In Filh Eisthchathavebut one long bone running down the back (as the Sole) the middle is to be carved without dispute; there is none so unacquainted with fare, to contradict it.

If Fish be in Paste, it is proper enough to touch it with your knife; if otherwise, with your fork and spoon, laying it handsomly on a plate with sauce, and so present it. But should there be Olives on the board, use your spoon, and not your fork, least you become the laughter of the whole Table.

in the win in the the

All forts of Tarts, Wet-Sweet-meats, and Cake, being cut first in the dish wherein they were served to the Table, are to be taken up at the point of your knives, laid dextrously on a Plate, and so presented: and whatever you carve and present, let it be on a clean plate; but by no means on the point of your knife, or fork, nor with your spoon. If any one carves to you, refuse it not, though you dislike it.

Where you see variety at a Table, ask not to be helpt to any dainty; and if you are offered the choice of several

F 4 dishes,

104 The Gentlewomans Companion, or dishes, chuse not the best; you may answer, Madam, I am indifferent, your Ladiships choice shall be mine.

Be not nice nor cuirous at the Table, for that is undecent; and do not mump it, mince it, nor bridle the head; as if you either disliked the meat, or the company. If you have a stomach, eat not voraciously; nor too sparingly, like an old fashion Gentlewoman I have heard of, who because she would seem (being invited to a feast) to be a slender eater, fed heartily at home (before she went) on a piece of powder'd Beef and cabbage; by chance a fleak thereof fell on her Ruff, and not perceiving it, went so where she was invited; being observed to eat little or nothing, a Gentlewoman askt her why she did not eat? Indeed Madam, said she, I did eat (before I came forth) a whole pestle of a Lark to my Breakfast, and that I think hath deprived me of my appetite. The witty Gentlewoman presently replied, I am easily induced to believe you fed on that Bird, for on your Ruff I see you have brought a feather of him with you. you. Thus your nicety may be discovered by means you dream not of, and thereby make your self the subject of publick laughter.

On the other side, do not baul out aloud for any thing you want; as, I would have some of that; I like not this; I hate Onions; Give me no Pepper: But whisper softly to one, that he or she may without noise supply your wants.

If you be carved with any thing (as I said before) which you do not like, conceal (as much as in you lieth) your repugnancies, and receive it however. And though your disgust many times is invincible, and it would be insufferable tyranny to require you should eat what your stomach nauseates; yet it will shew your civility to accept it, though you let it lye on your Plate, pretending to eat, till you meet with a sit opportunity of changing your Plate, without any palpable discovery of your disgust.

If you are left to your own liberty, with the rest, to carve to your silf, let not your hand be in the dish first, but give way to others; and be sure to carve

F 5

on that fide of the dish only which is next you, not over-charging your plate, but laying thereon a little at a time. What you take, as near as you can let it be at once; it is not civil to be twice in one dish, and much worse to eat out of it piece by piece; and do not (for it savours of rudness) reach your Arms over other dishes to come at that you like better. Wipe your Spoon every time you put it into the dish, otherwise you may offend some squeamish stomacks. Eat not so fast, though very hungry, as by gormandizing you are ready to choak your felves. Close your lips when you ear; talk not when you have meat in your mouth; and do not smack like a Pig, nor make any other noise which shall prove ungrateful to the company. If your pottage be so hot your mouth cannot endure it, have patience till it be of a fit coolness; for it is very unseemly to blow it in your Spoon, or otherwife.

Do not venture, to eat Spoon-meat fo hot, that the tears stand in your eyes, or that thereby you betray your intollerable. lerable greediness, by bewraying the room, besides your great discomposure for a while afterwards. Do not bite your bread, but cut or break what you are about to eat; and keep not your knife always in your band, for that is as unseemly as a Gentlewoman who pretended to have as little a stomach as she had a Mouth, and therefore would not swallow her Pease by spoonfuls, but took them one by one, and cut them in two before she would eat them.

Fill not your mouth so full, that your cheeks shall swell like a pair of Scotch-bag-pipes; neither cut your meat into too big pieces.

Gnaw no bones with your teeth nor fuck them to come at the marrow: Be cautious, and not over-forward in dipping or sopping in the dish; and have a care of letting fall any thing you are about to eat between the Plate and your Mouth.

It is very uncivil to criticise or find fault with any dish of meat or sauce during the repast, or more especially at another's Table; or to ask what such a foint

Foint or such a Fowl cost; or to trouble your self and others with perpetual discourses of Rills of Fare, that being a fure fign of a foolish Epicure.

It is very uncomly to drink so large a draught, that your Breath is almost gone, and are forced to blow strongly to recover your self: nor let it go down too hastily, least it force you to an extream cough, or bring it up again, which would be a great rudeness to nauseate the whole Table; and this throwing down your liquor as into a Funnel, would be an action fitter for a Jugler than a Gentlewoman. If you sit next a Person of Honour, it will behove you, not to receive your drink on that side; it those who are accurately bred, receive it generally on the other.

It is uncivil to rub your teeth in company, or to pick them at or after meals, with your knife, or otherwise; for it is a thing both indecent and distaftful.

Thus much I have laid down for your observation in general; wherein I am defective as to particulars, let your your own prudence, discretion, and curious observation supply.

Rules for a Gentlewomans Behaviour at a Ball.

Ladies, it is prefumed you know the grounds of Dancing, else your resort to a Ball amongst well accomplish Gentlewomen, would not only be improper but very much hazard your repute and good esteem among them; and as you can dance, so I would have you understand the rules and formalities of Dancing, which are practised in that place.

If you are skilful in this faculty, be not difficultly perswaded to make a demonstration of your Art. A fault is found in many, of whom if you request a Dance or Song, they will be deaf to all your importunities; but may be when you are out of humour, and have left them to their own liberty, will Dance so long till they have tired themselves and the Spectators; and Sing till they have neither voice, nor their Auditers

I say, if you have Skill, be not overconceited thereof, lest it lead you into the error of engaging into some Dance you do not understand, or but impersectly.

If you are perswaded to Dance, and thoughyou alledg a great many Apologies to the contrary, yet when you find your self obliged thereunto, by no means refuse. For it is much better to expose your self to some little disorder in being complacent, than be suspected of pride.

Rules to be observed by a Gentlewoman in Vocal and Instrumental Musick.

Do not discover upon every flight occasion you can sing or play upon any Instrument of Musick, but if it be known to any particular friend in company, whom you have a special respect for, and he or she perswade you to sing, excuse your self as modestly as you may, but if your friends persist, satisfie their desires, and therein you will express no part of ill breeding; your prompt and ready ready compliance thereunto shall serve you against censure; whereas, a refractory resistance savours of one that makes a livelyhood of the profession, and must expect to have but small doings if there be no better recommendation than that distasteful kind of morosity.

Use not your self to hemming or hauking, a toolish custom of some, endeavouring to clear their throat thereby; nor be not too long in tuning your Instrument.

Having commenced your Harmony, do not stop in the middle thereof to beg attention, and consequently applause to this trill, or that cadence, but continue without interruption what you have began, and make an end so as not to be tedious, but leave the Cempany an appetite: As you would desire silence from others being thus imployed, be you attentive, and not talkative when others are exercising their harmonious voices.

Let the Songs you make choice of be modest yet witty, and ingenious; and because there are so many, which though they they may please the ear, yet may corrupt good manners; let me give you this caution to have a care.

Of wanton Songs, and idle Ballads.

Let your prudence renounce a little pleasure for a great deal of danger. To take delight in an idle vain Song without staining your self with the obscenity of it, is a thing in my mind almost impossible; for wickedness enters insensibly by the ear into the Soul, and what care soever we take to guard and defend our selves, yet still it is a dissiputed that the pleasure and alluring poyson thereof.

Physicians endeavour to perswade the wiser fort of men, as well as ignorant and credulous women, That a Mother fixing stedfally her eye on a Picture, she will secretly convey the Complexion, or some other mark on the Infant; from hence we may be induced to believe, that the lascivious and wanton expressions contain'd in some Songs and Ballads, may have the same effect in our ima imagination, and do most frequently leave behind them some foul impressions in our spirits.

The reading these wanton things do heat by little and little; it insensibly takes away the horrour and repugnancy you ought to have to evil; by this means you acquaint your self so thorrowly with the image of Vice, that afterwards you fear it not though you meet with Vice it self.

Licentiousness is not bred in a moment, at one and the same instant; so the contagion of loose Songs seizeth by degrees on the heart; they may be said to work on the minds of youth as seed in the ground, it first appears only above the surface of the Earth, but every day afterwards adds to its growth till it be sit for the sickle.

Nay more, these Songs of wantonness will breed in you a more than sitting boldness, which will put you on the considence of practising what you read or sing. Assure your self, if you admit of a familiarity with these things, your innocency will be in daily danger.

You

You may easily believe this to be truth, if you consider the multiplicity of vanity and trumpery which stuff these Ballads; how an amorous or rather foolishly fond Virgin for fook Kindred and Countrey, to run after a stranger and her Lover. In another you find how craftily two Lovers had plotted their private meetings toiprosecute their unlawful emoyments; and the Letters that pass between for the continuation of their affection; which straight ways makes the Reader up to the ears in Love. In the one is exprest the Constancy of two Fools one to the other; in the other, what trouble, what hazard, and what not; they run into, to ruin themselves, distract their Parents, and leave a stain on their own reputations, never to be washt out.

These are the things which contain cunning Lessons to learn the younger fort to sin more wittily; and therefore no judicious person can comprehend with what reason these dangerous Songs and Sonnets can be justified.

The Lacedemonians prohibited Plays, because because Adulteries were exhibited; then why should such Pampblets be permitted where such dishonest actions, lascivious examples, and extravagant passions are maintained? Shall it be said, that Christians have less love for Vertue than Infidels?

Ladies, accuse me not of too much severity, in endeavouring to take away this too much accustomed delight in singing wanton, though witty Sonnets: I say excuse me rather, since I aim at nothing more than your welfare. I know your Inclinations, as you are young and youthful, tendrather to these things, than what is more serious; and are apt to read those Books which rather corrupt and deprave good manners than teach them.

Some may be so vain as to delight more in a Comedy than a Sermon, and had rather hear a Jack-pudding than a Preacher: This made a sober Philosopher complain, he had sewer Scholars than such a one of meaner parts, and a greater Libertine; because there are more who haunt the School of Voluptuousses, ousness, than that of Vertue; and we love them better who flatter and make us merry, than those who tell us the truth, and the danger, if we follow not her precepts.

Wherefore I cannot allow of any fort of Poetry, though it be ever fo Ingenious, if Vice lurk therein to do you harm; and wherefoever you find Vice, let it be your intention and strong resolution to fight against it, and throwiafide all those instruments and implements, which will but learn you to sin with the greater dexterity. This is one vanity the younger fort incline to, and there are a great many more which our Sex (and to their shame) are proze to follow; take a brief account of them.

Of the vanities some young Ladies and Gentlewomen are too prone to profecute.

I need not speak of the Vanity of Gentlewomen in over-much affecting bravery, fince we find it thorowly ingrafted in most of them; so that we may as easily take off their Skins from their Bodies, as this Vanity from their Minds.

If this were to be observed only in some particular Court-Ladies, it were something excusable; but this is an innate humour, an original sin which Gentlewomen bring into the world with them; the tincture of which insirmity their Baptism washeth not off. From hence proceeds the Babelor Confusion of Habits; insomuch that of late there is neither order observed, nor distinction; a Chamber-maid finished on a Festival or Holiday, may be taken for her Mistris, and a Citizens Wife mistaken for a Court-Lady.

Where shall we find any so regular as to sollow the dictates of Modesty and Mediocrity, so that the most severe cannot blame their superfluities, nor the more savourable accuse their defects? A young Gentlewoman well accomplish, is like a Star with five rays, Devotion, Modesty, Chastity, Discretion and Charity; such Women whose composition is made up of these, seem to have been moulded moulded upon the Calestial Globes, by the hands of Cherubims; so excellent are their Vertues and so sweet their Deportments; they are in their Houses as the Sun in his proper Sphere: Should I attempt to represent their worth, I might sooner find poverty in the Center of all the rich Ore and precious Stones of the Earth, than want of merit in this subject.

Were all our Sex of the same temper, by being Inhabitants of this Earth, they would speedily convert it into a Heaven. But alas, too many there are who every day must be dressed up like Idols, as if they intended thereby to be Worshipped. Their Filles de Chambre have more to do in attending their Beauties, than some have in fitting and rigging out a Navy. Their Glass with studied advantages takes up the whole morning, and the afternoon is spent in Visits.

And indeed should a man come into some Ladies Chambers unacquainted with the Furniture that belong'd to them, and feeing them lie on the Table, having never feen fuch vanities before, would think them the coverings and utenfits of some Creature of a monstrous and prodigious bulke, and that there was Mercery enough to furnish a little City, rather then the body of a little Lady. They may be fitly compared to some Birds I have seen, who though they have but little bodies, yet have abundance of Feathers. And though they feem to load themselves with variety of things, yet they do but feem to cover what they should difclose to none; and though they have but little flesh, they will show as much of it as they can. It was a true faying of one, and very applicable to this purpose; I know not what may be referved for the eyes of a chast Husband, when almost through all Markets where they go, the secret parts of his Wives body are exposed, as if they were ready to be delivered to the best bidders.

tore

Moreover, how dangerous is it for young Gentlewomen to affect a small Waste, thinking that the most exquisite proportion? Endeavouring by straitlacing to be as slender in the middle as the Strand-May-pole is tall in its height. I am sure they are big enough to be wifer, who never think themselves finer; than when the Girl with her span make a Girdle. I know, Gentlewomen, that the inconveniences which attend this affectation, do not proceed altogether from you, or that you are in the fault, but your Mothers or Nurses: but did they know how speedily and wilfully they destroy you by girding your tender Bodies, certainly they would prove kinder Mothers, than be your cruel Murderers. For by this means they reduce your bodies into fuch pinching extremities, that it engenders a stinking breath; and by cloistering you up in a Steel or Whalebone-prison, they open a door to Confumptions, with many other dangerous inconveniences, as Crookedness: for Mothers striving to have their Daughters bodies small in the middle, do pluck and draw their bones awry, for the ligatures of the back being very tender at that age, and foft and moist, with all the Muscles, do easily slip aside. Thus Thus Nurses, whilst they too straitly do lace the breasts and sides of Children, on purpose to make them stender, do occasion the breast-bone to cast it self asside, whereby one shoulder doth become bigger and suller than the other.

the

Though I would not have too great a restriction laid on your bodies, yet I would not have them by inconsiderate looseness run out into a deformed corpulency, like the Venetian-Ladies, who feldom lace themselves at all, accounting it an excellency in proportion to be round and full bodied: and that they may attain that (meerly supposed) comeliness, if Nature incline them not to be somewhat gross or corpulent, they will use art, by counterfeiting that fulness of body, by the fulness of Garments. Thus you see, that in all things (except Piety) Mediocrity, or the Golden-mean, is to be observed.

G

lis

Of

Of a young Gentleweman's fit hours and time for their Recreation and Pleasure; and how to govern themselves therein.

The chief thing that you ought to consider, is, how to govern and behave your selves in your Pastimes: Wisdom therein must be your guide; and the chief Rule it can teach you, is, To shun all pleasures which are vicious, and in the reception of those which are lawful, exceed not the Rule, nor Moderation, which consist, first, in not giving offence, scandal, damage, or prejudice, to your associates or others: Next, that it be without injury to your health, reputation, or business. Lastly, Let your Recreation be with Moderation.

You must by no means make pleasure your business, but by the enjoyment thereof return with more alacrity and cheerfulness to your business. Young Ladies may use it, but not abuse it, which they never do more than in the excess excess thereof; for it softneth and weakneth the vigor both of Soul and Body, it besotteth the best complexions, and banisheth the principal Vertues.

If pleasure be taken as it was at first provided, it will be taken without a sting; but if you exceed either in measure or manner, you pollute the purer stream, and drink your own destruction. The Heathen of old did put a check on Men and Women, forbidding them to let loose the reins to all the corrupt and mistaken pleasures of this life; much more should Christians forbear the inordinate enjoyment of them.

Above all, these pleasures are most to be commended, which in every respect are so lawful, that they leave in the Conscience no private check behind them to upbraid the sense for the unlawful using of them. He that plungeth himself into a puddle, doth but engage himself thereby to an after washing, to purge that filth away he contrasted by is, ch or or is to with the and one it to would you be so mad to feed on that you are certain will make you sick in the eating >

G 2

eating? Almighty God would never have allowed you the desire of pleasure, nor the faculties to enjoy it, if he had not design'd that with decency you should use them. An action of this kind is but natural, and will not be unlawful unless it be found to run into excess, attended with unlawful circumstances. There is so much corruption adhering to the use of pleasure, by exceeding the measure, mistaking the manner, misplacing the time; that although Recreations be lawful in themselves, yet if they be circumstanced amiss, they are not expedient.

Recreations and pleasures are indisputably lawful, if you are not irregular in measure, manner, or time; had they been otherwise, our most wise and merciful Creator would never have made them so distinct in their kinds, nor so many in their number. All the several tastes in food and fruit were intended to please the pallate, as well as satisfie the appetite. Of all the beautiful and pleasant fruits in Paradise, there was but one only Tree excepted.

From

and

From hence it may be concluded, Mankind may enjoy those delights which they have a well-grounded inclination unto, with this proviso, they abuse them not:

Before you do or act any thing, examine well the sequel; if that be clear, the present enjoyment will be accompanied with content, otherwise it will end in repentance.

What Recreations and Pleasures are most sitting and proper for young Gentleswomen.

Ecreations which are most proper and suitable to Ladies, may be rankt under sour principal heads, Musick, Dancing, Limning and Reading. Of Dancing I have already lightly treated on in the directions for your deportment at Balls; however this I shall say further of it, that though the Romans had no very great esteem for it, as may appear by Salusts speaking of Sempronia, she danced better than became a Virtuous Lady; yet the mode dinad ave nds, the and humour of these times look upon, it not only as a generous and becoming property, but look upon Gentility illbred, if not thorowly acquainted therewith; and to speak the truth it is the best and readiest way to put the body into a graceful posture; behaviour must of necessity bault without it; and how will you blush when you come into a mixt society, where each person strives to shew her utmost Art and Skill in Dancing, and you for the want thereof must stand still, and appear like one whose body was well framed, but wanted motion or a soul, to actuate it.

In the next place, Musick is without doubt an excellent quality; the ancient Philosophers were of the opinion, that Souls were made of Harmony; and that that Man or Woman could not be Virtuously inclined who loved not Musick, wherefore without it a Lady or Gentlewoman can hardly be said to be absolutely accomplished.

Limning is an excellent qualification for a Gentlewoman to exercise and please her fancy therein. There are a many foreign

Some may add Stage-plays as a proper recreation for Gentlewomen; as to that (provided they have the consent of Parents or Governess) I shall leave them to make use of their own liberty, as they shall think convenient.

I am not ignorant that Stage-plays have been much envy'd at, and not without just cause; yet most certain it is, that by a wife use, and a right application of many things we hear and fee contain'd therein, we may meet with many excellent precepts for instruction, and sundry great Examples for caution, and fuch notable passages, which being well applied (as what may not be perverted) will confer no small profit to the cautious and judicious Hearers. Edward the Sixth the Reformer of the English Church, did so much G 4.

much approve of Plays, that he appointed a Courtier eminent for wit and fancy to be the chief Officer in supervising, ordering, and disposing what should be acted or represented before his Majesty; which office at this time retains the name of Master of the Revels. Queen Elizabeth, that incomparable Virtuous Princess, was pleased to term Plays the harmless Spenders of time, and largely contributed to the maintenance of the Authorsand Actors of them.

But if the moderate recourse of Gentlewomen to Plays may be excused, certainly the daily and constant frequenting them, is as much to be condemned.

There are an hundeed divertisements harmless enough, which a young Lady may find out, suitable to her inclination, but give me leave to find out one for her which hath the attendance of profit as well as pleasure, and that is Reading.

Mistake me not; I mean the Reading of Books, whose subjects are Noble and Honourable. There are some in these latter days so Stoical, that they will not allow any Books to Womankind, but such as may teach them to Read, and the Bible. The most severe of them do willingly permit young Gentlewomen to converse with wise and learned Men; I know not then by what strange nicety they would keep them from Reading their Works. There are afort of Religious Men in foreign parts, who do not debar the People from knowing there is a Bible; yet they prohibit them from looking into it.

I would fain ask these sower Stoicks what can be desired for ornament of the mind, which is not largly contain'd and exprest in Books; where Virtue is to bee seen in all her lovely and glorious dresses, and Truth discovered in what manner soever it is desired. We may behold it in all its force, in the Philosophers; with all its purity in faithful Historians; with all its beauty and ornaments in Golden-tongu'd Orators, and ingenious Poets,

In this pleasing variety (whatsoever your humour be) you may find matter for delectation and information. Reading is of most exquisite and requisite ule, if for nothing but this, that these dumb Teachers instruct impartially. Beauty, as well as Royalty, is constantly attended with more flatterers than true informers. To discover and acknowledg their faults, it is necessary that they fometimes learn of the dead, what the living either dare not or are loth to tell them. Books are the true discoverers of the minds imperfections, as a glass the faults of their face; herein shall they find Judges that cannot be corrupted with love or hate. The fair and the foul are both alike treated, having to do with fuch who have no other eyes but to put a difference between Virtue and Vice. In perswading you to read, I do not advise you should read all Books; advise with persons of understanding in your choice of Books; and fancy not their quantity but quality. For why should ye feek that in many which you may find in one? The Sun whilst in our Hemisphere, needs no other light but its own to illuminate the World. One Book may ferve for a Library brary. The reading of few Books is not to be less knowing, but to be the less troubled.

G 5

Of the guidance of a Ladies love and fancy.

I Suppose you, virtuous Ladies and Gentlewomen, to whom I direct this Discourse, yet know, that though you are victoriously seated in the Fert of Honour, yet Beauty cannot be there planted, but it must be attempted. However I would have you so constantly gracious in your resolves, that though it be assaulted, it cannot be soiled; attempted but never attainted.

How incident and prone our whole Sex is to love, especially when young, my blushes will acknowledg without the assistance of my tongue; now since our inclination so generally tend to love and fancy, and knowing withal how much the last good or evil of our whole lives depend thereon, give me leave to trace them in all or most of their Meanders,

where-

wherein you will find such suitable instructions, as will give you for the tuture safe and sound direction.

Fancy is an affection privily received in by the eye, and speedily convey'd to the heart; the eye is the Harbinger, but the heart is the Harbourer.

Look well before you like; love conceived at first sight seldom lasts long, therefore deliberate with your leve, lest your love be misguided; for to love at first look makes an house of misrule.

Portion may wooe a Worldling, Proportion a youthful Wanton, but it is Vertue which wins the heart of Discretion; admit he have the one to purchase your esteem, and the other to maintain your Estate; yet his breast is not so transparent as to know the badness of his disposition; if you then take his bumour on trust, it may prove so perverse and peevish, that your expected Heaven of bliss may be converted into an Haven of insupportable crosses. Themistocles being asked by a Noble-man, Whether he had rather marry his Daughter to a vicious vicious Rich man or an Honest poor man? return'd this answer, That he had rather have a man without money, than money without a man. Whence it was that prudent Portia replied, being asked, When she would marry? Then said she, When I find one that seeks me, and not mine.

There is no time requires more Modesty from a young Gentlewoman, than in woving-time; a shamefast red then best commends her, and is the most moving Orator that speaks in her hehalf. Like Venus Silver Dove she is ever brouzing on the Palm of Peace, while her Cheeks betray her love more than her tongue.

There is a pretty pleasing kind of wooing drawn from a conceived yet concealed fancy. Might they chuse, they would converse with them freely, confort with them friendly, and impart their truest thoughts fully, yet would they not have their bashful loves find discovery.

non ano of servery died ni at Phillis,

Phillis, to willows, like a cunning Flyer, Flys, yet she fears her Shepherd should not spy her.

Whatever you do, be not induced to marry one you have either abborrency or loathing to; for it is neither affluence of estate, potency of friends, nor highness of descent, can allay the insufferable grief of a loathed bed. Wherefore (Gentlewomen) to the intent you may shew. your selves discreetest in that, which requires your discretion most, discuss with your selves the parity of love and the quality of your Lover, ever reflecting on those best endowments which render him worthy or unworthy of your greatest estimation. A discreet eye will not be taken only with a proportionable body, or smooth countenance; it is not the rind but the mind that is her Load-stone.

Justina a Roman Maid, no less nobly descended than notably accomplished, exclaimed much against her too rigid fate in being married to one more rich rich than wise: And good reason had she, being untimely made by his groundless jealousie a sad tragick spectacle of misery. For the whiteness of her Neck was an object which begot in him a stender argument of suspect, which he seconded with rash revenge.

Let deliberation then be the Scale wherein you weigh love with an equal poize. There are many high confequent circumstances which a discreet Woman will not only discourse, but discuss, before she enter into that bazardous though honourable state of Marriage.

Disparity in Descent, Fortunes, Friends, do often beget a distraction in the minds. Disparity of years breeds dislike, obscurity of descent, begets contempt, and inequality of fortunes discontent,

If you marry one very young, bear with his youth, till riper experience bring him to a better understanding. Let your usage be more easie than to wear him from what he affects by extremity. Youth will have his swing; time will reclaim, and discretion will bring him home at last. So conform your self to him as to confirm your love to bim, and undoubtedly this conjugal duty, mixt with affability, will compleatly conquer the moroseness of his temper. If he be old, let his age beget in you the greater reverence; his words shall be as so many aged and time improved precepts to inform you; his actions as so many directions to guide you; his kind rebukes as so many friendly admonitions to reclaim you; his Bed you must so honour, as not to let an unchast thought defile it; his Counsel so keep, as not to trust it in any others Breast; be a staff in his age to support him, and an hand upon all occasions to help him.

If he be rich, this shall not or must not make you proud; but let your desire be, that you both employ it to the best advantage. Communicate to the Needy, that your Wealth may make you ruly happy. That is a miserable Wealth which starves the Owner. I have heard of one worth scores of Thousands of pounds, who bought billets, not for fewel but luggage; not to burn them and so warm himself, but to carry them on a frosty morning up stairs and down, and so beat himself by that labouring exercise. Wherefore let me perswade you to enjoy your own, and so shun baseness; reserve a provident care for your own, and avoid profusenes.

Is your Husband fallen to poverty; let his poor cendition make you rich; there is certainly no want, where there wants no content. It is a common saying, That as Poverty goes in at one door, Love goes out at another; and love without harbour falls into a cold and aguish diftemper; let this never direct your thoughts, let your affection counterpoize all afflictions. No adversity should divide you from him, if your vowed faith hath individually tyed you to him.

Thus if you expostulate, your Christian constant resolves shall make you fortunate. If your fancy be on grounded deliberation, it will promise you such good success, as your Marriagedays shall never fear the bitter encounter of untimely repentance, nor the cureless anguish of afflicted conscience.

Now as I would have you, Gentle-women, to be flow in entertaining, so be most constant in retaining. Lovers or Favourites are not to be worn like Favors; now near your Bosom, or about your Wrist, and presently out of all request. Which to prevent, entertaine none so near your beart, whom you observe to harbour in his breast something that they deserve your bate.

Carefully avoid the acquaintance of Strangers; and neither affect variety nor glory in the multiplicity of your Suitors. For there is no greater argument of mutability and lightness. Constant you cannot be where you profess, if change you do affect. Have a care, vows deliberately advised and religioufly grounded, are not to be flighted or dispensed with. Before any such things are made, fift him, if you can find any bran in him; task him before you tye your self to take him. And when your defires, are drawn to this period, become so taken with the love of your Choice, as to interpret all his actions in the best sense; this will make one Soul rule rule two bearts, and one beart dwell in two bodies.

Before, you arrive to this honourable condition all wanton fancy you must lay aside, for it will never promise you good success, since the effect cannot be good where the object is evil. Wanton love hath a thousand devices to purchase a minutes penitential pleasure. Her eye looks, and by that the sense of her mind is averted; her ear hears, and by it the intention of the heart is perverted; her smell breaths, and by it her good thoughts are hindred; her mouth speaks, and by it others are deceived; by touch, her heat of defire upon every small occasion is stirred; never did Orlando rage more for his Angelica than these Utopian Lovers for their imaginary shadows.

These exhorbitancies we must endeavour to remedy; and that therein we may use the method of Art, we must first remove the cause, and the effect will follow. Let me then discover the incendiaries of this disorderly passion, next the effects arising from them.

The original grounds of this wanton fancy, or wandring phrenzie, are included in these two lines.

Sloth, Words, Books, Eyes, Conforts and luscious Fare,
The lures of Lust, and stains of Honour are.

For the first, sentencious Seneca saith, He had rather be exposed to the utmost extremities Fortune can inslict on him, than subject himself to Sloth and Sensuality. For it is this only which maketh of Men, Women; of Women, Beasts; and of Beasts, Monsters.

Secondly, Words corrupt the Disposition; they set an edg or gloss on depraved liberty; making that member offend most, when it should be imployed in profiting most.

Thirdly, Books treating of light Subjects, are Nurseries of wantonness; remove them timely from you, if they ever had entertainement by you, least like the Snake in the Fable, they annoy you.

