Bishop of CHESTER's Curate, at Wigan in Lancasbire,

Concerning the BOOK, Entituled,

The Surey Impostoz.

SIR, Have fo often been difappointed in reading new Books of all kinds, that I have fometimes wilhed, that a great many of em had never been written or printed, or had been used only to light Tobacco, or wrap up Grocery, or any other Neceflary Convenience, (pardon the Expression) before they had been fent abroad, to the unneceflary Charge of the Buyer, and unprofitable Expense of the time of the Reader. For when a Man expects fome Advantage, and Advance to the Commonwealth of Learning, fome clearer Demonstra-B tions of old Truths, or Confutations of old and new Errors, he often meets with fome trite Notions wrapt up in a new drefs, that, it may be, renders the Matter more obfcure; or with fome flinking Gall and Spew, out of the putrify'd Lungs of fome pretending Cenfors of the Doctrines and Practices of others, whom they accufe of Herefies, Superflition, and Schifm, when themfelves, it may be, are the greateft and moft uncharitable Diabolical Criminals. Yet Men are apt out of Cutiofity, (as after News) to look into this or that Book, that is emitted with fome fine fpecious Title, and neatly Prefaced, with a few tight and well-placed Periods, or promifing fome new Difcoveries; and upon this laft account, I have looked into Two Pamphlets, the one call'd, The Surey Demoniack, the other, The Surey Impoffer.

For the former, I was much furprized, that a Script, (as drawn up by Mr. C.) and fo long ago cenfured by many Sober, Grave, Diffenting Ministers, and who, upon my Knowledge, ufed their Endeavours to have it fupprefs'd, and thought they had done it, should yet, after some Years latency, be made publick : But I was much more furprized, when I looked into your Pamphlet, call d, The Surey Imposfor, wherein is found To much caullels Prejudice against a Party, To much Pride and Palfion, fuch uncharitable Cenfures, fuch unjust Inferences, fuch confident Affertions of what in your own Conficience you cannot but disbelieve, that I was troubled and griev'd, that you, whom I always thought a Man of a fweet Temper, and obliging Nature, fhou'd in fuch a transport of Fury and Rage, fo unhandiomly and ungenteelly treat to many honeft Men, whom you have with fuch fupercilious Scorn, Reproach, and invidious Reflections, and unchriftian Surmifes, and worfe than Fefferian Inuendo's, endeavour'd to render odious, and thro' them, all Diffenters.

I think your great fwelling Words, and the hard Speeches, which no ways concern the Merit of the Caufe, will not, with ferious, impartial People, (efpecially fuch as know the Perfons) gain you any Reputation. I am indeed offended, that you, my Friend, who had a Diffenter for your Father, thould judge fo peremptorily, and condemn fo rafhly, the whole Tribe. Doth it not argue a Spirit different from the humble, meek, and charitable Spirit of the Bleffed Jefus? The Lord rebuke it.

CI YYAA

I am no ways concern'd in the Surey Demoniack; I have read To many Stories of the like kind, that (tho' I believe there have been, and may be still, Perfons acted by a Diabolical Power, and really Poffets'd by Evil Spirits) yet most to effeem'd, are either Cheats, or Delufions of vitiated Phantafies, or preternatural Diftempers, by which yet many Learned, Wife, and Good Men have been deceiv'd. And I did from the time I first heard. of this, really believe it would prove an Imposture; not in a Combination of those Perfons that acted in it above-board, very innocently, and in fincerity, according to their best light; tho' you to often Charge fome of 'em with infincerity : I know fome of em better than to have fuch an uncharitable thought, And I must profes, that your Book hath done more to the abating of my Centure of it, which was peremptory enough, than the other had done to convince me, of its being a proper Poffertion or Obfertion. PERCHOUP

I do indeed freely join with you in condemning Mr. C's Phanfies, and I doubt, unwarrantable Colloquies; and I am griev'd that he hath exposid himfelf in fo many infignificant Fopperies, toilted into his Narrative: I take him to be a Man of a warm Brain, but, I think, an honeft Heart; and by the Character given of him, he is not fuch a Sir John Lack-learning as you ipitefully represent him, and the reft of the Ministers you for invidioufly Charge. It will be no Advantage to your own Reputation, that you endeavour fo to leffen and vilifie them.

As for Mr. Jolly, he is an Ancient, Grave, Pious, Serious Man, that feareth God above many; and tho' he be, of a differ rent Perswasion from me, as well as from you, yet I am perswaded he would not knowingly, be guilty of what you with fo much Spleen and Rage Charge, upon him, for all the World at But you know the old Saying, and have well exemplify'd it, "Dafh Mire and Dirt enough upon the Back of your Adverfa-"ry, and fome will be hard to be got off. I will not excufe Mr. Jolly's Credulity, but I dare fay he thought Dugdale's Application to him for help, was a warrant for him to use what lawful Means he could for the relief of fuch a Milerable Creature. And what Piriful and Charitable Man would not lend his help to fuch a lamentable Spectacle as he feem'd to be e And your little Tricks and Mif-interpretations of things, and confident Mif-judging and Wire-drawing every paffage to the worit worft Senfe, and often beyond what any juft and rational Man could infer, will not much affect any, but those that are glad of any pretence to vilifie fuch as you reflect upon, who at the fame time believe not the Gospel, nor those that never speak good concerning them, but condemn their ungodly Conversations, by their Holiness and Godliness, as well as by their faithful Preaching against their Wickedness and Debaucheries, Amos 5, 10.

And as for the other Gentlemen you call Affifters at the Impofture, you with fuch impudent Scorn treat fome of 'em in your Book, as if they were fuch diminitive Underlings as were fit for nothing, but to be trodden under foot. What an Aftonifhment will this be, when it is known who thefe are? And what it is for, that thefe Men are expos'd? One is the Learned Academick, Mr. R. Fr. as you call him in Scorn, as if he were fome fresh Man to be hilled at by your Seniority; but he is better known in the Nation than to be Ridicul'd by any, but fuch as Envy his Learning and Ulfefulnefs.

Another is, I think, that O. H. that hath his praife in fo many Practical Books, written and published by him, for which I doubt not but many Souls do praise God; for the reft, I have lefs knowledge, but I believe they are ferious good Men.

But what is it thefe Men have done? They joined in Fasting and Prayer, but, it may be, you would have it thought they were in the Combination, you have fo many Infinuations tending that way, that it's very sufficiency you mean fo.

Now for your Attestors, what have you to Charge'ern with? Do they affirm Dugdale was Posses'd or Disposses'd? No, here's their Testimonial out of your own Book.

We whose Names are Subscribed heing Ministers of the Gospel, having read or heard the Affidavits and Declarations taken before she, &c. do verily believe the Truth of 'em, and that the strange Fits of Rich. Dugdale were by a Diabolical Power. And your self acquit 'em, p. 52.

Having addreffed your felf to the Diffenting Ministers, first you let 'em know your Character, One of the Foundation of Queen Elizabeth's Preachers, intended to preserve His Majesty's Subjetts from falling into Errors, especially such as tend to Popery, and a late Scandalous Pamphlet looking that way, Intituled, The Surey Demoniack, &c.

or spitting viers summing to

Good

Good Sir, what Errors in Doctrine looking that way, do you find in that Book? What have they faid in this that tends to Popery? They use the Word Obsellion, p. 58. It's a Popish Word. Really these diminitive Underling Slaves to the Papists have spun a fine thread, by using a Word that's a Popish Word. Sure, an Error that deferves feverely to be chastized. But if any Fanatick like your felf thould say, you have fome of your Ceremonies from the Papists, you have the Cross in Baptism, Kneeling in receiving Bread and Wine, the Form of the Common-Prayer, &c. you can tell how to answer for your felves, and excuse these from Popery: And when you have done that, your felf will answer also for Diffenters. But I fee, one may better fteal a Horfe, than others look over the Hedge.

But after all this, pray is there no other reafon to be given, that their Errors tend towards Popery ? Do they hold contrary to the Articles of the Church of England with the Papifts, viz. againft Art. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 17? No fure, they Subfiribe them, and do not Preach againft 'em when they have done, as fome do, they are then found in Doctrinals, and therein hold the fame Faith that you Subfiribe; and I hope, believe according to your Subfiription.

But is it ftill Obleffion that you can only Charge them with? Then fome dull Fellow, without any great fludy, wou'd fay, It's more probable they had their Word from the Church of England; even an Underling Slave that cannot underftand a bit of the Language of the Beaft, may read it in Can. 72. And is the C. of Eng. guilty of Errors tending to Popery? A very fit Advocate you are for the Church, when you caft dirt in the Face of your Mother, and thought it had been Diffenters. So have Ifeen an honeft Matron been miftaken for a Strumpet; but methinks a Child fhould know his own Mother better.

