Thath been the Good Nature (and Politicians will have it the Wildom) of most Governours to entertain the people with Publick Recreations; and therefore to incourage fuch as could best contribute to their Divertisement. And hence doubtless it is, that our Ecclesiastical Governoursalso (who as they yield to none for Prudence, fo in good Humor they exceed all others,) have not disdained of late years to afford the Laity no inconfiderable Pastime. Yea so great hath been their condescension that, rather then faile, they have carried on the Merriment by men of their own Faculty, who might otherwise by the gravity of their Calling, have claimed an exemption from fuch Offices. They have Ordained from time to time several of the most Ingenious and Pregnant of their Clergy to supply the Press continually with new Books of ridiculous and facetious argument. Wherein divers of them have fucceeded even to admiration: in so much that by the reading thereof, the ancient Sobriety and Seriousness of the English Nation hath been in some good measure discussed and worn out of fashion. Yet, though the Clergy have hereby manifested that nothing comes amiss to them. and particularly, that when they give their minds to it, no fort of men are more proper or capable to make sport for Spectators; it hath fo happened by the rewards and Promotions beflowed upon those who have labour'd in this Province, that many others in hopes of the like Preferment, although otherwise by their Parts, their Complexion and Education unfitted for this Jocular Divinity, have in order to it wholly neglected the more weighty cares of their Function. And from hence it proceeds, that to the no small scandal and difreputation of our Church, a great Arcanum of their State hath been discovered and divulged: That, albeit Wit be not inconfiftent confisent and incompatible with a Clergy-man, yet neither is it inseparable from them. So that it is of concernment to my Lords the Bishops henceforward to repress those of 'em who have no Wit from Writing, and to take care that even those that have, do husband it better, as not knowing to what exigency they may be reduced: But however that they the Bishops be not too forward in-Licenfing and perfixing their venerable Names to fuch Pamphlets. For admitting, though I am not too positive in it, that our Episcopacy is of Apostolical Right, yet we do not find that among all those gifts then given to men, that which we call Wit is enumerated: nor yet among those qualifications requisite to a Bishop. And therefore should they out of Complacency for an Author, or Delight in the Argument, or Facility of their Judgements approve of a dull Book, their own understandings will be answerable, and irreverent people, that cannot diffinguish, will be ready to think that such of them differ from men of Wit, not only in Degree, but in Order. For all are not of my mind, who could never fee any one elevated to that Dignity, but I presently conceived a greater opinion of his Wit then ever I had formerly. But some do not flick to affirm that even they, the Bishops, come by theirs not by Inspiration, not by Teaching, but even as the poor Laity do sometimes light upon ir, by a good Mother. Which has occasioned the homely Scotch Proverb that, An Ounce of Mother-Wit is worth a Pound of Clergy. And as they come by it as do other men, fo they possesse it on the same condition: That they cannot transmit it by breathing, touching, or any natural Effuvium to other persons : not so much as to their most Domestick Chaplain, or to theclosest Residentiary. That the King himself, who is no less the Spring of That, then he is the Fountain of Honour, yet has never used the Dubbing or Creating of Wites as a Flower of his Prerogative: much less can the Ecclefialtical Power conferre it with the fame case as they do the Holy Orders. That whatfoever they can do of that kind is, at uttermoft, to impower men by their authority and commission, no otherwise then in the Dicenting of Midwives or Physicians. But that as to their collaring of any internal talent or ability, they could never pretend wit; their grants and their prohibitions are alike invalide, and they can neither capacitate one man to be Witty, nor hinder another from being fo, further then as the Press is at their Devotion. Which if it be the Cafe, they cannot be too circumspect in their management, and thould be very exquifite, feeing this way of writing is found fo necessary, in making choice of he Instruments. The Churches credit is more interessed in an Ecclesiastical Droll, then in a Lay Chancellor. It is no small trust that is reposed in him to whom the Bithop

Bishop shall commit : Omne & omnimodum suum Ingenium tam Temporale quam Spirituale: And, however it goes with Excommunication, they should take good heed to what manner of person they delegate the Keys of Laughter. It is not every man that is qualified to fulfain the Dignity of the Churches Jeffer: and, should they take as exact a scrutiny of them as of the Non-conformists thorow their Diocesses, the number would appear inconsiderable upon this Easter Visitation Before men be admitted to so important an employment. it were fit they underwent a fevere Examination ; and that it might appear, first, whether they have any Sense: for without that how can any man pretend, and yet they do, to be ingenious? Then, whether they have any Modesty: for without that they can only be fourrilous and impudent. Next, whether any Truth : for true lefts are those that do the greatest execution. And Lastly, it were not amis that they gave some account too of their Christianity: for the world has always hitherto been fo uncivil as to expect fomthing of that from the Clergy; in the design and stile even of their lightest and most uncanonical Writings. And though I am no rigid Imposer of a Discipline of mine own devising, yet had any thing of this nature entered into the minds of other men, it is not impossible that a late Pamphlet, published by Authority and proclaimed by the Gazette, Animadversions upon a late Pamphlet, entituled the Naked Truth, or, the true fate of the Primitive Church, might have been spared.

That Book so called The Naked Truth, is a Treatise, that, were it not for this its Oppoler, needs no commendation: being writ with that Evidence and Demonstration of Spirit, that all sober men cannot but give their Affent and Confent to it, unasked. It is a Book of that kind, that no Christian scarce can peruse it without wishing himself had been the Author, 'and almost imagining that he is so: the Conceptions therein being of so Eternal an Idea, that every man finds it to be but the Copy of an Original in his own Mind, and though he never read it till now, wonders it could be so long before he remembred it. Neither, although there be a time when as they fay all truths are not to be spoken, could there ever have come forth any thing more feafonable. When the fickly Nation had been fo long indisposed and knew not the Remedy, but (having Taken so many things, that rather did it harm then good.) only longed for some Moderation, and as foon as it had tafted this, feemed to it felf fenfibly to recover. When their Representatives in Parliament had been of late so frequent in consultations of this nature, and they the Physitians of the Nation, were ready to have received any wholfome advice for the Cure of our Malady: It appears moreover plainly that the Author is Judicious, Learned, Conscientious, a sincere Protestant, and a true Son, ifnot a Father, of the Church of England. For the reft. the Book cannot be free from the imperfections incident to all humane indeavours, but those so small, and guarded every where with so much Modesty, that it feems there was none left for the Animadverter, who might otherwife have blush'd to reproach him. But some there were that thought Holy Church was concerned in it, and that no true born Son of our Mother of England but ought to have it in deteffation. Not only the Churches but the Coffee-Houses rung against it, they itinerated like Excise-spyes from one house to another, and some of the Morning and Evening Chaplains burnt their lips with perpetual discoursing it out of reputation, and loading the Author, whoever he were, with all contempt, malice and obloquy. Nor could this suffice them, but a latting Pillar of Infamy must be erected to eternize his Crime and his Punishment. There must be an answer to him, in Print, and that not according to the ordinary rules of civility, or in the fober way of arguing Controversie, but with the utmost extremity of Jecre, Disdain, and Indignation : and happy the man whose lot it should be to be deputed to that performance. It was Shrove-Tuesday with them, and, not having yet forgot their Boyes-play, they had fet up this Cock, and would have been content fome of them to have ventur'd their Coffee-Farthings, yea their Easter-Pence by advance, to have a sling at him. But there was this close youth who treads alwayes upon the heels of Ecclesiastical Preferment, but hath come nearer the heels of the Naked Truth then were for his fervice, that rather by favour then any tolerable sufficiency earried away this employment, as he hath done many others from them. So that being the man pitched upon , he took up an unfortunate resolution that he would be Witty. Infortunate I say, and no less Criminal: for I dare aver that never any person was more manifeftly guilty of the fin against Nature. But however to write a Book of that virulence, and at fuch a season was very improper: even in the Holy time of Lent when, whether upon the Sacred account, it behoved him rather to have subjugated and mortified the swelling of his passions; or whether upon the Political reason, he might well have forborn his young Wit, as but newly Pigg'd or Calv'd, in order to the growth of the yearly fummer provisions. Yet to work he fell, not omitting first to sum himself up in the whole wardrobe of his Function; as well because his Wit consisting wholly in his Dresse, he would (and twas his concernment to) have it all about him; as to the end that being huff'd up in all his Ecclefiaftical fluster, he might appear more formidable, and in the pride of his Heart and Habit out-boniface an Humble Moderator. So that there was more to do in equipping of Mr. Smirke then there is about Doriman, and the Divine in Mede might have vycd wyed with Sir Fopling Flutter. The Vestry and the Tiring-Roome were both exhausted, and 'tis hard to say whether there went more attendants toward the Composing of Himself, or of his Pamphlet. Being thus drest up, at last forth he comes in Print. No Poet either the First or the Third day could be more concern'd, and his little Party, like men hired for the purpose, had posted themselves at every corner to seigne a more numerous applause: but clap'd out of time, and disturb'd the whole Company.

Annotations upon his Animadversions on the Title, Dedication, &c.

T first bolt in his Animadversions on the Title, the Dedication, and the Epifile to the Reader, he denounces sentence before inquiry but against the Book it felf, forgetting already his subject, so early his brain circulates; and faith, that, Having peruled the Book thorowly he is abundantly satisfied not only from his Stile, which is something Enthusiastick (his speech bewrays him) but from his matter and Principles if he flick to any, that the Author is a borderer upon Fanaticisme and does not know it. Even as the Animadverter is upon Wit and Reason; for I have heard that Borderers for the most part, are at the greatest distance, and the most irreconcilable. What the Stile is of a Title, and what the Principles of a Dedication and Epiftle to the Reader (for these, if any, the Animadverter ought here to have fluck to) it's indeed a weighty difquisition fit for a man of his Talent. But I have read them over, and fo have others of better judgement, and find every fentence therein poiled with so much reverence, humility, and judicious Piety, that from an humane pen (allowing the Reader any tolerable share too of Humanity) I know not what more could have been expected. And as to the Matter, it seems to be but a Paraphrase upon the Principles of the Song of the Angels; Glory to God on high, on Earth Peace, Good Will toward men. If to speak at that rate, and upon such a subject, with fo good an intention, be to have an Enthufiaftick Stile or Fanatical Principles, it is the first crime of which I should be glad to be guilty. What in the mean time shall we say to these men, who out of a perverse jealoufy they have of the Non-conformists, run, which few wife men do into the contrary extreme, affixing fuch odious names to every word or thing that is fober and ferious, that with their good will they would render it impracticable for men even to discourse pertinently concerning Religion or Christianity? Put it upon this short iffue: If the stile of the Epistle before the Naked Truth be Enthusiastick and Fanatical, the file of the Animadverter is prefumed, and so allowed of, as Spiritual, Divine, and Canonical,

The first Evidence that he produces, after so hasty a sentence against the Author, is out of the Book too, not out of the Title, Dedication, or Epistle; that he has said p. 17. In the Primitive times when the whole world of Jews and Gentiles were enemies to the Church and not one of your Ceremonies to preferve it, the simple Naked Truth without any Surplice to cover it, without any Ecclefiastical Policy to maintaine it, overcame all, and fo it would do now did we trust to it, and the Defender of it. And upon this he runs division The Defender in Heaven, God ; the Defender of the Faith His Majesty; and the many Defenders (among whom I suppose he reckons himself of the Principal) who may be trusted, This is all fooling, whereas the Author does manifestly intend it of God Almighty, and could not otherwise. For though His Majesty may well be trusted for his Reign with the Defence of the Naked Truth, yet most of us know that in the Primitive Times, His Majesty was too young for that imployment, and that it was God alone who could then protect it, when the Defenders of the Faith were all Heathens, and most of them Persecutors of Christianity. He then descants no less upon Naked Truth; The Naked Truth of our Cause, or the Naked Truth of the Pamphlet, or, be knows not what Naked Truth. But he faith it fould have been Truth Fle'd (fo he had the Butchery of it) Which is like Pilate and no worse man, who when our Saviour told him, he came into the world John 18.37. That he might bear witness to the Truth, asked him, What is Truth? and then though he confessed be found no evil in this man, delivered him over, against his Conscience, to be Stripped, Scourged, Fley'd, and afterwards Crucified. Such like also is his talking, that this is Stripping the Church to skinne, nay skinne and all, and skinne for skinne: fo wretchedly does he hunt over hedge and ditch for an University Quibble. The casual progress and leaping consequences of any mans memory are more rational then this method of his understanding, and the Non-Conformists Concordance is a Discourse of more coherence then such Animadverfions: Thave heard a mad man having got a word by the end ramble after the same manner: in this only he is true to himself, and candid to the Author, having avowed that he had fearn'd the Book thorow, this hacking and vain repetition being just like it, when we were at

Montibus inquit erant & erant, sub montibus illis: Rist Atlantiades, &, me mibi perside prodis, Memihi prodis, ait.

For as I remember this Scanning was a liberal Art that we learn'd at Grammar-School; and to Scann Verses as he does the Authors Prose, before we did, or were obliged to understand them. But his tugging all this while at skin, and skin for skin, and all that he has he be will give for his life, meerly to hale in an ill favor'd Jeer at the Author, and truly with some profaneness, for proposing the Naked Truth as necessary for the self preservation of our Church, and an expedient against Popery; is, (whatsoever the Animadverters judgement be) a retchlesness and mockery ill becoming his Character. And it savors of the Liquorishness of a Trencher-Chaplain, little concerned in the Curà Animarum, so he may but Curare Cuticulam.

But as to his fastidious reproach of the Authors seeking of God, his Fasts and his Prayers, the Animadverter is more excusable, having doubtless writ his Pamphlet without practising any of these Fanatical Superstitions, as neither was it requisite; But if he had, 'twas such an answer to his Prayers as never before came from Heaven. The Animadverter is proof against all such Exorcismes, and although our Saviour prescribed these remedies against the most obstinate Devils, this man it seems is possessed with a superiour spirit which is not to be east out, no not by Prayer and Fasting, but sets them at defiance.

Nor had the Animadverter, when he confidered himself, less reason to blame the Author for deliberating fo long before he published his Book, and for doing it then with fo much Modeliy. These are Crimes of which the Animadverter will never be suspected or accused by any man, at least they will do him very much wrong, but however it will be impossible ever to convict him of them. But to word it too fo superciliously! This has been the Travel of his mind, since he had these thoughts, which he has been humbly conceiving these two years; time enough for an Elephant to bring forth it. Why there is, 'tis true, a winged fort of Elephant, hath a peculiar Trunk too like the other, is not fo decile and good-natured; but impudent flying in every mans face, and sanguinary thirsting alwayes after blood, and as if it were some considerable Wild-Beast, makes a terrible Buzze; but in conclusion 'tis a pitiful, giddy, blind, troublesome Infect, ingendered in a nights time in every Marish, can but run a Pore thorow and give a skinne-wound, and the least touch of a mans finger will crush it. In the Naked Truth it is but a Gnat: and fuch is the Animadverter compared with the Author.

But in this next Paragraph the Animadverter seems to have outshot himself, that not content with having passed his own Ecclesiastical Censure upon the Author, he forges too in his mind a sentence of the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament: who, he believes and 'tis probable, would have doom'd the Book to be burnt by the Hang-man. In this he hath meddled beyond his last: but it is some mens property: yet neither is it so likely they would have done it, at the same time when they were about passing an Act for the easing all Protestant diffenters from Penalties; had he vouch'd for the Convocation, his Belief, or his probability might have been of more value.

But what has he to do, (yet they have a fingular itch to it) with Parliament business; or how can so thin a scull comprehend or divine the results of the Wisdom of the Nation? Unless he can, as in the Epilogue.

Legion his name, a People in a Man, And, instead of Sir Fopling Flutter, he Mr. Smirke. Be Knight oth-Shire and represent them all.

Who knows indeed but he may, by some new and extraordinary Writ, have been summon'd upon the Emergency of this Book, to Represent in his peculiar person the whole Representative? Yet by his leave, though he be so, he ought not to Undertake before he be Assembled. I know indeed he may have had some late Precedents for it, and for some years continuance, from men too of his own Profession. And if therefore he should Undertake, and to give a good Tax for it, Yet what security can he have himself, but that there may rise such a Contest between the Lords and Commons within him, that, before they can agree about this Judicial Proceeding against the Book, it may be thought fit to Prorogue him.

The Crimes indeed are hainous, and if the Mau and Book be guilty, may when time comes, furnish special matter for an Impeachment. That he has made a breach upon their Glorious Act of Vuniformity, Violated their All, their most necessary All (the Animadverter hath reason by this time to fay fo) against Printing without a License: and I suppose he reserves anotherfor aggravation in due time; the Act against seditious Conventicles. For these three are all of a piece, and yet are the several Pieces of the Animadverters Armour: and are indeed no less, nor no more then necessary: For considering how empty of late the Church Magazines have been of that Spiritual Armour, which the Apostle found fufficient against the affaults of whatsoever enemy, even of Satan; what could men in all humane reason do less, then to furnish such of the Clergy as wanted, with these Weapons of another Warfare? But, although their Acts were the true effects of the Prudence and Piety of that feafon, yet it is possible (but who can provide for all cases?) that, if there have not already, there may arise thereby in a short time some notable inconvenience. For suppose that Truth fhould one day or other come to be Truth and every man a Lyer, (I mean of the humor of this Parliamentum Indoctum, this fingle Reprefentativer, this Animadverter) you see there is no more to be faid, as the Cale stands at present, but Executioner do your Office. Nor therefore can it ever enter into my mind, as to that A& particularly of Printing, that the Law-givers could thereby intend to allow any man a promifcuous Licenciousness, and Monopoly of Printing Pernicious Discourles, tending to fow and increase diffension thorow the Land (of which there is but too large a crop already;) as neither of Prohibiting Books dictated by Christian meekness and charity for the promoting of Truth and Peace among us, and reconciling our Differences; no nor even of fuch as are writ to take out the Blots of Printing-Inke, and wipe off the Aspersions which divers of the Licensed Clergy cast upon mens private Reputations: and yet this is the use to which the Law is somtimes applyed. And this Animadverter, who could never have any rational confidence or pretence to the Press or Print, but by an unsucky English faying men have, or by the Text-Letters of his Imprimatur, arraignes this worthy Author for Printing without Allowance, as if . it were a fin against the Eleventh Commandment. Though a Samaritan perhaps may not practife Physick without a Licence, yet must a Priest and a Levite alwayes pass by on the other side and if one of them, in an Age', pour Oyle and Wine into the Wounds of our Church (instead of Tearing them Wider,) must be be Cited for it into the Spiritual Court and incurreall Penalties? This high Charge made me the more curious to inquire particularly how that Book The Naked Truth was published, which the Animadverter himself pretends to have got a fight of with some difficulty. And I am credibly informed that the Author caused four hundred of them and no more to be Printed against the last Session but one of Parliament. For nothing is more usual then to Print and present to them Proposals of Revenue, Matters of Trade, or any thing of Publick Convenience; and fometimes Cales and Petitions. and this, which the Animadverter calls the Authors Dedication. is his humble Petition to the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament: And understanding the Parliament inclined to a Temper in Religion, he prepar'd these for the Speakers of both Houses and as many of the Members as those could furnish. But that, the Parliament rifing just as the Book was delivering out and before it could be presented, the Author gave speedy order to suppress it till another Seffion. Some coverous Printer in the mean time getting a Copy, furreptitioufly Reprinted it, and fo it flew abroad without the Authors knowledge, and against his direction. So that it was not his, but the Printers fault to have put fo great an obligation upon the publick. Yet because the Author has in his own Copyes, out of his unspeakable Tendernels and Modelly begg'd pardon of the Lords and Commons, in his Petition, for transgressing their Act against Princing without a Licence, this Indocum Parliamentum militaking the Petition as addressed to himself, will not grant it, but insults oven the Author and upbraids him the rather as a desperate offender, that fins on he saith. goes on fill in his wickedness, and hath done it against bis own Conscience. Now truly if this were a fin, it was a fin of the first Impression. And.

And the Author appears so constant to the Church of England, and to its Liturgy in particular, that, having confessed four hundred times with an humble, lowly, penitent, and obedient heart, I doubt not but in affifting at Divine Service he hath frequently fince that received Abfolution. It is something strange that to publish a good Book is a sin, and an ill one a vertue; and that while one comes out with Authority; the other may not have a Dispensation. So that we frem to have got an Expurgatory Preis, though not an Index, and the most Religious Truth must be expung'd and suppressed in order to the falle and secular ir terest of some of the Clergy. So much wifer are they grown by procels of time then the Obsolete Apostle that said, We can do nothing agairst the Truth. But this hath been of late years the practice of these fingle Representers of the Church of England, to render those Peccadillioes against God as few and inconfiderable as may be, but to make the fins against chemselves as many as possible, and thefe to be all hainous and unpardonable. In fo much what if we of the Larry would but study our Self-Preservation, and learn of them to be as true to our ferarate interest as these men are to theirs, we ought not to wish them any new Power for the future, but after very mature deliberation. Foralmuch as every fuch Act does but Merve, as some of them use it, to make the good people of England walkin peril of their Souls, to multiply fin and abomination thorow the Land, and by ingaging mens minds under spiritual Bondage, to lead them Canonically on into Temporal flavery. Whereas the Laity are commonly more temperate and merciful (I might fay more difereet) in the exerciting of any Authority they are intrufted with, and what Power they have, they will not wear it thred bare: to that if I were to commit a fault for my life, (as suppose by Printing this without a License) I would chuse to fin against good Mr. Oldenburg.

But this Animadverter is the genuine example of Ecclefastical Clemency, who proceeding on cannot bear that the Author should use the Title of an Humble Moderator (he thinks him sure guilty herein Lese Majestatis Ecclesiastice, and that both these Qualities are incompatible with one of their Coat, and below the Dignity of any man of the Faculty) much less will be indure him when he comes, in the following discourse, to justify his Claime to that Title, by letting his Moderation according to the Apostles precept, be known to all men, for the Lord is at hand. But he saith that the Author Assumes, Imposes, and Turnes all upside down, and witnesses an Immoderate Zeal for one (that is the Non-Conformists) Party: then which the Animadverter could rever have invented a more notorious; studied, and deliberate Falshood, to preposses and misses it the gentle Reader: Wherein does he Assume? He speaks like a Man, a Creature to which Modesty and Reason are peculiar; not like an Animadverter, that is an Animal which hath nothing Humane in it but a Malicious Grinne, that may Provoke indeed, but cannot Imitate so much as Laughter. Wherein does he Impese? In nothing but by declaring his Opinion against all unreasonable Imposition? And though it appears natural to him to fpeak with Gravity, yet he usurps not any Authority further, then as any man who speaks a Truth which he thorowly understands, cannot with all his Modesty an I Humility hinder others from paying a due Reverence to his Person and acquiescing in his Doctrine. But wherein does he Turn all upfide down? This hath been a common Topick of Ecclefiastical Accusation. Our Saviour was accused that he would Destroy the Temple. The first Martyr Steven was stoned as a Complice. And Saint Paul (as ill luck would have it) was made odious upon the fame C imination of the Animadverters, Acts 17. v. 5,6. For, certain Lend-fellows of the baser fort, set all the Guy in an uproar, crying those that have turned the world Up-fide-down are come bisher alfo. And yet notwithstanding all these Calumnies, The Naked Truth, Christianity, hath made a shift, God bethanked, to continue till this day: and there will never want those that bear testimony to it, even to the Primitive Christianity, maugre all the arts that the men of Religion can contrive to mifrepresent and discountenance it. But as for the Turning all up-fide down, the Animadverter is somewhat innocent, if by the defect of his Organt, as it fares with those whose Brain turnes round, (So we vulgarly expresse it) he have imagined that the world is tumbling headlong with him. But as to the Prejudice, which he therefore referved as the most effectual and taking to undoethe Author by, that he is Immoderately Zealous for the Non-Conformists; it is the effect of as strong a Phancy, or as Malicious an Intention as the Former; it being scarce possible to open the Book in any place without chancing upon some passage where he makes a firm Profession, or gives a clear proof of his real submission and Addiction to the Church of England: all his fault for ought I fee being, that he is more Truly and Cordially concerned for our Church then some mens Ignorance is capable of, on their corrupt interest can comply with. But therefore who ever were the adviser it is not well done to use him in this dirty manner. There is no prudence in it, nor whereas the Author, in excuse that he sets not his name, saith it is, because be is a man of great Passions, and not able so bear a Reproach (The Animadverter had done fairer to cite the whole, or Commendations: my small Ability pu's me out of danger of the last, but in great fear of the former.) Therefore to resolve thus (whereas they might have undone him you see by Commendation) the rather to Reproach him, now they have learn't his Feed enels Holy Church, I can tell you hath fuffered upon that account to often that it were time for her to be wifer. For by exalperating men of Parts, who out of an ingenious love of Truth have temperatly Writ against some abuses, She hathadded Provocation to mens Wit to look still further; infomuch that at last it hath sometimes produced (then which nothing can be more dangerous to the Church) a Reformation. Therefore, though Christ hath commanded his Followers (fo it be not I suppose out of his Way) that if any man press them to go one mile, they should go two; yet it is not wisdom in the Church to pretend to, or however to exercise, that Power of Angariating men further then their oceasions or understandings will permit. If a man cannot go their Length 'tis better to have his company in quiet as far as his Road lyes. For my part I take the Church of England to be very happy in having a Person of his Learning and Piety so far to comply with Her; and, if my advice might be taken, She should not lose one inch more of him by handling him irreverently. For if once She should totally lofe him, God knows what an Instrument he might prove, and how much good he might do in the Nation, more then he ever yet thought of. What a shame it is to hear the Animadverter abuse him (who by the very Character of his Stile appears no Vulgar Person, and by how much he hath more of Truth, hath more of Gods Image, and should therefore have imprinted that Awe upon him that Man hath over most Brutes:) he to trifle with so worthy a person at that rate, that one would not use the meanest Varlet, the dullest School-boy, the rankest Idiot, no nor the veryest Animadverter! However he faith, the Anther bath done himself and him the Animadverter a great favour, by concealing his Name, in making it impossible for him to reflect upon his Person (otherwise it seems he should have had it home) which he knows no mere then the Man in the Moon. But therefore I am the rather jealous he did know him: for the Animadverter having a Team of Gnazar alwayes a his devotion, and being able if any one tired by the way to relieve it and draw in person, never think that he would want intelligence in that Region. Come 'twas all but an affected ignorance in the Animadverter, and he had both inquired and heard as much as any of us who was the probable Author: and all the Guard that he Lyes upon is, because the Author had not given him legal notice that he Writ it. And this was even as the Animadverter would have wished it. For if a Reverend Person had openly avowed it, he could not have been sawcy with so gooda Grace: But under the pretence of not knowing, Sir, that it was you, but only, Sir, as you were the Patron of so vile a Cause, many a dry bob, close gird, and privy nip has he given him. Yet he faith, the Author would have done well, and a piece of Justice to have named himself, so to bave cleared others: for it bath been confidently layed to the charge of more then one Reverend Person (how flily!) who (I have great reason to believe, and am several mays affured) had no hand in it. Truly the Animadverter

verter too would have done a piece of Justice to have named himself; for there has been more then one Witty person traduced for his Pamphlet, and I believe by this time he would take it for a great favour if any man would be fuch a Fool as own it for him. For he very securely reproaches the Author, and yet I have been feeking all over for the Animadverters name, and cannot find it. Not withflanding that he writes forfooth in defence of the Church of England; and against so vile a Cause, as he stiles it, and under the Publick Patronage. Which is molt difingenuously done, as on other accounts, so in respect of my Lord Bishop of London, whom he has left in the lurch to justify another mans Follyes with his Authority. But however that venerable Perfon, who has for Learning, Candor, and Piery, as he does for Dignity alfo, outftripp'd his Age and his Fellows, have been drawn in to License what certainly he cannot approve of, it was but his First Finits, and a piece of early liberality, as is usual, upon his new Promotion, and I am given to understand that, for the Animadverters fake, it is like to be the last that he will allow of that nature. But this is not only a Trick of the Animadverters, but ordinary with many others of them; who while we write at our own peril, and perhaps fet our names to it, (for I am not yet resolved whether I can bear Reproach or Commendation) they that raile for the Church of England, and under the Publick License and Protection, yet leave men, as if it were a Hot-Cockles, to gueffe blind-fold who it is that hir them. But it is possible that some of these too may lie down in their turnes. What should be the reason ofit? furetheirs is not fo Vile a Cause too that they dare not abide by it. Or are they the Writers conscious to themselves that they are such Things as ought not once to be Named among Christians? Or is it their own forry performance that makes them ashamed to avow their own Books? Or is there some secret force upon them that obliges them to fay things against their Conscience! Or would they reserve a Latitude to themselves to turn Non-Conformists again upon occasion? Or do they in pure honesty abstaine from putting a single Name to a Book, which hath been the workmanship of the whole Diocels?

