A sermon, preached on the death of Mr. N. Aspden, surgeon : before a respectable audience, in the Methodist Chapel, Blackburn, on Sunday, September 30th, 1798. With enlargements, and illustrated with notes / by T. Wood.

Contributors

Wood, Thomas, -1826.

Publication/Creation

Blackburn : Printed and sold by Hemingway and Nuttall : Sold also by J. Douglass, Blackburn; Mrs. Sergent, Preston; and J. Hartley, Rochdale, [1798]

Persistent URL

https://wellcomecollection.org/works/kehnfzry

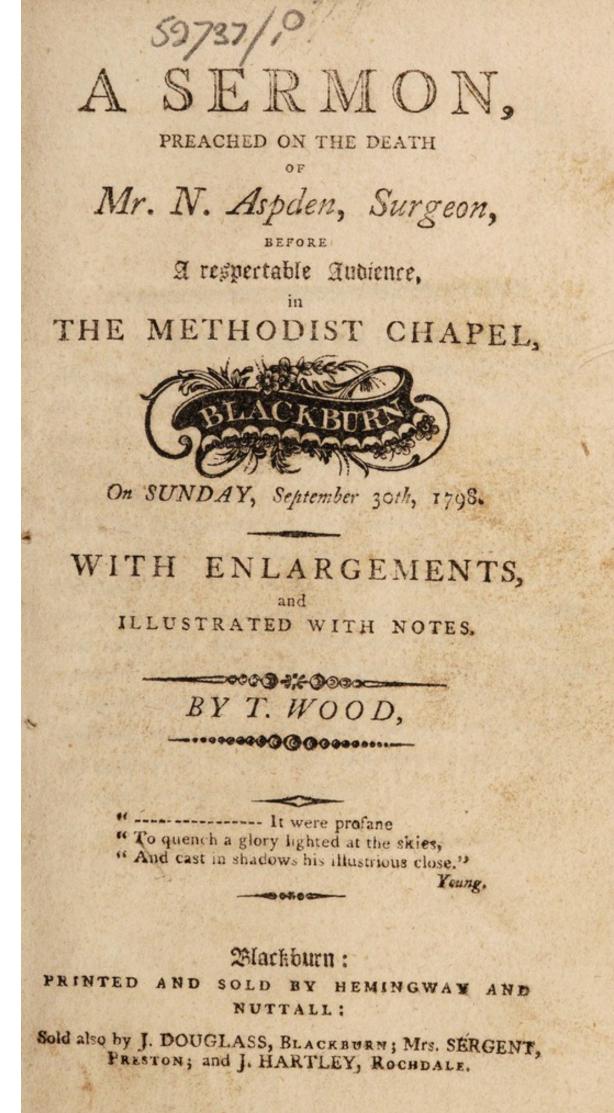

License and attribution

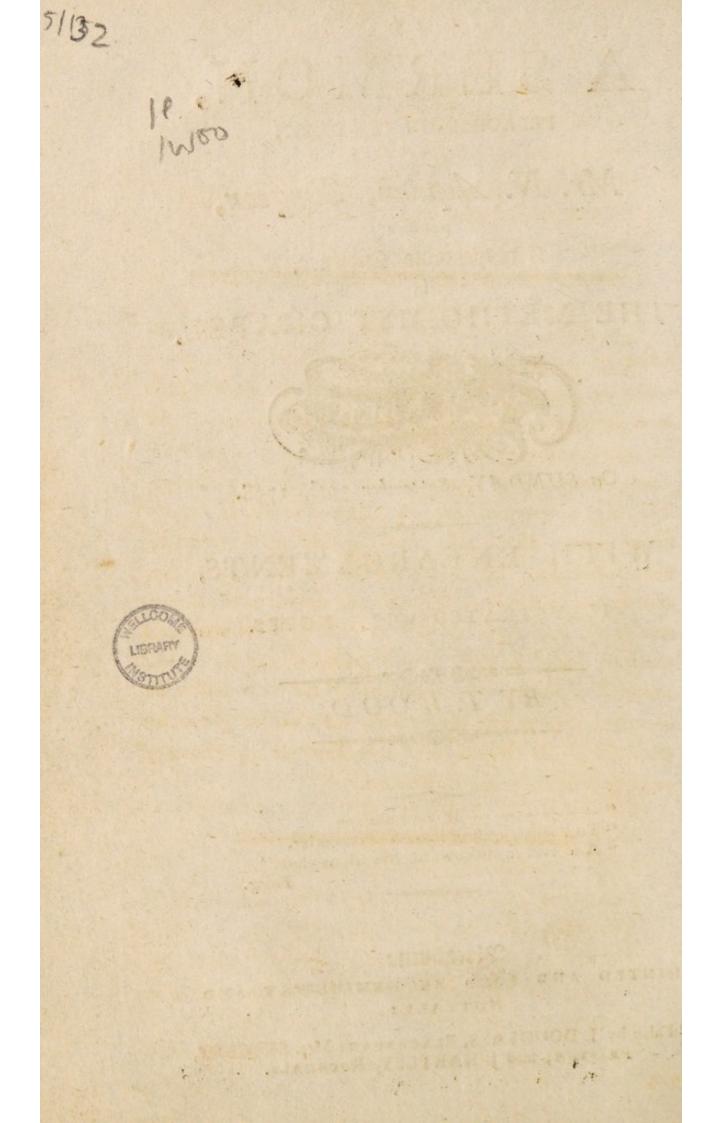

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection 183 Euston Road London NW1 2BE UK T +44 (0)20 7611 8722 E library@wellcomecollection.org https://wellcomecollection.org

THE Author, having been solicited to publish the following Sermon, has, in complying with the request, taken the liberty to fill up some chasms, and add a little more light and shade, where he thought necessary. He has also interspersed a few Notes at the foot of some of the pages, illustrative of important points in Christian theology. The Elogy he proclaims over the deceased is, that he is numbered among those, who shall be had in everlasting remembrance. As to the Sermon, he has only to say, that he has endeavoured to speak and write, with soberness and truth, and hopes it will be read with attention and candour. And he feels himself gratified, that the several. hundreds of people, who, stimulated by sincere respect to the deceased, came to hear the Sermon, but could not get within the walls of the Chapel, will now have the opportunity of reading it at their own habitations.

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2018 with funding from Wellcome Library

1 6036

https://archive.org/details/b30364504

SERMON, &c. A

1 Thessalonians, iv. 13.

" I WOULD NOT HAVE YOU TO BE IGNORANT, BRETHREN, "CONCERNING THEM THAT ARE ASLEEP, THAT YE SORROW NOT, EVEN AS OTHERS, WHICH HAVE NO "HOPE."

MAN is formed, by the great Author of nature, propitious to the focial life: he gives ample proof of this, in his domeftic, civil, commercial, and religious intercourfe. Yet, the Chriftian religion, is wifely defigned, and commodioufly adapted, to improve his focial powers, by impregnating them with principles of more catholic, more permanent, and more exalted benevolence.

The apoftle Paul having heard, that fome of the members of the Christian church, at Theffalonica, had departed this life; and that furviving friends and relatives were much affected thereby---having loft their fociety, their counfel, and friendship; he, wishing to leffen their immoderate grief, and administer confolation to their forrowful hearts, affures them, upon the foundation of revealed religion, that they should meet them again, in a better world, embrace each other, and part no more. In our text he fays, I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are assessed, that ye forrow not, even as others which have no hope: And in verse 14, we learn what he means by the term alleep, namely, sleeping, or dying, in Jesus.

110

Our deceased, and much valued friend, being fully perfuaded in himself, that his affliction would baffle the skill of the ablest physicians, and soon terminate in ghassly death, frequently made use of these words, to confole his relatives on the expected event: and, looking forward, he realized death with pleasure, felt unshaken at its approach, and rejoiced in certain hope of felicitating joys beyond the grave.

That the text may be rendered useful to us, who are affembled together on the prefent mournful occafion, I shall endeavour to confider,

FIRST, what fleeping in Jefus fuppofes; SECONDLY, what it implies; and

THIRDLY, view the words, as defigned to comfort furviving relatives on the death of their friends, that they forrow not, even as others which have no hope.

And FIRST, this fleeping in Jefus, fuppofes the fpeculative knowledge of the doctrines of the Chriftian religion, when alive in the body. The fcriptures fuppofe man to be a fallen, guilty, miferable, helplefs, and loft creature, under the curfe of the law of God, and liable to everlafting punifhment: They affirmatively declare this to be our cafe. By one man, (viz. Adam, fays St. Paul) fin entered into the world, and death by fin; and fo death paffed upon all men, for that (or rather, in whom, i. e. in Adam) all have finned; finned, and come flort of obtaining the glory of God, or eternal life, by the first covenant of God with man (a). Adam,

Adam, the federal head of mankind, having finned himfelf, and introduced fin into the world, all his posterity, are conceived in fin, and Shapen in iniquity (b). The wicked are estranged from the womb, they go aftray as foon as they be born, speaking lies (c). Mofes, speaking of the antediluvians, fays, And God faw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every, or, the whole, imagination of the thoughts, and the purposes and defires, of his heart was only evil continually, or every day (d). David, defcribing the corruption of a natural man, fays, The fool hath faid in his heart, There is no God. : they are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good. The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone afide, they are altogether become filthy : there is none that doeth good, no not one (e). Jeremiah's testimony, to the truth of this, is, The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked (f). And our Lord confirms the whole, where he fays, From within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness (g). We have one uniform testimony, of the great degeneracy of man, from the beginning of the bible to the end of. it; and the truth of these records is confirmed by the experience of all ages, and generations of men, from the beginning of the world, to this prefent time : the neceffary confequence of which is, that every mouth is ftopped, none innocent, and all the world is become guilty before God (h).