Fourth-

by which death enters. Eve looked on the fruit before she coveted; coveting, she tasted; and tasting she perished: place them then on those objects, whose real beauty may make them, and not on such vanities which miserably taint them.

167.

in, fu-de.

bet

loy-

Fifthly, Conforts are thieves of time, which will rob you of many precious opportunities. Chuse then such Conforts of whom you may have assured hope, that they will either better you, or be better'd by you. Chuse such whom you may admire when you see and hear them, when you see their living Dostrine, and hear their wholesome Instruction.

Lastly, Luscious fare is the fewel of inordinate desires, which you must abstain from, or be very temperate in, if you intend to have your understanding strengthened, virtue nourished and a healthy bodily Constitution.

The next thing we are to insist upon, is, the evil effects of this wanton fancy, might I not be taxed with prolixity, and terrifie the Reader with examples of too much horror and cruelty. But if you would understand them, our late Italian Stories will afford you variety for the satisfaction of your curiosity; where indifcreet love closeth her doleful Scene with so miserable an Exit, as no Pencil can express any picture more to life than an Historical line hath drawn out the web of their missortunes.

Now to cure this desperate malady (though to you Gentlewomen, I hope the cure is needless, being void of all such violent distempers) the best and most soveraignest receipt, is to fortise the weakness of your Sex with the strength of Resolution. Be not too liberal in the bestowing your favours; nor too familiar in publick converse.

Make a contract with your eyes not to wander abroad, lest they be catch'd in coming home. Treat not of love too freely; play no waggish tricks with the blind Boy; he hath a daingerous aim,

aim, though he hath no Eyes; sport not with him that may hurt you; play not with him that would play on you. Your sports will turn to an ill jest, when you are wounded in earnest; let the Fly be your Emblem.

ty of if are ety

y; ileath

mes.

ady

ope all

and tife

the 000 fa-

not ch'd lose with

POUS

So long the foolish Fly plays with the flame,
Till her light wings are singed in the same.

Be watchful; there are many snares which students in Loves mysteries have laid to entrap Female creduility. How many are there can tip their Tongues with Rhetorical protestations, purposely to gull a believing creature, for the purchase of an unlawful pleasure; which no sooner obtained, then the person flighted and left alone to bemoan her irrecoverable lost honour? With more safety therefore ought you to suspect, then too rashly to affect, and be sure you check your wild fancy by time; least a remediles check attend your choice. Repentance comes too late at the Marriage Night. And

And yet I cannot commend your extraordinary coolness in affection, slighting all, as if none were worthy of your choice. The extreams of those two indisposed fancies ought to be seasoned with an indifferent temper.

Now the difference betwixt a wise and a wild love is this; The one ever deliberates before it loves, and the other loves before it deliberates.

There are a fort of wild Girls who compute their riches by the quantity of their Suitors. I have heard of a couple of Maids of different temper, who contending with one another, faid the one, I have such and such vertuous and wealthy Relations. I but (replied the other) I have more Suitors than thou hast friends. More shameless you (answered the other) unless you mean to set up an house of entertainment. Such an one as this, never cares for more than to be married; if The may but see that day, it accomplisheth her content, though she have but one Comical-day all her life: Yea, it is as well as can be expected from from their bands, if they attain unto that stile without some apparent foil. Such as these I could wish, to prevent the worst, they were married betimes, least they marr themselves before time.

To you then kind-hearted Gentlewomen, am I to recommend some necesfary cautions; the careful observation of which I hope will prevent that danger which threatens the goodness of your Sex and Natures. The Index of your bearts you carry in your eyes and tongues; for shame learn silence in the one, and secrecy in the other. Give not the power to an infulting Lover to triumph over your weakness; and which is worse, to work on the opportunity of your lightness. Rather damm up those portels which betray youto your enemy; and prevent his entry by your vigitancy. Keep home and straggle not, least by. gadding abroad you fall into Dinah's danger and mishap. Let not a stray'd thought prove the Traytor to your Innocency. Check your roving fancy; and if it use resistance, curb it with greater restraint.

And now a word or two to you coy Ladies, whom either coldness of Nature hath benumed, or coyness hath made subtil to dissemble it. You can look and like, and yet turn away your head from what you love most. No object of love can take you, till it overtake you.

You may be modest, and spare a great deal of this coyness; yet so conceal and smoothly palliate your love, as your Lover may not despair of obtaining it. Indifferent courtesses you may shew without lightness, and receive them too in lieu ot thankfulness.

Have a special regard to your Honour, which is of an higher esteem than to be undervalued. Light occasions are often-times grounds of deep asperssions. Actions are to be seasoned with discretion, seconded by direction, strengthened with instruction, lest too much rashness bring the undertaker to destructions.

In the Labyrinth of this Life, many are our Cares, mighty are our Fears, frong our Assailants, weak our Assailants,

th an alli-

ave

Ho-

than

1005

DET.

with eng.

uch

de

nang

stance; and therefore we had need have the Brazen-wall within us, to fortifie us against these evil occurrents. The scene of your life is short; so live then that your noble actions may preserve your memory long. It was the advice of Seneca to his friend, Never to do any thing without imagining a Cato, a Scipio, or some other worthy Roman was present. To second his advice (which may confer on your glorious actions eternal praise) set always before your eyes as an imitable mirrour, some good Woman or other, before whom you may live, as if she eyed and continually viewed you. There is no scarsity of, Examples of fuch famous Women, who though weak in fex and condition, yet. parallels to Men for Charity, Chastity, Piety, Purity, and vertuous Conversation. It will not be amis here in this place to insert some few eminent patterns for your imitation.

The

The Gentlewomans Mirrour, or Patterns for their imitation of such famous Women who have been eminent in Piety and Learning.

Evisit those ancient Families of Rome, and you shall find those Matrons make a Pagan State feem Morally Christian, Octavia, Portia, Cacilia, Cornelia, were such, who though dead, their actions will make their memories live perpetually: Nor were Niostrata, Corvina and Sappho, Women less famous for Learning, than the other for blameless Living. Neither have our modern times less flourished with feminine Worthies, as might be illustrated with several eminent instances; were there not already of them so many Panagyricks already extant.

It is said of Doreas, She was full of good works and alms which she did. Yea even the Coats and Garments which she made when living, were shown the Apostle as arguments of her industry, and memorials of her piety. Hence it was

was that Saint Ferome counselled the holy Virgin Demetrias, to eschew idleness; exborting her when she had finished her Devotion, she should work with her hands after the commendable example of Dorcas; so that by change of works the day might seem less tedious, and the assaults of the Devil less grievous. And know, that this Demetrias was not one whom poverty did enforce to such actions of necessity, but one honourably descended, richly endowed, powerfully friended.

Anna, who made frequent recourse to the Temple. Of whom to her succeeding memory the Scripture recordeth, that after her tears devoutly shed, her prayers sincerely offer'd, her religious vows faithfully performed, she became fully satisfied: thus sighing she sought, seeking she obtain'd, and obtaining she retained a grateful memory of what she received.

Queen Hester, with what fervency and zeal did she make Gods cause the progress of her course, desiring nothing more than how to effect it; which was seconded with a successful conclusion? because begun, continued, and ended with devotion.

H 3

more

Neither was Judith backward in zeal, faith armed her with resolution, and constancy strengthened her against all opposition: Prayer was her armour, and boly defires her fole attendants. Nazianzen reporteth of his fister Gorgonia, that by reason of the incessancy of her prayers, her knees seemed to cleave to the Earth. Gregory relates that his Aunt Thrasillia being dead, was found to have her Elbows as hard as born, which became so by leaning to a Desk, at which she usually prayed. Such as these deserve your imitation, who prayed & obtain'd what they pray'd for, they lived and practised what they fought for; they dy'd and enjoy'd what they so long fighed for.

Should you confider what troops of furious and implacable enemies lies in Ambuscado for you, how many Soultempting Syrens are warbling notes of ruin to delude you; what fears within

you,

you, what foes without you, what furies all about you, you would not let one minute to pass undedicated to some good employment.

The commendable and admired Chastity of Penclope must not be forgot, which suffer'd a daily siege; and her conquest was no less victorious than those Peers of Greece, who made Troy their triumph. Estimation was her highest prize; Suiters she got; yet amidst these was not her Ulysses forgot. Long absence had not estranged her affection; youthful conforts could not move in her thoughts the least distraction; neither could opportunity induce her to give way to any light action. Well might famous Greece then esteem her Penelope of more lasting fame than any Pyramid that ever she erected. Her untlemished esteem was of purer stuff than any Ivory Statue that could be reared.

Nor was Rome less beholden to her Lucretia, who set her honour at so high a price, that she held death too light to redeem such a prize.

of

in

H 4

Though

Though force, fright, Foes and Furies gaz'd upon her,
Those were no wounds but wonders to her honour.

The presence of a Prince no less amorous than victorious, could not win her; though with him, price, prayer and power, did jointly we her. Well deserved such two modest Matrons the choice embraces of two such beroick Champions as might equal their constant loves with the tender of their dearest lives.

There were seven Melesian Virgins, who at such time as the Gauls raved and raged every where, subjecting all to fine and Faggot, deprived themselves of life, lest hostile force should deprive them of their bonour. I have read of two Maidens living in Leustra, a Town in Baotia, who having in their Fathers absence hostitably entertained two young Men, by whom made drunk with Wine, they were deslowed that very night; the next Morning conceiving a mutual for-row for their lost Virginity, became resolute Actors in their own bloody Tragedy.

We may draw nearer home, and in-Stance this Maiden-constancy in one of our own. It was not long fince there lived. within the Walls of London a notable spirited Girl, who notwithstanding she frequented places of publick concourse boldly, discoursed freely, expressed her felf in all affays forwardly, yet so tender was the in the preservation of her bonour, that being on a time highly courted by a spruce and finical Gallant, who was as much taken with the height of her fpirit, wherewith the was endowed, as he preferred it before the beauty of an amorous face, wherewith she was not meanly enriched. She presently apprehending the loofness of his desires, feemingly condescended; so that the business might be so secretly managed, as no occasion of suspicion may be probably grounded. In order hereunto a Coach is provided, all things prepared, the place appointed where they shall. meet, which for more privacy must be the Country. Time and place they ob-. Served H 5

to 765

170

0.00

in

DITI

ferved; but before the would admit him to her embraces, she told him (calling him aside) that she would never consent to any such thing with any Man, unless she had first tried his valour in the field; and to that purpose the had furnished her self with a Sword, and therefore bid him draw; he smilingly refus'd, as thinking she was in jest, but seeing by her home-passes how earnestly she prosecuted his life, he was constrained to draw; but this Virago, which was metal to the back, disarm'd him in an instant, and had like to have made this a bloody combat, instead of an amorous conflict. Our amazed Gallant not knowing what to think, fay or do, was at last compell'd to beg his life of her; in granting which, she bestow'd on him plentifully her Kicks, advising him ever after to be more wary in the attempting a Maidens Honour, 1 1550

Excellent was the answer of the Lacedemonian Wives, who being courted and tempted to lewd and immodest actions, made this reply, Surely we Chould

not

should give way to this your request, but this you sue for, lies not in our power to grant; for when we were Maids, we were to be disposed of by our Parents; and now being Wives by our Husbands.

Lastly, (that I may avoid prolixity) What fingular mirrors of vidual continency and Matron-like modesty, were Cornelia, Vetruria, Livia, and Salvina? Now what may you suppose did these Pagan Ladies hold to be the absolute end whereto this tender care of their reputation aspired chiefly, and wherein it most cheerfully rested? it was not riches, for these they contemned, so their bonour might be preserved: Certainly there was implanted in them an innate defire of moral goodness, mixed with an honest ambition, so to advance their esteem during life, that they might become Examples to others of a good moral life, and perpetuate their memories after death.

Your ambition, Gentlewomen, must mount more high, because your Conversation is most Heavenly. It is immertality you aspire to, a lower orb cannot hold you; nothing else may confine you.

Of Marriage, and the duty of a Wife to her Husband.

Marriage is an holy and inviolable bond; if the choice on both fides be good and well ordered, there is nothing in the World that is more beautiful, more comfortable. It is a sweet scciety, full of trust and loyalty. It is a fellowship, not of hot distempered love, but endeared affection; for these two are as different as the inflamed fit of an high Feaver, from the natural heat of a found and healthy body. Love in the first acceptation is a distemper, and no wonder then that Marriages succeed so ill, which have their original from such disordered amorous desires. This boiling affection is seldom worth any thing. There are these two Efsentials in Marriage, Superiority and Inferiority. Undoubtedly the Husband hath power over the Wife, and the Wife ought to be subject to the Hufband

the

band in all things. Although the Wife be more noble in her extraction, and more wealthy in portion, yet being once Married, is inferior to her Husband in condition. Man of humane kind, was Gods first workmanship; Woman was made after Man, and of the same substance, to be subservient and assisting to him.

ides

e 15

ore

15 2

alty.

ered

nese

fit

MT G

DV.

$17,

MA

fires, rorth

时 ani

山山

Though the power of an Husband in this Kingdom extends it felf farther than it is commonly exercised, yet something more moderate than in foreign parts. Amongst the Romans the Husband had power to kill the Wise in sour cases; Adultery, suborning of Children, counterfeiting salse Keys, and drunkenness.

It is customary among the Indians (but I do not therefore approve of it as lawful) that when the Husband dies, the death of the Wife immediately follows. This is not only practised by the publick Laws of the Country, but often times with such ardent affection, that the Wives (for they allow Polygamy) will contend one amongst the other who shall first sleep with their departed Husband. Though this custom I cannot only reject as unreasonable, but cruel and borrible; so I cannot but applaud those Wives (as they are in duty bound) who affectionately and patiently content themselves to accompany their Husbands in all conditions, in adversity as well as prosperity.

Many examples hereof we may find at home as well as abroad; though in these late depraved and corrupted times there are not so many as may justly be desired. Lentulus being exiled by a Decree of the Roman Senate into Sicily, his loving Wife Sulpitia fold all, and followed him thither. Ipsicrates followed her vanquished Husband and King Mithridates throughout all extremities, notwithstanding she was advantagiously perswaded to the contrary.

Theagena Wife to Agathocles shewed admirable constancy in her Husbands greatest misery; shewing her self most his own, when he was relinquisht and and forfaken of his own; closing her resolution with this noble conclusion, She reve-

had not only betaken her self to be his companion in prosperity, but in all fortunes which should befall him.

Conform your selves to this mirrer, and it will reform in you many a dangerous error. Thus if you live, thus if you love, honour cannot chuse but accompany you living; much comfort attend you living, and a vertuous memory embalm you dying.

The more particular duties of a Wife to an Husband, are first, to have a greater esteem for him than for any other person; and withal, to have a fettled apprebension, that he is wise and prudent, that Woman that will entertain mean and low thoughts of her Husband, vvill be easily induced to love another, vyhom the ought not to affect. On this good esteem depends a great part of the Wives obedience, who will be apt to run into extravagancies, when she is once possessed of the weakness of her Husbands understanding. She is to give honour, respect, and reverence to her Husband; so have the wifest ever done; and those which do it not betray their indiscretion; with reverence she is to express her obedience in all lawful things; and apply and accomodate her self (as much as in her lies) to his humour and disposition.

You must be mindful of what you promised your Husband in Marriage; and the best demonstration thereof will be in your carriage; bonour and obey, and love no Mans company better than his.

Be quiet, pleasant, and peacable with him, and be not angry, when he is fo; but endeavour to pacifie him with sweet and winning expressions; and if cafually you should provoke him to a paffion, be not long ere you fhew some regret, which may argue how much you are displeased with your self for so doing; nay bear his anger patiently, though without a cause.

Be careful to keep your house in good order, and let all things with decency be in readiness when he comes to his repast; let him not wait for his meals, left by fo flaying, his affairs be diforder'd or impeded. And let what ever your provide be so neatly and cleanly dreft, that

that his fare, though ordinary, may engage his appetite, and disingage his fancy from Taverns, which many are compell'd to make use of by reason of the continual and daily distatisfactions they find at home.

Shew respect and kindness to what Friends he brings home with him; but more especially to his Relations; for by this means he will find your love to him by your respect to them: and they will be obliged to love you for your own as well as his sake.

Suffer not any to buz in your ears detracting stories of him, and abhor it in your Servants; for it is your duty to hide his faults and insirmities, and not detect them your self, or suffer them to be discovered. Take them for your greatest enemies who perswade you against your Husband; for without question they have some dangerous design in it. Those whom God bath joyned together let no man put asunder. Cursed then is that instrument which occasions their separation.

Breed up your Children in as much or more Obedience to him than your self; and keep them in so much and that they shew no rudeness before him, or make any noise to his disturbance. Make them shew him all awful regard, and keep them sweet, clean, and decent, that he may delight himself in them.

Let him see your love to him in your care for them; educating and bringing them up in the knowledge of Religion, with their Learning.

Be careful to manage what Money he doth trust you with, to his and your own oredit; abuse not the freedom you have of his purse, by being too lavish; and pinch not the Guts of your family at home, that you may pamper yours abroad; or throw away that money in buying tristes, which shall evidence your vanity as well as luxury.

To govern an House is an excellent and profitable employment; there is nothing more beautiful than an Houshold well and peaceably governed; it is a profession that is not difficult; for she that is not capable of any thing else, may be capable of this.

The

The principal precepts that belong to the frugal ordering and disposing Houshold-affairs may be compremis'd under these heads.

First to buy and sell all things at the best times and seasons.

in

ce

Secondly, to take an especial care that the goods in the House be not spoiled by negligence of Servants or otherwise.

Let me counsel you not only to avoid unnecessary or immederate charges, but also with a little cost make a great shew; but above all suffer not your expence to exceed the receipt of your Husbands income. There is a Proverbial saying, That the Masters eye maketh the Horse fat; I am sure the active vigilance of a good and careful Wife is the ready way to enrich a bad Husband.

Of Womens behaviour to their Serwants, and what is to be required of them in the House, or what thereunto appertains.

perience, you find you have a faithful Servant, give her to understand you are not insensible thereof by your loving carriage, and kind acknowledgment of her fidelity, and frequently find out some occasions to give her some little encouragements to engage her continuance therein; do not dishearten her in her duty, by often finding fault where there is little or none committed; yet be not remiss in reproving where she doth amiss.

If you find you have a bad or unfaithful Servant (as now a days there are too many, more than ever) whom you cannot either by fair means or foul reclaim: Vex not nor fret at what you see is remediless, but first making her thorowly sensible of her errors, give her fair warning to provide for her

her self, and convenient for your own affairs; and do not (as a great many much to blame) give too ill a charater of her; which will raise you little benefit, although it may lay the basis of her utter ruin; but rather be silent if you cannot speak good: which course I should think was sufficient to work on the greatest stupidity for a future amendment. Though a bad Servant, detain not the wages, nor any part that is justly due, for the Labourer is worthy of his bire.

Be not too passionate with your Servants; and look narrowly to them, that they waste or lavish nothing, lest thereby you impair your estate, and so purchase the repute of a careless and indiscreet Woman.

6%- 0 3

reot

20-

176-

Tye

en-

not ten

Of

5 10

un-

ere

OM

Of

hat

ing

If you find that they affect bravery too much, and presume to wear what misbecomes their present condition, rebuke them mildly into a moderation for their future advantage, and the credit of the family wherein they are.

Let not the business of the House take them cleerly off the service of God,

God, but let them so relieve one the other in their duties, that they may be sometimes bearers of a good Sermon; and do not forget to make enquiry how they improve by what they hear at Church and in your own House.

Let every Servant, Men, and Women, have their daily work appointed them, which must be duly exacted, and taken account of, either by your self, or some superior Servant constituted by you for that purpose; and let not your constant and painful care of your Worldly affairs exclude your greatest concern, the things of Heaven; and therefore appoint certain hours, Morning and Evening for publick prayers for the Family; and let not any Servant be absent, unless some extraordinary occasion hinder.

As near as you can, keep one set and certain time, with good orders observed for the Table, in which be free, yet frugal. Let there be a competent allowance for the Servants, that they may have no just cause to complain; nor so much superfluity as that they may entertain a fort of loose Gessips in corners, the very bane and spoil of Serwants.

may

Invert not the course of Nature (as too many do of late) by converting Day into Night, and Night into Day; but keep good hours for your repose, that your Servants may be the better disposed for the next days labour. Observe due times for washing and smooth ing up the Linnen quickly, that it may not be thrown up and down, and be mildewed and speiled, and so be fit for nothing but the wash again; and forget not to dearn or mind it every week, that it may not run to tatters before it be half worn; and do not suffer any Servant to be idle.

If you have a Dairy, see it be kept clean and neat. Let not the Corn in the Granary musty and spoil for want of skreening and turning.

шг

Let your Servant see that your Beasts and Poultrey be satted in their due season, and that your Stable keep no more Horses than your own.

In the Brew-house, that the first

Wirt

Wort be not drunk up by idle people, and so the smallness of your Beer become a disparagement to your Family.

In the Bake-house, that your Dough, which should be for the finest Bread at your Table, be not half consumed in making of Cakes. That there be always Bread enough for the Servants before hand, for it is a point of ill Huswifry to eat hot or very new Bread.

In the Kitchin, that there be no necessaries wanting, nor no waste or spoil made, but that the Meat be salted, and spent in due time.

In the Parlour, let the Fire be made, and the Cloth laid in due time, that the Cook may have no excuse for the spoiling of his Meat.

In the Chambers, that every thing be kept cleanly; the Beds often turned, the Furniture often beaten in the Sun and well brushed.

Every Saturday take an account of every Servants layings out; and once a Month an account of all the expences of the whole House.

In

In the Buttery and Cellers, that the Butler be careful of not making every idle fellow drunk that comes to the House, and so squander away without credit the Wine, Ale, and Beer.

Now because you will have frequent occasions for Banquets, in the entertaining of persons of Quality, I think it not unfit for a Gentlewoman to learn the art of Preserving and Candying; of which I shall according to the Profession I make thereof, give you an ample account or instruction in some Chapters following. Frugality will perswade you to learn these excellent Arts; for in the constant use of the product thereof, you will save much for Sweet-meats, you will make much cheaper than you can buy them, and more commendable.

the

Other things you will meet withal worthy of your observation, of which this is no mean one, most requisite and in no wise dishonorable; that is your understanding how to dress Meat as well as eat it, that your Servants may be guided by you, and not you by them.

I Gentlawaren.

as persons competent to judge whether the right understanding of these things be not altogether requisite and necessary; and as to your divertisements, none carries in it more profit than Cookery, now to the intent I may be instrumental to the making up a compleat and accomplished Gentlewoman, give me leave here to set you down such A-la-mode instructions, as may persectly inform you in every thing that belongs to the commendable Arts of Cookery.

Terms for Carving all fort of Meat at Table.

B Efore we shall treat of the Body of Cookery, I think it fit by way of Prologue or Introduction, to acquaint you with those proper terms in Carving, which are used abroad and at home, by the curious students in the Art of Carving; take them thus as follows.

In cutting up all manner of small Birds,

Birds, it is proper to fay, Thigh them; as Thigh that Wood-cock, Thigh that Pidgeon; but as to others fay, Mince that Plover, Wing that Quail, and Wing that Patridge, Allay that Phea-Sant, Untach that Curlew, Unjoynt that Bittern, Disfigure that Peacock, Di-Splay that Crane, Dismember that Hern, Unbrace that Mallard, Frust that Chicken, Spoil that Hen, Sawce that Capon, Lift that Swan, Rear that Goofe, Tire that Egg. As to the flesh of Beafts, Unlace that Coney, Creak that Deer, and Leach that Branen.

For Fish; Chine that Salmon, String that Lampry, Splat that Pike, Sauce that Plaice, and Sauce that Tench, Splay that Bream, Side that Haddock, Tusk that Barbel, Culpon that Trout, Tran-Son that Eel, Tranch that Sturgeon, Tame that Crab, Barbe that Lobster. nch fou and level, rading a up cloar

oin the base, then our up the merry-agent, and having cur up another

Quaint Directions for the Carving all manner of FOWL.

TF you will Lift a Swan, flit her right down in the middle of the Breaft, and so clean through the Back, from the Neck to the Rump, and so divide her equally in the middle without tearing the flesh from either part; having laid it in the Dish with the stit-sides downwards, let your sawce be Chaldron apart in Sawcers.

You must Rear or Break a Goofe roafted, by taking of the Legs very fair, then cut off the Belly-piece round close to the lower end of the Breast; lace her down with your knife clean through the Breast on each side, a thumbs breadth from the Breast-bone; then take off the Wings on each fide, with the flesh which you first laced, raising it up clear from the bone, then cut up the merrythought, and having cut up another piece of flesh which you formerly laced, then turn your Carkass, and cut it afunder the Back-bone above the LoynLoyn-bones; then take the rump-end of the Back-bone, and lay it at the foreend of the merry-thought, with the skinny side upward; then lay your Pinions on each side contrary, set your Legs on each side contrary behind them, that the bone-end of the Legs may stand up in the middle of the Dish, and the Wing-Pinions on the outside of them; put under the Wing-Pinions on each side the long slices of slesh which you did cut from the Breast-bone, and let the ends meet under the Leg-bones.

If you would cut up a Turkey or Bustard, raise up the Leg very fair, then open the Joynt with the point of your sharp knife, yet take not off the Leg;
then lace down the Breast on both sides, and upon the Breast-pinion, but take it not off; then raise up the Merry-thought, betwixt the Breast-bone and the top of the Merry-thought, lace down the slesh on both sides of the reast-bone, and raise up the slesh called the Brawn, turn it outwards on both sides, but break it not nor cut it off; then cut off the VVing-pinion at the Joynt next the

I 3

Body,

Body, and stick on each side the Pinion in the place where you turned out the Brawn, but cut off the sharp end of the Pinion, take the middle piece and that will just sit the place. You may cut up a Capon or Pheasant the same way; but be sure you cut not off the Pinion of your Capon, but in the place where you put the Pinion of the Turkey, place there your divided Gizzard on each side balf.

In the dismembring of an Hern, you must take off both the Legs, and lace it down the Breast; then raise up the slesh and take it clean off, with the Pinion; then stick the Head in the Breast, set the Pinion on the contrary side of the Carcass, and the Leg on the other side, so that the bones ends may meet cross over the Carcass, and the other Wing cross over upon the top of the

If you will Unbrace a Mallard, raise up the Pinion and the Leg, but take them not off; raise the Merry-thought from the Breast, and lace it downslopingly, on cach side the Breast with your Knife.

Turn the Back downwards, if you unlace a Coney, and cut the Belly-flaps clean off from the Kidnyes, then put in the point of your Knife between the Kidneys; and looken the flesh from each side the Bone; then turn up the back of the Rabbet, and cut it cross between the Wings, and lace it down close by the Bone, on each side; then open the flesh from the Bone, against the Kidney, and pull the Leg open softly with your hand, but pluck it not off; then thrust in your Knife betwixt the Ribs and the Kidney, slit it out, then lay the Legs close together.

In the allaying of a Pheasant, and winging a Patridge, you must raise their Wings and Legs as if they were

Hens.

of

TOU

the ther the

If you mince your Patridge, sauce him with VVine, powder of Ginger and Salt, and so set him on a Chasing-dish of Coals to keep warm. Use a Quail after the same manner.

Display a Crane thus: unfold his Legs and cut off his Wings by the Joynts; then take up his Wings and Legs, and I 4 fauce sauce them with powder of Ginger, Mustard, Vinegar and Salt; Dismember a Hern in the same manner, and sauce him accordingly; so likewise unjoynt a Bittern, but use no sauce, but Salt.

Ishall now proceed to give you some Instructions in the Art of Cookery; which I shall rank in an Alphabetical order compendiously.

Artichoaks Fried.

Boil your Artichoaks, and sever them from the bottom, then slice and quarter them, having so done, dip them in Butter, and fry them in Butter. For the sauce, take Verjuice, Butter, and Sugar, with the juice of an Orange, lay Marrow on them, and having garnisht them with Marrow, serve them up.

Artichoaks Stewed:

Artichoaks being boil'd, take out the core and take off the leaves, cut the Bottoms into quarters, splitting them in the

the middle, then put them into your flat Stewing-pan, with Manchet-toasts therein, laying the Artichoacks on them, with an indifferent quantity of Marrow, five or fix large Maces, half a pound of preserved Plumbs, with the Sirrup, Verjuice and Sugar; let them thus stew two hours, if you itew them in a Dish, stir them not thence but serve them up in it, laying on some Barberries preserv'd, and such like, so Supper and serve it up: Instead of preserved Plumbs, you may stew those which are ordinary, and will do near as well, and are much cheaper.

An Almond-Pudding.

Take a pound of Almind paste, some grated Bisket-bread, Cream, Rose-water, Tolks of Eggs, beaten Ginnamon, Ginger, Nutmeg, some boiled Currans, Pistages and Musk, boil it in a Napkin, and lerve it in a Dish, with beaten Butter and Sugar Icrap'd thereon.

An Almond Pudding in Guts.

Get a Pound of Almonds blanched

beat them very small with Rosewater, and a litle good new Milk, or Cream, with two or three blades of Mace, and some sliced Nutmegs; when it is boiled, take the Spice clean from it, then grate a Penny-loaf, and serce it through a Cullender, put it into the Cream, and let it stand till it be pretty cool, then put in the Almonds, sive or six Yolks of Eggs, Salt, Sugar, and good store of Marrow, or Beef-suet, finely minced, and so fill the Guts.

