"very Whip and Cushion of the same Stuff and "Colour.

"In this Chariot sat the four Grand Masquers
"of Gray's-Inn, their Habits, Doublets, Trunk"hose

" hose and Caps of most rich Cloth of Tissue,
" and wrought as thick with Silver Spangles as " they could be placed; large white Silk Stock" ings up to their Trunk-hose, and rich Sprigs in " their Caps; themselves proper and beautiful
" young Gentlemen.

" On each Side of the Chariot were four " Footmen, in Liveries of the Colour of the Cha" riot, carrying huge Flamboys in their Hands,
" which, with the Torches, gave such a Lustre
" to the Paintings, Spangles, and Habits, that " hardly any Thing could be invented to appear " more glorious.

" After this Chariot came six more Musicians
" on Foot-Cloths, and in Habits like the for" mer; these were followed by the second Cha" riot, as the Lot fell for the Middle-Temple.
" This differed not in any Thing from the former,
" but in Colours only, which were of this Cha" riot Silver and Blue. The Chariot and Horses
" were covered and decked with Cloth of Tissue,
" of Blue and Silver, as the former was with Silver
" and Crimson.

" In this second Chariot were the four Grand
" Masquers of the Middle-Temple, in the same
" Habits as the other Masquers were, and " with the like Attendance, Torches, and " Flamboys with the former. After these fol" lowed the third and fourth Chariots, and six
" Musicians between each Chariot, habited " on Foot-Cloths and Horses as before. The " Chariots were all of the same Make, and " alike carved and painted, differing only in the " Colours.

" In the third Chariot rode the Grand Masquers
" of the Inner-Temple; and in the fourth Chariot " went those of Lincoln's-Inn, according to the " Lot of each of them.

" The Habits of the sixteen Grand Masquers
" were all the same, their Persons most handsome " and lovely, the Equipage so full of State and " Height of Gallantry, that it never was outdone
" by any Representation mentioned in our former " Stories."

Ibid.

" In this Order they proceeded to Whitehall,
" where the King and Queen from a Window of " the Banqueting-House beheld the stately Proce-" sion; wherewith they were so highly delighted,
" that the King sent to the Marshal thereof, to " desire him to fetch a Turn round the Tilt-Yard,
" that he and his Consort might have the Satisfac" tion of a second View of that most pompous
" Procession; which being accordingly performed,
" they entered the Palace, and were conducted to " several Apartments prepared for the Entertain" ment; where the Ladies of Honour not only ho" noured the Masquers by dancing with them, but " likewise the Queen herself, by dancing with di" vers of the principal.

" The Masquerade in all its Parts being per" formed with such an amazing Dexterity and Pomp,
" that the Royal Consort was thereby so extremely " well pleased, that she desired to have it repeated;
" which Ralph Freeman, the Lord-Mayor, receiv" ing Intimation of, he invited the King and " Queen, and the aforesaid Masquers, to an En" tertainment in the City, where he regaled their
" Majesties in Merchant-Taylors Hall with the ut" most Magnificence. On this Occasion the above-mentioned Masquers came in Procession into the City, and performed the Masquerade in all its Parts, with the same Dexterity, Splendor, and Applause as at Whitehall. After which, the Masquers were sumptuously entertained by the said Mayor.

The King having resolved to raise Money of his Subjects without the Assent of Parliament, for the fitting out a formidable Fleet (which Impost is known by the Appellation of Ship-Money;) for putting the said Resolution in Execution, he sent the following Writ to the City of London:

Carolus Rex, &c.

" To the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens
" of our City of London, and to the Sheriffs of " the same City, and good Men in the said City,
" and in the Liberties and Members of the same,
" greeting.

" Because we are given to understand, that " certain Thieves, Pirates, and Robbers of the " Sea, as well Turks, Enemies of the Christian
" Name, as others, being gathered together,
" wickedly taking by Force, and spoiling the " Ships and Goods and Merchandizes, not only " of our Subjects, but also of the Subjects of our " Friends in the Sea, which hath been accustomed
" antiently to be defended by the English Na" tion; and the same, at their Pleasure, they " have carried away, delivering the Men in the " same into a miserable Captivity: And foras-
" much as we see them daily preparing all Man" ner of Shipping, farther to molest our Mer" chants, and to grieve the Kingdom, unless " Remedy be not sooner applied, and their En" deavours be not more manly met withal: Also
" the Dangers considered, which on every Side
" in these Times of War do hang over our " Heads, that it behoveth us and our Subjects
" to hasten the Defence of the Sea and Kingdom
" with all Expedition or Speed that we can: We,
" willing, by the Help of God, chiefly to pro" vide for the Defence of the Kingdom, Safe" guard of the Sea, Security of our Subjects,
" Safe-conduct of Ships and Merchandizes to our " Kingdom of England coming, and from the " same Kingdom to foreign Parts passing; for-" asmuch as we, and our Progenitors, Kings of " England, have been always heretofore Masters " of the aforesaid Sea; and it would be very " irksome unto us, if that Princely Honour, in " our Times, should be lost, or in any Thing " diminished.

" And although that Charge of Defence, which " concerneth all Men, ought to be supported by " all, as by the Laws and Customs of the King" dom of England hath been accustomed to be " done; notwithstanding, we considering, that " you constituted in the Sea Coasts, to whom by " Sea as well great Dangers are imminent, and " who by the same do get more plentiful Gains,

 "and Allegiance wherein ye are bound unto us,
 "and as ye do love us and our Honour, and "under the Forfeiture of all which ye can for-

 "Ship of War of the Burthen of nine hundred
 "Tuns, with three hundred and fifty Men at "the least, as well expert Masters as very able
 "and skilful Mariners; one other Ship of War
 "of eight hundred Tuns, with two hundred "and sixty Men at least, as well skilful Masters
 "as very able and expert Mariners; four other "Ships of War, every of them of the Burthen of "five hundred Tuns, and every of them with
 "two hundred Men at least, as well expert "Masters as very able and skilful Mariners; and "one other Ship of War, of the Burthen of "three hundred Tuns, with a hundred and "fifty Men, as well expert Masters as very able "and skilful Mariners; and also every of the "said Ships with Ordinance, as well greater as "lesser, Gunpowder, and Spears and Weapons,
 "and other necessary Arms sufficient for War,
 "and with double Tackling, and with Victuals,
 "until the said 1st of March, competent for "so many Men; and from that Time, for "twenty-six Weeks, at your Charges, as well
 "in Victuals as in Mens Wages, and other "Things necessary for War, during that Time,
 "upon Defence of the Sea in our Service, in "Command of the Admiral of the Sea, to whom "we shall commit the Custody of the Sea, before
 "the aforesaid 1st Day of March, and as he,
 "on our Behalf, shall command them to con"tinue; so that they may be there the same Day
 "at the farthest, to go from thence with our "Ships, and the Ships of other faithful Subjects,
 "for the Safe-guard of the Sea, and Defence
 "of you and yours, and Repulse and Vanquish-
 "ing of whomsoever busying themselves to mo"lest or trouble upon the Sea our Merchants,
 "and other Subjects, and faithful People com"ing into our Dominions for Cause of Merchan"dize, or from thence returning to their own "Countries.

"Also we have assigned you, the aforesaid
 "Mayor and Aldermen of the City aforesaid, or "any thirteen or more of you, within thirty "Days after the Receipt of this Writ, to assess
 "all Men in the said City, and in the Liberties
 "and Members of the same; and the Land"holders in the same, not having a Ship or any "Part of the aforesaid Ships, nor serving in the "same, to contribute to the Expences about the "necessary Provision of the Premises; and to "assess and lay upon the aforesaid City, with "the Liberties and Members thereof, viz. upon "every of them, according to their Estate and "Substances, and the Portion assessed upon "them; and to nominate and appoint Col"lectors in this Behalf. Also we have assigned
 "you, the aforesaid Mayor, and also the Sheriffs
 "of the City aforesaid, to levy the Portions
 "so as aforesaid assessed upon the aforesaid Men
 "and Landholders, and every of them in the "aforesaid City, with the Liberties and Mem"bers of the same, by Distress and other

"due Means; and to commit to Prison all "those whom you shall find rebellious and
 "contrary in the Premises, there to remain
 "until we shall give further Orders for their De"livery.

"And moreover, we command you, that "about the Premises you diligently attend, and
 "do and execute those Things with Effect,
 "upon Peril that shall fall thereon: But we "will not, that, under Colour of our aforesaid
 "Command, more should be levied of the said
 "Men than shall suffice for the necessary Ex-"pences of the Premises; or that any, who have "levied Money for Contribution, to raise the "aforesaid Charges, should by him detain the "same, or any Part thereof, or should pre"sume, by any Manner of Colour, to appro"priate the same to other Uses; willing, that if "more than may be sufficient shall be collected,
 "the same may be paid out among the Contri"butors, for the Rate of the Part to them be"longing.

"Witness myself at Westminster, the 20th "Day of October, in the tenth Year of our
 "Reign."

Upon the Receipt of this arbitrary Command, a Common Council was summoned to deliberate thereon; wherein it was resolved to present the following Petition to the King, for Relief against that illegal and exorbitant Demand:

"That whereas your Majesty by Writ, bear"ing teste 20 Octoberis last, commanded your Pe"titioners, at their Charge, to provide seven
 "Ships of War, furnished with Men, Victual,
 "and all warlike Provisions, to be at Portsmouth
 "by the 1st of March next, and to continue
 "from thence by the Space of twenty-six Weeks,
 "in your Majesty's Service, upon the Defence
 "of the Seas, and other Causes in the said Writ
 "contained;

"Your Petitioners do in all submissive Hum"bleness, and with Acknowledgment of your "sacred Majesty's many Favours unto your said
 "City, inform your Majesty, that they conceive,
 "that by ancient Privileges, Grants, and Acts of "Parliament (which they are ready humbly to "shew forth) they are exempt, and are to be "freed from that Charge:

And do most humbly pray,

"That your Majesty will be graciously pleased "that the Petitioners, with your princely Grace "and Favour, may enjoy the said Privileges and "Exemptions, and be freed from providing of "the said Ships and Provisions."

However, it does not appear that the Exemtion insisted on by the Citizens, by Virtue of their ancient Rights and Privileges, proved of any Service to them; for the King, instead of dropping his Project, (which at first was only peculiar to the maritime Towns) imposed it upon the whole Kingdom.

The London Clergy, imagining themselves very unhappy in not being so rich as their Predecessors, and that, as alledged, owing to modern Defalcations; they charged the Citizens with many gross and incredible Enormities, as will appear in the following Petition:

"That the Benefices in London were an hundred Years since very great; that the Decree for Tythes, now in Force, provides that nine Pence (should be two Shillings and nine Pence) be paid upon every Pound Rent without Fraud; that, notwithstanding the said Decree, (the Variation of Times considered) they are now very poor and mean; many of them not worth forty Pounds per Annum; the most not one hundred Pounds; only one, Christ-Church, a City Impropriation, worth three hundred and fifty Pounds.

"That the Petitioners have not independent Maintenance, and, for Want thereof, are daily thrust upon dangerous and great Inconveniences; that this is because the Petitioners have no Means assigned in the said Decree for the discovering the true Value of their said Rents by the Oath of the Parties, and for that many London Landlords (to the defeating of the Petitioners, and endangering their own Souls) have and daily do contrive double Leases, or make Provisos, wherein they call some small Part of the true Rent by the Name of Rent, and all the rest (which yet is quarterly paid) by the Name of Fine, Income, or the like; which Practice, in the Year 1620, was signified to be unjust and sacrilegious, under the Hands of the Reverend Bishops and Heads of Houses of both Universities.

"And lastly, for that the Lord-Mayor for the Time being is our ordinary Judge, and the Petitioners generally want both Ability and Leisure to prosecute and appeal from him to the Right Honourable the Lord-Keeper, or otherwise to wage War with rich and powerful Citizens.

"May it therefore please the great Patron of the Church, your Royal Majesty, to take into your princely Consideration these Pressures and Grievances of your poor Clergy of London, with the Causes of the same; and to take such Recourse for Redress thereof, as to your Majesty's great Wisdom and Clemency shall seem meet."

Ibid.
The King refers this Petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury, &c.

For inspecting into the pretended Grievance, the King referred the Petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Keeper, Earl Marshal, Bishop of London, Lord Cottesloe, Secretary Windbank, and Chief Justice Richardson, or to any five or three of them, whereof the Archbishop always to be one. While the Referees were endeavouring to settle the Tythes in Controversy, divers Citizens petitioned the King and Council against their Manner of proceeding; when, after sundry Hearings, it was (upon the King's Proposal) reciprocally agreed, between the Citizens and their Parsons, to submit the Point in Dispute to his Majesty's Arbitration. However, the King was afraid to make an absolute Decision thereof, seeing it was against the general Sense of the People.

A Proclamation against Hackney Coaches, &c.

'Tis observable, that in the Year 1625 there were not above twenty Hackney Coaches in the City of London and Parts contiguous, and those not used to ply in the Streets as at present, but were, by such as had Occasion for such Conveniences, sent for from the Stables where they stood. But, at this Time, the Number of these Coaches being greatly increased, they plied in the Streets as at present; whereby the common Passages were not only obstructed, and rendered dangerous and incommodious to their Majesties and the Nobility; but it was likewise alledged, that by their great Increase, the Prices of Hay and other Provender were much enhanced: For the redressing of which, a Proclamation was published on the 19th of January, strictly commanding, that, after the 24th of the approaching June, no Hackney Coach should be used in the City of London nor Suburbs thereof, other than by carrying of People to and from their Habitations in the Country; and by the said Proclamation it was also enjoined, that no Person whatsoever should make use of a Coach in this City, except such Persons as were capable of keeping four able Horses, fit for his Majesty's Service; which were at all Times to be ready when called for, under a severe Penalty.

lowed to keep a Coach.

Some Time after, the King, to prevent the Spreading of the dreadful Contagion raging in this City (which within the Year carried off ten thousand and four hundred of the Citizens) by Proclamation of the 26th of July, prohibited the keeping of either Bartolomew or Southwark Fairs.

Ibid.
Another
Plague.

Fairs suffered.

The raising of Ship-Money met with great Opposition in most Parts of the Kingdom, but more especially in this City, where great Numbers refused to pay; among whom was Richard Chambers, a Merchant, already mentioned, who, for his peremptory refusing to pay, was by Sir Edward Bromfield, the Lord-Mayor, committed to Prison; against whom he commenced a Suit for false Imprisonment, the Legality whereof was to have been tried in Trinity Term: But such was the iniquitous Partiality of Robert Berkley, one of the Justices of the King's Bench, that he would not suffer the Lawfulness of Ship-Money to be controverted by Chambers's Council; but declared in Court, that there was a Rule of Law and another of Government, and that many Things, that could not be done by the Rule of Law, might be done by that of Government.

Judge
Berkley's Partiality.

This Distinction was looked upon to be new and dangerous, and the quashing of the Cause; for, instead of serving to promote the peaceable Payment of the Money demanded, it had a quite different Effect; for, by this Proceeding, the Citizens of London became more obstinate than ever, inasmuch that the Privy Council thought proper to write to them to submit: But having received an Answer not agreeable to their Expectations, they wrote the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen:

Ibid.
Its Effect harmful to the Cause.

"We have received by some of you the Aldermen a Denial in the Name of the City to our late Letter, for the setting forth of Shipping for the present and necessary Defence of the Kingdom; and the Excuses which are made since upon the like Occasions, we cannot impute it truly to any Thing but Want of Duty.

City petition for Abatement.

Is rejected.

The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, perceiving by this threatening Letter, that they could not shake off the Burden, drew up and presented a Petition to the Council, for an Abatement of the Number of Ships rated upon the City, and that, instead of twenty, his Majesty would be graciously pleased to accept of ten: Which Petition being rejected, they were told, That the pressing Necessities and Preservation of the State required their immediate Submission, whereby they would happily obviate an Occasion of shewing them more particularly what is due to those that disobey his Majesty's Commands on such an Emergency. And this was followed by another arbitrary Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen:

*Further Orders concerning Shops in
side, &c.*

"Whereas by our Letters of the 15th of July,
"and last of January, 1635, we did not only "take Notice of the present Remissness and "Backwardness in the then Lord-Mayor and Al"dermen, in seeing our Directions, by his Ma"jesty's express Command, forthwith put in "Execution, by bringing the Goldsmiths, living "dispersed in the City, to seat themselves either "in Cheap-side or Lombard-Street; for which Pur"pose we required, that all other Tradesmen "should be removed, and give Place unto them:
"But if they should obstinately refuse, and re"main refractory, then to take Security of them "to perform the same by a certain Day, or, in "Default of giving such Security, to commit
"them to Prison until they conform themselves.
"Notwithstanding all which, his Majesty has "been informed, that there are yet a great Num"ber of Houses of other several Trades, that "live both in Cheap-side and Lombard-Street, con"trary to his Majesty's Command and our said
"Directions; which Neglect being both inex"cusable, and very worthy of Blame, we must let "your Lordship, &c. know, that if speedy and "effectual Care be not taken by you in seeing "the same duly performed, his Majesty will not "pass it by, without calling you to an Account
"for it.

"And, in the mean while, we are, by his Ma"jesty's Command, to require and charge you,
"forthwith to cause all such Shops as are not "Goldsmiths, and have been taken or opened "either in Cheap-side or Lombard-Street since "our said Letters, to be presently shut up,
"and not permitted to be opened till further
"Order from this Board; whereof your Lord"ship, &c. may not fail. And so, &c. 24 May,
"1637."

And, as if the above arbitrary Letter was not sufficient to enforce a Submission, 'twas by the Court of Star-Chamber thought convenient, by the following thundering Order, to compel the Citizens to a Compliance:

Ibid.

