INTRODUCTION.

CHRISTIANITY is a religion of motives.—It furnishes with principles which lead to action. Its great Author said to his disciples, “ I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain:” and the wise Disposer of events has so constituted the things of this lower world, that all are presented with opportunities to glorify God: they have talents committed to them, which they are required to improve, that when the Master comes, he may receive his “ own with usury.”

Every professing Christian then, is especially called upon to use his best exertions for God: and in no respect are opportunities so generally presented, as in the cases of the sick and afflicted poor. These objects are prepared by the God and Father of all, to prove the sincerity of our love. “ The poor,” says he, “ shall never cease out of the land:—the poor ye have always with you:—thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother.” And may we not ask with an inspired Apostle, “ If any man see his brother have need, and shutteth up the bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?”

While these truths are generally acknowledged, and these obligations considered binding upon all, yet difficulties arise in the minds of those who have enough and to spare, respecting the objects to be assisted, and the seasons for affording aid. Some have not time from their peculiar avocations to find out suitable objects for their bounty: others having heard that there is much imposition in those who apply for charity, are ever apprehensive of being deceived; so that it is to be feared, multitudes of Christians do little in comparison of what they should for the relief of the poor:—and thus lay up for themselves distressing reflections in the hour of dissolution; and in the anticipation of the bad account they will give of their stewardship, they plant their dying pillow with a thorn.

In order to meet the difficulties opposed to some, and to remove the objections started by others,—in order to make even the widow's mite useful, and the co-operation of all practicable; Societies have been formed in various parts of the metropolis, for visiting the sick: the monies collected, have amounted annually to considerable sums, by the means of which, the deep recesses of misery have been explored, victims of extremest wretchedness relieved, and opportunities afforded to those who undertake the office of visitors, to speak to dying sinners of our common salvation.

The immense population of the City of Westminster must afford abundant proof of the need of such a Society in its neighbourhood.—There, many may be found, who, through misconduct, or misfortune, are reduced to the lowest degrees of sickness and poverty.—Here lies the poor mechanic, who, seized with a fever which is drinking up his spirits, is unable to fulfil his daily task; and being destitute of the means of procuring the common necessaries of life—the heart-piercing cries of his helpless family, add distress of mind to the anguish of his body, and a weight of sorrow to all his woe.—There, the poor mother, who in health maintains herself and children by honest industry, being cast on a sick bed, far from her native place, and having no claim on parochial aid, is perishing for want.—In a garret, or cold damp cellar, the forlorn wife or new made widow, whose husband is fighting his country's battles, or has perished in Portugal or Spain, is anticipating the hour of nature's sorrow, without a garment to cover her. These, in affliction, have little or no support; and what is worse—are too often ignorant of that eternal world to which they are hastening; and are without a friend to point them to “the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.”

These circumstances have induced the officiating Minister of Broadway Church, and some of the Parishioners and Congregation who attend there, to form a Society for the RELIEF OF THE AFFLICTED POOR. From this Society, persons properly qualified, visit the cases recommended:—their object is to afford those who are in sickness, some portion “of the bread

“ which perisheth,” and to cheer their dying hours, by speaking to them of that which endureth to eternal life. They also supply poor married women in the time of child birth with THE USE OF CHILD BED LINEN,* and some pecuniary aid, during their confinement; that the tears of nature’s sorrow may be wiped away by the hand of charity; and, that by the divine blessing accompanying the conversation of the visitors who attend them, they may learn how they may “ be saved in child-bearing, if they continue in faith, and charity, and holiness, with sobriety.”

From that spirit of benevolence which brightens the days in which we live, the formers of this Society augur abundant support. Here all may have an opportunity of contributing their aid; and how this may be done is pointed out in the Rules.

While assistance is requested for the support of this Society by annual subscriptions, donations, and legacies, it is confidently hoped, that in the accounts which will be annually published of the persons visited, and of the monies distributed, every Subscriber will feel the highest satisfaction at having set his hand to so good a work.

* Articles of clothing, new or old, and child-bed linen of any description, will be thankfully received by the Society; and may be sent to the School House, No. 5, Dacre Street, Broadway, Westminster.