An Almond-Tart.

Strain beaten Almonds with Cream, Yolks of Eggs, Sugar, Cinamon and Ginger, boil it thick, and fill your Tart therewith.

Almond-Cream.

Take half a Pound of Almond-paste, beaten with Rosewater, and strain it with a quart of Cream, put it in a Skillet with a stick of Cinamon, and boil it, stir it continually, and when it is boiled thick, put Sugar to it, and serve it up cold.

Apple

Apple-Cream.

Take a dozen Pippens, or more, pare, slice, or quarter them, put them into a Skillet, with some Claret-wine, and a race of Genger sliced thin, a little Lemmon-peel cut small, and some Sugar; let all these stew together till they be soft, then take them off the fire and put them into a Dish, and when they be cold, take a quart of boil'd Cream, with a little Nutmeg, and put in of the Apple as much as will thicken it; and so serve it up.

Apricocks green Baked.

When your Apricocks are green, and so tender that you may thrust a pin through the stone, scald them, and scrape the outside, oft putting them in water as you peel them, till your Tart be ready, then dry them well, and fill your Tart with them, and lay on good store of sine Sugar, close it up and Bake it, ice it, scrape on Sugar, and serve it up.

Barley-

Barley-Broth.

Boil the Barley first in two waters, having first pickt it well, then joyn it with a Knuckle of Veal, and seeth them together, to the Broth add Raisons, sweet herbs, large Mace, and the quantity of a fine Manchet sliced together, then season it with salt.

BISK.

There are divers ways to make a Bisk, but the best is this: Take a Leg of Beef and Knuckel of Veal, boil them in two Gallons of fair water, scum them clean, and put to them some Cloves and Mace, then boil them from two Gallons to three quarts of Broth; being boiled, strain it thin, put it into a Pipkin; when it is cold take of the sat and bottom, and put it into a clean Pipkin, and keep it warm till the Bisk be ready; boil the Fowl in the liquor of the Marrow-bones of half a dozen peeping Chickens, and as many peeping Pidgeons in a clean Pipkin.

Then have pallets, nofes and lips boil'd boil'd tender, blanch'd and cut into pieces as big as a fixpence; also some Sheeps-tongues boil'd, blanch'd, larded, fried, and stewed in gravy, with some Chesnuts blanched; also some Cockscombs hoiled and blanched, with some Yolks of hard Eggs. Stewall theaforesaid in some roast Mutton, or Beef-gravy, with some Pistaches, large Mace, a good big Onion or two, and falt. Then take Lamb-stones blanch'd and flic'd, also Sweet-breeds of Veal and Sweet-breeds of Lamb flit, some great Oysters parboil'd, and some Cock-stones Fry the aforesaid Materials in clarifie Butter, some fryed Spinnage, or Alexander-leaves, and keep them warm in an Oven with some fried Sausages made of minced Bacon, Veal, Yolks of Eggs, Nutmegs; Sweet Herbs, Salt and Pi-Raches; bake it in an Oven in cauls of Veal; and being baked and cold, flice it round, fry it, and keep it warm in the Oven, with the aforesaid baked things. Having prepared all these things in readiness, take a great eight pound Dish , and a fix-peny French loaf, chip it and flice it into into large flices, and cover all the bottom of the Dish, then steep it well with your strong broth, and upon that some Beef-gravy; then dish up the Fowl on the Dish, and round about it the fried Tongues with the Lips, Pallats, Pistaches, Eggs, Noses, Chefnuts, and Cocks-combs, and run them over the Fowls with some of the gravy, and large Mace. Then again run it over with the fryed Sweet-breads, Sausages, Lamb-stones, Cock-stones, fried Spinnage, and the Marrow over all; next the carved Lemmons on the Meat, and run it over with thebeaten Butter, Yolks of Eggs and gravy beaten up till it be thick; lastly, garnish the Dish with little Pies, Dolphins of Puff Paste, Chesnuts, boil'd and fried Oisters, and Yolks of hard Eggs.

Gentlewomen, I must crave your pardon, since I know I have tired your patience in the description of a Dish, which though it be frequently used in Noblemens houses, and with all this cost and trouble put together by some rare whimsical French Cook, yet I cannot approve of it, but must call it a Miscellaneous hodg-podg of studied vanity; and I have here inserted it not for your imitation, but admiration.

can-

Beef Hashed.

In the making of a Hash of Beef, take some of the Buttock and mince it very small with some Beef-suet, or lard, and some sweet Herbs, some beaten Cloves and Mace, Pepper, Nutmeg, and a whole Onion or two, stew all together in a Pipkin, with some blanched Chesnuts, strong Broth, and a little Claret; let it stew softly for the space of three hours, that it may be very tender, then blow off the fat, dish it, and serve it on sippets; you may garnish it with Barberries, Grapes or Gooseberries.

Beef A-la-mode.

Cut some Buttock-beef a quarter of an inch thick, and lard it with Bacon, having hackt it before a little with the back of your Knife, then stew it in a Pipkin

Pipkin with some Gravy, Claret-wine, and strong Broth, Cloves, Mace, Pepper, Cinnamon and Salt; being tender stewed, serve it on French bread sippets.

Beef Carbonadoed.

Steep your Beef in Claret Wine, Sali, Pepper, and Nutmeg, then broil it on the Embers, over a temperate and unfmoaky fire, in the mean while boil up the liquor wherein it was steeped, and serve it for sauce, with beaten Butter.

Beef baked, Red-Deer-fashion, in Pies or Pasties, either Surloin, Brisket, Buttock or Fillet, larded or not:

Let your Surloin be boned, and take off the great sinew that lies on the back, lard the leanest parts of it with great lard, being season'd with Nutmeg, Pepper, four ounces of each, two ounces of Ginger, and a pound of Salt, which seasoning you must put into the Pye; but first lay a Bed of good sweet half an cunce of whole Cloves, lay on your Beef, then put on the rest of the seasoning, and a sew more Cloves, good store of Butter, and a Bay-leaf or two, close it up and bake it, it will require eight hours seaking; if you will eat it hot, half the seasoning will serve, and then let your Paste be fine, otherwise course.

To this quantity of flesh you must have three Gallons of fine flower heapt measure. But the best way to bake red Deer is in course paste; either Pye or Pasty; if Rye-meal, it will keep long, otherwise you may make it of Meal, as it comes from the Mill, using only boiling-water, without any other stuff.

Beef Collar'd.

In the right making of a Collar of Beef you must take the flank and lay it in Pump-water two or three days, shift it twice a day, then take it out, and dry it very well with clean Clothes, cut it in three layers, and take out the bones

bones and most of the fat; then take three handfuls of Salt, and good store of sweet Herbs chopped very fmall, mingle them, and frew them betwixt the three layers, and lay them one upon another; then take an ounce of Cloves and Mace, and another of Nutmegs, and beat them well, and strew it between the layers of Beef, rowl it up close together, then lay fome splices about it, and with packthread tye it up very close and hard, put it in a long Earthen-pot, which are made on purpose for that use, tying up the top of the pot with cap-paper; set it into the Oven, let it stand eight hours, draw it, and taking it out of. the pot, hang it up for use.

Brawn, bow to make a Collar.

Take a fat Brawn of two or three years growth, and bone the fides, cut off the head close to the ears, and cut five Collars of a side, bone the hinder leg, or else five will not be deep enough; cut the Collars an inch deeper on the belly than on the back, because the

the belly will shrink more in the boiling; make your Collars very even before you bind them up, not big at one end and small at the other, but fill them equally, and lay them a foaking in fair water, be fure that they be watered two days before you bind them up, shift and scrape them twice a day in that time, then bind them up with white tape; having your Boiler ready with the water boiling, put in your Collars of the biggest bulk first, a quarter of an hour before those which are less. Boil them an hour with a quickfire, keeping the Boiler continually filled up with warm clean liquor, and scum the fat clean off as it riseth. After an hour, let it boil still, but more leasurely; being fine and tender boiled, so that you may thrust a straw through it, draw your fire, and let your Brawn remain till the next morning; between bot and cold put your Brawn into Moulds of deep hoops, and bind them about with pack-thread; when cold take them out and put them into fouce made of boil'd Oatmeal ground or beaten beaten, and bran boil'd in fair water, which you must strain through a Cullender when it is cold, into that thing you intend to lay your Brawn; then put salt thereunto, and close up the mouth of the Vissel from the Air. When you use it, dish it up with a sprig of Rosemary on the top, dipt in the white of an Egg well beaten to froth, sprinkled with flower, or with a straight sprig of Ew-tree.

Brawn made of a Sucking-Pig, otherwise called Souced Pig.

Chuse not a spotted Pig for handsomeness sake, but one that is white; scald him, and cut off his head, parting him down the back, draw and bone him, the sides being thorowly cleansed from the blood, and soaked in several clean waters, dry the sides thereof, season them with Nutmeg, Ginger and Saht, rowl them up, and put them up in clean Cloths; then take as much water; as will cover it in the boiling-pan two inches over and above, and add two quarts of White-wine
there-

thereunto. When the liquor boils, put in your Collars with Salt, Mace, fliced Ginger, Parsley-roots, and Fennel-roots scraped and picked; being half boil'd, put in a quart of Whitewine more, being quite boil'd, put in flices of Lemmon to it with the whole peel. Having fouc'd it two or three days, dishit out on plates with Vine gar; or serveit in Collars with Mustard and Sugar.

the hen of the ber-takt

ere.

A Calves-bead roafted.

Take the Head, and cleave it, and remove from thence the Brains, purge it well from the blood, then steep the Headin fair water warm five hours, in that time shift it twice or thrice, the last time cleanse the Head; then boil the Brains, and with it make a Pudding with some grated Bread, Beef-suet, and some Veal minced small together, with some Sage; let the Pudding be seasoned with Cloves, Mace, Salt, Ginger, Sugar, five yolks of Eggs and Safforn; fill the Head with this Pudding, then close it up, and bind it fast fast with pack-thread; spit it, and bind on the Caul with some of the Pudding round about it; as it roasts save the gravy; but when you use it for the sauce, blow off the fat, and add thereunto a little White-wine, a Nutmeg sliced, the juice of an Orange, Salt, and Sugar, and a piece of sweet Butter; before you take up the Head, dredg it with grated Bread, beaten Cinnamon, minced Lemmon-peel with a little Salt.

Calves-foot Pye, or Neats-foot Pye.

Take two pair of Calves-feet, boil them tender and blanch them; being cold, bone them, and mince them very small, and season them with Pepper, Nutmeg, Cinnamon, a little Ginger, and Salt, and a pound of Currans, a quarter of a pound of Dates sliced, a quarter of a pound of fine Sugar, with a little Rose-water and Verjuice, stir all together in a Dish or Tray, laying a little Butter in the bottom of the Pye; then lay on half the meat in the Pye; take then the Marrow of three Marrow bones, and lay that on the meat in the Pye, and the other half of the meat on the Marrow, and stick some Dates on the top of the meat, so close up the Pye and bake it; being half baked, liquor it with Butter, Whitewine or Verjuice, and ice it with Butter, Rose water and Sugar, then set it in the Oven again till it be iced.

Capons Soured.

Take a good young fat Capon, finely pulled, drawn, and truffed, lay it in foak two or three hours, with a Knuckle of Veal well jointed, and after let them a boiling in a deep Brasspan, or large Pipkin, in a gallon of fair water, when it boils fcum it, and put in four or five blades of Mace, two or three races of Ginger fliced, fome Fennel and Parsley roots scraped and pickt, feafon all with Salt. The Capon being tenderly boiled, take it up, and when almost cold put it to your fouced broth which you must boil with a quart of White-wine to a felly, puting ing this liquor into a convenient Veffel, place your Capon therein, with two or three fliced Lemmons, cover it close and serve it at your pleasure, garnishing your Dish with slices of Lemmon, Barberries, and some of the felly.

Calves-Chaldron-Mince-Pyes.

Let your Chaldrons or Muggets be boiled tender, and being cold, mince them small, with Beef suet, or interlarded Bacon, some yolks of hard Eggs, Veal, Mutton, and Lamb cut small, season it with Cloves, Mace, Nutmeg, Pepper, a little Onion, and minced Lemmon-peel, with Salt, and Juice of an Orange; then lay on some slices of interlarded Bacon and Butter, close it up and bake it; and when you draw it, liquor it with White-wine beaten with Butter.

Capon or Chicken in White Broth.

First boil the Capon in water and salt, then take three pints of strong Broth, and a quart of White-wine, and stew it in a Pipkin, with a quarter of a pound of Dates, half a pound of fine Sugar, four or five blades of large Mace, the Marrow of three Marrow-bones, an handful of white Endive; stew them very leifurely, having so done, strain the yolks of ten Eggs with some of the Broth. Before you dish up the Capon or Chickens, put the Eggs into the Broth, and keep it stirring that it may not curdle, and let it be but a little while on the fire; the Fouls being dished up, put on the Broth, and garnish the Dish with Dates, large Mace, Endive, preserved Barberries. may make a Lere of Almond-paste, and Grape-verjuice.

Chicken Pye.

Truss the Chickens, then season them lightly with Pepper, Salt and Nutmeg, lay them in the Pye, and lay on them some sliced Dates, with the Marrow of two or three Marrow-bones, some large Mace, a quarter of a pound of Eringo-roots, some Grapes or Barberries, with Butter, close

K

close it up and put it into the Oven; being half baked, liquor it with a Caw-dle made of a Pint of White-wine or Verjuice, the yolks of five or six Eggs, with Sugar and Butter, shake liquor well in it, which you may colour green with the juice of Spinnage: It is proper to ice these Pyes or scrape Sugar on them.

Clouted Cream.

Take a gallon of new Milk from the Cow, two quarts of Cream, and twelve spoonfuls of Rosewater, put these together in a large Milk-pan, and set it upon a fire of Charcoal well kindled (be sure the fire be not too hot) and let it stand a day and a night, then take it off and dish it with a slice or scummer, let no Milk be in it, lay it in a Cream-dish, with Sugar scraped thereon, and so serve it up.

Cabbedg-Cream.

Set over the fire six quarts of new Milk, and when it boils, pour it out into half a score of Earthen-pans or bowl.

bowls, as fast as you can without frothing, fet them apart, and when they are a little cold, gather the Cream that is on the top with your hand, rumpling it together, and lay it on a flat dish; when you have laid three or four layers one on the other, wet a feather in Rose-water and Musk, and stroke over it, then searse a little grated Nutmeg, and fine Sugar, then lay three or four lays more on, as before, thus doing till you have all the Cream in the bowl. and then put all the Milk together and boil it again; and when it boils, do with it as you did before; it will yield thus four or five times feething, with which you must do as before, that it may lie round and high like a Cabbedge. You will do well to let one of the first Bowls to stand till last, that the Cream may be thick and crumpled, and that use for the uppermost lay, and so scrape Sugar in it. This must be made overnight for Dinner, and in the morning for Supper.

K 2

Carp

Carp Stewed.

Drefs the Carp and take out the Milt, put it in a Dish with the Carp, take out the Gall, and then fave the blood, and scotch with your knife the back of the Carp. If the Carp he large, take a quart of Claret, or White wine, four or five blades of large Mace, ten Cloves, two large races of Ginger fliced, two fliced Nutmegs, with the tops of Time, Marjoram, Savory, and Parfly chopped very small, four great Onions whole, three or four Bay-leaves, and some Salt; Stew them all together with the Wine, when the Liquor boils, put in the Carp with a quarter of a pound of sweet-butter; being stew'd enough, take a large Dish, and laying the Carp therein, pour the Sawce thereon with the Spices; lay on fliced Lemmon, with fome of the peel cut small, and run it over with beaten Butter; Garnish the Dish with Manchet grated and searced, and carved appets laid round the Dish. You may for variety, the Carp being scaled, garnish the body with stewed Oysters. sters, some fried in white Butter, some in green, made by the juice of Spin-nage,

Carp Marinated.

Take a Carp, scale it, and scrape off the stime, wipe it clean with a dry Cloth, and split it down the back, Howre it, and fry it in fweet Sallet-oyl, or clarified Butter; being fried crifp, lay it in a deep Dish, or Earthen-pan, then take some white Claret-wine White-Wine-Vinegar, and put it into a broad- mouth'd Pipkin, with Rofemary, Time, Sweet Marjoram, Parfly, Winter-Savory, Bay-leaves, Sorrel and Sage, a like quantity of each, with some large Mace, fliced Ginger, gross Pepper, fliced Nutmeg, whole Cloves and Salt, with as much Wine and Vinegar as will cover the Fish; boil all these together a little while, and then pour it on the Fish hot, and cover it close to detain the spirits from evaporating for an hours space, and then lay on your Lemmon with Orange-peel. Thus you may marinate Soles, Plaice, our wo we of the in do the er the will or any other, whether Sea or fresh-water Fish; if you barrel or pack it up close, it will be as good, and keep as long as Sturgeon.

Carp roasted.

Take a live Carp, draw and wash it, taking away the Gall, Milt, or Spawn; then make a Pudding with some grated Manchet, some Almond-paste, Cream, Currans, grated Nutmeg, raw Yolks of Eggs, Sugar, Carraway-seed candied, some Salt and Lemmon; make a hiff Pudding and put it through the Gills into the belly of the Carp; then spit it, and when it is roasted, make Sauce with the Gravey that falls from it, with juice of Orange, Sugar, and Cinnamon; beat up the Sauce thick with the Butter, and dish it up.

Deer, Red and Fallow, roafted.

Take a fide or half Haunch, and parboil it, then farce or stuff it with all manner of sweet Herbs minced with Beef-suet; lay the Cawlover, and so roast it; when ready, dish it up with a Gallendine-sauce, made with strained Bread.

Bread, Vinegar, Claret-wine, Cinnamon, Ginger and Sugar, boil up these with a few whole Cloves, and a sprig of Rosemary.

Deer Bak d.

Take a side of Venisin, bone and lard it with great lards as big as your little finger, and season it with two ounces of Pepper, two ounces of Nutmeg, and sour ounces of Salt, then make your Pye, and lay some Butter in the bottom thereof, then lay in your flesh the inside downward, coat it thick with seasoning, adding a few Cloves and good store of Butter, so close it up and bake it, first basting it with Eggs.

Egg-Mince-Pye.

Boil your Eggs hard, then mince and mix them with Cinnamon, Currans, Carraway-seed, Sugar and Dates, minced Lemmon-peel, Verjuice, Rosewater, Butter and Salt, with these fill your Pyes; when baked, liquor them with Butter, Whitewine, Sugar, and ice them. Florentines on Paste, or without Paste.

Takea Leg of Mutton or Veal, shave

K 4

it into thin slices, and mingle it with some sweet Herbs, as sweet Marjoram, Time, Savory, Parsly, and Resemany; being minced very small, a Clove of Garlick, some beaten Nutmeg, Pepper, a minced Onion, some grated Manchet, and three or four Yolks of raw Eggs, mix all together with a little Salt, some thin slices of interlarded Bacon, lay the Meat round the Dish, on a sheet of Paste, or in the Dish without Paste; being baked, stick Bay-leaves round the Dish.

Flowers of all forts Pickled.

Put them into a Gally-pot, or Glass, with as much Sugar as they weigh, fill them up with Wine-Vinegar. To a pint of Vinegar a pound of Sugar, and a pound of Flowers: so keep them for Sallets and boil'd Meats.

Grapes and Goosberries Pickled:
Pick them and put them in Verjuice, and so barrel them up.

Goofe Boiled.

Take them being powder'd, and fill their bellies with Oatmeal, being first steeped steeped in warm Milk, then mingle it with some Beef-suit, minced Onions and Apples, feafon'd with Cloves, Mace, some sweet Herbs minced, and Pepper, fasten the neck and vent, boil them, and serve them with Brewis, and Collistowers or Cabbage, running it over with beaten Butter; thus you may dress any fort of Sea-foul.

Hashes several ways.

First, of raw Beef, mince it very Small with Beef-fuet or Lard, some sweet-Herbs, Pepper, Salt, some Cloves and Mace, Chefnuts or Almonds blanch'd, put in whole, some Nutmeg, and a whole Onion or two, and stew it in a Pipkin with some strong Broth two hours, put a little Claret to it, and serve it on Sippits, blowing off the fat, and garnish it with Lemmon or Barberries.

Otherways.

Cut your Beef, fat and lean, into Gobbets, as big as a Pullets Egg, and put them into aPot or Pipkin, with some Carrots car into pieces as big as a Walnut, some whole Onions, some Parsnips, large K 5 Mace-

Mace, a faggot of sweet Herbs, Salt, Pepper, Cloves, with as much Water and Wine as will cover them, let them thus stew three hours.

Hashes of Neats-feet, or any feet, as Calves, Sheep, Deer, Hogs, Pigs, or Lambs.

Boil them very tender, and being cold, mince them very small, then put Currans to them, beaten Cinnamon, hard Eggs minc'd, Capers, sweet Herbs minced small, Cloves, Mace, Sugar, White-wine, Butter, sliced Lemmon or Orange, sliced Almonds, grated Bread, Saffron, Grapes or Barberries, so serve them on fine carved Sippets.

Hashing of any Feet.

Mince them small, and stew them with White-wine, Butter, Currans, Raisins, Marrow, Sugar, Prunes, Dates, Cinamon, Mace, Ginger, Pepper, and serve them on toasts of fried Manchet.

Hares roafted without and with the Skin.

Take an Hare and flay him, then lard him with small lard, stick him with with Cloves, and make a Pudding in his Belly, with grated Bread, grated Nutmeg, Cinamon beaten, Salt, Currans, Eggs, Cream and Sugar; having made it stiff, fill the belly of the Hare, and so roast it. If you will have your Pudding green, colour it with Spinnage; if yellow, with Saffron. Let the Sauce be made of beaten Cinna mon, Nutmeg, Ginger, Pepper, Prunes, Currans, a little grated Bread, Sugar and Cloves, all boiled up as thick as Water-gruel.

If you roast an Hare with the Skin on, draw out the Bowels, and make a farling or stuffing of all manner of sweet Herbs minced very small, then roul them in fome Butter, and make a ball thereof, put it into the belly. and prick it up close, and baste it with Butter; and being almost rousted, flay off the Skin, and Itick on some Cloves on the Body, bread it with fine grated Manchet, Flower and Cinamon; froth it up, and dish it on Sawce, made of grated Bread, Claret-wine, Wine-vine_ gar, Cinamon, Ginger, and Sugar, be. ing boiled up to an Indifferency. If o Ipocras.

To make good Ipocras, you must take a gallon of Wine, three ouces of Cinamon, two ounces of sliced Ginger, an ounce of Nutmegs, a quarter of an ounce of Cloves, twenty corns of Pepper, an handful of Rosemary-Flowers, three pounds of Sugar, and two quarts of Cream.

Fellies of several colours for all sorts of Souft Meats, and to be eaten alone.

Take four pair of Calves-feet, a Knuckle of Veal, a good fleshy Capon, take out the bones and fat, and cast them into fair water, shift them three or four times in a day and night, then boil them in three gallons of fair water till fix quarts be wasted, then strain it into an earthen pan, let it cool, then take off the fat a top, and pare the bottom; then dissolve it again in broth, and divide it into four equal parts, every part in a particular Vessel; put a little Saffron into one of them, into another Cutcheneel, into a third Turnfole, let the last alone to its own natural White-

Whiteness; let each Vessel have a quart of White-wine, and the juice of two-Lemmons. To the white felly add one race of Ginger pared and fliced, and three blades of large Mace. To the red Jelly two Nutmegs, and the like quantity of Cinamon and Ginger. To the yellow or Amber-colour the same spices, and the like quantity; and to the Turnsole the same with a few Cloves. Then take eighteen whites of Eggs, and beat them with fix pound of double refined Sugar, beaten small and stirred together in a Tray, or great Bafon; with a rowling pin, divide it equally into four parts, and distribute one to each Veffel, being well mixed with Wine, and a little Musk, or Ambergriece, stir it about with your Felly. Then fet on your Jelly again on a fine Charcoal fire, and let it flew near an hour, then make it boilup a little, fo take it off; being somewhat cold, strain it, and so let it stand for your use, casting it into what mould you pleafe.

Land

Landor Sea fowl, how to boil them.

Half roast the Fowls, sticking on them some Cloves as they roast, save the Gravy, and when they are half roasted, put them into a Pipkin with the Gravy, some Claret-wine, as much strong broth as will cover them, Mace, Cloves, Pepper, Ginger, some fryed Onions and Salt; stew all well together and serve them on carved sippets.

Land-Fowl, the smaller fort, how to boil, as Plovers, Quails, Blackbirds, Rails, Thrushes, Snites, Wheat-ears, Larks, and Sparrows.

Take them and truss them, or cut off the Heads and Legs, and boil them, scum your Pipkin, and put therein large Mace, White-wine, Currans, well pickt and washt, Dates, Marrow, Pepper, and Salt; being well stewed, dish them on carved Sippets; thicken the broth with strained Almonds, Rosewater, and Sugar; garnish them with Lemmons, Barberries and grated bread.

Mar-

Marrow-Pudding in a Dish baked, garnished with Puff-paste.

Take the Marrow of four Marrowbones, two French breads, half a pound of Raisins of the Sun ready boiled and cold, Cinnamon a quarter of an ounce beaten, two grated Nutmegs, a quarter of a pound of Sugar, the like of Dates, Sack half a pint, Rosewater a quarter of a pint, ten Eggs, two grains of Amber-greece. Now take a deep large dish. and lay a lay of fliced French-bread therein, and strew it with Cimamon, Nutmeg, and Sugar, mingled together, also sprinkle the slices of bread with Sack and Rosewater, and then some Raifins of the Sun, fliced Dates, and good big pieces of Marrow, and thus make two or three lays of the aforefaid ingredients, with most Marrow on the top; then take two quarts of Cream. and strain it with half a quarter of fine Sugar, with about a spoonful of Salt, and twelve Eggs, fix of the whites being taking away, then fet the Dish into the Oven, temperate, and not too hot, and and bake it very white, then strew some Sugar on, and so serve it.

Mutton Hashed the French way. Take a Shoulder of Mutton, and roaft it three quarters, and fave the Gravy; flice the one half and mince the other, and put it into a Pipkin, with the Shoulder-blade, put to it some strong broth of Mutton or Beef-gravy, large Mice, some Pepper, Salt, a big Onion or two, a fagget of sweet Herbs, and a pint of White-wine; stew them all together close covered, then take away the fat, and put some Oyster-liquor thereunto; add also three pints of great Oysters parboiled in their own liquor; these Materials being well stewed down, dish up your meat, pouring your liquor thereon, and uppermost lay your stewed Oysters, sliced Lemmon and fine carved fippets.

Marinated Mullet, Bace, Gurnet, or Rochet:

Take a Gallon of White-wine-Vinegar, a quart of fair water, a good handful of Bay-leaves, as much Rosemary, and a quarter of a pound of beaten Pepper; put these together, and let them boil softly, season it with Salt, then fry your Fish in the best Sallet-oyl; this done, put the Fish in an earthen Vessel or Barrel: lay the Bay-leaves and Rosemary between every layer of the Fish, and pour the broth upon it; when it is cold, close up the Vessel.

Mullet Fried.

Scale, draw and scotch them, after washing wipe them dry, and flowre them, fry them in Clarifyed Butter; being fried, put to them some Claret-wine, sliced Ginger, grated Nutmeg, an Anebove, Salt, and sweet Butter beaten up thick, but first rub the dish with a Clove of Garlick: Chuse the least Mullets to fry.

Mullets or Bace baked.

Scale, garbedge, wash and dry the Bace or Mullet very well, lard it with Salt-Eel, season it and make a Pudding for it of grated Bread, sweet Herbs, and fresh Eel minced, put also the Yolks of hard Eggs, Anchove washt and minced ced very small, some Nutmeg and Salt, fill the belly herewith, or cut it into quarters, and season them with Nutmeg, Ginger and Pepper, lay them in your Pye, and make Balls, and lay them on the Pieces of Mullet, then put on some Capers, Prawnsor Cockles, Yolks of Eggs minced, Butter, large Mace, and Barberries, close i up; being baked, cut it up and fill it with beaten Butter, and garnish it with sliced Lemmon. This is a very good way for Tench or Bream.

Mushrooms Fried

Blanch them and wash them clean; if they be large, quarter them, and boil them with Salt, Vinegar, and Water, sweet Herbs, large Mace, Cloves, Bay-leaves, and two or three Cloves of Garlick, then take them up, dry them, dip them in butter, and fry them in Claristed hutter, till they be brown; make your sauce for them of Claretwine, the juice of two or three Oranges, Salt, Butter, the juice of Horse-radish-roots beaten and strain'd, sliced Nutmeg

Nutmeg and Pepper, put these into a Frying-pan, with the Tolks of two or three Eggs, with some Mutton-gravy, beat or shake them well together in the pan, that they curddle not, then rub a dish with Garlick, and lay the Mush-rooms therein, garnisht with Oranges and Lemmons.

Mushrooms stewed.