Enforced by an Ordinance of the Star-Chamber.

"Whereas their Lordships did this Day take "Notice, that, contrary to the Orders and Di"rections of their Lordships, divers Tradesmen,
"which are not Goldsmiths, do contemptuously
"open again their Shops both in Cheap-side and "Lombard-Street, though they kept them for a "while shut; their Lordships greatly blaming

"the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of "London, that they have so negligently per"formed his Majesty's Commands, and the strict "Directions of the Board, by Letters of the "24th of May last, and before, concerning the "shutting-up of all such Houses and Shops in "Cheap-side and Lombard-Street as aforesaid, and "that some of their Lordships have been Eye"witnesses very lately of their Disobedience in "this Particular, did think fit and order, that if "the Alderman or his Deputy shall not forthwith
"cause to be shut up every such Shop standing "within his Ward in Cheap-side and Lombard-Street,
"which are not Goldsmiths, upon Knowledge
"thereof, the said Alderman or his Deputy shall "be committed to Prison by Warrant from the "Board.

"And their Lordships do command, that this "Order shall be sent to the Lord-Mayor, to "the End, that Notice may be given to whom "it appertains.

"Star-Chamber, July 7, 1637."

The Magistrates of this City seem to have paid but little Respect to this Letter and Order, as will appear by the following Letter sent by the Privy Council to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen:

"By several Letters and Orders of this Board,
"and particularly that of the 24th of May and
"7th of July last, we took Notice how negli"gently the then Lord-Mayor and Aldermen "had performed his Majesty's Commands, and
"the strict Directions of this Board, concerning
"the shutting-up of all such Houses and Shops
"in Cheap-side and Lombard-Street as were not "Goldsmiths; and did order, that if the Al"dermen of the said Wards, or their De"puties, should not forthwith cause to be "shut up every such Shop standing within their "Wards in Cheap-side and Lombard-Street, which "are not Goldsmiths, the said Alderman, or "his Deputy, neglecting so to do, should be "committed to Prison by Warrant from the "Board.

Ibid.

*Another Order from the Privy Council
concerning
the same.*

"Yet, nevertheless, as we are informed, these "are at the least four and twenty Houses and
"Shops that are not inhabited by Goldsmiths;
"but in some of them are one Grove, and one
"Widow Hill, Stationers; one Dover, a Mil-
"liner; and one Brown, a Bandfeller; one San"ders, a Druggster; and one Medcalf, a Cook;
"and one Edwards, a Girdler; who do, by "Connivance, still inhabit there, having some "Part of their Shops shut, and the rest open;
"which Contempt of theirs, and Disrespect, and "Neglect of the Aldermen, or their Deputies of "those Wards, as we cannot but take Notice of,
"so we must hereby pray and require your "Lordship (without Delay) to acquaint the "said Aldermen and their Deputies therewith;
"and that if they do not presently put our for"mer Directions in that Particular in Exe"cution, we shall then give such further Or"der, as shall teach them to know, that the "Commands of this Board ought not to be "sighted.

"And hereof we shall expect to receive a par"ticular Account from your Lordship; who, we "hope, will have a better Care to see his Ma"jesty's

"jefty's Commands performed on this Behalf, than "your Predecessors have had. And so, &c.

"12 January, 1637."

Yet, notwithstanding these Bickerings between the Court and the City, we find, that his Majesty was prevailed upon by the Citizens, in the Course of the ensuing Year, to grant them the underwritten and most extensive Charter:

Roy. Char.
Lond.
A.D. 1638
King
Charles 1's Charter.
The Preamble.

"Know ye now, that we, deeply considering
"and calling to Memory the good and lauda"ble Services performed by our beloved and "faithful Subjects, the said Mayor and Com-
"monalty, and Citizens of the City of London,
"which we graciously accept; and from our "Soul affecting the good and happy Estate of "our said City, to increase and enlarge with the "greatest Favour and Grace we can, and to "establish with all Care and Diligence we can,
"the Rule and Government of our said City,
"of our especial Grace, and from our certain
"Knowledge and meer Motion, and for divers
"other good Causes and Considerations especi"ally moving us at present; we do accept and "approve of, for us, our Heirs and Successors,
"as much as in us lies, all and singular the "Letters Patents, Charters, and Confirmations
"aforesaid, and all and singular Gifts, Grants,
"Confirmations, Restitutions, Customs, Ordi"nances, Explanations, Articles, and all other "Things whatsoever in the same Letters Patents
"or Charters (except as are herein after excepted)
"and all and singular Lands, Tenements, Of"fices, Jurisdictions, Authorities, Privileges,
"Liberties, Franchises, Quittals, Immunities,
"free Customs, and Hereditaments whatsoever,
"which the said Mayor and Commonalty, and "Citizens of the City of London, or their Pre"decessors, by the Name of Mayor and Com-
"monalty, and Citizens of the City of London,
"or by the Name of the Mayor and Aldermen,
"Citizens, or Commonalty of London, or by the "Name of Mayor and Citizens of the City of "London, or by the Name of the Mayor and "Commonalty of the City of London, or by the "Name of Citizens of the City of London, or by "the Name of Barons of London, or by any "other Name whatsoever, by Reason and Force "of the said Letters Patents, Charters, or Con"firmations, or by Use or Prescription, or any "other lawful Means at any Time or Times "heretofore they have had, ratified, and be"stowed; and all those we ratify and confirm by "these Presents to the said Mayor and Common"alty, and Citizens of the said City of London,
"and their Successors.

Refers to all Liberties, Jurisdictions, &c.

"We will also, and, for the Considerations
"aforesaid, for us, our Heirs and Successors, do
"grant, that the said Mayor and Commonalty,
"and Citizens, and their Successors, be fully "and wholly restored to all and singular their "Authorities, Jurisdictions, Liberties, Fran"chises, Privileges, Quittals, and free Customs "whatsoever aforesaid (except such as are herein
"after excepted;) and all and singular to the "said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens,
"and their Successors, we for us, our Heirs
"and Successors, do restore by these Presents, as "fully, freely, and wholly, and in as ample
"Manner and Form, as they or their Predecessors

"had used or enjoyed the same in any Times of "our Progenitors or Predecessors, once Kings
"and Queens of England.

"We will also, and by these Presents, for us,
"our Heirs and Successors, grant, that it shall "be lawful for the said Mayor and Common"alty, and Citizens of the City of London afore"said, any Authority, Office, Jurisdiction, Li"berty, Privilege, Franchise, Immunity, Quit-
"tals, and free Customs mentioned in the Let"ters Patents or Charters aforesaid, or any of "them, or other their Customs which hitherto
"they have used, or perhaps have abused, or "not claimed when they ought to have claimed;
"that they nevertheless, the Mayor and Com-
"monalty, and Citizens of the City of London,
"and their Successors, may henceforth for ever
"fully have, enjoy, and use any Matter, Cause,
"or Thing whatsoever, in Times past had,
"made, or provided to the contrary thereof
"notwithstanding; without Hindrance or Im"pediment of us, our Heirs or Successors, our "Justices, Sheriffs, Coroners, Escheators, or "any other Bailiff or Minister of us, our Heirs
"or Successors whatsoever, the same Au"thorities, Offices, Jurisdictions, Liberties,
"Privileges, Franchises, Immunities, Quittals,
"and free Customs whatsoever, in likewise not "used or abused, or not claimed, or any of
"them.

"And to the Intent the said Mayor and Com"monalty, and Citizens of the said City, and "their Successors in Time to come, may the "more safely, freely, and quietly hold and en"joy to them, and their Successors for ever, all and "singular the Premises in the said Letters Patents,
"or Charters before-mentioned, or intended to be "given or granted by the same; and for the In"tent that no Ambiguity, Controversy, doubtful
"Construction or Question of, or about the Pre"mises, may henceforth arise, but be altogether
"taken away:

"We, for the Consideration aforesaid, and of "our special Grace, for us, our Heirs and Suc"cessors, do give and grant to the said Mayor "and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of "London, and their Successors for ever, all and "singular the Manors, Lands, Tenements, Of"fices, Fees, Rewards, Liberties, Privileges, "Jurisdictions, Immunities, Ordinances, Quit-
"tals, Hereditaments, and all and singular other "Things whatsoever, in the said Letters Pa"tents, or Charters afore-recited, or any of them
"contained, or mentioned to have been given or
"granted, with all and singular the Appurte"nances, (except such as in the same Charters, or
"Letters Patents, or in these Presents are ex"cepted) as fully, plainly, freely, and wholly,
"to all Intents and Purposes, as if they had been "expressed, named, mentioned, declared, and "manifested severally, and namely, and Word
"for Word in these Presents; to hold all and "singular the Premises by these Presents men"tioned to be granted, or confirmed, with "all Appurtenances, of us, our Heirs and "Successors, by such, the same, or the like "Services, Fees, Fee-farm, Rent, Sums of "Money, and Demands whatsoever, by which
"on by what, and as all and singular the "same

To hold the same for the like Fees, Services, &c.
aforesaid.

"same Premises were formerly held of us, or
"our Predecessors, or were intended to be held "by the same Letters Patents, Charter, or "otherwise.

"And whereas Lord Henry the Sixth, late "King of England, our Predecessor, by his Let"ters Patents under the Great Seal of England, "bearing Date at Westminster the 26th Day of "October, in the twenty-third Year of his Reign,
"granted unto the Citizens of the City aforesaid,
"amongst other Things, that the same Citizens,
"and their Successors for ever, should have all
"Soils, Commons, Purprestures, and Improve"ments in all Wastes, Commons, Streets, Ways,
"and other Places in the City and Suburbs aforesaid, and in the Water of Thames within the "Limits of the same City, together with the "Profits of the same Purprestures and Improve"ments, and that they may improve, and rent
"and enjoy the Rents of them, and their Succes"sors for ever, and likewise several other Things,
"as in the said Letters Patents more fully ap"pears:

"And whereas in the Parliament of the said
"Lord Henry the Sixth, late King of England,
"held at Westminster in the twenty-eighth Year
"of his Reign, it was enacted by Authority of "the same Parliament, that the same King should "take, resume, seize, and retain into his Hands
"and Possession, all Honours, Castles, Lord-
"ships, Towns, Villages, Manors, Lands, Tene"ments, Wastes, Rents, Reversions, Fees, Fee-
"farms, and Services, with all Appurtenances "in England, Wales, and the Marches of the "same, Ireland, Guiana, Calice, and the Marches
"of the same, which the said Lord Henry by "his Letters Patents or otherwise had granted
"from the first Day of his Reign, and all Ho"nours, Castles, Lordships, Towns, Villages,
"Manors, Lands, Tenements, Wastes, Rents,
"Reversions, Fees, Fee-farms, and Services,
"with all their Appurtenances, which were of "the Duchy of Lancaster, and by the King him"self conveyed by Grant or Grants of the same
"King; and the said King to have, hold, and "retain all the same Premises, in the like State
"he had them at the Time of such-like Con"cession made by the same King of the same;
"and that all Letters Patents by the said King,
"or any other Person or Persons, at the Re"quest and Desire of the said King, to any "Person or Persons made of the Premises, or "any of them, should be void and of no
"Force in Law; as by the same Act of Parlia"ment (amongst other Things) doth more fully "appear:

"And whereas our most famous Progenitor,
"Henry the Seventh, late King of England, &c.
"by his Letters Patents, under the Great Seal of "England, bearing Date at Westminster the 23d
"Day of July, in the twentieth Year of his "Reign, reciting, amongst other Things, all
"and singular Donations, Confirmations, Grants,
"Restitutions, Innovations, Ordinances, and all "other Articles and Things in the said Letters
"Patents contained, did accept, and approved,
"and ratified, and confirmed all and singular the "said Things to the said Mayor and Common"alty, and Citizens of the said City, and their

"Heirs and Successors by the same Letters Pa"tents, and did grant and confirm, by his said
"Letters Patents, all and singular those Things;
"as fully, plainly, and wholly, as if they had "been severally and Word for Word expressed;
"declared, and manifested in the said Letters
"Patents of the same Lord Henry the Seventh, to "the same Mayor and Commonalty, and Citi"zens, and their Successors; as by the said Let"ters Patents amongst other Things more plainly "appears.

"And whereas there are divers Questions lately
"arisen concerning the Validity, as well of the "said Letters Patents of the said Lord Henry the "Sixth, as of the said Lord Henry the Seventh,
"thereupon made by Reason or Pretence of the "same Act of Parliament concerning Resumption
"aforesaid:

"We, willing that all Questions thereof should "be from henceforth taken away, and to the In"tent the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citi"zens of the City of London, and their Succes"sors may the better, more safely, and quietly
"have, hold, and enjoy such Things in the said
"Letters Patents of the said late King Henry
"the Sixth, herein after expressed; nevertheless "with some Proviso, Exceptions, Restrictions,
"and Explanations, in these Presents mentioned;
"it is our good Pleasure by these our present
"Letters to grant, and confirm to the said Mayor
"and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Suc"cessors, the same particular Things, and others
"hereafter specified, in such Manner and Form
"as is afterwards mentioned.

"Know ye therefore, that we, for divers good "Causes and Considerations especially moving "us thereunto, of our special Grace, and from "our certain Knowledge and meer Motion, have "given and granted, and by these Presents for "us, our Heirs and Successors, do give and "grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and "Citizens of the City of London, and their Suc"cessors, that the Mayor and Recorder of the "said City, who now are, and for the Time
"shall be, as well those Aldermen who formerly
"have been Mayors of the City, as those Alder"men who for the Time to come shall sustain "and bear the Burthen and Office of the Mayor-
"alty of the said City, although they shall cease
"from their Mayoralty, or are dismissed from
"it, so long as nevertheless they stand Al"dermen, and the three senior Aldermen of "the said City for the Time being, who have "stood longest in the Office of Aldermen, and "before that Time have not yet borne the Bur-
"then and the Office of Mayoralty of that City,
"for ever Keepers, and each of them a Keeper,
"of the Peace of us, our Heirs and Successors,
"within the City of London aforesaid, and the "Liberties of the same, to be conserved and "kept.

"And we do constitute, make, and ordain, by "these Presents, for us, our Heirs and Successors,
"the same Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen
"aforesaid, our Keepers and Justices, and each "of them the Keeper and Justice of us, our "Heirs and Successors, within the City of London "aforesaid, and the Liberties of the same; to "keep and cause to be kept all and singular the "Statutes

To have all Soils, Commons, Purprestures, &c.

That the three senior Aldermen next the Mayor shall be Justices of the Peace.

The Mayor,

&c. to hold Sessions of the Peace.

" Statutes and Ordinances made or to be made " for the Good of the Peace of Us, our Heirs
 " and Successors, for the Conservation of the " same, and for the quiet Rule and Government " of the People of Us, our Heirs and Successors,
 " in all their Articles, as well within the said " City as the Liberty thereof, according to the " Force, Form, and Effect of them; and to " correct and punish all those whom they shall " find offending against the Form and Effect of " the said Ordinances and Statutes, and any of " them, in the City aforesaid, and the Liberties " thereof, as should be done according to the " Form of those Ordinances and Statutes;
 " and to cause all such who shall threaten all
 " or any of the People of Us, our Heirs or " Successors, concerning their Bodies, or burn" ing their Houses, to find a sufficient Secu" rity for his Peace, and good Behaviour to" wards Us, our Heirs and Successors; and if " they shall refuse to find such Security, then
 " to cause them to be safely kept in our Gaol
 " of Newgate, or in any other Prison of Us,
 " or our Heirs and Successors, in the said
 " City of London, until they shall find Security;
 " and to do and execute all such Things,
 " which the Justices and Keepers of the Peace
 " of Us, our Heirs and Successors, within any " County of our Kingdom of England, are en-

 " England, or by Virtue of any Commission of " Us, our Heirs or Successors, to execute or do " for the keeping of the Peace in any the like " Counties.

" We will also, and by these Presents, for Us,
 " our Heirs and Successors, do grant to the said
 " Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City
 " of London, and their Successors, that the Mayor " and Recorder of the said City for the Time be" ing, and such-like Aldermen as is aforesaid for " the Time being, who have formerly borne and " exercised the Office or Place of Mayoralty of " that City, and thereof such-like (as aforesaid)
 " senior Aldermen for the Time being, who " have not yet borne the Place of Mayoralty
 " aforesaid, or four of the same, Mayor, Re" corder and Aldermen (whereof we will the said
 " Mayor or Recorder for the Time being to be " one) be the Justices of Us, our Heirs and Suc" cessors, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, for " ever; to enquire as often, and when it shall " seem best expedient to them, by the Oath of " honest and lawful Men, as well of the City
 " aforesaid, as the Liberty of the same, by whom
 " the Truth of the Thing may better be known,
 " concerning all manner of Murthers, Felonies,
 " Punishments, Witchcrafts, Inchantments, Sor-

 " to go or ride armed against Us, our Heirs and " Successors, and also of those who there have
 " lyn in wait, or shall presume to ly in wait for " the Time to come, to maim or kill the People
 " of Us, our Heirs and Successors; and also " of all Hostlers, and other Persons who shall " offend, or attempt in the said City and the " Liberty of the same, in the Abuse of Measures
 " and Weights, or in the Selling of Victuals
 " against the Form of the Ordinances and Sta" tutes, or any of them, made or to be made " for the common Profit of our Kingdom of " England, and the same People of Us, our " Heirs and Successors; and also of all Sheriffs,

" the Mayor of the said City for the Time be" ing, in his Court, or in the Conservancy of the " River of Thames, within the Limits of the same " River, or in our said Letters Patents of our " said Father; as aforesaid is recited and menti" oned, for due fishing and observing of good " Order in taking of Fish; or otherwise for the " Preservation of small Fish in the said River of " Thames, as for the Conservation of the same
" Water, or Shores, or Banks of the same River,
" made or to be made, broken or to be broken;
" and also all Fines and Amerciaments, Pains
" and Penalties whatsoever, assessed, imposed or " adjudged, or to be assessed, imposed or ad-ings, Courts, Yards, Gardens, Conduits, and Cisterns, Shops, Sheds, Porches, Benches, Cellars, Doors of Cellars, Staples, Stalls, Stages, Pales, Posts, Jutties, and Penthouses, Signposts, Props of Signs, and the Ground and Foundation of them, Shores, Water-courses, Gutters and Easements, with their Appurtenances, which now are, or at any Time hereafter have been erected, built, taken, inclosed, obtained, increased, possessed or enjoyed by the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, or any Person or Persons whatsoever, of, in, upon or under all or any void Grounds, Wastes, Commons, Streets, Ways, and other common Places within the said City, and the Liberties of the same, and in the River or Water of Thames, or Ports, Banks, Creeks, or Shores of the same, within the Liberties of the said City.