But though he know not his Name, seeing he has vented his own Amusements to the Churches great and real prejudice he saith, (and that is this Case) he must not think to scape for the Godliness of his Stile: Impious and most unmerciful! Poor David was often in this Case. Psal. 22. They gaped upon him with their Mouth. He trusted, said they, in the Lord that he would deliver him, let him deliver him seeing he delighted in him. And Psal. 71. 11. Persecute and take him, there is none to deliver him. And yet there are many places too in Scripture, where God spared men even for their outward Formalities, and their Hypocrisie served to delay his Judgements; and should he not still do so, the Church might re-receive greater prejudice. But the Church, and God are two things, and are not it feems oblidged to the fame Measures: info much that even the fince ity of one Person, which might perhaps attone for a whole Order and render them acceptable both to God and Man, yet cannot hope for his own pardon.

Neither must be think to scape for a Man of good Intentions : yet sure be is, else would not give the Devil so much more then his due, saying be would never condemne any good action thoughdone by the Devil, As if faith the Animadverter, he supposed the Devil might do some such. Here he thinks he has a shrewd hit at him, and this if a man had leifure might beget a Metaphyfical Controverly: but I defire him rather to comment on that Text : Doest thou Believe ? thou doest well, the Devils also Believe and Tremble. Whereas he goeth on to mock at the Authors Good Intentions, and tells him pleasantly that, Hell it felf is full of Such as were once full of Good Intentions: 'tis aConcluding piece of Wir, and therefore, as well as for the Rarity, fhould be civilly treated and incouraged; fo that I shall use no further retortion there, that if this be the qualification of fuch as go to Hell, the Animadverter hath fecured himfelt from coming there and fo many more as were his Partners. And thus much I have faid upon his Animadversions on the Title, &c. Wherein, he having misrepresented the Author and prejudicated the Reader against him by all difingenuous methods, and open'd the whole Redlers-pack of his malice, which he half-p- worths out in the following diffourie to his petty Chapmen, I could not properly fay lefs, though it exceeds perhaps the number of his Pages. For it is fearce credible how vuluminous and pithy he is in extravagance: an I one of his fides in Quarte, for Falshood, Insolence, and Abfurdity contains a Book in Folio. Belides, the Reader may pleafe to confider how much labour it, costs to Bray even a Little Thing in a Morear: and that Calumny is like London-dirt, with which though a man may be spatter'd in an instant, yet it requires much time, pains, and Fulle s-earth to fcoure it out again.

Annotations upon the Animadversions on the first Chapter, concerning Articles of Faith.

He Play begins. I Confess (Do so then and make no more words) when first Isam this Jewel of a Pamphlet, and had rin over two or three pages of this Chapter, I su pecied the Author for some Youngster that had been Dabbling amongst the Socialan. Writers, and vas ambisions of specied

showing us his Talent in their way. I was quickly delivered from this Jealousy, by his Orthodox Contradictory expressions in other places. That word Jewel is commonly used in a good tense, and I know no reason why this Book of the Authors might not be properly enough called fo. though the Animadverter bath debated the meaning of the word to deprave and undervalue the worth of the Treatife. For I perceive that, during his Chaplainship, he hath learns it in convertation with the Ladies, who transface it frequently to call Whore in a more civil and refined fignification. But to fay thus, that be suspected him at first for a Socinian, yet was quickly cured of bis Jealoufy, because he found the Author was Hovelt and Orthodox. Why should he vent his own Amusements thus to the great and real prejudice of any worthy person? It is indeed a piece of fecond Ingenuity for a man, that invents and fuggetts a Calumny of which he is fure to be convict in the inflant, therefore with the same breath to disclaim it that it manifests in the mean-time how well he was inclined if he thought it would have paff'd upon the Author; and that could the Animaoverter have fecured his Reputation, he would have adventured the Faithood. What would he not have given to have made the world believe that he was a Sociaian. In this beginning you have a right Pa tern of the Animadverters, whole Stuffe, and may fee what Me fure the Author is to expect all thorow.

But he finds, he laith, that he is one of the Men of the lecend Rate, (as be takes leave to file them) that scarce ever see to the second Consequence. At first I suspected from this expression that the Animadverter had been some Ship-Chaplain, that had been Dabbling in the Sea-Controversies, a Tarpawlin of the Faculty: but I was quickly delivered from this Fealousy by bis Magi terial Contradictions, that shew him to be a man of more Consequence, one of them whose Eccleastical Dignities yet cannot wean them from a certain hankering after the Wit of the Laity, and applying it as their own upon (or 'tis no great matter though it be without) occasion. Yet therefore once for all he Pretests, too, that he does not charge him with any of his own most obvious Consequences as his Opinions (for who would believe the one or other that reads the Author?) for 'tis plaine that he does not (nor any man that hath Eyes) discerne them. This is a Candor pregnant with Contempt. But in the mean time he thinks it ingenuous to load this fecond Rate Frigat, (that was fitted out for the Kings and the Nations service) so deep that she can farce swime, with a whole Cargo of Consequences which are none of the Authors, but will, upon fearch, be all found the Animadverters proper goods and Trade, his own Inconfequences and Inanimadverfions. So men with victous Eyes fee Spiders weave from the Brim of their own Beavers.

As for example. p. 1. He faith that this Chapter does admirably ferve

she turn of the rankest Sectorian. That in his two or three first pages be appeara ed a Socinian. p. 12. That his Pique at the new word Homoousios carryes Inch an ugly reflection upon the Nicene Creed, that he, the Animadverter, Scarse dares understand bim. p. 6. The Author speaking against introducing new Articles of Faith, the Adversary tells him; he hopes he does not mean all our Thirty Nine Articles ; and defends them as if they were attaqued. That he does implicitly condemne the whole Catholick Church both East and West for being so presumptuous in her Definitions. p. 9. That upon his Principles the Prime and most necessary Articles of Faith will be in danger. The old dormant Herefies, Monothelites, Nestorians, &c. May fafely revive again. p. 13. That his are the very Dreggs of Mr. Hobbs bis Divinity, and worfe, p. 14. That he would have some men live like Pagans and go to no Church at all, p. 16 So for ought we know this Author is a Jesuite, and writes this Pamphlet only to embroile us Protestants. p.25. That he is guilty of unthought, of Popery. p. 33. That our Author like ber (the foolish woman) in the Proverbs, plucks down our Church with his own hands and that she had need therefore be upheld against such as he is. Of thefe Inferences which, not being natural, must have required some labour, he is all along very liberal to the Author; but the vile and infolent language costs him nothing, so that he lays that on. prodigally and without all reason. Now whether a man that holds a true Opinion, or he that thus deduces ill Consequences from it, be the more blame-worthy, will prove to be the Cafe between the Animadverter and the Author. And (to shew him now from whence he borrowed his Wit of the second Rate, and at the second Hand)

— all the subject matter of debate, Is only who's the Knave of the First Rate.

But he saith, because of these things, the Mischief being done, to under the Charme again it is become a Duty to Expose him. Alas what are they going to do with the poor man? What kind of death is this Exposing? But fure, considering the Executioner, it must be some Learned fort of Cruelty. Is it the Teda, in which they candled a Man over in Wax, and he instead of the wick, burnt out to his lives end like a Taper, to give light to the Gompany? Or is it the Scapha, wherein a man, being stripped Naked and Smeu'd with Honey, was in the scorching Sun abandon'd to be stung and Nibbled by Wasps; Hornets, and all troublesome Insects till he expired? Or is it rather ad Bostias, turning him out unarmed to be bated, worryed, and devour'd, by the wild Beass in the Theatre? For in the Primitive Times there were these and an hundred laudable ways more to Expose Christians; and the Animadverter seems to have studied them. But the Crime being of Sorcery, and that there is a Charm which hath wrought great Mischief and is not to be undone but by Exposing the Malefactor (Charme he never so wifely)'tis more probable that it may be the Punishment usual in such Cases. And indeed the Animadverter hath many times in the day such Fits take him, wherein he is lifted up in the Aire that fix men cannot hold him down, teares, raves, and foams at the mouth, casts up all kind of trash, somtimes speakes Greek and Latine, that no man but would Iwear he is bewitched: and this never happens but when the Author appeares to him. And though in his Animadversions on the Title &c. He hath to often feratched and got blood of him (the infallible Country Cure) yet he still finds no ease by it, but is rather more tormented. So that in earnest I begin to suspect him for a Witch, or however, having writ the Naked Truth, 'tis manifest he is a Sooth-sayer, that's as bad-Many persons besides have for tryal run needless up to the Eye in several remarkable places of his Naked Truth, that look like moles or warts upon his body, and yet he, though they prick never fo much, feels nothing. Nay some others of the Clergy, whereof one was a Bishop, have tyed him hand and foot and thrown him into the Thames betwixt Whitehall and Lambeth, for experiment; laying so much weight too on him as would fink any ordinary man, and nevertheless he swims fill and keeps above Water. So dangerous is it to have got an Ill Name once, either for speaking Truth or for Incantation, that it comes to the same thing almost to be Innocent or Guilty: for if a man swim he is Guilty, and to be Burnt; if he finke, he is Drowned, and Innocent. But therefore this Exposing must furely be to condemne the Author, as he has done his Book already, to the Fire, (for no man stands fairer for't as being first Heretick, and now Witch by Consequence) and then the Devil sure can have no more power over the Animadverter. Yet when I consider'd better that he does not accuse him of any harme that he has suffered by him in person, but that it is the Church which may justly Complain of bim. and having done her fo much mifchiefe, therefore it is become a Duty to Expose bim, I could not but imagine that it must be a severer Torment. For if our Church be bewitched, and he has done it,

Huic mites nimium Flammas, huic lenta putaffem,

Flumina, fumiferi potasset nubila Peti.

Though I never heard before of a Church that was Bewitched except that of the Galatians, Gal. 3. 1. Whom Saint Paul asks O foolish Galatians who hath Bewitched you? taking it for evident that they were so, because (they are his very next words) they did not obey the Truth. (And that was a Naked Truth with a Witness, the Apostle teaching, that Christ is become of none effect to them, that from their Christian Liberty returned to the Jewish Ceremonies. Gal. 5.4.) But therefore I looked over the Canons, the Rational, the Geremonial, the Rubrick, imagining the Exposing mention'd, must must besome new part of our Ecclesiastical Discipline, that I had not taken notice of before, and I should find it in one or other of the Offices. But I lost my labour, and 'twas but just I should, for being fo simple, as not to understand at first that to Expose a man, is to write Anim adversions upon him. For that is a crueller Torment then all the Ten Persecutors (and which none but this Clergy-man could have) invented. To be fet in the Pillary first, and bedawb'd with so many Addle Eggs of the Animadverters own Cackle as he palts him with! How miserable then is the man that must suffer asterwards, sub tam lento Ingenio! To be raked and harrowed thorow with fo rufty a Saw! So dull a Torture that it contains all other in it, and which even the Christian Reader is scarceable to indure with all his Patience! Had he been a man of some accuteness, the pain would have been over in an inflant : but this was the utmost inhumanity in whoever it was that advised (whereas feveral witty men, were proposed that would have been glad of the the imployment) to chuse out onpurpose the veryest (Animadverter) in all the Faculty. This it is to which the Author is condemned. And now that I know it, and that it is an Office a Duty to which our Church it feems has advanced the Animadverter; I wish him Joy of his new Preferment, and shall henceforward take notice of him as the Church of Englands's Exposer, for I can never admit him by any Analogy to be an Expolitor.

It is no less disingenuously, then constantly done of the Exposer in this same; p. 1. To concern the Author in the Non-Conformists, that may have reflected any where, as if there, were Socinian, or Pelagian Doctrines; Allowed to be preached and maintained in the City Pulpits. For the Author hath not in his whole Book the least syllable that can be wrested to any such purpose. Only it serves the Adversaries turn, as he thinks, to preingage the whole Clergy and Church of England against him, if they were so simple, and by giving him an odious Badge and jumbling them altogether, to involve him in all the prejudices which are studiously advanced against that party. But neither have I any thing to urge of that nature further then, because he will out of season mention these matters, to observe that our Church seems too remiss in the Case of Socious and Volkelius, who had many things to great value stolen from them by a late Plagiary, but as yet have not obtained any Justice or Restitution.

But seeing the Exposer is thus given to transforme not only the Author, but his words and his meaning; it is requisite to state this Chapter in his own Terms: as men set their Arms on their Plate, to prevent the nimbleness of such as would alter the property. The sum of what he humbly proposes is: That nothing bath caused more mischief in the Church, then the establishing New and Many Articles of Faith, and requiring men to affent to them with Divine Faith. For the imposing Such Diffenters, bath caused furious Wars and lamentable Blood-shed among coristians. That it is irrational to promote the Trueb of the Gospel by Imposition, which is contrary to the Laws of the Gospel, and break an evident Commandment to establish a doubtful Truth. For if Such Articles be not fully expressed in Scripture wrrds, it is Doubtful to bim upon whom it is Forced, though not to the the Imposer. If it be fully expressed in Scripture Words, there needs no new Articles: but if not fo, and that it be only Deduced from Scripture Expresfions, then men that are as able and knowing as the Impofer, may think it is not clearly Deduced from Scripture. But there is nothing more Fully Exprest, or that can be more clearly Deduced from Scripture, nor more suitable to Natural Reason, then that no man should be Forced to Believe. Because no man can Force bimself to believe, no not even to believe the Scriptures. But Faith is a work of peculiar Grace and the Gift of God. And if a man Believe what is Clearly Contain'd in Scripture, he needs not believe any thing elfe with Divine Faith. To add to, or deminish from the Scripture, is by it unlawful, and lyable to the Curfe in the Revelation. If the Imposer answer, he requires not to Believe it as Scripture, he doth, if he urge it to be believed with Divine Faith. If he fay he requires it not to be Believed with Divine Faith, he does, if he make it necessary to Salvation. There is no Command nor Countenance given in the Gospel to use Force to cause men Believe. We have no Comprebenfive Knowledge of the Matters declared in Scripture, that are the Prime and Necessary Articles of Faith, therefore it is not for any man to Declare one Tittle more to be Believed with Divine Faith, then God hath there Declared. He cannot find the least hint in the Word of God to use any Force to Compel men to the Churches established Doctrine or Discipline: and from Reason there can be no motive to be Forced beyond their Reason: To attempt any such Force, thoughto the True Beliefe, is to do Evil that Good may come of it. But the Pastor ought first by plaine and sound Doctrine to stop the Mouth's of Gainfayers. When the Ministers have Preached and Prayed, they have done all they can in order to mens Believing, the rest must be left to the Justice or Mercy of God. But if turbulent Spirits broach New Doctrines, Contrary to Scripture, or not Clearly Contained in the Gospel, and neither by Admonitions nor Intreaties will be stopt, the Pastors may proceed to the Exercise of the Reys. Which if it were duely performed as in the Primitive Times, and not by Lay Chancellors and their surrogates, would be of great effect. The Magistrate ought to silince and oppose such as preach what is Contrary to or not Clearly Contained in the Gospel, and if they persevere in their perversness, he may use his power mith Christian Moderation. For his power reaches to Punish Evil Doers, who Publish or Practise somthing to subvert the Fundamentals of Religion, or to Disturbe the Peace of the State, or to Injure their Neighbours : but not to Punish Evil Believers. But if the Magistrate shall conceive be hath power power also to punish Evil Believers, and on that Pretence shall punish True Believers, the Subject is bound to submit and bear it, to the loss of Goods, Liberty or Life. The Reader will excuse this one long Quotation, for it will much shorten all that followes.

But now for which of these is it that 'tis become a Duty to Expose him? What is there here that seems not, at first sight, very Christian, very Rational? But however, it is all delivered in so Grave and In-offensive manner, that there was no temptation to alter the stile into Ridicule, and Satyre. But like some Catle, the Animalverter, may browze upon the Leaves, or Peel the Barke, but he has not teeth for the Solid, nor can hurt the Tree but by accident. Yet a man that sees not into the second, but the Thirteenth Consequence, that is one of the Disputers of this World, and ought to be admitted to these Donbiful Disputations (from which he ironically by St. Pauls rule for sooth excludes the Author) what is there that such an one, so subtile, so piercing, cannot distingish upon and Controvert? Truth it self ought to sacrifice to him that he would be propitious: For if he appear on the other side, it will go against her unavoidably.

In his 27. P. he is ravisht in Contemplation how Rarachese it is, to See or hear a material Question in Theology defended in the University-Schools, where one ftands a Respondent, enclos d within the Compass of his Pen, as Popilius the Roman Embassador, made a Circle with bis Wand about Antiochus, and bid bim give him a determinate, answer before be went out of it; a most apt and learned resemblance, and which shews the Gentlemans good reading! But it is, I confess a noble spectacle, and worthy of that Theater which the munificence of the present Arch-Bishop of Canterbury hath dedicated in one (may it be too in the other) of our Universities; where no Apish Scaramuccio, no Scenical Farces, no Combat of Wild-Beafts among themselves, or with men condemn'd, is presented to the People; but the modest Skirmish of Reason, and which is usually perform'd fo well that it turns to their great honour, and of our whole Nation. Provided the Chaire be well filled, with an Orthodox Professor, and who does not by Solecismes in Latine, or mistake of the Argument, or Question, render the thing ridiculous to the By-standers. That the Pew be no less sitted with a Respondent, able to fustaine and answer in all points the expectation of so Learned an Auditory: That the Opponent likewise exceed not the terms of Civility, nor Cavil where he should Argue; and that the Questions debated be so discreetly chosen, as there may be no danger, by Controverting the Truth, to unsettle the minds of the Youth ever after, and innure them to a Dispurable Notion about the most weighty points of our Re-Peligen; by which fort of fubtilizing the Church hath in former Ages much fuffered, nor hath Ours in the Latter wholly escaped.

NOW,

Now, feeing the Exposer seems to delight so much (as men use in what they excell) in this Exercise, he and I, because we cannot have the conveniency of the Schools and Pem; will play as well as we can in Paper, at this new Game of Antiochus and Popilius. I must for this time be the Roman Senator, and he the Monarch of Asia: for by the Rules of the Play, he always that hath writ the last Book is to be Antiochus, until the other has done replying. And I hope to gird him up to close within his Circle, that he shall appear very stender. For I am sensible, yet could not avoid it, how much of the Readers and mine own time I have run out in examining his Levity; but now I am glad to see my labour shorten: for, having thus plumed him of that putse of Feathers, with which he buoy'd himself up in the Aire, and slew over our heads, it will, almost by the first Consequence, be manifest in his Argument, how little a Soul it is, and Body, that henceforward I am to deal with.

The Author having faid that, That which we commonly call the Apostles Creed, is, and was so received by the Primitive Church, as the sum Total of Christian Faith, necessary to Salvation. Why not now? Is the state of Salvation alter'd? If it be Compleat, what need other Articles? The Exposer p. 2. answers. There may have been needful heretofore, not anly other Articles, but other Creeds fer the further Explication of these Articles in the Apostles Creed: and yet in those New Creeds not one New Article. 'Tis fafely and cautioufly faid, there May, and not there Were other Articles and other Creeds needful. But the whole Clause besides is so drawn up, as if he affected the Academical glory of justifying a Paradox: nonis it for the reputation of fuch Creeds, whatever they be, to be maintained by the like Methods. But feeing he difdains to explicate further, how there can be a New Creed, and yet not one New Article; I will prefune to understand him, and then say, that in such Creeds, what soever Arricle does either explaine the Apostles Creed Contrary to, or Beside the Scripture, or does not containe the same Ex press Scriptural Authority (which only makes this that is called the Apostles Creed to be Authentick) that is a New Article to every man that cannot conceive the neceffary Deduction. But then he galls the Author. The Apoliles Creed is the fum of the Christian Faith True. Tet I hope he will not think the Nicene, the Constantinopolitan, and the Athanasian Creed Superfluous and and unnecessary. First, it is not necessary to take all those Three in the Lump, as the Exposer puts it: for perhaps a man may think but one, or but two of them to have been superfluous, and unnecessary. Next it is an hard thing for the Exposer, who ought rather to have proved that they were necessary to shift it back thus upon the Author. I have not fooke with him, nor know whether I shall as long as I live, (though I should be glad of the opportunity,) to know his mind. But suppose he should think them, One, Two, or Three Unnecessary, who can help it? But fo much I think, upon the State or fum of this Controversic in his own words, I may adventure for him; that as Confessions of Faith he does not disapprove them, (taking it granted there is nothing in any of them flatly against the Word of God) but that if any thing be therein drawn up in fuch or fuch an exact Forme of Words, not Expressed in Scripture, and required to be Believed with Divine Faith, as necessary to a Mans own Salvation, and without Believing which, he must Declare too that no Man else can be saved; that this is Dangerous, and the imposing of it is Unwarrantable by Reason or Scripture, He adds in this same Paragraph, that the Authors Censure upon Constantine is so bold and upon some Godly Bishops, (whom he conceives more Zealous then Discreet, and so do some Godly Bishops conceive of this Author) and his Pique at the New Word Homooulios carryes such as ugly reflection upon the Creed. that he scarce dare understand him, And I on the other side take his Fears and his Hopes to be alike inconsiderable. His words are p. 6. I am confident had the most prudent and pius Constantine, the First and Best of Christian Emperours pursued bis own intention, to suppress all Disputes, and all new Questions about God the Son, both Homoousian, and Homoiousian, and commanded all to acquiesce in the very Scripture Expressions, without any addition, that the Arrian Herefie had foon expired. I note that the Exposer very difingenuously, and to make it look more ugly, take not the least notice of his Pique against Homoiousios too and the Arrian Heresse. But what is there here to fright the understanding Animadverter out of his Wits, or what to make some Godly Bishops (who it seems must be numberless or namelels) to conceive the Author more Zealous then Difcreet? But for this Censure of the Author, as well as for the Godliness of the Bishops, we must acquiesce it leems upon the Credit, or Gratitude of one Nameless Exposer.

He then blames the Author p. 3. for saying p.1. that he would have men improve in Faith rather Intensive, then Extensive, to confirm it, rather then enlarge it. Still and alwayes, to make things a little more ugly and of less value, he clips the Authors good English. Ton would have men improve in Faith, so would I, but rather Intensive then Extensive. 'Tis good to know all Gospel Truths, no doubt of that, the more the better still; but the Question is not what is Good, but what is Necessary. This is a pious and undonbted Truth, and confirm'd by the Author out of several Places of Scripture: May I add one Marke the 9.17. Where one brought his Son, being troubled with a Dumb Spirit to our Saviour. v. 23. Jesus saith to the Father, if thou canst Believe, all things are possible to him that Believeth. The Father coyes out with tears, Lord I Believe, strengthen thou my Unbeliefe. And this Confession of the Intensive Truth of his Faith, with his relyance upon Christ for the strengthening of it, was sufficient to cooperate with our Saviour toward a Miracle, and throwing that Dumb and

Deaf Spirit out of a third Person. Whoever indeed will deny this Truth, must go against the whole current of the New Testament. But the Expofer is Deaf to that, ?tis all one to him. Yet he is not Dumb, though as good he had, for all he has to fay to it is: And yet it is certaine that all formal and mortal Hereticks, that are not Atheifts, are justly condemn'd for want of due extension in their Faith. What pertinence! But there goes more Faith I fee to the ejecting of a Talkative then of a Dumb Spirit. There is no need of further answer to so succinct a Bob, then that it had been well those terms of Formal, and Mortal, and Hereticks, and no less that of Condemned had in this place been thorowly explained. For we know that there was a time when the Protestants themselves were the Formal, and, to be fure, the Mortal Hereticks, even here in England, and for that very crimetoo, For want of due extention in their Faith, they were Condemned, whether justly or no, it is in the Exposers power to determine. For some of our Ruling Clergy, who yet would be content to be ac. counted good Protestants, are so leath to part with any hank they have got, at what time foever, over the poor Laity, or what other reason, that the Writ de Heretico Comburendo, though desired to be abolish'd, is still kept in force to this day. So that it is of more concernment then one would at first think, how far mens Faith (least afterwards for Believing short their Persons and Estates) be Extended, or taken in Execution.