Take them fresh gathered, and cut off the end of the stalk; and as you peel them, put them in a dish with White-wine; after they have lain half an hour, drain them from the Wine, and put them between two Dishes, and fet them on a foft fire without any liquor, and when they have stewed a while, pour away the liquor that proceeded from them, then put to your Mushrooms a sprig of Time, a whole Onion, four or five corns of whole Pepper, two or three Cloves, a piece of an Orange, a little Salt, and some sweet Butter, with some pure gravy of Mutton; cover them and fet them on a gentle fire, so let them stew softly till they are enough nough and very tender; when you dishthem, blow off the fat from them, and take out the Time, the Spice, and Orange, then wring in the juice of a Lemmon, and strew some Nutme; thereon.

Neats-Tongues boiled.

Salt a Tongue twelve hours, or boil it in water and falt till it be tender, blanch it, serve it on carved Sippets and Brewis, with boiled Turnips and Onions, run it over with beaten Butter, and garnish it with Barberries or Grapes.

Neats-Touques Stewed.

Take a Tongue and put it a stewing between two Dishes, being raw and fresh, put some strong broth and White-wine to it, with some whole Cloves, Mace, and whole Pepper, some Capers, Salt, with Roots, as Carrots or Turnips, and stew them altogether leisurely the space of two hours or more, then blanch it, and put some Marrow to it, give it a walm or two, then serve it on Sippets sinely carved, and strew on some minced Lemmon, Barberries or Grapes, and run it over with beaten Butter: garnish your Dish with Manchets finely searced

Neats-Tongues, an excellent way how to dry them.

Take Salt beaten very fine, and falt-Peter, of each a like quantity, rub your Tongues well with the Salts, and cover them all over with it; and as it wastes, supply them with more, then rowl them in Bran, and dry them before a foft fire; before you boil them, lay them in Pump-water one night, and boil them in Pump-water.

Neats-Tongues roafted.

Take a Neats-Tongue tenderly boiled, blanched, and cold, cut a hole in the butt-end, and mince the meat that you take out, then put some sweet Herbs finely minced to it, with a minced Pippin or two, the Yolks of Eggs sliced, some minced Beef-suet, beaten Ginger and Salt, fill the Tongue and stop the end with a Caul of Veal, lard it and roast it, make your Sawce with Butter, Nutmeg, Gravy and Juice of Oranges: Garnish the Dish with sliced Lemmon and Barberries.

Take a fresh Neats-Tongue, boil, blanch, and mince it, then mince four pound of Beef suet by it felf, mingle them together, and season them with an ounce of Cloves and Mace beaten, some Salt, half an Orange preserved, and a little Lemmon-peel, shred with a quarter of a pound of Sugar, four pound of Currans, a little Verjuice and Resewater, and a quarter of a pint of Sack, stir all together, and fill your Pyes.

A Norfolk-Fool.

Take a quart of thick sweet Cream, and set it a boiling in a clear scoured Skillet, with some large Mace, and whole Cinnamon; having boiled a ltttle while, take the Yolks of sive or six Eggs beaten well, and put to it; being off the fire, take out the Cinnamon and Mace; the Cream being pretty thick, slice a fine Manchet into thin slices, as many as will cover the bottom of the Dish; and then pour on the Cream; trim the Dish with carved Sippets, and stick it with sliced Dates, and scrape Sugar all over it.

Oysters Stewed.

Take a pottle of large Oysters, parboil them in their own liquor, then wash them from the dregs in warm water, and put them in a Pipkin, with a good big Onion or two, and five or fix blades of large Mace, a little whole Pepper, a sliced Nutmeg, a quarter of a pint of White-wine, as much Winevinegar, a quarter of a pound of sweet-Butter, with a little Salt, few them together on a fost fire the space of half an hour, then dish them on Sippets of French-bread, fliced L'mmon on that, and Barberries, then run them over with beatten Butter.; and garnish the Dish with grated Manchet Searced.

Oysters Fryed.

Strain the liquor from them, and parboil them in a Kettle, then dry and roul them in Flower, or make a batter with Eggs, Flower, a little Cream and Salt, dip them therein, and fry them in Batter. For the Sawce, boil the juice of three or four Oranges, some of their own liquor, a fliced Nutmeg and Clarer:

Claret; being boiled a little, put in a flice of Butter, beating it up thick; having warm'd the Dish, rub it with some Garlick, and lay thereon the Oyfters; garnishing the Dish with slices of Orange.

Oyster Pyes.

the cle

Parboil your Oysters in their own liquor, then take them out and wash them in warm water, dry them, and season them with Pepper, Nutmeg, Yolks of hard Eggs and Salt; the Pye being made, put a few Currans in the bottom, and lay on the Oysters with some sliced Dates in halfs, some large Mace, sliced Lemmon, Barberries and Butter, close it up, and bake it, then liquor it with White-wine, Sugar, and Butter.

Otherways.

Take a pottle of Oysters, being parboiled in their own liquor, beard and dry them, then season them with large Mace, whole Pepper, a little beaten Ginger, Salt, Butter, and Marrow, then close and bake it; then make a Lear with White-wine, Oyster-liquor, and and one Onion; boil these with a pound of Butter, minced Lemmon, and a sagget of sweet Herbs, and liquor the Pye therewith.

Oysters Pickled.

Take eight quarts of Oysters, and parboil them in their own liquor, then take them out and cleanse them in warm water, then wipe them dry; then take the liquor they were parboiled in, and clear it from the grounds into a large Pipkin, or Skillet; put to it a pottle of good White-wine, a quart of good White Wine-Vinegar, some large Mace, whole Pepper, and a good quantity of Salt; set it over the fire and boil it leasurely, scum it clean, and being well boiled, put the liquor into Barrels, that will hold a quart or more, and when it is cold, put in your Oysters, and close up the head.

Ox-cheecks baked in a Pye.

Being first cleansed from the slime, filth and blood, cut them in pieces, take out the bones, and season them with Pepper, Salt, and Nutmeg, then put put them in a Pye with a few whole Cloves, a little seasoning, slices of Butter and Bacon over all; bake them very tender, and liquor them with Butter and Claret-wine.

A Calves-head Pye.

Take a Calves-head, soak it well, and take out the brains, boil the head, and take out the bones; being cold, stuff it with sweet Herbs and hard Eggs chopped small, minced Bacon, and a raw Egg or two, Nutmeg, Pepper, and Salt; and lay in the bottom of the Pye minced Veal raw, and Bacon; then lay the Cheeks on it in the Pye, and sliced Bacon on that, then Spices, Butter and Grapes, or a Lemmon, then close it up, bake it, and liquor it with Butter only.

Puff-paste, the best way how to make it.
Take a pottle of Flower, mix it with cold water, half a pound of Butter, and the whites of five Eggs, work these together very well and stiff, then roul it out very thin, and put Flower under it and over it, then take near a pound pound of Butter, and lay it in bits all over it, then double it in five or fix doubles; this being done, roul it out the second time, and serve it as at the first, then roul it out and cut it into what form you please, and for what use, you need not fear the curse, for it will divide as often as you have doubled, ten or twelve times is enough for any use.

Panado's.

Boil fair water in a Skillet, put to it grated Bread or Cakes, good store of Currans, Mace, and whole Cinnamon; being almost boil'd, and indifferent thick, put in some Sack, or White-wine, Sugar, and some strained Yolks of Eggs. Otherways, with sliced Bread, Water, Currans, and Mace, and being well boiled, put to it some Sugar, White-wine, and Butter.

Poffet of Sack, Claret or White-wine, the best manner.

Take twenty Yolks of Eggs, with a little Cream, strain them and set them by; then have a clean scoured Skillet, and put into it a pottle of sweet Cream, and a good quantity of whole Cinnamon; set it a boiling on a soft Charcoal fire, and ftir it continually; the Cream having a good taste of the Cinnamon, put in the strained Eggs and Cream into your Skillet, stir them together, and give them a walm, then have in readiness some Sack or other Wine in a deep Bason, or Posset-cup, good store of fine Sugar, and some shced Nutmeg; the Sack and Sugar being warm, take out the Cinnamon, and pour your Eggs and Cream very high into the Bason, that it may spatter in it, then strew on Loaf-sugar.

L 2

Pumpion Pye.

Take a pound of Pumpion, and flice it; an handful of Time, a little Rosemary, sweet Marjoram stripped off the stalks, chop them small; then take Cinnamon, Nutmeg, Pepper, and a sew Cloves, all beaten; also ten Eggs; and beat them all together, with as much Sugar as you shall think Sufficient; then fry them like a Froise; and being fried.

then fill your Pye after this manner:
Take Apples sliced thin round ways, and lay a layer of the Froise; and another of the Apples, with Currans betwixt the layers; be sure you put in good store of sweet Butter before you close it. When the Pye is baked, take six Yolks of Eggs, some White-wine or Verjuice, and make a Caudle there-of-but not too thick; cut up the lid and put it in, and stir them well together whilst the Eggs and Pumpions are not perceived, and so serve it up.

Pig roafted with the Hair on.

Take a Pig and draw out the Entrails, Liver and Lights, draw him very clean at vent, and wipe him, cut off his Legs and truss him, and prick up the Belly close, Spit it, and lay it to the fire; have a care of scorching it; when it is a quarter roasted, the skin will rise up in blisters from the sless, then with your hands or knife, pull of the skin and hair; being cleanly flay'd, cut slashes down to the bones, baste it with Butter,

L 3

ter, or Cream, then bread it with grated White-bred, Currans, Sugar and Salt, all together, and thus baste it and dredg it till the Body be covered an inch thick, then the Pig being throughly roassed, draw it and serve it up whole, with Sauce made of Wine-Vinegar, whole Cloves, whole Cinnamon, and Sugar boiled to a Syrrup.

Pidgeons boiled.

Being trussed, put them into a Pipkin or Skillet, with some strong broth, or fair water, boil and scum them, then put in some Mace, a faggot of sweet Herbs, white Endive, Marygold-flowers and Sast, and being finely boiled, serve them on sippets; and garnish the Dish with Mace and white Endiveflowers.

Pike boiled.

Take your Pike and wash it clean, then truss it whole, round, with the tail in his mouth, and his back scotched, or cut in three pieces, and divide the middle piece into two; then boil it in Water, Salt and Vinegar, put it

not

not in till the liquor boil, and then make it boil apace, and that will crisp your Pike; but afterwards foftly. For the Sauce, put into a Pipkina pint of Whitewine, fliced Ginger, Mace, Dates quartered, a pint of large Oysters with their liquor, a little Vinegar and Salt, boil them a quarter of an hour, then mince a few sweet Herbs and Parfley, stew them. till half the liquor be confumed; the Pike being boiled, dishit, and garnish the Dish with grated White-bread or Ginger fine beaten, then beat up the Sauce with half a pound of Butter, minced Lemmon or Orange, and pour it on the Pike with Sppets.

Pike Stewed.

Take a Pike, flat it, and lay it in a Dish; when the blood is clean washed out, put to it as much White-wine as will cover it, and set it a stewing; when it boils, put in the Fish, and scum it, and put to it some large Mace, whole Cinnamon and some Salt; when thorowly stewed, dish it on sippets sinely carved.

The Pike

Pike Souc'd.

Draw and wash it clean from the blood and slime, then boil it in fair Water and Salt; when the liquor boils, put it to it, and boil it leasurely and simmering scason it savorly of the Salt, boil it not too much, nor in more water than will just cover it. If you intend to keep it long, put as much White-wine as Water, of both as much as will cover the Fish, some Wine-Vinegar, fliced Ginger, large Mace, Cloves and Some Salt; when it boils put in the Fish, Spices, and some Lemmon-peel, boil it quick, and not too much; then take it up in a Tray, and boil down the liquor to a. Jelly; lay some sliced Lemmon on it, pour on the liquor, and cover it up close; when you serve it in Jelly, melt some of the Jelly, and run it over therewith; garnish your Dish with Barberries and fliced Lemmon.

Pike Roasted.

Take a Pike, scour off the slime, and take out the Entrails, lard the back with pickled Herring, (you must have a sharp sharp Bodkin to make the holes to lard it) then take some large Oysters and Claret-wine; feason the Oysters with Pepper and Nutmeg, stuff the Belly with the Oysters, and intermix the stuffing with Rosemary, Time, Winter-favory, Sweet Marjoram, a little Onion and Garlick, fow these in the belly of the Pike; then take two sticks about the breadth of a lath, and with a packthread tye the Pike to the Spir, tye also along the fide of the Pike which is not defended with the Spit, Rosemary and Bays; baste the Pike with Butter and Claretwine; when it is roafted, rip up the Belly, and take out the Herbs quite away, boil up the Gravy with Butter, and dish it up.

Quaking Pudding.

Slice the Crum of a Penny-Manchet, and infuse it three or sour hours in a pint of scalding hot Cream, covering it close, then break the bread with a spoon very small, and put to it eight Ezgs (but sour whites) and beat them together very well, then season it with

L 5

Sugar,

Sugar, Rosewater and grated Nutmeg; if you think it too stiff, qualifie that fault with cold Cream, and beat them well together, then wet the Bag or Napkin, and flower it, put in the Pudding, and tye it hard; boil it half an hour, then dishit, and put Butter to it, Rosewater and Sugar, and so serve it to the Table.

Quince Pyes.

Make choice of fair Quinces to make your Pye withal, pare them very thin, and core them, and lay them within your paste; add thereunto two races of Ginger sliced, as much Cinnamon broken into bits, and eight or ten whole Cloves, lay these with the Quinces close packed, with as much refined Sugar as the Quinces weigh, close it up; and having toaked four or five hours in the Oven, take it out and ice it.

You may otherways make a Quince-Pye thus: Take a gallon of Flower, a pound and half of Butter, fix Eggs, thirty Quinces, three pound of Sugar, half an ounce of Cinnamon, the like quantity quantity of Ginger and Cloves, and fome Reservater, then make it into a Pye or Tart; when it is baked, strew on some double refined Sugar.

An excellent restorative for a weak

Take Clary, Dates, the pith of an Ox, and chop them together, put some Cream to them, Eggs, grated Bread, and a litle white Saenders, temper them all well together, fry them, and let it be the first thing you eat in a morning. You may also take the leaves of Clary and Nepe, and fry them for Breakfast.

A most incompanable Broth for a sick

Procure a good fleshy Capon, and take the flesh from the Bones; orchop it in pieces very small, and not wash it, then put it in a Rose Still, with fliced Lemmon peel, Wood-sorrel, with other restorative Herbs, being distilled, give the sick person to drink.

Rice Tart.

Boil your Rice in Milk or Cream; being being tenderly boiled, pour it into a Dish, and season it with Nutmeg, Ginger and Cinnamon, Pepper, Salt, Sugar and the Yolks of six Eggs, put it in the Tart, with the juice of Orange, close it, and when it is baked, scrape Sugar thereon.

Rice Cream.

Take a quart of Cream, two handfuls of Rice-flower, and a quarter of a pound of Sugar, mingle the Flower and the Sugar very well together, and put it in the Cream, then beat the Yolk of an Egg with a little Rosewater, put it to the Cream and stir them all together, set it over a quick fire, and keep it continually stirring till it be as thick as Pap.

Another excellent and rare Cream.

Take a pound of Almond-paste, fine beaten with Rosewater, mingle it with Cream, six Eggs, a little Sack, half a pound of Sugar, and some beaten Nutmeg, strain them, and put them in a clean scoured Skillet, and set it on a soft fire, stir it continually, and being well incorporated, dish it and serve it up with juice of orange, Sugar, and flick it full of candied Pistaches.

Several excellent Sawces, for feveral Dishes, and first for green Geese.

Take the juice of Sorrel mixed with scalded Goosberries, beaten Butter and Sugar, then serveit on Sippets. Or fill their Bellies with Goosberries, and fo roast them, then take them out, and mingle them with Sugar, Butter, Vinegar, Cinnamon, and served on Sippets.

For Land-foul, take boiled Prunes, and strain them with the blood of the Fowl, Cinnamon, Ginger and Sugar, boil them to an indifferent thickness; and serve it in Sawcers, with the Gravy of the Fowl.

For roaft Mutton divers forts of Sawces, I. Gravy, Capers, Samphire, and Salt, stew them well together. 2. Water, Onion, Claret-wine, fliced Nutmeg and Gravy boiled. 3. Whole Onions stewed in Gravy, White-wine, Pepper, pickled Capers, Mace, and three or four flices of Lemmon. 4. Take VineVinegar, Butter and Currans, put them into a Pipkin with sweet Herbs finely minced, the Yolks of two Hard Eggs, some Cinnamon, Ginger, Sugar, Salt, with some of the meat minced very small, and boiled up with the aforesaid ingredients. 5. Salt, Pepper, juice of Oranges, and an Anchove. 6. Preserve the liquor of the Oysters you stuff your Mutton with, and add thereto Onions, Claret, Capers, or Broombuds, Gravy, Nutmeg and Salt boiled together. These for a taste, for brevity, I shall omit a many more for Mutton, which might be here inferted.

For roaft Veal several Sawces. 1. Gravy, Claret, Nutmeg, Vinegar, Butter, Sugar and Oranges. 2. Only Vinegar and Butter. 3. All manner of fweet Herbs chopped small, with the Yolks of three or four Eggs, and boil them in Vinegar and Butter, a lew bread crumbs Currans, beaten Cinnamon, Sugar and a whole Clove or two, put it under the Veal, with flices of Orange and Lemmon to garnish the Diffe a nommod to some to parte

Fur

For Red-deer. 1. The Gravy and sweet Herbs chopped small and boiled together. 2. White-bread boiled in water pretty thick without spice, and put to it some Butter, Vinegar and Sugar.

3. The juice of Oranges and Lemmons, with the Gravy. A Gallendine Sauce I have already described in the roasting of Red-deer.

For Rabbets several Sauces. 1. Beaten Butter with the Liver, and Parsley cut very small. 2. Sage and Parsley minced, roul it in a ball of Butter, and fluff the Belly therewith.

For roast Hens divers Sauces. 1. Take the Yolks of three hard Eggs minced small, Salt, grated Bread, Gravy, Juice of Oranges, with Lemmon-peel shred small. 2. Gravy and Claret boiled with a piece of an Onion, Nutmeg and Salt. 3. Oyster-liquor, an Anchove or two, Nutmeg and Gravy, and rub the Dish with a Clove of Garlick.

Sauces for roast Chicken. Butter and Vinegar boiled together with a little Sugar, then make thin sops of Bread,

Bread, then lay the roast Chicken on them and serve them up.

For roast Pidgeons, or Stock-doves.

1. Boil'd Parlly mineed, and put amongst some Butter and Vinegar beaten up thick.

2. Vine-leaves roasted with the Pidgeons, minced and put into Claret with Salt, Butter and Gravy boiled together.

3. Mince Onions boiled in Claret-wine almost dry, then put to it Nutmeg, Sugar, Gravy of the Fowl, and a little Pepper.

An excellent way to roast Salmon.

Take a Rand or Jole, cut it into four pieces, and season it with a little Nutmeg and Salt, stick a few Cloves, and put it on a small spit, put between it some Bay-leaves, and stick it with little sprigs of Rosemary, roast it and baste it with Butter, save the Gravy, and add to it for Sauce some Vinegar, sweet Butter, and some slices of Orange.

Salmon Fried.

Take a Jole, Chine, or Rand, and fry it in Clarified Butter; being stiff and crisp fryed, make Sauce with a little little Claret-wine, sweet Butter, grated Nutmeg, slices of Orange, and Oyster-liquor, stew them altogether, and pour on the Sauce, and on that, Parsly, Ellick-sander and Sage-leaves fried in Butter.

Soust Veal, Lamb, or any joynt of Mutton, Kid, Fawn or Venison.

Bone a breast of Veal, and soak it well from the blood, then wipe it dry and season the side of the breast with beaten Nutmeg, Ginger, some sweet Herbs minced fmall, whole Corianderseed, minced Lemmon-peel and Salt, and lay some broadslices of sweet Lard over the seasoning, then roul it into a Collar, and bind it up in a white clean cloth, put it into boiling liquor, scum it well, and put in sliced Ginger, sliced Nutmeg, Salt, Fennel, Parsley; being almost boiled, put in a quart of Whitewine, and when it is quite boiled, take it off, and put in slices of Lemmon, the peel of two Lemmons whole, and a dozen Bay-leaves, boil it close covered, that the fouce may look white.

Taffety .

Taffety Tart.

First, Wet your paste with Butter, and cold water, roul it very thin, then lay Apples in lays, and betwen every lay of Apples strew some sine Sugar, and some Lemmin-peel cut very small; you may also put some Fennel-seed to them, let them bake an hour or more, then ice them with Rosewater, Sugar and Butter beaten together, and wash them over with the same, strew more sine Sugar over them, and put them into the Oven again; this done, you may serve them hot or cold.

Venifon how to recover when tainted.

Take a clean cloth and wrap your Venison therein, then bury it in the Earth one whole night, and it will will take away the ill scent or savour.

To make Beef, Ram or Mutton pass for Venison.

Take your Beef, &c. and dip it in Pigs-blood, or any new blood, then take Small-beer and Vinegar, and parboil it therein; let it steep all night, then then put some Turnsole to it; when it is baked a good judgment shall not discernit from Red or Fallow-deer.

Warden Tarts.

Take twenty good Wardens, pare them and cut them into your Tart, and put to them two pound of refined Sugar; twenty whole Cloves, a quarter of an ounce of Cunnamon broke into little bits, and three races of Ginger pared and fliced thin; then close up the Tart and bake it; it will require five hours baking; then ice it with a quarter of a pound of double refined Sugar, Rosewater and Butter.

Thus Ladies and Gentlwomen I have cursorily ran thorow the whole Body of the Art of Cookery; I have only toucht here and there upon some excellent Receipts, and now much in fashion, leaving it to your industry to supply my deficiency: I shall now proceed to the rest of those accomplishments which best become a Gentlewoman.

A Bill of Fare of suitable Meat for every Month in the Year.

fanuary.

1. Brawn and Mustard.

2. Two boiled Capons in Wite-broth.

3. A Turky roasted.

4. A Shoulder of Mutton hasht.

7. Two Geese boiled.

6. Goose roasted.

7. Ribs or Surloyn of Beef.

8. Minced Pyes.

9. A Loyn of Veal.

10. A Pasty of Venison.

11. A Marrow-pye.

12. Roafted Capons.

13. Lamb.

14. Woodcocks, Partridges with smaller Birds.

Second Courfe.

I. A Souft Pig.

2. A Warden Pye.

3. Dried Neats-tongues.

4. A Souft Capon.

5. Pickled Oysters and Mushrooms together. 6. Stur-

A Guide to the Female Sex.

237

6. Sturgeon.

7. A Goose, or Turkey-Pye.

February.

1. A Chine of roast-Pork.

2. Veal or Beef roafted.

3. A Lamb-Pye and Mince-Pyes.

4. A couple of Wild Ducks.

5. A couple of Rabbets.

6. Fried Oysters.

7. A Skirrot.

Second Courfe.

1. A whole Lamb roafted.

2. Three Pidgeons.

3. A Pippin- Pye.

4. A Jole of Sturgeon.

5. A cold Turky-Pye.

March.

1. Neats-tongue and Udder.

2. Boil'd Chickens.

3. A Dish of stew'd Oysters.

4. A Dish of young Rabbets.

5. A Grand Sallet.

Second Courfe.

1. A Dish of Soles, or Smelts. 2.

2. Marinate Flounders.

3. A Lambstone-Pye.

4. An hundred of Asparagus.

5. A Warden-Pye.

April.

1. Green Geese, or Veal and Bacon.

2. Haunch of Venison roasted.

3. A Lumber-Pye.

4. Rabbets and Tarts

Second Courfe.

1. Cold Lamb.

2. Cold Neats-tongue Pye.

3. Salmon, Lobsters and Prunes.

4. Asparagus.

May.

I. Boild Chickens.

2. Roast-Veal.

3. Roafted Capons.

4. Rabbets.

Second Courfe.

r. Artichoak-Pye hot.

2. Westphalia Bacon and Tarts.

3. Sturgeon, Salmon and Lobsters.

4. A

4. A Dish of Sparagrass. 2011000 A

5. A Tanfier over and inter

Fune.

1. A Neats-Tongue, or Leg of Mutton and Colliflowers. and and and

2. A Steak-Pyerd Dunto to coll ah .a

3. A Shoulder of Mutton.

4. A fore-quarter of Lambi gra A

5. A Dish of Pease.

Second Course

1. Sweet-bread Pye. Though! A

2. Capon.

3. Goosberry-Tart.

4. Strawberries and Cream. Or Strawberries, White-wine, Rose-water and Sugar.

1. Westphalia Ham and Pidgeons.

2. A Loyn of Veal. VALUI MEST A .A

3. A Venison Pasty

4. Roast Capons.

A. Creams

Second Courfe.

1. Pease or French beans to and A . s

240 The Gentlewomans Companion, or 2. A Codling-Tart. 3. Artechoaks, or a Pye made thereof. 4. Roast Chickens. August. 1. Calves-head and Bacon. 2. An Olio, or grand boil'd meat. 3. A Haunch of Venison roasted. 4. A Pig roafted. Second Courfe. T. Marinate Smelts. 2. A Pidgeon-Pye. 3. Roast Chickens. 4. A Tart. 5. Some Creams and Fruit. September. 1. Capon and White-broth. 2. Neats tongue and Udder roafted. 3. A Powder'd Goofe. 4. A roaft Turky. Avo. 1 Seocnd Cour [e. 1. A Potato-Pye.

2. Roast Partridges.

3. A Dish of Larks. dans To 5 109

A Guide to the Female Sex.

217

4. Creams and Fruit.

October.

1. Roast Veal.

00

2. Two brand Geese roasted.

3. A Grand Sallet.

4. Roasted Capons.

1. Pheasants, Pouts and Pidgeons.

2. A Dish of Quails, or Sparrows.

3. A Warden-Pye, Tarts, or Custards.

November.

1. A Shoulder of Mutton and Oysters.

2. A Loyn of Veal.

3. Geese roasted.

4. A Pasty of Venison.

Second Courfe.

1. Two Herns, one larded.

2. A Souft Turbut.

3. Two Pheasants, one larded.

4. A Roll of Beef.

5. A Souft Mullet and Base.

6. Jellies and Tarts.

M

Decem-

December.

- I. Stew'd broth of Mutton and Marrow-bones.
- 2. Lambs head and White broth.
- 3. A Chine of Beef roasted.
- 4. Mince-Pyes.
- 5. A roast Turkey stuck with Cloves.
- 6. Two Capons, one larded.

Second Courfe.

- 1. A young Lamb or Kid.
- 2. Two brace of Patridges.
- 3. Ballonia Saufages, Anchoves, Mufhrooms, Caviare, and pickled Oyfters, in a Dish together.
- 4. A Quince-Pye.
- 5. Half a dozen of Woodcocks.

Bills of Fare for fasting days or Lent; Out of these following Dishes you may compose what Messes you please of seweral sorts and kinds.

Oysters, if in Season. Pole of Ling. Green-fish and Eggs. Prauns Butter'd, or Craw-fish. Pike boil'd. Carp stew'd with Oysters. Soles fried. Spitchcock Eels

Eels roasted. Fried Smelts. Salmon, Lobsters and Sturgeon. Butter'd Eggs. Barley-broth, or Rice-pottage. Stew'd or fried Oysters. Boil'd Gurnet. Hadducks, fresh Cod, or Whitings. Eel or Carp Pye. Soust Turbut. Potato's baked, or Oyster-Pyes. Butter'd Crabs. Fried Flounders. Joles of fresh Salmon. Fried Turbut. Fried Skirrets. Souft Conger; with what else your own Judgment shall think proper for that Seafon.

Thus Ladies I have given you an Essay, or small Pattern of Cookery, not desiring to tie you too strictly to the observation of those Rules I have here laid down for your imitation; but defire to give your fancy all convenient liberty in correcting what you may find amis herein. There are many excellent Books in Cookery already extant, to which I shall refer you, and your own ingenious experiments in the amending what in this you find erroneous, and that you may know (though a Woman) I am not Ignorant of that Tongue I have advised you to learn; M 2 give give me leave to quote an Ancient Poet very applicable to this purpose.

16

—Si quid novisti rectus istis Candidus imperti, si non hisutere mecum.

If thou know'st ought than this more right or wise,
Impart it freely, or let this suffice.

Now because I have promised to give an Essay to every thing which concerns the virtuous and good Education of young Ladies and Gentlewomen, I shall endeavour their Instruction in the most considerable matters of Physick and Chyrurgery, Candying, Preserving and Distilling.

An Introduction to Physick and Chyrurgery.

A Sit is a very commendable quality in Gentlewomen, whether young or old, to visit the Sick; so it is impossible to do it with that charity some stand in need of, without some knowledge.

ledg in Physick, and the several operations of Herbs and Spices: But since it will take up too much room to insert here what may make you a compleat Herbalist, I shall refer you to such who have largely treated on that Subject; viz Mr. Gerherd, and Mr. Parkinson, with many more expert in the knowledg of Vegetables. Wherefore since the knowledg of sundry sorts of Spices is very requisite both for persons diseased and in bealth, I shall begin with them.

Pepper is a spice of the most common use, hot and dry to the fourth degree almost. The black is that which is generally coveted; but inconsiderately by the younger sort of people, it being hurtful to them, though comfortable to old Age. When you use it, beat it not too small, for fear of inflaming the blood, otherwise it cutteth gross slegm, dispelleth Crudities, and helpeth Digestion.