(b) Pfa. li. 5. (c) Pfa. lviii. 3. (d) Gen. vi. 5. (e) Pfa. xiv. 1---3. (f) Jer. xvii. 9. (g) Mark vii. 21, 22. (h) Rom. iii. 19.

As

As the Chriftian religion fuppofes man to be in this wretched, miferable ftate, by nature and practice; fo it alfo brings him good tidings of great joy, which fhall be to all people, namely, a Saviour, which is Chrift the Lord (i). The name of the Saviour is * Jefus, (k) a name that is big with falvation, and imports nothing lefs than complete deliverance; deliverance from Sin, its guilt, dominion, pollution, and curfe; from Satan, his power, fervice, malice, and government; from the World, its fpirit, maxims, and fnares: and alfo, it gives the certain enjoyment of gracehere, of pardon, peace, and holinefs; and the full poffeffion of glory hereafter, of the vifion of God, the fociety of angels and faints, and pleafures, infinitely great, and eternally new.

This Saviour, Jefus Chrift, is God and man, in one perfon. As God, he is the fecond Perfon in the ever

(i) Luke ii. 10, 11. (k) Matt. i. 21.

* Jefus is our Lord's perfonal name; not a name merely of office, as the names Chrift, Meffiah, Mediator, &c. are. It was not given him by private fancy, as parents give names to their children; not by Mary his mother, nor by Joseph his reputed father; but by God himfelf, by the ministration of an angel, before his conception and birth, communicated first to Mary, and then to Joseph. Joshua in the Hebrew, and Jesus in the Greek, are of the fame fignification, both meaning a Saviour. There were two Jolhuas, under the Old Testament, who were illustrious types of our Jefus; Jofhua the fon of Nun, Ifrael's captain at their first fettlement in Canaan; and Joshua the fon of Josedech, that was their high-prieft at their return from the Babylonian captivity. The former of these Joshuas, is twice, in the New Testament, called Jefus. Acts vii. 45. and Heb. iv. 8. Jofhua, the fucceffor of Mofes, was first called Hofea; but Mofes upon the borders of Jordan, to confirm the faith of the Ifraelites of God's giving them victory over the Canaanites, under the command of Jofhua, prefixed the first fyllable of his own name, the name Jehovah, to Jofhua's, making it Jehofhua; which fignifies, Jehovah shall fave by Joshua; or, Jehovah shall be with Joshua, to fave you. Numb. xiii. 16. Jehoshua, by contraction Joshua, and with the Greek termination, Jefus, ever bleffed and glorious Trinity. This is a doctrine unknown to the religion of nature; but it is most clearly revealed in the holy fcriptures. We read there of three glorious Perfons, under the names of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoft. We find that each of these is diffinct from each other ; diffinct perfonal properties and actions are afcribed to them ; and the divine effence belongs to all three. There are THREE that bear record in heaven; the FATHER, the WORD, and the HOLY GHOST: and these THREE are ONE(1): This is a plain revelation of the Trinity. Here are three perfons, or perfonal fubstances, manifestly diftinguished from one another; fince otherwise there could not be this threefold witnefs; and yet their unity is expressly afferted. This prime article of Revealed religion, is indeed mysterious; and fo must every thing, that concerns the nature of God, be to us. We do not pretend to explain the mode of it, becaufe that is not revealed, and confequently is inexplicable, covered with impenetrable darknefs. We believe the fact, but how it is fo, we know not, and therefore do not believe any thing about it.

As God, he is alfo an eternal, neceffary, felfexiftent, and independent Being. The holy fcriptures afcribe to him the proper names of the fupreme God; all the effential properties, perfections, or attributes, of God; the works which, on all fides, are acknowledged God only can perform, fuch as the works of creation, providence, and grace, the refurrection of the dead, judging the world, and divine religious religious worthip in the feveral parts of it.*-He is alfo man; the eternal Word was made flesh, i. e. he affumed human nature (m). God was manifest in the flesh (n), he took part of flesh and blood (o). He is both God and man in one Perfon: He was a divine perfon from eternity; and in the fulnels of time he took the human nature into union with the divine, as fubfifting in his Perfon: And therefore, he is stiled Immanuel, God with us (1), which is a character and name inclusive of his two natures, divine and human. The union of these two natures in the perfon of Chrift, is close and infeparable; yet without mixture and confusion, or transmutation, and without real and perfonal diffinction. This is the wonderful, mysterious conftitution of his Perfon; and it is fingular and peculiar to himfelf; and in which he differs from all others. He is the mighty God (q), the great God (r), the true God (f), God over all, and bleffed for ever (t). And yet, the fame Perfon is man, the feed of David (x), eat,

(1) I John v. -.

(m) John i. 14. (n)¹ r Tim. iii. 16. (o) Heb. ii. 14. (p) Ifa. vii. 14. Matt. i. 23. (q) Ifa. ix, 7. (r) Titus ii. 13. (f) r John v. 20. (r) Rom. ix. 5. (u) Rom. i. 3.

* "The divinity of Jefus," fays an able author, "I conceive to be the chief corner-frone in the edifice of Chriftianity. Remove this from the building, and the whole fabric immediately totters, the foundation is fhaken to the very centre. There appears at once, an evident difproportion between the end and the means, the importance of the object propofed, and the perfon by whom it was accomplifhed. And then the great doctrine of atonement and expiation, by the blood of its Author, falls to the ground, and all the rich promifes of the gofpel are done away."---Again, "The divinity of Jefus is fo confpicuous a feature in the gofpel, and is fupported by evidences which prefs upon us fo clofely on every fide, that I flatter myfelf, there is not any one point of Chrift's religion more capable of being clearly proved and afcertained, than his claim to a divine nature."

Hawker's Sermons, pag. 8, 40.

eat, drank (x), encreafed in wifdom (y), flept (z). grieved (a), rejoiced (b), was crucified, and died (c). And this myfterious conflitution of his Perfon, qualified him for the work of our Redemption and Salvation. His humanity rendered him capable of obeying and fuffering for us; and his divinity fupported his humanity under all its requifite, proper work; and ftampt upon his obedience and fufferings, a value, dignity, and efficacy, fufficient to the great ends intended thereby, namely, the fatisfaction of God's juffice, and the purchafe of our falvation.

Our Saviour redeemed us, and brought about our falvation, not only by his active obedience to the precepts of the law, given to Adam in a ftate of perfect innocence, but alfo, by fuffering its penalties, efpecially in his death. Death was threatened, as the penalty of the transgreffion of the law (d). Chrift fubstituted himself in our place, and bore the penalty of the law for us, that curfe and death it threatened. He suffered for us through his whole life; hence is he called, a man of forrows (e); but eminently on the crofs, to which he was nailed, and on which he died. His entire human nature was the fubject of his fufferings: he fuffered in both foul and body, as is plain from the gospel hiftory. His fufferings, finished in his death, were a proper and full fatisfaction to the demands of juffice for all the fins of mankind. Their fatisfactory, meritorious virtue, was derived from the dignity of his Perfon. We were reconciled to God by his DEATH (f), he made peace, through the BLOOD

(x) John iv. 7, 31. (y) Luke ii. 52. (x) Matt. viii. 24. (a) Mark iii. 5. (b) Luke x. 21. (c) Matt. xxvii. 35, 50. (d) Gen. ii. 17. (c) Ifa. liii. 3. (f) Rom. v. 10. BLOOD of his crofs (g), hath redeemed us to God by his BLOOD (h), purchafed us with his own BLOOD (i), his BLOOD was shed for the remission of fins (k), for without shedding of BLOOD no remission (l), we are justified by his BLOOD (m), in whom we have redemption through his BLOOD, the forgiveness of fins (n).— These, and a multitude of other portions of the word of God, shew, that Christ's death was a plenary fatisfaction, to the demands of infinitely incensed justice, for the fins of mankind *.

That our Saviour might apply the purchafed falvation, he role from the dead, alcended into heaven, triumphing over death and hell, and there makes interceffion for thole he had redeemed; and, by his Spirit fent down from thence for that purpofe, as the confequence of his alcention, exaltation, and interceffion, he makes obedient fouls partakers of that branch of falvation, which confifts in an internal work of grace on their hearts, whereby they are quickened (0), renewed (p), forgiven (q) fanctified (r), comforted (f), made mest for (t), and afterward received into glory (u).

oSme

(g) Col. i. 20. (h) Rev. v. 9. (i) Acts xx. 28. (k) Matth. xxvi. 28. (l) Heb. ix. 22. (m) Rom. v. 9. (n) Eph. i. 7. (o) Eph. ii. 1. (h) Rom. xii. 2. (q) Col. ii. 13. (r) 1 Cor. i. 30. vi. 11. (f) Acts ix. 31. (l) Col. i. 12. (u) 1 Tim. iii. 16. John xvii. 24.