But, it may be, you intend, what the Diffenters believed and did, in the Management of the Bufinefs of the Surey Dem. tends towards Popery : In earneft, I will be no Advocate for Popery; but tho' my Charity be not fo large as to excufe the Devil from having a hand in Dicky's Tricks, yet I am fo Charitable towards the Papifts, that if they hold no greater Errors than the Belief of Poffelfions and Obfelfions, I thould think it but a venial Error, if any : But what have they done that tends towards Popery? Do they believe there is fuch a thing as Devils ?

A Vindication of the Dissenters

I believe they are not Sadducees, tho', I doubt, you, and fuch Furiofo's, will fay they are Pharifees; but faying is not proving.

Do they believe there is fuch a thing as a Pofferfion; or, if you will, the Popifh Obferfion? They think they can prove the thing, if they let go the offenfive words; but the Canon is, Nols me tangere. And for a Demoniack, they fay there have been fuch, and that they think Dugdale was one.

If you, my Friend, think and believe there is no fuch a thing, as I have heard you have declar'd in a Sermon preach'd at Whalley, and that it was fometime in your Book; (tho I believe not all Reports) if it be fo, I should have been glad to Have feen your Arguments; now if the Belief of this be their Error tending to Popery, you that Magifterically take upon you to be the Reformer of these diminitive Slaves of Popery, had done very acceptable Service to them, if by dint of Argument, and in the Spirit of Meeknefs, you had convinced them of their, Errors. And you might also have helped to reform the Canons, which would have greatly gratify'd thefe Diffenters; but, it may be, you remembred that you had Subscrib'd, not to endeavour any Alteration of Government in Church, Gre, and then it was honeftly done, to flick to your tacklings, and not lofe one Pin, left all should have tottered, tho' that Canon looked towards Popery.

But once more, what have thefe Men done in their Religious Management of this Affair, that fo much difpleafes, and that tends towards Popery? Did they take a Cheat to be a Demoniack? If fo, it was their miftake: But my dull Head yet apprehends not fuch a miftake to look towards Popery; and the difcevery of this; is Dedicated to thefe Gentlemen for their Reformation; I with it may, and hope it will, make them more cautious for the future: But the means you use for fo good an find, is a little awkward; Reproaches, Slanders, impertinent Reflections, calling them by ill Names, this is not likely to do it.

But methinks you are a little too young for fuch pert Rebukes, and you are not their Diocefan fo Juridically, to fend forth your Fulminations; does this become a Country Curate, fo to hector Fathers, and Brethren? Surely it favours of Arrogance, you fhould ftay the time.

But fiill I am at a lofs how to know, that what they have done tends to Popery, and looks that way : Did they borrow from, from, or use Popish Exorcisins, and Ceremonies? No, you clear them from that: Ay, but they Prayed and Fasted to cast out a Devil where there was none: They, filly Souls, were fooled into a belief of a Possessin and Obsession of the Simples, than that you and he should join together, to dash out those few Brains they have. But pray be not too rash, some young Confident Medicasters love to try Experiments, and by so doing, kill instead of curing. You and your Dr. fay, there was no Devil, and you'll prove it; you fay, it was a Chear, and so Devil, your Dr. fays, it was a preternatural Differmer, and no Devil; but how doth this excuse the Devil?

Suppose in a Cheat, and that Dugdale acted his Tricks by Legerdemain, or Agility of Body, who is so likely to help for clumfical a Fellow, as they fay he is, as the Devil? Who could put it into his Heart so villanously to deceive the World, to pretend what he knew was a Lie? It may be better apply'd to him, than you do against Mr. C. Asts the 5th. Why hath Satan filled thy beart, to Lie to the Holy Ghost? Here was a Combination and Cheat between Husband and Wife, and yet the Devil, not excluded, nor excus'd.

Now you, Mr. Taylor, do alfo fay, it was a natural Diftemper; your Dr. R. faith, it was a preternatural Diffemper, and therefore no Devil: Now (11hall not interrogate the Dr.) if you queffion all Polleffions, except those in the Gospel, (which hope you do not) yet protetting your telf a Divine, do you really believe the Devil hath no hand in your natural, or your Dr. R's preternatural Diffemper? What do you think of Job's Cafe? Was not the Devil an Actor in that fad Tragedy? What do you think of that Demoniack in Mat. 17. 14, 15, 16, 17,18? The Poor Man's Son was a Lunatick, and was fore vexed, and oft fell into the Fire, and oft into the Water; a grievous preternatural Diftemper, as the Falling-Sickness, or an Epilepfie, is; but what had the Devil no hand in this? Yes fure, Ver. 18. Jefus rebuked the Devil, fee Mark 9. 17, 18. Now by this, judge who hath done more evil, the Diffenters in publishing a Story of one they believed to be acted by the Devil, becaufe it looked like these Polletions in the Gospel, or you, by denying that no natural or preternatural Diffempers can be attended with a Devil; and that it's a good Argument to prove it no Pofferfion; becaule because a Distemper. I wonder not at the Religion and Reafon of your Physicians; the one faith, (viz.) R. These strange and various Gestures and Actions performed by the Lad, during his Fit, looked upon by the Bebolders to be done by the Devil, were not Diabolical, but Preternatural.

Your other Dr. Buckly, fometime of my Acquaintance, and I thought (as of you) a Man of a fweet and loving Temper, yet Strangely affirming, That of Neceffity it must be his Distemper, not the Devil, that produced thefe irregular Motions; and his Keafon is, That a Spirit had neither Flesh nor Bones, therefore could not be felt ; as if the Devil could not act in and by Fleth and Bones. As fine is Dr. R's Reafons why Dicky had the fore-knowledge of his Firs; a Boy could foretel his Fits by a pain behind his Legs, Gr. p. 30. This is a wonderful discovery, and no doubt he will in time be famous : Just as a Man that hath the Fits of an Ague, can tell when it will come, when he begins to yawn, and grows chilly. Now it's coming; the Boy of 13 Years old could Prophecy of his Fit, for he felt it coming behind his Leg, Oc. agregiam vero landem ! Oc. Doth not this Solution deferve the Scatlet : But this puifne may rather bluth at fuch trifles, much more, at his bold Cenfure at first daih of an Impertinent, nay, Falle Account, &c. but fome People affirm luftily, and it's no : 130 matter for proof, ipfe dixie must ferve.

But I had almost forgotten your Learned Dr. R's Divinity. acculing the two P's, that excuse the Devil, from being that Notorious Villain which Scripture declares of him, (viz.) = Liar from the beginning; they aver he tells em truth; as if the Devil did not speak fometimes that which is true, tho' with an ill intent, Acts 16. 16, 17. and Mark 1. 23, 24, 25. This is it for Phyficians to go above their Difpenfatory. I wonder not at these Reasons, and the Religion of your Physicians; it's belies their Province to meddle with Divinity. But for you, Mr. T. that proteis your felf a Divine, and Scholar, that you thould, upon fuch weak Reafons, excufe the Devil; this I wonder at, and I with that they of this Age, that would explode all Reveald Religion out of the World, be not hardened against the Belief of the Miracles of our Saviour, and his Apofiles: Suppole they take up your Argument, and should Blasphemoully fay, they were all Cheats and preternatural Diffempers, therefore no Poffeffions; I hope you can answer they were no Cheats, the Tho' a fubtil malicious Atheift would make a great Advantage of what you fay, to difprove the Surey Demon. But I should be glad to hear how you wou'd come off, when they fhould tell you, they were fome of 'em preternatural (as Dr. R. or natural, as you) Diftempers, and therefore no Poffelfions: What occasion have you given to fuch nimble Difputants, to call in queftion the Truth of what our Bleffed Saviour did ? But be it as it will, I find no Popifh Errors, nor any thing tending that way yet; and in their Practice, what is it that tends that way? I will not fay it's a Poffeffion or Obfeffion; for to make you my Confessor (tho' I know what is faid of the diftinction) I cannot well understand what is meant by the one or the other; but I do believe the Devil is more bufie about all forts of Perfons, than ordinarily any body is aware or fenfible of; and that many more are truly Poffels'd by the Devil, than most People judge. And I do profess to believe, that there are few, if any, finful Lufts and Affections, but the Devil (as a fubtil, powerful, and malicious Spirit, by the permiffion of God, as a Tempter, and having influence upon the Body, or Fancy, and Animal Spirits) doth incline unto, in conjunction with our depraved Natures. And I do alfo believe, that there are but few (if any) Evils of Punishment, but these Evil Spirits (as God's Executioners) have a hand in them; and thefe things confidered, what did thefe Men, that you fo highly Charge, do, that tends towards Popery ?