The next thing, which is hotter than Pepper, is Ginger; not that it is really so, but because the biting heat of

M 3

Ginger

Ginger is more lasting and durable. This spice is not so meh used in dreffing meat, as the other; however it is very good for concoction, and opens obstructions, and is very expedient for the expulsion of Wind. Green Ginger in the Indies preserved, is excellent good for a watry and windy stomach, if taken tasting; the better fort is unfleaky, and so clear that you may almost see through it; but there is little good made in England.

Cloves is an excellent Spice for the Head, Heart, Stomach, and the Eyes, which are much benefited thereby, and Nature strengthned. In Swoonings and Fainting-fits they are very good, or against the Plague, or any other infectious disease whatsoever, or fluxes of the belly proceeding from cold Humours. They are good against strengthning the retentive faculty, and sweetning the breath; but let young Sanguine, and Cholerick Complettions use them and all other Spices very sparingly.

Natmeg is bot and dry in the second degree, degree, and is acounted a Spice of the like nature and property, with what are before mention'd. It is astringent, and good for Flegmatick Constitutions, cold Diseases and Fluxes. Nutmegs whilst green and covered over with an busk or shell like our Walnuts, are preserved in the Indies as Ginger is, and are very comfortable to the Head and Stomach.

The covering of the Nutmeg is the Mace, which partakes of the same nature with it, strengthning the Animal parts; and it is good against Fluxes and fpitting of Blood.

of a Tree growing in the Indies, and is accounted to be hot and dry in the third degree. This Spice, by reason of its fragrancy and palatable taste, may justly chalenge the pre-cellency of most other Spices; it comforteth the Spirits, and opens obstructions both in Men and Women; it helpeth a Woman in her delivery, furthereth Urine, and is good for Concoction.

We have a Spice growing here at M. 4. home home called Saffron, which need not give place to any of the former; it is bot in the second and dry in the first degree: It is a great Cordial, and a help against obstructions; it is good against the Jaundies, and unstuffs the pipes of the Lungs: It is good to bring down the Menstruum and facilitates the Birth, if taken moderately. And fince I have spoken of a thing of our own growth, let me add another, which is Honey, bot and dry is the second degree, and is better boiled than raw; it is very restorative and therefore good against Consumptions and Phlegmatick Constitutions, but dangerous to be used much by hot Complexions, for thereby it is soon converted into Cheler. The best is very sweet, pleasant of smell, of a clear and yellowish colour, pretty fliff and firm, and yieldeth but little scum on the top when boiled. Gardenboney is the best, and is clarified by adding a little water to it, about the fourth part, and so scum it while any froth ariseth, or till the water be evaporated, which is known by the bubbles rifing from from the bottom; if you will have it more pure, put into every pound of Honey the white of an Egg, and afterwards scum it again in the boiling; then use it against all pectoral insimities, as the Cough, shortness of Breath, the Pleurisie, & e.

Sugar is the next thing we treat of, which is generally esteemed and used, and now more than ever; since the Ancients knew not the right way of preparing it as it is now-a-days.

Sugar is neither so but and dry as Honey; the brownest or coarsest is most cleansing, and is good for abstertions in diseases of the Breast or Lungs; but as it is opening and cleansing, so the immoderate use thereof is dangerous; for it will rot the Teeth and taint the Breath, ingender Jaundies and Consumptions; and Physicians verily believe, that the major part of those who die of a Consumption in the City (the constantly great numbers whereof may be seen in the Weekly Bills of Morrality) are such who eat Confestions, and such as like sweet things immoderately.

M 5

And

And fince I have spoken of Sugar, pray take special notice of this remark, That the most part of our finest Sugar, and which is most covered, is refined and whitened by the means of the Lee of Lime; how prejudicial that may be to the Body, I will leave it to the Rational to consider.

Thus I have given you a small touch of the nature of Spices; I think I need not acquaint you, that we have here at home in our own Gardens many excellent Aromatical Plants, fuch as Refemary, Lavender, Tyme, Savory, Sage, Mint, Penny-royal, Bafil, Sweet Cerfuel, Avens, Angellica, with many more which you may find in Culpeper's English Physician, with their nature, use, and disposition;

The great plenty we have of these excellent Plant:, hath made many judicious persons admire, that being supplied at home with such admirable Simples, we should hunt so eagerly after Outlandish Spices, which by difficulty of transportation, length of way, and carelesness of the Merchant, are frequently imported rotten, or Worm-eaten; or so long before they come to our hands, that they have lost half their virtue.

What is to be observed by a Gentlewoman before she undertakes the administration of Physick.

The first inconvenience you must shun (which I have observed in most Physical Practitioners) is the vulgar error of not suffering the Diseased or Sick person to change his Linnen often; and I know not by what unreasonable prescription they will not suffer a Diseased Female to change her Head-cloaths, till it too sensibly offend the Noses of the Visitants. Their common objection is, That the sick by that means may catch cold; and next, That their shifting much weakneth them.

To this I answer, That it is only the foolish conjecture and groundless fear of some old Dotard of our Sex; for a good fire will easily prevent catching of cold; and in the next place, their often shifting hath apparently proved the means of their strengthning; besides it much discourageth and dejecteth the sick person to lie in foul Linnen, making them even loath themselves in that stinking condition. To make this the more easily understood, take notice, that in bumane Bodies there is a threefold Concoction; the first in the Stomach, which is commonly called the Chyle, and hath for its excrement that which is convey'd to Colon or the great Gut; the second Concoction is in the Liver, and hath for its excrement the Urine; the last is called Nutrition, and hath for its excrement certain fuliginous vapours, which by infensible transpiration do breath out themselves through the pores of the Body, and by the fiveat, which is apparent to the Eye. Now in times of Sickness, especially in all forts of Feavors (which are the usual difeases which invade English Bodies) this last excrement doth very much abound, and doth extreamly and speedis. ly foul the Linnen of the fick perfin; for which cause reason tells us, that the Linnen

Instring

Linnen should be often shifted, especially if they sweat much, left the sweat continuing about the body, it should be drawn in by the same way it had its passage out. For know, the Arteries of the body have a double motion, one whereby they expel the Excrements, already mention'd; and the other whereby they attract into the body the ambient Air to refresh the blood; Now observe, whatsbever Air is next unto them, whether good or bad, they draw it in; and therefore if this foul sweaty. Dinnen do lie about, or upon them, undoubtedly the noifome dirs will be drawn in by the Arteries, and so prolong the distemper. To make further proof thereof. I have heard it reported by an eminent Physician, that let any person newly come out of the Bath go into a place where quantity of dust is rais'd, and he shall instantly feel an universal pricking over his whole body, which is nothing else but the Atoms of dust drawn in by the Arteries. By this then you may understand, that the skin corruption, and the pores and passages to be kept open and clean; for which cause it was that the Romans of old had their Bodies frequently rubbed with a course Cloth. Thus much I have added likewise, to let Gentlewomen see how much they are abused by their credulous and ignorant Nurses.

Should I add other observables, with the Symptomes of Diseases, I should swell this small Treatise into a greater Volume than is requisite, I shall therefore desist, and give you my collection (with my own observation) of the choicest Receipts in Physick and Chynurgery I could meet with in my strictest indigation.

re quantity of dult is raise

Choice

Choice and Experimental Obfervations in Physick and Chyrurgery, such which rarely fail'd any who made trial thereof.

A most approved Receipt for a Quartan Ague.

Procure a white flint-stone (for that will best endure the fire without breaking) and let it lie in a quick fire till it be red hot, then take some small beer and quenchit therein; when the sit is coming, let the diseased drink a good draught thereof, and another in the midst thereof; let this be done sour leveral days both in the sit, and when the sit is coming. This I have been credibly inform'd was a Receipt a Woman had her livelihood from in curring several when all other means proved inessectual.

For a sudden and violent bleeding at the Nose.

Take an Egg-shell and burn it to a coal, then pulverize or beat it to a fine powder, and let the person snuff it up his Nostrills, or take your two thumbs and press them hard against the Temples of the Bleeder, and you will admire how speedily it will divert the course of the blood. For those that are accustomed thus to bleed, let them make an ordinary Posset, taking off the curd, let the juice of Liverwort beaten be added thereunto, and so drink morning and evening.

To stop the Bleeding of a Wound:

Take Vervine dried, and reduce it to powder, or take the sole of an old stocking and burn it, put the ashes of the one, or powder of the other, to the wound, and it will leave bleeding.

An approved Medicine of London-Midwives to break and heal Womens fore Breasts.

Take red Sage and Oatmeal the finest

you can get, and boil them together in Spring-water, till you have boil'd them to a consistency, that is as thick as to make a Plaister; then add thereunto a sit proportion of Honey, having boil'd a little while together, take it off the sire, and whilst it is boiling bot, make it indifferent thick with the best Venice-Turpentine, then spread it on sine leather, or linnen-cloth, and laying it on the sore Breast it will sirst break to and afterwards perfectly heal it.

An excellent way to dry up a Womans Breaft.

Of Linfeed-Oyl and English Honey, take of each a penny-worth, of white-wax half a peny-worth, and half a quarter of a pound of sweet Butter, boil all these together, spread a Plaister thereof, and lay it on the breast Probatum est.

An infallible Receipt to increase Milk in Womens Breasts.

Take Chickens and make broth of them, then add thereunto Fennel and Parsnip-roots, then take the newest made made Butter you can procure, and butter the roots therewith; having so done let her eat heartily, and her expectations therein will be speedily satisfied.

Against a Stinking breath.

To prevent a Stinking-breath, you ought to keep your teeth very clean by rubbing them every morning with water and salt, which will also cure the Scurvy; you may if you please try Mr. Turners Dentrifices, which are every where much cried up. But if your breath be tainted, proceeding from some other cause, take Rosematry-leaves with the blissoms, if to be had, and seeth them in White wine, with a little Myrrh, and Cinamon, and you will find the effect to answer your defires if you use it often.

For a Cancer in a Womans Breast.

Take Goof-dung and Cellydony, stamp them well together, and lay them Plaister wise on the sore; this shall cleause the Cancer, kill the Worm, and heal the Sore. For a Cancer in the Month.

Mouth, take the juice of Plantane-Vinegar, and Rosewater, mingle together of each a like quantity, and wash the mouth often with them.

For young Children who by reason of the weakness of their Limbs can neither stand nor go.

Take Marjoram and Sage, of each a like quantity, beat them well together, then strain out the juice, and put it into a double Glass Vial, filling the Glass as full as it will hold; stop it then with paste very close all over, set it into an Oven, and there let it stand the time of an Houshold-loafs baking; taking it out, let it stand till it be cold; then breaking the paste round about it, fee if the juice be grown thick; if so, breast the Glass, and put what was therein contain'd, into a Gally-pot, and keep it. When you use it, take the quantity of two spoonfuls at a time, and as much Marrow of an Ox-leg, melt them together, and mingle them well, and both morning and evening anoint therewith (as warm as can be endur'd) the the tender parts of the Childs legs, knees and thighs, chafing them well with your hands; and in a short time (Deo volente) the Child will be able to go and stand; this Receipt hath been ever found successful.

An approved China-broth for a Consumption. 160

700

Take two Ounces of China root fliced thin, and let it besteept twentyfour hours in fair water, let it stand warm all the time close covered in an Earthen Pipkin, add thereunto a couple of Chickens, or a Cockerel, cleanly dreffed, to these put half a handful of Maiden-hair, the like quantity of fine leav'd grass, and Harts tongue; twenty fliced Dates, three or four blades of Mace, and the bottom of a Manchet; let all these stew together till there be but a quart of liquor left, then strain it and take all the flesh and bones, and beat them in a Stone Mortar, then strain out the juice into the aforefaid broth, then sweeten it with two ounces of powder'd Sugar-candy. Take hereof half a pint in the morning warm, and sleep after it if you can; you will not do amiss to add two drams of white and red Sanders to steep with your Chinaroot.

A most excellent Jelly for the Con-

Take a new kill'd Cock, scald him, and wash him clean; then take a Leg of Veal, and take away all the fat from it, and let them lie in water five or fix hours, then feeth them together in a gallon of Spring-water, scum clean the fat off; thus let it seeth over a soft fire till the liquor be half confumed; then put in a pottle of White-wine, and let it boil to a quart; add hereunto the whites of new-laid Eggs, clarifie it, and let it run through a Felly-bag, then fet it on the fire again, and put into it an ounce of gross Cinnamon, and a pound of fine Sugar, and let it run twice or thrice through a Felly-bag again; having made a felly hereof, eat thereof cold.

An excellent Comforter of the Stomach, and helper of Degestion.

Take two ounces of good old Conferve of Red-roses, of chosen Muthridate two dramms, mingle them together, and when you are going to bed eat thereof the quantity of an Haselnut. This will expel all flatulency or windiness off the Stomach, drives away raw humours, and venemous Vapors; helpeth Digestion, drieth the Rheum, and strengthneth the Sight and Memory.

A well-tried Medicine for the Corns on the Feet or Toes.

Pare your Corns well, then take a black Snail and bruise it, and put a drop or two thereof on the place grieved; adding thereto a little powder of Samphire; this I can assure you with constant use in a little time will take away the Corn.

An excellent Diet-drink for the Spring, to purge the Blood, and cleanse it.

Of Scurvy-grass take half a peck, BroodBroodlime, Water cresses, Acrimony, Maiden-hair, Liverwort, Borrage, Bugloss, Betony, Sage, sweet Marjoram, Sea-Wormwood, tops of green-Hops, Fumitory, of each a good handful; of Ivory, Harts-horn, and yellow Sanders, of each one ounce; Red dock-roots two ounces, Parsley, Fennel, Asparagus-roots of each an ounce, Raisins half a pound; boil these very well in a gallon of Beer, then stamp and strain them, and put it into three gallons of new Beer to work together.

to

ace

W.

A Remedy for the Dropsie, whe-

Take of the tops of red Mint, of Archangel, or blind Nettles, and red Sage, of either a small quantity, stamp them together, and strain the juice of them into some stale Ale, so much as will serve to drink morning and evening; do this for ten days together, and (God willing) it will essect the Cure.

were and boil ten

Another

Another for the Dropsie, which hath cured many a Person when they were left and for saken by Physicians.

Take green Broom and burn it in some clean place, that you may save the Ashes of it; take ten or twelve spoonful of the same Ashes, and boil them in a pint of White-wine, till the virtue thereof be in the Wine, then cool it, and drain the Wine from the dregs, and make three draughts of the Wine, one fasting in the Morning, the other at three in the Asternoon, and the other when you go to Bed; this seldom fails in its desired effect.

For the Web or Pin in the Eye.

Take the Gall of a Hare and clarified Honey, of each a like quantity, mingle them well together, and anoint the Web with a feather dipped in the same, and in three or four days it will be gone.

To cleanse the skin of the face, and make it look beautiful and fair.

Take Rosemary and boil it in White-

ere

t in fave

elve boil

the egs,

Time,

other

e 0-dom

ified

min-

the me, ll be

me ,

wine, with the juice of Erigan put thereunto, and wash your face therewith Mornings and Evenings. If your Face be troubled with heat, take Elder-flowers, Plantane, white Daisieroots, and Herb-Robert, and put these into running-water, and wash your Face therewith at night, and in the morning.

How to ripen and heal a Felon or Whitelef.

Take some white Flower and boil it in Claret wine to a Poultess, then spread it very thick, and apply it as hot as you can endure it, this will asswage the throbing pain of the Whiteless, break and heal it.

How to cure the bloody Flux.

There are two forts of Fluxes, the one proceedeth from the evil quality or temperament of the Liver, and is called in Latin, Fluxus Hepaticus; the other cometh from the great heat and distemperament of Nature, and is called Dyfinteria; that is, the distemper of the Guts; some cure this distemper per with repression and restrictives, but many more hundreds are cured by A-romaticum Leonardi, with three or four doses of his Syrupus solutions. You may try this way, which I shall assure you is both safe and good: Take Frogs and distill them as you do Herbs and Flowers, or any thing else, but put nothing to them but a little water; take two or three spoonfuls of this distillation in any thing you drink, and it will give you present ease.

A Cure for every fort of Gout.

The Gout whether hot or cold, or whatever temperature, ariseth from one and the same cause, though the effects seem different. As for example, Fat-men have it with much inflamation, redness, and great pain, in leaner Persons it is discovered with less inflamation, though not with less inflamation with nodes and tumours. The cause of this distemper cometh from

MAC

ther dis

the Wh

ing if y dra nar (we ever

you

an evil quality engendred in the Stomack, Blood and Liver, the cure thereof must be then the removal of this ill quality from the Stomach, and the purgation of Blood and Liver. Wherefore when you perceive the pain approaching, take two Doses of Pilula Magistrales Leonards in the morning falting one day after another; or if you will intermit a day, then take drams of Quinta effentia solutiva Leonardi, in half a Pottinger of Veal-broth sweetned with Sugar; take this five hours before you eat any thing; then every night afterSupper take a little of the Unguentum Leonardi, and anoint your grief, and you will find your speedy recovery.

It 1

OF-

VOE:

How to cure the Green-Sickness.

Laziness and Love are the usual causes of these obstructions in young Women; and that which increaseth and continueth this distemper, is their eating Oatmeal, Chalk; nay some have not forborn Cynders, Lime, and I know not what trash. If you would prevent N 2 this this Nothful disease, be sure you let not those under your command to want imployment; that will hinder the growth of this diftemper, and cure a worser Malady of a love-sick breast, for business will not give them time to think of fuch idle matters. But if this Green-sickness hath already got footing in the body, use this means to drive it away: Take a Quart of Claret wine, one pound of Currans, an handful of young Rosemary-tops, with half an ounce of Mace, seeth this to a pint, and let the Patient drink thereof three spoonfuls at a time, Morning and Evening, and eat some of the Currans after.

An Universal Medicine of wonderful use both for Man and Woman.

Take ten ounces of the seeds of Quinces, six ounces of the Pills of Citrons; Balm and Nettles, of each four ounces; beat all these grossy, and insule them in six quarts of good White-wine, thus let it remain six days, then distill it with six ounces of Honey,

and

and fifteen ounces of Sugar, until you have received a quart of water; then put it in a place to cool, then add thereunto eight grains of Musk diffolved, with about two ounces of Rose-water put thereunto, two scruples of Oyl of Vitriol, and incorporate them well together; then keep this water in a Glass well closed to keep out the air; and of this take one ounce in the Morning, and fast thereon two hours. This Experiment is a wonderful preserver of health, and continuer of life to long age, if constantly used, which may appear by the excellency of the Ingredients; for the Quince-seeds are admirable for the removing of ill humours which clog the Stomach, and are very cordial; the Pome-citron-pills, preserve and help digestion; the Balm purifieth the Blood, healeth the Liver, incourageth Concoction, and comforteth the Heart; the Neitles provoke Urine, mundifie the Reins, and correct the malignity of the Simons; as for the Wine, you cannot be ignorant of its Virtues; Mask N 3

Musk purgeth the Blood of Windiness; the Oyl of Vitriol healeth all the Excoriations of the Mouth, Breast, and Stomach, and is excellent against malign humours that oppress it.

An admirable Remedy against the yellow Jaundies.

Take an handful of Red-nettle-tops, Plantane, and Saffron, and boil them well in a pint of Ale, then strain it, and drink five or six days thereof, and you will find it a present remedy; let not the cheapness of its Ingredients occasion this composition to be slighted.

Againg the Itch.

Take sweet Batter, unwrought Wax, Vinegar, Brimstone, a little Rose-water, and red Cloves whole, boil them together till they be like Salve, then anoint the flesh three sundry nights by the fire therewith, and no more, and you need not question a cure.

Against Kibed Heels a certain Remedy.

Make a hole in the to p of a Turnip, take out some of the pith, and pour into into the hole oyl of Roses, then stop the hole close, and roast it under hot Embers; when it is soft, apply it Plaisterwise to the Kibe as hot as can be endured.

What is best to be administred to one sick of the Measels.

In this distemper, as in the small Pox, it is only necessary to defend the Heart, and preserve the Stomach from putresaction and corruption; if young, to hinder the hands from murdering a good face; and then give the diseased a Julip, made of two ounces of Violets, four ounces of Rose-water, and four grains of Oyl of Vitriol, mix them and let them be drunk cold: It is as good a receipt as any for this distemper.

To cure the Fits of the Mother.

Some, nay most use burnt Feathers, or Assatida, applyed to the Nose of the distemper'd person, not without success; but your better way is to take six or seven drops of the spirit of Castoreum, in the beginning of the Fit, in two or three spoonfuls of Ale-N. 4. posset, posset, and apply a Plaister of Gavanum to the Navel.

To take away the Heat of a Burn or Scald.

Roast Eggs as hard as a Stone, then take out the yolks of them, then fry the yolks of these Eggs in a Frying-pan till they turn to an Oyl; then strain it, and anoint the Burn or Scald therewith, then lay on a Bladder anointed with Sallet-oyl, and this will speedily assume fwage the pain, and heal the Scald or Burn.

For a Scald-bead

Take a Candle, and let it drop upon it as hot as you can, in so doing it will scale off; then take the Stale of a Cow and the furring of Chamber-pots, boil these together and wash the place, and it will speedily cure it.

A very good receipt for one burt with Gun-powder.

Take twelve heads of Houseek, one handful of Groundsel, one pint of Goose-dung, as much Chicken-dung of the the newest that can be gotten; stamp the Herbs very small, then put the dung into a Mortar, temper them together with a pottle of Bores-greafe, stir them together half an hour, then strain it through a Canvas-bag, and so preserve it for your use; it will keep two years and be not the worfe.

A very safe Clister to be used by either Man or Woman, who is much bound or costive. o way and Take Mallows and Mercury unwasht of each two handfuls, half an handful of Barley, clean rubbed and washed, and boil them in Spring-water, from a pottle to a quart, then ftrain out the Water, and put it in a Skillet, and put to it three spoonfuls of Sallet-oyt, two spoonfuls of Honey, and a little Salt, then make it luke-warm, and with your Pipe administer it.

How to cure old Sores in the Legs, which have been of so long standing that the Bones have appeared.

Take a quantity of sweet Cream, and as much Brimstone beaten into find posuder powder as will make it thick like Paste; then take so much sweet Butter as will work it into the form of an Oyntment, and herewith anoint the place grieved twice a day, and in a short time the cure will be effected. Probatum est.

An excellent way to dissolve the Stone. Take a peck of Green-bean-cods without dew or rain, and two good handfuls of Saxifrage, lay the same into a Still, one row of Saxifrage, and another of the Green-bean-cods; and fo distill in this manner a quart of Water; and then distill another quantity of Water from the Bean-cods alone, and use to drink of these two Waters. If the Patient be most troubled with the heat of the Reins, then let him most frequently drink of the distilled Beanwater, and upon coming down of the sharp gravel or stone, let him drink the other.

Away not only to prevent but to cure the Tooth-ach, or to make an aking Tooth fall out of its self. Every Month, twice or thrice there therein, wash your Mouth with White-wine, in which Spurge hath been boil'd, and you shall never be troubled with the Tooth-ach. If your Tooth be hollow, and paineth you much, take this Herb called Spurge, and squeeze it, and mingle Wheat-flower with the Milk which issueth thence, with this make a Paste, and fill the cavity of your Tooth therewith, leaving it there a while, changing ite-very two hours, and the Tooth will drop out.

How to order a Woman with Child, before, in, and after her Delivery.

Abortion, take Coriander-feed prepared two drams, of the roots of Biftorr, the shaving of Ivory, and red Coral, of each a dram, of white Amber and Crystal, of each a scruple; Alkermes half a Scruple, Sugar dissolv'd in four Ounces of Rose-water; make tables each of them weighing a dram. Let the Woman with Child take one of them every other day, morning and evenvening; between whiles let her sup a new laid Egg, thickned a little with Magisterium of Pearl or red Coral. But if her Breasts after their filling should begin to lessen or fall, it is a fign of future Abortion; to prevent which, let her take root of Bistort and Corianders, of each two Drams; of unripened Gales, and red Sander, and Hippocestidos, of each one dram; Gum-Labdanum and Mastick of each half an ounce; choice Frankincense and Bdelium, of each two drams; of Coral, Amber, one dram of each; powder those which are to be powder'd, and with Oyl of Turpentine and Wax, make two or three Cere-cloths, apply them sometimes to her Loyns and Sides, and sometimes under the Navel. She must avoid all violent and sudden motions, both of the Mind and Body, as Coughs, Sneezings, Frights, also Spices and Wine. Thus much before Delivery.

In Labour, if you will facilitate the Birth, and give speedy ease, take three or four drops of the distilled Oyl

of

of Nutmegs in a spoonful of Whitewine, or take white Dictamen-root, stones of Dates, and Borax, of each two Scruples; Cinnamon, Cassia-Lignea, Amber, fine Pearl, of each one Scruple; Safforn half a Scruple, make a small powder of these, and divide them into two equal parts, and let her take the one part in a draught of Lilly-water, or Ale posset made with Rhenish-wine; and the other part let her take in like manner fix hours after if need require. If she be subject to swooning or fainting before or after Labour, give her a spoonful of this excellent Cordial following.

An excellent Cordial for Women troubled with Swooning-fits in Travel.

Take Borage-water, Rose-water, Strawberry-water, and Rhenish-wine, of each two Ounces; Species of Diamargaricum frigidum, one Scruple; make a warm infusion for the space of an hour, then strain it, and add thereunto Manus Christi, made with Pearl, four Ounces; Oriental Bezor, Uni-

Corne

fix Grains, of these make a Cordial-

Fulip.

Great pains frequently follow Women newly brought to Bed; for which there is nothing better than this plain Receipt; viz. Drink a good draught of Beer boil'd with a spoonful of Camomile-flowers; and in greater pains let her drink six Ounces of the Oyl of sweet Almonds fresh drawn.

If the Woman delivered have no mind to give suck, and that she will have her Milk speedily dried up, a quick and safe remedy is, new Spunges wet in Vinegar, where a handful of Cummin-seed boiled is bruised, tyed close to the Breasts, anointing them with Unguentum Populeum.

To procure store of Milk, use Posset Drink boiled with Fennel, with the seeds thereof, and Anniseeds. These Remedies are known to be safe and effectual.

Thus much for Physick and Chyurgery; having given you only some of the thechoisest Receipts I could procure; if you desire a larger knowledg herein, you would do well to acquaint your self with the Composition of Mans Body, and the Diseases incident to every part; which you may gather from several Books of Anatomy, either that of Dr. Read, or Dr. Riolanus, I think as good as any extant.

If you would know the nature of Plants, Gerhard and Parkinson write incomparably on that Subject, but if they are too bulky, and so may seem tedious, you may make choice of lesser Herbals, as Adam in Eden; or a small Manuel, written by Mr. Lovel.

If you would have a Salve for every fore, as the Proverb expresseth, and a Receipt for every Distemper, consult the general practice of Physick, Riverius his Practice of Physick translated by Mr. Culpeper; with many more of the like Subject.

The next Qualifications which accomplish a Gentlewoman, are, Candying, Conserving, Preserving and Difilling.

And

And first of Candying, Conserving and Preserving.

These are curiosities which are not only laudible, but requisite and necessary in young Ladies and Gentle-women: To represent them at large, would require more art and time than I have either the ability or leisure to perform; however I shall give you a Specimen hereof, or an Essay of my own Experiments; and first,

How to preserve Barberries.

Select the largest and fairest bunches, picking off the wither'd or shrunk Barberries, and wash them clean, drying them in a clean Cloth. After this take a quantity of Barberries, and boil them in Claret-wine till they be soft; then strain them well through a Strainer, wringing the juice hard through it; boil this strained liquor with Sugar, till it be thick, and very sweet; let it then straind till it be cold, then put your branches branches of Barberries into Gally-pots, and fill them up with this liquor; by this means you will have both the Syrrup of Barberries, and their Preferves.

Pears Preserved.

Take Pears that are found . and newly gathered from the Tree, indifferent ripe, then lay in the bottom of an Earthen-pot some dried Vine-leaves, and so make a lay of Pears and leaves till you have filled the pot, laying between each lay some sliced Ginger, then pour in as much old Wine as the pot will hold, laying some heavy thing on the Pears that they may not fwim.

Green Pippins Preserved.

Take half a score of Green Pippins, (from the Tree if you can) pare them, and boil them in a pottle of water, till they are like a Pulpe; strain them from the Cores, then take two pound of Sugar, and mingle it with the liquor or pulp so strained, then set it on the fire, and as foon as it boileth, put in your Pippins you intend to preferve, so let them boil leisurely, till they be enough; when they are preferved, they will be green; in like sort you may preserve Quinces, Plumbs Peaches and Apricocks, if you take them green.

Black Cherries Preferved.

Take them fresh, or as they come from the Tree, and cut off the stalk; take one pound of Sugar for double the weight of Cherries, seeth and clarifie them, and when they are half boil'd put in your other Cherries, and let them seeth softly together, until the Sugar may he drawn between the singers like small threads; when the broth is almost cold, put the Cherries in the pots with the stalks upwards.

Mulberries Preferved.

Take Mulberries, and add to them their weight of Sugar; having wet your Sugar with some juice of Mulberries, then stir your Sugar together and put in your Mulberries and boil them till they are enough, then take them them off and boil the Syrrup a while, then put in the Mulberries, and let them stand till they be cold.