* The celebrated Dr. Blair, of Edinburgh, when fpeaking of our Saviour's dying-hour, fays, "This was the hour in which Chrift atoned for the fins of mankind, and accomplifhed our eternal redemption. It was the hour, when that great Sacrifice was offered up, the efficacy of which reaches back to the first tranfgreffion of man, and extends forward to the end of time; the hour when, from the crofs, as from an high altar, the blood was flowing, which washed away the guilt of the nations."

Sermons, vol. 1. p. 121.

The ALEMANNER OF

Some may afk, Could not God have faved us, without his Son's incarnation, obedience, and fufferings, in our nature and place, or without a fatisfaction? I answer, it does not appear to me, that he could, in a confittency with the honour of his juffice, truth, and holinefs. There was, indeed, infinite power in him, before he made the world; and fo, likewife, there was vindictive justice in his nature, before ever there was any fin to punish. This cannot, I think, be denied, without allowing of on abfurdity, namely, that he is capable of changing. And his effential juffice made it neceffary, that if ever finners be faved, full fatisfaction be made for their fins: otherwife, while he glorified his mercy, he would have injured his juffice. God had engaged his truth, in denouncing the threatening (x): and it cannot reafonably be fuppofed, that he fhould act contrary to his own folemn declaration and fentence: this would not have been confiftent with the perfection of his nature, and the honour of his government. Should he have glorified his mercy, in pardoning and faving finners, without a fatisfaction for their fins, after fuch a fentence, as that just referred to, he would have rendered himfelf unfit (to fpeak with reverence) to be trufted or regarded. But in the way of our falvation, devifed by his infinite wifdom, all the divine attributes are fecured from injury and reproach. His holinefs, juffice, and truth, are glorified in Chrifi's fatisfaction ; and his mercy in our falvation. Mercy and Truth are met together, Righteoufnefs and Peace have kiffed each other (y), in this method of divine contrivance. Mercy reigns in righteoufnefs, in the believer's juftification and falvation, on the ground of Christ's fatisfaction (z). O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God ! (a).

(*) Gen, ii. 17.

Bank iz izzzy 10. (a) Rom. III. 15. (a) Romi zi. 23.

2. This fleeping in Jefus, fuppoles a conviction, and evidence to fupport that conviction, that Chriftianity is not a cunningly devifed fable, but the only certain fcheme of divine mercy, eftablished in the perfon of Christ, whereby fallen guilty man may be pardoned, restored, and faved. In the fcriptures we fee, that Jefus Christ is the only channel in which falvation flows; the centre where all the lines of falvation meet; the ladder by which we may climb to heaven; the plank on which we may efcape to shore.

If the Chriftian religion be defenfible, there is none other name (but JESUS) under heaven given among men, whereby we must be faved (b). And that it is defenfible, has often been proved, and might again, to the fatisfaction of ferious, thinking, unprejuced perfons. Its evidence is clear, powerful, and permanent as the throne of God. The Chriftian religion takes in all the doctrines and duties, principles and rules, of natural religion. Whatever is agreeable to right reafon, and that reafon could difcover as matter of duty towards God, our neighbours, and ourfelves; this the New Teffament takes in, and eftablifhes. In a word, it contains the moft excellent fyftem of morals in the world. There is nothing valuable in all the writings of

(y) Pfa. ixxxv. 10.

(z) Rom. iii. 25. (a) Rom. xi. 33. (b) Acts iv, 12.

of the Heathen philosophers, but what is to be found in the Christian religion. All the laws of justice, charity, meeknefs, gratitude, patience, and all the reft, that they have recommended in their books, are recommended by Chrift and his Apostles, in a better light, delivered with greater authority, and enforced with higher motives and arguments, than the most admired and famous fages among the Heathens poffibly could do. It happily fupplies all the defects of natural religion, or the light of nature. Indeed, had men preferved their integrity and purity, the light of nature would have taught them their duty, in the whole compass and latitude of it, without any supernatural revelation : But mankind being fallen, human nature is fo much depraved, and human reafon fo much impaired, that it is very defective, and infufficient to direct us in all the concerns of religion. There are two points, in which it leaves us hopelefs and helplefs, and at an utter lofs ; namely, the right manner of worfhipping God, and the terms on which finners may affuredly expect and find acceptance with him. But the Chriftian religion fupplies thefe, and all the other defects of natural religion.

In the New Tetiament, we have the hiftory of the completion of many ancient prophecies, the verification of many dark types and figures, and a most exact and remarkable correspondence with the whole fystem and defign of the Jewish institution; in which there is a perpetual reference to the Messiah to come : at whom almost all its rites and ceremonies, and most of its predictions, do manifestly point. The writings of the New Testament assure us, that Jesus Christ came into the world, and that all the prophecies were fulfilled in and by bim, that did expressly refer to his life and paffion, according to the clear fense of the Jewish doctors. They affure us, that he came into the world at the time and period fixed by Daniel's prophecy; in the manner foretold by Ifaiah and Jeremiah, being conceived and born of a virgin; and that, by a wonderful interpofition of providence, he was born at Bethlehem, the place from whence was to come forth, He who was to be ruler in Ifrael. Thefe writings affure us, that he came of the nation, tribe, and particular family, from which it was prophefied he fhould defcend, being of the feed of Abraham, the father of the Jewish nation, the tribe of Judah, and family of David. His circumftances of life, doctrine, miracles, fufferings, death, burial, and refurrection, exactly answered the prophecies concerning them : In fhort, he answered all those characters, which the prophets of former ages had given of the Meffiah. The Old and New Teftament, have a mutual dependence upon, and give mutual teffimony to, the truth of each other *.

B2

came

The

* "The fcheme of Prophecy, confidered in its first opening, its gradual advance, and its final and full completion in the advent, the ministry, the death, and refurrection of the Messiah, and the extensive progress of the gospel among the Gentiles, together with its bleffed influence on individuals, focieties, countries, and the whole race of mankind: is an object the greatest, and most fublime, that imagination can conceive; and the most pleasing and important that the human mind can contemplate."

Rev. Dr. White's Sermons, at Brampton Lecture, p. 307.

For a view of the accomplifhment of fcripture Prophecies, the reader may confult, with great advantage, bithop Newton's Differtations, Brown's Harmony of the Scripture Prophecies, and Hiftory of their Fulfilment; and Simplon's Key to the Prophecies.

The miracles which our Saviour wrought, were inconteftible proofs of his divine commission, and a confirmation of the truth of his doctrine. When he entered on his public ministry, he declared, that he was come with a commission from God, to accomplifh the work of man's redemption and falvation : and for a proof of his commission, and confirmation of the doctrine he preached in purfuance of it, he wrought many miracles; i. e. he performed many amazing works, evidently, and confessedly, above all human power and skill to effect *. These he wrought in an inftant, and ufually by fpeaking a word; in places of the most public refort, in cities, and fynagogues, and open fields; in the prefence of multitudes of his enemies, as well as friends. And in all his most public miracles, there was always fome circumftance or other which plainly fhewed, that they were intended for the conviction of those who faw them. Further, his refurrection, or raifing himfelf from the dead, was the greatest miracle he wrought; and whatever arguments are brought for the certainty of it, are fo many reafons for

B 3

* Our Saviour raifed the dead, Jairus' daughter --- the widow of Naim's fon, as they were carrying him to his burial --- and Lazarus, after he had been dead four days. These are proper miracles : raifing the dead is above all the natural powers and capacities even of the angels themfelves, though they excel in ftrength; it is the perogative of God alone, Rom. iv. 17. If a man, or an angel, can raife the dead, he may as eafily make men, for it requires the fame power to reftore life, as to give it : if he can turn water into wine, he can create the vine; and if he can create any vegetable or animal, he may by the fame power, form whole worlds; if he can do all this, he must be omnipotent, and so, be God. On this ground we ought to reafon, as Nicodemus juftly did, Rabbi, we know thou art a teacher come from God : for no man can do thefe miracles that thou doeft, except God be with him. John iii. 2.

for our belief of his doctrine : for if he was declared to be the Son of God with power, by his refurrection from the dead, as the Apoftle afferts he was (c), there can be no room left for any rational men to doubt of the truth of whatever he came to teach. Thefe miracles wrought by Chrift, were fuch atteftations from God, as plainly confirmed the doctrine he preached. For it is impoffible for the God of truth, to atteft a falfehood, or to fupport a forgery by his almighty power. Would he concur, by the power of miracles, with an impofture, and own a perfon who only abufed him, and deceived mankind ? We cannot fuppofe fo great an abfurdity, and what is evidently inconfiftent with the perfections of God's nature, and with his moral government of the world.