To have and hold Moor-fields and West-Smithfield.

We will also, and by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, declare and grant, that the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens, and their Successors for ever, may have, hold and enjoy all those Fields, called or known by the Name Inward Moor, and Outward Moor, in the Parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, London, St. Stephen in Coleman-street, London; and St. Botolph, without Bishopsgate, London; or in some or any of them; and also all that Field called West-Smithfield, in the Parish of St. Sepulchre's, St. Bartholemew the Great, St. Bartholemew the Less, in the Suburbs of London, or in some of them, to the Uses, Intents and Purposes after expressed; and that the same Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, may be able to hold in the said Field called Smithfield, Fairs and Markets there to be and used to be held, and to take, receive, and have Pickage, Stallage, Tolls, and Profits appertaining, happening, belonging or arising out of the Fairs and Markets there, to such Uses as the same Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, or their Predecessors had, held or enjoyed, and now have, hold and enjoy, or ought to have, hold or enjoy the said Premises last-mentioned, and to no other Uses, Intents, or Purposes whatsoever.

And to hold a Fair and Markets in Smithfield, and to have the Tolls, Pickage, Stallage, &c.

And that We, our Heirs and Successors, will not erect, or cause to be erected, nor will permit or give leave to any Person or Persons, to erect or build a new one, or any Messuages, Houses, Structures, Edifices, in or upon the said Field called Inner Moor, or the Field called Outer Moor, or the said Field called West-Smithfield; but that the said separate Fields and Places be reserved, disposed and continued to such-like common and publick Uses, as the same heretofore and now are used, disposed or converted to, (saying nevertheless, and always reserving to Us, our Heirs and Successors, all Streets, Lanes, and Alleys, and now waste and void Ground and Places, as they now are within the City and Liberties of the same) to hold and enjoy the said Messuages, Houses, Edifices, Court-yards, and all and singular the Premises granted or confirmed, or mentioned to be granted and confirmed, with all their Appurtenances (except before excepted) to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors for ever, to hold in Fee and common Burgage, and not in Capite, or by Knights Service.

In Fee and common Burgage.

And further, by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, we pardon, remit and release to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and their Successors, all and singular Issues, Profits, and Rents, of all and singular the same Messuages, Edifices, Houses, Structures, Penthouses, and other the Premises last-mentioned (except before excepted) any way due or incurred before the Date of these Presents, to Us or our Predecessors, and the Arrearages of the same, without any Account, Molestation, Suit or Impediment of Us, our Heirs or Successors, or any Justices, Officers or Ministers of Us, our Heirs or Successors; and this without any Writ of ad quod damnum, or any other Writ or Inquisition to be procured, issued or prosecuted in that Behalf.

And that it shall be lawful to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, to put themselves, by them or their Deputies, in full and peaceable Possession and Seizin of all and singular the Premises, as often, and when it shall seem good and expedient; and thereof to have good Allowance in any Court whatsoever, of Us, our Heirs and Successors, from Time to Time, without Hindrance, Impediment or Perturbation of Us, our Heirs and Successors, our Justices, Treasurers of England, Barons of the Exchequer, or other Officers or Ministers whatsoever, of Us, our Heirs and Successors.

And further, for the Consideration aforesaid, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, we do pardon, remit, release, and exonerate to the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, all and all manner of Entries, Intrusions, and Ingresses whatsoever, at any Time heretofore had or made, of, in and upon the Premises aforesaid, or any Part of them, without any Right or legal Title of the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Predecessors, or their Tenants, Farmers or Assigns, or any other Person or Persons. We will nevertheless, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do ordain and declare by these Presents, that these our Letters Patents, or any thing contained in them, shall not be interpreted or construed to the taking or diminishing the Force or Effect of any Proclamations published hereafter, of or concerning Buildings and Edifices in the said City, and the Liberties of the same, and in the Places adjoining, for any Contempts or Offences whatsoever committed, or to be committed; nor to remit or to release any Offences or Contempts heretofore committed, or hereafter to be committed against the Tenor of the same, or any of them; but that the same Proclamations may be and remain in their full Force, any thing in these Presents to the contrary notwithstanding.

Personal Entries, intrusions, and Ingresses.

As Exception.

And we will and declare by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, that such-like Edifices, Structures, Incroachments and Purprestures, which before this Time have been made,

"And also we will, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do erect and create, in and through the said City, and Liberties thereof, and in and through our Borough or Town of Southwark in our County of Surry, a certain Office called Outroper, or Common Crier, to and for the selling of Household-stuff, Apparel, Leases of Houses, Jewels, Goods, Chattels, and other Things of all Persons who shall be willing, that the said Officers shall make Sale of the same Things, by publick and open Claim,

"commonly called Outcry, and Sale in some common and open Place or Places in the said City and the Liberties of the same, and for the Borough and Town of Southwark afore said: And the same Office, for the Consideration afore said, We, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do give and grant to the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, and their Successors for ever; to have and exercise the same by them or their Deputy, Officer or Minister, Officers, Deputies, or Ministers, being first allowed or admitted thereto by the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City for the Time being, in Common Council of the same City assembled, or by the major Part of them.

"And that it shall and may be lawful to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and their Successors, and their Deputy or Deputies, Officers or Ministers, to demand, take, and keep for the Use of the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens afore said, the Wages and Fees expressed in a certain Schedule hereunto annexed.

"And we will, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do strictly appoint, command, and charge all other Persons, that neither they, nor any of them, presume to sell any Goods, Chattels, Household-stuff, Apparel, Jewels, and other Things, in publick Claim, called Outcry, in the City afore said, or the Liberties of the same, or in the Borough and Town of Southwark, under Pain of our Royal Displeasure.

"And also, for the Consideration afore said, We, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, and by these Presents do declare, that the Relicts and Widows of Freemen of the said City, using manual Arts and Occupations, so long as they shall continue Widows, and remain in the same City, from Time to Time, and at all Times hereafter, may and be licensed to use and execute, and exercise the same Arts and manual Occupations in the said City, although they were not educated by the Space of seven Years as Apprentices, notwithstanding the Statute made and published in Parliament of Lady Elizabeth, late Queen of England, in the fifth Year of her Reign, or any other Statute or Ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding.

"rather enlarged than diminished, of our special Grace have granted for Us, our Heirs and Successors, to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors; that whenever and as often as there shall happen any Issues to be taken of or upon any Custom of the same City between any Parties in pleading (although they themselves be Parties) or if any thing shall be moved or happen in Pleading, Act or Question, touching the Customs aforesaid, before Us, our Heirs or Successors, or Justices for holding Pleas before Us, our Justices of the Common-Bench, Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, or any other Justices of Us, our Heirs or Successors, which shall exact or require Inquisition, Search or Tryal, the Mayor and Aldermen of the same City for the Time may record, testify and declare by Word of Mouth, by the Recorder of the same City for the Time being, those Customs; and that by such Record, Testimony and Declaration, without taking any Jury thereupon, or making any further Process, they may speedily proceed to the Caption or Determination of the Plea, Deed, Cause or Business.

"We have also given and granted, and by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do give and grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, all Treasure found in the same City, or the Liberty of the same, and also waived and strayed Goods and Chattels of all Felons and Fugitives, for Felons committed, or that shall be committed by them in the said City, or the Liberties of the same, judged or to be adjudged before Us, our Heirs or Successors, or any of our Justices.

"We have granted also, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, by these Presents, do grant, that the Mayor of the said City, and his Successors for the Time being, may name to the Chancellor of England for the Time being two of the Aldermen of the same City; of which one, at the Nomination of the said Mayor, shall be one of the Keepers of the Peace in the County of Middlesex, and the other in the County of Surry, who shall be inserted with others into all Commissions henceforth to be made for the Conservation of the Peace in the Counties aforesaid, and may henceforth do, concern and execute those Things which are to be done by the Keepers of the Peace in the Counties aforesaid, according to the Force and Effect of the Commissions directed or to be directed to them and others.

"And whereas the Freedom of the City of London, in Times past, was had in such Price and Estimation, that many Merchants thought themselves happy to enjoy the same, and to be reputed Members of the same City: And whereas divers Persons, being Sons of certain Freemen of the said City, resident in our said City, and others who were Apprentices of Freemen of the said City, resident in our said City, in these late Times have used and daily do use and exercise Merchandize, Negotiation, and Commerce, from the Port of the same City, to Parts beyond the Seas, and by reason thereof have and do gain and acquire great "Profits and Advantages to themselves, refusing or at least delaying to become Freemen of the said City, and to be admitted into the Liberty of the same City, although they be capable of the same; and so they have Privileges, and yet are loose and free from publick Offices, Places, Charges and Burthens of the said City for our Service and Honour, and for the upholding of the State and Profit of that City, to the weakening of the Government of the said City, and impoverishing the Freemen, and disparaging of the Liberty thereof:

"We considering these things, and intimately desiring, as much as in us is, to strengthen and enlarge the Liberties of the said City (our Royal Chamber) and to conserve, support and protect the Rule and Government, and good and happy State of that City; We will, appoint, ordain, and declare for Us, our Heirs and Successors, that all they who are, or hereafter shall be Sons of Freemen of the City, or who are, or hereafter shall be Apprentices, or Servants of Freemen of our said City, and now do, or hereafter shall reside, or inhabit in the same City, or the Liberties of the same, or within ten Miles distant from any Part of the same, and do, or shall use Merchandize, and who do, or shall refuse, or delay to become Freemen of the said City, shall not be permitted at any Time henceforth, by themselves or by others, directly or indirectly, to transport any Goods, Wares, or Merchandizes, by way of Merchandizing in any way, from the Port of our City of London, to Parts foreign, or beyond the Seas: Willing, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, we do firmly command the Governors, Assistants, and Merchant-Adventurers of England; the Governors and Assistants of the English Merchants trafficking in the Baltick Sea; the Society of English Merchants for Discovery of new Commerce; the Governors and Society of Merchants of England trading into the Levant Seas; the Governor and Society of Merchants of London trading to France, and the Dominions of the same; and all other Societies of Merchants trading or merchandizing into foreign Parts beyond the Seas, by what Name or Names soever the said distinct Societies are known or reputed; that they nor any of them admit, licence, or permit any such-like Person or Persons to merchandize, or traffick; or have Commerce as Merchants to foreign Parts, unless such Persons first become Freemen of the said City, and bring a Testimonial from the Chamberlain or Under-Chamberlain of the said City for the Time being, that they are admitted into the Liberty of the said City.

"And further, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, we will and command, that no Merchant, being, or who hereafter shall be, a Freeman of the said City, shall take henceforth any Apprentice to serve him in such-like Merchandize within the City aforesaid, Liberties or Suburbs of the same, or within ten Miles of the same City, for less than seven Years, to be bound and inrolled according to the Custom of the said City, and not otherwise.

His Duty and Fees.

"And whereas divers Burglaries, Felonies, Robberies, clandestine Stealings and Thefts of Goods, Jewels, Apparel and Household-stuff, and other Things, are daily committed within our City of London and Liberties of the same, to the grievous Damage of some of our Subjects inhabiting there, or in the Parts adjoining; We, for the better Discovery of such-like Offenders, and of Things so lost, will, and for Us, our Heirs and Successors, by these Presents do ordain, grant and constitute, that from henceforth for ever, within the said City of

London, and the Liberties of the same, there be and shall be a certain Office of Register of all and for all Sales and Pawns, made or to be made to retailing Brokers within the said City and Liberties of the same; and for any Goods, Jewels, Apparel, Household-stuff and other Things so to be sold or pawned by any Persons.

Establishes a Register Office of all Pawns and Sales.

"And for Us, our Heirs and Successors, We now do give and grant by these Presents the same Office to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, to have and exercise the said Office by them, or their Officer, Deputy, or Minister, or Officers, Deputies or Ministers, first to be allowed and admitted thereto by the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, assembled in Common Council of the same City, for the Time being, or the greater Part of them. And that it may and shall be lawful for the said Mayor and Citizens of the said City and their Successors, and their Deputy or Deputies, Officer or Officers, to demand, take, or have and retain in their Power, to the Use of them, the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, the Wages and Fees expressed in a certain Schedule annexed to these Presents, without any Account or any Thing else to be rendered or made to Us, our Heirs or Successors.

The Mayor, &c. to execute the said Office of Register of retailing Brokers.

Their Fees.

"And further, we do give and grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, that it may and shall be lawful to the Citizens of the same City, and any of them, for the Time being, to expose and hang in and over the Streets and Ways, and Alleys of the said City, and Suburbs of the same, Signs and Posts of Signs affixed to their Houses and Shops, for the better finding out such Citizens Dwellings, Shops, Arts and Occupations, without Impediment, Molestation or Interruption of Us, our Heirs or Successors, or any Officers or Ministers whatsoever of Us, our Heirs or Successors.

Licence to hang out Signs, &c.

"And whereas Lord Henry the Eighth, late King of England, &c. by his Letters Patents bearing Date at Westminster the thirteenth Day of January, in the eight-and-twentieth Year of his Reign, amongst other Things, for him and his Successors, did give and grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, the keeping, ordering and governing of the House and Hospital of him the late King, called Bethlem, situate without and near Bishopsgate, of the said City of London, and all Manors, Lands, Tenements, Possessions, Revenues and Hereditaments whatsoever, and wheresoever lying and being, belonging and appertaining unto the same Hospital or House called Bethlem; and made and constituted, by the same his Letters Patents, these the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and their Successors, Masters, Keepers and Governors of the said House and Hospital called Bethlem, and of the said Manors, Lands, Tenements and other Premises belonging to the same House or Hospital, to have, hold and enjoy the said Custody, Order and Govern-

"And that the said Mayor and Commonalty,
"and Citizens of the said City of London, and "their Successors, might be better able to sup"port the Burthen and Expences of the Poor,
"in sustaining the House called the House of

"And further, for Us, our Heirs and Suc"cessors, we will, and by these Presents do de"clare our good Pleasure, and do charge and "command the same Mayor and Commonalty,

"and Citizens of the said City, and their Suc"cessors, that they do not deliver or grant the "said Manors, Lands, Tenements, Possessions
"or Revenues belonging to the same House or "Hospital, or any Part of them, for any Term
"or Terms of Years exceeding the Number of "one and twenty Years, to commence from "the Time of the making of such-like Grant

Riches of London.

THE City of London, according to a noble Author, was (by the Court) looked upon too much of late Time as a Common Stock not easily to be exhausted, and as a Body not to be grieved by ordinary Acts of Injustice; and therefore, as it was a Place of Resort, in all Cases of Necessity, for the sudden borrowing great Sums of Money, in which they were commonly Merchants too good for the Crown; so it was become a Practice, upon any specious Pretences, to avoid the Security that was at any Time given for Money so borrowed; aluding to the frequent Seizures of the City Charters in former Times; and which was not left unpractised by the present Ministry; notwithstanding the foresaid Charter of Confirmation: For the Histories of these Times inform us, that the Validity of the City Charter had been frequently questioned, which the Citizens were as often obliged to remove by considerable Sums of Money. However, as if these were not Grievances sufficient to oppress the Londoners, the Ministry, in an illegal, arbitrary and unjust Manner, commenced a Suit in the Court of Star-Chamber against the Lord-Mayor and Citizens; and the Society of the Governor and Assistants of the new Plantation in the Province of Ulster in the Kingdom of Ireland, for some pretended Abuses committed in that Country; for which, after a long Hearing, and strenuous Defence for seventeen Days, they were, by a Decree of that Court, condemned to lose all their Lands and Possessions in that Kingdom; for which they had not only paid great Sums of Money to the King, but likewise expended vast Sums in building and planting the same.

Yet, as if this was not a sufficient Punishment of Innocency, the Citizens were amerced in an exorbitant Fine of fifty thousand Pounds. This Sentence of the Court of Star-Chamber so highly incensed the Londoners, that, tho' the King afterwards remitted the Penalties thereof, they attributed that to the Power of the Parliament, and not to his own Inclination; they therefore rather remembered how unjustly their Possessions had been taken from them, than by whom the Penalties had been remitted. The direful Effects whereof that unhappy Prince some time after woefully experienced, by the City's joining with the Parliament, whom they now regarded as their best Friends, as will appear by the following Resolutions of the House of Commons:

"Resolved, That it is the Opinion of this House, that the Citizens of London were solicited and pressed to the Undertaking of the Plantation of Londonderry.

"Resolved, That the Copy attested by Mr. Good's Hand, is a true Copy of the Sentence given in the Star-Chamber against the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, and of the new Plantation of Ulster in the Kingdom of Ireland.

"Resolved, That the Order made in the Court of Star-Chamber, dated the eighth of March, in the eighth of Charles, is unlawful, both for the Matter, Persons and Time therein prefixed.

"Resolved, That this House is of Opinion, that the King was not deceived in the Grant which he made unto the Society of Governors and Assistants of London of the new Plantation of Ulster in the Kingdom of Ireland, in particular; nor in creating a new Corporation, called the Society of the Governors and Assistants of London of the new Plantation of Ulster in the Kingdom of Ireland.