He proceeds page the 3. and feveral that follow, to quarel the Author for quoting to this purpole Alis 8. and then faying: I pray remember the Treasurer (the Exposer will do it I warrant you, and the Chancellor too, without more intreaty) to Candace Queen of Ethiopia, whom Philip instructed with in the Faith. His time of Catechising was very short and soon proceeded to Baptisme. But Philip first required a Confession of his Faith, and the Eunuch made it, and I befeech you observe it. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and straight way be was Baptized: How, no more then this? No more. This little Grain of Faith, being found, believed withall his beart, purchased the Kingdom of Heaven. 'Tis not the Quantity but the Quality of our Faith God requireth. Here the Exposer, pretending now to be a learned Expositor, hopes to win his Spurrs, and layes out all his ability to prove that Philip (in a very fhort time for so much work as he finds him) had instructed the Treasurer thorow the whole Athanasian Creed; concerning the Equality, Inseparability, Coesernity of the Three Persons in the Trinity. For, faith the Exposer, the very Forme of Baptisme, if thorowly explained, is a perfect Creed by it felf: In the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoft; For it feems the name of the Son, [mas by a Divine Criticisme interposed between the other two Per-Sons, whose Godbead was confest and acknowledged by the Jewish Church, rather then that of the Word, to denote the second Person, &c. I should be be glad to know where the Exposer learns that the Jewish Church acknowledged the Godhead of the Holy Ghoft, as of a Diftint Person; which if he cannot show, he is very far out in the Matter, as he is in that Expression of Divine Criticisme. Therefore he may do well to Confider. But it is fimply, to fay no worfe, done of him, to call that Forme of words as it is ordered by our Saviour himself, a Divine Criticisme, as if Christ had therein affected that Critical glory, which the Expoler himself in so subtile a Remarke doubtless pretends to. But the Exposer will not only have Philip to have instructed the Treasurer in this Criticilme, but to have read him to long a Lecture upon Baptilme, as must for certaine have been out of the Assemblies, and not Noel's Catechisme: acquainting him and instructing him abundantly, in those great Points of Faith, the Dying, Burying, and Rising again of Christ for our Justification from our fins, together with the Thing fignified, Death unto fin, Mortification, the New Birth unto Righteoufness, then the Mistery of the First and Second Covenant, Original fin, how thereby he was a Son of Wrath, had bereby Forgivenels, of sins, Adoption, being made a Child of Grace, Co-Heire with Christ, to live with him in the Communion of Saints, after the Resurrection, in Life Everlafting, I am glad to fee that, at least when it serves to his purpose, this Exposer will own all the Doctrines, which another Expofer would have call'd fo many Stages of Regeneration, and have thought them too many to have drove over in one dayes journey, but would rather have turn'd out of the Road, and lay'd thort all night somewhere by the way. Here is a whole Calvinistical Systeme of Divinity, that, if the Treasurer had been to be Baptized in the Lake of Geneva, more could not have been expected. And he has in a trice made him so persect in it, that, as foon as the Christ'ning was over, he must have been sit to be received not only ad Communionem Laecam, but the Clericam also, if it were then come into fashion. These Exposers are notable men, they are as good as Witches, they know all things, and what was done, and what was not done equally. In earnest, he has made us as formal a story of all Ppilip faid, and the Treasurer believ'd; as if he had sate all the while in the Goock-boot, and knows how long the discourse lasted, as well, as if he had fer his Watch when they began, and look'd upon it justas the Spirit caught up Philip to Azotus. But (suppose, for the Expofers fake, that the Treasurer) were in a Coach, discourse, and for all the rumbling, so distinctly and thorowly, in so short a time too, if it had been, which is the uttermost, a dayes passage Catechumeniz'ed) it came to this fhort Print between them : The Treasurer defires to be Baptized, Philip replys; If thou believest with all thine beart thou mayest, which can never signisse otherwise then with all the Intention of our Spirit, as when we are faid to love God with all our Heart: The Treasurer replyes, and that's all, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Now it is worth the Readers observation, that out of a defire of Civilling and the luxury the Expoler takes in it, he has quite forgot the matter he brought in Controversie. For the Dispute is concerning New Creeds, Imposed beyond clear Scripture: the Authors arguments and proofs tended wholly thirher, and to that purpose he urged this paffage of Philip, to prove that God confiders both, but rather the Quality, then Quantity of our Faith. The Exposer amuses himself and us, to tell what Philip preach'd to the Treasurer, but never minds that, let that have been as it will, and the Eunuch have believ'd all that this man can imagine, yet all the Creed demanded, and all that he professes is no more then those formal words, believed with all his heart. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, Wherein the Author has clearly carryed, and the Exposer thus far lost the Question. And indeed Antiochus, you are much too blame to have put the Romans to all this trouble, to no purpole. But any thing to stuffe out the Dimensions of a Book, that no man may imagine he could have faid fo little, in fo much (which is the new way of Compendiousness found out by the Exposer) whereas he might have known, that, not God only, but even men alwayes do respect the Quality of any Thing, of a Book, rather then the Quantity. One Remarke I must make more, before I take leave of this page, how, having thus libe ally instructed both Philip and the Treasurer, he immediately chops in p. 5.

Now this Author may see what Use and Need There was of the Constantinopolitan Creed.

That puts in one Baptisme for the Remission of Sins. I read it over and over, for there was fomthing in it very furprifing, bende the elegancy of the Verfes. For the Now in that place is a word of immediate Inference, as if it appeared necessarily, from what last preceded, that he had norably foil'd the Author in some Arguments or other, and therefore exulted over him. To any man of common fenfe it can fignific nei her more nor less then that, (whereas I upon prospect of this spoke merrily of the Athanasian Creed, Noel's and the Asiemblies Carechisme, erc. wherein Philip instructed the Treasurer) the Exposer means in good earnest (if men mean what they say) that Philip, having studied the Constantinopolitan Creed himself very exactly, explain'd every Article of it thorowly to the Eunuch, and in especial manner that of Baptifine for the Remission of Sins: Which happening to have been so many hundred years before that Council was in being, must needs be an extraordinary civility in Philip, and which he would scarce have done, but for the particular fa istaction of so great a personage, that had the whole manage of the Revenue of the Queen of Ethiopia. I am fure it is more then our Church will vouchfaie in Baptiline, ei her of Infan's or those of Riper Years, with their God-Fathers, but fobbs them of with the plain Apostles Creed: And truly the easier the better, if after that, and by powering water upon them, these persons be without any more adoe (as the Priest according to our Rubrick, shall then say)

Regenerate.

To as little purposed oth he trouble in this same 5. p. Another Scripture the first of John 4. 2. Every Spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ is come in the Flesh, is of God: Which the Author wges in confirmation of what he faid before concerning the Intention of Faith. But, faith the Exposer, Will a Mahumeran, or a Socinian Confession of Faith suffice? This is I trow what they call reducing a man ad Abfurdum, and I doubt he has hamper'd the Author mischievously. No it will not suffice in the Mahumetam or Societan interpretation: but a Confession according to the true fense of this, and the clear express words of Scripture in other places will do it, especially if St. John, as most men are of opinion, writh his own Gospel. Nay, though the Exposer contends against this place, he admits another concerning Peter, that is not much more pregnant. All the few primary Fundamentals of Christianity, faith he, were virtually contained in St. Peters short Confession of Faith. Thou art Christ the Son of the living God: For which Confession he was bleft, and upon which Faith Christ declared that be would build his Church as upon a Rock. In conclusion I fee Antiochus has ex mero morue certa Scientia, and Prince - like Generofity, given us the Question: For I would not suspect that he hath hunted it so long till he lost it, or let it go of Necessity, because he could hold it no longer. For the Extention as well as Intention of Peters Faith, was terminated in these few words. For it is no irreverence to take notice how plain the Apostles were under that dispensation. The same John the Apostle and Evangelist C. 14. V. 26. and in the following Chapters, showes how little it was, and in how narrow a compass, that they knew and believed, and yet that fufficed. Infomuch that where C. 16. V. 17. Our Saviour promises the Holy Ghost, to instruct them further, he faith only. It is Expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not Come to you. He faith not it is Necessary. For that Measure of true Belief would have sufficed for their own Salvation, but there was a larger Knowledge requifite for the future work of their Apostleship, In how many of them, and St. Peter himself as much as any, were there such Ignorances, I humbly use the word, in matters of Faith, that our Saviour could not but take notice of it and reprove them! As for Peter, when our Saviour was fo near his Death as to Lea'ready be ray'd, yet he, Upon whose Faith he built his Church as on a Rack, knew not the effect of his Paffion, but was ready with his fword, against Christs Command and example, to have interrupted the Redemption of Mankind. And this thort confession, in which all the Fundamentals were virtually contained (as the Exposer here teacheth us, and so hath reduced himself to that little Grain of Faith, against which he contends with the Author) was upon occasion of our Saviours question, when Peter doubtless did his best, to answer his Lord and Master, and told him all he knew. For that fimilitude, taken from fo fmall a Graine by our Saviour, did equal the proportion of Faith then attainable and requifite. And as in a Seed, the very Plain and Upright of the Plant is indiffernably expressed, though it be not branch'd out to the Ege, as when it germinates, fpreds, bloffomes, and bears fruit; fo was the Christian Faith feminally fraitned in that virtual fincerity, Vital Point and Central vigour of Believing with all the heart that Jesus Christ was come in the Flesh, and was the Son of the Living God. And, would men even now Believe that one thing thorowly, they would be better Christians, then under all their Creeds, they generally are both in Dostrine and Practice. But that gradual Revelation, which after his death and Refurrection shined forth in the Holy Ghost, must now determine us again within the Bounds of that faving Ignorance by Beliefaccording to the Scriptures, untill the last and full Manifestation. And the Intention of this Faith now also, as it hath been explain'd by the Inspiration of the Holy Spirit in the Sacred Writers, is sufficient for Salvation, without the Chcianrey and Conveyancing of humane Extentions. And the Controverter himself hath, if not by his own confession, yet, by his own Argument all along hitherto proved it.

In the 6.p, he faith that, where the Author charges some with introducing Many and New Articles of Faith, He hopes he does not mean all our Thirty nine Articles. If he hopes to, why doth he raife the fulpition, for which indeed there is no cause imaginable, but the E-posers own difingenuity; the Author appearing thorow his whole Book a True Subscriber to Theme, without that Latitude of Equivocation which some others use, or else they would not Publish those Doctrines they do, and be capable nevertheless of Ecclefiaftical Places? But here, as though any man had meddled with those Articles, he explicates his Learning out of Bishop Lany and of the Communio Laica, which is but his harping upon one firing and his usual Scanning on his fingers. For the Author having named many and new Articles of Paith, the Exposer revolves over in his mind Articles, Articles of and, the word not being very pregnant, he hits at last upon the Thirty nine Articles of the Church of England: which yet the Exposer faith himself, are Articles of Peace and Confent not of Faith and Communion. Why then does he bring them by head and houlders, when the Author he knows was only upon Articles, of Faith? He might as well have faid the Lords of the Articles. But this, he fairth is one, as he takes it of our Churches greatest Eccle-Gastical Policyes, that she admits the many in thousands and bundred thou-Sands, without any Subscription, ad Communionem Laicam. Truly the But I know not whether the will take it well of him, that he, not being content with so good an Office as that of her Exposer, should pretend to be her Eccl. statistical Politican, over an other mans head that is sitter for both, and not expect the Reversion. And she cannot but be offended, that he should thus call her Fool by crast, assigning that for her greatest Ecclesiastical Policy, when to have done otherwise would have been the greatest Impertence and Folly. But who are these the many, whom she so graciously receives Communionem Laicam without subscription? Truly all of us whom she trusts not with Teaching others or with University Degrees. The whole body of the Laity. (There again is another name or us, for we can scarse speak without affronting our selves with some contemptuous name or other that they (for sooth the Clergy) have affixed to us.

Nos Numerus sumus the many, & fruges consumere nati. Even his Majesty too, God bless him, is one of the many, and she asks no fu scription of him neither, although I believe he has taken his Degree in the University. Well we must be content to do as we may : we are the mary, and you are the few, and make your best of it. But now, though I am none of you, yet, I can tell you a greater Ecclefiaftical Policy, then all this you have been talking of. It is a hard Word, and though it be but one Syllable, I cannot well remember it, but by good luck it was burnt by the hand of the Hangman, about that time that the Naked Truth was Printed. And had that Policy succeeded, the many must have taken not only all the Thirty Nine Articles, but all the Ecclefiaftical Errours and Incroachments that escaped notice, all in the mass at once, as if they had been Articles of Faith, infallible, unalterable; but the State of the Kingdom had been apparently changed in the very Fundamentals. For a Few of the Few, for above these forty years, have been carrying on a constant Conspiracy to turn all Upside-down in the Government of the Nation: But God in his mercy hath alwayes hitherto, and will; I hope, for ever frustrare all tuch Counsels.

In his 7. p. it is that he faith, the Author in his 4. p. implicitly condemns the whole Catholick Church, both East and West for being so Presumptuous in her Desinitions. However if he does it but Implicitly, the Exposer might have been so Ingenuous or Prudent as not to have Explicated it surther, but conceal'd it least it might do more harme, but at least not to have heigh en'd it so; the whole Catholick Church, and not only so, but, the whole Catholick Church both in the East and West too (why did he not add in the North and South too?) for being so Presumptuous, a term far beyond and contrary to the Modesty and Deserence of the Authors expressions. But this is the Art and Duty of Exposing, Here it is that he brandishes the whole dint of his Disputative Faculty, and if it be not the most rational, I dare say (and yet I should have some difficulty to perfwade men fo) that it us the most foolish passage in the whole Pamphlet. It is impossible to clear the Dispute but by transcribing their own words. In the mean time therefore I heartily recommend my felf to the Readers patience. The Author, purfuing his point how unfafe and unreasonable it is to Impole New Articles of Faith drawn by humane Inferences beyond the Clea Scripture Expressions; instanceth in several of the Prime and most Necessary Principles of the Trinity, especially that of the Holy Ghost. Are they not things, laith he, far above the Highest Reason and sharpest nuderstanding that ever man had? Tet we Believe them because God, who cannot lye, bath Declared them. Is it not then astrange thing for any man to take upon him to Declare one title more of them then God hath Declared? Seeing we understand not what is Declared, I mean we have no Comprehensive Knowledge of the Matter Declared, but only a Believing Knowledge? To which the Exposer will have it that, if the Author be here bound up to his own words, (and 'tis good reason he should) he hath said that me understand not that the matter is Declared, and moreover he saith that he is sure he has done him no wrong in fixing this meaning to the Authors words. No, it is no wrong, it feems then, to fay that to understand That, and to comprehend What is the fame thing, As for example, (if our Ignorance may be allowed in things to infinitely above us to allude to things as far below us) because I understand That the Exposer here speaks Nonlense; I must therefore be able to Comprehend What is the meaning of his Nonsense, and be capable to raise a Rational Deduction from it. I am fure I do the Exposer right in this Inference, and should be glad he only would therefore wear it for my take, for it will fit none but him 'twas made for. But let us come down to the particular, The Scripture, faith the Author, plainly tells, that the Holy Ghoft proceeds from the Father, and That be is fent also by the Father, That he is fent also by the Son: but whether he Proceeds From the Son; or By the Son, the Scripture is filent. I grant that by Rational Deduction, and Humane way of Argument 'tis probable that the Holy Ghost Proceeds from the Son, as from the Father. But we understand not What the Procession or Mission of the Holy Ghost is. and therefore we cannot prove they are Both one. And therefore to determine it or any such Divine and high Mysteries by Humane Deductions, in Humane Words, to be Imposed and Believed with Divine Faith is Dangerous: And much more the Author adds demonstratively to the same purpose, but the Exposer culls out, by the Duty of his Place, what may best serve for his, neither will that do the turn unless he also pervert it. Here again is the That and the What the same thing, Is it the same thing to say or understand That the Holy Ghost is sent by the Son (which is Declared in Scripture) and to understand and comprehend What the Nature of this Miffion is, or What the Na ure of Procession that a man may fafely fay that he Proceeds From or By the Son, as from the Father (which is not Declared in Scripture but by Humane Deduction) and exact the Divine Belief thereof under Eternal and Temporal Penalties? Tet this is the Exposers Legick. And away he goes with it, as if the world (as this inference is) were all his own, and knocks all on the head with a killing Inflance which that I may fill open more visibly to the Readers, I must beg pardon that I am necessitated to repeat over again their own Words sometimes upon occasion. The Exposer faith, Bin be means we have no Comprehensive knowledge. His meaning is good and true but his inserence is stark naught, if he means therefore we understand not at all that this or that is Declared. But the Author neither fays nor means any fuch thing, and the Exposer does him not with flanding his averment to the Contrary, the most manifest wrong imaginable: for as much as he would not only fix a falle meaning upon the Authors words which I first mentioned in the beginning, but upon these other words also which, contrary to their plaine fignification, he produces for proof against him. They are by the Exposers own relation, If then our Reason understand not what is Declared (which is the very Equipollent of what the Author had faid, that we have no Comprehensive knowledge of the matter Declared) how can we by reason make any Deduction by way of Argument from that which we understand not? No more. From whence it is evident from that virtual repetition and natural reflection that every Conclusion hath of and upon its Premisses, that the full sense of the words must be - from that which we understand not, Comprehensive, And yet he faith that he does him no wrong, he is fure he does not in affixing this meaning unto those words. And proceeds, Is it even fo? Then let us put the Cafe with reverence that Almighty God, who affuming I suppose, the shape of an Angel, treated with Abraham face to face, as a man doth with his Friend. Should for once have spoken in the same manner, to Ar-110s or Socinus, and made this one Declaration, that the Catholick Churches Doctrine of the Trinity was true, and his false: then I demand, would not this have been demonstration enough of the Faith which we call Catholick either to Socious or Arrius? And yet all these contradictory Arguments which either of them had once fancied so insolable, supposing them not answered in particular, would remain against it, and stand as they did before, any such declaration, and yet all this without giving him any comprebensive knowledge. This instance is made in Consutation of his own false supposition that the Authors words, if then our reason understand not with comprehensive knowledge what is declared, how can we then make any deduction by way of Arguments from that which we understand not, did in their true meaning lignific how can we by reason make any deduction by way of Argument, from that which we understand not to bave been declared, or, that I may put it the furtheit I can imaginable, to the Exposers purpose or service, bow can we by reason understand that it is declared, which is to impose a most ridiculous and impossible sense upon the Authors plain words; for if we neither understand That nor What, there is an end of all understanding. Yet admitting, here, sayes the Expoler, I have flated you a Case which proves the contrary, for here Arrius or Socious have no comprehensive knowledge of what is declared, and yet they understand that it is declared; and doubtless the Author would fay fo too, without ever meaning the Contrary: yea and that this revelation would have been demonstration enough of that Faith, which we call Catholick. But what would become of their former Contradictory Arguments which the Exposer faith, would stand as they did before, and remain against it. I cannot vouch for the Author, that he would be of the fame opinion-For I cannot comprehend though God had not answered those Arguments of theirs, in particular as the Exposer puts it, that those Arguments would or could remaine against it, and stand as they did before any such declaration, to Arrius and Sacinus after they had received a sufficient demonstration from Gods own mouth by New Revelation. They would indeed remain against it, and stand as they did before to Mr. Sherlocke. But when I have thus given the humorous Exposer his own will and fwing in every thing, yet this superlunary instance does not serve in the least to confirme his Argument that he makes against the Authors words, after his transforming them: For here Arrius and Socious only bring their lense of hearing, and having heard this from God, do not by Reason make any Deduction by way of Argument, but by a believing knowledge do only affent to this, second further Revelation: Nor can they then from this fecond Revelation make any third frep of Argument to extend it beyond its own tenour, without incurring the Authors just & wife Argument again, that feeing our reason understands not what is declared. I mean we have no comprehensive knowledge of this Destrine of Trinity. (which the Expoler Supposes to be declare!) how can we by reason make any deduction by way of Argument from that which we understand not, to wit, not comprehensively? As I have abundantly cleared. But this inftance was at first extinguished, when I shewed in the beginning that he did impertinently traduce the Authors words, and forgehis meaning.

In the mean time, though he faith put the Case with Reverence, when the Case so put cannot admit it, I cannot but at last restect, upon the Exposers unpardunable indiscretion, in this more then absurd and monstruous representation of God almighty assuming the shape of an Angel as he saith he treated with Abraham face to sace as a man don't with his friend, to Discourse with Arrivs and Sovinus. These are small escapes with which he aptly introduces such an interview and conserence, that he treated our 4th. Abraham face to sace, as a man dot with his friend:

for it is true Abraham is Stiled the friend of God, and that God spoke to him; but It is never faid an Scripture that God did Treat, that is a word of Court, not of Scripture : No nor that God fooke to bim face to face. But it is faid in Stipture only of Mofes, Exod. 33. 11. The Lord Spoke to him face to face as a man Speaketh unto his friend. But that was a priviledge peculiar to Moles. Numbers 12, 5. And the Lord came down in a Pillar of Cloud, and flood in the door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and called Aaron and Miriam, and they both came forth, and he faid, hear now my words if there be a Prophet among you, I the Lord will make my self known to him in a Vision, and will speak unto him in a Dream: my servant Moles is not so who is faithful in all my house, with him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently and not in darke Speeches, and the fimilitude of the Lord shall be behold, wherefore then were not you afraid to speak against my Servant Moles? (the Exposer is not afraid to do him manifest injury.) for Deut. 34. 10. And there arose not in Israel a Prophet like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face, &c. And much more might be faid of this matter, were the man capable of it: But I perceive he neither reads nor understands Scripture, and one Divine Criticism is stock enough it feems to fet up an Exposer. Neither is it so notorious an errour that he faith God affumed the shape of an Angel to treat with him. I would be glad to know of the Exposer, seeing he is so Cherubick. what is the shape of an Angel? Some humane Criticks have told me that it was the similitude of a Calfe. But Gods appearing in a sha e to Abraham, when he treated with him face to face was in the shape of a man. Gen. 18 1. The Lord appeared to him in the Plane of Mamre as he fate in the Tent door, and so three men stood by him, &c. These are easie slips and he that stumbles and falls not, gains a step. Yet for one as he mocks the Author p. 2. That appears as one drop'd down from Heaven, vouching himself a Son of the Church of England, teaching as one having authority like a Father, to trip in this manner, is fomething indecent. But to bring God in to so little a purpose, contrary to all rules, that I have seen one with a better grace brought down by a Machine to treat with Arrivs and Socieur, no other Company, those who have contended against the Son of God and his Holy Spirit, whose Opinions have been the Pest of the Clergy for so many Ages, to have them now at last brought in as Privado's to the Mysteries of Heaven, and the Trinity; what Divine in his Witts but would rather have lost an Argument! What will the Gentleman I last named say, to see such a reconciliation, to behold Arrius and Socious in to close Communion with God, as to be admitted even to fingle Revelation: He cannot then avoid thinking, what he lately printed, and now with more reason: That God is all Love and Patience when he has taken his fill of Revenge, as others use to say the Devil is good when he is pleased. What a shame is it to have men like the Exposer, who are delicated to the fervice of the Church, and who ought as in the place quoted by the Author in the prefent Argument, they of all other to hold fait the form of found Words, thus by their rash levity administer so much occasion upon the most revered subject, that one can scarce answer them in their own dialect without feeming, though never so averse to border upon their Profaneness. But these are the Divines in Mode, who, being by their Dignities and Preferments plump'd up beyond humane proportion, do whether for their Pride or Ignorance, neither understand themselves nor others, (men of Nonsense) much less do they understand to speak of God, which ought to be their study, with any tolerable Decorum, These are the great Animadverters of the times, the Church-respondents in the Pew, Men that seem to be members only of Chelfy Colledge, nothing but broken Windows, bare Walls, and rotten Timber. They with a few Villanous words, and a feared Reason are the only Answerers of good and serious Books: Eut then they think a Book to be fure fully answered, when as the Exposer has by an humane Criticisme, they have writ or scribled the same number of pages. For the Authors Book of the Naked Truth, chancing to be of fixty fix pages, the Exposer has not bated him an Ace, but payed him exactly, though not in as good Billet, yet in as many Notches. This being done, then the Exposer ubiquits himself, peeping at the Key-holes, or picking the Locks of the Bed-chambers of all the Great Ministers. and though they be reading Papers of State, or at the Stool more feafonably obtrudes his Pamphlet. Next he fends it by an express to his friends at the Universities, but especially to his own Colledge, and can scarce refrain from recommending it to the Tutors to instruct their Pupills, reading it to them in lieu of other Lectures. But they are lay'd in for provision by the Manciple and Butler, and that Quarter few escape without being fconc'd for an Animadversion. The Country Cathedralls learn it latest, and arrive by flower degrees to their understanding, by the Carrier. It grows a business of Chapter, and they admire it in body as a profound Bock of Theology. Those of 'em that can confide in one another, discourse it over in private, and then 'tis odds, but, before the Laity get notice of it, they first hear it preach'd over by him whose turn it is next Sunday in the Minster, the rest conceal the Fraud for the reputation of the Diocels. After the Book is grown common the Plagiary wonders how, but that proportionable Wits jump together, the Expofer could hit foright upon bis Notions. But if the Dean foresee that tis a very vendible Book, he you may imagine forestalls the Market, and fends up for a whole Dicker of em to retaile at his best advantage. All this while the little Emissaryes here in town are not idle, but hawke about from London to Westminster with their Britches stiffe with the Copyes, and will fell them to any one for Commendation. Nor do they grudge

this drudgery out of the hope and vision that they themselves also may, at some happy hour or other, be received into the band of Answerers, and merit the same Applause and advancement. But if they found it so hard a task as I do this, fure they would be better advised. 'T is a great paine to answer, even an Animadverter; they are much happyer of the rwo, 'tis better by far Preaching, and a Sermon is foon curryed over. Yet sometimes it happens the Printing of a Sermon is toil some afterwards and hazardous: for even one that was preached before His Majesty, and by his special command to be Printed, is it feems making over again, there having been fure some error in the Fome, and has lay'd feveral months in disobdience. But when it shall come our new vamp'd and refitted, it will be a queftion worthy the Schooles, whether it be the same Sermon, and whether he has not prevaricated against his Majesties special Command, and Sinn'd on, by Printing without a Licence. Yet I rather expect that after all, it will incurre the same fare with that memorable Sermon preached before the House of Commons, at their receiving the Sacrament upon the first opening of the Parliament: Which for some dangerous opinions there vented, was so far from ever coming forth, that one might fooner have obtain'd His Majelties special Command against ever Printing it. But to return to the Exposer, who by this impertinence has forced an occasion upon me to reflect on tome Few who are guilty of the fame, and may thank him for the favour. May not, with more reason p. I. then he faith it of the Author, the Church justly complaine of him for thrusting out such crude indigested matter, without communicating these conceptions of his to some that would have shewed him the weak and blind fides of them? I profess after those passages of his that I have already taken hotice of, and this egregious one the laft, wherein by to few lines he hath to amply moletted the Judicious Reader, I do not think I ow him the patience to confider what remains with the fame exactness, every thing that he adds henceforward growing methodically flighter and worse as it hastens to, the Center of Levity, the Conclusion of his Pamphler. Yet fomthing I will reply all along, with more justice then he practiles toward the Author, for whereas he picks out he eand there whithe thinks tenderest in him to tire upon, and renderit by his affected mifrepresentation obnoxious, but shurs his eyes as not being able to indure the resplendence of those evident Truths which he delivers with great demonstration; I shall in the Expoler only otherve and deal with what feems the least impertment. Only I may not perhaps think him worth the transcribing so punctually as I have done hiterto, but for brevity more often refer to his own