Are they to be blam'd for their Fafting and Praying? They did believe he was Poffefs'd, and Mr. Jolly, I believe, did think there were the fame Symptoms of a Poffetilion, as in fome in the Gofpel, (for fuch a peremptory Affertion, I am not his Second, nor will I be fo peremptory as you, that it was not, upon your weak Arguments.) And upon his Supposition, what could be done otherwife? Our Saviour faith, Some Devils go not out but by Fafting and Prayer; I am fo Charitable as to think they prayed on this Supposition; and here was nothing that can be objected, unlefs, that they were erroneoufly Religious Offices that they performed, for want of the Bifhop's Licenfe.

Again, also they faw a Miserable Man, tormented in Body, and I fuppose they will not deny it to be a preternatural Diffemper; what hurt did they do in Fasting and Praying? Doth not St. James direct, That if any be afflicted, they must pray? And the Liturgy appoints Prayer in that case, and where was their fault, unless in not using the Prayers appointed? But I remember not any Religious Office for Possible for Possible of Observation.

But you go on in your Epift. Ded. This Trade which you learned C from the Papists, was designed to ensnare honest, and well-meaning, bus case People.

Good Sir, have you a Window into their Hearts? I thought that had been God's Omnifcient's Prerogative to know Defigns: Really if thefe Men had defign'd to enfnare any to their hurt, they were much to blame.

But what Lobb's-Pound was it they would enfnare 'em into? Was it to Preach and Pray the Devil out of Dick into these well-meaning People? Then I should be content to have their Mouths gaggel; Was it to get their Purses? Then by my confent, let themselves be noosed in the Purse-strings. Was it a design to draw them to their Party? Yes, that is it say you, to win those by Craft and Wiles to their Party.

If fo, I am content they fhould be fharply rebuked. But I know fome of them profess publickly to their Hearers, that they had rather gain one Soul to God, than Hundreds to their Opinions, in Controverted Matters that are not neceffary to Salvation.

But if after all, the Snare was out of Pity to deliver a Miferable Creature, which they thought tormented by Saran, and to fave his Body, and his, and others Souls, by the Word, and Prayer, and Fafting, then I would have faid, (go on and profper) and the Lord fucceed your Snare, that it may catch many, and refcue them out of the Devil's Snare, by whom too many are led Captive.

And I think, if your Party, and the Differenters Party, did join in Cordial Endeavours by Preaching and Praying, and other Gofpel Means, to difpoffers the Devil out of Mens Heads, Tongues, and Hearts, you would do more acceptable Service to God, more profitable Service to the Church of God, and more comfortable to your felves, than to entertain cauflers Prejudices one against another, and to give place to the Devil, in proud envious Wrath to bite and deyour one another; for how much foever you go about to excuse the Devil in this Affair, you cannot but know, that he doth poffers all the Children of Difobedience, Eph. 2. 2. And is there not a caufe to fulpect his Wiles, and ftand upon our Guard, and to refift the Devil?

In the fame transport you proceed, and Charge the Diffenters with Superflition, and Divisions from the Effablished Church. Superflition is a long word, and as English, it may possibly puzzle a Country Eellow, and yet ftir up his Fury against Diffenters, (and then the End is obtained) and he fall foul upon them, and fay, 'Ah, these Phanaticks are a wretched fort of People, worse than Rogues, and 'Rascais, heware of 'em, they are Superflitious. But what do you mean mean by this? 'Nay, I know not, but it's fome ill Boggard, (may be Dick's Blanket) 'it may well fright any body from having any 'thing to do with 'em.

But if fome by the help of a Dictionary by chance should find, that it is to be Wife above what is written, or Righteous above what is commanded, it would tempt an impartial Man to cry out, 'Oh ! What a Slander ! This is that very thing they are most averse to; I " have heard them fay they believe and think, that God is wifer than "Men, and knows better than they, what will please him best; and * this makes them fear to add to the Word of God, left they should · be Superstitious. And a pert Scotch Presbyter would fay, 'You * that Charge Diffenters with Superflition, cry Thief first, if fearched, will be found the Criminals. What! Diffenters Superflitious! Houl Mon, I trow you are the Men that are Righteous above what 'is commanded : Where do you find that God has commanded the Sign of the Crofs? Where do you find in God's Buke, that you * must kneel at receiving Bread and Wine at the Lord's Supper? But 'in your own Buke of Canons. Gi me God's Buke, and ta ye that 'now. Some blundering Fellow reading your Rubrick and Canons, would fay, 'You are many of you wifer than your own Kirk; for "where are you commanded to make your Obeifance towards the 'East, or before your Altar ? Where do you find your Whiftles com-"manded ? (Some fay, the Homilies you Subscribe have some hard Reflections upon them) where is your flanding up at the reading of the Pfalms; and Prieft reading one Verfe, and Clerk and Peo-'ple another ? Is this for Edification ? (when a great part of the Peo-· ple that cannot read, or have no Book, can hear nothing but a confuled Gabble) I think your own Church doth not command this "Racketing and Bouncing it about. And now who are Superfitious, if this be the meaning of the Word ? But if a Scholar should fearch what's the meaning of this Superstition in the Greek, and find it to fignifie fearing of Demons, or worthipping of Devils, it's known they are to far from that, that they Fast and Pray to disposses him of his Dominion over Men, as here they did.

But these Differenters are guilty of Divisions (fay you) from the Establish's Church. Really Sir, I tell you truly, if they be guilty of Divisions from the Church of God, Established by God's Law, they should e en go themselves for me; I would call after em to come back, but I would not go with them, nor follow 'em one foot.

But I think, if I should go to Billinge Chappel and not to Wigan, I believe it would be no Division from the Church Establish'd, if you mean by the Law of the Land: And if I lived nearer St. Ellin's C 2 Chappel,

A Vindication of the Disfenters

Chappel, and went thither ftill, I am within compass, tho' a Diffenter Preaches there; and you fay it's a Confectated Chappel, and they have it by Law, (and I hope that's no greater a Crime, than for you to have had an Unconfectated Chappel by force) and fo they divide not from a Church Eftablished by Law.

Ay, but you'll fay, They are Schifmaticks; this is another frightful Word. A Learned Man, no Diffenter, calls it an Ecclefiaftical Scare-crow. I have often heard the Proteftants excufe themfelves from being Schifmaticks from the Church of Rome, becaufe that Church requires as Terms of Communion, things doubtful, unlawful, and finful, and retort upon them, that they are Schifmaticks for fo doing: Ay, but Diffenters cannot by Arguments justifie their Divisions. Now fome of the most Charitable of them fay, they divide not from the Church Eftablished, they do frequently join with them in their Prayers, and they believe the DoStrine of the Church in the 39 Articles, and Homilies; and all of them fay, their Affemblies are Eftablish'd Churches: And if you will walk a little afide with me, I'll tell you as a Friend, if you'll not be angry, what Reafons fome of 'em give, why they cannot in all things conform to the Difcipline and Worthip according to your Canons and Liturgy.

(1.) Some of them cannot for their Life, much lefs for Preferment, think it lawful for any body to command Things in the Worfhip of God, of the fame Nature, Ufe, Significancy, and End, with God's own Appointments, and make them neceffary Terms of Communion, when there's no difference, but God commands the one, and Men the other; fo they fay, the Crofs about Baptifm is fuch a Humane Sacrament. To deal plainly with you, I have read all I can meet with about this, and I am fo weak I cannot be fatisfy'd; and I fhould think it hard for this to be accounted a Schifmatick, and Excommunicated.

(2.) Some of these whom I dare not judge, but to be as truly Good and Pious as you and I, are offended at kneeling in receiving the Bread and Wine in the Lord's Supper. I think I can answer their Arguments, but I should be loth to see them have their Brains dash'd out, because in that thing they cannot be fatisfy'd with what doth fatisfie you and me; and tho' I should think them very unjustly Censorious, if they should account us Idolaters for it; yet if they modeftly differ in their Opinion, I would not brand them as Schifmaticks, if they went to their own Meeting-places, to enjoy their Freedom. If Peter will join with the Circumcifed, and Paul with the Uncircumcis'd, I would not blame them, if they be not Uncharitable ble one to another. I am fot the Apostles Canons, Rom. 14. And I know of none that have Authority to alter them.

But I'll tell you one thing in your Ear, which I cannot tell how to anfwer, and if you can I'll thank you; fome of them think it hard, that for doing, or endeavouring to do, as the Apoftles did at the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, they thould be peremptorily deny d that Ordinance, (and Oh ftrange! Some Great Ones in the Church have undertaken to prove it Charity to exclude them) when by the fame reafon, if Chrift's Difciples were now on Earth, and did as they did, even in the prefence, and with the approbation of their Mafter, they muft be Excommunicated; and thus they fay, if they err, it's with good Company, and fo they are cauflefly driven away from the Communion of the Church of England.