"Resolved, That this House is of Opinion, that the King did not by that Patent grant more Land than was by him intended to be granted, nor was he therein deceived.

"That it doth not appear by sufficient Proof, that the Citizens of London were tied to perform the printed Articles, and consequently not bound to plant with English and Scots, nor restrained from planting with Natives.

"By the seven-and-twenty Articles, the City was to build two hundred Houses in Derry, and an hundred at Colrain, by the first Day of November

the City.

" November 1611. Admitting that the Houses were " not built, nor the Castle of Culmore repaired, by " the Time prefixed; yet this is no Crime, nor " Cause for giving Damages, in regard the City
 " had not that Patent until the nine-and-twentieth " of March 1613.

" That there is no Proof that the Governor,
 " &c. of the new Plantation, or any of their Com" panies, did make any Lease unto any Popish
 " Recusant, nor of any Decay of Religion there " by Default of the Planters.

" There is no Proof of any Default in the " Planters for not making a sufficient Number of " Freeholders, nor any Articles that do tie them
 " thereunto.

" That there is no Proof that the City of " London, or the Governor of the new Plantati" ons, have felled any Trees in the Woods called " Glancankin and Kellytrough, contrary to their " Covenant.

" That the not conveying of Glebe Lands
 " to the several Incumbents of the several Parish " Churches, in regard they did enjoy the Lands,
 " is no Crime punishable, nor Cause of Seizure of " their Lands.

" That the Breach of Covenant (if any such " were) is no sufficient Cause to forfeit the Lands.

" That the Breach of Covenant is no Crime,
 " but triable in ordinary Courts of Justice.

" That the Court of Star-Chamber, while it " stood as a Court, had no Power to examine " Freehold nor Inheritance; nor had any Power
 " to examine or determine Breach of Covenant or
 " Trust.

" That the Sentence upon these Corporations
 " aggregate, no particular Person being guilty, it " is against Law.

" That in all the Proofs of this Cause there
 " doth not appear Matter sufficient to convince
 " the City of London of any Crime.

" That, upon the whole Matter, the Sentence
 " of the Star-Chamber was unlawful and unjust.

" That this Composition and Agreement made " with the City upon these Terms in the Time of " Extremity ought not to bind the City.

" That the Opinion of the House is, That " they think fit, that both the Citizens of London,
 " and those of the new Plantation, and all Under-" Tenants, and all those put out of Possession by
 " the Sequestration, or King's Commissioners, " shall be restored to the same State they were in
 " before the Sentence in the Star-Chamber.

" That the Citizens of London, and all they " against whom the Judgment is given in the " Scire Facias, shall be discharged of that Judg" ment."

*City provided 1200
 Men
 against the Scots.*

Some time after, Letters were sent by the Privy Council to the Lords Lieutenants of the several Counties of the Kingdom, for their immediately raising an Army to march against the Scots; and by other Letters from the said Council, ten thousand Men, Part of the said Army, were commanded to march to the several Ports appointed for their Imbarcation, in order to their being transported forthwith to Scotland: The Complement of this City on that Occasion was twelve hundred Men, who were accordingly shipped at Blackwall for the intended Expedition.

The Government at this troublesome Time willing to prevent all Tumults and Disorders that might arise in this City, the Privy Council sent the following Letter to Sir Maurice Abbot, the Lord-Mayor:

" After, &c. to your Lordship. Although it " is well known unto you, what have been the In" solencies and Disorders committed heretofore on " May-days, and how express and frequent the " Directions of this Board have been to your Pre" decessors for preventing the same; nevertheless
 " we have thought good to renew our like Direc" tions to your Lordship, hereby requiring you,
 " that besides the keeping of strong and suffici" ent Watches in all fit Places within that City
 " and Liberties thereof, you do likewise appoint " to be in Readiness with Powder and Shot
 " some of the Trained-Bands, to the Number of " eight hundred, to be instructed and trained " (as Need shall require) on May-day next, in " such convenient Places as may best serve for " the preventing of any Riots or Tumults, which
 " by the Number of Apprentices, joined with " loose and dissolute Persons (which abound in " these Parts) might otherwise happen, or be " attempted: And requiring you to use especial " Care and Diligence herein, we bid your Lord" ship, &c.

" From Whitehall, the twenty-fourth
 " of April 1640."

The City Rabble being highly enraged against the Archbishop of Canterbury, a certain Incendiary, to provoke them to Revenge, on the ninth of May stuck a Paper upon the Royal Exchange, whereby he animated the Apprentices and others to sack the Archbishop's Palace at Lambeth:
 This mischievous Person succeeded so far in his Design, that two Days after the Populace assembled to the Number of five hundred, who ran by Night to Lambeth, where they attacked the episcopal Palace; but the Archbishop, receiving timely Notice of their Design, had so effectually fortified it, that the Rabble were beat off, and forced to retire, without being able to effect what they went for. However, this Attempt occasioned the Lords of the Privy Council to send the under-mentioned Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

" Upon Occasion of the late tumultuous Af" fairs in and about Lambeth, his Majesty hath " commanded us to signify his Pleasure to your " Lordship, to take present and effectual Order,
 " that there be double Watches kept within the " City and Liberties of London, and that the said
 " Watches do continue in their Charge till five " o'clock in the Morning. Your Lordship is " further to cause every Householder within the " said City and Liberties to be answerable for
 " the quiet and peaceable Behaviour of all his " Apprentices and Servants. And lastly, your " Lordship is to take special Care, that there " be a good and sufficient Watch kept every " Night at the Bridge-Foot, to intercept all va" grant Persons, and to prevent any Concourse of " People to pass in or out of the said City. Which " strict Course and double Watch is to be conti" nued by your Lordship's vigilant Care, till your " Lordship shall receive further Order. And for
 " your

"Dated the twelfth Day of May, 1640."

"Signed, &c."

It appears, that all the Measures taken by the Mayor, pursuant to the Directions in the above Letter, were not sufficient to prevent the mischievous Designs of evil-disposed Persons, who continuing to accomplish their villainous Intentions, stuck up divers Pasquils in several Parts of the City, to excite the People to a general Insurrection; which the Privy Council receiving Intelligence of, were thereby induced, for the Peace and Quietness of the City, to send the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

"Whereas by the late tumultuous Riots in and about Lambeth, we find, that it may be necessary, upon the like Occasion, to have the Trained-Bands of the City of London and Liberties in a Readiness to suppress any disorderly, riotous, and like tumultuous Meetings, which may happen now, or at any other Time hereafter: We have therefore thought fit hereby to authorise and require your Lordship, for the Prevention and Suppressing of any Danger that may happen by the gathering-together of vagrant, or any other idle Persons, from Time to Time, and so often as you shall find it requisite, to cause the Trained-Bands of that City, &c. or such Part thereof as your Lordship shall think necessary, to be drawn forth in their Arms, and put in Readiness for the Service aforesaid; for which this shall be your Lordship's Warrant. And so, &c."

"Dated the fourteenth of May, 1640."

The King, upon the unhappy Dissolution of the Parliament, being in great Want of Money for the carrying on his military Preparations against Scotland, commanded the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City to attend the Privy Council, in order to give in the Names of such Citizens in each of their Wards, as were able to advance Money for his Majesty's Service; but divers thereof proving refractory, they were committed to Prison, as will appear by the following Orders:

"It was the Day of May ordered, (his Majesty present in Council) that as well the Lord-Mayor, and all the Aldermen of the City of London, who this Day attended his Majesty (excepting Sir Nicholas Rainton, Alderman Somes, Alderman Geere, and Alderman Atkins) as also all the rest of the Aldermen who were this Day absent, together with the Deputies of the Wards belonging to the said Sir Nicholas Rainton, Alderman Somes, Alderman Geere, and Alderman Atkins, shall forthwith meet, and set down in Writing the Names of all such Persons, Inhabitants within their several and respective Wards, as they conceive are able to lend his Majesty (upon Security) in the whole, amongst them all, the Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds."

"And that they shall every of them respectively set down particularly how much every Person in their Ward is able, in their Opinions, to lend towards the said Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds, and present the same in Writing to the Council-Board on Friday next

"at two of the Clock in the Afternoon. And the said Lord-Mayor and Aldermen may (if they please) call to them the Deputies of their several and respective Wards to assist and inform them for their better Dispatch of this Business. And if any of the Aldermen who were absent, or their Deputies of any of the said Wards, shall refuse or delay to join herein, according to this Order, his Majesty's express Command is, that the Lord-Mayor do forthwith return his or their Names to the Board."

"Whereas Sir Nicholas Rainton, Alderman of the City of London, Alderman Geere, and Alderman Atkins, were heretofore, with the rest of the Aldermen of the said City, made acquainted with his Majesty's urgent and present Occasions to use and employ the Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds, for the Safeguard and Defence of the Realm, and were required in his Majesty's Name to set down the Names of such Persons within their several and respective Wards, who are, in their Opinions, able to lend his Majesty Monies towards the said Defence, and to set down how much they conceive every such Person is able to lend:

"And whereas the said Sir Nicholas Rainton, Alderman Geere and Alderman Atkins, being this Day convened before the Board, his Majesty present in Council, refused to set down the Names of such Persons within their several and respective Wards, which, in their Opinions, were able to lend his Majesty Money for the Service aforesaid, and how much they conceive every such Person is able to lend, (although other Aldermen have therein given his Majesty Satisfaction) for which their Contempt they now stand committed by Warrant from this Board: It is ordered, that Mr. Attorney General shall be hereby prayed and required forthwith to examine all the said Aldermen apart; and, having taken all their Examinations, to take present Order for proceeding against them for their said Contempts, by Information in the Star-Chamber, or otherwise, as he, with the Advice of other his Majesty's learned Council, shall conceive to conduce most to his Majesty's Service."

In pursuance of the above Orders, Warrants were made out for committing Sir Nicholas Rainton to the Marshalsea; Alderman Somes to the Fleet; Alderman Atkins to the King's-Bench; and Alderman Geere to the Gate-house.

The King being firmly resolved to carry on a vigorous War against his Scottish Subjects; therefore, the better to enable his Majesty to prosecute the same with Success, the Privy Council sent the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

"By his Majesty's Letter dated in last March, sent herewith, you shall understand his Majesty's Pleasure and Intention for the Levying of four thousand Foot within the City of London and Liberties, to go in this present Expedition into the North Parts; by which Letters your Lordship is referred to us for such Instructions and Directions as shall be requisite for that Service: We therefore thought good hereby to pray and require your Lordship, to take Order in the first Place, that Coat and Conduct Money be levied for them, so as it may not fail to be ready by

 "of the Conductors, you are to take Order that "the same be levied in the City and Liberties,
 "according to the Precedents of former Times,
 "upon other the like Occasions of Ser"vice. And it is his Majesty's Pleasure, that "the said Monies so disbursed shall, upon a just "Account thereof made, be repaid again out of "his Majesty's Exchequer, as in former Times
 "upon the like Occasion.

"And we do likewise pray and require your "Lordship, that, at the Delivery of the Men to "the Conductors aforesaid, the Number and "Names of the Persons may be received by In"denture between the said Conductors, and such "as shall have Charge by your Commandment
 "to see the Men delivered to them; whereof one
 "Duplicate is to be sent to the Board, and ano"ther to the Lord General, to the End there "may be an Account given, when the same shall "be required."

The Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs proving not only very dilatory in urging the Affair of Subscription to the Loan of the above-mentioned two hundred thousand Pounds, but likewise as remiss in the Business of Ship-Money; therefore the following Order of Council was made for their Prosecution in the Court of Star-Chamber:

Ibid.

"Whereas the Lord-Mayor of London and the "two Sheriffs did this Day appear before his Ma"jesty and the Board, to give an Account of their

"Proceedings upon the Writ for the Ship Business
 "this present Year: Forasmuch as it did appear,
 "that besides all former Neglects in the Execu"tion of that Writ, his Majesty having respited
 "the Information against them for the same; yet
 "they have not since distrained any one Person
 "according to the said Writ: It was this Day "ordered by his Majesty, with the Advice of "the Board, that his Majesty's Attorney General "shall forthwith prefer an Information in the "Star-Chamber against the Lord-Mayor and "Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, for their Con"tempt and Default in the Execution of the said "Writ; and shall forthwith proceed against "them de die in diem, until the Cause be ready "for hearing: And if, upon Examination of the "said Cause, his Majesty's Attorney General
 "shall find sufficient Cause against any of the "Aldermen, that then he do prefer one other "Information against the said Aldermen;
 "and in like Manner do proceed against them
 "apart."

However, the City remained inflexible, 'till they obtained the following Charter for their Money:

"England, in the first and eighteenth Years of his Reign, to them granted :

"And also by Virtue of a certain other Charter, or Letters Patents of Henry the Eighth, late King of England, to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens aforesaid granted, in the third Year of his Reign, by whatsoever Name or Names the same are called in the said Letters Patents, by Authority of Parliament confirmed, or by Colour of the same Letters Patents, or any of them, or by the Prescription aforesaid, with divers Fees and Rewards to the said Offices belonging and appertaining :

"And whereas divers Questions and Differences have of late arisen about and concerning the Offices aforesaid, and the Execution thereof within the Port aforesaid, within the Liberties and Franchises of the City aforesaid, and Suburbs thereof, whereby the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London aforesaid, have been hindered or disturbed in the Offices aforesaid, and in the Exercises of them :

"Know ye, that We, for the removing and utter taking away all Doubts and Questions about the said Offices, and likewise for the corroborating, amplifying, encreasing, declaring and establishing the Liberties and Privileges of the said City, of our special Grace, certain Knowledge, and meer Motion, and also for and in Consideration of four thousand and two hundred Pounds of lawful Money of England, to the Hands of our antient and faithful Servant George Kinge, Gentleman of our Robes, and one of the Grooms of our Bedchamber, by a Warrant under our Privy Seal, heretofore paid, or assigned to be paid ; whereof we do acknowledge Ourself to be fully satisfied and paid, and them the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London aforesaid, and their Successors, to be thereof acquitted and discharged for ever by these Presents ; and for divers other good Causes and Considerations Us hereunto especially moving, have for Us, our Heirs and Successors, created, ordained, and constituted, and by these Presents do create, ordain, and constitute, that from henceforth, for ever after, there shall be within the said Port of London, and the Limits and Bounds thereof, within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City and Suburbs thereof, an Office and Offices, Employment and Employments, of Package of all woollen Cloths, Woolfells, Calves-skins, Goat-skins, Bales of Tin, and of all other Merchandizes whatsoever, to be packed, casked, piped, barrelled or any ways vesselled, with a Survey of the Measure, Number, and Weight of the said Merchandizes, and also the Survey of all customable Merchandizes, to the said Port within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City and Suburbs thereof coming, and out of the same Port going, as well by Land as by Water, within the Liberties and Franchises of the City aforesaid, and Suburbs thereof, as well of the Goods of any Denizen, whose Father is or shall be an Alien, as of the Goods of Aliens, wheresoever the same shall be customed,

"As also an Office, or Employment of Carriage and Portage of all Wools, Woolfells, Bales of Tin, and of all other Merchandizes whatsoever, as well of any Denizen, whose Father is or shall be an Alien, born without the Allegiance of Us, our Heirs or Successors, as of Aliens born without the Allegiance of Us, our Heirs or Successors, and under any foreign Allegiance, in any the Parts beyond the Seas, which shall be carried into London, from the River of Thames to the House or Warehouse of such Alien, and from thence to the said River : Together with the Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments of the said Office or Employments, and other the Profits, in two Tables hereunto annexed, mentioned, and respectively limited and appointed ; all and singular Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments, in the said Tables or Schedules expressed, as due and lawful Fees to the said several Offices of Package and Portage annexed and belonging, and in the Execution of the same Offices, and either of them, respectively, to be had and taken.

"We do for Us, our Heirs and Successors, ratify, establish, and confirm, by these Presents, the same Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments, in the said Tables or Schedules before-mentioned, We do for Us, our Heirs and Successors, grant unto the said Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City aforesaid, and their Successors for ever, by these Presents.

"And furthermore, of our special Grace, certain Knowledge, and meer Motion, for the Consideration aforesaid, we do for Us, our Heirs and Successors, give and grant to the said Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City aforesaid, and their Successors, the said Office or Employment of Package of all and all manner of woollen Cloths, Woolfells, Calves-skins, Goat-skins, Bales of Tin, and all other Merchandizes whatsoever, to be packed, casked, piped, barrelled, or any ways vesselled ; with the Survey of the Measure, Number, and Weight of the said Merchandizes, together with the Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments aforesaid.

"And also the Office or Employment of Carriage and Portage of all Wools, Woolfells, Bales of Tin, and all other Merchandizes whatsoever, as well of any Denizen, whose Father is or shall be an Alien born, without the Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, as of any Alien born without the Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, and under any foreign Allegiance, in Parts beyond the Seas, which shall be carried into London from the River of Thames to the House of such Alien, and from thence to the said River ; together with the Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments aforesaid ; to hold and exercise the Offices and Employments aforesaid, and either of them, with their Appurtenances, and the Dispositions, Orderings, Surveyings and Corrections thereof, and of either of them ; together with all Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments whatsoever, to the said Offices or Employments, or either of them, in

"And also, to exercise and occupy the said Offices or Employments, and every and either of them, by themselves, or by their sufficient Minister or Ministers, Deputy or Deputies, without any Account or other Thing to be therefore rendered or made to us, our Heirs or Successors, (besides the Rent hereafter in these Presents mentioned to be reserved and paid to us, our Heirs and Successors) and without incurring any Penalty or Forfeiture of the Offices aforesaid, or either of them, or any Parcel thereof; although they or their Deputies, Officers or Servants, do not pack the said Goods or Merchandizes, when they are ready, and upon reasonable Request and Notice thereof given for the performing the said Services. And that no other Porter or Carrier, or any other Person or Persons whatsoever, shall presume to intermit or intrude him or themselves to carry or lade any of the said Goods or Merchandizes, from any Wharf or Shore within the Limits aforesaid, into any Ship or Vessel, or to unlade any Goods or Merchandizes from any Ship or Vessel upon any Wharf, Shore, or Lane within the Limits aforesaid, without the special Appointment or Licence of the said Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City aforesaid, or of their Officers or Deputies, for that Purpose first had and obtained.