REPORT OF THE YEAR

THE WESTMINSTER BENEVOLENT SOCIETY, having received the countenance and support of those whose hearts are affected with a sight of human woe, during the four first years of its institution, has been able to afford relief to almost every family and individual who have sought its aid.

The Committee, desirous of discharging the obligation under which they have placed themselves, to give an annual report of their proceedings, beg to present the following statement to the Members of the Society, of money which has been distributed, and cases which have been relieved through the last year;—which statement, it is trusted, will serve to shew, that the contributions which have been entrusted to their care, have not been misapplied: and though the Committee have considered it unnecessary to publish every case of distress to which they have attended,—among whom are some equally affecting with those which are here printed, and others of a similar nature,—yet every subscriber may be assured, that the greatest care is taken both by the Committee and the Visitors, to detect imposture, and to assist only those who are proper objects of the Society's attention.

The Committee beg leave to recommend this Institution to the particular attention of the Public. An increasing demand is daily made upon its funds, particularly by SOLDIERS' WIVES, (whose husbands are on foreign service) residing in Westminster, with large and helpless families, who for the most part, being at a distance from their own parish, waiting their husbands' return, (and having no claim on the Parish of St. Margaret) when sickness comes upon them, endure such afflictions as are incredible. These considerations give to the Committee an additional stimulus to exertion, and will surely urge an additional argument to every feeling heart, why all should spare a little out of the abundance which God has given them, for the afflicted in their sorrows; and why, those who have contributed, should still continue their support.

Persons desirous of benefiting this Society by donations or annual subscriptions, are requested to apply at the Vestry of Broadway Church, in the Morning or Evening of Sunday; or on a Wednesday Evening—

To the Rev. Isaac Saunders, Eccleston Street, Pimlico;
To Mr. John Sadler, School House, Dacre Street,
 Broadway, Westminster; or
To Mr. Fincher, Stafford Place, Pimlico.

SOME OF THE

CASES RELIEVED

BY

The Westminster Benevolent Society,

DURING THE YEAR

Mrs. D——, Almonry, Westminster. The wife of a soldier, whose husband is in Spain. The family consisted of the mother and five children, four of them very young: the eldest girl, about twelve years of age, sick. When this family was first visited, the mother was absent in search of some work, by which she might purchase for her children a little food. The chief support she had was the making of army clothing. Work being scarce, and the mother unwell, many hours had elapsed since the family had had any provision whatever. The children were very orderly, and behaved exceedingly well. The family was Scotch, and had experienced more prosperous days. The children were asked what they had for breakfast and dinner? They replied, "Bread, when we can get it." "But what have you, when you cannot get bread?" They answered, "Nothing."

During this conversation, the poor woman entered. Her attempt to procure work or bread had been unsuccessful. Sad distress marked the countenances of the children when they saw no food; but not a murmuring word arose, except from the youngest, a child of two years old. Hunger made this child very clamorous; and upon enquiry, the cause was discovered. The persons who visited her sent for some bread. The sight of the money for the bread filled each heart with joy: a longer time having elapsed than the babe expected before the bread was brought, she was thrown into paroxysms of distress; but when it did arrive, the general sorrow was turned into joy.

This family was visited by the society for some weeks, but it still continues under the severest affliction. At Christmas last, the poor woman was confined to her bed with sickness,—one child lay by her with a scald head, in a dreadful and helpless condition,—another lay dead in the room, with the small pox,—a third was very ill with the measles,—and a fourth had a fistula in her back. In addition to this, the poor woman had just received a letter from her husband abroad, to say, that he had had a fall which had much injured him. This family still continues in almost inconceivable distress. Two of the youngest children are just dead: and respecting those which are left, one has still a bad head,—the second has a fistula in her back,—and the third is much afflicted with the gravel.

M—— G——, Waterman's Alms Houses. The Society was applied to by the friends of this woman, that some relief might be afforded to her, during her confinement.

She was the wife of a soldier. Her husband being unexpectedly sent off with his regiment to Holland, she was put to bed the day afterwards. Being left destitute of every thing, for two days she had scarcely any thing to eat; and her miseries must have terminated her existence, had not a humane individual* sent her some coals and broth.

Her distress was also considerably augmented by a threat she received from the landlord in whose house she lodged, of being turned into the street at a fortnight's end, if she did not pay up the arrears of her rent. She was assisted by the Society, till her recovery.