Oranges and Lemmons Preserved.

Take the fairest you can get, lay them in water three days and three nights, to take away their bitterness; then boil them in fair water till they be tender; make as much Syrrup as will make them swim about the pan; let them not boil long, for then the skins will be tough; then let them lie all night in the Syrrup, that they may soak themselves therein; in the morning boil the Syrrup to a convenient thickness, then with it and the Orane ges and Lemmons, fill your Gally-pots, and keep them all the year, in this manner you may preserve Citrons.

Goosberries Preserved.

Let your Goosberries be gather'd with their stalks on, cut off their heads and stone them, then put them in Scalding-water, and let them stand therein covered a little while; then take their weight of Sugar finely beaten; and lay first a layer of Sugar, then one of Goosberries in your Preserving-pan or Skillet, till all be in, putting in for every pound of Goosberries a spoonful of fair water, set them on the Embers till the Sugar be melted, then boil them up as fast as you can, till the Syrrup be thick enough; when cold, put them up. In this manner you may preserve Raspices and Mulberries.

Preserved Roses, or any other Flowers.

Take one pound of Roses, three pound of Sugar, one pint and a little more of Rose-water, make your Syrrup first, and let it stand till it be cold, then take your Rose-leaves, having first clipt off all the white, put them in the cold Syrrup and cover them; let your fire be very soft, that they may only simmer two or three hours; then whilst they are hot, put them out into pots or glasses for your use.

Cherries Preferved.

Take Cherries fully ripe, and newly

ly gather'd, put them to the bottom of your Preserving-pan, let the Cheries and Sugar be of equal weight, then throw some Sugar on the Cherries, and set them over a quick-fire; and as they boil, throw on the rest of the Sugar till the Syrrup be thick enough; then take them out and put them into a Gally-pot whilst they are warm; it will not be amissto add two or three spoonfuls of Rose-water to them.

Apricocks Preferved.

Let the weight of your Sugar equal the weight of your Apricceks, what quantity soever you mind to use; pare and stone your Apricocks, and lay them in the Sugar in your Preservingpan all night, and in the morning fet them on the Embers till the Sugar be all melted, and then letthem fland and scald an hour; then take them off the fire and let them stand in that Syrrup two days, and then boil them foftly till they be tender and well colour'd, and after that, when they are cold, put them up in glasses or pots, which you Green please.

Green Walnuts Preserv'd.

Take Walnuts and boil them till the water taste bitter, then take them off and put them in cold water, and peel off the rind, and put to them as much Sugar as they weigh, and a little more water than will wet the Sugar, set them on a fire, and when thry boil up, take them off, and let them stand two days

the 700

and

ing

W2

200 twe

boi

boi

201

the

-00

fo

of th

2

Eringo-roots Preferv'd.

then boil them again once more.

Take Eringo-roots fair, and not knotty, one pound, and wash them clean, then set them on the sire, and boil them very tender, peel off their outermost skin, but break them not as you pare them; then let them lie a while in cold water; after this you must take to every pound of roots three quarters of a pound of clarified Sugar and boil it almost to the height of Syrrup, and then put in your roots; but look that they boil but gently together, and stir them as little as may be, for fear of breaking; when they are cold, put them up and keep them.

the ped nuch nem

lay:

not nem and their

BOL

ie 2

YOU

mee

of of ots;

to-

may.

they term.

En-

Ennula-Campana-roots Prefero'd.

Wash them, and scrape them very clean, and cut them thin to the pith, the length of your little singer; and as you cut them, put them in water and let them lie there thirty days, shifting them twice every day, to take away the bitterness; then weigh them, and to every pound of Roots add twelve Ounces of Sugar, clarified first, boiling the Roots very tender, then put them into this Sugar, and let them boil upon a gentle fire until they be enough; having stood a good while off the fire, put them up between hot and cold.

Conserve of Roses.

Take red-Rose-buds, clip all the white, either bruised or withcred, from them; then add to every pound of Roses, three pound of Sugar, stamp the Roses very small, putting to them a little juice of Lemmons or Rose-water as they become dry; when you think your Roses small enough, then put your Sugar to them, so beat them together gether till they be well mingled, then put it up in Gally-pots or Glasses. In this manner is made the Conserve of Flowers of Violets, which doth cool and open in a burning Feavor or Ague, being dissolved in Almond-milk, and so taken; and excellent good for any inflamation in Children.

Thus you may also make the Conferve of Cowslips, which strengthens the Brain, and is a Preservative against Madness; it helps the Memory, asswageth the pain of the Head, and helpeth most infirmities thereof. In like manner you may also make Conferve of Marigolds, which taken fasting in the morning is very good against Melancholy; cureth the trembling of the Heart, and very good against any Pestilential distemper.

Thus make Conserve of Sage and Scabious, the one is good against Melancholy, drieth and comforteth the Stomach, cureth an old Cough, and openeth the stopping of the Liver: the other, that is Scabious, cleanseth the Breast and Lungs, takes away old Coughs and

Im-

Wil

tha

000 cok

tak

the

Sie

the feet

In

coa

nea

WI

Wi

Imposthumes of the Breast and inward parts.

How to Candy all forts of Flowers as they grow with their stalks on.

00-

the ind the

Im.

Take the Flowers, and cut the stalks somewhat short; then take one pound of the whitest and hardest Sugar you can get, put to it eight spoonfuls of Rose-water, and boil it till it will roul between your finger and your thumb; then take it from the fire, and cool it with a stick, and as it waxeth cold, dip in all your Flowers, and taking them out again suddenly, lay them one by one on the bottom of a Sieve, then turn a joined Stool with the feet upward; fet the sieve on the feet thereof, then cover it with a fair linnen cloth, and set a Chafing-dish of coals in the midst of the stool underneath the fieve, and the heat thereof will dry your Candy speedily, which will look very pleafantly, and keep the whole year.

Candyed Eringe-roots.

day:

in W

192 plate

dy will out

Vat

Take of your Eringo-roots ready to be preserved, and weigh them, and to every pound of Roots you must take of the purest Sugar you can get two pound, and clarifie it with the whites of Eggs exceeding well, that it may be as clear as Crystal; it being clarified, you must boil it to the height of Manus Christi, and then dip in your Roots two or three at once till they are all Candyed; put them in a Stove, and so keep them all the year.

The best and most approved way to dry Plumbs.

Take Plumbs when they are fully grown, with the stalks on them; however let them be green, split them on the one side, and put them in hot water (but not too hot) and so let them stand three or four hours; then to a pound of them take three quarters of a pound of Sugar beaten very fine, and eight spoonfuls of water to every pound; set them on hot Embers till the Sugar be melted; and after that, boil boil them till they be very tender, letting them stand in that Syrrup three days to plump them; then take them out, and wash the Syrrup from them in warm water, and wipe them dry in a fine Linnen-cloth, then set them on plates, and let them dry in a Stove; dry them not in an Oven, for then they will be tough.

ita

nay ed, mas loots e all

d 6

fully

OW.

n on

W2.

nem

10-2

rters

fine, rery till hat,

boil

Proper Colours for Fruitage. Saffron is the best Yellow, Sap-green the best Green, Indian-lake the best Red; all your Colours must be temper'd with Gum-water made of Rosewater.

Quince Marmelade.

Take of the fairest Quinces, wash them very clean, grate them very fmall, and wring out as much juice as you can; then take other Quinces and cut them in fix pieces, put them into a pot, let them be evapoured with hot water, until they be throughly mellow; then take half a potful of the former juice, and pour it upon the former, stew'dand cut to pieces; break it it well together, and put the rest of the juice amongst it, then wring it through a clean thin cloth; seeth no more of this juice at once than will fill a box therewith, and put white Sugar to it, as much as you please.

How to make Syrrup of Violets.

Boil fair water, and fcum it, and to every ounce so scum'd and boil'd, take fix ounces of the blew of Violets, only shift them as before nine times, and the last time take nine ounces of Violets; let them stand between times of shifting twelve hours, keeping the liquor still on hot Embers, that it may be but milk-warm; after the first shifting, you must stamp and strain your last nine ounces of Violets, and put in only the juice of them, then take to every pint of this liquor thus prepared one pound of Sugar finely beaten, boil it, and keep it stirring till all the Sugar be melted, which you must do, if you can, before it boil; afterwards boil it up with a quick fire.

Take Damask Roses, and clip off the white of them, for every pint of water take six ounces of them, boil your water farst, and scum it, then let them stand twelve hours, wringing out the Roses, and putting in new eight times, then wringing out the last, put in the juice of four ounces of Roses only, and so make it up as before.

nd

Syrrup of Coltsfoot. Take the leaves of Coltsfoot, and wash them very clean, then wipe them with a clean cloth leaf by leaf, then dry them well with a cloth, then beat them in a Mortar, and put them in a Strainer, and wring all the juice you can out of them, and put it into Glasses, and let it stand in them to fettle all night, the next day pour out the clearest of the Juice from the Grounds into a clean Bason, and take for every pint thereof a pound of Sugar finely beaten, boil the Juice of Coltsfoot foftly on a Charcoal fire, and when you you have well scum'd it, put in the Sugar according to its proportion, and so let them boil together, keeping it with due scumming, until it will stand on a stiff purl, dropping it on a Plate; then take it from the fire, and pour it through a felly-bag into a fair Bason, putting sirst a branch or two of Rosemary into the Bags bottom, then keep it stirring with a spoon till it be lukewarm, otherwise it will have a Cream upon it; so letting it stand all night, put it in what Vessels you think state to keep it in, for your suture use and service.

Let these forms suffice to furnish you with the knowledg of making any other Syrrups; you need no better a pattern than this, for the making of a many others, as is the Syrrup of Wormwood, take the like quantity of Sugar, with the Juice of the said Wormwood, the Sugar being first clarified, and so make it up according to art; in the like manner you may make Syrrup of Betony, Borage, Bugloss, Cardis, Cammomel, Succory, Endive, Strawberries, Fumitory, Groundear, dear, Purssain, Sage, Scabious, Scordium, Housleek, with many more. But enough of this; and therefore I shall next treat of Distillation.

of DISTILLATION ..

L Adies, before you come to the knowledg of distilling Waters, you ought in the first place be furnished with good Stills, which Stills must either be of Tynne, or sweet Earth, wherein you may distill all manner of Waters, either for the health of your own Family or others.

Now by the way observe, you may easily make your Waters look of what colour you please, if you will first distill your Water in a Stillatory, and then put it in a great Glass of strength, and sill it as full of those Flowers whose Colours you desire, then stop it and set it in the Stillatory, and let it distill, and you shall have their perfect colour.

Of precious and excellent Waters there there are thousands, wherefore I shall only set down here some of the choicest and most valuable.

Dr. Stevens bis famous Water.

Take a gallon of Gascoin-wine, of Ginger, Gallingal, Cinamon-Grains, Cloves, Mace, Nutmegs, Annifeeds, Carraway-feed, Coriander-feed, Fennel-feed, and Sugar, of every one a dram; then take of Sack and Ale a quart of each, of Camomile, Sage, Mint, Red-roses, Tyme, Pellitory of the Wall, Wild Marjoram, Wild Tyme, Lavender, Pennyroyal, Fennel-roots, Parflyroots, and Set-wall-roots, of each half a handful; then beat the Spice small, and bruise the Herbs, and put them all together into the Wine. and so let it stand sixteen hours, stirring it now and then, then distill it in a Limbeck with a fost fire, the first pint of the Water by it felf, for it is the best.

The principal use of this Water is against all cold Diseases, it preserveth Youth, comforteth the Stomack, cureth reth the Stone of what nature soever, using but two spoonfuls in seven days: It preserved Dr. Stevens ten years Bed-rid, that he lived to Ninety eight years.

Aqua Mirabilis.

Take three pints of White-wine, of Aquavitæ, and Juice of Saladine, of each a pint; one dram of Cardamer and one dram of Mellilot flowers, Cubebs a dram, of Gallingale, Nurmeg; Cloves, Mace and Ginger, of each a dram; mingleall these together over night, the next morning fet them a Stilling in a Glass Limbeck. This admirable Water dissolveth the swelling of the Lungs, and restoreth them when perished; it suffereth not the Blood to putrifie; neither need he or she to breathe a Vein, that useth this Water often; it cureth the Heart-burn, and purgeth Melancholy and Flegm; it expelleth Urine; it preserveth a good Colour in the Face; and is an utter enemy to the Palse; take three spoontuls of it at a time, morning and evening twice a week....

0 5

A

Take a new-laid Egg and roast it hard, then cut the shell in the midst and take out the yolk and put some white Copporice where the yolk was, then bind the Egg together again, and let it lye till it begin to be a Water, then take the white forth from both sides of the Egg, and put the same into a Glass of fair running water, and so let it stand a while; then strain it through a fair Linnen-sloth, and keep it close stopped in a Glass, and therewith wash your Eyes morning and evening.

An admirable Water against the Stone in the Kidneys.

Take of the middle rind of the Root of Ash bruised two pound, Juniper berries bruised three pound; Venice-Turpentine of the best, two pound and an half; put these into twelve pints of Spring-water in a Glass-vessel well closed, and there let them purise in Hors-dung three Months, then distill them in Ashes, and there will come forth an Oyl and a Water; seperate the one from the other, ten or twelve drops being taken of this Oyl every morning in four or fix spoonfuls of the faid Water, dissolves the Stone and Gravel in the Kidneys most wonderfully.

An excellent Water for the Worms.

Take of Worm-seeds bruised, eight ounces; the shaving of Harts-horn, two ounces; of Peach-flowers dri'd, an ounce; of Aloes bruised, half an ounce; pour on these the Waters of Tansie, Rue, Peach-flowers, and of Wormwood, of each a pint and half; let them be digested in a Glass-vessel three days, then distill them; cohobate this Water three times. This Water may be given from half an ounce to three ounces, according to the age and strength of the person. A small quantity for young Children will work the defired effect; it infallibly kills Stomack-worms, Maw-worms, or any other inwardly infesting the Body.

An excellent artificial Wine like. Glaret, but much better, and by many degrees brisker.

Take two gallons of your best Sider (some esteem Worcester-shire Redstreak the best) and mingle it with fix. gallons of Water, put thereunto eight pound of the best Malaga Raisins bruifed in a Mortar; let them stand close covered in a warm place, for the space of a fortnight, stirring them every two days well together; then press out the Raisins, and put the liquor into the same Vessel again; to which, add a quart of the juice of Raftberries, and a pint of the juice of black Cherries; cover this liquor with Bread spread thick with Mustard, the Mustard side being downward, and so let it work by the fire-fide three or four days; then turn it up, and let it stand a week, and then bottle it up; and it will tafte as quick as the briskeft liquor whatever, and is a very pleafint drink, and much wholfomer than French wine.

An Ointment for any Wound or Sore.

Take two pound of Sheeps-suet, or rather Deers-suet, a pint of Candy Oyl. a quarter of a pound of the newest and best Bees-wax, melting them all together, and stirring them well; and put to them one ounce of the Oyl of Spike, and half an ounce of the Goldsmiths Boras; then heat them again, and stir them altogether; put it up in a Gally-pot and keep it close stopped, till you have cause to use it. This is an approved Ointment for any Wound or Sore, new or old.

A.Sear-cloth for all Aches.

Take Rosin one pound, Perrosin a quarter of a pound, as much Mastick, Deers Suit the like, Turpentine two ounces, Cloves bruised one ounce, Mace bruised two ounces, Saffron two drams, boil all these together in Oyl of Camemile, and preserve it for your use. This hath done many good when nothing else would.

Now, that I may not feem whelly to apply my discourse and study for the benefit of young Court Ladies and City Madams, I shall descend into the Countrey, and find out something worthy the observation of a Rural Gentlewoman.

What things belong to a Country-Gentlewoman: Of Dayries, and making Butter and Cheefe.

GEntlewomen, that you may be delighted with your own experience as well as fatisfied in the labours of your Servants, I shall give you an account of what must be pre-observed in the keeping of a Dairy.

Let your Kine be of the best choice and breed that possibly can be procured; and the larger the Cow is, the better she is, whereof Lincolnshire and Cheshire afford great plenty. The reason why I advise you to chuse large Cattle, is, that when they grow old, and will yield but little Milk, you may then feed and fatten them for the

Sham-

Shambles. The common and most known signs of a Cow that gives good store of Milk, are, a wreathed Horn, a thin Neck, and a larg hairy Dewlap, afull Udder, and the Teats long and thick.

The best Black Kine are said to come from Cheshire, Lancashire, Derby-shire, York-shire; the best red Cows (whose Milk is so much esteemed above all other of that kind for its extraordinary nourishing quality) come from Gloucester-shire, Somerset-shire; the Pied Kine come commonly from Lincoln-shire, and are little inserior to the rest.

Thus you see England affords variety enough of extraordinary good Cows for the good Housewise to make choice of as she pleaseth; but withallet her be careful that the Bull be of as good a breed as the Kine themselves, otherwise the increase will degenerate, and your Dairy in time run to ruin.

If at any time you buy any Kine to encrease your Dairy, you must be careful they come not from a Soil that is more truitful than your own; but rather not so sertile, or being not so good pasture, for then they will the better prosper and thrive with you; otherwise it is ten to one they will pine away, and fall into many Distempers: Cows are said to give most Milk when they have newly Calved. If a Cow gives a gallon at a time constantly, she may pass for a very good Milch-Cow; there are some Cows which give a gallon and half, but very sew who give two at a time.

You cannot design a better time for your Cow to calve in than at the latter end of February, or in the Months of March or April, for then the Grass is coming on, or springing up in its per-fest goodness.

The hours or times most approved and commonly used for Milking, are in the Spring and Summer, between five or six in the morning, and six in the evening. Some very unprofitably, with the pretence of reason, milk their Cows in the Summer-season, betwixt the hours hours of twelve and one; but I would not have it to be a president for any to follow. There is an old Proverb very pertinent to what is here related; That two-good meals are better then three bad ones: It is the worst point of Huswifry that can be to leave the Cow half Milked; for besides the loss of Milk, it is the ready way to make the Cow dry, and so become unprofitable to the Dairy.

Now the profits arising from Milk, are chiefly three, viz. Cream, Butter and Cheefe; the Cream is the very heart and strength of the Milk, which must be skimmed very cleanly: Cleanly, I say, for Cleanliness is such an ornament to a good Huswise, that if she want any part thereof, she loseth both that and all other good names whatsoever. Cream is not to be kept above two days in Summer, and not above four in the Winter, if you will be always provided with the best and and sweetest Butter; But before we speak of that, I shall here insert some excellent Receipts for made-Cream, and Milk made better by Art. How

How to make your ordinary clouted Cream.

Take a quantity of Milk from the Cow, and put it into a broad Earthenpan, and set it over a slow fire, letting it stand there from morning to night, suffering it not to boil by any means; then take it off the fire, and set it in some place all night to cool, in the morning dish off your Cream, for it will be very thick.

To make fresh Cheese in Cream.

Take a pottle of new Milk as itcometh from the Cow, and half a pound of blanched Almonds beaten very small, and make a thick Almond milk, with a pint of Cream strained; and a little before you go to Dinner make it blood-warm, season it with a little Sugar, Rose-water, and searsed Ginger, and put to it a little Runnet, and when it is scummed, bread it up,
and whey it, and put it into a Mould, and press it with your hand; and when it is well wheyed put it into a Dish with Cream.

Cream

this Sa

Di

Cream of Codlins.

After you have scalded your Codlins and peel'd off the skins, and scrap'd the pulps from the cores, with a little Sugar and Rose-water, strain them, and lay the pulp of your Codlins in a Dish, with as much raw Cream as you please about them; there are several other ways propounded, but this is most satisfactory to the Palat.

To make a Junket.

Take Ews or Goats-milk; if you have neither of these, then take Cowsmilk, and put it over the fire to warm, then put in a little Runnet to it; then pour it out into a Dish, and let it cool, then strew on Cinnamon and Sugar, then take some Cream and lay upon it, scraping Sugar thereon, serve it up.

Here note by the way; that you cannot keep Cream above three days in Summer, and fix days in Winter without prejudice.

I need not tell you how to make Butter, fince there are very few in the Coun-

Who

gre

ed

1857

100 mu

bot

備 for

for

Countrey that can be ignorant thereof; wherefore I shall only say, that the best time to pot your Butter is in the Month of May, for then the air is most temperate; and the Butter will take Salt best; however it may be done any time betwixt May and September. In preserving thus your Butter, you may not only supply your House therewith, but to your prosit furnish others.

There is another profit which ariseth from the Dairy, and that is Cheefe; of which there are three kinds, Morning-Milk-Cheese, Nettle-Cheese, floaten-Milk-Cheefe: The first is the fattest and best that is made in this Kingdom; the Nettle Cheese is so called, because when the Cheese is new made, Nettles are put upon it; which Nettles are to be renew'd once in two days: The floaten-Milk-Cheese is the worst of all Cheeses, and indeed so coarse, that as I like not to feed thereof, so I love not to write of it. What is further to be spoken of a Dairy Ishall refer it to my advice to that Maid who.

who defires to be a Dairy-Maid in a great House.

our

I have hitherto, Ladies endeavoured the accomplishment of Gentlewomen well extracted; but as you cannot do all things your selves, so you must have Attendants and Servants about you, such whose good Qualifications may not only render them sit for your employments, but in the performance thereof they may credit the House wherein they live, and prosit their own selves; to such therefore I direct my following Advice.

And first to all Gentlewomen, who though well-born, are motwith-standing by indigency necessitated to serve some Person of Quality.

In the first place, I would not have you look upon your condition, as to what it hath been, but what it is; learn what ever you can, and slight no opportunity which may advance your knowledge to the height of your birth, for want of which, some by reason of their Parents

Parents negligence, think they have enough to maintain their Children in a good equipage, and therefore flight those Arts which may not onely be ornamental, but beneficial to their Children hereafter, vainly imagining that poverty will never approach their Gates; by which cross mistake their Daughters are often exposed to great hardships, many times contenting themselves to serve as Chambermaids; because they have not the Accomplishments of a Waiting-woman or an House-keeper; and fo whereas their own natural and acquired parts might raise in every ones opinion a great esteem of their worth and merit, and incline Ladies to covet their company, fit at Table, and have a command in the House, respect from the rest of the Servants, wear good Clothes, and have a confiderable fallary; instead thereof, the meanness of their qualifications render them only fit companions for Grooms and Footboys.

Wherefore in the first place I shall advise all Parents (be their Estates never so good, and their Revenues large)

to

heir learn thy a Wing Dea leav

men

Of O

tore

TETY

7in

des ght or hat heir

neir reat since of a s nes mb

the

100

to endeavour the gentile education of their Daughters, encouraging them to learn whatever opportunity offers, worthy a good estimation. For Riches hath Wings, and will quickly fly away; or Death comes and removes the Parents, leaving the Children to the tuition of merciless and unconscionable Executors, or others intrusted, who only study how to rob the Orphans of their due, and afterwards thrust them into the World, giving them neither their own money, nor half the education they deserved; now if there be a treasury laid up within by education, by which they may live (without an Estate their Parents shall leave them) in some honest and creditable imployment, their condition will be so ellablisht, that nothing almost but death or sickness can make an alteration therein, and may boldly defie and fcorn the various vicissitudes of common misfortunes. For this reason I would have you to lose no time, but improve all you may in learning whatever may befit a Woman.

If your Father hath had large Revemues. nues, and could talk loudly of his Birth, and so may think this servile life beneath you, yet thank God you can do something for an honest livelihood, and be never the less submissive; for if you are a Servant, you must do what becomes a Servant; if your extraction be mean, and have attained to serviceable preferment, give God the glory, and ver

Tel

m

110

ed

1

be more careful to pleafe.

. If you defire to be a Waiting-Gentlewoman, it will be expected that you can Dress well, Preserve well, and Write well a legible hand, good language, and good English; have some Skill in Arithmetick: Carve well, and let your Behaviour be modest and courteous to all persons according to their degree; humble and fubmissive to your Lord and Lady, or Master and Mistris; neat in your Habit; loving to Servants; fober in your Countenance and Discourse; not using any wanton gesture, which may give Gentlemen occasion to suspect your levity, and so. court you to Debauchery, and so lose a reputation irrecoverable.

will be required that your behaviour be grave and folid, which will inculcate into their beliefs that you are able to govern a Family. And as I told you before, you must Preserve well, so you must have a competent knowledg in Distilling, making Cates, all manner of Spoon-meats, and the like. Be careful in looking after the Servants, that every one perform their Duty in their several places, that they keep good hours in up-rising and lying down; and that no Goods be either speil'd, or imbezel'd.

That all Strangers be nobly and civilly used in their Chambers; and that your Master or Lady be not dishonoured through neglect or miscarriage of Servants.

To be first up and last in bed, to prevent junketing.

To make Salves and Ointments to dress the wounds of the poor about you, with other things of your own composition, with which you may compassionate the sick and indigent: for commonly all good and charitable Ladies P do make this part of their House-keepers business.

To all Maidens, who defire to be Chamber-Maids to persons of Quality. for mai

bufi fine

tim ftan

Ser

ran crei

you

7770 by ha

to

Dress well, that you may be able to supply the place of the Waiting-womans should she chance to fall sick, or be absent from your Lady; you must wash sine Linnen well; and starch Tiffanies, Lawns, Points and Laces, mend them neatly; and wash white Sarcenets, with fuch like things.

You must make your Ladies Bed; lay up, and lay out her Night-cloaths; see that her Chamber be kept clean, and nothing wanting which she desires or requires to be done. Be modest in your deportment, ready at her call, always diligent, answering not again when reproved, but with pacifying words; loving and courteous to your fellow-servants, not gigling or idling out your time, nor wantoning in the society of Men; you will find the benefit thereof; for for an bonest and sober Man will sooner make that Woman his Wife whom he seeth continually imployed about her business, than one who makes it her business to trifle away her own and others time; neither will a virtuous and understanding Mistress long entertain such a Servant whom she finds of such a temper.

Be not subject to change, For a rouling Stone gathers no Moss; and as you will gain but little Money, so if you ramble up and down you will lose your credit.

It may be a fellow fervant may court you; but before you entertain the motion, consider how you must live; by inconsiderately Marrying you may have one joyful meeting, and ever after a sorrowful living, and have time to repent of your rash matching.

our wis

170

Op-

our of of; for

Instructions for all Nursery-Maids in Noble Families.

YOu ought to be naturally inclined to love young Children, or else you willsoon discover your unfitness to manage
P 2 tha.

that charge; you must be neat and cleanly about them, and careful to keep good hours for them: Get their Breakfasts and Suppers in good and convenient time, let them not sit too long, but walk them often up and down, especially those who cannot go well of themselves; take heed they get no falls by your careless, for by such means many (the cause at first being unperceivable) have afterwards grown irrecoverably lame or crooked; wherefore if any such thing should happen, conceal it not, though you may justly incur a great deal of blame therefore.

I knew a Gentlewoman absolutely spoil'd by such a concealment; her Nurse by negligence let her fall (being very young) from a Table; and by the fall her thigh-bene was dislocated, the Nurse searing the indignation and displeature of the Childs Parents, who were rich and potent, conceal'd it a long time, under the pretence of some other indisposition; endeavouring in the mean time the reducing of the bone to its proper place; but by reason of an interpolition of a Jelly between the diflocations, it could not be done, and then when it was too late the Parents were acquainted with the fad condition of their beloved Child, and hereupon all means imaginable used for its recovery, but all in vain, although they had been at some bundteds of pounds charge for the cure.

She is now as lovely a young Gentlewoman, as a ravisht eye can feast upon; but it would break the heart of that body the eye belongs unto to fee her go; her back-fide-walking would force a man from her to the Indies, and yet her Face would attract him to her twice as far.

But to my purpose; be not churlish or dogged to them, but merry and pleasant, and contrive and invent pretty pastimes agreeable to their age; keep their Linnen and other things always mended, and fuffer them not to run too fast to decay. Do not shew a partiality in your love to any of them, for that dejects the rest: Be careful to hear them read if it be imposed upon you, and be not too 3 :

1114

101

213

too basty with them; have a special care how you behave your self before them, neither speaking nor acting mis-becomingly, lest your bad example prove the subject of their imitation.

Instructions for all Chamber-maids to Gentlewomen in City and Country.

FRom you it will be required that you wash and starch very well both Tifficies, Lawns, Points and Laces and that you can mend what is amiss in them.

That you work Needle-work well, and all forts of Plain-work, or any other work with the Needle which is used in fuch Houses.

That you wash black and white Sarfnets; that you dress well, and diligently perform what you are commanded by your Mistriss; be neat in your Habit, modest in your Carriage, silent when she is angry, willing to please, quick and neat-handed about what you have to do.

You must know how to make all man-manner of Spoon-meats, to raise Paste, to dress Meat well, (though not often required thereunto) both of Fish and Flesh; to make Sauces, garnish Dishes, make all sorts of Pickles, to see that every thing be served in well and handsomely to the Table, in due time, and to wait with a grateful decorum, at the Table, if need should require.

Keep your Mistrisses Chamber clean, and lay up every thing in its due place; you ought to be Skilful in buying any thing in the Market, if you be intrusted therewith; these things will be expected from you in those Houses where there is no Head-Cook. If there be no Butler, you must see all things decent and fitting in the Parlour and Dining-

In a word, you must divest your Mistriss from all the care you can, giving to hdr a just and true account of what Moneys you lay out, shewing your self thristy in all your dishursements; be careful in over-looking inferiour Servants, that they waste nothing which belong to your Master and Mistriss.

