SEVENTEENTH

ANNUAL ANNOUNCEMENT

OF THE

MEDICAL COLLEGE

OF

GEORGIA.

AUGUSTA, GA.

PRINTED BY JAS. McCAFFERTY.

1848.

ANNUAL ANNOUNCEMENT, &c.

The Trustees of this Institution are much gratified to have it in their power to announce to the Medical Profession, that their Faculty have resolved to comply with the recommendations made by the Medical Convention and reiterated by the Medical Association. They have accordingly extended the course of Lectures from four to five months, to be commenced on the first Monday in November next. In thus adding to their labors, the Faculty have been actuated by the desire to demonstrate to the Profession that the prosperity of their school will rather prove an incentive to increased exertions, than to retrograde indolence. The age in which we live is emphatically one of progress and one in which therefore no institution should be deemed worthy of patronage which can remain satisfied with the statu quo. The large and respectable bodies above named, have loudly sounded the note of reformation; this has been re-echoed by the profession throughout our land; and shall it not be heeded by those upon whom devolves the responsible office of teaching? The Trustees of the Medical College of Georgia confidently appeal to the Profession, to sustain the institution which was first to adopt a six months course of Lectures, first to call a national convention for purposes of reformation; and which now boldly comes up to the recommendations of the Medical Association. It is true that it was not sustained in its effort in 1832 to continue the term six months, and it is equally true that it did not succeed in the attempt to assemble a convention in 1836. This Institution at that time stood alone in its cry of reformation. The Profession at large has since, however, awakened to the subject, and spoken in language that cannot be misunderstood. The time has come when to be luke-warm in the matter must be suicidal. Professors must redouble their zeal, and by so doing inspire pupils with that industry and desire for knowledge which characterize the age, and without which none should expect to succeed in the discharge of an honorable and responsible vocation. The issue is now fairly made between those who desire to do their whole duty to society, and those who would rather remain behind than incur the risk of diminishing their emoluments by a change which is acknowledged on all hands to be necessary to substantial acquirements. The Trustees believe that their Faculty incur no such risk, that the Profession will be with them unanimously in this section of the country, and that their onward career of prosperity will suffer no check.

In addition to the courses heretofore delivered, there will be one upon Medical Jurisprudence, specially. The Faculty will endeavor to make their instruction as demonstrative as practicable, and, in order to bring before the Class as many surgical cases as possible, the friends and alumni of this Institution are invited to send to the faculty, during the course of Lectures, persons in indigent circumstances who may require surgical operations, provisions being made for their accommodation whilst under treatment.

The college building is undergoing such renovation as may be necessary to add to its convenience and comfort. The Anatomical room will be much enlarged and so modified as to make the demonstrations plainly visible to the whole Class. Ample opportunities for the prosecution of practical Anatomy will be secured.

The City Hospital, being under the direction of the Faculty, is accessible to the class daily, and clinical lectures are there delivered regularly at least twice a week. The Infirmary of the Professor of Surgery is likewise open to the class. In short, the Faculty will lose no opportunity to bring cases of interest before the students, in order to familiarize them with disease.

The Course of Lectures will be delivered as follows:

By Prof. G. M. NEWTON, M. D.,

Upon Anatomy, General and Descriptive.

By Prof. L. A. DUGAS, M. D.,

Upon Physiology and Pathological Anatomy.

By Prof. ALEXANDER MEANS, M. D.,