Therefore be pleased to look on his p. 7. where, relating to what the Author had said p. 4. of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, wherein the Greek Creed and ours differ, he muffles it all up with faying that yet this breaks not Communion between us, the difference arising only from the Inadequation of Languages. Which is a Mathematical and more Civil way, either of owning his Ignorance in fo weighty a point, or confesting that he cannot answer what the Author hath faid upon it. If by reason of the Inadequation of Languages a mystery to inexplicable could not be expressed why did either our Church or theirs meddle in it beyond the Scripture? There is no Inadequation between the Languages, in speaking of it, Die and Apo a Potre Filioque, and a Patreper Filium: From the Father and Son, or From the Father By the Sou: Proceeding or Sending: But no language can reach the nature of Profession of Musion, nor to reprefent to humane understanding how they can both be the same, or wherein they may differ. He does in this as the Arrian Bishops in their Subscription of the Nicene Creedito Jovianus Socr. 1.3. c. 21. which now they faid they could do with a good Conference, underfranding neque vo. cabulum substantie apud sanctor Patres ad consuctudinem Greek Sermonis capi-Tis an happy thing I fee to find our Church in good humour, elfe the might have made more adoe about an Article of Faith, as the does about much leffer matters. 'Tis not ftrangerhat the Expofer finds no greater difference or diffinction between verms to diffant, feeing in the last Patagraph above, he was so dull that he understood not What is What. But he most aprly concludes how Demosthenes once answered the Orard-Alchines, who kept much adoe about an improper word. The Fertunes of Greece do not dependupon it. So trivial a thing it feems dees the Expoter reckon it, to have improper words obtruded upon Ch iffians in a Creed, without believing of which no man can be faved, and whereupon the Eastern and Western Churches divided with so much concernment. But how proper and ingenious a contrivance was it of the Author (who is the very Cannon of Concinnity) to bring in Demofthenes and Eschines, as being doubtless both of the Greek Church, to decide the matter in Controverly of the Procession or Mission of the Holy Gliost between them and the West. Amiachus, whenfoever you rake the Pew again, be sure you forget not Demosthenes and Eschines : For it will be to you as good as current Money, which answers all things. The Expoler, though here logentle, yet, in the very page before this was as dogged, to as good men as the Greeks some of them, the Papists, Lutherans, and Calvinitis. The Author, he layes, may make as hold with them as he pleases, for we are none of these, I am not bound to make War in their vindication. But if he should once Kyrie Elisson, what would become of us? Good Mother Church of England maintaine this humor thorow, carrey it on, but above all things make much of this thy Exposer; give him any thing, think horhing too good for him, Happy the Church that hath, and milerable that wants such a Champion! ty that the during is ea

But I must find some more expeditious way of dealing with him, and walke faster, for really I get cold. The force of all that he faith in the 8, and 9, pages, is to represent the Author ridiculously and odi-ously, as it upon his wishing that Constantine had commanded both parties Homoonfian, and Homoionfian to acquiels in the very Scripture Expressions, without any addition, whereby he is confident the Arrian Herefie had foon expired, he did by confequence cut Poe-dike to let in a Flooi of all Herefies, upon the Fenns of Christianity. But the words with which hecuts the Author down, are: Why, this was the defigne of the Arrians themselves, that which they drove at Court, that silence might be imposed on both Parties. Well, and 'twas very honestly done of them and modefuly, and like Christians, if the Controversie arose, as men think about the Imposing of a Creed, or Article concerning a Question so fine, in Words fo Grofs, which yet a man must Believe that without Believing it, no man can be Saved; though no humane understanding can comprehend the subject of the Question, nor the Scripture Expresfions, as they conceived, did reach it. There is field enough for Faith in the Scriptures, without laying out more to it; and to religne their Reason to be silenced in a Question, stirred up by others, that Peace might be established in the Church, was Ingenuity in them: and the contrary proceeding of the Church was the occasion of many other Herefies that else had never been heard of. But the Exposer had faid fomthing, if he could have divined that they would have used this filencing the dispute by Constantine as the Arminians (so they were at that time called) did the same in the Reigne of his late Majesty, who procuting a command from him to prohibite all writing or preaching about those points, having thereby gagged their A iversaries, did let the Press and the Pulput loose more then ever to propagate their own Doctrines. That which the Exposer drops in the ardour of this Argument, p. 9. How many terms in the Athanasian Creed, which to seek for in the Apostles Creed, or in the whole Bible, were to as much purpose as it was for the old affected Ciceronian in Erasmus to labour and toile his Brains to surn that Creed into Ciceronian Latine. Tet thefe are the terms in which the Catholick Church thought she spoke safely in these Divine matters; is, totidem verbis, either to beg the Question or make a formal relignation of it. And our Church (how loever elfe he may have oblidged her) has reason to refent this indifferetion. Why was the her felf to indifferent to admit fuch a Blab into her fecrecies? How if no man else ought to have known it? It is an ill matter to put fuch things in mens minds, who otherwife perhaps would never have thought of it. 'Tis enough to turna mans fromach that is not in ffrong health, not only against the Athinafian Cree l, but against all others for its sake. He saith p. 8. Scoffingly that the Author is one of those whom St. Paul forbids to be admitted to himself rather that is there spoken of And withall that he may make some more proper use of the place, which he warily cites not, I recommend it to him in order to his suture dispute about Ceremonies: 'Tis the 14. Rom. v. 7. Where St. Paul calls him that contents for them the Weak Brother, Weak in the Faith; and such therefore the Apostle excludes some doubtful Disputations, so that one gone so far in Ceremony as the Exposer, had no License from him to Print Animadversions.

As to what he patches in p. 10. upon the matter of School-Divinity, as if the Author poured contempt upon the Fathers; I referre it to the Animadversions on the Chapter about preaching, and should I forget I defire him to put me in mind of it. And p. 11. and 12. where the Auth or having in his 2. and 3. p. faid that, None can force mother to believe, no more then to read where the Candle does not give clear light, and more very fignificantly to that purpose; the Exposer flying giddily about it, burns his wings with the very fimilitude of a Candle. Sure if a man went out by night on Tranelling, or Bat-fowling, or Proctoring, he might earth these Exposers by Dozens. But the force of his Argument is p. 13. Whereas the Author layes, you can force no mans fight or his fainh, he replyes, If it be not in any mans power to Discerne Fundamental truths, (of which this Chapter treats) when they are laid before his Eyes when there is a sufficient proposel, then it is none of his fault. Yet this is as weak as water: Eor, supposing a Fundamental Truth clearly demonstrated from Scripture, though a man cannot force himself to believe it, yet there is enough to render a mnn inexcufable to God. God bath not been wanting (one of the Expolers scraps) in necessaries: but I hope he will not compel God too, but that he may dispense his saving and efficarious Influence (without which all that sufficient Proposal he speaks of will have been infufficient,) only to the minds of whom he pleases. The Animadverter in defending that a man can force himself to believe, argues against Experimental Demonstration (try it in any man in every man) but railes only a maligne ignorant and cavilling dispute, herein to reduce the Author to the Dreggs, forfooth, of Mr. Hobb's his Divinity, 1 C. It is not the man's fault, faith be, if he cannot believe after a sufficient Proposal. He faith, be is sure, too it is not then the man's fault. (to in the Dispute lately about That and What, he faid, he was sure be did the Author no wrong) But I delire him first to read Romans 3. the 4, 5, 6. verses, with the Context: But especially Romans 9. from the 13. to the 22. verse, where the Apostle incroduces a man objecting in the same words to the same purpose, Thou wilt say unto me why doth God yet find fault, &c. And if the Exposer will not take the Apostles Answer, but be sure of the contrary, then he too cannot, it feems force bimfelf to believe after what he ought to have allowed for a sufficient Proposal. But where the Author supposes that any man does clearly or sufficiently demonthate a Fundamental Truth from Scripture ; yet unless a mans Brains be cear it is to him no demonstration. You suppose that all of you do clearly demonstrate, so that if they don't Believe you may justly open their Eyes with a paire of Pincers. Whereas there are some Few among the Few, fuch Spermologers, that unless a grain of Faith fall down, by the by, from Heaven your feed is Barren. I do not reckon much npon a Church Hittorical devilish beliefe. Unless a thing be in the Express words of Scripture, there are some of the Laity to whom a Counsel cannot demonstrate clearly, a Preacher cannot demonstrate, sneezing Powder cannot demonstrate, no Earthly can do it. Chiff used Clay indeed, but it was his Spittle that gave the healing quality, and cured the Blind man. Alas you are so wise in your own conceit, that you cannot conceive how simple some poor men are. He faith, the Reason which helps every man to fee these Fundamental Truths, at least when they are shew'd and pointed out to him (fuch Truths you must conceive as the Creed Dodrines of the Trinity) is a vulgar and popular thing (what need then for many Disputes in the Councills? and sure the Author, that he may not admit any mans hypocrific and wilfulness to be gross and pelpable, imagins there are a world of Idiots. So the expoter would now cokes the Lay-multitude, whom before he call'd the bundred thousands, and the many, and for their simplicity excusable from subscribing the 39. Articles, to be grown on the fuddain fo very wife men, that he may with justice therefore compel them by corporal punishments or penalties to believe in fpight of their Teeth or their understandings. Alas if any men consider those Fundamental Truths, so subject he faith to vulgar and popular reason, it is one of the difficultest things in the world, and yet more to those who are most removed from being Idiots to believe them; and some men by their clear Demonstrations, by their sufficient Proposals, by their Creeds bave rendered it still more difficult. Why have I wasted all this on the Exposer who, (whether it be his fault or no) yet cannot force himself to Believe even the Naked Truth, though so clearly demonstrated from Scripture (and the Expoler I suppose believes the Scripture) though so Confonant and obvious to the most vulgar and popular reason, but Believes his own Animadversions, against the most vulgar and popular Reason, to le a sufficient Proposal to the Contrary? In the 13 and 14. p. speaking of that place Gal. 5. 12. which the Author understands of the Magistrates Power, but the Exposer will have to be Excommunication; I crave leave to diffent from both of them, humbly conceiving that the Word there of Cutting off is rather meant in the usual fense of Scripture in a multitude of places, for Cods taking them of by his hand. But whatloever it be, I defire the Exposer for his own take to take good heed that, whether it be Executing, or Punishing, or Eanishing, or Excommunicating, or taking them away Gods hand of Justice, the Apostle speaks of such as taught for Circumcision, and alluding to the word wishes that they were rather cut aff, who trouble the Galatians about the retaining of that, and who would oblidge them contrary to their Christian Liberty to fuch Jewish Ceremonies.

For what he hales in of the great and notable effect p. 14. of conferences, wishing that there were such held publickly or privately to satisfie the Non-conformists; truly though they be no great men; yet perhaps it were fit they were first satisfied what kind of Reception they should meet with. But I doubt such Conferences in Publick are but the Refemblance and Epitome of General Councils. For that of the Savoy in which he instances it might almost as well have been in Piemont. A man difinteffed either way, might make a pleafant flory of the Anecdita of that Meeting, and manifest how well his Majesties Gracious Declaration, beforehis return, and his Broad-Seal afterwards were purfued. But it is not my present business. But for shortness sake, as to his desire That he that does not believe the notable effect of them would but read what my Lord Bishop of Winchester printed of that Conference, where the Adverse Party was driven immediatly to affert that what soever may be the occasion of sin to any must be taken away: I shall as civilly as I can, though I deferre much to his extraordinary veracity, tell the Expoler I do not believe him.

I come now to what he p. 14, 15, 16, 17. and in other places declares to be his Judgement, as to Compulsion in matter of Faith and Religion. The Authors opinion appears in the beginning, where I stated his own words thorow this Chapter. The expose does beat the aire. p. 14concerning the Donatifts, a must fedicious and turbulent feet, who faith the Author (as it is objected by those that would have Force used) some of them came to St. Augustine and gave thanks, that the Civil Power was made use of to testraine them, confessing that was the means that brought them to confider more calmly their own former extravagant opinions, and fo brought them home to the true Church. But he quarrels the Author for his four answers, against the Magistrates using that as a Precedent. The first, our Case is not in repressing Seditious Practifes, but inforcing a Confesfron of Fairb. I will return straight to the Exposers Answer to this. The Authors second is; unless it can be evidenced that their hearts were chang- . ed as well as their Profession (a thing impossible to prove) all this proves nothing. Nelther does it. For the dispute now betwixt the Author and his Adversary is, whether it be possible to compel a man to believe. This inflance proves only that those Danatifts were forced to come to Church. Therefore there cannot be a more uncharitable and difingenuous thing invented, then for the Expoler to upbraid him with fuch a retort, for ought he knows they were Hypocrites : (the Author does fay to) fo forought we to know this Author is all this while a Jefuite, and writes this Pampblet only to imbroile us Protestants. But he must make some sputter rather then be held to the terms of the Question : and truly I perceive Antiochus is very weary and shifts like a Ciane (not ro instance in a work Bird) first one foot and then another to rest on, being tired to stand so long within so close a Circle. For thirdly the Author answers, Put the case their hearts were really changed, as to matter of Belief, 'tis evident their hearts were very worldly still, grovelling on earth not one step nearer Heaven: He will not be candid without Compulsion, but leaves out what follows; and fure their heart was evil, which was far more moved for the quiet enjoyment of this worlds good, then for the bleffed enjoy-ment of Christ. In earnest I begin to think an Exposer is a Rational Creature. For had he not onpurpole left these last words out, he could not have cryed, A borrible charitable faying! We may forgive the Author any thing after this; which is all the Answer he gives: so charieable is the Exposer grown to the Donatifts, for every man that will come to Church is ipfo facto with him, a true Believer. But it did in truth appear to have been fo, and there is not the least uncharitableness in this that the Author has faid; For by those Donatifts own confession, it was not any love to that which they now owned for the Truth to St. Auftin, not any Conviction of Conscience, not so much as even an inclination to obey the Magistrate; but meer fine force and fear of Punishment that brought them to Church, and what soever good came on't was by accident. Whether might not a man adde that their giving thanks for that force, and so owning that Principle of Compulsion, was a further evidence that their heart was naught fill, even while they were with St. Augustine? I think a man might, untill I be better informed. But the Author having given a fourth answer that, Suppose they were now really brought over to the Truth of the Church of Beliefe, and Religion by the Magistrates severity, (I express it thus that I may not with the Exposer riffe about the Jews care) yet St. Paul hath faid, God forbid me should do evil that good may come of it? This is answer enough for a man of understanding. For it is not lawful, suppose for St. Austin himself, to beguile any man even into Christianity: unleis as St. Paul perhaps, 2 Cor. 12. 16. Being crafty caught the Corinchians with guile, by preaching the Gofpel without being burthensome touthe people. No man ought to cheat another though to the true beliefe: Not by Interlining the Scripture. Not by falle Q totation of Scripture, or of a Father. Not by forging a Heathen Prophecy, or altering an Author. Not by a falle Syllogifine: Not by telling alve for Go I. And if no Pettie Fraud much less can a Pia Vis be allowe I, to compell them to Faith, compell them to a Cree i, feeing it were to do evil that good may come of it: much less to a Creed not perfectly Scriptural, and, instead of being inforced, indeed weakned by

by compulsion, seeing it is impossible to compel a man to believe, and some Divines reach us to believe (though I suspend,) that even God himself cannot, or doth not Compel men to Believing. But now it falls in naturally to me to be as good as my word, to confider what the Exposer replyes to the Author's first answer concerning the Donatifts, that our Case is of inforcing a Confession of Faith, not concerning seditions Practifes, of which the Donatifts were notorioufly guilty, in which Cafe be bad shown before, that the Civil Magistrate may proceed to Punishment. Wherein the Author reasons with his usual juffnels, and I though a very flender accession, cannot but come into him. For St. Paul, in the 13. Chapter of the Romans, laying out the Boundaries of the Duty of Christian subjects and the Magistrates Power ; faith, Rulers are not (ought not to be) a terrour to good works, but to evil, and fo forward : but to the Christian people he fairh, they must be subjett not only for wrath as those Donatifts weie afterwards, but for Conscience sake. And the subjection he defines is in doing good, walking up ightly, keeping the Moral Law, Fearing, Honouring, and Paying Tribute to the Magistrate. But not one word faith the Apostle of ferbearing to Preach out, of that Obedience; faying in another place Necessity is laid upon one and moe is unto me if I preach not the Gofpel : (and that Supposes too mee.ing) and as little of Compelling to hear. For in those times and a great while after, there was no inforcing to Christianity. It was very long before that came in fashion: And, writing on the suddain, I do not well remember whether it did ever before the dayes of Piçarro and Almagro. the Apostles of the Indians. yet upon recollection it was sooner. But what faith the Expoler to this of the Danatifts, who in the Author allows only to have been punishable only for se licious Practises, having before declared that for fuch as only refuse to conforme to the Churches established Doctrine and Discipline (pardon him if he fay) really be cannot find any warrant or fo much as any bint from the Gospel to use any Force to compet them :and from Reason sure there is no motive to use force, because as he she wed before, Force can't make a man believe your Doctrine, but only as an Hypocrite, Profess what he believes not. I e pect that the Exposer, in this place above all other, which I guess was his greatest motive to this Imployment, thould ply and overlay him now with Reafon, but especially with Scripture, let us hear how he answers. I say only this p: 5. (for he speaks now of our Non-Conformists) the very Ail against them calls them Sedicious Conventicles, and openly to break fo many known Laws of the Land, after so many reinforcements, is not this to be turbulent? This now you must understand to be Reason, and not Scripture: That I suppose as the ftrongest is referved for the Rear. Truly, (as far as a man can comprehend by comparing that with other Acts of this Parliament,) they did only appoint that the Penalty of Selition should ly against those that f equent flich Meetings : as in the Act against Irish Carel, lift be not in it selfa Nuisance no Law-givers can make it so. Nor can any Logislators TANKLUS 1

make that to be Sedition which is not Sedition in its own hature. So Prohibitions of that kind operate no more as to the intrinfeque Quality, then a publick Allowance of taking away any honest mens Goods by violence and giving it another name, would extinguish the Robbery. It was the King and Parliaments prudence to make fuch Laws, and as long as they shall continue of that mind, it is reason the Non-Conformists should lye under the Fenalty, which I humbly conceive is all that could be intended, But the Expoler rivers this with Reasonagain, not Gospel. And was it not ever understood so in all Religions; even in Heathen Rome? The most learned P. Ærodius tells us (Does he so? What is it I beseech you) that the Roman Senate (the Exposer quotes it at large as a story of great use and not to be hudled over; I must be glad to contract it) made an Att against the Conventicles of certaine Innovators in their Religion's if any particular person judged such a sacrifice to be necessary, be must repair first to the Prator, be to the Senate, where the Quorum must be an bundred. and they must not neither give bim leave if at all to have above five persons pre-Sent at the Meeting. The felf same number, beside the Diffenters own Family, is so far forth indur'd by an Act of this present Parliament, that there must be more then Five to make it a Conventicle. This is a very fubtile Remarke that he has made, as if it were one of those Witty accidents of Fortune, or an extraordinary hand of Providence, that the Senate of Rome and the Parliament of England should hit to pat, upon an Act of the fame nature : And upon that number of Five. However they are oblidg'd to him, and he deferves the publick Thanks for furnishing them, so long after, with a Precedent. I confess I alwayes wonder'd they would allow them so many as Five, for fear when, not two or three, but Five of'em were gathered together God should bear their request : and it feem'd therefore to me a Formidable Number. But where has the Example been hid fo long? I believe the Exposers study has laid much this way. But this was fo deep an Arcanum that was fit for none but an Arch-Bishops Clo-Te . I wish he have come honestly by it. But Murder I see and Thest will out, and fo this comes to light by a blabbing Animadverter, that cannot kee counsel, but will violate the Ecclesiastical secret rather then lose the Leachery of his Tattle and the vain-glory of his Pedantry. I could be glad to know what complexion this Exposer is of. I am perswaded, what soever he may be now, he was once extreme faire: for I remember fince I was at School : that the learned P. Ovidius told me, that the Crow was once a white Bird, and much in Apollo's favour till for telling of Tales, Sperantem non false premia lingue, Inter aves albas vetnit consistere Corvum.

And of another, the fairest thing that ever eyes were laid on, but for carrying of Storyes, was turn'd into a Jackdaw, and grew as black as a Crow, Filching, and Kaw me and Ile Kaw thee, ever after.

And that which fure must make him more black, more a Jack-daw, and like it, worthy to be expelled from the guard, and from the protection of Minerva, and who henceforward

Ponarur

Ponatur post Noctis avem, is, that he does with open mouth proclaim the Naked design of all the Few that are of his Party. p. 12. The Jews in Rome are constrained once a week to hear a Christian Sermon. The same p. 12. We that would oblidge him to open his Eyes whether he will or no. p. 14. I can only wish for the present, that by forcing theminto our Churches, they may hear our defences, p. 17. Ifpeak nothing more against them then that they may he brought to our Churches, &c. All this as the last refult and greatest condescension of his Ecclesialtical Clemency. In conclusion he declares he would have them forced: and for what manner of force, violence, punishent or penalty heleaves it all open, go as high as men will. These things still are not Scripture neither, but Reason. His first was an Heathenish Reason in one sense, and this a Tewish in another. For I confess it is a very pregnant and adequate example, and of great authority for us to imitate; that the Jews in Rome are emstrained once a week to bear a Christian Sermon. What could there be more proportionable, then to relemble the proceeding with Christians among themselves here in England, not differing in any point of Faith, with the proceeding at Rome against the Jews? But that the Exposer should implicitly liken and compare our Bishops to the Pope, may perhaps not be taken well by either Party. So that I dare fay, had he consulted with his usual Prudence, he would not have disoblidged both fides at once. But for the Precedent, I have nothing to oppose to this more then the first, it being doubt to foof notable effect, as notable as that of the Piemone conference. Only our of the affection I have for him I would wish him to correct here one flip, if I be rightly informed; for some that have been abroad say his Intelligence from Rome has failed him, for that it is not once a week, but once a year that the Tens at Rome at e, oblidged, forced, to hear a Chri-Gian Sermon. And therefore, when the Parliamentum Induction fits again, I would advise him not to make his Act too fevere here upon this mistake, then it is against those Judaick Non-Conformists at Rome.

But the next Reason would be so extraordinary troublesome to the Few, that are of the Exposers party and to himself, that, if he had thorowly consider'd it; I question whether he would have been so charitable to the Panaticks, that he would oblige them to open their Eyes whether they will or no. For it would require two of the Church of England to every Non-conformist, unless twere here and there one that had lost an Eye in the Service. Less would not do the business decently, and those two also must be well in order to open the Non-conformists Eyes both at once, less one Eye should be of one and the other Eye of a contrary opinion. And then they should in humanity, give them some interval for winking. Else they had as good cut off their Eye-lids, as the Episcopal Carthaginians used the Presbyterian Regulus, for keeping in the true sense to his Covenant. But on the other side, it would look too big for a Company of beggarly Fanaticks, to be waited upon in as much Majesty as Obeshankanogh the King of Virginia, that had two Squires of the Body in constant attendance, to lift up his Eye-lids as ofe as he conceiv'd any man worthy to be look'd upon. But let the Expofer order it as he pleafes, I am not bound to be any of his Sight-Supporters. Onely this, it would be very improper for him to chuse any one that is blind to that employment. For his several times repeated wish, that they might be forced to come to Church to give them a fair hearing, and to hear their discourses : truly I believe they know the Lion by the Claw, there is a great part of Ocatory confilts in the choice of the Person that is to perswade men. And a great Skill of whatsoever Orator is, to perswade the Auditory firft that he himself is an honest and a fair man. And then he is like to make the more impression on them too, if he be so prudent as to chafe an acceptable subject to speak on, and manage it decently, with fit arguments and good language. None but the very rabble love to hear any thing fourrilous or railing; especially if they should hear themselves rail'd on by him, they would be ready to give him the due applause of Petronisu his Orator, with finging the stones about his cars, and then leaving him to be his own Audicory. Now, they have had so amp'e experiment of the Expoler as to all these points, in his D fence against the Naked Truth, that I doubt his perswasion to this comming to hear nim or others, will be of little force with them, and nothing would oblige these Dmatifisto it, but the utmost extremity; nor then would they find themselves one step nearer heaven. His Book is as good to them as a Sermon, and no doubt he has preach'd as well as printed it, and took more pains in it than ordinary; did his bift. Must they, will they think, be compelled to make up the pomp of his Audicory? Must they, while the good Populh Fathers suffer'd those of Chiapa to come to Church with their Chicalatte pots, to comfort their heiris, be inforced to come to Church by him, to have Snuth thrust up their Nofes to clear their Brains for them 'lis the onely way to continue and increase the Sch ime. But in good lober earnest, 'cis happy that fome or other of this Few chances ever and anon to speak their minds out, to shew us plainly what they would be at. Being confcious of their own unworthine's, and hating to be reformed, it appears that they would eftablish the Christian Religion by a Mahomet . n way, and gather so much Force that it might be in their power, and we lie at the r mercy, to change that Religion into Heathenisme Judatsme, Turcisme, any thing. I speak with some emotion, but not without good reaton, that I quest on whether, which way foever the Church Revenues were applied, such of them would not betake the nfelves to that fide as nimbly as the Needle to the Load Rone. Have they not already, iplo facto renounc'd their Christianity : by avowing this Principle, fo contrary to the Gospel? Why do not they Peter Hermire it, and fir up our Prince to an Holy War abroad, to propagate the Protestant Religion, or at least one Discipline and Ceremonies, and they take the Front of the Battel? No 'cis much better lurking in a fat Benefice here, and to domineer in their own Parishes above their Spiritual Vallals, and raise a kind of Civil War at home, but that none will oppose them. Why may they not, as well as firce men to Church, cram the Holy Supper too down their Throats (have they not done fomething not much unlike it) and drive them into the Rivers by chousands to be baptized or drowned ? And vet this, after the King and Par iament by his, their, Gracious Indulgence have enacteda Liberty for Five befide their own Family to meet together in their Religious Worship: and could not therefore in end at the same time to force then to go to Church with theutmost or any severity. What can be the end of these things, but to multiply Force with Force, as one absurdity is the confequence of another, till they may again have debased the Reason and Spirit of the Nation, to make them fit for Ignorance and Bondage? Is it not reafon, if they had care or respect to mens souls (which they onely exercise it feems the cure of, perhaps not that neither, but evacuate one Relidence by another) to allow that men should address themselves to such Minister as they think best for their souls health? Men are all infirm and indisposed in their in ratual condition. What lick man, but, if a Phylician were inforced upon him, might in good prudence suspect it were to kill him, or that, if the next Heir and the Doctor could agree, he would certainly do it? I shall conclude this reasonable transport with remarking that although the Author did modeftly challenge any man to shew him a warrant or colour or hine fro a Scripture, to use Force to conftrain men to the Established Doctine and Worship, and offer'd to maintain that nothing is more clear to be deduced or is more fully exprest in Scripture, nor is more suitable to Natural Reason, than that no man be forced in such Cases; the Exposer took notice of it, yet hath not produced one place of S ripture, but onely made use of Force a an Invincible Reason; fo that upon supposal, which none granted him, the tall his Few do clearly demonstrate from Scripture, what is at belt there ore but deducible from Scripture, he thinks it reasonable to ob-I ge all men by force to come to all their Parishes. And yet he himself who does (I lu pose it onely for the Cases sake) believe the Scripture although he can of produce one place of Scripture for uling this force, and though the Author has produced to many, and urges the whole Scrip we that fuch to ce is not to be used , hath his brains new reheles to confused, or to obdurate, that he cannot force himfe f to believe the Author : but perfifts in his unchriftian and unreasonable defire that men may be compelled , and hereby deferves to bemade an Example of his own Principle. For herein he exceeds Pharash, who had ten sufficient Proposals, and yet his heart was so hardaed, that he would not let I fixel go out of Egyps, but was proof against M'racles. Bu: He onely would imagine that the fractites were idle, and would therefore force them to make Brick without Straw: but the Expo ers heart and brains are so harmed, that he will conceive all the Nonconformiffs to be obstinate fo ls or hypocrits, and therefore will compel them all to go to all their Parish-Churches, and to make therefore Faith with our Reason. And hence it is not onely probable but demonstrable, if they were compelled to go and hear him and the Few of his Party , how well he or they would acquie themselves too, in clearly demonstrating from Sciprence the Rrime Articles of Faith, as it is extended in all the Creeds, of which it was created in this Chapter that I have now done with, and truly almost with those remaining.