"And that the Porter or Carrier appointed, and from Time to Time to be appointed, by the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, or by their sufficient Officers, or Deputies for the Time being, shall have, take, or receive, of or from the said Merchants, as well Aliens born without the Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, and under any foreign Allegiance in Parts beyond the Seas, as of the said Denizens born, or to be born within the Power or Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, whose Father is, or shall be an Alien, born without the Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, for the Carriage or Portage of the said Goods and Merchandizes, such Sums of Money for their Labour aforesaid, as, in a certain Schedule to these Presents annexed, are mentioned and appointed; without any Account or other Thing to be therefore rendered or made to us, our Heirs or Successors, besides the Rents hereafter in these Presents mentioned, to be paid to us, our Heirs or Successors.

"And further, of our more abundant Grace, certain Knowledge, and meer Motion, and for the Consideration aforesaid, we do, for us, our Heirs and Successors, give and grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City aforesaid, and their Successors, the Office or Employment of the Scavage and Surveying, and also the Scavage of all the Goods and Wares customable whatsoever, of any Merchants, as well Aliens as Denizens, whose Father is or shall be an Alien born, or to be born

"without the Allegiance of us, our Predecessors, Heirs or Successors, and to be brought from any Parts beyond the Seas, within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City and Suburbs thereof, on account of Merchandizing.

"And also the Surveying, Delivering, or Balliage of all the Goods and Wares of any of the said Merchants, within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City, which shall be carried out into Parts beyond the Seas, by way of Merchandize, through and upon the River Thames, within the Limits aforesaid, in any Ship, Boat, Barge, or Vessel whatsoever, floating, laden, remaining, or being off of any Shore of the said River of Thames, and which upon any Bank, Wharf, or Shore of the said River, shall happen to remain, and be delivered or unladen within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City, and Suburbs thereof; together with the Fees, Sums of Money, Profits, and Emoluments, in a certain Table or Schedule to these Presents annexed, mentioned, and respectively limited and appointed, according to the Form of the Statute made and published in the twenty-second Year of Henry the Eighth, late King of England. All and singular which said Fees, Sums of Money, Profits, and Emoluments, in the said Table or Schedule last-mentioned are expressed, as due and lawful Fees to the said several Offices of Scavage and Balliage aforesaid annexed and belonging, and in the Execution of the said Offices, and either of them respectively, hereafter to be had and taken.

"We do for us, our Heirs and Successors, ratify, establish and confirm, by these Presents; and the same Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments in the said last-mentioned Table or Schedule, we do for us, our Heirs and Successors, grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City aforesaid, and their Successors, for ever, by these Presents, to have and exercise the said Offices and Employments last-mentioned, and either of them, with the Appurtenances, and the Disputings, Orderings, Supervisings and Corrections of the same, and either of them, together with all the Fees, Sums of Money, Profits and Emoluments to the said Offices or Employments, and either of them, in the said Table or Schedule to the Presents annexed, mentioned, and respectively appointed, unto the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors for ever.

"And also to exercise and occupy the said Offices or Employments by themselves, or by their sufficient Minister or Ministers, Deputy or Deputies, without any Account or other Matter to be rendered or made to us, our Heirs or Successors for the same, (besides the Rents hereafter in these Presents mentioned, to be reserved and paid to us, our Heirs and Successors) and without incurring any Penalty of the said Offices or Employments, or either of them, or any Parcel thereof, although they, or their Deputies, Officers or Servants, shall not survey or deliver the Goods and Merchandizes aforesaid, when they shall be ready, upon reasonable Request,

All Aliens
and Denizens shall make and deliver to the Mayor, of Entry.

"Request, or Notice thereof given, for the performing the said Work or Services.

"Willing, and by these Presents, for us, our Heirs and Successors, enjoining and commanding all and singular such Aliens and Denizens aforesaid, that they from Time to Time do make and deliver, or cause to be made and delivered, unto the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, or their Servants, Deputies or Collectors of the Scavage aforesaid, for the Time being, true and perfect Bills of Entry, of all and every their Goods, Merchandizes and Wares, which shall be from Time to Time brought within the Liberties and Franchises of the said City and Suburbs thereof, under Pain of our royal Indignation, and of being farther punished for their Contempt of our Command in this Behalf: Yielding therefore yearly to us, our Heirs and Successors, into the Receipt of our Exchequer at Westminster, three Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence, of lawful Money of England, at the Feasts of St. Michael the Archangel, and the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, by equal Portions every Year to be paid.

Fraudulent Ladings, &c. have passed.

"And whereas we are informed, that, with Intent to defraud and deceive the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City aforesaid, of the Fees and Profits to the said several Offices belonging and appertaining, several Goods and Merchandizes have been frau-dulently laden and unladed by divers Persons at certain Wharfs or Places, commonly called St. Katharine's, Tower-Wharf, Southwark, Bick-

River of Thames aforesaid, supposing the same Places to be without the Port of London aforesaid, and the Liberties, Franchises and Suburbs thereof:

"We will, and by these Presents, for us, our Heirs and Successors, do ordain and declare, that for ever hereafter all and singular Merchant-Strangers, born without our Allegiance, in Parts beyond the Seas, and under foreign Obedience; and also the Sons of such Merchant-Strangers, who henceforth shall lade or unlade any Goods or Merchandizes, custom-able in the Port of the City of London aforesaid, or in any of the said Places or Wharfs above-mentioned, shall from Time to Time render and pay, or make and cause to be rendered and paid, unto the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the City aforesaid, and their Successors, or their Officers, Deputies and Servants, such Wages and Fees as are in the said Tables or Schedules mentioned and expressed.

"And further, because we are given to understand, that divers Goods and Merchandizes of Merchants, as well Aliens born without our "Allegiance, under foreign Obedience, in Parts beyond the Seas, as also such Denizens, whose Father is or shall be an Alien, and born under foreign Allegiance in Parts beyond the Seas; which are carried out of the Port of the said City, and brought into the said Port from foreign Parts, and beyond the Seas, are very often subtilly concealed and coloured, under the Names of other Persons, to defraud us of our Customs, and other Things to us belonging, for such Goods and Merchandizes, to the Prejudice and Loss of us, our Heirs and Successors, and also of the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, of the Fees and Sums of Money, so as aforesaid respectively limited, appointed and ordained by reason of the Exercise of the Offices aforesaid, or any of them:

"We therefore, being willing to look after our Indemnity in this Behalf, and also to the Intent that the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens may the better detect the Frauds, Covins and Deceits of all Persons, so concealing and withdrawing the said Goods and Mer-chandizes, and the Fees aforesaid, We do, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, give, and by these Presents grant, to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, and their Successors, that the Mayor of the City aforesaid, for the Time being, and the sufficient Deputies, Servants or Officers of the said Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City aforesaid in that Behalf, from Time to Time duly assigned, shall and may have full Power and Authority to give and administer the Oath upon the Holy Evangelists, from Time to Time, to all such Persons suspected, or to be suspected, of the said
Withdrawings, Concealments, Colourings, Frauds and Covins; and that it shall and may be lawful to the said Mayor, his Minister and Deputy, or Officer for the Time being, by all lawful Ways and Means to compel all such Persons suspected, or to be suspected, (as shall refuse or deny to take the said Oath) to take the same Oath:

In such Cases the Mayor, &c. may administer an Oath.

"Although Express Mention of the true yearly Value, or of the Certainty of the Premises, or any of them, or of any other Gifts or Grants by us, or by any of our Progenitors or Predecessors, to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City aforesaid, or any of them heretofore made, is not made in these Presents, or any Statute, Act, Ordinance, Provision, Proclamation or Restraint to the contrary thereof, heretofore had, made, published, ordained or provided, or any other Thing, Cause or Matter whatsoever, in any wise, notwithstanding.

"In witness whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made Patents. Witness ourselves at Westminster, the fifth Day of September, in the sixteenth Year of our Reign."

Scots in Possession of the Town of Newcastle.

UPON the Defeat of Part of the King's Army by the Scots at Newburn, the Town of Newcastle upon Tyne was immediately surrendered to them; which greatly alarmed the Lord-Mayor and Citizens of London, for Fear of their being deprived of the usual and necessary Supply of Coals from thence: Therefore, to alleviate their anxious Thoughts, and dispel those gloomy Apprehensions, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, to their great Joy and Satisfaction, received the following Letter from the principal Commanders of the Scottish Army then in the said Town:

Right Honourable,

Ref. Col. vol. 2. p. 2. Nalf. Col. vol. 1. Their Letter to the Lord-Mayor.

"What Care and Pains have been by us these Years past to settle our Grievances at Home; and what heavy Complaints have been made heretofore to all our dear Brethren in England, that the Ground of our Evils and Sufferings is from the abused Power of this Kingdom, in the Hands of wicked Counsellors; what Necessity hath been laid upon us of late to enter into England with our Lives in our Hands, to petition his Majesty; the manifold Declarations and Informations that have been published for that End bear us Witness; and that our appearing in Arms is not to wrong any, but to guard ourselves against all unjust Persons, that may hinder us from obtaining our humble and just Desires from our gracious Sovereign.

"And therefore, as it was the End of our Journey, not to make us Enemies, but kind Friends; so we profess and declare to your Lordship, and the Aldermen your Brethren, that our Abode at Newcastle, a Town of great Importance for our Security, until our Petition be heard and granted, is not to make any Stop of Trade in that River, since the free Traffick of Coals is so necessary for the City of London, and other Places of England; but, on the contrary, our Purpose is to use the best Means we can to continue that Trade: And for this Effect, at our coming to Newcastle, hearing that many Masters of Ships, possessed with needless Fears, were hastening out of the "River empty, we sent two Noblemen of our Number to make this Declaration unto them, whereby many of them rested satisfied, and staid to load.

"And hereby we do renew our former Assurance, as the finallest Testimony of greatest Respect and Good-will to the City of London, of whose Affection to the Peace of these Two Kingdoms, wherein they have greatest Share and Interest, we are fully informed, and to whom we desire not to be found wanting in any Act of Friendship and Thankfulness, that may flow from us to the utmost of our Power.

"From the Camp at Newcastle, the ninth Day of September, 1640. Signed, &c."

Soon after, the Privy Council being informed, that the City of London was about to petition the King to call a new Parliament; for the preventing of which, it was judged necessary to write to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, as follows:

"Whereas we have seen the Copy of a Petition pretended to be presented to his Majesty, in the Name of the Citizens of London, to which many Hands, as we understand, are endeavoured to be gotten in the several Wards, concerning divers Grievances; out of the Care which we have for your Good, and the Duty which we owe to his Majesty, being the representative Body of his Authority, and to whom he hath particularly recommended the Care and Quiet of these Parts in his Absence; we have thought fit to signify to your Lordship, and the rest, the Sense and Apprehension we have of the said Petition, and of the Time, and of the Manner of contriving the same.

"And we cannot but hold it very dangerous, and strange, to have a Petition framed in the Name of the Citizens, and endeavoured to be signed in a Way not warranted by the Charters and Customs of the City; setting forth of Grievances, which they cannot but know, that his Majesty, of his abundant Grace and Goodness to his People, will presently take into his Consideration, and give thereunto all just Redress; concluding the Petition with a Demand, which, they be most certain, will come from his Majesty's own Grace and Goodness, from which only it can proceed with Comfort and Success. And all this in a Time, when his Majesty is in his own Person engaged in an Army for the Defence of this City, and the whole Kingdom, against the Rebels, who have invaded this Kingdom with so great an Army, and have so far advanced to the Danger of the Kingdom, and Dishonour of the Nation; especially his Majesty having so particularly at his parting hence recommended the Care and Safety of the Queen his dearest Consort's Person, and the Prince, and his Royal Children to your Lordship and the Aldermen, and the ancient and approved Loyalty and Fidelity of this City of London, honoured from all Antiquity with the Title of his Majesty's own Chamber.

"We therefore thought fit hereby to pray and require your Lordship and the rest, to take a Course by all good and lawful Ways to stop the

"the Proceedings of this intended Petition, wherein we doubt not, but you shall have the Concurrence of the most able and best-affected Citizens, for the avoiding of the great Disturbance, which it may bring to the King's Affairs, (thus engaged as he is) and the just Cure which may lie upon this City, in future Times; and so, &c.

"Dated September the sixteenth, 1640.

"Signed, &c.

But the Lord-Mayor and Citizens, having a greater Regard to the Interest of the Kingdom in general, and their City in particular, than to the Representations of the Privy-Council, sent their Petition, by a Deputation from the Court of Aldermen and Common Council, to his Majesty then with his Army at York. The Contents whereof were as follow:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

The City's Petition to the King.

"Being moved with the Duty and Obedience, which by the Laws your Petitioners owe unto your sacred Majesty, they humbly present unto your princely and pious Wisdom the several pressing Grievances following, viz.

"1. The pressing and unusual Impositions upon Merchandize, importing and exporting, and the urging and levying of Ship-Money, notwithstanding both which, Merchants Ships and Goods have been taken and destroyed both by Turkish and other Pirates.

"2. The Multitude of Monopolies, Patents, and Warrants, whereby Trade in the City, and other Parts of the Kingdom is much decayed.

"3. The sundry Innovations in Matters of Religion.

"4. The Oath and Canons lately enjoyed by the late Convocation, whereby your Petitioners are in Danger to be deprived of their Ministers.

"5. The great Concourse of Papists, and their Inhabitations in London, and the Suburbs, whereby they have more Means and Opportunity of plotting and executing their Designs against the Religion established.

"6. The seldom Calling, and sudden Dissolutions of Parliaments, without the Redress of your Subjects Grievances.

"7. The Imprisonment of divers Citizens for Non-payment of Ship-Money, and Impositions; and the Prosecution of many others in the Star-Chamber, for not conforming themselves to Committees in Patents of Monopolies, whereby Trade is restrained.

"8. The great Danger your sacred Person is exposed unto in the present War, and the various Fears that seized upon your Petitioners and their Families by reason thereof; which Grievances and Fears have occasioned so great a Stop and Distraction in Trade, that your Petitioners can neither buy, sell, receive or pay as formerly, and tends to the utter Ruin of the Inhabitants of this City, the Decay of Navigation, and Clothing, and the Manufactures of this Kingdom.

"Your humble Petitioners conceiving, that the said Grievances are contrary to the Laws of this Kingdom, and finding by Experience,

"that they are not redressed by the ordinary Course of Justice, do therefore most humbly beseech your most sacred Majesty, to cause a Parliament to be summoned with all convenient Speed, whereby they may be relieved in the Premises.

"And your Petitioners and loyal Subjects shall ever pray, &c."

In the mean time the King's Army in Yorkshire was reduced to very great Straits, for Want of Money; wherefore it was in Council resolved, that a Letter should be sent to the City of London, in the Name, and under the Hands of all the Peers who accompanied his Majesty, for a Loan of two hundred thousand Pounds; which Letter was drawn up by a select Committee thereunto appointed, together with certain Instructions to their Deputies, for treating with the Citizens in that Affair; of which Letter the following is a Copy:

The King
applies to the City for
200000 l.

"After, &c. Having been, by his Majesty's Writ under the Great Seal of England, assembled here the twenty-fourth of this Instant Month, to our exceeding great Joy and Comfort, before our Entry into any Consideration, his Majesty was pleased to declare his gracious Resolution for holding a Parliament at Westminster the third of November next; in which Declaration his Majesty was pleased to add so full Assurance of his great Desire to be rightly understood by his People, and of his Resolution to relieve all the just Grievances at this succeeding Parliament, that we all rest confident upon his Royal Word, that this whole Kingdom shall be firmly united in a loyal and hearty Care for the Preservation of the true Religion established here, the Honour of his most sacred Majesty, and the general Good and Happiness of all his Majesty's loving Subjects.

Ibid.
vol. 1.

"We are way every sensible of the great Calamity, that cannot but light upon both Kingdoms, by the present Distractions and Distempers, and have, for timely Remedy therein, been (by his Majesty's great Wisdom and Prudence) put into a Way of Treaty with those of Scotland, for such an Accommodation, as may tend to the Honour of his Majesty, and the perfect Union of both Kingdoms; wherein as we rest most assured, that his Majesty will be no way wanting in his Grace and Goodness, to listen to the just and reasonable Demands of his Subjects of Scotland; so, if they shall insist upon Terms dishonourable for his Majesty and the English Nation to condescend unto, we shall all hold ourselves obliged in Honour and Duty to preserve and defend this Kingdom from all Invasions and Spoils, by any kind of Enemy whatsoever.