(3.) Some of them fay, the impofing of Terms of Communion, and tying Men to their Form of Worlhip, is an Invalion of God's Prerogative. Impeaching his Wildom, as if Men knew better than himfelf, what Service were fittelf for him: And that it's an ulurping of Authority to make Laws for him to obey, with an annexed Penalty, (1.) On him; for he thall either take that Worlhip which they have compoled for him, or he thall have none; fo you will be first pleafed, and then He, (with Reverence be it fpoken) thall have what pleafes you, or none at all by your good will, or ill will rather: And another Penalty annexed, (2.) On Men; for they thall either fo ferve him, or be punithed; fo God and Men muft have your Allowance and Approbation, or elfe he thall have no Worthip, or they punithed for doing him Service.

(4.) Some of em think it no lefs than Sacriledge, to transfer the Ends of God's Sacraments, and to attribute them to their own; they think we are Baptized in Token hereafter, we fhall not be afhamed to profefs the Faith of Chrift, & c. and that Baptifm is the honourable Badge, whereby the Infant is Dedicated to the Service of him that Died on the Crofs, and fhould not be attributed to the Sign of the Crofs : You will find a great many more Arguments in forme Books of Differters. See Baxter's English Nonconformity.

But I doubt you fcorn to look into them, your Prejudice feems to be fo great; and it's not for your Intereft, for poffibly it might ftartle your Conficience a little, and difturb your Confidence and Repofe, to find more in them, than you ever expected from fuch diminitive Creatures. Mr. Jeans, the great School-Divine, confident when young, writ for the Ceremonics of the Church of England no contemptible Book; but after he grew a little older, and that Controverfie began to be more ftrictly inquired into, he very honeftly confeeffes feffes his Rafhness to the World, and as a Testimony of his Repentance, writes an Answer to his own Book; but there are many more dubious things required in the new Conformity than in the old.

Yet still you, my Friend, join the two Ps, and here former and latter, and new and old juggle of the Differences and Puritans; and now if the World would know what this Juggle is, it's their casting out Devils.

Some may be out of Curiofity would know, who these Devils are, that so much pains is taken to vindicate their Innocency.

They fay in the Days of old they were pure and holy Spirits, that they were amongst the Holy Angels, but affecting to be greater, they were caft out of Heaven, and now are a fort of Vagabonds that walk to and fro, up and down the Earth, being enraged against God, and all Goodnefs, and all good Men, they feek whom they may devour ; the Chief of them is call'd Beelzebub, and fometimes Abaddon, and Apollyon, Satan, (you Mr. Taylor are Book-learned, and can tell the meaning) and is compared to a Roaring Lion, and an old cunning Serpent : He is a Liar, and the Father of Lies : He is a Standerer, Informer, and an Accufer of the Brethren; (it may be this is it that procures him a favourable excuse with some Folks) and he is a Murderer; and these Devils are in Combination, to draw Souls after 'em, ind ceafe not to tempt every body to Sin, (only God hath them in Chains) and their whole Bufinefs is to Torment Bodies, and Damn Souls; and after wicked Men have been held in their Drudgery a while in this World, they lead 'em in Triumph to Hell, where they Torment them with Fire and Brimftone for Ever and Ever.

And what did these Differing Puritannical Knaves do? Why they endeavoured by Fasting and Prayer to drive away these Devils, and to prevent them doing Mischief to Bodies and Souls of their Neighbours.

Is this that which makes all this noife? Surely they were Charitable Men; not like the two hard-hearted Black-coats, the Prieft and Levite that paffed by the poor Man that had fallen among Thieves, but like the good Samaritan, Luke 10. 30, 31, 32. Ay, but thefe Men pray'd for them that were not Poffels'd, they were but Cheats and Diftempers: But did they know them to be Cheats? No, Mr. Taylor will vouch for them, they were Fools, the Papifts were the Cheats, and they were Underling Slaves and Tools, ignorantly I'll warrant you; yes, they had not fuch deep Noddles as to find out the Cheat; why then truly they might in this thing be innocent Fools, but not rafeally Knaves; however, I have heard it faid, It's better better to give to two or three Canting, Cheating Beggars, than deny Charity to all, becaufe fome deferve it not; and I think it were better to pray for all in Diftrefs, tho' it's pollable fome of 'em may have finned against the Holy Ghost, if we know it not, for then our Prayers will teturn into our own Bosons.

And now comes a big-belly'd Story, that will convince all of the Knavery and Foolery of these Puritans and Differents, and their Juggle; a fearful Story of one Darrell a Devil-monger, that purged out Seven Devils at a time out of Seven Women, \mathcal{O}_c .

'Thefe Puritans are odd Fellows, thefe Tools of the Papifls, they. 'are apt Schollars, and come pretty near their Mafters, tho they 'cannot reach them: One of themfelves, I mean a Papifl, tells a 'Merry Story of an Exorcift, who exercifing his Art, pretended to 'difcover Fifteen Devils in one Perfon Poffels'd, and refolving to dif-'lodge them, he falls to work, and after fome time being asked 'what he had done, made anfwer, he had Conjured out the one 'half, this was Seven and a half; one half it feems more than Dan-'rell the Putitan. This jocofe Papift made a Jeft of his, but you, Mr. T. make a ferious Matter of yours.

You remember, Mr. T. I told you before, I am not anfwerable for the Surey Demoniack, nor will I vindicate Mr. Darrell, but give me leave to make fome Obfervations upon the Story, as it is in your Book.

(1.) The Relator of this Story is accufed by the Learned Bifhop When, as a partial and fabulous Historian, and that Book of Dr. Heylin's, is a Farce of Diabolical Stories, and Malignant, Malicious Reflections upon all Parties; and few Worthies, that were not Papifis or Arminians, efcaped his Cenfures: I have heard it was this Book, or another fuch of his, that helpt to pervert the fate Dutchels of 7. 12 and I think I heard a Nobleman fay, She commended that Book to him, doubtlefs to Cure him of the Northern Herefie, Protestantifm (2.) I observe from you that it must be a Presbyterian Juggle, for a Book of his Disposselling was writ by one Jeffe Bee, a Religious fad Liar, (really he was a fad one indeed, if he gain'd the Whetftone from Dr. Heylin) and feen and allow'd by Mr. Hillerfram: It must needs be a Presbyterian Juggle then, but it was Contracted by one Denifon a Country Minifter, then why not a Church of E's Juggle? Ay, I'll warrant this Denifon was fome Trimmer. (3.) One Summers accuses himself and Darrell to have acted by Confederacy, &c. fo the Juggle is out.

But fome Didymus may pollibly not believe this Relation, and would would give fome Reafons for his unbelief, befides the fufpected Veracity of the Historian, and the Partiality of fome others.

Mr. T. you know how Zealous fome Men have been to turn a Popifh Plot upon the Presbyterians, and how dextroufly it was done, fome Men remember, others felt: And as there wanted not Knaves to invent, and Knights of the Poft to Swear it, fo there wanted not Fools to believe it; and fome pretended to believe it, who knew well enough it was not fo: I may venture to guefs what these Unbelievers will fay, why they fuspect the truth of that Story.

(2.) Because it was greatly envy'd, that such a Man should have done that Feat; so faith a Reverend Man of the Church of England, It raised no small Envy from the Gainsayers; Bishop Hall's Invisible World, p. 997. 3d Vol. Printed 1662.

(3.) Because his Friends and Followers inveighed against the Judgment and Judges that Cenfured him, and we know who fate in the Saddle.

(4.) Becaufe it's more likely, that one or two of a few might be frighted into, or practized upon, to believe a Cheat, than that fo many unbyaffed Gentlemen should pervert Judgment.

(5.) Becaufe one great and good Man gives a very good Character of Darrell, his words are thefe, upon the ground of this Scripture, Jam. 4.7. 'It was (as my felf was Witnefs) that in our 'Age, Mr. Darrell, a Godly and Zealous Preacher, undertook, and ' (accordingly thro' the Bleifling of God upon his Faithful Devotion) ' perform'd those Famous Ejectments of Evil Spirits, both at Nor-'tingham and in Lancashire, which exercised the Prefs, and raised no ' finall Envy from the Gainfavers. Ibid. Bilhop Jos. Hall. But the Boy confess'd that he had acted by Confederacy.

(6.) They possibly think the Devil might, by the permission of God, re-enter, as Luke 11. 24, 25. &c. or as Simon Magus, returned to his Conjuring again, after he Believ'd and was Baptized : And fo Dugdale denies now. what he formerly affirmed; and possibly the Devil may as truly possible him now as before; and what invisible Agents might be behind the Curtain, and unknown Reasons might move both of them, is only to be guess'd. I will not Swear, Sir, that these Reasons can acquit Darrell; but when all comes to all, I think you are very uncharitable and unjust in Charging the whole Party of Differences.