—— P——, Castle Court. This object of the society's attention had been a soldier. Service and sickness had worn him down, so that himself, his wife, and family, were in the greatest possible distress. Their meat and drink were sorrow and weeping, and all their clothing, rags. Their children being in the

* Mr. Hubert, St. Ann's Lane, Westminster, who at that period supplied very many of the wives of soldiers, with Coals and Money at his own cost.

Westminster Sunday School, they made the case of their family known to their teachers; and thus they fell under the notice of the Benevolent Society. The family was immediately relieved.

——— N———, New Tothill Street. A poor man, by occupation a lamp-lighter. “He was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow,” entirely dependant on him for support. When he fell sick, all their resources failed. When the visitors called upon them, they found them in a most deplorable situation, lying on the floor. By the relief which was afforded, the man recovered from his indisposition, and evinced gratitude both for the nourishment which had been afforded to his body, and for the instruction imparted to his mind.

Mrs. H——, Stratton Ground. This poor aged widow was found lying sick in a cold damp cellar, in Stratton Ground. She was much distressed in her external circumstances, but enjoyed in her mind all the consolations of true religion. She received the benefit bestowed upon her, as from the hand of God, and thus evinced, that “having nothing, she yet possessed all things.” After she was relieved, she recovered.

M——— D———, New Way, Orchard Street. She was the wife of a soldier who is in Holland. She was left with four children, and in a state of pregnancy,— expecting to be confined every hour. Suitable assistance was afforded her during the period of her confinement.

The Visitors were informed by this woman, that two of her children were in the Westminster Sunday School, on account of which she expressed her grateful acknowledgments. She observed, that the instruction afforded to the eldest had been productive of the greatest advantage. When he first entered the School, he could scarcely read; but that by attention and assiduity he is now able to read very well; and that since he has had a BIBLE given him at School, he has taken every opportunity to read it. He works at a neighbouring Factory in the week, the boys of which are almost proverbially bad, but this boy shuns their company, and avoids their vices; and is thus made a comfort to his parent, and promises to be a blessing to society.

M——— A———, New Tothill Street. A soldier's wife. She was left with three children when her husband went abroad. The mother and the youngest child were both ill. The woman manifested the most unfeigned gratitude for the help that was afforded.

——— N———, Peter Street. The poor woman was the widow of a sailor. Her husband was just dead, and she was left with one boy, and in a state of pregnancy. She came from Chatham, where was her residence, to place her boy in the Naval School at Greenwich, intending to return that she might be confined at home. But being delayed longer than she expected, she was taken ill in Westminster; and being far from her parish, and her friends, she was exposed to the most distressing circumstances.

She was under the necessity of parting with the few tattered garments that covered her, to pay for the assistance of a midwife; and when the Visitors were called to see her, she was on a bedstead, without bedding, covering, fire, or food, and that in the midst of the inclement season. A blanket, fire, and nourishment were procured for her, and she was left in a fair way of recovery.

———H———, John's Buildings. A family in great distress, arising from the circumstance of the man having been afflicted with the rheumatism in the winter of 1811, which deprived him of the use of his limbs for three months; during which period he could not earn any thing for the support of his family.

Soon after his recovery, three of his children fell ill with the scarlet fever; and they were scarcely restored from this disease, when two of them sickened with the small-pox, and died within a fortnight of each other. To defray the expences of their sickness and burial, the man and his wife were necessitated to part with almost every article of furniture and wearing apparel they possessed.

The woman was in a state of pregnancy at this time, and about a month previous to her confinement, the poor man burst a blood vessel, which circumstance increased their accumulated distress.

When they were visited by the society, instead of taking advantage of the compassion their situation was calculated to excite, they rather wished to make the best of every thing, and as much as possible to conceal their distress.

Thursday being the day on which the visitor called to see her in her confinement, and understanding that the husband had work, she did not repeat her call till Saturday evening, when she found, that on Friday the husband had been taken ill with a bleeding, which prevented his earning any thing for two days: in consequence of this, the poor woman had been without food the whole day. They were visited and relieved till the woman's recovery.