For I had intended to have gone Chapter by Chapter, affixing a diffind Title, as he does to every one of them (that men may believe he has animadverted thorowly without reading) except that concerning the difference between Bishops and Presbyters, which, as being the most easie to be anfwered, he therefore referred to a Bilhop. But in good earnest, after having confider'd this last Chapter, fo Brutal whether as to Force or Reason. I have changed my refolution. For he argues to despicably in the reft, that even I, who am none of the best Disputers of this World, have conceived an atter contempt for him. He is a meer Kitchin-plunderer, and attacks but the Baggage, where even the Suttlers would be too hard for him. P. 18. Does the Exposer allow that under Constantinus Pogonatus to have been a free General Council? In the same page, If the Exposer would have done any thing in his Die Ecclesie, he thould have proved that a General Council is the Church , that there can be luch a General Council , or bath been; that the Church can impose new Articles of Faith beyond the Express Words of Scripture; that a General Council cannot erre in matters of Faith; That the Church of his making cannot erre in matters of Faith : Whereas our Church, Article 19. faith thus far , The Church of |crusalem, Alexandria, and Antioch, have erred, so also the Church of Rome bath erred, not onely in their living and manner of Ceremonies, but alfo in matters of Faith. This is an Induction from Particulars, and remark the Title of the Article, being of the Church. Ours defines it . The Vilible Church of Christ is a Congregation of faithful men, in which the pure Word of God is preached, and the Sacraments be duly ministred, according to Christis Ordinance in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same. And then, if the Reader please to look on the 20. and 21. Articles following, one of the Authority of the Church , the other of the Authority of General Councill, unless a man will indultriously mit-apply and mif-confirme them. those three are a Compendious and irrefragable Answer, not onely to what he Lich here upon the Appendix, but to his whole Book, from one end to the other, p. 19. I ask him when the Greek Church is excommunicate by the Roman, when the Protestants left the Roman Church; when we in Eng. land are neither Papifts, Lutheraus, nor Calvinifts, and when in Queen Maries time we returned to the Roman Church , what and where then was the Catholick Church, that was indefectible and against which the Gates of Hell did not prevail? Was it not in the Savoy? Moreover I ask him what hinders but a General Conneil may erre in matters of Faith, when we in England, that are another World, that are under an Imperial Crown, that are none of them, as the Exposer words it, but have a distinct Cathofick Faith within our Pour Seas, did in the Reign before mentioned (and reckon how many in that Convocation those were that differted) again make our felves one of them? unless he has a mind to do so too, which would alter the Cale exceedingly. P. 20. He quotes the A& I Eliz, cap. 1. let him mind that clause in it, by the express and plain words of Canonical Scripture, and then tell me what fervice it hath done him : whether he had not better have let it alone, but that it is his fate all along to be condemn'd out of his own mouth, which must alwayes succeed so, when man urges a Real Truth against a Real Truth. P. 23. I have reason to affirm and he will meet with it (and has already in the Author) that those General Councils howfoever called, were no Representatio totius nominis Christiani, but nominally : yea that fuch a Representation could not be. P.22. He expounds Scriptures here, and thinks he does wonders in it, by affuming the Faculties of the whole Body to the Mouth, which Meuth, he faith (and in some sense tis very true, if a man would run over the Concordance) is the Clergy. But I know not why the Mouth of the Church should pretend to be the Brain of the Church; and understand and will for the whole Laity. Let every man have his word about, and 'tis reason. We are all at the same Ordinary, and pay our souls equally for the Reckoning. The Exposer's Month, which is unconscionable, would not onely have all the Meat but all the Talk too, not onely at Church, but at Council Table. Let him read Bishop Taylor of Liberty of Prophecy. P. 25 The Exposer, that alwayes falfly Represents his Adversary, as an Enemy to Creeds, to Fathers, (as afterwards he does to Ceremonies, to Logick, to Mathematicks, to every thing that he judicionfly speaks and allows of) here. P. 25. faith the Author (who delivers but the Church of Englands Doctrine herein, and would not have Divine Faith impos'd upon, nor things prest beyond Scripture) in this matter of General Councils is guilty of unthought of Popery, for the Papists (really I think he part'y flunders them herein) can-not endure Councils, General and Free. They allow many a General Council more than we do ... If the Pope do not, for some reason or other, delight in some that are past, or in having new ones; it does not follow that the Papiffs do not. I think those were Papiffs that ruffled the Pope too here in the West, and that at the Council of Constance burnt John Hus and Hierome of Prague, and relolv'd that Faith was not to be kept with Hereticks. But pray Mr. Expoler, if we must give divine Faith to General Councils, let the Author ask you in his turn which are those Generat Councils ? How shall we know them? Why, onely such as accord with Scripture. Why, then we I mean you Mr. Expoler , make our felves, you ftill, Judges of the General Councils, the fault you fo much condemn the Author for But what Popery, thought of unthought of , are you, in the very next line, guilty of, that call the P pes Supremacy the Quinteffence of Popery? So chao it frems the Quintessence of the Controversie betwixt our Church and theirs, is onely which shall be Bope: for the Articles of Religion we do not so much differ, we need not much compulsion; though the Non-conformilts may. I thank you, Mr. Expofer, for your News: I had often heard it before, I confes, but till now I did never, and scarce yet can, believe ie; it is rather to be wish'd then hoped for, a thing fo furprizingly scasonable. But for the good news Mr. Exposer, I will give you four Bottles (which is all I had by me, not for mine own use, but for a friend upon occasion) of the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Essence. Bat the Quinteffence I doubt would be too flrong for your Brain, especially in the morning when you are writing Animadversions. P. 28. of Ceremonies he sports unworthily, as if the Author spoke Pro and Con, Contradictions : while, as a Moderator, he advifes our Church to Condescension on the right, and the D senters to submission on the lese (how are men else to be brought together?) He had as good call every man, because he has two hands, an Ambidexter. He would turn every mans Stomach , worle than the Singing-mens dirty Surplices, to hear him defend it fo foolishly. P. 29, 30, 35, 36. The best of his reasons for it are the Apparitions in white, in the Evangelists. The Transfiguration. The Saints in white Linnen. The Purity of a Minister. Why then does he not wear it all the Weck? The Bishop Sifynnius did fo, and a Churchman asking him, why not in Black? as 'twas then the mode, be gave the same reasons; and I believe Garnay the Non-conformit; if, as they fay, he went to Market in it, learn'd them of him. Why does not the Exposer (there is more reason in Scripture. Col. 4 6. Let your speech be alwayes seasoned with Salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man) carry a Salt-box alwayes in his Pocket, to be talking of? for I doubt he is of the Salt that has loft his favour: however I am fure he is very infrpd, and this might correct ie : beside it must have been of great vertue, when he was to animadvert on the Naked Truth, that he might have known hom to answer him. See Fox Vol. 3. p. 900. col. 2. what the Martyr, the Conformable Bishop Ridley faith, would not be forced to wear it, he was no Singer. See as to att these things his beloved Tertullian, de Cor. Mil. His intolerably ridiculous Story out of Schottm p. 15. of contriving a pair of Organs of Cats, which he had done well to have made the Piggs at Hogs - Norton play on , puts me in mind of another Story to quit it, relating as his does to ferewing the Non-conformists into Church; and I could not possibly miss of the rencounter, because the Gentleman's name of whom it is told, is the Monofyllable voice with which Cats doufually address themfelves to us. 'Twas (you have it as I had it) the Vice-Chancellour of one of our Universities, but now a Bishop, Oltob. 22. 1671. and 12. Febr. 1669, He came to a Fanaticks house, they not being then at Worship, yet one of 'm said, They were come to pray to the God of Heaven and Earth; he said, Then they were within the All. He would force them to Church to Saint Maries, himself laid hands on'm. He commanded them to follow him in the Kings name. His Beadle told them, He would drive them thither in the Devils name. The Vice Chancellour faid he had converted hundreds fo at Reading. They spoke of Queen Maries dayes, he faid, he could burn them too now, if the Law regulred it. There was old tugging, he had the victory. They were placed in Saint Maries, with Beadles to attend As he carried them in he quoted Luke 14. 23. Compel them to come in. What pity'tis the Exposer knew not of this Text, that he might have had one Scripture for his Doctrine of Compulsion! But it chanced the Minister there preached one time Atts 5.41. the other time Mat. 10.16. Afterwards he took the penalty nevertheless for not having been at Church that same Sunday that he had hurried them thither. P. 62. He speaks of Bishop Morton, whose industrious Brain made up the fatal breach beimeen the two Honfes of York and Lancaster. But the Printer calls : the Press is in danger. I am weary of such stuffe, both mine own and his. I will rather give him this following Effay of mine own to bifie him, and le: him take his turn of being the Popilius.

A Short Historical Essay, touching General Councils, Creeds, and Imposition in Religion.

HE Christian Religion, as first Instituted by our Blessed Saviour was the greatest security to Magistrates by the Obedience which in taught, and was ficted to enjoy no less security under them by a Practice conformable to that Doctrine. For our Saviour himfelf, not pretending to an Earthly Kingdom, took such care therefore to inftruct his followers in the due Subjection to Governours; that, while they observed his Precepts, they could neither fall under any Jealoufy of State as an ambitious and dangerous Party, nor as Malefactors upon any other account deferve to fuffer under the Publick Severity: So that in this only it could feen pernicious to Government that Christianity, if rightly exercised upon its own Principles, would render all Magificacy useless. But although he, who was Lord of all, and to whom all Power was given both in Heaven and in Earth, was nevertheless contented to come in the form of a Servant, and to let the Emperours and Princes of the World alone with the use of their Dominions; he thought it good reason to retain his Religie on under his own cognizance and exempt its Authority from their jurifdiction. In this alone he was imperious, and did not only practile it himfelf against the Laws and Customs then received, and in the face of the Magillrate; but continually feafoned and hardened his Disciples in the same confidence and obstinacy. He tells them, They shall be brought before Kings and Governours for his name but fear them not, he will be with them, bear a them out and justifie it against all Opposition. Not that he allowed them hereby to violate their duty to the Publick by any reliftance in defiance of the Magistracy; but he instructed and animated them in their duty to God, in de pight of Suffering.

In this manner Christianity did at first set out and accordingly sound reception. For although our Bleffed Sav our, having fulfilled all Righterouspels and the time of his Ministery being compleated, did by his Death set the Seal to his Doctrine, and shew the way toward Life and Immortality to such as Believing imitate his Example: yet did not the Heatlen Megistrate take the Government to be concerned in the point of Religion or upon that account consent to his Execution. Ponting Pilate then Governour of Judga, though he were a man unjust and cruel by Nature, and served Tiberius, the most teader, jealous, and severe in point of State or Prerogative, of all the Romane Emperours; though he understood that great Multitudes followed him, and that he was grown the Head of a new Seat that was never before heard of in the Nation, yet did not he intermeddle. But they were the men of Religion, the Chief Priests, Scribes and Elders and the High. Priest Caiaphus. And yet, although they actually him failly, That be tanybut that Tribute was not to be given to Cusar that he was a Fifth Monarce and made bimfelf a King and (as it is ufuat for fome of the Glergy to terrific the interiour. Magnifestes out of their daty to Justice under pretence of Loyalty to the Prince) hreatned Pilate that if he let that man go he was not Casars friend; he understanding that they did it out of Envy, and that the Justice and Innocence of our Saviour was what they could not bear with, would have adventured all their Informing at Court, and first have freed him and then have exchanged him for Bareabas; faying, that he found no fault in bim : but he was overborne at last by humane weakness and poorly imagined that by washing his own hands he had expiated himfelf and wiped off the guilt upon those alone who were the occasion. But, as for Tiberius himself, the growth of Chris flianity did never increase his cares of Empire at Rome, nor trouble his fleep at Capred : but he both approved of the Doctrine, and threatned the Informers with Death; nor would have flaid there, but attempted, according to the way of their Superstition, upon the intelligence he had from Pilate, to have received Christ into the number of their Deities. The Persecution of the Apostles after his Death, and the Martyrdome of Stephen happened not by the interpoling of the Civil Magistrate in the matter of Religion, or any difturbance occasioned by their Doctrines : but profe from the High-Priest and his emissaries, by suborned Witnesses, flirring up the rabble in a brutish and riorous manner to execute their cruelty. How would the modern Clergy have taken and represented it, had they lived in the time of St. John Baptift and feen Ferufalem, Judga and all the Region round about Jordan go out to be baprized by him ! Yet that Herod, for any thing we read in Scripture, though he wanted not his infillers, apprehended no Commotion: and had not Caligula banished him and his Herodias together, might in all appearance have lived without any change of Government. 'Twas the that caused John's Imprisonment for the convenience of her Incest, Hered indeed feared him, but rather reverenced him, as a just man, and an holy, observed him and when he heard him he did many things and heard him gladly. Nor could all her subtilty have taken off his Head, but that Herod thought himself under the obligations of a Dance and an Oath, and knew not in that Cafe they ought both to be dispensed with. But he was exceeding forry at his death, which few Princes are if men have lived to their jealoufie or danger. The Killing of James and Imprisonment of Peter by that other Hered was because he fambe pleased the people; when the Priefts had once fet them on madding : a Complaifance to which the most innocent may be exposed, but which partakes more of guile than Civility or Williame, now had your made and

But, to find out what the difinteressed and prudent men of those dayes took to be the wisest and only justifiable way for the Mag strate to proceed in upon matters of Religion, I cannot see any thing more pregnant than the concurrent Judgment of three Persons, of so different Characters, and that sived so far a lander, that there can be no danger of their laving.

corrupted one anothers Understanding in avour to Christianity, GA maliel, the Deputy of Achaia, and the Town-clerk of Ephefus; The first a Jewish Doctor, by Sect & Pharisee, one of the Councit, and of great Authority with the People, who (when the Chief-Priest had cast the Apoftles in Prison, and charged them for Preaching against the Command he had before laid upon them) yet gave this advice, confirming it with feveral fresh precedents, Asts 5. That they should take heed to themselves what they intended to do with those men and let them alone, for if this counfel, faith he, or this work be of men, it will come to nought, but if it be of God you cannot overthrow it, left ye be found fighting with God. So that his Opinion grounded upon his best experience, was that the otherwise unblameable Se& of Christianity might falely and ought to be left to stand or fall by Gods Providence under a free Toleration of the Magistrate. The Second was Gallio, Ads 18. A Roman, and Deputy of Achaia. The Jews at Corinth hurried Paul before his Tribunal, laying the usual charge against him, That he perswaded men to Worship God contrary to the Law: which Gallie looked upon as fo flight and without his Cognizance, that, although most Judges are willing to increase the jurisdiction of their Courts, He drave them away, faving Pasi the labour of a defence, and told them, If it were a matter of wrong or withed lendness, reason would that he should bear with them, but if it be a question of words and names and of your law. look ye to it I will be no judge of such matters: and when he had so said, Paul was released, but the Greeks that were present took Barrabas, and before the Judgment Seat beat Softhenes the Chief Ruler of the Synagogue, and Ring-leader of the Accusers. His Judgment therefore was that, to punish Christians meerly for their Dect ine and Practife, unless they were Malefactors otherwife, was a thing out of the Magistrates Province and altogether unreasonable. The Third case was no less remarkable. For one Demetrias, that was a Silver-fmith by trade and made farines for Diana. Rirred up all the Free-men of his Company against Paul, and indeed he stated the matter very fairly and honestly, assigning the true Reason of most of these Persecutions: Te know that by this crast we have our wealth, but that by Pauls Preaching that they be no Gods which are made with bands. not only our Craft is in danger to be fet at naught, but also the Temple of the great Goddess and her Magnificence, whom all Asia and the World Worship, should be despised and destroyed. And it is considerable that even the Tews, though of a contrary Religion yet, fomented, as it usually chances. this difference and egged the Ephelians on against the Apostle and his followers. Bu: when they had broughe Alexander, one of Paul's Companions into the Theatre, the Recorder of Ephelus (more temperate and wife than some would have been in that Office) would not make any Inquisition upon the mitter, nor put Alexander upon his tival and defence, but, (a though he himself could not have born that Office without being a great Dianift, as he declared too in his discourse) he tells the People, They bad brought those men which were neither robbers of Churches nor Blaschemers of their Goddess, (for that Judge would not Condemn men by any inserences or expositions of old Statutes which long after was Julian's practice and since imitated) and therefore if Demetrius and his Crasts men had any matter against them the Law was open, and it should be determined in a Lawful Assembly, but that the whole City was in danger to be called in question for that uproar, there being no cause whereby they might give account of that concourse. And by this he plainly enough signified, that if Paul and his Companions had stoln the Church-Plate they might well be indied, but that Demetrius had no more reason in Law against them, then a Chandler might have had, if by Paul's Preaching Wax tapers, as well as Silver-Candlesticks had grown out of fashion. That it is matter of right and wrong betwixt man and man that the Justice of Government lookes too: but that, while Christianity was according to its own Principle carried on quietly, it might so fall that the disturbers of it were guilty of a Rior and their great City of Ephesus deserve to be fin'd for't. And taking this to have been fo, he dismist the Assembly, Atts 19.

After these Testimonies which I have collected out of the History of the Alls, as of greatest Authority, I shall only add one or two more out of the same Book, wherein Paul likewise was concern'd before Heathen Magistrates of greater eminence, Alts 23. Ananias the High Priest (these alwayes were the men) having countenanc'd and instigated the Jews to a Con-Spiracy, in which Paul's Life was indanger'd and aim'd at. Lyfias the chief Captain of ferusalem interposes and sends him away to Fælix then Governour of Judan; fignifying by Letter That he had been accused only of questions of their Law, but he found nothing to be laid to his Charge worthy of Death or of Ronds. Whereof Falix also, though the High-Priest was fo zealous in the Profecution that he took the journey on purpofe; and had inftructed an exquisite Orator Tertuilus to harangue Paul out of his Life, as a Pestilent-fellow, a mover of Sedition and Ring-leader of the Sect of the Nazarenes, not omitting even to charge Lysias for rescuing him by great violence from being Murdered by them, was to well fatisfied of the contrary upon full hearing, that he gave him his Libery and a Centurion for his quard, with command that none of his acquaintance should be debarr'd from comming and Ministring to him. But being indeed to leave his Government afterwards; left him in Prifon, partly to thew the Jews and their High Priest another piece of complaifant Policy, which; 'tis possible they paid well for feeing the other reason was, because though he had fent for Paul the of enerand communed with him, in hopes that he would have given him money to be: discharged, there came nothing of it. Which was so base a thing in so great a Minister, that the meanest Justice of the Peace in England would scurcehave the face to do fo upon the like occasion. But his Successor Festing, having ealled Agrippa and Berenice to hear the Cause, they all three were of Opinion that 'twas all on the Jews lide calumny and impertinence, but hat Paul had done nothing worthy of death or of Bonds, and might have been Let free but that having appeal'd to Caefar he must be transmitted to him in fafe Custody. Such was the fense of those upon whom the Emperors then relyed for the Government and fecurity of their Provinces; and fo grofs were their Heathen understandings, that they could not yet comprehend how quietness was Sedition, or the innocence of the Christian Worship could be subject to forfeiture or penalty . Nay, when Paul appear deven before Nero himself and had none to stand by him but all forfock him: he was by that Emperor acquitted, and permitted a long time to follow the work of his Ministry. Its true that afterwards this Nero had the honour to be the First of the Roman Emperors that Persecuted Christianity; whence it is that Tertullian in his Apologetick faith; We glory in having such an one the first beginner and Author of our panishment, for there is none that hath read of him, but must understand some great good to have been in that Dollrine, otherwise Nero would not have Condemned it.

And thence forward Christianity for about Three hundred Years lay Jubject to Persecution. For the Gentile Priests could not but observe a great decay in their Parishes, a neglect of their Sacrifices and diminution of tl eir Profits by the daily and visible increase of that Religion. And God. in his wife Providence had so ordered that, as the Jews already so, the Heathens now having fill'd up their measure with iniquity, Sprinkling the Blood of his Saints among their Sacrifices, and the Christians having in a fevere Apprentiship of to many Ages Learned the Trade of Suffering, they should at last be their own Masters and admitted to their Freedom. Neither yet, even in those times when they lay exposed to Persecution, were they without some Intervalls and catching seasons of Tranquility, wherein the Churches had leifure to reap confiderable advantage, and the Clergy too might have been inured, as they had been Exemplary under Affliction fo, to bear themselves like Christians when they thould arrive at a full prosperity. For as oft as there came a just Heathen Emperour and a lover of Mankind, that either himself observed, or understood by the Governours of his Provinces, the innocence of their Religion and Praclices, their readiness to pay Tribute, their Prayers for his Government and Person, their faithful Service in his Wars, but their Christian valour and contumacy to Death, under the most exquisite Torments, for their holy profession; he forthwith relented, he rebated the Sword of the Executioner, and could not find in his heart or in his power to exeercise it against the exerci e of that Religion. It being demonstrable that a Religion init tuted upon Justice betwixt man and man. Love to one another, yea even their Enemies, Obedience to the Magistrate in all Humane and Moral Marters, and in Divine Worthip upon a constant exercise thereof and as constant Suffering in that Caule, without any pretence or latitude for Relitance, cannot, follong as it is true out felf in thele things, fall within the Magistrates Jurisdiction, regain to a granulus with early education and redraining

But as it first was planted without the Magistrates hand, and the more they pluck'd at it, so much the more still it flourished, so it will be to the end of the world, and whensoever Governors have a mind to try for it, it will by the same means and method sooner or later soil them; but, if they have a mind to pull up that Mandrake, it were advisable for them not to do it themselves, but to chuse out a Dog for the Imployment. I confess whensoever a Christian transgresses these bounds once, he is impoundable, or like a wase and stray whom Christ knows not, he falls to the Lord of the Mannor. But otherwise he cannot suffer, he is invulnerable by the sword of Justice: only a man may swear and damn himself to kill the first honest man he meets, which hath been and is the case of all true Christians worshiping God under the power and violence of their Persecutors.

But

Eur the Truth is that, even in those times which some men now, as oft as it is for their advantage, do confecrate under the name of Primitive, the Christians were become guilty of their own punishment, and had it not been, as is most usual, that the more Sincere Protesfors suffered promiseuously for the Sins and Crimes of those that were Carnal and Hypocrites, their Persecutors may be look'd upon as having been the due Administrators of God's Justice. For (not to go deeper) if we confider but that which is reckoned the Tenth Perfecution under Dioclesian, so incorrigible were they after nine preceding, what other could be expected when, as Eufebius 1, 3. c. 1. fadly laments, having related how before that the Christians lived in great trust and reputation in Court, the Bishops of each Church were beloved esteem'd and reverenced by all mankind and by the Presidents of the Provinces, the Meetings in all the Cities were so many and numerous, that it was necessary and allow a them to cred in every one spacious and goodly Churches, all things went on prosperensly with them, and to fuch an height that no envious Man could diffurb them, no Divel could burt them, as long as walking yet worthy of those mercies they were under the Almighty's cure and protection: after that our aff ur by that too much Liberty, degenerated into Luxury and Laziness, and some prosecuted others with Hatred and Contumely, and almost all of us wounded our selves with the weapons of the Tongue in illianguage when Bishops set upon Bishops, and the people that belonged to one of them stirred Sedition avainst the people of another; then horrible Hypocrify and Disimulation Sprung up to the ut most excremity of Malice, and the fudgment of God, while yet there was liberry to meet in Congregations, did sensibly and by steps begin to visit us, the Persecution at first discharging it felf upon our Brethren that were in the Army. But we having no feeling of the band of God, nor indeavoring to make our peace with him, and living as if we believed that God did neither take notice of our Transgressions nor would visit us for them, we heaped up Iniquity upon Inquity. And those which seemed to be our Pastors, kicking under foot the rules of Piety were inflamed among themselves with mutual Contentions, and while they minded nothing else but to exaggerate their Quarrells, Threats, Emulation, Hatred and Enmities, and earnestly each of them pursued his particular Ambition in a Tyrannical manner, then indeed the Lord, then I fay, according to the voice of the Prophet Jeremy, he covered the Daughter of Sion with a cloud in his anger, and east down from Heaven unto earth the beauty of Ifrael and remembred not his foot-feel in the day of his anger. And so the Pious Historian pathetically goes on, and deplores the Calamities that infued, to the loss of all that stock of Reputation, Advantage, Liberty and Safety, which Christian people had by true Piety and adhering strictly to the Rules of their Profession formerly acquired and injoyed, but had now forfeited and smarted deservedly under Dioclesian's persecution. And it was a fevere one, the longest too that ever happened, ten years from his beginning of it and continued by others: by which time one might have thought the Church would have been fufficiently winnowed, and nothing left but the pure Wheat, whereas it proved quite contrary, and the holiest and most constant of the Christians being blown away by Martyrdom, it seem'd by the succeeding times as if nothing but the Chaff and the Tares had remained. But there was yet fuch a Seed left, and notwithstanding the defection of many, fo internal a virtue in the Religion it felf, that Dioclesian could no longer Rand against it, and tired out in two years time, was glad to betake himself from rooting out Christianity, to gardening and to sow Pot-herbs at Salona. And he with his Partner Maximianus, religned the Empire to Galerius and Con-Stantius, the excellent Father of a more glorious and Christian Son, Constantine the Great, who in due feafon succeeded him, and by a chain of God's extraordinary providences seemed to have been let down from Heaven to be the Emperor of the whole World, and as I may fay, the Vniverfal Apostle of Chriitianity.