P 4

IF

If you are thus qualified, and be of an humble and good disposition, your merit will deserve a good Sallery, and a great deal of love and respect. If you have not these accomplishments, endeavour their procuration by sparing some Money from superfluous expence and over-gaudy clothes; for to see a Maid sinely trickt up, having a fine show without, and not one good qualification within, is like a joynted Bartholomew-Baby, bought for no other use than to be look'd upon.

ful ful

feat

2110

200 thi

幣 tin

of th

th

Instructions for Nursery-Maids to Gentlewomen, both in London, or elsewhere.

Let me adivse you, first to consider the charge you take in hand, and not to desire it as too many do, because it is an easie kind of life, void of labour and pains-taking, thinking also that Children are easily pleas'd with any thing; I can assure you the contrary; for it is a troublesome employment, and the charge is of greater weight than such vainly imagine.

You

You ought in the first place to be of a gentle and good disposition, sober in your Carriage, neat in your Apparel; not study heavy-headed, but watchful and careful in the night season, for fear any of the Children should be ill; and keep due hours for their up-rising and going to bed.

Take special care that they eat nothing which may over-charge their Stomacks. If you observe their Faces at any time paler than ordinary, or complain of pain in their Stomack, conclude it is the Worms that troubles them; and therefore give them remedies suitable to the Distemper; do this often whether you see those Symptoms or no, the neglect of which hath been the distruction of many hopeful Children.

Keep them (whatever you do fiveet and clean; and moderately warm; teach them some good Forms of Prayer, and to read as they are capable; restrain them from drinking too much Wine, strong Liquors, and eating over-much Fruit.

Be loving and chearful with them, not p 5 bump-bumping or beating them, as many do, contrary to the knowledg and pleasure of their Parents: That Mother is very unwife that will give liberty to Servants to strike her Children; and that Servants is over-sawcy and ill natur'd who dares do it without her Mistrisses privity and consent.

This is your Duty, and unless you can and will do this, never undertake this charge.

Instructions for such who desire to be absolute Cook-maids in good and great Houses.

Took-maids to ask great Wages, although they are conscious to themselves of their inability of performing almost any thing; which as it is unconscionable so to do, so in the end it will prove differenceful to them: I shall therefore tell you what in reason may be required from you, and what justly you ought to perform.

Your skill will chiefly confift in dreffing all forts of Meat, both Fish, Flesh, and Fowl, all manner of Baked-meats, all kind of Sawces, and which are most proper for every fort of Dish, and be curious in garnishing your Dishes, and making all manner of Pickles, of all which I have treated of before, as you will find it in the Chapter of my Instructions for young Ladies and Gentlewomen, in the Art of Cookery, wherein you may be suppled with the Customary. and a-la-mode ways of drefling all forts of Meats.

Ty

g.

ke

oft diffiell

red

ht

000

And as you must know how to dress Meat well, so you must know how to fave what is left of that you have dreffed, of which you may make both handsome and toothsome Dishes again, to the faving of your Masters purfe, and the credit of his Table.

Be as faving as you can, and cleanly about every thing; see also that your Kitchen be kept clean, and all things scoured in due time; your Larders also and Cubbards, that there be no bits of Meat or Bread lie about them to Spoil and fink, dayout bear

That your Meat taint not for want of good Salting.

That you keep good hours for your Meals, else you put an house quite out of order; do not covet to have the Kitchen-stuff for your vails, but rather ask the more wages, for that may make you an ill Huswife of your Masters goods, and teach you to be a thief; for you will be apt to put that which goes into the tried suit into your pot.

Lay not all your Wages on your back; but lay up something against sickness, and an hundred other Casualties; assure your self, it is more commendable for one of your Profession to go decent and clean, than gaudily fine.

Take this in part of that good counfel I could give you had I time; which if you follow, the greatest benefit will be your own at last.

Instructions for Under-Cook-Maids.

IT behoves you to be very diligent and willing to do what you are bid to do; and though your employment be grease and smutty, yet if you please you may keep your self from being nasty, therefore let it be your care to keep your self clean. Observe every thing in Cookery that is done by your Superiour, treasure it up in your memory, and when you meet with a convenient opportunity, put that in practice which you have observed; this course will advance you from a Drudg to be a Gook another day.

Every one must have a beginning; and if you will be ingenious and willing to learn, there is none will be fo churlish or unkind as to be unwilling to teach you; but if you are stubborn and careles, who do you think will trouble themselves with you? Beware of Goffips, for they will misadvise you; beware of the follicitations of the flesh, for they will undo you; and though you may have mean thoughts of your felf, and think none will meddle with fuch as you; it is a mistake, Hungry Dogs will eat dirty Puddings; and Imy felf have known a brave Gallant to fall foul with the Wench of the Scullery, when fome" fome others would have bazzarded their life for one sole enjoyment of that incomparable Lady his Wife, he so ingratefully slighted.

Instructions for Dairy-Maids in great Houses.

Have a care that all your Vessels be scalded well and kept very clean; that you milk your Cattel in due time, for your Kine by custom will expect it. though you neglect it, which will tend much to their detriment.

Waste not your Cream by giving it away to liquorish per sons; keep certain days fot your Chirning, and be sure to make up your Butter neatly and cleanly, washing it well from the Butter-

Milk, and then falt it well.

Be careful to make your Cheefe good and tender, by well ordering them; and see that your Hogs have the Whey, and that it be not given away to idle or gossipping people, who live meerly upon what they can get from Servants: That you provide your Winter-Butter and Cheese in the Summer, as in May; and when your Rowens come in, be sparing of your Fire, and do not lavish away your Milk, Butter, or Cheese.

If you have any Fowls to fat, or Pigs, look to them that they may be your credit and not yout shame, when they come to the Table.

When you milk your Cattel, stroke them well, and in the Summer-time fave those strokings by themselves, to put into your Morning-Milk-cheese.

Instructions for Laundry-Maids in great Houses.

Your Duty will be to take care of all the Linnen in the House, excepting Points and Laces; whatever you wash, do it up quickly, that it may not stink and grow yellow, and be forced to the washing again before it be used.

Let all the bracks in the Linnen, or rents, be duly mended; and keep your certain days of washing, and other days for the making clean of such Rooms as are appointed you.

Be

Be sparing of your Soap, Fire and Candle.

Entertain no Chare-woman un-

21

known to your Lady or Mistrifs.

Be careful that your Tubs and Copper, or whatever else you make use of, be kept clean, and in good repair.

That you rife early every morning, but more especially on Washing-days.

Instructions for House-Maids in great Houses.

Your principal Office is to make clean the greatest part of the House; and so that you suffer no room to lie foul; that you look well to all the stuff, and see that they be often brushed, and the Beds frequently turned

That you do not misplace any thing by carrying it out of one room into another, for that is the way to have them lost, or you foundly chid for their being not in their proper places.

That you be careful tor, and diligent to all Strangers, and see that they lack nothing in their Chambers, which your Mistriss or Lady will allow; and that your Close-stools and Chamber-pots be duly emptied and kept clean.

That you help the Laundry-Maid in a morning on a Washing-day.

That in the afternoon you be ready, to help the House-keeper or the Waiting-woman in their Preserving and Distilling.

To Southery-Maids in great Houses.

There are several Rooms that you must keep sweet and clean, as the Kitchen, Pantry, Wash-house, &c.

That you must and stower all the Plates and Dishes which are used in the Kitchen, also Kettles, Pots, Pans, Chamber-pots, with all other Iron, Brass, and Pewter materials that belong to the Chambers or Kitchen; and lastly, you must wash your own Linnen. Thus Ladies, I have endeavoured to shew your Servants their duties in their respective places, and what qualifications they ought to have, which may enable and fit them for your service.

vice. I shall now return to the Compleatment of those Accomplishments which best become your noble and gentile extraction.

I have already decared how you ought to be educated from your Minority to better Maturity of years, and from thence what your deportment ought to be to all persons in all places; their remaineth only some Instructions how you may talk and that elegantly, to the same persons at a distance, whether relations, friends, or acquaintance, and that is by Letter; having given you some general Instructions how to pen them, I shall lay you down some choice patterns of Letters upon several occasions for your imitation. I shall conclude at present this Treatife with some witty Dialogues, or interchangeable Discourses between several of your Sex eminent for birth, worth and ingenuity.

of July 10 Voted

Some

10 th

Some general and choice Rules for Writing of Letters.

First, what a Letter is? It is or ought to be the express Image of the Mind, represented in writing to a friend at a distance; wherein is declared what He or She would do or have done. This excellent use we have of Letters, that when distance of place will not admit of Union of persons, or converse Viva voce; that deplorable defect is supplied by a Letter or Missive; and indeed the necessity of conversing one with another as long as we live, layeth an unavoidable cogency of communicating our affairs each to other; without which friends at a distance could have no correspondence one with the other.

12

Though it lyeth not in the power of every one to make use of these excellent means for reciprocal Communication; yet we see daily the illiterate and and ignorant will make hard shifts rather than go without the benefit thereof, applying themselves to friends that can write;

write; or if they have none, to Scriveners or other strangers, venturing their secrets with them, rather than their friend shall go without the knowledg of them.

But as for you, Ladies, for whose use this Book was framed, I question not your Writing well; but without inditing well, it will signific but little; to the intent therefore you may pollish your Epistolical compositions, observe these two things therein, that is, the Matter and Form.

The Matter of Letters is any thing that may be discoursed of without any exception; or that which you would freely discover to your Relations, or discourse to your friend when present, the same you would do by Letter when he is absent, if it stands with conveniency. For sometimes it is not convenient to trust that in a sheet of Paper, which if lost or miscarried may be the great detriment, if not the utter ruin of the person. This matter you must know varieth much according to the subject you write upon. I shall endeavour to treat

trea

Whi

WI

CETT

tion

100 th

IW

M an neir edg hole

tion

the;

ing

enië,

the

not

NO

施品

to eat

treat a little of all the common subjects which are the usual occasion of Letterwriting,

Of Intelligence or Advice.

These Letters are the informers of our friends, our own, or others concerns. There is no great matter of invention required in them, for the very subject will afford you matter enough; all that is required of you in this, are these two things; the first, that you word your Matter well, and that you write not any thing unadvisedly, which you cannot justifie; but above all, have a care of News-writing, if it nearly concern the State, or any great person, thereunto belonging.

Of Friend-Chastisement.

IF you have a dear Female-friend, whom you suspect of any youthful excursions, especially levity, and would reduce her to a better understanding, mildly lay open her errors; and therein discover what an enemy she hath been to God and to her own reputation, that there there is no way to reconcile her felf to Godand the World, but by her future exemplary modest carriage. And that she may not think your reproofs have their original from malice or hatred to her pefron, declare, what a great esteem you ever had for her excellent parts, and rare endowments of mind; and what a pitty it is, such excellencies should be eclipsed by such foul miscarriages; that it is not your forrow alone, but the grief of several of her friends; and then fubtilly infinuate this, That had it not been a friend you so dearly loved, you could have been well content to have been filent; but contrary, the love you bear her, obliged you to reveal the evil reports you have heard of her, and how troubled you are, to see her commendations so limited with exceptions: Were it not that fhee is --- fhe is abfolutely one of the finest Gentlewomen in Europe. Then conclude that you hope the will take all in good part, and that she will highly oblige you, to use the same freedom as you have done with her, if she hearsought amis.

he iss

ind use

Of Giving Good Counsel.

YOu may in the first place excuse your rash intrusion, in giving counsel before it is required, but the bonds of Friendship were so strong, that you could not forbear; and therefore hoped she would take all in good part: and then inculcate this, that you did not doubt the sufficiency of her judgment, but being tender of her welfare, and knowing of what weighty concern the business in hand imported, that it was not for a year or a day, but for life, you could do no less, being full freight with entire affection, but tell her, she must consider - then tell her what your advice is, and be fure you back it with the best reasons and and arguments you can summon together; making it appear, that your counsel is both bonest and profitable, and not self-interested; and it only tends to her lasting good here, and eternal hereafter; husbanding your reasons according to the person you deal with. Conclude with an hearty Ejaculation to Goda God, that he may direct her for the best, following the good advice you have given, oca Call on the

If you are a Mother of Children, and would write to them, or to your Servant, you need not have rules in so doing, the plainer you write, the better it is, and they will more readily understand you; you need no more than fignifie to them what you would have done, and what undone; as for reasons, you need not alledg any to encourage them in their Duty, your power is sufficient, and your command is the only reason why they should do fo, or fo; however, if you fee any refractoriness in your Children, it will not be amis, to urge how just your commands are, and how easily performed, adding the promise of a reward, if they fulfil your defire; but threats and menaces of punishment, if they difobey; but concluding, you hope to find them so towardly, that they will not need correction.

vet

the

qu

an of

-075

100

Of Requesting a Kindness.

Letters of this nature, are of two kinds; the first is, when one Gentle-woman of quality sends to another, her very good friend, either for some courtesse to her self, or for another; and then she must begin with an acknowledgment of her love, and how consident she still remains in the assurance thereof; then make known your request, and how easily it may be done; and end with a promise of being sensible of the courtesse and retalliation.

If the person requesting be somewhat a stranger, but much inferiour to the person of whom she intreats the kindness, then she must begin with an insinuation, excusing her boldness in daring to request a savour of a person whom she never obliged by any former service; yet adding withal, that knowing her goodness, and the delight her Ladiship takes in bestowing courtesses on the undeserver, she fears not a denial: If it be an urgent occasion, let her endeavour to move her, to compassionate her misery, exaggerating the greatness thereof; insisting, that she hath no other way to retrieve her missortune; that if she cannot hereaster find any way a requital, yet she shall notwithstanding retain the remembrance of her love or charity sixed in her heart. Conclude with a Prayer to God, so to increase her selicity here, that she may never stand in need of kindness from any, till the Almighty hath sixed on her head a Crown of Glory.

Of Recommendation.

In the recommending of a person, you must shew your motives for so doing; as first, either as she is a Kinswoman, or Friend, and a person so worthy as deserving all favour, that were it not for ther goodness and vertue, you would not utter a word in her behalf; and conclude that what kindness is done her, is shewn to your self.

pra

per

25 off

070 lor

bu

per

m

no

022 ext

ev

How elegantly to complain of injuries done.

His may be done several ways; if you would mildly complain of a friend, and yet not break with him or her; let your complaint be mixt with praises; saying, that you are forry the persons deportment hath not been such as your friendship required; however, you are so charitable, as to believe the offence was not committed willingly, but rather through misprision or ill perswasion. But let the offence be ever so great, do not rail in opprobrious terms, though in fmart and significant expressions; faying, that you have connived too long patiently at the injuries done you; but finding, instead of amendment, the person growing worse, you would be more sensless than stones if you should not speak; referring your self to his own judgment, if passion hath not quite extinguisht the eye of reason, whether you are not very much zurong'd; however, upon a just acknowledgment, you are willing to forget all, and retain him or her still in the esteemation of a friend. Forms de for 100

100

W

100

Forms of Address or Visit.

IN the first place, infinuate your contentment in discoursing with your friend face to face, but since you are deprived thereof, you are happy still in having the opportunity and conveniency of writing: That you desire to hear of her welfare, both as to bealth and other concerns; that your defire is earnest to fee ber, and that those days wherein you fee her not, are years, and those years seem ages, especially when you receive no Letters from her; that if she will continue that correspondence, she shall find occasion of finding tault on your side more of importunity than carelesness or neglect; and so conclude with a protestation of the continuance of an inviolable friendship.

Forms of Congratulation.

This is done when we defire to rejoice with our friend for some great good that hath befaln him or her, either by escaping from some eminent danger, danger, or sickness. There are several other subjects of this nature wich you may treat on as they happen, and therefore I cannot prescribe you exact rules; only you must testifie the great satisfaction you receive in your friends welfare, and that your joy is not particular, but all in general have it when good and vertuous persons are advanced, and do prosper.

m

ve ill all

Uh.

to er,

ent er,

Of Consolation.

Letters of consolation seem to mitigate any evil or adversity that hath befaln a friend, which being various, cannot well have one remedy applied to them. If the cvil be but small, alledg they have no such great cause for their sorrowing, the subject not deserving it; that they ought to have courage; for pusillanimity wrongs the reputation; or if it be great insist that it will not last long: but if the disaster be very great indeed, you must then acknowledg how much you are concerned in his or her sufferings, and that having so great a share in her missortune, you are sitter to condole than comfort her therein, yet however the interest of alliance or friendship oblige you to apply some lenitive: That you cannot perswade her from grieving, for that would argue inhumanity; having sustain'd so great. a loss of a Husband, a Wife, Father, Mother, &c. But hope she or he will not be so heartless as to be carried away in the torrent of a fruitless grief; that Reafon mit be used: for Nature is not obliged to alter its course to please him or ber particularly, and exempt it felf for the fake of one from those Laws to which the whole world is fubject. In short, when a misfortune cannot be withstood, immoderate grief doth but exasperate it; and that being a Christian, there ought to be a submission to Gods Will, and subscribe with a prayer to the Almighty to give him or her patience to overcome this great affliction.

Forms of thanks for Courtesies received.

Thanks we must apply as well to the nature of the Courtesie, as to the quality of him that hath done it. You must must begin with a commemoration of the Courteste received, acknowledging the receiver not worthy thereof, having never done any obliging service; or if you have, yet this hath made double satisfaction; then promise that the remembrance of her love shall be deeply engraven in your beart; and that you will always retain a resentment of her kindness: This you may write if the kindness be so highly qualified that the person looks for no other satisfaction than acknowledgment only.

I have given you several forms of Letters, let me now shew you the parts of a Letter; the common ones are Superscription and Subscription.

The Superscription of Letters is two-fold; the one external, the other internal; the outward Superscription is that when the Letter is folded up, and containeth the name, title and abode of the person we write unto; but above all you must have a care that you give propertitles, such as besit the quality of the person.

The Title of a King is, To His most Excel-

Excellent Majesty. To the Queen the same, altering the article. To all Sons or Brethren of the King of England, To His Royal Highness. To a Duke, To His Grace. To a Dutehess the same. To all Earls, Marquesses, Viscounts and Barons, To the right Honourable. To Marchionesses and Countesses by Patent, To the Right Honourable. To all Lords, To the Right Honourable. To Knights, To the right Worshipful. To all Justices of the Peace, High Sheriss, Counsellors at Law, Esquires, either by birth or place, &c. To the Worshipful. The Subscription is placed at the low-

The Subscription is placed at the lower end of the Letter; and in writing to great Persons you must subscribe thus,

My Lord, or Madam,
Your most humble and most obedient Servant.

or Your most faithful, and most obliged Servant. S. G.

To Persons of meaner degree, sub-scribe your self thus,

or Your Friend and Servant.

If

If kindred write one to another, the greater may express the relation in the beginning of the Letter; but she that is of the meaner quality, must be content to specifie it in the Subscription.

Besides Superscription and Subscription, you must set down what year and day you write this Letter in, and the place from whence it came; yet it is not always convenient to mention the place, nor the relation the person hath to you to whom you write.

The beginning of all your Letters, ought to contain some small Complements by way of insinuation, with a short proposal of what you intend to say, this is only observed in long Letters: otherwise you may fall upon the Matter immediately.

As for the Matter, that is according to your Concern, and Inced not use much order in the discoursing it, but write what falls under your Pen, not standing much upon connection, unless it be in Letters of Answer, and then you must follow the order of those Letters, using some small transition. In the Conclusion clusion it is requisite that you testifie your affection with hearty wishes and prayers for the person you write unto.

For the stile of your Letters, let it not be affected but careless, not much differing from our usual way of speaking. In Letters of Complement supply the barrenness of your matter with the smoothness of your rhetorical exhornations; but have a care that in striving to avoid affectation you do not run into improprieties of speech, or barbarisms.

Consideer seriously what best besits the things you are to write of, regarding person, time and place. It would be absurd for any one to write to a superiour as to a samiliar, and that which would suit very well with an ancient man or a person in Authority, would be ridiculous for to use to a man of mean degree or of the younger sort; surely we are not to use the like expressions to a Soldier as we do to a Scholar or Lady.

Be not too prolix in your writing, nor too short; but observe a mediocrity or mean betwixt them: In the avoiding of tautologies, do not omit any thing thing that may conduce to the illustration of your matter.

Do not study for hard words, but such as are either plain, or very significant; this perspicuity of writing is to be measur'd according to the capacity of the person to whom the Letter is directed; for some will easily conceive what is difficult and bard for others to comprehend.

Have especial care of bloting your paper, giving it a large Margent; and be curious in the cutting your Letters, that they may delight the sight, and not tire the Reader.

Lastly, be curious in the neat folding up your Letter, pressing it so that it may take up but little room, and let your Seal and Superscription be very fair.

Having given you general Instructions how to compose and indite Leters, it follows that I here insert some of the best patterns for your imitation.

Letters

Letters upon all Ocasions.

Of Complement.

Madam,

I Am by so many Obligations yours, that the only want of occasion to give you testimony thereof, alone breeds in me all my discontent; esteeming my self unfortunate in nothing so much; and that the passion which carrieth me to your service, proves as unprofitable as extream; which forceth me to have recourse to intreaties, beseeching you to honour me with your commands, that (other means failing) my obedience may oblige you to believe that I am,

Madam Your moste humble and affectionate Servant.

Another of the like Nature.

Madam,

Though I have told you a thousand times by word of mouth how much I am your Servant, yet my Pen shall once

once more assure you of the same; I only wait for some eminent proofs to demonstrate the truth of my profession; I do heartily wish that you would not longer make me expect an opportunity, but lay your command, which may satisfie my impatience, to make you know and confess at the same time, that you may have more powerful and more considerable Servants, but never

One more Obedient and faithful.

Their Answer.

Madam,

I will be so presumptuous (since youdefire it) as to believe you love me, but on condition that you will acknowledg the passion I have to serve you. For as it only makes me merit the honour of your friendship, so I should be very glad that you would everlastingly conserve the memory thereof. Continue then in loving me as much as you please, and like-likewise esteem infallibly that I am more than all the World besides;

Madam,
Your very Servant.

Another Answer.

Madam, .

I Am not so unfortunate as I thought I was, since I see I hold some place still in your memory; yet the grief which I entertain for not deserving the bonour, hath reduced my thoughts to such a moderation, that I am in doubt whether I should complain or rejoyce. It remains in you only to allay the discontent of my mind, by giving me some employment in your service, which may witness the passion I have to maintain the quality of

Madam,

Your faithful Servant.

A Letter from a Gentleweman at a Boarding-School in Hackney to her quondam School-fllow in London.

Indeared Friend,

Have laid aside the exercise of my Needle, that I may employ my hand some little time in the management of my Pen, that herein I may affure you, that the strong inclinations I have to manifelt my self your friend upon all accounts, will not permit me to let slip any opportunity wherein I may evidence this truth. Iam troubled that you are not always as ready to bonour me with your commands, as I am zealous and forwards to obey them. That cordial respect I bear you, hath so strongly link'd me to you, that into whatfoever condition fortune shall throw me, I shall still retain the memory of your affection, and must not live when I cease to love you whom above mine own welfare I esteem; and therefore must subscribe my self, dearest friend.

Your most affectionate, &c.

M. G.

The Answer to it.

Most Obliging Friend, Am ravisht with content, to see how your curious art and delicateness thereof, can so happily translate your hand and fancy from one flower to another, the one as the draught of your Needle the other of your Pen; were 1 to be judg, I knew not which to give the greatest praise or encomium, the Flourishes of the Pen, or the Flowers of the Needle; the one might make Arachny's Maids of Honour (I mean those delicate finger'd Nuns) to blush to be out-done; and from the other a Secretary to a Queen may gather eloquence and fancy. You need not make the least question of my love, or the integrity thereof; for although I want the art of Rhethorick to represent it, my deeds and services shall be the elaborate Elocutors which shall express my felf to be,

> Your most cordially affectionate Servant. S. L.

> > From

From the above-named M. G. to the said S. L. acknowledging her and her School-fellows sorrow for her absence, giving an account of the accustomed care of her Governess.

Dear Friend,

N E remain in the state and condition you left us, there being no access as yet of any more numbers, but only of our griefs for your absence; which increase, as our desires do increase, or our daity discourses of you. We understood not our happiness till your departure from us, being now made sensible of the good we enjoyed, by being deprived thereof. Our Governe s is as active and watchful as ever, down with the Sun and up with the Lark, and then doth her Messenger summon us to desert our beds; if the perceives any unwilling, the subtilly tempers the unpleasantness of her early importunity; she perswades them thereunto, by alledging, what benefit thereby will accrew to their healths; nor is her accustomed care to be discom-

他

pro

discommended, fince therein she aims not only at the benefit of our Bodies, but the eternal welfare of our Souls in the performance of our duties to God and our Parents. She continues her former jealousie, not suffering a Letter to come into the House without her knowledg thereof; and herein her prudence is highly to be commended ,for by her striff examination of these, Paper-meffengers, she shuts the doors, against a great many which might be the Bawds that might betray the Obedience of some, and the Chastity of others. Neither are there any Answers returned to any Letters but what she is privy to; by which means, there is nothing we write we need be ashamed of, were it legibly written on our Forebeads, as well as Papers. I question not but you have heard your old Bedfellow Mrs. F. G. hath lately entertained a new one, being married to a Gentleman, as deserving in excellency of parts as nobility of birth; Ilong to hear of the like in you, whose good fortunes shall always be attended with the

the greatest acclamations of joy which can proceed from

Your most affectionate Friend, M. G.

The Answers

Indearedly Beloved,

13

is ed

12

ne

Y O'U honour me much with the testimony of your affection; and do. glad my beart by giving me to understand, that your Governess continueth her vigilancy and acustomed care; if The reap the praise thereof, the profit will be yours, and yet she will be againer too; for this will be the means to increase the number of her Scholars. Mrs. F. G's. marriage is no news to me, wishing her all happiness in her choice, and that her fortune may be answerable to her incomparable virtues; but for your good wishes to me in the like nature, (though I am thankful to you for them, yet) I should not be difpleased, if you did forbear to utter them; for if good Husbands are Miracles, why.

why should I afflict my self with the vain expectation of them, since Miracles are ceased. I can best content my self with my present condition, having thereby a greater liberty to express my self to be

Your passionate and most obliged Friend and Servant.

S. L.

lear

Fa

the 5

Ma

To a Kinswoman discoursing about Fashions.

Beloved Coufin,

I Thank you for your Papers, and the trouble of that spruce inventory you sent me, which I desired more out of curiosity than any intention of conformity thereunto; for indeed the vanity was sufficient to satiate an ordinary appetite; and besides, mine is no way greedy of such idle kickshaws. I find fault with most of these Modes, not for their levity only but brevity also, especially such as are far-fetcht for a fortnights wearing, and leaves not a good Huswife a relique worth the keeping. I have learned in a great manner, That the Fashion of the World passeth away, and thereof I cannot think it but a piece of great imprudence, to spend so much industry upon a frail and perishing objeet; yet Iam not against such natural ornative decencies which may difference persons and bring not an unprofitable expence upon their finery; no more than I discommend a sumptuous Feast, when I censure one that is ridiculous; for I know not what secret power of blandishment there is in an hand some ornament, even to court beauty it self; & therefore it must be more advantagious to those, whose small imperfections it conceals. But of all incongruities, deformity and the fashion, I take to be the ugliest; you know how indifferently I am concern'd in these cases, and therefore will eafily pardon this humour of Your most bumble Servant.

A Letter from one Lady to another, condemning Artificial-beauty.

Can

1200

the 中山

Ch

216

山山

Madam,

YOU are so absolute in the endowments of your mind and perfections of body, that I cannot but honour you; having formerly experienced your love to me particularly and the greatness of your wit to all; I hope you will excuse this rudeness, it I defire your opinion concerning borrowed beauty from art; and whether it may belawfully used by fuch as profess Religion and a good Conscience? I must confess my own judgment is much unsetled; nevertheles, I have been informed by many learned and godly men, that it is a great fin, and undoubtedly inconfistent with a Christian and a good Conscience. I do find that washing and painting is condemned in boly Writ, as the practice of loofe, licentious, and lascivious women; who with the deforming of their Souls and polluting their Consciences . do use the Art for embellishing their Countenances. The New Testament affirms we cannot ai.