S——— C———, Orchard Street. She was visited in her confinement. Her family consisted of three children. She had buried her husband four months before the birth of her last child. He had been long ill, and in their distress they had been compelled to part with almost all they had, so that she was left exceedingly destitute.

When she had been relieved, during the full time appointed by the society, she observed, that she was certain a blessing had attended its exertions, as the money she received from it had enabled her to purchase a little milk, which a friend sold for her during her confinement: and the same thing she now continues to do for the support of herself and children. At various times she received the sum of one pound.

Above one hundred and fifty of the cases visited are the wives and families of soldiers, whose fathers and husbands are fighting on a foreign shore. These poor people have no support in sickness or in health but the labour of their hands, and the providence of God. When they work they generally make army clothing, for which they are so badly paid that they can scarcely procure subsistence.

But the lowest classes of labouring poor suffer as much, and sometimes even more than these. Very many cases the Society has visited, where the mother has been sick, the family of children large, and the man out of work for many weeks.

These are some of the cases relieved in the course of the last year. Besides which are many others—individuals young and aged, and families, once respectable, through unforeseen misfortunes, reduced to want.

Amongst those who are visited and relieved, some are exceedingly ignorant of Religion.—These are instructed; their children are also taken into the

Rules and Regulations.

I. THIS Society consists of a Treasurer—Committee of twelve in number—Visitors—Secretaries and Subscribers.

II. Any person by subscribing one penny per week, or upwards, may become a member of this Society.

III. A Committee shall be annually chosen from among the Subscribers, as Stewards of the Society, who shall attend according to a regular appointment.

IV. On the first Tuesday in January, every year, the accounts shall be audited; and the Committee chosen for the ensuing year.

V. The Committee shall meet the first Tuesday evening in every month; three of which shall constitute a quorum, to transact the business of the society.

VI. A weekly meeting of the Visitors shall be held in the Vestry of Broad Way Church, every Wednesday evening at eight o'clock, to receive recommendations, and to report the effects of their exertions.

VII. Persons in whom sickness with poverty are united, and poor deserving married women under the trying circumstances of child-birth, will be considered the only objects of this Society's benevolence.

VIII. The Lying-in cases shall be considered a separate branch of this Society, which shall be managed by a Committee of Ladies, and relieved out of the general fund; and when any cases of this description are recommended, they shall be referred to the Committee of Ladies.

IX. Suitable persons, both male and female, shall be appointed by the Society as Visitors: and their names shall be entered in a book with their places of abode.

X. No person but a member of the Institution shall present a case to the Society.

XI. Every application for relief must be addressed to the Secretary, and left at the Vestry of Broad Way Church, on a Wednesday evening at six o'clock.

XII. The benevolence of this Society shall extend to persons at the distance of one mile from Broad Way Church; the Society reserving to itself the power of relieving objects, properly recommended, who may reside at the very utmost limits of St. Margaret's and St. John's parishes.

XIII. A Visitor should not visit any case, but in conjunction with some other Visitor, or religious friend; in order that no reproach may be attached to the character of the Visitors, either from the houses they visit, or from the monies they distribute.

XIV. A case being presented to the Society—two of the Visitors shall be appointed to attend to the same—and to enquire if the case is visited by any similar Society.

XV. The Visitors on their first visit to any case have discretionary power to relieve that case to the amount of two shillings and six-pence ; at the next meeting they are required to give an account of the circumstances, and state of mind of those they visit,—the assistance they have received, and are likely to need.

XVI. The Visitors are appointed to administer relief, and not the person who recommends the case.

XVII. When any case has been visited eight weeks, and needs further assistance, a second Visitor shall be appointed ; and if at the end of four weeks more, further assistance be deemed needful, the Stewards for the time being, shall finally determine the sum which shall be given, and how long it shall be continued,—and also appoint new visitors on that case.

XVIII. The Visitors shall pay particular attention to the spiritual concerns of those whom they visit:—and bearing in mind the infinite importance of religion ; in an humble and affectionate manner shall enquire into the state of their minds,—speak to them plainly of the evil of sin,—their need of a Saviour,—commend them by earnest prayer to God ; and deliver to them, or their friends about them, some useful tracts.

XIX. The members of this Society shall not receive assistance from the same, while they continue members.

XX. An account of the state and progress of the Society shall be annually printed for the satisfaction of the Subscribers.