It is unexpressible the vertue of that Prince, his Care, his Indulgence, his Liberality, his own Example, every thing that could possibly tend to the promotion and incouragement of true Religion and Piety. And in order to that he thought he could not do better, neither indeed could he, then to shew a peculiar respect to the Clergy and Bishops, providing largely for their sublistence, had they too on their part behaved themselves worthy of their High Calling, and known to make right use of the advantages of his Bounty to the fame ends that they were by him intended. For if the Apostle 1 Tim. 5. 17. requires that an Elder, provided he rule well, be accounted worthy of Double Honor, especially those who laboring in the Word and Doltrine, it excludes not a Deouple or any further proportion, and indeed there cannot too high a value be fet upon fuch a Person: and God forbid too that any measure of wealth should render a Clergy man Uncanonical. But alas, Bishops were already grown another Name and Thing, then at the Apostles Institution; and had so altered their property, that Paul would have had much difficulty by all the marks in the 1. Tim. 3. to have known them. They were ill enough under Perfecution many of them, but that long and sharp Winter under Dioclesian, being seconded by to warm a Summer under Conftantine, produced a Pestilence, which as an Infection that leizes sometimes only one fort of Cattel, diffused it felf n. oft remarkably thorow the whole body of the Clergy. From his reign the moft (5I)

most sober Historians date that New Disease which was so generally propagated then, and ever fince transmitted to some of their Successors, that it bath given reason to inquire whether it only happened to those men as it might to others, or were not inherent to the very Function. It show'd it self first in Ambicion, then in Contention, next in Impolition, and after these Symptoms broke out at last like a Plague-Sore in open Perfecution. They the Bishops who began to vouch themselves the Successors of Christ, or at least of his Apostles, yet pretended to be Heirs and Executors of the Jewish High-Priests and the Heathen Tyrants, and were ready to prove the Will. The Ignorant Jews and Infidels understood not how to Berlecute, had no Commission to meddle with Religion, but the Bishops had studied the Scriptures, knew better things, and the same, which was Cruelty and Tyranny in the Heathens, it done by a Christian and Ecclefiaffical hand, was hallowed to be Church-governmen and the care of a Diocefs. But that I may not feem to speak without book or out-run the History, I shall return to proceed by those degrees I newly mention'd whereby the Christian Religion was usurped upon, and those things became their crime

The first was the Ambition of the Bishops, which had even before this, taken its rife when in the intervals of the former Perfecutions the Piety of the Christians had laid our ample provitions for the Church, but we en Constantine not only restored those which had been all confisca e under Dioclesian, thut was every day adding fome new Possession, Priviledg, or Honor, a Bishoprick became very definable, and was not only a Good Work but a Good Thing, especially when there was now no danger of paying as it was usual, formerly their First-fruits to the Emperor by Martyrdom. The Arts by which Ambition climes, are Calumny, Distinulation, Cruelry, Bribery, Adulation, all applyed in their proper places and leafons; and when the man hath attained his end he ordinarily thows himself then in his colours, in Pride, Opiniastry, Contention, and all other requifite or incident ill Qualities. And if the Clergy of those times had some more dextrous and innocent way then this of managing their Ambition, it is to be lamented inter Artes Dependitus, or lyes enviously hid by fome musty Book-worm in his private Library. But so much I find that both before, and then, and after, they cast such Crimes at one another, that a Man would fearfe think he were reading an History of Bishops, but a Legend of Divels: and each took fuch care to blacken his advertary, that he regarded not how he smutted himself thereby and his own Order, to the Laughter or Horror of the by-standers. And one thing I remark particularly, that as Son of a Whore is the modern Word of Reproach among the Laity, of the fame use then among the Clergy was Heretick. There were indeed Hereticks as well as there are Bastards, and perhaps it was not their fault, (neither of 'em could help it) but the Mothers or the Fathers. but they made fo many Hereticks in those days, that 'tis hard to think they really believ'd them fo, but adventur'd the Name only to pick a Quarrel. And one thing that makes it very fufpicious, is, that in the Eccleliaftical History the Ring-leaders of any Herely for the most part accused of having a mind to be a Bishop, though it was not the way to come to it. As there was the damnable Herefy of the Novatians, against which Constantine, notwithstanding his Declaration of general Indulgence at his coming in, was shorely after so incensed, that he published a most severe Proclamation against them; Cognoscite jam per legem hanc que a me funcita est O Nova tant &c. prohibiting all their meetings not only in Publick but in their own Private Houles, and that all fuch places where they affembled for their wor hip, should be raled to the ground without delay or controversie, &c. Euf. l. 3 c. 62. de vita Conftantini. Now the story the Bishops tell of Novarm the Author of that Sect Eufeb. 1. 6. c. 42. is in the words of Cornelius the Bithop of Rome, the very first line. But that you may know that this brave Novatus did even before that affect to be a Billiop. (a great crime in him) that he might conteal that petulant Ambition, he for a better cover to his arrogance, had got some Confessors into his Society, &c. and goes on calling him all to naught, but then, faith he, he came with two Reprobates of his wen Herefy into a little, the very least, Shire of Italy and by their means soduced three most simple high-shoon Bishops, wheedling them that they must with all speed go to Rome and there meeting with other Bishops all Matters should be reconciled. And when he had got thither these three Silly Fellows, as I said, that were not aware of his cunning, he had prepared a company of Rogues like Himself, that treated them in a private room very freely, and having the ack'd. their bellies and heads full with meat and drink, compell'd the poor drunken Bishops by an imaginary and vain Imposition of Hands, to make Novatus alsoa Bishop. Might not one of the same Order now better have conceal'd these: things had they been true, but fuch was the discretion. Then he tells that one of the three returned soon after, repenting it seems next morning, and so her receiv'd him again into the Church unto the Laick Communion. But for the other two he had fent Succeffors into their places. And yet after all this ado, and the whetting of Constantine, contrary to his own Nature and his own Declarations against the Novatians, I cannot find their Heresy to have been other then that they were the Puritans of those times, and a fort of Non-conformists. that could have subscribed to the Six and thirty Articles, but differed only in those of Discipline: and upon some inormities therein separated, and (which will always be fufficient to qualify an Heretick) they inflituted Bilhops of their own in most places. And yet afterwards in the times of the best Homotusian Emperors, a fober and firitly Religious People did fo conflantly adhere to them, that the Bilhops of the Church too found meet to give them fair quarter; for as much as they differ'd not in Fundamentals, and therefore were of whe to them against Hereticks that were more dangerous and diametrically opposite to the Religion. Nay in so much, that even the Bishop of Constantinople, yea of Rome, notwithstanding that most tender point and interest of Episcopacy, suffered the Novatian Bishops to walk cheek by joul with them in their own D. ocess; until that, as Socr. 1. 7. c. 11. the Roman Episcopacy having as it were pulled the bounds of Priesthood, slipp'd into a Secular Principality, espality, and thenceforward the Roman Biftops would not Suffer their Meetings with Security, but, though they commended them for their Consent in the same Faith with them, yet took away all their Estates. But at Constantinople they continued to fare better, the Bilhops of that Church embracing the Novatians. and giving them free liberty to keep their Convinticles in their Churches. What, and to have their Bishops too, Altar against Altar? A Condescension which as our Non-conformists seem not to delire or think of, so the Wisdom of these times would, I suppose, judg to be very unreasonable, but rather that it were fit to take the other course, and that whatsoever advantage the Religion might probably receive from their Doctrine and party, its better tofupprefs them and make havock both of their Estates and Persons. But however the Hereticks in Constantine's time had the less reason to complain of ill-Measure, seeing it was that the Bishops meated by among themselves. I pass over that controverly betwixt Cecilianus, the Bilhop of Carthage and his adherents, with another fet of Bishops there in Africk, upon which Constantine ordered ten of each party to appear before Miltiades the Bilhop of Rome and others to have it deceived. Yet after they had given sentence, Constantine found it necessary to have a Council for a review of the buliness, as in his Letter to Chrestus the Bishop of Syracuse, Euseb. 1. 10. c. 6. Whereas Several have formerly separated from the Catholick Heresy, (for that word was not yet so ill natured but that it might sometimes be used in its proper and good Sense;) and then relates his Commillion to the Bilhop of Rome and others; But for as much as some having been careless of their own salvation, and forgetting the reverence due to that most boly Heresy (again) will not yet lay down their enmity, nor admit the sentence that hath been given, obstinately affirming that

Such was the use then of Stage-Coaches, Post-Horses, and Councills, to the great disappointment and grievance of the many: both Memand Horses and Leather being hack neyd-jaded, and worn out upon the errand of some contentious and obstinate Bishop, So went the Affairs hitherto; and thus well disposed and prepared were the Bishops to receive the Holy Ghost a second time at the great and first general Council of Nice, which is so much Ce-

they were but a few that pronounced the Sentence, and that they did it very preoipitately, before they had duly inquired of the matter: and from hence it hatb happened that both they who ought to have kept a bortherly and unanimous agreement together, do abominably and flagitiously diffent from one another, and such whose minds are alienated from the most holy Religion, do make a mockery both of it and them. Therefore I, &c. have commanded very many Bishops out of innumerable places to meet at Arles, that what ought to have been quieted upon the former Sentence pronounced, may now at least be determined, &c. and you to be one of them; and therefore I have ordered the Pre-felt of Sicily to jurnish you with one of the publick. Stage-Coaches and so ma-

The occasions of calling it were two. The first a most important question in which the Wit and Piety of their Predecessors and now theirs successively had been much exercised and taken up : that was upon what day they ought to keep Eafter, which though it were no point of Faith that it should be kept at all, yet the very calendiny of it was controverted with the same zeal, and made as neavy a do in the Church as if both parties had been Hereticks. And it is reckoned by the Church Historians as one of the chief felicities of Constantines Empire to have quieted in that Councel this main controversie. The second cause of the affembling them here was indeed grown, as the Bilhop had order'd it, a matter of the greatest weight and confequences the Christian Religion; one Arriss having, asis related, to the diffurbance of the Church, flarted a most pernicious opinion in the point of the Trinity Therefore from all parts of the Empire they met together at the City of Nice, two nundred and fifty Bilhops, and better, faith Eusebius, a goodly company, three hundred and eighteen say others; and the Animadverter too, with that pithy remark, pa. 23. Equal almost to the number of servants bred up in the house of Abraham. The Emperour had accommodated them every where with the publick Posts, or layd Horses all along for the convenience of their journey thither, & all the time they were there supplyed them abundantly with all forts of provition at his own charges. And when they were all first attembled in Council, in the great Hall of the Imperial Palace, he came in, having put on his best clothes to make his guests welcome; and falured them with that profound humility as if they all had been Emperour, nor would fit down in his Throne, no it was a very little and low flool, till they had all beckoned and made fignes to him to lit down. No wonder if the first Council of Nice run in their heads ever after, and the ambitious Clergy, like those who have been long a thirst, took so much of Constantines kindness, that they are scarce come to themselves again after so many Ages. The first thing was that he acquainted them with the causes of his summoning them this ther, and in a grave and most Christian discourse exhorted them (to keep the peace or) to a good agreement as there was reason. For (saith Ruffin L. 1. C. 2. the Bishops being met here from almost all parts, and as they use to do, bringing their quarrels about several matters along with them, every one of them was at the Emperour, offering him Petitions, laying out one anothers faults, (tor all the good advice he had given them) and were more intent upon these things then upon the business they were sent for. But he, considering that by these scoldings and Bickerings the main affair was frustrated, appointed a set-day by which all the Bishops should bring him in what soever complaint they had against one another. And they being all brought, he made them that high Ajiatick complement: God bath made you Priests, and bath given you power to judge me, and therefore it is in you to judge me rightcousty, But you cannot be judged by any men. It is God only can judge you, and therefore referve all your quarrels to his Tribunal. For you are as Gods to me, and it is not convenient that a man should judge of Gods, but he only of whom it is written, God standeth in the Congregation of the Gods, and discerneth in the midst of them. And therefore setting thele (55-)

these things aside, apply your minds without any contention to the concernmenes of Goa's Religion. And so without opening or reading one Petition commanded them all together to be burnt there in his presence. An action of great Charity and excellent Wildom, had but some of the words been spared. For doubtless, though they that would have complained of their brethren, grumbled a little; yet those that were accusable were all very well fatisfied: and those expressions, you can judg me righteously, and you cannot be judged by any man, and God only can judg you. Tou are Gods to me, &c. were to extreamly fweet to most of the Billiops palates, that they believ'dit, and could never think of them afterwards but their teeth watered; and they ruminated fo long on them, that Constantine's Successors came too late to repent it. But now the Bishops, having mist of their great end of quarelling one with another, betake themselves though somwhat aukwardly to business. And it is necessary to mine, that as thortly as possible for the understanding of it, I give a curiory account of Alexander and Arrive, with some few others that were the most interessed in that general and first great revolution of Ecclesiastical Affairs, since the days of the Apostles. This Alexander was the Bishop of Alexandria, and appears to have been a pious old Man, but not equally prudent, nor in Divine things of the most capable, nor in conducting the affairs of the Chirch, very dextrous; but he was the Bishop. This character that I have given of him, I am the more confirm'd in from some passages that follow, and all of them pertinent to the matter before me. They were used Sozom, 1, 2, c, 16. at Alexandria to keep yearly a folemn Festival to the memory of Beter one of their former Bishops, upon the same day that he suffered Marty dom; which Alexander having Celebrated at the Church with publick Devotion, was litting a'ter at home expecting some guests to dine with him, Sozom. 1, 2, c, 16. As he was alone and looking towards the Sea lide, he faw a prity way off the Boys upon the beach, at an odd Recreation, imitating it feems the Rites of the Church and office of the Bishops, and was much delighted with the fight as long as it appear'd an innocont and harmless representation: but when he obferved them at last how they acted, the very administration of the Sacred Mysteries, he was much troubled, and fending for some of the chief of his Clergy, caused the Boys to be taken and brought before him. He asked it em particularly what kind of sport they had been at, and what the words, and what the actions were that they had uled in it. After their fear had hir died ti em a while from answering, and now they were assaid of being tilent, they confess dithat a Lad of their play-fellows, one Athanafius, had haptized some of them that were not yet initiated in those Sacred Mysteries: Whe eupon Alexander inquited the more accurately what the Bishop of the gan e had said, and what he did to the boys he had baptized, what they also had answered or learned from him. At last, when Alexander perciev'd by them that this Pawn-billiop had made all his removes right, and that the whole Eccleliaftical Order and Rites had been duely observed in their Interlude, he by the advice or his Priests about him approved of that Mock-haptilm, and determined that, the boys, being once in the simplicity of their minds dipped in the Divine Grace, ought not tobe Re-baptized, but he perfected it with the remaining Mysteries, which it is only lawful for Priests to administer. And then he deliverd Athanasius and the rest of the boys that had acte I the parts of Presbyters and Deacons to their Parents, calling God to witness that they should be educated in the Ministry of the Church, that they might pass their lives in that calling which they had cholen by imitation. But as for Athanafins, in a thort while after Alexander took him to live with him and be his Secretary, having caused him to be carefully educated in the Schools of the best Grammarians and Rhetoricians; and he grew in the opinion of all that spoke with him a discreet and elequent perion, and will give occasion to be more then once mentioned again in this Difcourse, I have translated this in a manner word for word from the Author. This good natured old Bishop Alexander, that was so far from Anathemiting, that he did not fo much as whip the boys for profanation of the Sacrament against the Discipline of the Church, but without more doing, left them, for ought I fee, at liberty to regenerate as many more Lads upon the next Holy day as they thought convenient: He Socr. l. 1. c. 3. being a man that lived an easy and gentle life, had one day called his Priests and the rest of his Clergy together, and fell on Philosophyring divinely among them, but somthing more jabtly and curiously (though I dare say he meant no harm) then was usual, concerning the Holy Trinity. Among the rest, one Arrive a Priest too of Alexandria was there prefent, a Man who is described to have been a good Disputant, and others add, (the Capital accufation of those times) that he had a mind to have been a Bishop and bore a great pique at Alexander, for having been preferr'd before him to the See of Alexandria: but more are filent of any fuch matter, and Sozem. 1. 1. c. 14. faith he was in great efteem with his Bishop. But Arrive Soct. 1. 1. c. 3. hearing his discourse about the Holy Trinity and the Unity in the Trinity, conceived that, as the Bishop stated it, he had reason to suspect he was introducing afresh into the Church the Heresy of Sabellius the African who Fatebatur unum effe Deum, & eta in unam effentiam Trinitatem adducebat, ut affereret nullam effe vere subject am proprietatem personis, sed nomina mutari pro eo atque usus poscant, ut nunc de illo ut patre, nunc ut silio, nunc ut spiritu fancto differatur: and thereupon it feems Arrius argued warmly for that opinion which was directly contrary to the Africane, driving the Bishop from one to a second, from a second to a third, seeming absurdity; which I studioully avoid the relation of, that in all these things I may not give occasion for Mens understandings to work by their memories, and propagate the same errors by the same means they were first occasion'd. But hereby Arrius was himself blamed as the maintainer of those absurdities which he affixed to the Bishops opinion, as is usual in the heat and wrangle of Disputation. Whereas Truth for the most part lyes in the middle, but men ordinarily seek for it in the extremities. Nor can I wonder that those ages were so fertile in what they called Herelies, when being given to meddling with the mysteries of Religion further then humane apprehension or divine revelation did or could lead them, some of the Bishops were so ignorant and gross, but others so speculative, acute and refining in their conceptions, that, there being moreover a good far Bishoprick to boot in the case, it is rather admirable to me how all the Clergy from one end to tother, could escape from being or being accounted Hereticks. Alexander hereupon Soz. l. 1, c. 14°. instead of stilling by more prudent Methods this new Controversy, took, doubtless with a very good intention, a courfe that bath feldom been successful: makes himself judg of that wherein he had first been the Party, and calling to him some others of his Clergy, would needs fit in publick to have a folemn fet Disputation about the whole Matter. And while Arrivs was at it Tooth and Nail against his opposers, and the Arguments flew to thick that they darkned the Air, and no Man could yet judg which lide thould have the victory; the good Bilhop for his part face hay now hay, neither could tell in his Conscience of a long time which had the better of it; but sometimes he lean'd on one side and then on the other, and now incouraged and commended those of one party, and presently the contrary, but at last by his own weight he cast the Scales against Arrim. And from thence forward he excommunicating Arrius for obstinacy, and Arrius writing in behalf and his followers to the Bithops, each one stating his own and his adverfaries case with the usual candor of such men in such Matters; the Bishops too all over began to divide upon it, and after them their people. Insomuch that Constantine out of a true paternal Sense and care, found necessary to send a very prudent and eminent Person to Alexandria, to try if he could accommodate the matter, giving him a Letter to Alexander and Arrive; how discreet, how Christian-like, I never read any thing of that nature equal to it! It is too long for me here to infert, but I gladly recommend my Reader to it in the 2° Euf. de vita Conft. c. 67. where he begins I understand the foundation of the controversy to have been this, that thou Alexander didst inquire of thy Priests concerning a passage in the Scripture, nay didst ask them concerning a frivolous quillet of a question what was each of their opinions: and thou Arrius didst inconsiderately babble what thou neither at the beginning couldst conceive, and if thou hadft conceived so, oughtst not to have vented, &c.

But the Clergy having got this once in the wind, there was no beating them off the fcent. Which induced Constantine to think the convening of this Council the only remedy to these Disorders. And a wosul ado he had with them when they were met to manage and keep them in any tolerable decorum. It seemed like an Ecclesiastical Cock-pit, and a man might have laid wagers either way: the two parties contending in good earnest either for the truth or the victory, but the more unconcerned, like cunning Betters, sate judiciously hedging, and so ordered their matters that which side soever prevailed, they would be sure to be the Winners. They were indeed a most venerable Assembly, composed of some holy, some grave, some wise, and some of them learned Persons: and Constantine had so charitably burnt the accusations they intended against one another, which might otherwise have depopulated and dispirited the Council, that all of them may be presumed in one or other respect to have made a great Character. But I observe Soz. 1. 1. c. 16. that these great Bishops, although they only had the decilive voices, yet thought fit to bring along with them certain men that were cunning at an Argument, to be auxiliary to them when it came to hard and tough Disputation; belide that they had their Priests and Deacons ready at a dead lift always to affift them: So that their understandings feem'd to be fequefter'd, and for their dayly Faith, they depended upon what their Chaplains would allow them. And in that quality Athanafius there waited upon Alexander, being his Deacon, (for as yet it feems Arch-bishops nor Arch-deacons were invented.) And it is not improbable that Athanasius having so early personated the Bishop, and seeing the declining age of Alexander, would be careful that Arrive should not step betwixt him and home upon vacancy, but did his best against him to barr up his way, as it shortly after happened; Athanasius succeeding after the Council in the See of Alexandria. In the mean time you may imagine that Hypoftasis, Persona, Substantia, Subsistentia, Essentia, Coessentialis, Conjubstantialis, Ante secula Coaternus, &c. wereby fo many disputants pick'd to the very bones, and those too Froken afterwards to come to the marrow of Divinity. And never had Confantine in his life to hard a task as to bring them to any rational refules : meekly and patiently, Euseb. L. 3. c. 13. de vità Conft. list'ning to every one, taking each Man's opinion and without the acrimony with which it was delivered, helping each party where they disagreed, reconciling them by degrees when they were in the fiercest Contention, conserving with them a part courteously and mildly, telling them what was his own opinion of the matter: Which though some exceptious persons may alleadge to have been against the nature of a Free Council, yet truly unless he had taken that course, I cannot imagine how possibly he could ever have brought them to any conclusion. And thus this first, great, General Council of Nice, with which the world had gone big fo long, and which look d so big upon all Christendom, at last was brought in bed, and after a very hard labor deliver'd of Homoousios.

They all subscribed to the New Creed, except some seventeen, who it seems had rather to be Hereticks then Bishops. For now the Anathema's were published, and whoever held the contrary was to be punish'd by Deprivation and Banishment, all Arrian books to be burned, and whoever should be discover'd to conceal any of Arrive his writings, to dye for it. But it fared very well with those who were not such fools as to own his opinion. All they were entertain'd by the Emperor at a magnificent Peaft, receiv'd from his hand rich Prefents, and were honorably difmift, with Letters recommending their great Abilities and performance to the Provinces, and injoyning the Nicene Creed to be henceforth observed. With that stroke of the Pen: Socr. 1. 1. c. 6. For what three hundred Bishops have agreed on, (a thing indeed extraordinary) ought not to be otherwise concein d of then as the decree of God Almighty, especially seeing the Holy Chost did sit upon the minds of such and so excellent men, and open'd his divine will to them. So that they went I trow with ample fatisfaction; and, as they could not but take the Emperor for a very civil, geN ni, generous nerous, and obliging Gentleman, fo they thought the better of themselves from that day forward. And how budge must they look when they returned back to their Diocesses, having every one of 'm been a principal limn of the Ecumenical, Apostolical, Catholick, Orthodox Council! When the Catachrestical titles of the Church and the Clergy were so appropriate to them by cultom, that the Christian people had relinquished or forgotten their claim; when every Hare that croffed their way homeward was a Schifmatick or an Heretick, and if their Horse stumbled with one of them, he incurr'd an Anathema. Well it was that their journeys laid so many several ways, for they were grown to cumbertom and great, that the Emperor's highway was too narrow for any two of them, and there could have been no passage without the removal of a Bilhop. But soon after the Council was over, Eusebius the Bishop of Nicomedia, and Theognis the Bishop of Nice, who were already removed both by banishment and two others put in their places, were quickly reftor'd upon their petition: wherein they suggested the cause of their not Signing to ha e been only, because they thought they could not with a safe conscience subscribe the Anathema against Arriss, appearing to them both by his writings, his discouries, and Sermons that they had been auditors of, not to be guilty of those errors. As for Arrius himself, the Emperor quickly wrote It is now a confiderable time fince I writ to your Gravity to come to my Tents, that you might injoy my countenance; so that I can scarce wonder sufficiently why you have so long delaid it: therefore now take one of the publick Coaches and make all speed to my Tents, that, having had experience of my kindness and affection to you, you may return into your own Country. God preferve you most dear Sir. Arrius hereupon (with his comarade Enzoius) comes to Constantine's Army, and offers him a petition, with a confession of Faish that would have pass'd very well before the Nicene Council, and now satisfied the Emperor Socr. l. 1. c. 19. 6- 20. insomuch that he writ to Anathasius, now Bilhop of Alexandria, to receive him into the Church: but Anathanafine was of better mettle then to and absolutely refus'd it. Upon this Constantine writ him another threat ning Letter: When you have understood hereby my pleafure, fee that you afford free entrance into the Church to all that delire it : for if I shall understand that any who desires to be admitted into the Church should be either hindred or forbidden by you, I will fend some one of my Servants to remove you from your Degree, and place another in your stead. Yet Athanafius flood it out still, though other Churches received him into Communion: and the Heretick Novatus could not have been more unrelenting to lapfed Christians then he was to Arrive. But this, joyned with other crimes which were laid to Athanasius his charge, at the Council of Tyre, (though I suppose indeed they were forged) made Athanasius glad to fly for it, and remain the first time in exile. Upon this whole matter it is my impartial opinion that Arriss or whofoever elfe were guilty of teaching and publishing those errors whereof he was accused, deserved the utmost Severity which consists with the Christian Religion. And so willing I have been to think well of Athanasim and ill of the other, that I have on purpose avoided the reading, as I do the nameing, of a book that I have hear'd tells the story quite otherwise, and have only made use of the current Historians of those times, who all of them tell it against the Arrians. Only I will confess, that as in reading a particular History at adventure a Man finds himself inclinable to favor the weaker party, especially if the Conqueror appear infolent; so have I been affected in reading these Authors: which does but resemble the reasonable pity that men ordinarily have too for those who though for an erroneous con cience suffer under a Christian Magistrate. And as soon as I come to Constanting, I shall for that reason change my compassion and be doubly ingaged on the Orthodox party. But as to the whole matter of the Council of Nice, I must crave liberty to say, that from one end to the other, though the best of the kind, it seems to me to have been a pityful humane bulinels, attended with all the ill circumstances of other worldly affairs, conducted by a spirit of ambition and contention, the first and so the greatest Æcumenical blow that by Christians was given to Chri-Rianity. And it is not from any tharpness of humor that I discourse thus freely of Things and Persons, much less of Orders of men otherwise venerable, but that where ought is extolled beyond reason and to the prejudice of Religion, it is necessary to depreciate it by true proportion. It is not their censure of Arianism, or the declaring of their opinion in a congreverted point to the best of their understanding, (wherein to the smalness of mine they appear to have light upon the truth, had they likewife upon the measure,) that could have moved me to tell fo long a ftory, or bring my felf within the danger and aim of any captious Reader, speaking thus with great liberty of mind but little concern for any prejudice I may receive, of things that are by some men Idolized. But it is their Impolition of a new Article or Creed upon the Christian world, not being contained in express words of Scripture, to be believed with Divine Faith, under Sprittual and Civil Penalties, contrary to the Priviledges of Religion and their making a Precedent follow'd and improv'd by all fucceeding ages for most cruel Persecutions, that only could animate me. In digging thus for a new Deduction they undermined the fabrick of Christianity; to frame a particular Doctrine they departed from the general Rule of their Religion; and for their curiofity about an Article concerning Christ, they violated our Saviour's first Institution of a Church not subject to any Addition in matters of Faith, nor liable to Compullion either in Belief or in Practice. Farr be it from me in the event as it is from my Intention, to derogate from the just authority of any of those Creeds or Confessions of Faith that are received by our Church upon clear agreement with the Scriptures: nor shall I therefore, unless some mens impertinence and indiscretion hereafter oblige me, pretend to any further knowledg of what in those particulars appears in the ancient Hillories. But certainly if any Creed had been Necessary, or at least Necessary to have been Imposed, our Saviour himself would not have left his Church deftitute in a thing of that moment. Or however, after the Holy Ghoft, upon his departure, was descended upon the Apostles, and They the Elders and Brethren thren (for so it was then) were assembled in a legitime Council at Jerusalem, it would have seemed good to the Holy Ghost and them to have saved the Council of Nice that labor, Or at least the Apostle Paul 2 Cor. 12. 2. and 4. who was caught up into Paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for any man to utter, having thereby a much better opportunity then Athanasius to know the Doctrine of the Trinity, would not have been wanting, through the abundance of that revelation, to form a Creed for the Church, sufficient to have put that business beyond controversy. Especially seeing Herelies were sprung up so early, and he foresaw others, and therefore doesprescribe the method how they are to be dealt with, but no Creed that I read of.