Now, Sir, for a Diversion, Ill tell you a true Story, and a very fad one too, to answer your Story.

There was upon a time one W. C. a Church of E. Prieft, a very Remarkable Man, for he had one part of his Hair, upon, or about the Crown of his Head, of a different Colour from the reft of his Hair, but he was more Remarkable for a train of Villanous Pra-Etices, for feveral Years in the W. and E. parts of this Kingdom; you might have heard of him long fince from the Cobler of Glocefter. This Gusman, after he had play'd his Pranks fome Years, in places more diftant from his own Country, which was Lancashire, he fettles in Leicestersbire, where, after a little while, he fell to acting fuch Villanies himfelf, and advifing others, as are not fit to be named ; (they may be heard of about Ashby de La Zouch) and a place called Lockington, fome Five or Six Miles beyond Derby, he became fo Notorious, that at a Vifitation (whether Metropolitical or Diocefan, I know not) he was defervedly Sufpended, upon which he came and fculked for a time in this County, amongst his Relations; but by degrees he took Courage, and crept out, and now and then Preached : Now upon the coming out of the Act of Parliament for Liberty to Differenters, a Meeting was fet up in the Parish of M. near a publick Chappel, and the Minister of the Meeting was generally approved of by Perfons of all Perfwafions; yea, fome of the higheft Conformifts in the Neighbourhood offered to join with the Diffenters, if they could procure the Chappel for him to Preach in, which was endeavoured, but in vain; fo a private place was fixed upon. Now this W.C. being a Man of great Natural Parts, and confiderable Learning, but greater Impudence, was thought a fit Man to confront the Differenters Meeting, and was introduced into that Chappel, and greatly applauded by his Party; here he continued fome time (tho' I never heard his Sufpenfion was taken off) but he could not live long, but he must be like himself; he got his Maid with Child, and when near her time, carries her away to Kirkham, you know the place, and, I believe, can tell the Circumstances of his Hypocritical Carriage, and Falfe Pretences, too long to relate; there he leaves his Wench, and in the mean time, plays Tricks with an Old Poor Woman he took into his Houfe inftead of his Whore: I never heard he did Penance for this; it may be he Commuted, pro dolor ! But he after Marry'd the Woman, and now they wipe their Mouths, and he is Rectus in Curia: But not long after comes the Creditors and Bayliffs, they feize him, he finds Bail; and now to his Wits again, and forgeth Writings; but his Genius deceives him, he's difcover-D ed.

ed. But he hath one Trick more, not fo black as the other; he enters himfelf Prisoner in the King's-Bench, and now he is as fafe as a Moufe in a Mill, (a little patience, Mr. T. and Ill contract) he thumps the Pulpit against Differents, and grows fo Famous, that he is fought for to accept a better Place, (where he might do better Service, to drain a more numerous Conventicle, tho' he had not the expected Success here) a Place of the Bishop of C's own Gift: An Honeft, Pious, but Weak Man, must avoid (tho Miferable Poor) to make way for this Rakeshame; thither he ascends, and there lives a while, and Dies. Now, Mr. T. I have heard you knew of fome of these Villanies; you are the Bishop's Curate at Wigan; were you Faithful to your Lord, to tell him what you heard? I know this Reverend Person to be fo Pious and Good a Man, that he would never have conniv'd at fuch a Villain, much lefs have Collated him to fuch a Place, if he had known fuch things. And yet fince that Place being vacant, I hear another Renegado Scotchman, vomited out of the Society of Differents for Fornication, (tho' he hath fince Marry'd the Woman) and fome other vile things, having been a Vagabond, fince his Cenfure, and (where not known) playing the Religious Hypocrite amongst Diffenters, having obtain'd Imposition of Hands of the Bilhop of C. (as is faid) is fent to the fame place.

Now, Sir, think you this Man had Letters Teftimonial according to Can. 35? Hath he done Penance for his Fornication? Or hath he Commuted ? pudet hac, & c. Or hath Imposition of Hands explated his Crime? Or is his Conformity a fufficient Atonement? Tell. it not in Gath; is every body Faithful as they ought to be to that good Man. that I believe would rather his Hand should wither, than knowingly to lay it on such Impudent Wretches? There is another Scotchman in pickle, if not already admitted, that was fain to run his Countrey for Forgery.

Now Sir, I dare not be fo unjust, as to impute these things to the Party of Conformists, God forbid; let the guilt fall upon the Heads of the Betrayers of the Trust God and Men have committed to them. But let the Church of E. and her Faithful Pastors, be Innocent and Bleffed.

Now, good Sir, are not our worthy Bifhops to be pity'd, that they muft fee with others Eyes, and hear with others Ears; and are too often impos'd upon by the Partiality, or at beft, Carelefnefs of fuch, as they (it may be, too eafily) give Credit to, (for Charity thinks no evil) to the Scandal of the Church? And were it not to be wifh'd, that Dioceffes might be reduced to narrower Bounds, that the Reverend Bifhops might be better able to infpect their Curates and and Flocks? For it's fcarce poffible but thefe Miftakes will be, till all Minifters be as honeft as they ought, or Dioceffes fmaller. And will not Diffenters fay, (if it were for nothing elfe) we dare not Conform, for we muft Subfcribe all and every thing contained and prefcrib'd, \mathfrak{Sc} . and that we will not endeavour any Alteration of Government in Church, \mathfrak{Sc} .

For my part, I can Charitably lay my Fingers on many faults in both Parties, and let them that are without, caft the first Stone; but I think it hard, yea, unjuft, to fall foul on a whole Tribe for the fault of a few, unless they justifie the faults of those few. Yet fome Phanaticks will fay, It's the fault of the Church of E's Constitution; but fo will not I; but there are hot spurs on both fides, that are the Make-baits, and hinder the Union of Sober, Serious, Moderate Men. I like not Gangrene Edwards, nor Brick-maker Long, nor the Director of the Inferior Clergy, Trufty Hodge, I can tell how to excuse many things that some Diffenters Charge upon the C. of E. and would not impute the Crimes of a few upon all; yet I am extreamly puzzled, and know not what to think or fay, of a general practice of praying in the late Reign, That it may please thee to keep and strengthen in the true worshipping of thee in Righteoussards, and Holiness of Life, thy Servant our most Gracious King and Governour.

Now was not his Worthip Idolatrous? And did they pray that he might be kept and ftrengthened in his Idolatrous Worfhip? If they meant as they read, and thought it not Idolatry, will a Phanatick fay, Then let the two P's hereafter be Papifts and Protestants of the C. of E. And, (fome think ftrange how this Petition came to be fo devoutly used, in the late Reign, by the Church of E.) if they meant as they faid, then return to your Mother; will the Papift Tay; if they meant not as they faid, what horrid Prophanenefs, and audacious Wickednefs, (will the Diffenters fay) to ask upon their Knees that of Almighty God, which they would not have him grant; God is not mocked. If the Diffenters flould thro' inadvertency, in a conceived Prayer, be guilty of fuch Blafphemy, what a noife fhould we have heard of it with both Ears; as of that Expreffion you inftance in your Preface, and you refer to the Surey Dem. p. 20. the words are, I am fure if the Holy Spirit and our Hearts, do once tell their mind to the Father for thy going hence, &c. that then then canft flay no longer there; you fay, what doth it want of Blafphemy ? Really if this had been all Mr. C's Faults, a Charitable Man might eafily help him out of the Sudds; with all the Spectacles I have, I cannot find where the Blafphemy lyes; Dr. Featly, I think, was no Diffenter, and you may poffibly find your miftake, D 2 111 in his Exposition of that place ; to him I refer you, in his Notes in the Annotations, call'd, The Affemblies; it may be he also was a Trimmer. But this was extempore, and that is enough to Excommunicate fuch extempore Expressions. But truly, my Friend, Ill again make you my Confessor, that I was often forced from my Knees in fome Diftraction, and Grief, when I heard that Petition for K. J. (a profeft Papift) offered up with Hands lift up to the Searcher of Hearts by the Minister, and the People blindfoldly following their Leader, when both should have minded their Prayers better, especially the Spiritual Guides. But it's remembred by fome yet alive, how many Hundreds of Ministers in 1662. did in like manner flock to Chefter in this Diocefs, and others in other Places, to make their Subscriptions to they knew not what, hap at a venture, to fave their own Bacon; for the Book they were to Subfcribe, came not down till Aug. 24. was paft, before which Day they must do it, or elfe die in Law from their Places; one of the P's implicite Faith must folve their Credit, or else I cannot. But it was not fit to lofe a good Living for a Phanatick Scruple. Some are as mute as a Moufe in a Cheefe, at the fame Petition now under King William; tho' I have heard fome C. of E. Men wonder, why they fhould fome of them Swear to K. W. that are filent when they fhou'd Pray for him, tho' loud enough at other Petitions.