"The Lords appointed by his Majesty and the Great Council of the Peers are to meet with those of Scotland on Thursday next at Rippon; and we all are not out of Hope, that all Things may come to a happy and speedy Conclusion: In the mean time taking into our serious Consideration the State of Newcastle, the Commodities whereof are so necessary and beneficial for the City of London, and indeed

"for the whole Kingdom; the miserable Conditions of the County of Northumberland, and Bishoprick of Durham; the Particulars whereof, the Lords deputed and entrusted with these our Letters, and other Instructions, will fully acquaint you with; and withal finding, that the Safety of this great and considerable County of York, and the adjacent Counties, depend upon the holding together his Majesty's Army; and knowing well, that although these Counties should for the present first undergo the Calamity that would ensue thereon; yet the Danger and Misery would soon overtake all other Counties of the Realm; we could not in our Judgments think it Wisdom to advise his Majesty to disband his Forces, but much rather to continue them together, till by the happy Success of this Treaty, or the great Wisdom of the Parliament, some Course might be taken for a firm Peace, or a just War: The Consideration whereof, we shall, as in all Things, humbly refer to that great and honourable Body now summoned, and which will undoubtedly, with God's Grace, assemble at the Day and Place appointed. His Majesty hath made it appear to us, that his Treasure is exhausted, and that he is altogether unprovided to keep his Forces together for so long a Time, as the Parliament can settle some such Course, as they in their Wisdom shall think fittest.

"To the End therefore that the English Forces may not disband till those of Scotland do, we have all with an unanimous Consent resolved, that it is necessary, that his Majesty be supplied with two hundred thousand Pounds, as well for the continuing them together, as for the orderly dismissing of them, when it shall be Time so to do; lest in their Return his Majesty's Subjects should undergo any of those Inconveniencies, that Soldiers sent away unsatisfied are apt to put upon them. We assuredly persuade ourselves, that the City of London is well able to supply his Majesty with this Sum; and we doubt not but (our Hearts being all here united) the same Affection will shew itself in you of London, who are so concerned in the Danger, and so considerable in yourselves.

"To these Arguments, which we doubt not but you will seriously consider, and fortify with many of your own, we cannot but add our hearty, earnest and unanimous Desires and affectionate Requests, that you would not at this Time be failing to so gracious a King, to the whole Kingdom, and to yourselves; and to this Purpose we have deputed their Lordships, Henry, Earl of Manchester, Lord Privy Seal; Philip, Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household; John, Earl of Clare; Edward, Viscount Camden; the Lord Coventry; and George, Lord Goring, Vice-Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, Members of this great Council; who, being assisted by the principal Officers of his Majesty's Revenues, shall treat and conclude with you of all Particulars, both for Security and the Days of Payment, such as may suit with his Majesty's real Performance of the Premises; we offer ourselves to join in any further Security in such Manner as shall be agreed upon by these Lords and yourselves: All which we the rather offer to your serious Considerations, in regard we do visibly foresee, that the disbanding of his Majesty's Army may be the absolute Loss of all those adjacent Counties, and the endangering the whole Kingdom, and that no other present Means, than by the Loan of two hundred thousand Pounds from you, can be found, for the publick Preservation of the King and Kingdom. And so we bid you heartily farewell, and we rest your ever loving Friends, &c.

The following Instructions were given to the Lords Deputies for treating with the City of London:

"1. To acquaint them with the Petitions from Newcastle, Northumberland, and the Bishoprick of Durham, with such Circumstances as they conceive material concerning them.

Roth. Col.
vol. 2. p. 2.

"2. To acquaint them with the Acts and Proceedings of this Assembly of the Peers.

"3. The Security, which they shall offer from the Peers, is to be by Bond.

"4. All other Peers (though not present at this Assembly) are to be desired to engage themselves, as far forth as the Peers now assembled shall.

"5. The Lords deputed shall have Authority to desire, in the Name of this Great Council, the Assistance of any Peer of the Realm for Furtherance of the Business, wherein they are employed.

"6. The Lords deputed, to agree for Times of Payment and Repayment, wherein they are to take Notice, that his Majesty's Occasions will require fifty thousand Pounds to be paid by the twelfth of October next, one hundred thousand Pounds by the fifteenth of November, and the other fifty thousand Pounds by the first of December, and to draw the City as near as they can to these Times.

"For the Days of Repayment, they are to confer with the Officers of his Majesty's Revenue.

The Lords Deputies having luckily succeeded in their Negotiations with the Citizens of London in respect to the Loan, it occasioned the Great Council at York to send a second Letter to the Lord-Mayor, which concludes thus:

It is frequently mistaken.

"After our hearty Commendations to your Lordship, and the rest: By our Letters of the twenty-fifth of September last, and by those Lords which were the Bearers of them; We made known unto you, in what Condition the County of Northumberland and the Bishoprick of Durham stood, and how much it concerned the adjacent Counties, and in Consequence the whole Kingdom, that his Majesty should continue his Forces together, till by the happy Success of the present Treaty, or the great Wisdom of the Parliament, some Course might be taken for a firm Peace, or just War: Being satisfied, that his Majesty was altogether unprovided of Money, for keeping of his Forces together, till the Parliament might have Time

A second Letter.

"to settle a Course therein, agreeable to their Wisdom.

"And having also resolved, that it was necessary for his Majesty to be supplied with the Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds, as well for continuing his Forces together, as for orderly dismissing of them, when it should be fit so to do; we made it our hearty and affectionate Request unto you, that you would not at this Time be wanting to assist his Majesty, and oblige the whole Kingdom by lending that Sum: For which we then offered (as we still do, and shall be ever ready to perform) to join with his Majesty in any such Security, as should be agreed upon by those Lords and yourselves.

"We then gave you our Reasons and Opinions, how much it imported the publick Preservation of both King and Kingdom; assuring ourselves, that the Consideration thereof, with your own Affections and Love of the Publick, would incline you to lend willing Ears to our Requests, wherein we have not been deceived; your Cheerfulness and Forwardness herein having been represented unto us by those Lords that came unto you from this Great Council, for which we give your Lordship and the whole City very hearty Thanks; his Majesty making every Day his Grace and Goodness so appear unto us, that we cannot but take infinite Comfort in the Knowledge and Confidence of his gracious Resolutions; of which, we doubt not, but you and the whole Kingdom will very quickly find the comfortable and happy Effects.

"We are now in a hopeful Way of making this Treaty successful, to the Content of both Kingdoms; but in Affairs of so great Weight and Importance, Time and mature Deliberation are requisite, lest by precipitate Counsels the Danger might be increased, instead of being prevented: So as we cannot yet find any Reason to advise the disbanding his Majesty's Forces; especially since, by the Wisdom of the Lords Commissioners deputed by his Majesty and his great Council to treat with those of Scotland, Care is taken for relieving the County of Northumberland and the Bishoprick of Durham, by a Contribution to the Scots Army, during the Treaty; that so, by a present Cessation of Arms, these greater Inconveniences may be avoided, which otherwise would light upon his Majesty's Subjects in those Parts.

"And as the keeping together his Majesty's Forces, till those of Scotland disband, cannot but facilitate and advance the Treaty; so it were dishonourable and unsafe, that his Majesty's Army should not in the mean time be well provided for: Therefore we once again earnestly and heartily pray you, as you tender the publick Good and Safety, to make all possible Speed in supplying his Majesty presently with the Remainder of the two hundred thousand Pounds, that it be not useless to his Majesty and the Kingdom, by the too late furnishing of it. For, should his Majesty, for lack of Means to pay his Army, be enforced to dissolve it, the whole Kingdom would be in apparent and imminent Danger. The Care of preventing this

"publick Danger, wherein we are all so deeply concerned, hath been the Cause of these our second Letters, that you might truly understand the Necessity of your speedy Aid and Assistance.

"By those Lords, which we sent unto you with our first Letters, we gave you Notice of those Days of Payment, which his Majesty's Occasions did require, which were the twelfth of this Month, for fifty thousand Pounds; the fifteenth of November, for one hundred thousand Pounds; and the first of December, for the last fifty thousand Pounds. And upon Consideration of the State of his Majesty's Army, we plainly foresee, that if you should fail his Majesty, and our very earnest Desires herein, it would be impossible for his Majesty to hold his Forces together; which we all with one Heart earnestly wish and advise his Majesty should do; and cannot but again and again very affectionately commend the same to your Loves and Care. And so we bid you heartily farewell, and rest your very loving Friends.

The Treaty of Pacification between the English and Scots at Rippon being transferred to London, the Scottish Commissioners arrived in the City about the Beginning of November in great State, and were lodged near London-Stone, in a spacious Building, (probably Oxford-House) wherein divers Mayors kept their Mayoralties; whence a Gallery led to the Church of St. Andrew's, (this I imagine to be a Mistake for St. Andrew's, London-Stone, sometime adjoining to the said Oxford-House) which was assigned them for their Devotions, and where one of their Chaplains always preached; to the Hearing of whose Sermons there was so great a Conflux of Citizens and others, that from the first Appearance of Day on Sunday, till the Approach of Night, the Church was never empty; and many of those, that deemed it a Happiness to get in the Morning, continued there till Night, while those, that could not get Entrance, hung upon or about the Outside of the Doors and Windows: So powerful were the Effects of Novelty and Bigotry!

The King, upon the humble Remonstrances of his People, summoned a Parliament to meet on the third of November at Westminster; where assembling accordingly, the following Petition, subscribed by fifteen thousand Citizens and others, was presented by Alderman Pennington to the House of Commons, together with a Schedule of Grievances thereunto annexed:

"That whereas the Government of Archbishops, and Lords Bishops, Deans, and Archdeacons, &c. with their Courts and Ministries in them, have proved prejudicial and very dangerous, both to the Church and Commonwealth; they themselves having formerly held, that they have their Jurisdiction or Authority of human Authority; till of these latter Times, being further pressed about the Unlawfulness, that they have claimed their Calling immediately from the Lord Jesus Christ; which is against the Laws of this Kingdom, and derogatory to his Majesty and his State Royal: And whereas the said Govern-

A Particular of the manifold Evils, Pressures, and Grievances, caused, practised, and occasioned by the Prelates and their Dependents.

Grievances
as complained of.

"1. The subjecting and intruding all Mini"sters under them, and their Authority; and so
"by Degrees exempting them from the tempo"ral Power. Whence follows,

"2. The Faint-heartedness of Ministers to "preach the Truth of God, lest they should dis"please the Prelates; as namely, the Doctrine of "Predestination, of Free-Grace, of Perseve"rance, of original Sin remaining after Bap"tism, of the Sabbath, the Doctrine against "universal Grace, Election for Faith foreseen,
"Free-will, against Antichrist, Non-residents,
"human Inventions in God's Worship; all which "are generally with-held from the People's "Knowledge, because not relishing to the Bi"shops.

"3. The Encouragement of Ministers to de"spise the temporal Magistracy, the Nobles and "Gentry of the Land; to abuse the Subject, and "live contentiously with their Neighbours; know"ing, that they, being the Bishops Creatures,
"shall be supported.

"4. The Restraint of many godly and able "Men from the Ministry, and thrusting out of "many Congregations their faithful, diligent,
"and powerful Ministers, who lived peaceably
"with them, and did them good, only because "they cannot in Conscience submit unto and "maintain the Bishops needless Devices; nay,
"sometimes for no other Cause, but for their "Zeal in Preaching, or great Auditories.

"5. The suppressing that godly Design set on "Foot by certain Saints, and figured with many "great Gifts by well-affected Persons, for the "buying of Improvements and placing of able "Ministers in them, maintaining of Lectures,
"and founding of Free-Schools, which the Pre"lates could not endure, lest it should darken
"their Glories, and draw the Ministers from their "Dependence upon them.

"6. The great Increase of idle, lewd, disso"lute, ignorant, and erroneous Men in the Mi"nisty, which swarm like the Locusts of Egypt
"over the whole Kingdom; and will they but

"wear a canonical Coat, a Surplice, a Hood,
"bow at the Name of Jesus, and be zealous of "superstitious Ceremonies, they may live as they "list, confront whom they please, preach and "vent what Errors they will, and neglect "preaching at their Pleasures without Con"troul.

"7. The Discouragement of many from bring"ing up their Children in Learning; the many "Schisms, Errors, and strange Opinions, which "are in the Church; great Corruptions, which "are in the Universities; the gross and lament"able Ignorance almost every where among the "People; the Want of preaching Ministers in "very many Places both of England and Wales;
"the loathing of the Ministry, and the general
"Defection to all Manner of Prophaneness.

"8. The swarming of lascivious, idle, and "unprofitable Books and Pamphlets, Play-books,
"and Ballads; as namely, Ovid's Firs of Love,
"the Parliament of Women, which came out
"at the dissolving of the last Parliament, Barnes's
"Poems, Parker's Ballads, in Disgrace of Re"ligion, to the Increase of all Vice, and with"drawing of People from reading, studying,
"and hearing the Word of God, and other "good Books.

"9. The hindering of godly Books to be "printed; the blotting out, or preventing those "which they suffer, all, or most of that which "strikes either at Popery or Arminianism; the "adding of what, or where it pleaseth them;
"and the Restraint of reprinting Books formerly
"licensed, without relicensing."

"10. The publishing and venting of Popish,
"Arminian, and other dangerous Books and Te"nets; as namely, that the Church of Rome is "a fine Church, and in the worst Times never "erred in Fundamentals; that the Subjects have "no Propriety in their Estates, but that the "King may take from them what he pleaseth;
"that all is the King's, and that he is bound "by no Law; and many other, from the for"mer whereof hath sprung,

"11. The Growth of Popery, and Increase
"of Papists, Priests, and Jesuits in sundry "Places, but especially about London, since the "Reformation; the frequent venting of Cruci"fixes and Popish Pictures, both engraven and "printed, and the placing of such in Bibles.

"12. The Multitude of Monopolies and Pa"tents, drawing with them innumerable Perju"ries; the large Increase of Customs and Imposi"tions upon Commodities, the Ship-Money,
"and many other great Burthens upon the Com"monwealth, under which all groan.

"13. Moreover, the Offices and Jurisdictions
"of Archbishops, Lords Bishops, Deans, and "Archdeacons being the same Way of Church-"government, which is in the Romish Church,
"and which was in England in the Time of Po"pery, little Change thereof being made (ex"cept only the Head from whence it was de"rived;) the same Arguments supporting the "Pope, which do uphold the Prelates; and over-
"throwing the Prelates, which do pull down
"the Pope; and other reformed Churches,
"having upon their Rejection of the Pope, cast
"the Prelates out also as Members of the Beast:

"Hence

"Hence it is, that the Prelates here in England,
 "by themselves, or their Disciples, plead and "maintain that the Pope is not Antichrist, and "that the Church of Rome is a true Church, hath "not erred in fundamental Points, and that Sal"vation is attainable in that Religion, and
 "therefore have refrained to pray for the Con"version of our Sovereign Lady the Queen.
 "Hence also hath come,

"14. The great Conformity and Likeness,
 "both continued and encreased, of our Church
 "to the Church of Rome, in Vestures, Postures, "Ceremonies, and Administrations; namely, as
 "the Bishops Rotchets, and the Lawn Sleeves,
 "the four-cornered Cap, the Cope and Sur-
 "plice, the Tippet, the Hood, and the canon"ical Coat, the Pulpits clothed, especially now
 "of late, with the Jesuits Badge upon them
 "every way.

"15. The standing up at Gloria Patri, and at "the reading of the Gospel, praying towards the "East, Cross in Baptism, the kneeling at the "Communion.

"16. "The turning of the Communion-Tables
 "Altarwise, setting Images, Crucifixes, and "Conceits over them, and Tapers and Books
 "over them, and bowing, or adoring to, or "before them; the reading of the second Ser"vice at the Altar, and forcing People to come "up thither to receive, or else denying the Sacra"ment to them; terming the Altar to be the "Mercy-Seat, or the Place of God Almighty
 "in the Church; which is a plain Device to "usher in the Mass.

"17. The christening and consecrating of "Churches and Chapels, the consecrating
 "Tents, Tables, Pulpits, Chalices, Church-
 "yards, and many other Things, and putting "Holiness in them; yea, re-consecrating upon "pretended Pollution; as though every Thing
 "were unclean without their consecrating; and,
 "for Want of this, sundry Churches have been
 "interdicted, and kept from Use, as pol"luted.

"18. The Liturgy for the most part is fram"ed out of the Romish Breviary, Rituals, Mass-
 "book; also the Book of Ordination for Arch"bishops and Ministers framed out of the Roman
 "Pontifical.

"19. The Multitude of Canons formerly
 "made; wherein, among other Things, Excom"munication, ipso facto, is denounced for speak"ing a Word against the Devices abovesaid, or "Subscription thereunto, though no Law en"joined a Restraint from the Ministry without "Subscription; and Appeal is denied to any
 "that should refuse Subscription, or unlawful "Conformity, though he be never so much wrong"ed by the inferior Judges. Also the Canons
 "made in the late sacred Synod, as they call it,
 "wherein are many strange and dangerous De"vices to undermine the Gospel, and the Sub"jects Liberties, to propagate Popery, to spoil
 "God's People, insnare Ministers and other Stu"dents, and so to draw all into an absolute Sub"jection and Thralldom to them and their Go"vernment, spoiling both the King and the Par"liament of their Power.

"20. The countenancing Plurality of Bene-

"fices, prohibiting Marriages without their Li"cense, at certain Times almost half the Year,
 "and licensing of Marriages without Banns ask"ing.

"21. Profanation of the Lord's Day, plead"ing for it, and enjoining Ministers to read a "Declaration, set forth (as it is thought) by their "Procurement, for tolerating of Sports upon "that Day; suspending and depriving many "godly Ministers, for not reading the same only
 "out of Conscience, because it was against the "Law of God so to do, and no Law of the "Land to enjoin it.

"22. The pressing of the strict Observation
 "of the Saints Days, whereby great Sums of "Money are drawn out of Mens Purses for "working on them; a very high Burthen on "most People, who, getting their Living on their "daily Employments, must either omit them and
 "be idle, or part with their Money; whereby "many poor Families are undone, or brought "behind-hand; yet many Church-wardens are "sued or threatned to be sued by their trouble"some Ministers, as perjured Persons, for not "presenting their Parishioners, who failed in ob"serving Holidays.

