THE Court of Examiners of the SOCIETY OF APOTHECARIES OF LONDON have witnessed with great satisfaction the benefits derived from the course of study enjoined by them, in the increased acquirements of the Candidates who present themselves for Examination; and being assured that the time is arrived when it behoves them to complete the scheme which they have long had in view, and to which they have advanced by successive and cautious steps, they now publish an extended course of study, which, although it may perhaps require hereafter some modification in the details, may be considered, both in extent and duration, as final.

In prolonging the period of study, the Court feel confident that they are consulting the interests of the public, and that they are also acting in accordance with the wishes of the Profession generally, and more especially of the enlightened body of gentlemen engaged in teaching medicine and the various sciences connected therewith, who have, for some time past, expressed their sense of the great advantages which would result from a systematic arrangement of the Sessions at the Medical Schools, and of the particular subjects of study appropriate for the Winter and Summer seasons. The Court will be solicitous to lessen whatever inconvenience may, in the first instance, be attendant upon this important change; and they will be ready to pay attention to the cases of such Students as may be prevented by peculiar circumstances from commencing their attendance at the Schools in the early part of October, the period of the year at which it is most especially desirable that such attendance should, in future, commence.

The liberality of the Physicians of the London Hospitals in promptly acceding to the wishes of the Court, that Students might have afforded to them a more extended opportunity of studying Practical Medicine without any augmentation of expense, has enabled the Court to require an attendance of the Student for eighteen months at an Hospital instead of twelve; and to this boon the Physicians would add a yet more essential service by inducing the Governors of the Hospitals with which they are connected, to re-organise their respective out-patient establishments, and afford to Students an opportunity of studying large and important classes of disease, which are very rarely admitted within the wards of an Hospital*.

The great advantages which Students have derived from a regular course of periodic examinations, in the schools in which this system has been adopted, associated with a systematic and combined course of reading and oral instruction, induce the Court again to press this subject especially upon the attention of Teachers. The use of a class-book also, for each particular branch of study, would better enable the Student to reduce into order the numerous facts placed before him, and to refer again and again to such points as require a sustained exercise of the powers of reasoning, for their full and clear comprehension.

The Legislature having made an apprenticeship of five years imperative upon all students, and having permitted

* It appears by the Parliamentary Tables, that more than one half of the deaths which annually take place, are those of children under five years of age, and of the aged, above seventy. The diseases of these two classes, and those of women in the pregnant and puerperal state, cannot be studied at Hospitals, as they are now constituted.

them to present themselves for examination at the age of twenty-one, obviously intended that the greater part of their medical education should be included within that period; and the Court have great pleasure in stating, that in very many instances Students have actually completed their course of study, and have been admitted to an examination, within a few weeks after the termination of their apprenticeship. It is, however, to be regretted that this advantage has frequently been lost sight of, and that a great proportion of this valuable time, and not unfrequently the whole term of it, has been passed exclusively in practical Pharmacy. The Court are desirous of impressing upon parents the necessity of preventing this waste of time, by making such arrangements with practitioners with whom they place their sons, as may enable the young men to commence their attendance upon Lectures in the course of the third year of their apprenticeship.

The Court renew their recommendation that the apprenticeship should not begin until the youth has attained his seventeenth year, that he should previously have received a sound classical education, have been instructed in the elements of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, and have acquired a knowledge of the French, and, if possible, the German languages.

The period of apprenticeship is by no means to be considered as of small importance; during that time it is incumbent upon the Master to take care that his apprentice keeps up and extends, by a regular course of reading, both his classical and general knowledge; it is also his duty to ascertain, by occasional examinations, that his pupil is acquiring the elements of professional knowledge; and that he becomes acquainted with the nomenclature of the profession, the manipulations of Pharmacy, and the elements of Osteology; whilst opportunities should be afforded him of watching the progress of disease, and of noticing the effects of remedies.

The Court have reason to believe, that students would in many instances gladly avail themselves of an opportunity of passing their Latin examination upon the commencement of their studies at the Medical Schools; the Court have, therefore, arranged a plan for that purpose, which may be adopted at the option of the student, at the time of registering his first attendance upon Lectures. After this preliminary examination in Latin has been satisfactorily passed, the Student will not be subjected to any farther examination in Latin medical classics.

The Court of Examiners have only to add, that they have framed the following course of study with especial reference to the surgical as well as medical duties which devolve upon the general practitioner when engaged in practice, and with the knowledge that Students, with few exceptions, pass an examination in Surgery at the Royal College of Surgeons, as well as one in Medicine at the Hall: the Court have, therefore, taken care to afford every facility for a strict conformity with the regulations of the College, as well as with those which they have themselves enjoined. The Court exhort Students not to rest satisfied with a mere formal compliance with the injunctions of authority, but to be actuated by still higher motives, and to find in these an incentive to a zealous and generous devotion of their time, their labour, and their best faculties, to the acquisition of a comprehensive and accurate knowledge of the principles of the healing art.