The illustrious triumph God gave the gofpel at its first publication, is worthy of our attention and faith. The Apoftles were honoured with amazing fuccefs, though they had no fecular terrors to affright. them, no fecular rewards to bribe them, no dazzling eloquence to enchant them : On the contrary, the want of these were pleaded against them. Yet their testimony was received, and their converts were fo fully fatisfied with the evidence, which the Apofiles gave them of their divine mission, that they encountered great perfecution, and cheerfully ventured estate, liberty, and life itself, on their persuasion of the truth of the facts they afferted. And their converts were not a few; James fpeaks of the myriads of believing Jews (d). And we read of Christian, churches

(c) Rom. i. 4. (d) Acts xxi. 20.

churches in Rome, Corinth, Ephefus, Coloffe, Theffalonica, Philippi, Laodicea, Smyrna, Philadelphia, Sardis, Thyatira, Phrygia, Crete, Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Afia, and Bithynia, and in many other places; infomuch that one of the Apoffles could fay, that Chrift had fo wrought by him, as to make the Gentiles obedient, not only in word and profession, but in deed too, and that from Jerufalem round about unto Illyricum (e). The fuccels was amazing, and will appear fo, if we confider the low education of the Apoftles, and that all the learning and wit of the Greeks and Romans were employed to ridicule the gospel they preached, and run it down ; and that the princes and potentates of the earth drew their fwords against it, and armed their legions for the destruction of the professors of it. Had the infidel wits of our age feen the Apofiles, and a few other plain men, who had been educated among the loweft of the people, going out, armed with nothing but faith, truth, and goodnefs, to encounter the power of princes, the bigotry of priefts, the learning of philosophers; the rage of the populace, and the prejudices of all; they would have derided the attempt, and faid, as Sanballat did long before, What will these feeble Jews. do?(f) But had they feen the event, furely they must have owned, with the Egyptian Magi, in a lefs illustrious miracle, That it was the finger of God (g). This illustrious triumph, this amazing fuccess of the golpel, at its first publication, evidently argues an extraordinary interpolition of God in its favour, or as Luke S ; Who appro with becoming reverence,

(c) Rom. xv. 18, 19. (f) Neh, iv. 2. (g) Exod. viii. 19.

And he that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witness in himself (1); hath an internal, experimental evidence of the truth, excellency, and efficacy of the Christian religion, in his own foul. The gracious change of his nature, prevailing purity of his heart, inward peace and confolation, and ardent breathings of his foul, after the full image of God on earth, and the complete enjoyment of God in heaven, is, to himfelf, a witnefs of the truth of Christianity. He has the knowledge of Salvation, by the remission of his sins(k): the peace of God, which paffeth all understanding (1), in his confcience; and the love of God Shed abroad in his heart, by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto him (m). Hence he has fuch an affurance of God's love to him, in Jefus Chrift, that he, in the confidence of faith, aided by the Spirit of God, cries, Abba Father *; the Shirit

(h) Acts xi. 21. (i) I Joh v. 10. (k) Luke i. 77. (l) Rom. v, i. (m) Rom. v. 5.

* The Apostle fays, Ye are all the children of God, by faith in Chrift Jefus, Gal. iii. 26; admitted into this honourable and happy relationship to the bleffed God, by believing in Chrift. And becaufe ye are fons, God hath fent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts; crying, Abba, Father, Gal. iv. 6: that is, difpoling and enabling the fons of God, to pray with filial confidence, and holy a dour. Both thefe are implied : filial confidence in the word Father ; holy ardour, or vehemency of defire, in the doubling of the word Abba, Father; that is, Father, Father : for the word Abba, fignifies Father. The word is used in two different languages ; Abba, a Syriac word, the common language of the Jews, at that time; Father, Pater in the original text, uled among the Greeks, or Gentiles; to fhew, that this is the common privilege of all the fons of God, in all nations and tongues ; who approach before God, with holy confidence, and yet with becoming reverence, as children do to their earthly fathers. IL XV. LA. TO. Sh (a) an Spirit itself beareth witness with his spirit, that he is a child of God (n); he has fellow/hip with the Father, and with his Son Jefus Chrift (o) : And thus is he introduced into the fpiritual world, and has an intercourfe with eternity. The foul has fpiritual fenfes, as well as the body has natural ones : hence, we read of hearing Christ's voice (p), feeing his glory (q), tasting his goodness (r), and fmelling his ointments (f); and thefe fenfes are the only medium, by which an intercourfe between Chrift and our fouls can be opened and maintained; faving faith cannot fubfift and act without them. If material objects cannot be perceived by man in his prefent flate, but through the medium of one or other of his bodily fenfes, by parity of reafon, fpiritual objects cannot be discovered, but ... through one or other of the fenfes which belong to the inward man. God being a Spirit, cannot be worshipped in truth, unless he is known in spirit. You may as foon imagine, how a blind man, by reafoning on what he feels or taftes, can get true ideas of light and colours, as how one who has no fpiritual fenfes opened, can, by all his reafoning and gueffing, attain an experimental knowledge of the invifible God. Till professors fee the necessity of believing, in this manner, they reft in a refined form of godlinefs. To the confidence of the Antinomians, they may, indeed, join the high profession of the foolish virgins. They may even crown their partial affent to the truths of the gospel, with the zeal of the pharifees, and the regularity

(n) Rom. viii. 16. (o) I John, i. 3. (/1) John, x. 3. (q) John xi. 40. (r) I Peter, ii. 2. (/) Song iv. 10. gularity of moralists: but still they ftop short of the new creation, the new birth, the life of God, in the foul of man. Nay more, they stumble at some of the most important truths of Christianity, and think the discoveries, that found believers have of Christ, and the spiritual world, are enthusiastical delusions, or, at least, extraordinary favours, which they can very well do without. Thus, even while they allow the power of godlines in others, they rest fatisfied without experiencing it in themselves *.

3. This

* See the Rev. John Fletcher's very valuable Letters on the Spiritual Manifestation of the Son of God. --- Letter 1st.

To confirm the truth, that a regenerate foul has his fpiritual fenfes opened, and made capable of difcerning what belongs to the fpiritual world, as a new-born infant has its fenfes unlocked, and begins to fee, hear, and tafte, what belongs to the material world into which it enters, the fame late pious author fays, in the lame letter "I shall add the testimony of our own excellent church. As the strictly agrees with the fcripture, the makes alfo frequent mention of fpiritual fenfations, and you know, that fenfations neceffarily suppose fenfes. She prays, that God would give us a due fense of his ineffimable love in the redemption of the world by our Lord Jefus Chrift' (a). She begs, that he would, " make us know and feel there is no other name than that of Jefus, whereby we must be faved' (b). She affirms, that true penitents feel ' the burden of their fins intolerable;' (c) that godly perfons feel in themfelves the workings of Chrift's Spirit;' (d) that 'the Lord prefently speaks to us in the scriptures, to the great and endlefs comfort of all who have any feeling of God in them at all;' that ' godly men felt, inwardly, the Holy Ghoft inflaming their hearts with the fear and love of God, and that they are miferable wretches, who have no feeling of God within them at all: (e) and, that 'if we feel the heavy burden of our fins preffing our fouls, and to menting us with the fear of death, hell, and damnation, we must fedfafily behold Chrift crucified, with the eyes of our heart.' (f) Our church farther declares, that ' true faith is not in the mouth and outward profession only, but liveth and firreth inwardly in the heart.

(a) Thankfgiving.
(b) Office for the Sick.
(c) Communion.
(d) 17th Article.
(e) Hom. on certain places of scripture.
(f) 2. Hom. on the Paffion.

3. This Aceping in Jesus, supposes also a compliance with the terms of the gofpel, the terms upon. which falvation is offered That there are certain terms, or conditions, in the gospel, to be complied. with, in order to enjoy falvation by Jefus Chrift, is. evident from the whole tenor of Revelation. John the Baptift, the forerunner of our bleffed Saviour, came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, faying, Repent ye : for the kingdom of heaven is at hand : and he infifted on those, who came to his baptism, to bring forth. fruits meet for repentance (t). Our Saviour fays of himfelf, I am come to call finners to repentance (u). And, after his refurrection, he left this in charge with his, Apostles, teaching them to observe all things what sever he had commanded them, that repentance, and remission of fins, Should be preached in his name, among all nations : and, for.