"23. The great Increase and Frequency of "Whoredoms and Adulteries, occasioned by the "Prelates corrupt Administration of Justice in "such Cases; who, taking upon them the Punish"ment of it, do turn all into Monies for the "filling of their Purses; and, lest their Officers "should defraud them of their Gain, they have "in their late Canon, instead of remedying these
 "Vices, decreed, That the Commutation of "Penance shall not be without the Bishops "Privy.

"24. The general Abuse of that great Ordi"nance of Excommunication, which God hath "left in his Church, as the last and greatest Pu"nishment which the Church can inflict upon "obstinate and great Offenders; and the Pre"lates and their Officers, who of Right have "nothing to do with it, do daily excommuni-
 "cate Men, either for doing that which is law"ful, or for vain, idle, and trivial Matters, as "working, or opening a Shop on a Holiday, for "not appearing at every Beck upon their Sum"mons, not paying a Fee, or the like; yea, they "have made it, as they do all other Things, a "Hook, or Instrument, wherewith to empty
 "Mens Purses, and to advance their own Great"ness; and so that sacred Ordinance of God, by "their perverting of it, becomes contemptible to "all Men, and is seldom or never used against "notorious Offenders; who for the most part are "their Favourites.

"25. Yea further, the Pride and Ambition "of the Prelates being boundless, unwilling to "be subject either to Man, or Laws, they claim "their Office and Jurisdiction to be jure Divino,
 "exercise ecclesiastical Authority in their own
 "Names and Rights, and under their own Seals,
 "and take upon them temporal Dignities, Places,
 "and Offices in the Commonwealth, that they "may sway both Swords.

"26. Whence follows the taking Commis"sions in their own Courts and Consistories, and
 "where-else they fit in Matters determinable of "Right

"Right at Common Law, the putting of Ministers upon Parishes, without the Patrons and People's Consent.

"27. The imposing of Oaths of various and trivial Articles yearly upon Church-Wardens and Sidefmen, which they cannot take without Perjury, unless they fall at Jars continually with their Ministers and Neighbours, and wholly neglect their own Calling.

"28. The exercising of the Oath Ex Officio, and other Proceedings by Way of Inquisition, reaching even to Mens Thoughts, the apprehending and detaining of Men by Purfuivants, the frequent suspending and depriving of Ministers, fining and imprisoning of all Sorts of People, breaking of Mens Houses and Studies, taking away Mens Books, Letters, and other Writings, seizing upon their Estates, removing them from their Callings; separating between them and their Wives against both their Wills, the rejecting of Prohibitions with Threatenings, and the doing of many other Outrages, to the utter infringing of the Laws of the Realm, and the Subjects Liberties, and ruining of them and their Families; and of later Time, the Judges of the Land are so awed with the Power and Greatness of the Prelates, and other Ways promoted, that neither Prohibition, Habeas Corpus, nor any other lawful Remedy can be had, or take Place, for the distressed Subjects in most Cases; only Papists, Jesuits, Priests, and such others as propagate Popery or Arminianism, are countenanced, spared, and have much Liberty; and from hence followed, amongst others, these dangerous Consequences:

"First, The general Hope and Expectation of the Romish Party, that their superstitious Religion will ere long be fully planted in this Kingdom again; and so they are encouraged to persist therein, and to practise the same openly in divers Places, to the high Dishonour of God, and contrary to the Laws of the Realm.

"2. The Discouragement and Destruction of all good Subjects, of whom are Multitudes, both Clothiers, Merchants, and others; who, being deprived of their Ministers, and over-burthened with these Pressures, have departed the Kingdom to Holland, and other Parts, and have drawn with them a great Manufacture of Cloth, and trading out of the Land into other Places where they reside; whereby Wool, the great Staple of the Kingdom, is become of small Value, and vends not; Trading is decayed, many poor People want Work, Seamen lose Employment, and the whole Land is much impoverished, to the great Dishonour of this Kingdom, and Blemishment to the Government thereof.

"3. The present Wars and Commotions happened between his Majesty and his Subjects of Scotland, wherein his Majesty, and all his Kingdoms are endangered and suffer greatly, and are like to become a Prey to the common Enemy, in case the Wars go on; which we exceedingly fear will not only go on, but likewise encrease, to an utter Ruin of all, unless the Prelates, with their Dependences, be re-

NUMB. XXIX.

"moved out of England, and also they and their Practices, who, as we, under your Honours Favours, do verily believe and conceive, have occasioned the Quarrel.

"All which we humbly refer to the Consideration of this Honourable Assembly, desiring the Lord of Heaven to direct you in the right Way to redress all these Evils."

About the same Time, the English and Scottish Armies were exceedingly burdensome to the Northern Counties of England, insomuch that the Parliament judged it necessary for the Relief of the said Counties, to apply to the City for a Loan of one hundred thousand Pounds, towards the Support of the King's Army; and for which Purpose, on the twenty-fifth of March, they sent a Committee of six Lords and twelve Commoners, to solicit the City to advance the said Sum, upon the Credit and Security of the Subsidy Bills. The Committee being returned, the Recorder reported, that they had attended the City, but, to their great Mortification, could obtain no Money; having received for Answer, that the Citizens were a Body not constituted for any such Purpose, nor able to make Laws for the lending of Money; and that they could only persuade, and not compel.

The Lords, it seems, making no great Dispatch in the Bill of Attainder brought against the Earl of Strafford, his Enemies, to hasten their Proceedings, prevail'd upon their Friends in the City to draw up the following Petition, which was subscribed by twenty thousand Citizens, and presented to the House of Lords on the twenty-fourth of April:

"That notwithstanding his Majesty's gracious Answer to the humble Petition of his loyal Subjects in summoning this Parliament, with the great Care and endeavoured Pains taken by both Houses, for the removing the heavy Grievances in Church and Commonwealth; whereof the Petitioners have already received some Fruit; for which they desire to return their most humble and utmost Thanks: Yet nevertheless they are enforced, with all Humility, to represent to this most Honourable Assembly some of those Obstructions which do still hinder that Freedom and Fulness of Trade in this City they have formerly had; and which, considering the numerous Multitudes thereupon depending, they conceive this City cannot comfortably subsist.

"As the unsettled Condition of the Kingdom, even since the Troubles in Scotland, hath caused both Strangers, and also some of our own, who did furnish great Sums of Money to Use, to call it in, and to remit much of it by Exchange into foreign Parts, and stand now in Expectation of what the Issue of Things may be.

"The stopping Money in the Mint, which till then was accounted the safest Place, and surest Staple in these Parts of the World, still doth hinder the Importation of Bullion: The Scots now disabled to pay such Debts as they owe to the Petitioners and others in the City; and by reason of the Oppressions exercised in Ireland, their Debts also are detained there.

City Petition to Parliament against the Earl of Strafford.

"The English Trade, by reason of our general Distractions and Fears, is so much decayed, the Country Tradefmen cannot pay their Debts in London as formerly.

"The great Sums of Money unduely taken by his Majesty's Officers and Farmers, for Impositions upon Merchandize exported and imported, and the Want of Relief in Courts of Justice against them.

"The drawing out from the City great Sums of Money (which is the Life and Spirit of Trade) for his Majesty's Service in the North, and being there employed, is not yet returned.

"Besides all which, from what strong and secret Opposition the Petitioners know not, they have not received, what so much Time and Pains might give them cause to hope; but still Incendiaries of the Kingdom, and other notorious Offenders, remain unpunished. The Affairs of the Church, notwithstanding many Petitions concerning it, and long Debate about it, remain unsettled. The Papists still armed, the Laws against them not executed, some of the most active among them still at Court, Priests and Jesuits not yet banished, the Irish Popish Army not yet disbanded, Courts of Justice not yet reformed; and the Earl of Strafford, who, as now appears, hath counselled the plundering of this City, and putting it to Fine and Ransom; and said, it would never be well, till some of the Aldermen were hanged up, because they would not yield to illegal Levies of Monies, had so drawn out and spent this Time in his Business, to the very great Charge of the whole Kingdom, and his Endeavour to obtain yet more; which makes us fear there may be Practices now in hand to hinder the Birth of your great Endeavours, and that we lie under some more dangerous Plot than we can discover.

"All which Premises, with their Fears and Distractions growing therefrom, and from Things of the like Nature, the Petitioners humbly offer to the most grave Consideration of this most Honourable Assembly, as being the true Causes of Decay of Trade, Discouragement of Tradefmen, and of the great Scarcity of Monies, with the Consequences they labour under.

"And do humbly pray, that their said Grievances may be redressed, the Causes of their Fears removed, Justice executed upon the said Earl, and other Incendiaries and Offenders; the rather, in regard till then, the Petitioners humbly conceive, neither Religion, nor their Lives, Liberties or Estates can be secured.

"And, as in Duty bound, shall ever pray, &c."

Apprentices and others threaten to pull down the Span-nish Ambassador's
House.

Upon the twenty-ninth of April, the first tumultuous Disorder (of these Times) happened in London, when a great Number of Apprentices and others beset the Spanish Ambassador's House in Bishopsgate-Street, threatening to pull it down, and to kill the Ambassador, for permitting English Papists to frequent his Chapel. For the appeasing of this Commotion, the Lord-Mayor immediately repaired to the Ambassador's, where with much Difficulty he prevailed upon the Populace to disperse, and return home. His Lordship had no sooner allayed the Fury of the Multitude, than he entered the Ambassador's House, and, being met by that Minister, was desired to drop the Point of the City Sword that was carried before him, acquainting him, That he was then in a Place where the King of Spain, his Master, had Jurisdiction; which the Mayor complying with, the Ambassador told him, that he had never seen so barbarous an Attempt; and desired to know, whether this could justly be called a civilized Nation, where the Laws of Nations and Hospitality were so horribly violated? The Mayor replied, That the Rioters were the very Refuse of the People, therefore entreated his Excellency not to impute the Sedition to the City: To which the Ambassador smartly answered, That he hardly knew how to call that a City, or even a Society of rational Creatures, which was seemingly divested both of Humanity and Government.

The Mayor, to extenuate the Crime as much as possible, told the Ambassador, That the People were enraged, because *Maf*s was publicly said in his Chapel. To which he replied, That the English Minister at Madrid enjoyed the free Exercise of his Religion without the least Disturbance; and that he would rather chuse to lose his Life, than the Privileges due to him by Contract, and the Law of Nations: The Mayor return'd, That the People were the more incensed against him, because the Citizens of the Popish Communion were permitted to frequent his House at *Maf*s, contrary to Law: The Ambassador answered, That if the Mayor would prevent their coming, he would not fend for them; but, if they came, he could neither in Conscience to his Religion, nor his Master's Honour, deny them Access to their Devotions, or Protection to their Persons, while they were with him. Wherefore a Guard was placed at his House, which not only protected him from farther Insults, but likewise the Popish Citizens from frequenting *Maf*s.

This Storm was no sooner over, than another far more impetuous began; for a Discovery being made of some desperate Designs both at home and abroad, of bringing up the Army to London to surprize the Tower, and favour the Earl of Strafford's Escape; divers Ministers from their Pulpits, on the Sunday following, shewed to their several Auditories the Necessity of having Justice speedily executed upon some great Delinquents; which so greatly irritated and inflamed the Citizens, that the Day after they, to the Number of six thousand, armed with Swords, Staves, and Cudgels, ran to Westminster; and, posting themselves in the Avenues leading to the House of Lords, stopped all Coaches, and incessantly cried out for Justice against Strafford; whilst others of them presented the following Petition:

"That whereas your Petitioners did Yesterday petition for the Redress of many Grievances, and for the Execution of Justice upon the Earl of Strafford, and other Incendiaries, to be secured from some dangerous Plots and Designs on Foot; to which your Lordships having this Day given Answer, That you have the same under present Consideration; your Petitioners do render humble Thanks. Complained of by
of Lords.

These Commotions and riotous Proceedings of the Citizens occasioned the Lords to demand a Conference with the Commons; wherein the Lord Privy Seal, the chief Manager, acquainted them with the daily and dangerous Practices of the Rabble, and their disorderly Manner of petitioning; and that, if speedy Care were not taken to restrain those pernicious Tumults, the Freedom of the Lords was at an End, and their Proceeding in the Bill of Attainder prevented. However, the Citizens continued to assemble at Westminster, till the Protestation taken by both Houses of Parliament, for the Defence of the King and Kingdom, was shewn unto them; whereupon they, at the Desire of the House of Commons, dispersed, and returned to their several Habitations.

A few Days after, a Rumour being spread in the City, that the Parliament-House was on Fire, the Citizens were thereby so deeply affected, that many thousands of them immediately ran to Westminster to extinguish the same; where being arrived, they were agreeably surprized to find it only a Report. However, it was no small Satisfaction to both Houses, to observe the Citizens so sincerely attached to their Interest.

The next Day, the Lord-Mayor, by an Order of the House Commons, was strictly enjoined to disarm all the Papists in London, within the Space of three Days.

Mischief.

On the seventeenth of May, an Order of the House of Commons was sent to the Lord-Mayor, and all Justices of the Peace within the Bills of Mortality, requiring them to use their best Endeavours to prevent his Majesty's Subjects from frequenting the Chapels of Popish Ambassadors.

A Petition against Parlia-

Protections.

On the second of June, a Petition was presented to the House of Commons by divers Citizens of London, complaining of the great Abuses of Parliamentary Protections, shewing, That if speedy Order were not taken either for their Suppression or Regulation, they would inevitably occasion the Ruin of many Families; wherefore the Petition was referred to a Committee for that Purpose.

Dispute
the Mayor's Nomination of a Sheriff.

About the same Time, a Contest arose between the Lord-Mayor and Commonalty of the City about the Right of chusing one of their Sheriffs, which the Mayor laid Claim to by a Prescription of three hundred Years. However, the Commons would not admit of the Mayor's Right of Nomination, but by their special Approbation and Confirmation; wherefore the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen petitioned the King to take upon him the Decision of the Controversy. But his Majesty, at that critical Juncture, not willing to concern himself in that Affair, referred the Determination thereof to the House of Lords, who immediately ordered both Parties to attend them the next Morning at Eight o'Clock, when their Lordships would be ready to hear the Allegations on both Sides; which being accordingly effected, the House made the following Order:

They appeal to the King.

Referred to the House
of Lords.

"That the said Lord-Mayor shall call a Common-Hall on Friday the second of July, 1641;
"which Common-Hall is to consist of the Ma"sters and Wardens, and Liverymen of the se"veral Companies of London, and no other;
"and that the Commonalty are then to as"semble in a peaceable and quiet Manner, to "settle and compose the Differences between the "said Lord-Mayor and themselves, if they can;
"if not, then to make Choice of six discreet
"Persons of the said Commonalty, to treat and
"and debate this Business between them, and "settle and compose all Differences among them"selves, between this and Friday come Seven"night, being the ninth of July, 1641. But, in "case the said Differences cannot be composed,
"then the Pleasure of the House is, That the said
"Cause shall be heard in open House at the Bar
"on the said ninth of July; and that in the "mean Time the said Persons, so chosen as afore"said, shall have free Liberty by themselves,
"their Council, and others that they shall em"ploy, to view and transcribe such and so much "of the Charters of the said City, Acts of "Common Council, Books of Entries of Elec"tions and Accompts, and all such other Acts
"and Records, as shall or may concern the said "Causes in Question; and that all Clerks and "others, in whose Custody the said Instruments
"are, shall be assisting to the said Searchers:
"And lastly, That, if the Cause shall come be"fore the Lords in Parliament, that then the "said six Persons so chosen as aforesaid, shall at"tend the same before their Lordships."

Ibid.

Order by the said
thereupon.

The contending Parties not having composed the Difference according to the Directions of the above Order, it was therefore thought proper by their Lordships (with a Salvo on both Sides) to order them to proceed to the Election of a Sheriff, as appears by the following Ordinance:

"In the Cause depending between the Com"mons and Citizens, and the Lord-Mayor of "the City of London, about the nominating and "electing of one of the Sheriffs of the said City
"for this Year ensuing; their Lordships taking "into their Consideration, that the Election
"should have been dispatched upon Midsummer-

"of performing the Election, as upon that Day,
"Devolutions have ensued, pro tali vice, to the "Commonalty of London; do order, That, for "this Time, the said Commonalty shall forth-

In the Month of October, the Parliament received Advice from their Committee in Scotland of a Design against the Lives of divers of the Scottish Nobility; and, in regard some of the Persons suspected of being concerned in the Conspiracy were supposed to be Papists, it was by the Committee apprehended, that they might carry on a Correspondence with some of their own Party in England; wherefore a Letter was sent to the Lord-Mayor of London, requiring him forthwith to place strong Guards in several Parts of the City, till he received further Directions from both Houses.

The Irish Massacre.

The Parliament receiving Advice of a most horrid and wicked Conspiracy in Ireland, which not only tended to the Destruction of the English Interest in that Kingdom, but likewise to the Extirpation of all Protestants by a general Massacre by the Papists, who surprized all Places of Strength, and without the least Pity or Remorse cruelly butchered by the most unheard-of Tortures all the Protestants they could come at, without Distinction of Age or Sex; the House of Commons passed several Resolutions for the Relief of that miserable and distressed Nation; one whereof was for raising two hundred thousand Pounds; Part of which being immediately wanted, a select Committee of twelve Lords and twenty-four Commoners were sent into the City for a Loan of fifty thousand Pounds upon this melancholy Occasion; which the Lord-Mayor and Citizens readily agreeing to, they soon raised that Sum by Subscription; wherewith both Houses were so highly pleased, that they passed an Order for not only securing the Money now advanced, but likewise the fifty thousand Pounds, Part of the two hundred thousand Pounds the Citizens agreed to lend the King for the Support of his Army in Yorkshire, as appears by the following Order:

Resolutions of the House of Commons thereon.

City's Loan on this Occasion.

Ibid.