肾-

THO

ced

100

IIIO

od

ned off,

nd

he

we

ot

cannot make one bair of our bead white or black; and if we have neither the liberty nor are to assume the power to alter the complexion of our bairs, then much less the complexion of our Cheeks and Faces. It argueth, besides, ingratitude to the Almighty, when we are not content with what He hath made; and the highest presimption in thinking or daring to mend it. St. Paul and St. Peter prescribed how women should be clad, that is with modesty, Shamefastness and sobriety, and not with Gorgeous Apparel, or with braided Hair, Gold or Pearls; and if these things were forbiden, how much more is washing or painting the Face; which is suitable (some think) to none but light spirits, fuch who are not yet redeemed from the vanity of their converfation? So that this Artificial beauty may appear to be divinely forbidden as an enemy to Truth, which needeth none but its own native complexion; and is so far from being beholding to Art for any addition to enliven her colour, or to put a blush upon it, that be

pre If t

cles

ŋ,

to Th

Ga

my mo

the

the

Wh

thi

her

that she converteth even Deformities and Decays into Advantages and Perfe-Etions. Besides that this adding of colour, and complexion proceeds from Pride, is without controversie; and should it not reflect on wantonness, yet it doth on arrogance; to borrow, and then challenge that beauty to be ours, which is not but by an adventitious wealth. Moreover this self-conceit is an enemy to bumility and grace, and would by degrees over-top all vertue. And now grant it were neither scandalously finful, nor absolutely unlawful, yet the offence it giveth to the true and ftrict Professors of Piety is a sufficient argument, that it ought not to be practifed. Although many things may be permitted in themselves, yet they become evil and are to be forborn, when others are offended at them. Neither is this all, for the very name of a painted face is enough to destroy the reputation of her that usethit; and exposeth her to all manner of reproaches. We are taught to follow things of a good report, that we may not only be good, but that in all things we may preserve the reputation of a good name. If the light of Scriptures were not fo clear and full against all Artificial beauty, yet the light of Nature doth feem to discover an uncomeliness therein. There is none but may conclude, if God threatens to punish frange apparel, he will not spare to punish strange faces.

en ich

0 ne

Madam, pardon the tediousness of my Letter, which I have extended almost to the length of a Treatife; I was the more large, because I would be the more fully satisfied in your answer, which in a labouring expectation I attend; if your Ladiship will deign me this favour, you will infinitely oblige Madam, her, who is Your most humble and -affectionate Servant.

The Answer of aningenicus Lady.

Madam,

OU have been pleas'd to impose a great task upon me, which I am resolved to discharge, not so much

338 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

of oft

10 2

nit.

24

he

be yea

Cal

lia

the 28

be

to shew any wit or knowledg in my felf, as your power over me, by my obedience to your commands; what I shall fay on this subject in the defence thereof, I shall be obliged thereunto by the rules of Reason, and not the liberty of pra-Etice. I cannot deny but that several reverend and learned persons are of a judgment opposite to mine, which have prevailed on the credulty of many young Ladies, and did at first upon my own, until I began to examine the grounds of their opinions, and to value more the weight of their reasons than the gravity & numbers of their persons. I do not find that these persons can produce out of Scripture any reasons of force which expresly forbid the using any Art in the imbellishing the Countenance: The opinions of men are not of any power to charge the Soul with sin in things of outward use and custom; neither in this, particular are the Divines themselves all of one mind; for I know many excellent persons, who wisely forbear to condemn the use of these things as sin, that are innocently beloful to the beauties of modest women; for indeed they are far from sin, or not from sin, as the minds of those that use them are disposed either to a modest decency, or to pride and vanity. Now where it is objected that Fezabel was devoured by Dogs, because The painted her eyes; if your Ladiship be pleased to look again on the History, you shall find that the painting of her face or eyes was thirteen or fourteen years before the Prophet Elisha presaged her ruin; and it was no more a cause of her dreadful death than the dresfing her head, or her looking out at the Window, which was at one and the same time, and one of them as innocent as the other. If all that Fezabel did is to be avoided as a sin, we may not call a solemn Assembly, or keep a Fast, because she did so, as appeareth by the same History: we may not embrace or kiss a friend, because foab did so when he killed Abner; and Judas when he betrayed his Master. And as for Herodias dancing, which was the cause of John Baptists death, you shall find in the Gospel that she danced alone, which R 2

75

ex-

s to ties

in aln

We

fan

We

Te.

is allowed by our aufterest Divines, and by the precise Matrons in the education ftheir Children. She danced not with Herod, but before him; and it was not the decent motion of her feet, but the disorderly motions of her heart, and the perversness of her spirit to the Do-Strine of St. John, that was the cause of his murther. And as for those places in the Prophets, from whence scrupulous and censorious persons do infer that the painting of the face is a sin; we may truly answer, it as not therefore unlawful, because we find it there sometimes condemned as unreasonable; or because vain and loose Women do pra-Stife it, therefore the modest must altogether disclaim it. Believe me, Madam, in the whole Scripture there is not any Mral command to be found that doth expresly forbid this artificial adorning the face. We may read that Queen Efther made use of sweet perfumes, of gorgeous babilliments, and beautiful colours; nay what soever was then in fashion, the more to attract the eyes and affections of the King unto her; and this was in her so far from a fin, that it had been almost a sin in her nor to have done it. We find that Rebeccab almost in the infancy of the World, received ornaments for her bands; her neck and her ears; and certainly the thought it no diffearagement to her modesty or her piety to wear them. Neither is it any new invention for Ladies to use Artificial helps for the advancement of their beauties; it is as general as ancient, and there is no Nation but doth practife it without any reproach of vanity or pride. And although in this Nation a commendable discretion is used in powdering, curling, and gumming the hair, and quickning the complection, yet in forreign parts it is every where frequently done, and as freely owned. It is strange methinks that supplies should be allowed of for bodily defects and deformities; the Shoomaker is imployed and commended for making the body bigher; and the Taylor for making it straighter; and must we account it a fin or scandal to advance the beauty of the face? Much more might be alledged to prove the truth ton

lose of a truth hereof, but I have been already too tedious, and have punished your expectation with the length of my Letter, which notwithstanding the innocence of the subject, is a sin or fault in her, who is Madam,

Tour most dovoted Servant, &c.

A Lady to her Daughter, perswading her from wearing Spots and Black-patches in her Face.

Daughter, HE indulgent care of a loving Mother makes me keep my eye continually on you; it hath been my great comfort hitherto in that you have feem'd a profest enemy against the vices of this present age; but now it is no small grief to me that I hear you are too much addicted to its fashions; and that lately you have been seen with those deformities which are commonly called Black-Patches. A fashion till of late never practifed by any, nor your half-Moons used in the Turkish Seraglio; no nor ever read of in all the Histories of the vanities

n

eat of his ief ad by mi-

10

he ties

vanities of Women. It appeareth strange to me, that young Gentlewomen should lo se their reason with their modesty, and think that they add to their beauty by fubstracting from it. I must deal plainly with you, I am afraid that the black Oath of God-damn-me in the mouth of a Ranter, and the Black-patch in the face of a Gentlewoman, are near of a kin. one to another. I shall therefore assume the freedom of power which is due unto me, and command you to wear them no more till I am better satisfied in their decency or lawfulness; thus not doubting of your obedience, I commit you with my bleffing to the bleffed protection of the God of all bleffings, and rest,

Your tenderly loving and careful Mother,

M.N.

The Answer of a dutiful Daughter.

Madam,
TT is as well Religion as Duty in me,
To render you all observances, which I shall make my delight as well as R 4

216 me M

200

employment. My greatest blessing is the continuance of your love, which obligeth me to encrease my thank fulness as well as my obedience. I perceive fome cenforious tongue hath been too busie with my face, and hath endeavoured to throw. dirt on it, because it hath been lately spotted in the fashion; a fashion that hath as much innocence to plead for its excufe, as custom for its authority. Venus the Goddess of beauty was born with a Motticella, or natural beauty-spot, as if Nature had set forth a pattern for Art to imitate. You may see every day some little clouds over the face of the Sun, yet he is not ashamed of his attraction; nay, some of late with an Optick-glass have discovered some macula or spots in the very face of the Sun, yet they are not attributed as his deformities. The Moon when she is at Full and shining in her greatest luster, hath in her face some remarkable spots, and herein is placed her chiefest glory; as being in every thing inconstant but in this. When I put on my Mask, which is no more nor beter than one great patch.

patch, you do commend me for it; and will you be displeased with me for wearing a few black patches? which if they are cut into Stars, do represent unto me whither I would go; or if into little Worms, whither I must go; the one of them teltifying in me the sense of my unworthiness to increase my bumility, and the other the height of my meditations to advance my affections. It is the unhappiness of the most harmless things to be subject to the greatest misconstru-Etion; and on the same subject from whence others draw their suspicions of curiosity to accuse our pride, we derive the greatest arguments of discipline and instruction to defend our innocence; neither is the ignorance of antiquity in relation to them, any argument of weight to condemn their novelty; for the Black-bags on the head are not much older than the Black-spots on the face, and much less may be said for them, only they have had the good luck in the City not to meet with contradiction, although in the Country they are much cavil'd at, unless worn by 5 GentleGentlewomen of eminent note and quality. Nevertheless, according to the obligation of my duty, to give you in all things satisfaction, I am determined to wear them no more; not that I find any such vanity in them, but that by the fruits of my obedience, you may perceive what an absolute power your commands have over her, who is

Madam,
Your most humble and most obedient Daughter, S. N.

Love protested, with its Repulse.

Madam.

IT hath pleased Heaven you should have the sole command of my affections, with which I am joyfully content; and stand disposed to obey you in every thing, when you shall be pleased to count me worthy of your fervice. Enjoying you I must account my self the happiest man in the world; but being deprived of you I shall not only live, but die miserably; either then reward

,0

144.

the

in ed ind

by ay

inc ald of in af-

W.

he

100

e,

m

him who adores you, or chastise him who idolizeth you. Yet must I confessall my good do proceed from you, and that all the evil I can endure must come from your disdain; however hoping that you will commiserate my languishing condition, I shall greedily subscribe my self.

Intirely Yours,&c.

The Answer.

IF it hath pleas'd Heaven you should love me, you canot blame me though you suffer by it; should I accept the tenders of affection from all such amorous pretenders, I might be married to a whole Troop, and make my selfa legal Prostitute. My inclinations lean not your way; wherefore give me leave to tell you, That you would do better to bestow your affections on some Lady who hath more need of a Servant than I have. And if you think your affection ought not to go unrewarded, receive the perswasions which I give you

348 The Gentlewomans Companion, or you never to trouble me more, lest you run a worse bazard by persevering in your intentions. Be advised by her who is Your faithful Monitor and bumble Servant, &c.

Ishall swell this Volume into too great a bulk should I give you patterns of Letters for all occasions; let what I have here set down suffise, refering you for your better information and instruction to the incomparable Letters of Monsieur Voiture, translated into English; Mr. Howel, and Mr. Lovedays ingenious Letters, with a many more; every Booksellers-shop affording great plenty. And now to conclude, pray accept of these ingenious Dialogues, which will tend as well to your further instruction, as recreation.

Pleasant

Pleasant Discourses and witty Dialogues between Males and Females, as well gentiliza by Birth as accomplish by generous Education.

> The Resolute Lover: A Pastoral Dialogue.

> > Amyntas.

Tay, dearest stay, Amaryllis. Shepherd, why do you thus follow me?

Amynt. I needs must follow, Sweetest, for you have my heart.

Amar. Who, I! prithee tell me where it is, and how I shall restore it?

Amynt. It hangs upon your eyes, but being there secrebed with disdain, and led with their luster, it flys for ease unto your rosie lips; but being repulsed thence with barsh denials, it hovers still about you; boping to rest it self within your breast; but all its endeavours have been fruitless, for your hard beart would not give it entertainment.

Amar. Well, if my heart be so hard as you would make it, Irejoyce in my safety, it being then strong enough to be a fence to my honour.

Amynt. You make a fence in vain to guard the Sheep where no wolf ever came.

Amar. O but my fears, Amyntas! How shall I cherish the man that would undo my Chastity?

Amynt. Then cherish me, who never attempted any thing to cast a spot on that white innocence to which I am a most religious Vetary.

Amar. And canst thou love, and yet be chaste in thy desires?

Amynt. Yes, fairest, I could be content to love and have our fouls united, though we are not conjoined in our perfons.

Amar. Let me contain thee then within mine arms; the force of greatest winds that shake, nay root up the aged Oak, shall not divide us.

Amynt. My joys do everflow! my happiness is too great to survive the enjoyment: O let me vent my grateful beart, or else it bursts! Here, bere's a spreading Poplar, under whose cooler thade shade thou shalt seal thy promise Amaryllis.

Amar. 'Tis done, not to be repented of; and now methinks I here could stay, my dear Amyntas, till death moved his cold dart, and beckoned us to follow him to the lower shades; and by his angry power, make these my warm embraces cold:

Amynt. May we never, never part,
That thy delight I may prolong,
Dear Amaryllis hear this Song.

Calls our Souls into the ear where thy greedy listnings fain would run into the sound they hear.

Lest in desire
To fill the Quire, Themselves they tye
To harmony.

Let's kiss and call them back again.

2. Now let us orderly convey

Our Souls into each others Breast,

Where interchanged let them stay,

Slumbring in a melting rest.

Then with new fire

Let them retire And

352 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

And still present Sweet fresh content. Youthful as the early day. 3. Then let us a Tumult make, Shuffling so our Souls, that we, Careles who did give or take, May not know in whom they be. Then let each smother, And stifle the other, Till we expire In gentle fire; Scorning the forgetful Lake.

Addresses of Love and Service from Erotusto Aurelia.

Erot. M Adam, invited or rather forced, by the just commendations which Englands Metropolis and other famed places attribute to your merits, I here prostrate my respects and service, which I shall desire you to esteem obedient to your will s untill the time of my perseverance manifest them to be constant and faithful. Aurel. Sir; report is commonly a

Lyar,

Lyar, and now proves more favourable to me than truth; you know I am flatter'd, and you add thereunto by presenting seigned love and service to the honour of this imaginary merit.

Erot. Madam, you seem ingrateful to overkind and indulgent Nature, in wronging that incomparable beauty she hath prodigally bestow'd upon you, which is so Paramount, it can produce no other effects but fervent desires and passionate endeavours to serve you.

Aurel. Sir, your Rhetorick may work Miracles, but it can never alter my belief.

Erot. Then, Madam, I see there's nothing remains but my future obedience and affection, which must condemn your misbelief, and authorize this truth.

Aurel. Such expressions float commonly on the streams of this Ages affection, which usually produce nothing but Artifice, although they pretend to the greatest service.

Erot. I know it is ordinary for some to confirm Promises with Oaths, when at that instant they ne'r intend to perform them; but that which will insuse a belief

354. The Gentlewomans Companion, or

lief that I follow not the common custom of the times, is and will be the sincerity of my love, and constancy of my service.

Aurel. Sir, your enterprise will not be worth your pains; and should you obtain your desire, I know not how you will bear with the loss of being cheated in your hopes.

Erot. However, Madam, my refolution is fixt, and although you should make the end of it unfortunate or successless, yet it shall be the glory of my courage that I fell from high attempts.

Aurel. Seeing you thus ground your hope on misfortune, hope can no way harm you; for if it deceive you, it makes you notwithstanding happy.

Erot. May I be so bappy!

Aurel. I shall never advise a soul of your generolity to rest upon such a design, the resolution being so mean that it must needs be followed with forrow and repentance.

Erot. My encouragement will be the gaining of as much bonour in the enterprize as difficulty in the worthy atchie-ving.

Aurel.

Aurel. If you made but half the proofs of these many proffers of service, you would be famous throughout the whole Empire of Love.

Erot. Madam, have patience to see the guidance of my love by the light of that fire your fair self hath kindled, which when your Luminaries are by death extinct, shall never be extinguished.

Amerry Dialogue between an ingenious Gentlewoman and a Poetaster or Rimer;

Poet. MAdam, I'm come to tell you. I have writ

Your praise and glory wrapt up in my

Then pray accept and grace it with a finile,

Your humble servant I my self shall stile.

Gent. After she had read his Verses, thus she speaks; Now prethee tell me, are these lines of your own composition?

Poet. They are indeed, Madam.
Gent. Now beshrew me if I did not think

356. The Gentlewomans Companion, or think so; the conceits are as poor as thy habit, and the whole matter like thy self, hunger-starved; prithee leave off riming, and beg some other way, in the ancient manner of such who haunt Moorfields on Sundays; if thou hadft but a sore leg or arm, with a Partner, the structure of whose body is built on timber, (in plain English) a wooden-leg; thou would'st thrive on't.

Poet. Accept, pray Madam, what I here have writ.

Pay first your Poet, and then show your Wit.

Gent. Then I see you are a Mercenary Scribler: Come tell me truly, how many have you presented with this Encomium with no other alteration than the name; I dare lay my life an hundred; your Verses are great Travellers; and yet I dare ingage my life they have never been as far as Parnassus; but there is not a Gentlemans house in the whole Kingdom in which they have not been conversant, and yet I wonder how they came to have such universal entertainment! as for my own part I must confess plainly they are too loufie and beggarly to lodg underneath my roof; they will infect my Foot-men.

Poet. If these do not like you, Lady, fair and bright,

Here's more I do present unto your fight.

Gent. Did you make them your self? Poet. Did I not? what a question is that? how do you think I should come by them, unless I bought them? Some I know can buy Verses cheaper than they can make them; but I am no Salesman in one respect, though in another I may be said to be so; Sales-men use to have Clothes in their own Shop which Taylors make, and yet they own the Work.

Gent. I marry, Sir, these savour of raptures and Poetical fancies!

Poet. Do you fmell them, Madam? I hope they do not offend your Ladiships Nose.

Gent. But bold Sir, bow comes this about? here is one Verse is running a race with another, and bath the start of him three feet at least?

Poet. I did it on purpose to see which would would run fastest; or in imitation of a Hare, who is swifter of foot than a Dog, and therefore is commonly before-hand with him.

Gent. I, but Sir, here is another hath ran too much, bath prickt his foot and balts down right?

Poet. Why, look you, there lieth the conceit, my invention is rare by way of imitation; lame halting Verses are commendable, or Magnum Jovis incrementum had never been writ; herein lyeth the greatest art, and herein I express no small courage, making my enemies come short by a leg; and to tell you truly, I am a sow'r Satyrist, (alias) an lambrographer.

Gent. In the name of goodness, what was that you mumbled! I hope you are no Conjurer; there's a word with all my beart !

Poet. Why, this it is to be ignorant; or as we Latins say, Ars nullum habet inimicum nisi ignorantem; it is my pride and glory that I speak beyond the reach of Phlegmatick seminine capacity; but I will condescend so low as to explain explain the fignificant word of my own composition, lambographer; in the first place, know it is partly Greek, and partly I know not what; but the fignification in short, is a keen and sharp Versisier, whose lines prick worse than Spanish Needles; or in short, you may hang your self in a pair of them.

Gent. I thank you, Sir, for your good advice; but if you and your lines are such dangerous company, pray let me have no more their society; and so fareavell.

07

1.4

ath

and.

th

ray

are 部in I ny

to bat

de de he a-

in in

Poet. Nay, one word more; I cannot only hang with Iambicks, but I can fetch blood with Asclepiads; cudgel and bastinado with Saphicks, and whip to death with Phaleuciums.

Gent. Pray practife, Sir, first on your self; 'tis no matter which of them you take to free the world of such an insufferable burthen. Adieu.

360 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

Aform of Discourse at a casual meeting between Silvester and Sylvia.

to m

Ina

on Silvest. MAdam, I see your inclinations to Vertue so powerful, that you are ever restless but when you are in the society of such who make the greatest proof thereof.

Sylvia. Sir, your judgment concerning the company is most true; for there cannot be more accomplished persons, nor any honester content found in any society whatever; but your courtesie exceeds, in atributing praises to her who least deserves them, and comparatively to the rest, hath no considerable perfection.

Silvest. Your modesty and humility (which is the crown of your excellencies (makes you speak disadvantagiously of your self, which I must not connive at, lest I run into an unpardonable errour; and I should look upon my self as most unworthy to look upon so fair an object, and not to admire its perfections, the luster whereof can never be eclosed by your undervaluings.

Sylvia.

Sylvia. Sir, the higher you strain your eloquence, the more reason I have to shun those Elogies whereof you are as liberal towards me, as Heaven is sparing to me of those gifts you so much commend; wherefore pray desist, and in this company select some better subject to exercise your wit and language on.

li-

er-

en

Ke

1%ere le-el-

not

A method of Courtship on fair and - honourable terms.

Inamorato. Lusippe.

Inam. I Shall ever account this, Madam, the happiest day I ever had in all the course of my life, which hath given me the honour and satisfaction of your acquaintance.

Lusip. Sir, if I knew ought in me worthy your merit, I should readily imploy it in your service; but being fully sensible of my impersections and weakness, I believe the knowledg of me will yield you less happiness than you imagine.

S

Inam.

362 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

Inam. Madam, I wonder you should wrong so much perfection.

Lusip. I wrong not any thing in my possession, but it is your courtesie and rhetorick that would willingly excuse my defects, to make your own sufficiency to appear so much the more.

Inam. Pardon me, Madam, it is the charming power of your vertues and merits, which obligeth me not only to honour and serve you, but also to defire some part and interest in your affection.

Lusip. Sir, what soever a Maid with bonour may do, you may request of me; I should be as word of judgment as defective in beauty, did I not respect your quality, admire your vertues, and wish you a happiness equal to your demerit.

Inam. Madam, I affure you, my affections are real, and I hope fincerity doth wait on your good wishes; but if you will extend your favour, I cannot but be the happiest of all men.

Lusip. Sir, as I cannot persuade my self you will fix your affection on a person so little deserving; so I wish with all my heart

your your happy Stars maziguid you to a match that may become your worth.

Inam. Do not entertain so palpable a mistake: I have proposed to my self an unseigned resolution to honour and serve you to my uttermost endeavour; and your resusal cannot lessen my affection; suffer me then to bear the honourable title of your Servant.

Lusip. Sir, I have absolutely render'd my self up to the disposal of my dear Parents, consult them; if you prevail on their consent, you shall not doubt the conquest of my affection.

15

nd

to

th di-af.

rity

11-

0117

Inam. You oblige me infinitely, and I must thank you as heartily; I will not rest a minute till I know my sentence of life or death, which consists in the resusal of my love, or its acceptance.

5 2

An

An impertinent and lying Travellers Discourse with his witty and jocose Mistress.

Erraticus. Constantia.

Errat. M Adam, yur Seat is so incomparable, that I have not seena better in all my Travels.

Constant. It seems then you are a Tra-weller.

Errat. I am no less: Did you never travel Lady?

Constant. I hope Sir, you do not take me for a Lady-errant; however, Sir, I shall acknowledg I have travell'd through the universe, and yet was never out of my own Country.

Errat. Hay day! how can that be? Constant. I pity your want of appre-binsion; why, Sir, this is no such notorious contradiction, if you consider that the Cosmographers of these latter times have taught us in their Books to surround the world, and yet never stir a foot; I have read of some Countries.

Errat. And you may hear talk of many many wonderful passages; but pish, talk is but talk; give me the man hath measur'd those Countries you have heard talk of; and can readily recount you the names of all the petty Towns as well as Cities in a whole Kingdom.

Constant. You have seen many Cities abroad, I pray what think you of London?

Errat. London! ha, ha, ha, like a Cock-boat to the Royal-Soveraign, comparatively to Cities I have seen.

Constant. I pray name one, Sir.

Errat. Why, Madam, I took shipping in the Downs, and had no sooner arriv'd to the height of the Cape of Good-hope, but pailing by the Grimanians, Hungarians and Sclavonians, I came to Vienna, a pretty Village, and for scituation much like Humsted, its distance about seven leagues from Civil, from whence we are stor'd with Oranges.

Constant. Sir, I have read that Vienna is in Germany, and Civil in Spain.

Errat. Pish, what care I for reading, however as you say, I cannot but ac-

S 3

know-

knowledg the people in Spain are as much or more Civil than any other; but if Civil be not in Germany, then I was neither in Civil or in Vienna in my life. I have been in Paris too, and do know the Founder thereof.

Constant. Pray, Str, inform my curiosity with the name of the Founder.

Errat. His name was Parismus the son of Palmerin of England, and hence the City was called Paris; some would have it called Lutetia, because the women are so well skill'd in an instrument called a Lute.

Constant. Good Sir, proceed; what observations did you make whilst you were in that famous City?

Errat. In the first place there is a famous University called Pontneuse, whose Students ply their business very notably; studying most part of the night, and are such notable disputants, they confute all that come that way after nine at night.

Here are excellent Comedians, the Women are the best, who act their parts notably, and take great pains to do things to the life. In the Summertime Foot-boys and Laquys do here fwarm as flyes in August; and that season is so sultry hot, that the fiery heat continues with the people all the Winter following.

do

Riding one day in the street, a dust arose so thick and great that I lost my way; that way I rid, the wind drove the dust, and did not leave me till I was within a league of Naples, and then I found where I was.

11-

he

Ce

uld

704

ent

tac

JETE.

ery

the nts,

21-

the heir

011

do

Constant. What a loss had England sustain'd had you never been found!

Errat. Entring this City, I found the people all clad in silk, too soft and effeminate for me to converse with all. From hence I went to Florence, from whence we borrow the art of making. Custards, which are therefore called Florentines. From hence I went to Milan, famous for Haberdashers, from thence called in London Millaners. Thence to Padua, hence come our Padding or Stroking Doctors, vulgarly called Mountebanks.

Constant. You report wonders ! go on, Sir. Errat. Errat. Of all the Champain Countries in the world, Venice for my money. What lofty Mountains and pleafant Valleys! What spacious Downs for the merry hunt! Oh how I have made the Woods ring there with the Dukes dogs! And now I talk of him, I had never left the place, had it not been for the excessive love of his chief Concubine towards me; who being discovered stealing the Piazza to carry with her in her journey with me for England, was secur'd, and I forc't to sly for't.

Constant. Is't possible?

Erat. I took post from thence to Genoa, from thence to Madrid, and so to Leyden.

Constant. Excellent; and bow were you entertain'd by the Dutch?

Errat. We were drunk together every day; but I'll say this for them, the Devil is but a Dunce to them when they are in their drink. The last thing I heard there, was a design to charm the Indies, and bring it to Amsterdam in Butter firkins. Had I staid longer in Holland I should have died on a surfeit

of

of Bore; but I washt it down with a Fox at Flushing; here I met with a buck-some Froe, with whom I went to Mid-dleburgh, and left her as drunk as a bitch at Rotterdam; and so taking shipping from thence I landed at Trig Rairs.

Constant. Well, Sir, I see the difference between you and truth is so great, that there cannot be expected a reconcilement; wherefore I shall leave you.

A Gentleman accidentally hapning into a room where a Company of Ladies were well known to him.

Gent. YOur pardon, Ladies; let not my coming interrupt your Discourse, but rather give me the freedom that I may participate in the satisfaction.

Ladies. Our discourse is of no great concernment; we can take some other time to continue it, that we may now give way to yours, which we doubt not will prove every whit, if not more agreeable.

Gent

370 The Gentlewomans Companion, or

Gent. My invention, Ladies, cannot want a subject for Discourse, where the company so overflows with wit and ingenuity; but my tongue will want expressions to answer your Critical expectations.

long

yet 1

rour thro

teet

fervi

frai

群上

the pert

$1178

P20

700

Ladies. Sir, we acknowledg no such thing in our selves, and therefore let not that we pray you be the Subject of your eloquence, lest we suspect you intend to laugh at us.

Gent. Ladies, you must suffer me, notwithstanding all this, that though modesty interdicts you the acknowledging a truth, yet the respect I bear to Ladies, commands me not only to acknowledg it, but also to divulge and maintain it.

Ladies. We confess, Sir, the frailty and Weakness of our Sex requres some support; and for my own part I cannot look upon any person so worthy as your felf to be our Champion.

Gent. What power have I to vindicate your person, is derivative from your vertues; and were I so feeble that the supporters of my body were no longer 10

m.

re

nd

nt

ch

ot

ur

to ie,

20

to ge lty me not our

hat

no jer longer able to support that burthen; yet onepropitious glance of any of your eyes would dart heat and vigor through my whole body, and so my feet would be enabled to run in your service.

Ladies. Have a care, Sir, you do not strain your invention above the reach of an Hyperbole; but lore your fancy to the meanness of our capacity; if you canot perform it at present we will give yo u time.

Gent. Ladies, I am fearful my company may be troublesome, or interrupt you from more agreeable conversation; wherefore your Servant, Ladies.

FINIS.

Advertisement.

THose most Famous Cathartique and Diuretick Pills, fo well known for the Cure of the Dropfie; Scurvy, and all other Salt, Sharp, and Watry Humours, &cq. wherewith was Cured the late Lord General Monck of the Dropsie, in the year 1669. Some Hundreds beforeand fince having re-Invented by Dr. ceived absolute Cure thereby. William Sarmon; are fince the Decease of the Said Doctor prepared by his late Wife Mrs. Editha Samyne, with whem he left the Receipt and Secret thereof; and are now to be had at the House where the Doctor lived and dyed, and from Edward Thomas Book filler at the Adam and Eve in Little-Brit. tain in London where all persons in City and Countrey may be furnished with them, The 2 s. Box contains 10 Pills the 4 s. Box contains 20 Pills, &cc.

Also sold by the said Edward Thomas, Dr. Bockett's Tincture Solis, The Tincture of the Sun, being a most excellent Balsamick Spirit and wonderful Arcanum incuring the following Distempers, As the falling Sickness, Mother-Fits, Convulsion-Fits, the Megrim in the Head, the Palsie, and the Apoplexy, it helps the tormenting fits of the Wind Chol ick, and for the Green Sickness and several other Distempers incident to the Female Sex, in the use of it they will find it friendly & helpful to them; and also such Women as are subject to hard and difficult Travel in Child bearing; by using it in the time of their extremity, they will find segular benefit thereby.

This Noble Cordial Spirit is Sealed up in Two Shillings and Four Shillings Glasses, and with each Glass is given gratis large Printed Directions for its use.