Sir, there is one paffage in your Book, that feems a Myflery to you, for you do mistake your felf about it : The Jaundice, they fay, will infect the Eyes, and make every thing feem yellow; now what your Diftemper may be, I know not, (Dr. R. it may be, doth) but every thing that Diffenters do or fay, is black in your Eyes: It's in your Book, p. 71. It feems these diminitive Slaves, the Diffenters, are become Pluralists; really, if so, I'll never excuse them from Ambition, and Pride, or Covetoufnefs, nor from being Self-condemned; (it's well they are not guilty of Simony, as fome of the Ministers of the C. of E. Charge one another: When a Man is hunger-bitten for a good Place, his Neighbours Parfonage would be a pleafant Morfel; but they fay, a Hare is dry Meat) the Diffenters have craving Stomachs as well as you, but not fo varacious as fome, that can fwallow Steeple after Steeple, and never choak at it, not fo much as Dicky, when he vomited great Stones, p. 41. Here's a Miracle for you Diffenters, greater than Dicky's Knife in his Mouth. Pray, Sir, excufe the Diversion, for I am tyred with Writing; and yet I'll unriddle the Diffenters Pluralities.

en saive for work (1.) One

(1.) One Man's having feveral Recorded Places, is not like your many Churches, it may be 20 or an 100 Miles diftant one from another; but it's for the Convenience of the fame People and Congregation, that fome of them may have lefs way to go one Day, and others another Day.

(2.) Yet there's another greater Mystery in it; there are a fort of Ecclefiastical Officers, mentioned Can. 138. these are hungry Beafts of prey, that fometimes devoured Widows Houfes, but it may be, made no fort of Prayers (and therefore be fure were no Diffenters) unlefs Comminations and Exectations; they were quick-fighted Creatures, and Iharp-toothed, and very Sagacious; they could finell a Conventicle at any reafonable diftance, and could as dextroufly Convict them before Favourable Judges. Some of these Officers smelt a Conventicle in Cheshire, and were so quickfighted, that they faid, They spyed a Man there that had been dead above two Years, and a Woman that was brought to Bed the Day before. But for all this, they were accounted as boni & legales testes, and the Conventicle was Sworn, proved, and none must escape their Talons, but it may be those that had not Flesh on their Bones, but others must pay for them, and it may be for the Dead Man for nonest inventus, and for the Poor Woman in Bed. OT CITEREN ARE TO

You'll ask me, what's all this to plurality of Places? I'll tell you as a Friend, thefe Creatures above-mentioned, tho' grown old, and have loft their Teeth, yet they have as good a Smell as ever, and a greater Appetite; for they have been long hunger-bitten, and, believe it, they have hard Gums; and the only way to fecure the poor innocent Sheep and Lambs from their Guts, is the Guard of a Recorded Houfe: Once of late they were fo Sagacious, that a Man prefuming to call his Neighbours to his Houfe to hear a Sermon, (intending to have it Recorded at the Seffions, which was not long to) these old Bears or Foxes (but I think they are amphibious Creatures, fomething of both, may be fome of them Lions Providers) fell upon the People, as if they had bred new Teeth. And any one that hath a mind to know what became of these People, may know in or near the Parish of Flixon, I think in Lancafbire, near Cheshire; the hungry Creatures spared them not, they feared it might be their laft bit. Now the Diffenters have a mind fometimes to Fast and Pray together, and (you'll believe this) fometimes to Praife God, and Feast and Rejoice together, as there is occasion of Sorrow or Joy, James 5. 13. and also fometimes to confer together about Soul-concerns; and they have no mind to pay 201. for the Place, and 5 s. a-piece, they know not to what use, (it's (it's better fav'd than ill fpent) and, it may be, 201. more for Preaching, tho' they only Pray, and Preach not. I have fometimes heard Reading called Preaching, and Ill not fay it is not, but I never heard Praying call'd Preaching, till of late Days, and fo it paft, and down with your Duft; Appeal if you will, we fhall get double to feast our felves and the Jury, as tome body faid in the Days of Tore; now Diffenters have no mind to thew them fuch Sport again; and now the Myftery of Pluralities amongft Diffenters is unriddled.

Sir, I have before told you, I am no ways concerned in the Surey Dem. and it was always fufpected by me as a Cheat; and I was for much difpleafed at the Book, that I thought the Money would be ill fpent if I bought it, and therefore fpared it for better ufes : I never read it but once, and curforily, and thought that time ill fpent ; and for your Book, I spared also that Money; but hearing a great noife of it, I borrow'd it, and looking over your Epiftle, here and there a paffage I found prefently, (contrary to the Opinion I always had of you) that your defign was to blacken the whole Party of Diffenters, and to render them odious. I was aftonish'd to hear you Charge them with Superfition and Schifm, and what not? Thought I, it's pity a whole Tribe fhould be thus used, for the fake of two or three indifcreet Perfons, and therefore I did refolve to endeavour the Vindication of the generality of that fort of People; and I think I know them better than you, or elfe you would have spared your almost infinite number of Sarcasms, and unjust Reflections : And T do verily believe, fuch bitter Invectives against that Sober Party, is the Devil's Game; yea, and fuch Gamefters are the Papifts Tools, to caft Bones of Contention amongst them that profess the fame Faith, in opposition to their Idolatry a to soat short babaoast a

And I am grieved at the Hot-fpurs, and fiery Zealots, and Bigots of both Parties of Conformifts and Nonconformifts, who do unfpeakable Prejudice (by their unchriftian and uncharitable Preaching and Wniting) to the Common Caufe of Chriftianity, in break ing the Bond of Love, and Peace, and Concord. Alas! What's become of the Spirit of Meeknet's and Moderation? But to return to your Book, I found fome paffages relating to the Informations, and was griev d that Mr. C. and Mr. J. (as I thought upon firft reading) had expos'd themfelves, therefore I was refolved to read again what you had offered against them; and to deal truly with you, I found fo many weak, impertinent Evafions, fo many malicious, pitefni, feandalous Reflections, 18 many feurillous, foul Names, given to Differents, fuch flender Proofs of what you Charge them with, formany more inflances of Infincerity that you Charge them with with, (and they are pretty many, and often repeated four or five times in a Page, p. 75.) fuch flighty and feeble Anfwers, and yet confident Triumphs without caule, that I must needs fay, that if I had not read again, I had been impos'd upon, and my former Prejudice against the thing and them, would have been increased. But the'I will not fay I am Profelyted to their Party, yet verily I do more hefitate than I did; for Railing, and putting the worft Conftructions that can be contrived upon Expressions, and fometimes fuch as you cannot pollibly but believe are belides their Intentions, and ill Characters on Perfons, are no infoluble Arguments, but give fufpicion of a bad Caufe, that cannot be supported but by fuch ill Arts; and univerfal Conclusions from particular Premifes, are no Demonstrations; Briars and Thoms are but a weak Fence, they may prick the Hands a little, but with a good pair of Mittens you may put them by without any hurt. An angry Man in pathon may fpeak and write that which may be no honour to his Caufe; give me leave to inflance in one or two of your Arguments, which in my Apprehention are Crazy.

Caffing mine Eye on p. 58. I find you are about a trial of Skill to find out a Combination, but when you come to prove it, you difcover your Ignorance to the Papifts, and your defperate Malice towards Diffenters; will not Dr. Hesketh and Penket, two Popifh Priefts, laugh in their Sleeves to hear you fo weakly argue, That it must needs be a Popifu Plot, for here's a Popifu diffinition : O yes, come hither, here's the Brat's own Father, the Features difcover him, he is Begotten of the Whore of Babylon, and the Man of Sin was his Father ? When as you need not go fo far as Rome, you may find the Mother, or Mother's Nurfe, nearer home, in the 72 Can. and who is the Father III leave to you, Mr. T. for you have as good a Talent of difcovering Secrets, as the Demoniack himfelf had; you have a good finell T perceive, but it's better far off than nearer home: Your own Mother, I trow, will con you no thanks for laying her Child at another's Door, as if the had play'd the Harlot.