(1) Matt. iii. 1, 2---7, 8. (11) Matt. ix. 13.

heart, and that if we feel and perceive fuch a faith in us we must rejoice :' (g) that ' correction, though painful, bringeth with it a "tafte of God's goodness: (h) that, 'if after contition, we feel our, confciences at peace with God, through the rem flion of our fin, it is God, who worketh that great miracle in us;' and the prays, that, 'as this knowledge and feeling is not in ourfelves, and, as by ourfelves, it is not poffible to come by it, the Lord would give us grace to know these things, and feel them in our hearts.' (1) She begs that 'God would affift us with his Holy Spirit, that we may hearken to the voice of the good Shepherd.' (*) She fets upon afking continually that the Lord would, ' lighten our darknefs,' and deliver us from the two heavieft plagues of P aroah, ' blindness, and hardness of heart.' (1) And, the affirms, that, "if we will be profitable hearers of the scriptures, we must keep under our carnal fenfes, taken by the outward words, fearch the inwards meaning, and give place to the Holy Ghoft,' whole peculiar office. it is to open our fpicitual fenfes, as he opened Lydia's heart." (m)

(g) Hom. on Faith, 1st and 3d part. (h) Hom. on the fear of Death, 2d part. (i) Hom. for Rogation week, 3d part. (k) Hom. on Repent. 2d part. (1) Even. Prayer and Litany; (m) Hom. on certain Places of Scrip.

for their encouragement, he fays, And to, I am with you, and your fucceffors in office, faith, and practice, alway, even unto the end of the world ; confirmed with, an, Amen (x). In confequence, and by virtue of which, the Apostles went forth, after the day of Pentecost, and preached every where, that men should repent, and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance, the Lord working with them, and bearing them witnef, and confirming the word, both with figns and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoft (y). Man having revolted from his Maker, broken his laws, defpifed his authority, abufedhismercies, and incurred his heavy difpleafure, he must, upon the gospel fcheme, be fenfible of his immoral conduct, forry for his numerous offences, renounce the evil of his ways, and return unto God by true repentance, or he cannot be pardoned and faved. Repentance, according to the late excellent Bifhop Horne, implies, light in head, forrow in the heart, confession in the mouth, and reformation in the life The Holy Spirit convinceth the world of fin (z); produces godly forrow in the heart (a); leads to confession in the mouth, and reformation in the life (b).

Faith toward our Lord Jefus, is as requisite unto falvation, as repentance toward God (c). Our Saviour faid unto his Apostles, a little before his ascension into heaven, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature : He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be faved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned (d). Repentance, (x) Matt. xxviii. 20. Luke xxiv. 47. (y) Mark xvi. 20 Acts xxvi. 20. Heb. ii. 4. (z) John xvi. 8. (a) 2 Cor. vii. 10. (b) Prov. xxviii. 13. (c) Acts xx. 21. (d) Mark xvi. 16.

Repentance, however genuine, and future obedience, however perfect, cannot atone for the crimes we have already committed. Natural religion cannot furnish a remedy for guilt. Man has finned, is guilty, and has a fearful looking for of judgment. The Chriftian religion alone provides us a Saviour, to fave us from our fins, and all obligation to punifiment. This Saviour is received by faith. True faith accepts of Chrift, as a prophet and king, for instruction and government; as well as a priest, for juftification, and falvation; but, as it juftifies the finner, it fixes folely on him as a prieft. As it was in the prieftly office of Chrift only, that the justice of God found complete fatisfaction for fin; fo it is in that only that God propofes him to our faith, in order to our juffification by his righteoufnefs: Whom God hath fet forth to be a propitiation *, through faith in his blood (e). Faith views him as atoning God, fatisfying justice, and expiating fin, by the facrifice of himfelf. By grace, procured by Chrift of the Father, are ye Javed, through FAITH : not of works, left any man should boaft.

(e) Rom. iii. 25.

* The word propiniation, properly fignifies the mercy-feat. The Apofile alludes to the mercy-feat under the Jewifh difpenfation, which was a fignal type of Chrift The mercy-feat was in the holy of holies, and placed between the fhechina, the fymbol of the divine prefence, and the ark, wherein was the law; the one was above, and the other below the mercy-feat, which, as it were, covered the broken law from the eye of God. It was from above the mercy-feat, that God fhewed himfelf propitious to his people, as being appealed by the great propitiatory facrifice, offered on the day of atonement, with the blood of which the mercyfeat was fprinkled once a year. Heb. ix. 11---14. boaft* (f). Being justified by FAITH, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ (g). In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory (h) in him, by whose righteousness they are saved. Therefore, salvation is of FAITH, that it might be by grace (i). And, as he that believeth on Jesus, is not condemned, but has pardon, peace, and everlasting life; so, on the other

(f) Eph. ii. 8. 9. (g) Rom. v. 1. (h) Ifa. xlv. 25. (i) Rom. iv. 16.

* Some may object here, and fay, Though the Apoftle Paul fays we are justified by faith, yet the Apoftle James fays, that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only, James ii. 24. To this I anfwer, The two Apostles had to do with different forts of perfons, speak of different forts of faith, and of different forts of justification.

St. Paul had to do with felf-jufficiaries, Pharifees, who trufted to the works of the law, done without faith in Chrift, as meritorious of juftification in the fight of God, and fubfituted their own works in the place of Chrift's merits; thefe the Apoftle Paul told, that finners are juffified before God, by faith alone in Chrift. The Apoftle James had to do with licentious libertines, who contented themfelves with a bare fpeculation, or mere outward profession, of the Chriftian religion, without holines of life; on those he prefied the neceffity of good works.

The faith St. Paul speaks of, is a living faith, a vital operative principle, productive of gospel holiness and obedience: The faith James speaks of, is a dead faith, a dead empty notion in the head, that produceth no good works in the life.

The justification St. Paul speaks of, is justification before God, by which a man has his fins torgiven him, is constituted righteous in his fight, and entitled to eternal life: The justification St. James speaks of, is a declarative justification before men, or the declaring and evidencing to the world, by our works, that we are justified before God. The former, is by a vital faith; the latter, by good works: that is, the holines of our lives is declarative of the truth and reality of our faith, and of our justification before God by it.

If we read with attention St. Paul's Epiftles to the Romans and Galatians, and St. James's General Epiftle, we fhall fee that St. Paul afferts, that all works of ours, both in whole and in part, are excluded from being our juftifying righteoufnels before God; and that St. James afferts, that good works are neceffary to evidence to ourfelves and others, that we are of the number of God's juftified ones. Good works do this, as they declare our faith to be unfeigned, a faith of the right kind, and as they fhew our union to Chrift to be real, that we are one fpirit with the Lord. other hand, he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God; and THE WRATH OF GOD ABIDETH ON HIM (k). He that believeth not, while his state of probation in this world lasts, shall be damned, in the world to come : be punished with EVERLASTING DE-STRUCTION*, from the prefence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power (1).

4. And, laftly, this fleeping in Jefus, fuppofes, conflancy in the faith and profession of the gospel, progress in holiness, and perfeverance to the end. Many things conspired, to shake the confidence, and overthrow the faith, of those that now rest in Jesus, after they first believed: such as, the number of bad examples, the prevalency of error, the corruption of their own nature, the blandissments of sense, the infinuations of company and acquaintance, the fophistry of pretenders to reason, in opposition to revelation, and

(k) John iii. 18---26. (1) 2 Theff. i. g.

Here, fome perfons may afk, How can it be confiftent with the justice of God, to punish the transient acts of fin with eternal mifery? To this I answer, I. The evil and demerit of fin is not to be meafured by the time in which it is committed. 2. The evil of fin is inconceivably aggravated by the majefty of Heaven, against whom it is committed. 3. There are none fent to hell, but who, could they have lived for ever on earth, would have finned. for ever. 4. The finally impenitent, carry all the malignity of fin along with them into hell, and there they continually fin against God. 5. Hell was the finner's own choice; not formally or intentionally, but virtually and interpretatively; for they may be faid to chufe the end, who chufe the means that are neceffarily connected with it. 6. Since a God of unexceptionable justice and equity has threatened the wicked with eternal mifery; there must furely be fuch a malignity in fin, as bears a due proportion to fo dreadful a punishment. 7. And as God hath threatened the wicked with this punishment, it must be owned, he can inflict it, confistent with the perfections of his own pature.

and the confidence, wit, and banter, of athieftical scoffers, at a future state of recompences :- All those worldly objects, that are most apt to affect us, through the medium of carnal fenfe, or weak puffion; fuch as, riches, and pleafures, and honours, on the one hand ; and affliction, pain, poverty, difgrace, and perfecution, on the other :- And the mighty forces, of the princes of all the infernal legions, who throng the air, and darken heaven, and croud this lower world; formidable, because numerous, invisible, politic, powerful, malicious, and of unwearied application, to deftroy the fouls of men. Now faith, which is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence, or conviction, of things not feen (m); which substantiates things not feen, brings diftant objects near, and makes them ftand true in the mind, just as the object we look at is in the eye, the form we love ever in the memory, where recollection clothes it, and fancy gives it a thousand charms (n); now faith, I fay, gave them the victory. By this, they faw the emptinels, uncertainty, fhortnefs, and difappointing nature of all worldly good things; and the fort continuance of the trials, troubles, and fufferings of the prefent life; and looking forward, they had a clear and affecting view of eternal happiness and milery : and fo were ftimulated with motives much more forcible to induce them to keep on in the way of duty, than any worldly confideration could be to draw them from it. And alfo, by this faith, there were affured of fuch divine aid and fuccour, as would be fufficient to enable them to

(m) Heb. xi. I. (n) Robinfon's Village Sermons, p. 321.

to overcome the greatest difficulties, and triumph over the most formidable enemies, in the road to eternal life. By faith, therefore, they who now fleep in Jefus, not only profeffed godlinefs, and endured for a feafon, but perfevered in well-doing; and as they first lived to God by faith, and walked in his way through life by it, fo they died in it, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life (11).