Shall any fort of men prefume to interpret those words, which to him were unspeakable, by a Gibbrish of their Impoling, and force every man to Cant after them what it is not lawful for any man to utter? Christ and his Apostles speak articulately enough in the Scriptures, without any Creed, as much as we are or ought to be capable of. And the Ministry of the Gospel is useful and most necessary, if it were but to pressus to the reading of them, to illustrate one place by the authority of another, to inculcate thole duties which are therein required, quickning us both to Faith and Practice, and showing within what bounds they are both circumscribed by our Saviour's Doctrine. And it becomes every man to be able to give a reason and account of his Fa th, and to be ready to do it, without officiously gratifying those who demand it only to take advantage: and the more Christians can agree in one contestion of Faith the better. But that we should believe ever the more for a Creed, it cannot be expected. In those days when Creeds were most plenty and in fashion, and every one had them at their fingers-ends, 'twas the Bible that brought in the Reformation. Tistrue, a man would not flick to take two or three Creeds for a need, rather then want a Living, and if a man have not a good swallow, 'tis but wrapping them up in a Liturgy, like a wafer, and the whole dofe will go down currently; especially if he wink at the same time and give his Assent and Consent without ever looking on them. But with out jefting, for the matter is too ferious. Every man is bound to work out his own Salvation with fear and trembling, and therefore to use all helps possible for his best satisfaction: hearing, conferring, reading, praying for the affiftance of God's Spirit; but when he hath done this, he is his own Expositor, his own both Minister and People, Bilhop and Diocels, his own Council; and his Contcience excuting or condemning him, accordingly he escapes or incurs his own internal Anathema. So that when it comes once to a Creed, made and Imposed by other men as a matter of Divine Faith, the Cafe grows very delicate; while he cannot apprehend, though the Impoler may, that all therein is clearly contained in Scripture, and may fear being caught in the exprellions to oblige himfelf to a latitude or restriction, further then comports with his own sense and judgment. A Christian of honor, when it comes to this once, will weigh every word, every fyllable, nay further, if he confider that the great buliness of this Council of Nice was but one fingle Letter of the Alphabet, about the inferting or omitting of an lota. There must be either that exactness in the Form of such a Creed, as I dare say, no men in the world ever were or ever will be able to modulate: or else this scrupulous private judgment must be admitted, or otherwife all Creeds become meer instruments of Equivocation or Perfecution. And I must confess, when I have sometimes considered with my self the dulaels of the Non-conformists, and the acuteness on the contrary of the Episcoparians, and the conscienciousness of both; I have thought that our Church might safely wave the difference with them about Ceremontes, and try it out upon the Creeds, which were both the more honorable way, and more funable to the method of the ancient Councils, and yet perhaps might do their butinels as effectually. For one shat is a Christian in good earnest, when a Creed is Imposed, will sooner ear fire then take it against his judgment. There have been Martyrs for Reason, and it was manly in them ; but how much more would men be fo for reason Religionated and Christianized! But it is an inhumane and unchristian thing of those Faith-stretchers, whosoever they be, that either put mens Perions or their conferences upon the torture, to rack them to the length of their Notions: whereas the Bereans are made Gentlemen and Innobled by Patent in the Acts, because they would not credit Paul himself, whole writings now make fo great a part of the New Testament, until they had fearthea the Scripture dayly whether those things were for and therefore many of them believed. And therefore, although where there are fuch Creeds, Christians may for peace and conscience-sake acquiesce while there appears nothing in them flatly contrary to the words of the Scripture : yet when they are obtruded upon a man in particular, he will look very well about him and not take them upon any Humane Authority. The greatest Pretense to Authority is in a Council. But what then? shall all Christians therefore take their Formularies of Divine Worship or Belief, upon trust, as writ in Tables of Stone, like the Commandments, deliver'd from Heaven and to be obeyed in the instant not considered : because three hundred and eighteen Bilhops are met in Abraham's great Hall, of which most must be servants and some children, and they have resolv'd upon't in such a manner? No, a good Christian will not, cannot atturn and indenture his conscience over; to be Represented by others. It is not as in Secular matters, where the States of a Kingdom are deputed by their fellow Subjects to transact for them, so in spiritual : or suppose it were, yet 'twere necessary, as in the Polish constitution, that nothing should be obligatory as long as there is one Diffenter, where no Temporal Interests, but every man's Eternity and Salvation are concerned. The Soul is too precious to be let out at interest upon any humane security, that does or may fail, but it is only safe when under God's custody, in its own Cabinet. But it was a General Coun-A special general indeed if you consider the proportion of three hundred and eighteen, to the body of the Christian Clergy, but much more to all Christian Mankind. But it was a general Free Council of Bishops. I do not think it pollible for any Council to be free that is composed only of Bishops, (63)

and where they only have the Decifive Voces. Nor that a Free Council that takes away Christian Liberty. But that, as it was founded upon Usurpation, to it terminated in Imposition. But 'tis meant that it was Free from all external Impullion. I confess that good neat and drink, and lodging, and money in a Man's purfe, and coaches and Servants, and horses to attend them, did no violence to 'm, nor was there any false Article in it. And discourling now with one and then another of 'm in particular, and the Emperor telling them this is my opinion, I understand it thus, and afterwards declaring his mind frequently to them in publick; no force neither. Ay! but there was a shrewd way of persuasion in it. And I would be glad to know when ever and which free general Council it was that could properly be called fo : but was indeed a meer Imperial or Ecclesiastical Machine, no free agent, but wound up, fet on going, and let dow by the direction and band of the Workman. A General Free Council is but a word of Art, and can never happen but under a Fifth Monarch, and that Monarch too, to return from Heaven. The Animadverter will not allow the fecond General Council of Nice to have been Free, because it was overawd by an Empreß, and was guilty of a great fault (which no Council at liberty he faith could have committed) the Decree for worshipping of Images. Arthis rate a Christian may scussie however for one point among them, and chuse which council he likes best. But in good earnest I do not see but that Constantine might as well at this first council of Nice, have negotiated the Image worthip, as to pay that Superstitious adoration to the Bisho, s, and that Proftration to their Creeds was an Idolatry more pernicious in the confequence to the Christian Faith, then that under which they to lately had fuffer d Persecution. Nor can a council be said to have been at liberty which laid under fo great and many obligations. But the Holy Ghoft was prefent where there were three hundred and eighteen Bilhops, and directed them or three hundred. Then, if I had been of their counsel, they should have fate at it alltheir lives, leaft they should never see him again after they were once risen. But it concerned them to fettle their Querum at hift by his Dictates; otherwise no Bishop could have been absent or gone forth upon any occasion, but he let him out again; and it behoov'd to be very punctua in the Adjournments. 'Tis a ridiculous conception, and as grofs as to make him of the fame Subflance with the Council. Nor needs there any flrong are ment of his absence, then their precente to be actuated by him, and in doing fuch Work. The Ho. ly Spirit! If fo many of them when they got together, acted like rational Men, 'twas enough in all reason and as much as could be expected

But this was one affectation, among many others, which the Bithopstook up to early, of the flile, priviledges, powers, and some actions and geftures peculiar and inherent to the Apostles, which they implaced to their own behoof and usage: nay, and chalenged other things as Apostolical, that were directly contrary to the Doctrine and Practice of the Apostles. Selves, you finall do well. Fare ye well.

This Council denounces every invention of its own; (far from the Apostolical modesty, and the stile of the Holy Spirit) under no less then an Anathema. Such was their arrogating to their interior degrees the flyle of Clergy, till custom bath so much prevailed, that we are at a loss how to speak properly either of the name or nature of their function. Whereas the Clergy, in the true and Apostolical sense, were only those whom they superciliously always call the Laity: The word Clerus being never but once used in the New Testament, and in that fignification, and in a very unlucky place too, Peter 1. 5. 3. where he admonishes the Priesthood, that they should not Lord it or domineer over, the Christian People, Clerum Domini or the Lord's Inheritance. But having usurp'd the Title, I confess they did right to assume the Power. But to speak of the Priesthood in that style which they most affect, if we consider the nature too of their Function, what were the Clergy then but Lay-men difguis'd, drest up perhaps in another habit? Did not St. Paul himself, being a Tent-maker, rather then be idle or burthenfom to his People, work of his trade, even during his Apostleship, to get his living? But did not these, that they might neglect their holy vocation, feek to compass fecular imployments, and Lay Offices? Were not very many of them, whether one respect their Vices or Ignorance, as well qualified as any other to be Laymen? Was it not usual as oft as they merited it to restore them, as in the case even of the three Bishops, to the Laycommunion? And whether, if they were so peculiar from others, did the Impolition of the Bilhops hands, or the lifting up the hands of the Laity conferr more to that distinction? And Constantine, notwithstanding his complement at the burning of the Bilhops papers, thought he might make them and unmake them with the same power as he did his other Lay-Officers. But if the inferior degrees were the Clergy, the Bishops would be the Church: although that word in the Scripture-sense is proper only to a congregation of the Faithful. And being by that title the only men in Ecclefiastical councils, then when they were once affembled they were the Catholick Church, and, having the Holy Spirit at their devotion, what loever Creed they light upon, that was the Catholick Eaith, without believing of which no man be faved. By which means there rose thenceforward so constant persecutions till this day, that, had not the little invilible Gatholick Church and a People that always fearch'd and believ'd the Scriptures, made a stand by their Testimonies and sufferings, the Creeds had destroyd the Faith: and the Church had ruined the Religion. For this General council of Nice and all others of the same constitution, did, and can lerve to no other end or effect, then particular order of menby their ufirping ping a trust upon Christianity, to make their own Price and Market of it, and the and the deliver it up as oft as they see their own Advantage.

For searce was Constantine's Head cold, but his Son Constantine, succeeding his Brothers, being Influenced by the Bishops of the Arrian Party, turn'd the wrong side of Christianity outward, inverted the Poles of Heaven, and

ing his Brothers, being Influenced by the Bishops of the Arrian Party, turn'd the wrong fide of Christianity outward, inverted the Poles of Heaven, and Faith (if I may fay fo) with its Heels in the Air, was forced to stand upon its Head, and play Gambols, for the Divertisment and Pleasure of the Homoionsians. Arrianism was the Divinity then in Mode, and he was an ignorant and ill Courtier, or Church man, that could not drefs, and would not make a new Sure for his Conscience in the Fashion. And now the Orthodox Bishops (it being given to those Men to be obstinate for Power, but flexible in Faith;) began to wind about infensibly, as the Heliotrope Flower that keeps its ground, but wrefts its Neck in turning after the warm Sun, from Day-break to Evening. They could look now upon the Synod of Nice with more indifference, and all that pudder that had been made there betwixt Homoouflos and Homoioufios, &c. began to appear to them as a Difference only arifing from the Inadequation of Languages: Till by degrees they were drawn over, and, rather than lose their Bilhopricks, would joyn, and at last be the Headmost in the Persecution of their own former Party. But the Deacons, to be fare, that fleer'd the Elephants, were thorow-paced; Mento be reckon'd and relied upon in this or any other occasion, and would prick on to render themfelves Capable and Episcopable, upon the first Vacancy. For now the Arrians in grain, froming to come behind the Clownish Homoousians, in any Ecclefiaftical Civility, were refolved to give them their full of Persecution. And it feem'd a piece of Wit rather than Malice, to pay them in their own Coyn, and to Burlesque them in earnest, by the repetition and heightning of the same Severities upon them, that they had practifed upon others. Had you the Homoou fians a Creed at Nice ? We will have another Creed for you at Ariminum, and at Seleucia. Would you not be content with fo many several Projects of Faith confonant to Scripture, unless you might thrust the new word Homoonfios down our throats, and then tear it up again, to make us confess it? Tell us the word, ('twas Homoiousios) we are now upon the Guard, or else we shall run you thorow. Would you Anathemize, Banish, Imprison, Execute us, and burn our Books? You shall taste of this Christian Fare, and as you relish it, you shall have more on't provided. And thus it went, Arrianism being Triumphant, but the few fincere or stomachful Bishops, adhering conflantly, and with a true Christian Magnanimity, especially Athanasius, thorow all Sufferings unto their former Confessions; expiated so in some meafure, what they had committed in the Nicene Council.

Sozomene, 1. 4. c. 25. First tells us a story of Eudoxins, who succeeded Muscedonius, in the Bishoprick of Constantinople; that in the Cathedral of Sanctu Sophia, being mounted in his Episcopal Throne, the sirst time that they Assembled for its Dedication, in the very beginning of his Sermon to the People (those things were already come in Fashion) told them: Putter impium offe, Eilium autem pium; at which when they began to buffle, Pray be quier, faith he; I fay, Patrem impium effe, quia Colis neminem, Filien vero Pium quia colit Patrem; at which they then Laughed as heartily, as before they were Angry. But this I only note to this purpose, that there were some of the greatoft Bishops among the Homoiouficus, as well as the Homoouficus, that could not reproach one anothers, Simplicity, and that it was not impossible for the Many, to be Wifer and more Orthodox than the Few, in Divine Matters, That which I cire him for as most Material, is, his Remark upon the Imposition then of contrary Creeds : Which verily , laith he , was plainly the beginning of most great Calamities, for as much as hereupon therefollowed a Disturbance, not unlike those which we before recited over the whole Empire; and likewise a Persecution equal almost to that of the Heathen Emperors, seized upon all of all Churches. For , althoughis feemed to some more gentle for what concerns the Torture of the Body, yet to prudent Persons it appeared more bitter and severe, by reason of the Dijhonor and Ignominy. For both they who stirred up; and those that were afflicted with this Persecution, were of the Christian Church. And the Grievance therefore was the greater and more ugly, in that the sume things which are done among Enemies, were Executed between those of the same Tribe and Profossion: But the Holy Law forbids us to carry our selves in that manner, even to the fethat are Without, and Aliens. And all this Mil chief forung frommaking of Creeds, with which the Bishops, as it were at Tilting, aim'd to hit one another in the Eye, and throw the opposite Party out of the Saddle. But if it chanced that the weaker file were ready to yield, (for what fort of Men was there that could better Manage, or had their Consciences more at command at that time than the Clergy?) Then the Arrians would use a yet longer, thicker, and sharper Lance for the purpose, (for there were never Vacancies sufficient) that they might be fure to run them down, over, and thorow, and do their Butilels. The Creed of Ariminum was now 100 thort for the Delign, but, faith the Hiltorian, they affixed further Artisles like Labels toit, pretending to have made it better, and fo fent it thorow the Empire with Constantius his Proclamation, that whoever would not Subscribe it, should be banished. Nay, they would not admit their own beloved Similis Substancia, but, to do the Work throughly, the Arrians renounc'd their own Creed for Malice, and made it an Article; Filium Patri tam substantia, quam Voluntate, Dissimilem effe. But that is a small matter with any of them, provided thereby they may do Service to the Church, that is their Party. So that one (feriously speaking) that were really Orthodox, could not then defend the Truth or himself, but by turning old Arrian, if he would impugn the new ones; fuch was the Subility. What shall I fay more? As the Arts of Glass Coaches and Perriwgs illustrate this Age, to by their Trade of Creed-making, then first Invented, we may esteem the Wifdom of Constantine's, and Constanting his Empire. And in a short space, as is usual among Tradefmen, where it appears Gainful, they were so many that Set up of the same Profession, that they could scarce live by one another, Frling Socr.

Socr. 1. 2. c. 32. Therefore uses these words: Eut now that I have tandem aliquando, run through this Labyrinth of So many Creeds, I will gather up their number: And so reckons Nine Creeds more, besides that of Nice, before the death of Constanting, (a bleffed Number.) And I believe, I could for a need, make them up a Dozen, if Men have a mind to buy them fo. And hence it was that Hilary, then Bishop of Poiltiers, represents that state of the Church pleasantly, yet sadly, Since the Nicene Synod, saith he, we do nothing but write Creeds. That while we fight about words, whilft we raife Questions about Novelties, while we Quarrel about things doubtful, and about Authors, while we contend in Parties, while there is difficulty in Consent, while we Anathematize one another, there is none now almost that is Christ's. What a Change there is in the last years Creed? The first Decree commands, that Homoousios should not be mentioned. The next does ugain Decree and Publish Homooulios. The third does by Indulgence excuse the Word Oulia, as used by the Fathers in their sin plicity. The fourth does not Excuse, but Condemn it. It is come to that at last, that nothing among us, or those before us, can remain Sacred or inviolable. We Decree every Year of the Lord, a new Creed concerning God: Nay, every Change of the Moon our Faithis alter'd. We repent of our Decrees, we defend those that repent of them; we Anathemize those that we defended, and while we either condemn other Mens Opinions in our own, or our own Opinions in those of other Men, and bite at one another, we are now all of instorn in pieces. This Bishop fure was the Author of the Naked Truth, and twas he that implicitly condemn'd the whole Catholick Church, both East and West, for being too presumptuous in her Definitions. Tris not strange to me, that Julian, being but a Reader in the Christian Church, should turn Pagan; Especially when I consider that he succeeded Emperor after Constantin. For it feems rather unavoidable that a Man of great Wit, as he was, and not having the Grace of God to direct it, and show him the Beauty of Religion, through the Deformity of its Governours and Teachers; but that he must conceive a Loathing and Aversion for it, Nor could he think that he did them any Injustice, when he observed that, beside all their Unchriftian Immorality too, they Practifed thus, against the Institutive Law of their Calilean, the Persecution among themselves for Religion. And well might he add to his other Severities, that Tharpnels of his Wir, both Exposing and Animadverting upon them, at another rate than any of the Modern Practitioners with all their Study and Inclination , can ever arrive at. For nothing is more punishable, Contemptible, and truly Ridiculous, than a Chrifrian that walks contrary to his Profellion: And by how my chany Man frands with more advantage in the Church for Eminency, but difebeys the Laws of Christ by that Priviledg, he is thereby, and deferves to be the more Exposed. But Julian, the last Heathen Emperor, by whose Crueliy it seemed that God would fenfibly Admonish once again the Christian Clergy, and show them by their own Smart, and an Heathen Hand, the nature and odiousness of Persecution, foon died, as is usual for Men of that Imployment, not without a remarkable stroke of God's Judgment. 1 2

Yet they, as if they were only forry that they had loft so much time, upon his death throve as eagerly to redeem it, and forthwith fell in very naturally into their former Animolities. For Jovianus being chosen Emperor in Persia, and returning Homeward, Socr. l. 3. c. 20. the Bishops of each Parry, in hopes that theirs should be the Imperial Creed, strait to Horse, and Rode away with Switch and Spur, as if it had been for the Plate, to meet him; and he that had best Heels, made himself cock-sure of winning the Religion. The Macedonians, who dividing from the Arrians, had fet up for a new Herelie concerning the Holy Ghoft, (and they were a Squadron of Bishops) Petition'd him that those who held , Filium Patri diffimilem , might be turn'd out , and themselves put in their places: Which was very honestly done, and aboveboard. The Acacians, that were the refined Arrians, but, as the Author. faith, Had a notable faculty of addressing themselves to the Inclination of whatfoever Emperor, and having good Intelligence that he balanced rather to the Consubstantials, presented him with a very fair Inlinuating Subscription, of a confiderable number of Bishops to the Council of Nice. But in the next Emperor's time they will be found to yield little Reverence to their own Subscription. For in matter of a Creed, a Note of their Hand, without exprelling the Penalty, could not it feems Bind one of their Order. But all that Jovianus faid to the Macedonians, was; Thate Contention, but I lovingly imbrace and reverence those who are inclined to Peace and Concord. To the Acacians, who had wifely given these the precedence of Application, to try the truth of their Intelligence, he faid no more (having refolv'd by sweetness and persuasions to quiet all their Controversies) but, That he would not molest any Man whatfoever (reed be follow'd, but those above others he would Cherish and Honor, who should show themselves most forward in bringing the Church to a good Agreement. He likewise call'd back all those Bishops who had been Banished by Constanting and Julian, restoring them to their Sees. And he writ a Letter in particular to Athanastus, who upon Julian's death, had enter'd again upon that of Alexandria, to bid him be of good Courage. And thefe things coming to the Ears. of all others, did wonderfully assuage the Fierceness of those who were Inflamed with Faction and Contention : So that , the Court having declared it felf of this Mind, the Church was in a thort time in all outward appearance peaceably difposed; the Emperor by this Means having wholly repressed all their Violence. Verily, concludes the Historian, the Roman Empire had been profperous and happy, and both the State and the Church (he puts them too in that Order) under Jo good a Prince, must have exceedingly flourished, had not an Immature death taken him away from managing the Government, For after seven Months being Seized with a mortal Obstruction, he dparted this Life. Did not this Hi-Rorian, trow you, deserve to be handled, and is it not, now the Mischief is done, to undo the Charm, become a Duty, to Expose both him and Jovianus? By their ill chosen Principles what would have become of the Prime, and most necessary Articles of Faith? Might not the old Dormant Heresies, all of them safely have Revived?

But that Mortal Obstruction of the Bishops, was not by his death (nor is it by their own to be) removed. They were glad he was so soon got out of their way, and God would yet further manifest their intractable Spirit, which not the Persecution of the Heathen Emperor Julian, nor the Gentleness of Jovianus the Christian, could allay or mitigate by their Afflictions or Prosperity. The Divine Nemesis executed Justice upon them, by one anothers Hand: And so hainous a Crime as for a Christian, a Bishop, to Persecute, stood yet need, as the only equal and exemplary Punishment, of being Revenged with a Persecution by Christians, by Bishops, And who even shall seriously consider all along the Succession of the Emperors, can never have taken that Satisfaction in the most judicious Representations of the Scene, which he may in this worthy Speculation of the great Order and admirable conduct of Wise Providence, through the whole contexture of these Exterior, seeming Accidents, relating to the Eccleliafticals of Christianity.

But

For to Jovianus succeeded Valentinian, who in a short time took his Brother Valens to be his Companion in the Empire. Thefetwo Brothers; did as the Historian observes, Socr. 1, 4. c. 1. (alike, and equally take care at the beginning, for the Advantage and Government of the State) but very much difagreed, though both Christians, in matter of Religion: Valetinianus the Elder being an Orthodox, but Valens an Arrian, and they used a different Methed toward the Christians. For Valentinian (who chose the Western part of the Empire, and left the East to his Brother) as he imbraced those of his own Creed, fo yet he did not in the least molest the Arrians: But Valens not only Labor'd to increase the number of the Arrians, but Afflicted those of the contrary Opinion with grievous Punishments. And both of 'm, especially Valens had Bishops for their purpose. The particulars of that heavy Persecution under Valens, any one may turther fatisfy himself of in the Writers of those Times: And yet it is observable, that within a little space while he purfued the Orthodox Bishops, he gave Liberty to the Novatians, (who were of the same Creed, but separated from them, as I have said, upon Discipline, &c.) and caused their Churches, which for a while were thut up, to be opened again at Constantinople. To be short, Valens (who out-lived his Brother, that died of a natural Death,) himself in a battel against the Goths, could not escape neither the face of a Christian Perfection. For the Goths having made Application to him, he , faith Socrates , not well fore-feeing the Consequence, admitted them to Inhabit in certain places of Thracia, pleasing him self that he should by that means, always have an Army ready at hand against what soever Enemie; and that shele Fornign Guards would firike them with a greater Terror, more by far than the Militia of his Subjects. And so, slighting the ancient Veterane Militia, which used to consist of Bodies of Men raised proportionably in every Province, and were front Fellows that would Fight Manfully; instead of them belevied Money, rating the Country at so much for every Souldier. But the'e new Inmates of the Emperors foon grew Troublefom, as is customary, and not only intested the Natives in Thracia, but Plunder'd even the Suburbs of Constantinople, there being no armed Force to repress them: Hereupon the whole:

whole People of the City cried out at a publick Spectacle, where Valens was present neglecting this matter, Give us Arms and we will manage this War our felves. This extreamly provok d him, to that he forthwith made an Expedition against the Goths: But Threatned the Citizens if he turn'd in fafety, to be Reveng'd on them both for these Contumelies, and for what under the Tyrant Procopius, they had committed against the Empire, and that he would Raze to the Ground, and Plow up the City. Ter before his departure, out of fear of the Foraign Enemy, he totally ceased from perfecuting the Orthodox in Constantinople. But he was kill d in the Fight, or Flying into a Village that the Goths had fet on fire, he was there burnt to ashes : to the great grief of his Bilhops, who, had he been Victorious, might have revived the Perfecution. Such was the end of his Impetuous Reign and rash Counsels both as to his Government of State, in matters of Peace and War, and his Manage of the Church by Perfecution.