(2.) Here comes your desperate Malice towards Differenters, yet under pretence of acquitting them of the Combination; really it was kindly done to acquit them of the Knavery; but it's not, I perceive, your Kindness, but their own Ignorance; These little diminitive Slaves could not answer the scraps of Dicky's Latine: Now, my good Friend, I with for your own Credit's fake, you had left this out of your Book; for as for Mr. C: tho' he be fomething younger than you, yet as fome impartial Folks think, he would venture to Cap with you in Philology, Lat. and Gr. great an Advantage under your Learned Father, an Able Schoolmaster, and a Nonconforming Divine, unless you learned as little from him in Humanity as Divinity; and it's thought he would Chop Logick with you alfo. And for the other two, whom you in Scorn, call the one Padagogue, and the other Academick, I cannot think your felf believe them fo unlearned; if you do, it sa difparagement to your Judgment; if you do not, it's a certain Argument of your Partiality and Infincerity: And because your Argument to prove them fo, is fo thin, that nothing but Malice would ever have produced it, and nothing but Ignorance and Malice will believe it; Could you thus write, and thus read, without a fecret Rebuke out of your own Breaft? Must fuch Grave, and, I'll venture to fay, Learned Men as these two, come under your Ferula? Is it for your Reputation to be thus Wife in your own Conceit? You might have call'd the one an Arch-padagogue, and the other is above your Contempt, and one would think, your Envy alfo. But let us try whether you have better fuccefs in your Argument, to prove, That if Dicky was a Demoniack, their Prayers did not benefit bim; for, (1.) He had his Fits after their praying for him, therefore their Prayers did bim no good, p. 57. Are you in earnest, Mr. Taylor? Is your Argument Conclusive ? Do you think their Fasting and Prayers did him no Benefit ? I appeal to your felf, whether this be a good Argument, that he had no Benefit by them? Do not you fometimes fee caufe to pray for fair Weather ? It may be it comes not of a confiderable time after, are these Prayers in vain? I hope you will not fay fo; but fome time after fair Weather comes; may not those Prayers you put up (a Month fuppose before) be then answered ? You are Curate at Wigan, and I suppose you visit the Sick, and pray for their Relief; it may be their Sickness is more violent for a time, had they no Benefit by your Prayers, becaufe they were worfe after, and did not find eafe just in the nick of time, when praying? Really if you blufh not at fuch an Argument, I am forry you fhould argue fo weakly.

I hope you are a better Divine, than to think that all Prayers are loft, that do not immediately, in that inftant, bring down the Bleffing pray'd for; but if you can flur your Ignorant Readers, and your Learned Dr. R. into a belief, that these Diffenters Prayers were in vain, you have your end. Let your Argument be as weak as your Dr. R's Argument; just fuch another, it was Preternatural, therefore not Diabolical; good Wits jump.

But fome Country Fellow that reads Books, may poffibly meet with one call'd, The Return of Prayers, and there hell find, that Prayers may be answered a long time after they are prayed, and I hope you'll not deny it; but then your Argument is lost.

But how do you know that they had left Fafting and Praying for him? Why, they had not been at Surey after the 20th of Feb. and he had his Fits till March 25. but they tell you they kept a Fast for him March 24. How do you an fiver this? Very fatisfactorily. The Narrator bath the Impudence to pretend it, and Dicky knew nothing of it; I doubt this is one of their sanstify'd Lies. Is this the Language of a Son of the C. of E. and a Prieft too? I am troubled you thould be fo undutiful to your Mother, I will answer for her, the never taught you thus, but to keep your Tongue from Evil-fpeaking, Lying and Slandering; but I doubt the Lie will be found with you; and I doubt this is one of your unfanctify'd Slanders; verily you deferve to be rebuked for thus difobeving your Mother: But Dicky knew nothing of it ; but might they not pray for him, and he know nothing of it? I hope they pray for you, I am fure I know one that doth, tho' you know nothing of it, and will do, whether you care for it or no. Ay, but these Prayers are not worth a Button, for it's natural for Diffenters to abuse Sacred Forms of Worship, if they chance but to touch them : Here's indeed a Form of Worthip, but how was it abus'd? Mr. C. design'd to turn into Metre that ancient Doxology, and hath done it awkmardly; is this to abufe it, becaufe he turns it into Metre? Why then doth the Church of Engl. turn it into Metre? But he hath done it ankwardly; but whatever blame Mr. C. may bear for that, how doth this prove it natural for Differenters to abufe Sacred Forms ? I want your Spectacles, or Dr. R's Urinal, to find out this their Natural Diffemper.

Again, p. 32. They were Erroneously Religious Offices that they perform'd for him, which he found no benefit at all by; what were these Offices? Were they not Fasting and Prayer? If you exclude Fasting from being Erroneously Religious Worship, I believe Diffenters will not much quarrel with you; but that Prayers should be accounted among the Erroneously Religious Offices, will not found well in Christian Ears: What was it that made it Erroneously fo? Was it because it was their Prayers? Or was it because it was not a Form of Prayer? Or not Prayers of the Church, as some call them? But then where should they find such an Office, for such as are Posfessd or Obsess'd? It may be where the Office of Confecrating Churches and Chappels is. I cannot Divine what should make their Prayers Erroneously Religious, unless it was because in a Barn;

A Vindication of the Diffenters

I must at last leave it to you to unfold the Riddle. But there's one Infinuation, I think, had been better left out, for your own fike, p. 62. viz. The Neighbourhood affirm, that there never was fuch Whoring heard of, as whilt the Ministers keps up their Meetings, they fearce being able to go into the Fields, but they found Min and Women trad ng almost under every Hedge; had this been true, you wou'd have prov d it by inflances; but by this may be guess'd what fort of People you traded with for Informations, and what Credit is to be given to fuch false Tongues.

What never fuch Whoring heard of? Yes, Mr. T. fome fuch People as you have your Information from, in the Primitive Times Acc is d the Christians, when they Conventicled in the Night, That they put out their Candles, and fell to your trading promifcuoufly: The Lord forgive Enemies, Perfecutors, Slanderers, and turn their Hearts to this I hope you'll fay Amen, is not Erroneously Religious Worthip: But suppose there had been Miscarriage, as I hope there was not, must their Meetings, Fastings, Praying and Preaching, be the cause of it? Yes, when Tenterden Steeple is the cause of Goodmin Sands.

And is not this made out fo to be in Mr. Ray's Book of Proverbs, or fomewhere elfe, by alledging, That the Money that fould have gone to the Maintenance of the Banks of Earl Goodwin's Land, was converted to the Edifying, or Repairing of Tenterden Steeple?

But yet once more, let's try whether any thing can be made of his Fits being as violent as ever, after they had pray'd, even his laft Fit; and what of all this? Must it needs be no Devil, forced out by God, upon Fafting and Prayer? Do you think the Devil grows weaker and weaker by degrees? Doth he go out by quarters and halves, as the Merry Papift's Story of the Exorcift, which you have before? What! Now a Leg, then an Arm, then a Thigh, and at last cast comes the Head, and all the whole Devil? rifum tenealis? But if the Credulous fhould yet venture to believe that here was a Demoniack, they would retort the Argument, and fay, It could not be a preternatural Diffemper, that was Cured at hrif daih : Pray ask your Ingenious Dr. R. whether a preternatural Diffemper, that had continued fo long, could be Cured at first Dofe? Should not his Diftemper and Fits have left him by degrees, as in Fits of an Ague, and all other Diftempers, whether Chronical or Acute ? But I am befide my Province, bur, I hope, for once your Dr. R. will excufe me for medling in his Faculty, and not inform against me for having no Diploma, becaufe he once must be medling in Divinity. But I. T. Chew carries the Bell, for he gave Dicky a Dofe March the 25th, and and from that Day forward, he was as found as a Trout. But now I think on't, it may be Dr. Chew had got that Pouder, the fmell of which drives away Devils, e'en as fure as Holy-water; and it may be he had it from you, Mr. T. if he was but at Prayers in the Church the four last Days of September, and four first Days of Octo-And I hope you'll fand to what you teach to be believ'd and ber. practifed, for I am confident you have declared your Affent and Confent, to what's contain'd in, and prefcrib'd by, &c. but then the Mischief is, the Diffenters will fay, Dicky's Devil might be Afmodeus, and the Angel Raphael, the Son of Ananias the Great, (now I thought Angels were not Begotten of Men) might bring Dr. Chew. fome of the Heart and Liver of Tobias's Fifh, or fend it by Toby's. Dog, that might do the knack in a trice; and if you fay that Book is Apocryphal, yet I hope you'll not deny, but it is either the pure Word of God, or that which is agreeable to the fame, or elfe you do again reproach your Mother, that hath affirmed it, and made you to Subscribe to it as fuch; but I'll not Swear for all this, that. there was a Surey Demon. but I fay, you are grievoully put to it to prove a Survey Impostor. You will excuse the Differents from being Original Authors, p. 59. for they have not Wit and Learing; and you acquit the Devil, becaufe he hath Learning more than they, and was too hard for them, and sett them. They, poor Sneaks, would not add to what Dicky faid in Latine and Greek, and for this they are Charged with Ignorance; and if they had done it, they had deferv'd the Name of Unfanctify'd Liars, and be fure they must have heard on't; but the Devil is excus'd, for a Reafon you have, p. 59. nov smith 1 nieroid

But I am quite tired out with reading your Impertinencies; I give you all the Advantage imaginable, and take things as you represent them; for I have not the Surey Demon. nor have read in it, fince yours came forth; for indeed my defign was not to meddle about Matters of Fact, but only to thew how unchriftian and unchatitable a thing it is, to impeach the whole Body of the Differenters, for a militake (if it prove a militake) of a few Perfons, who, as you confefs, were ignorantly and innocently drawn in, to the belief of a thing, that's no Treafon, nor Herefie, nor can be of any Fatal Confequence to Religion or Godlinets. of Instantiv bal

TY Letter hath fivelled beyond my first Intention, yet I forced I my felf to keep within Bounds; finding fo many things culpable in your Book more than I fufpected, I have omitted many things that are Perfonal and Particular, (wherein I think you have miftaken) that I might as much as poffible, keep my felf from Engaging in the Matter, wherein I had, all along the Transaction, expreffed my Diflatisfaction, as I had occafion.