Having confidered what Reeping in Jesus fuppofes, I now come, in the SECOND place, to fnew what it implies.

And we are not to suppose, when the body dies, that there is a ceffation of progreffive motion in the whole man. The Apofile's description of the death of the righteous, or faithful fervants of God, is, that they sleep in Jesus. By this metaphor, the happy death of good and holy perfons is often expressed in fcrip: ture. So David, Solomon, Jchofhaphat, and Hezekiah, in the Old Testament, are faid to have fallen asleep. And our Lord uses it of Lazarus, in the New Testament, Our friend Lazarus SLEEPETH (0); that is, he is dead. And the Apoftle Paul, when speaking of the refurrection, fays, We shall not all SLEEP, that is, we shall not all die; but we shall all be changed (p): it is meant of those who shall be alive at Chrift's fecond coming. It is usual with the infpired writers to express the death of the faints by the term Sleep. But here we must confider, that this Sleep relates only to the body, and not at all to the foul.

There

(n) Jude 21. (o) John xi. 11. (/1) 1 Cor. xv. 51.

C 3

There is a foul in man, diftinct from the body. And the foul is the principal part of man, according to that of Hierocles, Thy foul is Thee, thy body Thine, and thy outward goods thy Body's. The body is the habitation of the foul, and the only inftrument by which it acts. The body is folid, extended, inert, and divisible; the foul is poffeffed of the powers of fenfation, perception, retention, confcioufnefs, reflection, reafon and will *. These powers are so great, that we can explore nature, fpan the furface of the earth, dive into its capacious feas, and there difcover the numerous progeny of the watry tribe :- We can travel through our own fpherical fystem, from planet to planet, tell their dimensions, measure their diftances, and follow them through their various revolutions :- We can pass the boundaries of our own, and climb into other fystems; and from thence into eternity itfelf: afcend from caufe to caufe, from the creature to the great Creator, who is the First Caufe of all things, and, with eyes of faith, gaze upon that glorious luminary of the moral world, and plunge, amazed, overpowered, and delighted, into the infinite abyfs of his divine perfections.

The

* The powers of the foul take in objects of all fizes; yet they are not in the foul, as bodies in a material place, where the greater take up more fpace than the lefs: for the thought of a mile, or ten thoufand miles, doth no more fill or firetch the foul, than that of a foot, or an inch, or a mathematical point. And whereas all matter has its parts, and those extended, one without another, into length, and breadth, and thickness, and fo is measurable by inches; yards, or folid measures; there is nothing of measurable extension in any thing belonging to the foul, neither length, nor breadth, nor thickness; nor is it possible to form an idea of a foot of thought, a yard of reason, a pound of wisdom, or a quart of virtue.

See Scott's Christian Life, 2d edit. vol. v. p. 14.

The foul is immortal in its own nature: it once began to be, but will never ceafe to exift. When the whole length of time is elapfed, it will live in immortal vigour, and its existence run parallel with the duration of eternity. It is of the fame nature with angelic beings; a pure, unmixed, fimple fubftance, altogether fpiritual and immaterial, not compounded of corruptible principles, or confifting of diffimilar, jarring, feparate parts; and fo has nothing in its nature that tends to a diffolution. The death of the foul cannot be effected by fecond caufes *; and God, the First Cause, the Father or Creator of the foul, hath affured us, he will never deprive it of its exist-Some of the Heathen philosophers attribute a ence. proper eternity to the foul; but fay that it was torn off in time, from the fubftance of God, and would in time be again refolved into that fubftance. This they explained, by a veffel filled with fea-water; which, fwimming awhile upon the ocean, does, on the veffel's breaking, flow in again, and mingle with the common mafs. We are greatly indebted to God for Revelation, which affures us of the future, diffinct, and perfonal exiftence of the foul.

Now it is quite opposite to the nature of the foul, and its effential properties, to fleep in the grave with the

* The following lines of the celebrated Mr. Addison, are ftrongly and beautifully descriptive of the immortality of the foul---

> The foul, fecur'd in her exiftence, fmiles At diffolution, and defies its power. The ftars fhall fade away, the fun himfelf Grow dim with age, and nature fink in years; But thou fhalt flourish in immortal youth---Unhurt, amidst the war of elements, The wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds.

the body. It is not capable of fleeping, it is effentially vital and active; it always acts, and cannot but act. The foul is a thinking being; and thought is as effential to it, as extension is to the body *. Our fouls are awake, when our bodies are alleep, as appears from our dreams and visions in the night; they are in action, when our bodies are at reft. Confcioufness enters into the very effence of the foul, and is infeparable from its being; and therefore, it is impossible it should fall afleep.

That the foul, at the death of the body, does not fall alleep, appears evident from fcripture testimonies: Solomon, speaking of death, fays, Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit, or foul, shall return unto God who gave it (q): that is, at death, the material body goes downward into the grave, and the foul, the spiritual part, returns immediately to God, to be judged and disposed of by him. The words of our Saviour are decisive in this case: he says, Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him, which is able to destroy both foul and body in hell(r). From which we learn, that the one may be killed, while the other is alive; and from which we are to conclude, that the foul is out of the reach of perfecutors, that fecond causes cannot kill

it

(9) Eccl. viii. 7. (r). Matt. x. 28.

* In the fourth volume of the Memoirs of the Literary and Philofophical Society, of Manchefter, the reader will find a very valuable paper, by Dr. Farrier, proving, by evidence apparently complete, that every part of the brain has been injured, without affecting the act of thought; the reafoning of which memoir, being built on matters of fact and experience, appears to have fhaken the modern theory of the Materialifts from its very foundation. it, that it cannot die, and that it exifts, after the death of the body, in a feparate flate, either of happinefs, or mifery, according to its behaviour in the body.

Befides, it is clear to a demonstration, that this was the fettled perfuafion of the primitive Christians: The Apostle Paul tells the Corinthians, Whilft we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. Here the Apostle represents himself and companions, and all holy Chriftians, as belonging, in different refpects, to two feveral countries. By their natural birth, and while they live in the mortal body, they belong to this world. Here they came into being, and this is at prefent their refidence. So that it may, on these accounts, be called their home in the body. But then, as they are new-born, born of God, they belong to another and better country, where Chrift, their Lord, dwells; this, as faints, is their more proper home. Now, while in the body, in this world, they are absent from the Lord, in the other. The Apostle shews, how they were absent from the Lord: For we walk by faith, not by fight : i. e. in the prefent ftate and world, we have not an immediate fight of Chrift our Lord, as we fhall have, when in heaven; but walk by faith, which is the evidence of things not Jeen. God hath revealed the future flate of happinefs, and hath promifed it to his people, and upon his teftimony they believe it, and on the foundation of his promife, hope for it; and fo walk by this faith, and are faved by this hope. Faith is the great leading, influencing principle of the Christian's life and walk ... Upon

Upon this principle, he is able to fay, Though the heavenly state is invisible to me, while in this world, yet I am fully perfuaded of the truth of it, and of happiness after death; and that when absent from the body, I shall be present with the Lord; shall certainly enter into his glory, and be admitted into a state of immediate vision and enjoyment, upon the diffolution of my prefent frame. The cafe being thus, the Apostle declares which of these he, and his faithful brethren, would choofe, if they had their defire : We are confident, I fay, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord (f); i. e. We should be much better pleased, to leave the body, and go home to the Lord; we are willing to die, for the fake of being with the Lord; this is what we approve of, in our most deliberate judgment of things. This arole to fuch a pitch in this Apostle, that he was reduced to a strait. He fays, I am in a strait betwixt two, having a defire to depart, and to be with Chrift; which is far better (t); i.e. His willingness of further service to the church, on one fide; and his defire of being with Chrift, on the other, pressed him hard. His own defire, was to depart, and be with Christ: this he accounted far better for himself: This indeed was, of all other things, the most delightful to his foul, and the proper fatisfaction of his highest hopes.

Our Lord promifed the penitent thief, on the crofs, that he fhould be with him in paradife that very day (u). While the Jews were ftoning Stephen, he recommended

(1) 2 Cor. v. 6--8. (1) Phil. ii. 3.

(u) Luke xxiii. 43.

recommended his foul into the hands of Chrift, in these words, Lord Jefus, receive my spirit; and having faid this, he fell asleep; i. e. he died (x). And when Lazarus died, he was carried by angels into Abraham's boson immediately; that is, into heaven, the palace of God, and the habitation of angels and glorified faints. Saints are the charge of angels in this world, and their delightful associates in heaven, for ever. Abraham's boson, is an expression that denotes the ease and rest that holy fouls there enjoy, as a child in the boson, or a spin in the haven; and also, the dear affection that glorified spirits bear to one another.