Church by Perfecution.

His death brings me to the Succession of Theodofins the Great, then whom no Christian Emperor did more make it his buliness to Norse up the Church , and to Lull the Bilhops, to keep the House in quiet. But neither was it in his power to still their Bawling, and Scratching one another, as far as their Nails (which were yet more render, but afterwards grew like Tallons) would give them leave. I shall not further vex the History , or the Reader , in recounting the Particulars; taking no delight neither my felf in fo uncomfortable Relations, or to reflect beyond what is necessary upon the Wolfishness of those which then feemed, and ought to have been, the Christian Pastors, but went on scattering their Flocks, if not devouring; and the Shepherds smiting one another. In his Reign, the second General Council was called, that of Confrantinople, and the Creed was there made which took its name from the place: The rest of their business, any one that is further curious, may observe in the Writers. But I shall close this with a short touch concerning Gregory Nazianzen, then living, than whom also the Christian Church had not in those times (and I question whether in any succeeding) a Bishop that was more a Christian, more a Gentleman, better appointed in all forts of Learning requilite, feafoned under Julian's Perfecution, and exemplary to the highest pitch of true Religion, and Practical Piety. The eminence of these Vertues, and in special of his Humility (the low lieft but the highest of all Christian Qualifications) raised him under Theodo (iss, from the Parish-like Bishoprick of Nazianzum, to that of Constantinople, where he fill'd his place in that Council. But having taken notice in what manner things were carried in that, as they had been in former Councils, and that fome of the Bishops muttered at his promorion; he of his own mind refigned that great Bishoprick, which was never of his delire or feeking, and, though so highly feared in the Emperors Reverence and Favor, fo acceptable to the People, and generally to the Clergy, whose unequal Abilities could not pretend or justifie an envy against him; retired back far more content to a Solitary Life to his little Nuzianzum. And from thence he writes that Letter to his Friend Procopins, wherein, p. 814. upon his most recollected and ferious reflexion on what had fall within his observation, he userh these remarkable words: I have resolved with my felf (if I may pell you the Naked Truth , I we are were to some into any afferbly of Bishops: for I never faw a good and nay IV elber any Council, but which rather increased then remedied the mi, chieves, if on the robitinate Contentions and Ambition are led or Compelling Billion, he would inflist upon himfels has feet aldifferquent

tion,

It would require too greata Volume to deduce, from the death of Theodofine, the particulars that happened in the fucceeding Reigns about this matter. But the Reader may reckon, that it was as stated a Quarrel betwirt the Homooutians, and the Homoioufians, as that between the Houles of York and Lancafer : And there arole now an Emperor of one Line, and then again of the other. But among all the Bishops , there was not one Morton , whose indnfrious Brain could or would (for some Men always reap by Division) make up the fatal Breach bermixt the two Creeds. By this means every Creed was grown up to a Teft, and, under that pretence, the dextrous Bishops step by step hooked within their Verge, all the bulinels and Power that could be catched in those Turbulences , where they mudled the Water and Fished after, By this means they stalked on first to a Spiritual kind of Dominion, and from that increached upon and into the Civil Jurifaction. A Bishop now grew terrible, and, (whereas a limple Layman might have frighted the Devil with the first words of the Apostles Creed, and I defie thee Satan) one Creed could not protect him from a Balhop, and it required a much longer, and a double and treble Confession, unless himself would be delivered over to Satan by an Anathema. But this was only an Ecclefialtical fentence at first, with which they marked out such as sinned against them, and then whoop'd and hollow'd on the Civil Magistrate, to huat them down for their Spiritual Pleasure. They crept at first by Court Infinuations and Flattery into the Princes favor, till those generons Greatures fuffered themselves to be backed and ridden by them, who would take as much of a free Horse as possible; but in Persecution the Clergy as yet, wifely interposed the Magistrate betwirt themselves and the People, not caring fo their end were attained, how odious they rendred him; And you may observe that for the most part hitherto, they stood crouthing and thor either over the Emperors back, on under his belly. But in process of Time theybecame bolder and open-fac'd, and Perfecuted before the Sun at Mid-day. Bi-Thops grew worfe, but Bishopricks every day better and better. There was now no Ensebius left to refuse the Bishoprick of Antiochia, whom therefore Conftantine told, That he deferv'd the Bishoprick of the whole World for that Modesty. They were not such Fools as Ammonius Parotes, I warrant you, in the time of Theodofins. He , Socr. I. 6. C. 30, being feifed upon by fome that would needs make him a Bishop, when be could not penswade them to the contrary, cut off one of his Ears, telling them that now, should be himself defire to be a Bishop he was by the Law of Priesthood in supable : but when they observed that those things only obliged the lewish Priens bood, and that the Church of Christ did not consider whether a Priest were sound or perfect in limb of Body, but only that he were intire in bis manners; they returned to feize on him again: But when he saw them coming, he swore with a solemn Outh, that, if to Confer STATE.

crate hima Bishop they laid violent hands upon him, he would cut out his tongue alfo, whereupon they, fearing he would do it, defisted. What should have been the matter, that a man fo Learned and Holy, should have such an aversionto be promoted in his own Order; that, rather than yield to be a Compelled or Compelling Bishop, he would inflict upon himself as severe a Martyrdom, as any Perfecutor could have done for him? Sure he faw fomthing more in the very Constitution, than fome do at prefent. Burthis indeed was an Example too Rigid, and neither fit to have been done, nor to be imitated, as there was no danger. For far from this they followed the precedent rather of Damas fus , and Orfinus , which last , Socr. 1.4. c. 24. In Valentinian's time , perfuad ed certain obseire and abject Bishops (for there were it seems of all fores and fixes) to create him Bishop in a Corner, and then (fo early) he and Damasus, who was much the better Man : waged War for the Bilhoprick of Rome, to the great scandal of the Pagan Writers, who made Remarks for this and other things upon their Christianity, and to the Bloodslied and Death of a multitude of the Christian People. But this last I mention'd, only as a weak and imperfect Essay in that time, of what it came to in the several Ages after, which I am now speaking of, when the Bishops were given, gave themselves, over to all manner of Vice, Luxury, Pride, Ignorance, Superstition, Covetouliefs, and Monopolizing of all fecular Imployments and Authority. No. thing could escape them: They meddled, troubled themselves and others, with many things, every thing, forgetting that one, only needful. Informet that I could not avoid wondring often that, among fo many Churches that with Paganick Rites, they dedicated to Saint Mary, I have met with none to Saint Martha. But above all, Imposition and Cruelty became inherent to them, and the power of Perfecution was grown fo good and defirable a thing, that they thought the Magistrate scarce worthy to be trusted with it longer, and a meer Novice at it, and either wrested it out of his hands, or gently eased him of that and his other burdens of Government. The Sufferings of the Laity were become the Royalties of the Clergy; and, being very careful Christians, the Bishops, that not a word of our Saviours might fall to the Ground, because he had foretold how Men should be Persecuted for his Names sake, they undertook to fee it done effectually in their own Provinces, and out of pure zeal of doing him the more Service of this kind, inlarged fludiously their Diocesses beyond all proportion. Like Nostradamus his Son, that to fulfil his Father's prediction of a City in France, that should be Burned; with his own hands fet it on fire. All the calamities of the Christian World in those Ages, may be derived from them, while they warm'd themselves at the Flame; and, like Lords of Misrule, kept a perpetual Christmas. What in the Bishop's name is the matter? How came it about that Christianity, which approved it felf under all Persecutions to the Heathen Emperors, and merited their Favor so far, till at last it regularly succeeded to the Monarchy, should under those of their own Profession be more distressed? Were there some Christians then too, that teared still lest Men should be Christians, and for whom it was at sheet onds of as the man come morning a placer arrange of a grimas made and necessary meceffury, not for the Gospel reason that there should be Hereses. Let us collect a little now also in the conclution what at first was not particulariz'd, how the reason of State and Measure of Government stood under the Roman Emperours, in aspect to them. I omit Tiberius, mention'd in the beginning of this Effay. Trajune, after having perfecuted them, and having used Pliny the second in his Province to that purpole, upon his relation that they lived in conformity to all Lawes, but that which forbad their Worlhip, and in all other things were blameless, and good men, straitly by his Edict commanded that none of them should be farther enquired after. Hadrian, in his Edict to Mimutius Fundanus, Pro-conful of Asia, commands him that, If any accuse the Christians, and can prove it, that they commit any thing against the State, that then be punish them according to the crime: but if any man accuse them, meerly for calumny and vexation, as Christians, then i faith let him suffer for't, and take you care that he feel the smart of it. Antoninus Pius writ his Edict. very remarkable if there were place here to recite it, to the States of Afia affembled at Ephelius; wherein he takes notice of his fathers command that, unless the Christians were found to act any thing ugainst the Roman Empire, they should not be molested, and then commands that, if any man thereafter shall continue to trouble them, tanquam tales, as Christians, for their Worship, in that case he that is the Informer should be exposed to punishment, but the accused should be free and discharged. I could not but observe that among other things in this Edict, where he is speaking, It is desirable to them that they may appear, being accused, more willing to dy for their God then to live, he adds. It would not be amisto admonish you concerning the Earthquakes which have, and do now happen, that when you are afflicted at them, you would compare our affairs with theirs. They are thereby so much the more incouraged to a confidence and reliance upon God, but you all the while go on in your ignorance, and neglect both other gods, and the Religion towards the immortal, and banish and persecute them unto death. Which words of that Emperours, fall in fo naturally with what, it feems, was a common observation about Earthquakes, that I cannot but to that purpose take further notice, how also Gregory Nazianzen, in Or. 2d. contra Gentiles, tells, belides the breakings in of the Sea in feveral places, and many fires that happened, of the Earthquakes in particular, which he reckons as Symptomes of Julian's Perfecution. And to this I may add. Soer. 1. 3. 6. 10. who in the Reign of Valens, that notorious Christian Perfecutor, faith, at the fame time there was an Earthquake in Bitbynia, which ruined the City of Nice, (that fame in which that general Counfel was held under Constantine) and a little after there was another. But although these so happened, the minds of Valens and of Eudoxius, the Bishop of the Arrians were not at all stirredupunto Piety, and a right opinion of Religion: For nevertheless they never ceased, made no end of persecuting those who in their Greed dissented from them. Those Earthquakes seemed to be certain indications of tumult in the Church. All which put together, could not but make me reflect upon the late Earthquakes, great by how much more unufual, here in England, thorow fo many Counties lince Christmas, at the same time when the Clergy, some of them, were to bufy in their Cabals, to promote this (I would give it a modester name then) Perfecution, which is now on foot against the Diffenters; at so unseasonable a time, and uponno occasion administred by them, that those who comprehend the reasons, yet cannot but wonder at the wisdome of it. Yet I am not neither one of the most credulous nickers or applyers of natural events to humain transactions ; but neither am I fo fecure as the Learned Dr. Spencer, nor can walk along the world without having some eye to the conjunctures of God's admirable Providence. Neither was Marcus Aurelius (that I may return to my matter) negligent as to this particular. But he, observing, as Antoninus had the Earthquakes, that in an expedition against the Germans, and Sarmatians: his Army being indespair almost for want of water, the Melitine (afterwards from theevent called the Thundring) Legion, which confifled of Christians, kneel'd down in the very heat of their thirst and fight, praying for rain, which posture the enemyes wondring at, immediately there brake out fuch a thundring and lightning as together with the Christian valour, routed the adverse Army, but so much rain fell therewith, as refreshed Aurelim his Forces that were at the last gasp for thirst, he thenceforward commanded by his Letters; that upon pain of death none should inform against the Christians, as Tertulian in his Apology for the Christians withesfes. But who would have believed that even Commodus, fo great a Tyrant otherwife, should have been fo favourable as to make a Law, that the informers against Christia ans should be punished with Death? Yethe did, and the Informer against Apollonim was by it executed. Much less could a man have thought that, that prod gy of cruelty Maximine, and who exercised it so severely upon the Christians, should, as he did, being struck with God's hand, publish when it was too late Edict after Edict, in great favour of the Christians. But above all, nothing could have been less expected then that, after those Heathen Emperours, the first Christian Constantine should have been seduced by the Bishops, to be, after them, the first occasion of Persecution, so contrary to his own excellent inclination: 'Twas then that he spake his own mind, when he faid, Eus. de vita Consti. 69. You ought to retain within the bounds of your private thoughts those things, which you cunningly and subtly seek out concerning most frivolous questions. And then much plainer, c. 67. where he faith fo wisely. You are not ignorant that the Philosophers all of them do agree in the profession of the same Discipline, but do oftentimes differ in some part of the opinions which they dogmatize in ; but yet, although they do diffent about the Difcipline that each several Sect observeth, they nevertheless reconcile themselves again for the sake of that common Projession to which they have concurred. But against compulsion in Religious matters so much every where, that it is needless to insert one passage. And he being of this disposition, and universally Famous for his care and countenance of the Christian Religion. Exfebine faith of good things, and all fear from without was taken away, and the Church was fortissed as I may say, on all sides by a peaceable and illustrious tranquility, then Envy lying in wait against our prosperity, crassily crept in, and began sirst to dance in the midst of the company of Bishops: so goes on, telling the History of Alexander and Arrims. I have been before large enough in that relation, wherein it appeared that, contrary to that great Emperous pious intention, whereas Envy began to dance among the Bishops sirst, the good Constantine brought them the Fiddles. But it appeared likewise how soon he was weary of the Bal, and toward his latter end, as Princes often do upon too late experience, would have redressed all and returned to his natural temper. Of the other Christian Emperours I likewise discoursed, omitting, that I might insert in this place, how the great Heathen Philosopher Themissius, in his Consular Oration, celebrated Forianus for having given that toleration in Christian Religion, and thereby deseated the stattering Bishops, which fort of men, faith he wittily, do not worship God, but the Imperial Purple.

It was the same Themistim that, only out of an upright natural apprehension of things, made that excellent Oration afterward to Valens, which is in Print, exhorting him to cease Persecution: wherein he chances upon, and improves the fame notion with Constantine's, and tells him: That he should not wonder at the Diffents in Christian Religion, which were very small, if compared with the multicude and crowd of Opinions among the Gentile Philosophers; for there were at least three hundred differences, and a very great dissention among them there was about their resolutions, unto which each several Sect was as it were necessarily bound up and obliged: and that God seemed to intend more to Mustrate his own glory by that diverse and unequal variety of Opinions, to the end every each one might therefore so much the more reverence his Divine M ajefty, because it is not possible for any one accurately to know him. And this had a good effect upon Valens, for the mitigating in some measure his severities against his fellow Christians. So that after having cast about, in this Summary again, (whereby it plainly appears that according to natural right and the apprehension of all sober Heathen Governours, Christianity as a Religion, was wholly exempt from the Magistrates jurisdiction or Lawes, farther than any particular person among them immorally transgressed, as others, the common rules of humain fociety) I cannot but return to the Question with which I begun. What was the matter? How came it about that Christianity, which approved it felf under all Persecutions to the Heathen Emperours, and merial ted their favour fo far , till at last it regularly succeeded to the Monarchy ; flould, under those of their own profession, bemore distressed? But the Anfiver is now much shorter and certainer, and I will adventure boldly to fay, the true and fingle cause then was the Bishops. And they were the cause against reason. For what power had the Emperours by growing Christians, more then those had before them? None. What obligation were Christ an

Subjects under to the Magistrate more then before? None. But the Magistrates Christian authority was, what the Apostle describ'd it while Heathen, not to be a terror to good works, but to evil. What new Power had the B shops acquired, whereby they turned every Pontificate into a Caiaphat? None neither? 2 Cor. 10. 8. Had they been Apostles, The Lord had but given them Authority for edification, not for destruction. They, of all other, ought to have Preached to the Magistrate, the terrible depunciations in Scripture against usurping upon and perfecuting of Christians. They, of all others, ought to have laid before them the horrible Examples of God's ordinary Juflice against those that exercised Persecution. But, provided they could be the Swearers of the Prince to do all due Allegiance to the Church, and to preferve the Rights and liberties of the Church, however they came by them, they would give him as much scope as he pleased in matter of Christianity, and would be the first to solicite him to break the Laws of Christ, and ply him with hot places of Scripture in order to all marner of Oppression and Persecution in Civils and Spirituals. So that the whole bulinels how this unchristian Tyranny came and could entitle it felf among Christians, against the Christian priviledges, was only the case in Zech. 13.6.7 And one shall say unto him, what are these wounds in thy bands? then he shall answer, those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. Because they were all Christians, they thought forfooth they might make the bolder with them, make bolder with Christ, and wound him again in the hands and feet, of his members. Because they were friends they might use them more coursly, and abuse them, against all. common civility, in their own house, which is a Protection to Strangers. And all this to the end that a Bishop might sit with the Prince in a Junto, to confule wifely how to preferve him from those people that never meant him any harm, and to fecure him from the Sedition and Rebellion of men that feek, northink, any thing more but to follow their own Religious, Christian Worship. It was indeed as ridiculous a thing to the Pagans to fee that work, as it was afterwards in England to strangers, where Papilts and Protestants went both to wrack at the fame instant, in the same market, and when Erasmus said wittily, Quid agitur in Auglia? Consulitur he might have added though not so elegantly Comburitur) de Religione. Because they knew that Christian Worthip was free by Christ's institution, they procured the Magistrate to make Laws in it concerning things unnecessary; As the Heathen Persecutor Julian introduced some bordering Pagan Ceremonyes, and argung with themselves in the same manner as he did, Soz. l. g. c. 16. That if Christians should obey those Lames they should be able to bring them about to something further which they had design ned. But if they would not, then they night proceed against them without any hope of pardon, as breakers of the Laws of the Empire, and represent them as turbulent and dangerous to the Government. Indeed, whatfoever the Animadverter faith of the Act of Seditious Conventicles here in England, as if it were Anvill'd after another of the Remane Senate, the Christians of those Ages, had all the finest tooles of Persecution out of Julian's Shop, and studied him then as curiously as some do now Machiavel. These Bishops it was who, becapie the Rule of Christ was incompatible with the Power that they assumed, and the Vices they practifed, had no way to render themselves necessary or tolerable to Princes, but by making true piety difficult, by Innovating Laws to revenge themselves upon it, and by turning Makebates between Prince and People, inftilling dangers of which themfelves were the Authors. Hence it is that having awakened this jealoufy once in the Magistrate against Religion, they made both the Secular and the Ecclefiastical Government fo uneasy to him, that most Princes began to look upon their Subjects as their Enemies, and to imagine a reason of State different from the Interest of their People: and therefore to weaken themselves by seeking unnecessary & grievous supports to their authority. Whereas if men could have rehain'd this cunning, and from thence forcible, governing of Christianity, leaving it to its own simplicity, and due Liberry , but cauling them in all other things to keep the King's and Christ's peace among themselves and towards others, all the ill that could have come of it would have been that such kind of Bishops should have provid less implemental, but the good that must have thence risen to the Christian Magistrate and the Church, then and ever after a would have been inexpressible.

But this diffeourfe having run in a manner wholly upon the Impolition of Creeds, may feem not to concern (and I delire that it may not reflect upon) our Clergy, nor the Controverlies which have to unhappyly vex'd our Church, ever fince the reign of Edward the Sixth unto this day. Only, if there might fomthing be pick'd out of it towards the Compromising of those differences (which I have not from any performance of mine the vanity to imagine) it may have use as an Argument a Majori ad Minus, their disputes having rilen only from that of Creeds, ours from the Imposition only of Ceremonies, which are of much inferior confideration. Faith being necessary, but Ceremonies Despensable. Unless our Church should lay the same weight upon them as the Animadverter has done thorow his whole Studious Chapter on that Subject, and because p. 34. this is the time of her settlement, that there is a Church at the end of every Mile, that the Sovereign Powers spread their wings to cover and protect her, that Kings and Queens are her Nursing Fathers and Nursing Mothers, that she hash stately Cathedrals, there be so many arguments now to make Ceremonies Necessary : which may all be anfwered with one Question that they use to ask Children. Where are you proud? But I should rather hope from the wisdom and Christianity of the present guids a of our Chruch, that they will (after an age and more, after fo long a time almost as those Primitive Bishops I have spoke of, yet suffered the Novatian Bishops in every Diocess) have mercy on the Nation, that hath been apon follender a matter as the Ceremonies and Liturgy fo long, fo miferably harafs'd. That they will have mercy upon the King, whom they know against his natural inclination, His Royal Intention, his many Declarations, they have induced to more Severities, then all the Reigns fince the Conquest will contain if fumm'd up together : who may , as Constantine among his Private Devotions put up one Collect to the Bilhops. Enfeb. de vita Conft. c. 70. Date igitir mihi Dies tranquillos & Noctes curarum expertes. And it runs thus almost altogether verbatim in that Historian. Grant, most merciful Bi-(hop and Priest that I may have calm days, and nights free from care and molestation, that I may live a peaceable life in all Godlyness and honesty for the future by your good agreement; which unless you vouchsafe me, I shall wast away my Reign in perfetual sadness and vexation. For as long as the people of God stands divided by so unjust and pernicious a Contention , how can it be that, I can have any ease in my own Spirit. Open therefore by your good agreement the way to me, that I may continue my Expedition towards the East; and grant that I may see both you and all the rest of my people, having laid aside your animofities, rejoycing together, that we may all with one voice give land and glory, for the Common good agreement and liberty, to God Almighty for ever. Amen. But if neither the People, nor his Majefty enter into their confideration. I hope it is no unreasonable request that they will be merciful unto themselves, and have some reverence at least for the Naked Truth of History, which either in their own times will meet with them, or in the next age overtake them: That they, who are some of them so old that, as Confessors, they were the Scarrs of the former troubles, others of them fo young, that they are free from all the Motives of Revenge and Hatred, should yet joyn in reviving the former perfecutions upon the pretences, yea even themselves in a turbulent, military, and uncanonical manner execute Laws of their own procuring, and depute their inferior Clergy to be the Informers. I should rather hope to fee not only that Controverfy so seandalous abolished, but that also upon fo good an occasion as the Author of the Naked Truth hath administred them, they will inspect their Clergy, and cause many things to be corrected, which are far more ruinous in the Consequence then the dispensing with a Surplice. I shall mention some too consusedly, as they occur to my Pen, at prefent, referving much more for better leafure. Methinks it might be of great edification, that those of them who have ample possessions should be in a good fense. Mult as inter opes inopes. That they would inspect the Canons of the ancient Councils, where are many excellent ones for the regulation of the Clergy. I faw one, looking but among those of the same Council of Nice, against any Bishops removing from a less Bishoprick to a greater, nor that any of the Inferior Clergy should leave a less living for a fatter. That is methinks the most Natural use of General or any Councils to make Canons, as it were By-Laws for the ordering of their own Society, but they ought not to take out, much less forge any Patent to invade and prejudice the Community. It were good that the greater Churchmen relyed more upon themselves, and their own direction, not building too much upon stripling Chaplains: that men may not suppose the Master (as one that has a good Horse or a Fleetbound) attributes to himself the vertues of his Creature. Tis a very good book, and if a man read it carefully, will make him much wifer. That they would advise them to keep the Sabbath: if there were no morality in the day, yet there is a great deal of prudence in the observing it. That they would instruct those that came for Holy Orders and Livings, that it is a terrible vocation they enter upon, but that has indeed the greatest reward. That to gain a Soul is beyond all the acquists of Traffick, and to convert an Atheift more glorious then all the Conquelts of the Souldier. That, betaking themselves to this Spiritual Warfare, they ought to difintangle from the World. That they do not ride for a Benefice as if it were for a Fortune or a Mistress, but there is more in it. But these things require greater Time, and to enumerate all that is amiss, might perhaps be as endless as to number the People: nor are they within the ordinary sphære of my Capacity, and our Exposer will think I have forgot him, I shall take my leave of him for the present, being only troubled to find

I will not say as Popilius said to Antiochus, nor as Demosthenes said to Eschines, nor as the most Learned P. Aredius, or the Jesuite Gaspar Schottus said to the Animadverter, nor as Dolubella said to Cicero, nor as the Christian Cicero said to the English Parliament, nor as the Roman Centurion said to the Roman Ensign: but I will say somthing like what Leonas (that presided from Constantius at the Council at Seleucia, when they made an endless Disputing to no purpose) said to them: not, Abite igitur & in Esclessa nugas agite, but, good Mr. Exposer, what do you Loytering like an idle Schollar, and Animadverting here in Town? get you home again, or it were better for you, and Expose and Animadvert, as long as you will, at your own Colledge

For his Sermon is still expected.

But to the Judicious and Serious Reader, to whom I with any thing I have faid, may have given no unwelcom entertainment, I thall only to far justify my felf, that I thought it no less concerned me to vindicate the Lairy from the Impolitions that the Few would force upon them, then him to defend those Impolitions on behalf of the Clergy. And moreover I judged my felf most proper for the work, it not being fit that so slight a Pamphlet as his should be an-Iwered by any Man of great abilities. For the reft I take the Naked Truth to have been part of that effect which Reverend Mr. Hooker foretold. Praf. to Eul. Policy, p. 10. The time will come when Three words, uttered with Charity and Meekness, shall receive a far more blessed reward, then Three thou-Sand Volumes writen with disdainful sharpness of Wit. And I shall conclude with him in his close. I trust in the Almighty that with us Contentions are now at the highest flout, and that the day will come (for what canse is there of Dispair) when the Passions of former enmity being allaid, men shall with ten times redoubled tokens of unfainedly reconciled Love, shew themselves each to other the same which Joseph and the Brethren of Joseph were at the time of their Enterview in Egypt. And upon this condition, let my Book alfo (year my self if it were needful) be burnt by the hand of the, Animadverter.