Now, Mr. T. if in fome Paffages I may appear fomething tart upon you, yet I think I have avoided ill Names; but if any unbecoming words have over-flipt me, which now I remember not, (for my Letter was fent away in hafte) I do beg your pardon. I have (it may be in fome Expreffions) been (too) Ludicrous; I chofe rather to be fo (innocently) than to be Scurrilous.

I have not willingly given occafion of offence; if any fo mif-interpret any paffage, it was not intended : And whatever I have faid to and of you, I'll affure you, hath not been out of any diffespect to your Perfon, but from a just Refentment of the Injury you have done (I hope only in a fudden Transport) to the Party of Diffenters, and to fome very Good and Worthy Men amongst them, by unbecoming Re-

Reflections, Charging them with Knavery, Impieties, Hypocritical Frauds Bafe Infincerities, Ignorance, Impudence, want of Sound Judgment, that makes them uncapable of Preaching the Truth, &c. Is this (think you) fit Language for a Minister of Christ to his Brethren? Alas! What's become of that Humility, Meeknel's, Moderation, Charity, and Tendernel's of our Neighbour's good Name, which are the Badge of a Difciple of the Meek and Lowly Jefus?

What's the meaning of all this Rage? What is it you would have? Do these Men stand in the way of your Preferments? Alas! They are not capable of your Dignities and Honours, nor great Parfonages; if they might but have your Chappels to Preach the fame Doctrine in as you at your Churches, they, poor Souls, would be very thankful, and would be glad to fill those Places which ftand empty, becaufe there is nothing to be had for Preaching at them; they would rejoice to do your Work in fuch Place, and not Envy you the Tythes. What is the Matter then that you are fo angry? I hope it is not that you want the Pleafure of Scourging them with Whips, and Chaftizing them with Scorpions; or of feeing their Houfes broke open, and Informers and Apparitors Houfes filled with the Spoil; do they not Preach the fame Doctrine you do, or fhould do ? For they Subfcribe the fame Articles of Doctrine; do they live Wicked, Debauched. Lives? If they be guilty either of Herefie, or Immorality, I with the Bifhops had Power to Sufpend them, or that they may undergo the just Penalties of fuch Crimes.

But after all, I refer my felf to all unprejudic'd Perfons, yea, to your felf, in a Calm, whether there be any Caufe of fo great Indignation against this Party of Diffenters? Nay, will it not be wondred at, that you, Mr. T. after all this Heat, are fo good-natured; as to acquit the very Perfons you name in your Surey Impostor, from the Imposture, (tho' a little awkwardly) which you through your Book feem to accufe them of?

In your p. 58, 59, 60. you fay, The Diffenters were here Defrauded of the Glory of Contriving the Plot of the Comœdy, and were only poor, diminitive, underling Slaves to a more Witty Faction; I must excuse them (what's then the meaning of your Book) from being the Original Authors of the Combination, &c.

Now after all this noife, all the guilt that can be Charged upon them, (except fome indecencies in Words and particular Phanfies of one or two of them, or fome ill-ordered Circumstances) amounts but to overmuch Credulity, (Innocency is not fufpicious) excefs of Charity, or miltaken Zeal for the Honour of God. If all you fav be true, the Differenters, it may be, will blame me for Partiality, for for not examining their Book more carefully; and indeed I have not read it (as I told you) fince I faw yours, nor feen it; nor will I undertake to juftifie all they have faid and done in this matter, if they pleafe, let them fpeak for themfelves : But (tho' I would not willingly wrong either them or you) I feek not to pleafe either of you, nor do I take upon me to be a Judge, or Judicial Arbitrator, but what I have done, hath been to fet things in the clear light, and if poffible, to remove Prejudices from the Minds of Men, (otherwife Pious) against Diffenters, by mistaking their Principles and Pra-Etices; and to ftop the Mouths of those that love neither Conformifts nor Nonconformifts, that are truly Pious, Holy, and Serious, but take all Opportunities and Advantages, to Reflect upon and Ridicule whatever is Sacred, and stands in the way of their Atheistical Principles, and Vicious and Debauch'd Manners : What need then of more Charity amongst them that truly fear God, even where there cannot be, (through different Apprehenfions) in all things, Unity or Uniformity : I much approve this Saying, In necessaries unit as, in non necessaris libertas, in utrifq; charitas. Let there be Unity in things neceffary, Liberty in things not neceffary, and in both Charity. What Church, or Society of Men, (excepting that which is the most imperfect) doth pretend to Infallibility and Perfection ? Can it be deny'd, that there are Faults amongst all Parties? Therefore I fhould be loth to Subscribe, That I would not Endeavour any Alteration of Government in the Church of England, or the Church of Scotland, or the Church in New-England; and I should be as loth to Cenfure any of them as Damnable Schifmaticks ; but I have leaft Charity for those (of all Parties) that are most Schismatically Uncharitable : Let's then learn to be more Merciful and Charitable one to another, as God is to us all. sound to the molto for any other important Irresoftward (other to leader a winner aly) he was you the real your

Richard Dugdale is a young Man, now about 26 or 27 Years of Age; he is a Gardiner at Surey, near Whalley in Lancashire; he was much addicted to Bad Company, where there was Drinking, Dancing and Rioting; and it is faid, he had fuch a Fancy for Dancing, that he offered himfelf to the Devil, on Condition he would make him a good Dancer; after fome time he was taken with ftrange Fits, in which he had unufual Motions in and about his Body; fometimes he would leap as high as a Man's Head; fometimes his Body was hurled and thrown about the Room; fometimes he would fall down as Dead, and when he was in that pofture, he would be fometimes as light as a Bag of Feathers, fometimes as heavy as a Load of Corn; fometimes he would ftretch out his Neck to a prodigious length; fometimes his Tongue rouled all in a lump, and his Eye-balls turn backward, and then without any motions of his Lips, ftrange Words and Sounds would come from him, to the great Terror of the Spectators; fometimes in his Fits he would fpeak Latine, and Greek, and other Languages, (tho' an Illiterate Fellow) and hurl rouls of Foam. at those that were about him, and threaten to tear fome in pieces that prayed for him; fometimes he would pour forth bitter Execrations and Blasphemies; fometimes he would give an account of People coming to him, when they were feveral Miles diftant from him, which proved true; fometimes he would Prognofficate, that he thould fhould be Deaf and Dumb for a Month together, which was verified; fometimes different Voices came from him; fometimes he would Vomit up Stones like Flints, one of them was an Inch and half long, and an Inch and half broad; with feveral other ftrange and wonderful Relations, which are Attested on Oath by many Credible Witneffes, before fome of His Majefties Juffices of the Peace in Lancashire.

'This poor Fellow being in this Condition, the Phyficians tried their Skill to Cure him, but their Endeavours proving ineffectual, many did believe he was Poffess'd by the Devil; therefore he himfelf, when he was out of his Fits, and many others, entreated fome Diffenting Ministers to keep Days of Falting and Prayer for him, which out of great Pity and Compassion they did for a long time together, till at last the faid Richard Dugdale was Cured; but returning (like the Dog to his Vomit) to his former ill Life, he now denies what he formerly certified, viz. That his (brange Fits were not any Cheat, or Art of Man, that he knew of, but as he did verily believe were caused by the Devil, and that he was cleared from those terrible Fits through the Ministers Fasting and Prayer, &c.

And fo it is, that Mr. Taylor, (and feveral others) being much prejudiced, do make this a Combination, reprefenting the whole Body of the Nonconformifts, as Fools, and Knaves, and Tools of the Papifts; therefore this Gentleman (the Author of these Sheets) has been pleased, with great Moderation and Justice, to vindicate the now Envied Differing Ministers from so Foul and Wicked a Charge; being indeed a very ill and unfair thing, to condemn a whole Party, for any failings and indifcretions of some.