Now, that Reep is a very proper and just reprefentation of death, will appear, if we confider the agree- . ment between the two ideas, between fleep and death. And first, they that are asleep, are infensible of every thing that paffes without them; they neither fee nor hear any thing, their fenfes are fo clofely bound up, that the foul can have no communion with external objects : In like manner, they that are dead, and fhut up in the grave, have no farther any thing to do with the world. This is reprefented in the book of Job, in an elegant manner : Thou changeft his countenance, and fendeft him away. His fons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he percoiveth it not of them (y). They know not any thing that is done under the fun (z). When their breath goeth forth, they return to the earth: and in that very day their thoughts perish (a); i. e. their purposes and defigns for this world,

(x) Acts vii. 59--60. (y) Job. xiv. 20, 21. (z) Ecc. ix. 5, 6. (a) Pfal. cxlvi. 4. world; as it is explained in Job, My days are past, my purposes are broken off, even the thoughts of my heart (b).

Again, they that are afleep are at reft. While we are awake, we are in motion and bufinefs, but at night we retire, and go to reft: So the dead are at reft in the grave. Hence the grave is compared to a bed, they shall rest in their beds (c). The grave is the refting-place of all; their bodies there reft from all manner of labour, there is no work nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (d). The good Chriftian refts at death from every thing, that was unealy to him here; from all the difappointments of life, from all fickness and pains of the body, from all opprefiions and perfecutions of wicked men; there, namely, in the grave, the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary are at reft (e). And as to their fouls, in the future flate, there is nothing to diffurb their repofe, or interrupt their happiness and joy : they rest from their labours, there is no more forrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are paffed away (f).

And alfo the fleep of the body is not perpetual; we fleep, and wake again. Thus, though the bodies of the righteous fleep for many ages in the grave, as Abel's has done, yet they fhall awake again, in the morning of the refurrection. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is Death (g); as it is written, I will ransom them from the power of the grave : I will redeem them from death : O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be

(b) Job. xvii. 11. (c) Ifa. lvii. 2. (d) Ecc. ix. 10. (e) Job. iii. 17. (f) Rev. xiv. 13, and xxi. 4. (g) 1 Cor. xv. 26.

be thy destruction (h). Though after my fkin, fays Job, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I fee God : Whom I Shall fee for myfelf, and mine eyes Shall behold, and not for another; though my reins be confumed within me (i). I shall be fatisfied, fays the Pfalmist, when I awake with thy likeness (k). The Prophet fays, Thy dead men Shall live, together with my dead body Shall they arife : awake, and fing, ye that dwell in the duft (1). And as we awake and rife, after a found fleep, much refreshed; so the dead in Christ shall rife with new vigour of nature, and with capacities much enlarged and improved. This is reprefented by the Apofile, in one general view, Who Mall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, ascording to the working whereby he is able even to fubdue all things to himself (m). And he specifies the qualities of the raifed bodies of the faints, in four particulars, namely, It, i. e. the body, is fown in corruption, it is raifed in incorruption : It is forwn in dishonour, it is raised in glory : It is forwn in weakness, it is raised in power: It is forwn a natural body, it is raifed a spiritual body (n).

Chrift's refurrection is the first-fruits of them that fleep *. In this, we have a demonstration that God is

D

(h) Hof. xiii. 14. (i) Job xix. 26, 27. (k) Pfa. xvii. 15. (l) Ifa. xxvi. 19. (m) Phil. iii. 21. (n) 1 Cor. xv. 42---44.

* Chrift's refurrection is the pledge and pattern of the faints' refurrection: and as he is the head, and they the members, will infallibly infer it. Therefore, to prove Chrift's refurrection, is to prove the refurrection of the faints. And the refurrection of Chrift is confirmed, not only by his friends, but alfo by his enemies. Pilate gave an account of the refurrection of Jefus, and the miracles which attended it, to the emperor Tiberias, and the Roman fenate, in whofe records the account was entered; to which records, both Tertullian, Eufebius, and others, appealed, in their apologies for is able to raife the dead; and he will most certainly do it. Chrift, as rifen, and appointed to be the Judge of all mankind, will, by his power, bring up the bodies of all the wicked, his enemies, from the grave, to receive their doom from his mouth : but the faints shall be raifed by him, as their Redeemer and Saviour, in the way of favour, in order to their full felicity, and to his own honour. The former shall be conftrained, against their will, to appear, being brought forth as malefactors to be punified : the other shall chearfully awake, and at the opening of their eyes, break forth into finging, O, death, where is thy fling ! O, grave, where is thy victory ! Where is now thy power, by which thou didft deprive our bodies of life when on earth? O grave, where is now thy dominion, by which thou didft fo long detain us, thy prifoners? O death and the grave, fo cruel as to fpare none, and fo ftrong as to conquer all; from the infant the Christians. And it is faid, that the emperor Tiberias fo far believed the report, as to put forth an edict, for burning fuch alive, as perfecuted the Chriftians, if they could prove nothing against them, but their profession of Christianity. We have fomething every year like the raifing of a dead body. The grain, that is fown in the earth, rots and dies; yet it fprings up again fresh and green; its rotting in the earth, is fo far from being an hinderance, that it is a proper and neceffary preparative, to its rifing again. And corn doth not rife in the fame figure in which it was fown, but it rifes in the fame nature. That which was fown wheat, oats, or barley, or other grain, rifes the fame ; but all thefe rife with stalk, blade, and ear, without which they were fown; the fame in fubflance, but not in condition : So will the bodies of men do; they will be the fame in fubftance, but they will have different qualities from what they had before. And though the fame in fubftance, yet not as to all the fame individual numerical particles, of which they confifted before they died. There is no man now living, that is the fame, as to the numerical parts of his body, that he was feven years ago; nay, fome particles of our bodies are ftill flying off by perfpiration, and new ones added by our daily aliment.

infant to the aged, from the peafant to the king on the throne; ye are now both of you fo perfectly conquered, as never more to be! And thanks be to God, which give thus the victory, through our Lord Jefus Christ.

I come now, in the THIRD and LAST place, to confider the text, as defigned to comfort furviving relatives, on the death of their friends, that they forrow not, even as others which have no hope.

The Apostle here has an eye to the Heathens, who looked upon the doctrine of the refurrection of the dead, as abfurd and impoffible. Hence, that question of the Apostle, to king Agrippa, Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God hould raife the dead (o) ? Tertullian observes, that it was denied by every fect of the Heathen philosophers : with them it was the fubject of ridicule and contempt. The Athenian philosophers, of the Epicurean and Stoic fects, mocked the Apostle Paul, when he preached to them Jefus and the refurrection : they were fo ignorant of this doctrine, that they took Jefus and the refurrection, to be the names of fome ftrange deities they had never heard of before. Confequent. ly, when they lost their friends and relatives, they forrowed without hope, having no certain hope of a future flate of happinels for good men, nor of the refurrection of their bodies to eternal life at the laft day. But if we have ground to believe, that our relations died in the faith, and fleep in Jefus, and that in the morning of the refurrection, they shall awake to a D 2 bleffed bleffed immortality, we fhould keep our forrow for them within due bounds.

(o) Acts xxvi. 8.

Let us observe, that the Apostle doth not forbid Chriftians a moderate forrow for the death of their relations : the Chriftian religion has no tendency to eradicate our paffions, but only to correct and govern them. Moderate forrow for the death of our beloved relatives is very c onfiftent with, nay very becoming our Christian profession, and is due to their memory, efpecially if they were pious. Our bleffed Saviour himfelf, who was never guilty of the leaft excels, wept over the grave of Lazarus, his familiar acquaintance and friend, infomuch, that the Jews faid, Behold, how he loved him ! To remain unmoved, when we fee a father or mother, an husband or wife, a brother or fister, an intimate acquaintance or friend, die, has fomething in it very unnatural; especially, when perfons of eminent piety and ufefulnefs are removed by death: not to be moved, is floical apathy, which is opposite to the feelings of Christianity. It is only immoderate, exceffive forrow for the death of our relations or others, that the Apostle, in the text, diffuades from.

Indeed, the lofs of relatives and friends, and the appearance of their lifelefs bodies, is very affecting. To fee a face, which a little before bleffed us with fmiles, now covered with palenefs, all ghaftly and horrid; the fparkling eye funk and fightlefs; the mouth, which a few days before opened with wifdom and authority, now clofed in filence; the light of life extinguished, and all its enjoyments and comforts forts at an end; our dearest relatives and friends torn away from our embraces, and confined to the dark and folitary prifon of the grave ;- is a gloomy and forrowful scene! yet, aided by revelation, we can follow the fouls of our pious departed relatives and friends, to a clime of happinefs, large as their defires, and lafting as their duration. Death is to them their paffage to God: as it is the conclusion of their natural, fo it is the beginning of an eternal life: it is their happy releafe from all the miferies and troubles of this prefent evil world, and their introduction to all the pure joys and unmixed pleafures of the heavenly state : it is a dark vale, which when once past, opens to the Christian, the bright, glorious, and permanent scenes of a world of perfect light and confumate felicity. Oh ! what a happy change does the believer in Chrift make when he changes worlds. His death is the period to all his toils, and the accomplifiment of his beft wifnes : he then receives the end of his faith and hope, the compleat falvation of his foul, and the laft day of his life is the first of his glory.

Though pious departed relatives and friends cannot return, to live with us on earth again, and blefs us with their company, example, prayers, and advice; yet, the way is open, and we can go to them: If we are now living in the fear and love of God, by faith in Jefus Chrift, we are on our way to them, and the time of feparation fhall not be long. The whole compafs of life in this world, is but a flort fpace. We are daily making the journey lefs. The profpect D 3 brightens as we advance. The New Jerufalem will foon appear. by faith we fee the city. Its inhabitants view us with wifhful eyes, and wait our arrival. They mark our weary fteps, behold our painful conflicts, and rejoice when we are victorious. And when the hour of our departure arrives, we fhall embrace each other, meet together above, and part no more for ever.

I shall now come to speak a little of our deceased and much refpected friend, Mr. Afpden was born at Harwood, in this neighbourhood. He was educated at Clithero, under the tuition of the Rev. Mr. Willon. When his education was finished, his father bound him apprentice to the prefent Dr. St. Clare of Preston, who then resided in this town: and a letter from the Doctor to him, teftifies, that during his apprenticeship, he was affiduous in business, and moral in his behaviour. When he was at liberty to act for himfelf, he went to London, where he flayed but a little while: from thence he went to Richmond, in Surry, and was with a Mr. Charlton, a perfon in great practice; and who made Mr. Afpden confiderable offers to continue with him. But after being about twelve months in the fervice of Mr. Charlton, there being a vacancy at Coln, his father wrote to him, and firongly urged him to embrace it; and, though at that time he preferred the fituation where he was, yet, prompted by filial affection, and parental authority, he gave it up, and gratified his father's wifnes. He went to Coln; where he was fuccefsful in bufinels, and much respected by a numerous acquaintance ance. But what endeared that place and people to him, more than every other confideration, was his being brought to the faving knowledge of God while he was there. In a letter to a friend at Coln, which he wrote a little before his death, after fpeaking of his ficknefs, and of the confidence he had in God, that if he were to die in that fickness, that he should go to heaven; he fays, " I now remember with gratitude more than ufual, the mercies which God beflowed on me and my dear wife, when at Coln, and I fear not but our fmall beginnings there will end in glory. I'll praife him while he lends me breath." And he adds, " Forget not to remember me to all my dear Chriftian friends and brethren at Coln; when I get to heaven, I shall praise God for fending me thither."

He joined the Methodifts there, in the year 1790, believing that a union with them would be of great advantage to him in a fpiritual fenfe; which he found to be true. He fought the favour of God, in Chrift, with all his heart, and found it, which enabled him to rejoice in God his Saviour, and praife him with joyful lips. This experience is agreeable to the word of God; and the excellent liturgy of the church of England afferts, that God pardoneth and abfolveth all thofe that truly repent, and unfeignedly believe his holy gofpel.

Though our worthy friend was peculiarly happy in his connections at Coln; yet, when he had been there about feven years, bodily indifpofition caufed a local feparation between him, and his friends and acquaintances; quaintances; being afflicted in body, and thinking Blackburn a more favourable fituation, he came to live in this town. He foon became a very confidential member of this fociety; and, confequently, was chofen a Leader of a clafs, and was much refpected by its members; was elected a Truftee of this Chapel, and made a Steward of the whole Circuit, which takes in feveral leffer focieties connected with the Society in this town. His genuine and fleady piety, and his inceffant efforts to do good, endeared him to all his Chriftian brethren.

In the line of his profession, his connections were large, and his conduct almost unexampled. When called out, particularly on the midwifery butiness, it was usual with him, either before or after delivery, to acknowledge God, and call upon him for help, or return him thanks for mercies received; and fo directed all around him to God, in Christ, as the great Author and Giver of all good.

He was a Member of the Gentlemen Cavalry of this town: believing, that in the bible, which he made the rule of his faith and practice, religion and loyalty were joined together; and being fenfible of the many privileges, both civil and facred, we enjoy, under the reign of his most gracious Majesty; and hearing and feeing gentlemen come forward, and voluntarily enrolling and embodying themselves, to stand by, and defend, our rights and privileges, as men and Britons, he thought it his duty to join them, which he did, and never deviated from this fentiment to the last.

I come

I come now to the concluding scene of his life. About three months ago, he was attacked with violent and threatening fymptoms of the diforder which iffued in his diffolution. He afterwards described it, in the letter already mentioned, as follows : " I am at prefent a little better, but fuch are the flattering appearances which my complaint puts on, that I cannot yet have any great expectation of a perfect recovery. I have had a fever, which has attacked me very irregularly, in the afternoon and night, and fometimes very feverely. The medical gentlemen whom I have confulted, are now, I think, unanimoufly of opinion, that it is of an hectic kind, which kind accompanies always a confumption of the lungs. A little time, however, will fhew how it will be with me; until when, I intend using every means which men in repute can recommend unto me, and afterward leave the event." And refpecting the flate of his mind, and his views of futurity, he adds, "Since my attack, I have in general found an abundance of peace. I am furrounded with mercies; I lack no manner of thing that is good: I fee no caufe for complaining. I have not a doubt, but, if I am to go in this ficknefs, that the Lord will perfect what is lacking in my foul, and fit me for himfelf."

In this flate of refignation and confidence in God, on Monday the 30th of September, he fet out for Liverpool, intending to make a voyage to the Ifle of Mann, which a gentleman, of great medical fkill, had warmly recommended to him, as the laft expedient in his cafe. But, alas ! when he got to Liverpool, his weaknefs. weaknefs was fo great, and his complaint fo rapid, that it was judged, by gentlemen of the faculty there, very improper for him to proceed, and who urged him to return home immediately, which he accordingly did, with very great difficulty, on Thurfday the 13th.

His relations and friends now began to give up every hope of his recovery, and to view him as fhortly to leave them, and become an inhabitant of another world. He was refigned to his fate; his placid looks were expressive of the confidence and ferenity of his foul. He knew that death could not hurt him, that it had loft its fling, and was disfarmed of its terrors; nay, that in drawing afide the curtain of mortality, it would unvail eternity to his view, and open a free paffage for his foul, to travel to his redeeming God, the fociety of the glorified, and the full fruition of his higheft wishes.

On the Tuesday morning following, he had a very glorious manifestation of divine love to his soul, and was so unspeakably happy as to praise God aloud. He faid, "The Lord passes by indeed, and bleffes my soul. What an amazing support is it to the body, as well as the mind ! what should I do now without religion? O! blefs theLord!" O religion ! thou despised name, what art thou worth? Thy lovers are comfortable in life, happy in death, and triumph for evermore. He was continually lifting up his heart to God: and faid to one of the members of his class, "Those are bleffed words of our Lord, Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you : not as the world giveth, give I unto you." And of himfelf he faid, "Having nothing, yet possessing all things. What a mercy I ever knew any thing of God."

the

He was in the fame fpirit all the fucceeding days of his life. He often faid to me when I called upon him, My foul doth magnify the Lord, and my fpirit doth rejoice in God my Saviour. On Saturday morning he wifhed a hymn fung, and joined in it with great delight: and at prayer repeatedly exclaimed, "Glory be to God." It was a profitable feafon to those prefent. On Sunday night he faid, "My heart is fixed, O God my heart is fixed; I will fing and give praife.

About eight o'clock on Monday night, at which hour he altered much for the worfe, he faid to Mrs. Afpden, in the prefence of many of his relatives and friends who ftood round his bed, "I know I muft die: and I know I love God: and I know I love Jefus Chriff: and I know I am going to glory." And he continued talking of Jefus, and praifing him for his goodnefs, till his tongue fo faultered that he could not articulate words. He made one remarkable effort, in fhewing the neceffity of having our robes wafhed and made white in the blood of the Lamb; that thofe fo wafhed, would be admitted through the gates into the city of the New Jerufalem; and that the final neglect of this, would be attended with inevitable damnation.

After this he died apace, breathing fhorter and fhorter, till, at half paft eleven o'clock, he fell assess in Jefus, without either figh or groan, and his happy foul ascended to heaven, to be for ever with the Lord; for for if there be a heaven, he is in it (\dagger) . His death is an irretrievable lofs to his worthy partner, is much regretted by his friends, and is fincerely lamented by the public at large, of the truth of which, this large and very refpectable audience is one proof. May heaven fupport the furviving relatives, effectially the Relict of the deceafed, and affift them to look forward to the heavenly country, where he now is, and daily prepare for it: and may we all be followers of him, as he was of Chrift; that when our days on earth are gone, our reciprocal attachment to each other in time, may be confummated in eternal glory; that when it fhall be faid of us, as in a little time it fhall be, they are dead, it may alfo be faid, they are happy.

† Think'ft thou the theme intoxicates my fong ? And I too warm ?--- Too warm I cannot be. I lov'd him much; but now I love him more. ---How bleffings brighten as they take their flight ! His flight PHILANDER took; his upward flight, If ever foul alcended.

YOUNG.