"The Lords and Commons in this present
 "Parliament assembled, having a due Regard "to the good Affections of the City of London,
 "expressed upon sundry Occasions, by the advancing and lending of great Sums of Money "for the Service of the Commonwealth, and "particularly the Sum of fifty thousand Pounds
 "lent for the Irish Affairs, and the Sum of fifty "thousand Pounds more, lent by the said City "unto the Peers attending his Majesty in the "Northern Parts, before the Beginning of this "present Parliament, which are not yet paid or "otherwise secured, do declare and order, That "the said several Sums of Money shall be fully "satisfied and repaid unto the said City of London,
 "with Interest of Eight per Cent. for one "Year, out of such Monies as are or shall be "raised by Authority of Parliament; and for "that Purpose an Act of Parliament to be passed "with all Expedition. Provided always, That "this present Ordinance shall not in any ways

Order of the House thereupon, allowing 8l. per Cent.

"be prejudicial to any Members of the said
 "House of Commons, who have formerly lent
 "any Sums of Money to this Parliament, nor to "the Northern Counties, nor to any Persons "whatsoever, to whom both Houses of Parliament, or the said House of Commons, have "formerly ordered the Payment of any Sums of "Money, nor to any Security given to them,
 "before the making of this Ordinance."

The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen receiving Intelligence, that the King, on his Return from Scotland, intended to honour the City with his Royal Presence, by passing through it to his Palace of Whitehall; therefore the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen chose a Committee of six Aldermen and twelve Commoners to consult about and order all Things relating to an Entertainment to be given to his Majesty on so solemn an Occasion. But, before they proceeded to Action, it was necessary to have the Approbation of the Common-Council; which being convened on that Account, they unanimously approved of the Design, and confirmed the Court of Aldermen's Choice of the Managers; who, for the Honour of the City, and Satisfaction of the King, exerted themselves to entertain the Royal Family after the most sumptuous and magnificent Manner.

Stow. Sur.

Their first Care was to give Order, as well to the Cook, Steward, Confectioner, and Butler, to make speedy Provision of all Things, fit for the Royal Feasting of their Majesties, and their Princely Train, as to the Officers of the City Works, that the Guildhall might be prepared and made ready for the due and respectful receiving of them.

The next was, that Precepts might be speedily directed to the several Societies and Companies of the City, that, against the Day their Majesties should come, there should be some of the prime Men chosen out of the Liveries, that should be in Readiness to attend the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, in their best Array (either Velvet, Plush, or Sattin) and Chains of Gold, upon good Horses, well-appointed, and each Rider to have a Footman to attend him, to meet their Majesties, and to conduct them first to Guildhall, and afterwards to his Majesty's Royal Palace of Whitehall: As also, that, out of the Residue of their Companies, some should be appointed to wait in their several Standings in their Liveries, from their Majesties Entrance into the City, to Temple-Bar: To which Purpose the Committee gave Orders and Directions, where every several Company's Standings should be set up. And lastly, That others should be nominated to attend in the Guildhall upon their Majesties in their Liveries and Foins likewise, from the Time of their coming thither, to their Departure thence.

Another Care of the Committee was, that (the Way from Kingland to Shoreditch being impassable for their Majesties, in Regard of the Depth and Foulness of it) a Way might be prepared from thence to that Place of the City, where their Majesties should enter, as might not only be fair and clean, but as pleasant also, and delightful, as the Season of the Year would permit; and that the Streets, all the Way they should should pass, might be paved, where Need was, and made sweet and clean.

And because some seditious Libels were at that Time dispersed, (which bred a Panick Fear in some) Order was likewise taken, that there should be two Companies of the City's Trained-Bands, placed in several Parts of the City upon that Day; as also, that at every Door a Man should be placed, sufficiently appointed, to be ready upon all Occasions, to appease any Disorders.

Lastly, Out of the said Committee, two of the City Captains were designed, as Chief Marshals for the Day; to have the Command over the other three Marshals, that were Officers of the Chamber; and to order, direct, and marshal the Horsemen. And also four other of the Committee were appointed, as Comptrollers of the House, to whom all inferior Officers should have Recourse upon any Occasion; and to direct and order the Liveries, which are to attend upon their Majesties Service; and generally to dispose all other Things conducing to the Entertainment.

Now for the Entertainment itself. Upon Thursday the said 25th of November, the Knights of the Grey Cloak, Mr. Recorder, and the rest of the Aldermen, the City Council, and Chief Officers, as Town-Clerk, Common-Serjeant, and Remembrancer, attended the Lord-Mayor, at his Lordship's House in the Old Jewry, by eight o'Clock in the Morning, from whence they advanced thro' the City to Moorgate, in this Manner:

The Lord-Mayor having the Sword-Bearer and the two Mace-Bearers before him, on Horseback, and on Foot-Cloths, and two Footmen in black Velvet Coats, on each Side one, his Lordship wearing a Gown of Crimson Velvet, and a Collar of SS, rode in the Front; the Knights aforementioned, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen following, according to their Seniority, two by two, in Scarlet Gowns, attended by two Footmen a-piece, suited in the City Colours, each of which Footmen being appointed to carry a Truncheon in his Hand for the Forenoon, and two Torches for the Afternoon: Next to them followed the City Council and Chief Officers, in black Gowns, upon Foot-Cloths, each of them having a Footman going by them, suited and fitted as aforesaid.

In this Equipage they passed through the City, from his Lordship's House to Moorfields, where there waited in a Readiness to attend his Lordship and the Service about five hundred Horsemen, selected out of the Liveries of the several Companies of the City, being Masters, Wardens, and prime Men of each Company, in Velvet, or Plush Coats, and Suits, with Chains of Gold, being well horsed, and gallantly furnished, every Company having a Horseman in the Front, carrying a Pendant with that Company's Arms to which he did belong (for Distinction sake) and a Footman to attend each Horseman of the Livery, with Truncheons and Torches, as before: Both Horsemen with the Pendants, and Footmen being suited Cap-a-pie, with the Companies Colours on which they waited. There were also fourteen Trumpeters, with Trumpets, Banners, and Scarfs, who were placed two between every hundred of the Horse, and four at the Head of the Troop.

The Lord-Mayor, being thus attended, rode on with the Knights, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, City Council, and Chief Officers, as before; and after them five hundred Horsemen, according to the several Ranks of the Companies; the Lord-Mayor's Company, viz. the Clothworkers, being foremost; then the Mercers, and the rest according to their Order.

They all advanced, in a handsome Manner, through the Fields, (the Banks being cast down, and Bridges of fourteen Feet wide being made over the Ditches, for better and more secure Passage) 'till they came beyond Baumer, (a retiring House of Sir George Whitmore's) in the Fields next adjoining to Kingland. The Night before being rainy, and the Morning gloomy and cloudy, the Lord-Mayor commanded his Tent to be pitched in the Field, where his Lordship, the Knights, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen, were to attend their Majesties. In the Tent were Seats and Forms, where his Lordship and some of the Nobility reposed themselves 'till their Majesties came.

In the mean Time, the two Sheriffs of London and Middlesex (George Garret, and George Clark) attended by seventy-two Men in Scarlet Cloaks, trimmed with Silver Lace, (the Colours of the City) with Javelins and Feathers, and four Trumpeters, rode as far as Stamford-Hill, between Newington and Tottenbam, (where their Majesties lay the Night before) who, after they had done their respective Duties, and kissed their Majesties Hands, conducted them to the Field, where the Lord-Mayor, the Nobility, and Aldermen waited for them.

His Majesty came into the Field about ten o'Clock, in a Coach, he sitting on the right Side of it, and her Majesty on his right Hand; the Prince, the Duke of Tork, and the Princess Mary, being within the Coach, and the Prince Elector Palatine, and the Dutchess of Richmond, sitting on the other Side; their Majesties being attended by divers Lords and Ladies.

When the Coach came against the Lord-Mayor's Tent, his Majesty caused it to stay; where divers of the Nobility, that had attended his coming thither, presented themselves to his Majesty, and, joying in his safe Return, kissed both their Majesties Hands.

After which, the Lord-Mayor, Knights, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen presented themselves likewise in an humble Manner, and had the Honour to kiss their Majesties Hands.

Then the Lord-Mayor surrendered the City Sword, which being returned by his Majesty, the Recorder, in the Name of the Citizens, made the following Speech:

"May it please your Majesty,

"This is a Day of exceeding great Joy to your Citizens of London, Joy exalted to the highest Degree, to see you return in Safety after a long Absence, and see this happy Meeting with your dearest Consort, our good and gracious Queen, and with these blessed Children, which are the Fruits of your Loves,

"and Pledges to us of a fruitful and hopeful
"Succession.

"I can truly say this from the Representative "Body of your City, from whence I have my "Warrant; they meet your Majesty with as much "Love and Affection, as ever Citizens of Lon- "don met with any of your Royal Progenitors,
"King or Queen of this Kingdom, and with as "heartily a Desire to shew it fully: Pardon their "Failures, where you meet with any.

"We tender unto you no formal Present; it "would but lessen us, whatever it were (I am sure
"it would be far short of our Meaning); but
"we present unto you our Hearts and Affections,
"Hearts of true Subjects, full of Loyalty to you,
"our King and Sovereign.

"Tis true in this we offer your Majesty but "your own, they were by just Right yours before;
"but, upon this new and enlivening Occasion, be "pleased to take them as a new Gift; we offer
"them cheerfully, vouchsafe to accept them gra"ciously; and with the Influence of those excel"lent and princely Virtues which we know by "great Assurance to be eminent in your Royal "Person, we doubt not but your Majesty will con"tinue the Defence of our established Religion,
"and the clear Current of Justice, through all
"the Streams of which your Majesty is the Royal "Fountain.

"Vouchsafe likewise to uphold and counte"nance that antient Frame and Form of Go"vernment which hath been long established in "the City; that Power and Authority of yours,
"which you have committed to your Lord-"Mayor, your true and faithful Subject and Ser"vant, and the fit Reverence due to the Alder"men his Brethren, who are to assist him in his "Government: We shall be thereby the better
"enabled to serve your Majesty, and constantly "to render to you the Fruits of a true Obedi"ence; and, as our Duty binds us, we shall ne"ver cease to bless you, and to pray for you and "your dearest Comfort our gracious Queen,
"and for this your Royal and Princely Offspring,
"for your Majesty's long Life and prosperous
"Reign over us in Peace and Glory, and with "full Contentment; and I doubt not but every "true Subject will join with us in this, and say
"Amen.

"These Expressions of Joy, of Love, of Loy"alty, and these hearty Wishes and Desires which "I have mentioned, I meet with every where
"from your Citizens of London; they are the soft
"and still Musick, prepared for your Majesty's "Welcome and Entertainment this Day. The "joyful Acclamations of your People, upon the "Sight of your Royal Person, will make it
"louder, and cheerfully bearing their agreeing
"Parts together, shall, I hope, this Day, make "up to your Majesty a full and pleasing Har"mony."

To which the King returned the following An"swer:

"Mr. Recorder,

"I must desire you, because my Voice cannot "reach to all those that I desire should hear me,
"to give most hearty Thanks to all the good "Citizens of London for their hearty Expressions

"of their Love to me this Day; and indeed, I His Ma-
"cannot sufficiently express the Contentment I esty's de-
"have received therein; for now I see that all avour.
"these Tumults and Disorders have only arisen "from the meaner Sort of People; and that the "Affections of the better and main Part of the "City have ever been loyal and affectionate to "my Person and Government.

"And likewise it comforts me to see, that all "these Misreports, that have been made of me in "my Absence, have not the least Power to do "me Prejudice in your Opinions, as may be easily "seen by this Day's Expressions of Joy.

"And now I think it fit for me to assure you,
"that I am returned with as hearty and kind Af"fections to my People in general, and to this "City in particular, as can be desired by loving "Subjects: The first I shall express by govern"ing you all according to the Laws of this "Kingdom, and in maintaining and protecting "the true Protestant Religion, according as it
"hath been established in my two famous Pre"decessors Times, Queen Elizabeth and my Fa"ther; and this I will do, if Need be, to the "Hazard of my Life, and all that is dear to me.

"As for the City in particular, I shall study
"by all means their Prosperity; and I assure you,
"I will singly grant those few reasonable Demands
"you have now made unto me, in the Name of "the City. And likewise, I shall study to re-"establish that flourishing Trade which now is in "some Disorder amongst you, which I doubt "not to effect with the good Assistance of the "Parliament.

"One Thing I have thought of, as a parti"cular Affection to you, which is, to give back "unto you freely that Part of Londonderry which "heretofore was evicted from you. This, I "confess, as that Kingdom is now, is no great "Gift; but I hope to recover it first, and then "to give it to you whole and intirely; and for "the legal Part of this, I command you, Mr.
"Recorder, to wait upon me to see it punctually "performed.

"I will end as I begun, to desire you, Mr.
"Recorder, to give all the City Thanks in "better Expressions than I can make; though I "must tell you, it will be far short of that real
"Contentment I find in my Heart for this real "and seasonable Demonstration of their Affec"tions to me."

This gracious Speech was no sooner ended, Rush. Col.
than his Majesty was pleased to confer the Ho- vol. 3. p. 1.
nour of Knighthood upon Richard Gurney, the Richard Lord-Mayor, and Thomas Gardiner, the Recorder. Gurney
After which, his Majesty and the Prince alighted the Lord- from the Coach, and took their Horses; the Mayor Queen, the Duke of York, Princess Mary, the knights Prince Elector, and the Dutchess of Richmond remaining in the Coach.

The Nobility, and others of his Majesty's Train, were marshalled by the Officers of Arms.
So that the whole Order was in this Manner:

The City Marshal.

The Sheriffs Trumpeters.

The Sheriffs Men.

Citizens in Velvet Coats and Chains.

And five hundred of the principal Citizens on Horseback, sumptuously apparelled in Velvet, with Golden Chains, and attended by their several Footmen, &c.

The King's March through
the City.

They entered the City at Moorgate, and were there saluted by a Band of Trumpeters, &c. whence the Procession proceeded by London-Wall through Bishopsgate-Street, Cornhill and Cheapside, amidst the City Companies in their Formalities and Stands on each Side the Streets, (which on that Occasion were richly embellished with Silk and Tapestry, and the City Conduits running with a Diversity of Wines).

On the North Side of the Street (four Feet distant from the Houses) were Rails placed, to regulate and keep the People in good Order, from Bishopsgate to Cornhill; and so to Temple-Bar: At the Beginning of which Rails, (viz. at Bishopsgate) by the Discretion of the two Captains, and three Marshals, the first Horseman of the Liveries begun to make a Stand.

The first Rank of them, placing themselves single, faced to the Liveries that were in the Standings; and the rest, passing along, placed themselves in the same Order. The Trumpets and Pendants in each Company standing in the Front, and then the Companies themselves; the youngest being next to the Pendant, and so upwards by Seniority, to the Master of the Company, who took his Place last. Then began the Pendant, and youngest of the next Company, to make their Stand as the former, 'till they came to St. Laurence-Lane End. There being five Feet Distance from one Horse to another; in which Space stood each Horseman's Footman, with a Truncheon in his Hand, making, by this Means, a Guard for their Majesties, and the rest of their Train.

And it fell out, that most of the Companies of Horse were placed right against their own Companies in the Standings.

The People, that were Spectators in the Streets, were disposed, Part behind the Horse, and Part behind the Liveries.

And by this good Order, their Majesties, and the Train, passed quietly without Interruption.

Their Majesties coming along Cornhill, several Trumpeters, that were placed in the Clock-House of the Exchange, gave them their second Welcome into the City; and, as they went, the Conduit in Cornhill, and the great Conduit in Cheapside, ran with Red Wine, to express the Joy of the City that Day.

Being come to St. Laurence-Lane End, the Passage being strait, neither Horse nor Foot could be planted there; so that only the Sheriffs Officers, the City Council, and Officers, the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and the Lord-Mayor conducted their Majesties, and their Train, to Guildhall.

At their Majesties Entrance into Guildhall several Lords and Ladies, that had not given their Attendance abroad, presented themselves to his Majesty, and conducted him and the Queen up to the New and Old Council-Chambers, being appointed for their Repose, 'till Dinner might be served to the Table; the four Comptrollers for the Day, and about eighty grave Citizens, in Foins and Liveries, standing and making a Lane on both Sides their Passage, to whom their Majesties shewed gracious Respects; the Musick of the City giving them their next Welcome.

Their Majesties were no sooner reposed, but Word was given for serving up Dinner to their Table. The Place appointed for it was the Hustings at the East End of the Hall, which was raised almost two Yards from the Ground, the Floor being covered with Turkey Carpets; and all the Hall, as all the other Rooms of the Guildhall, was hanged and adorned with rich Tapestry.

In the Middle of the Place, where their Majesties dined, was hung up a Cloth of State,
and

and two Chairs of State were set under it; before which was placed a Table of six Yards long: At the South End whereof (two Yards distant from the Table) was a Table of Garnish of three Yards square; and at the North End was a Room erected for Musick of all Sorts, for the better Entertainment and Delight of their Majesties, while they should be at Dinner.

And four or five Steps under the Place, where their Majesties dined, was a Frame of Timber erected, and floored with Deals, a Yard from the Ground, which extended almost to the Hall-Door, upon each Side whereof was a Table set from the upper to the lower End of it: At which two Tables the Lords and Ladies that attended their Majesties were to dine. Between which was a spacious Way left, covered with green Bays, whereon their Majesties were to pass to the Place where they should dine.

And in the West Part of the Hall below the Gate, on the South Side, was a long Table placed for his Majesty's Pensioners: And in other Rooms, that were not for their Majesties Privacy, were likewise Tables prepared for several Sorts of their Majesties Attendants.

The Dinner was served up in this Manner:

From their Majesties Table to the Dresser, which was at the West End of the Hall, stood the eighty Livery-Men before-mentioned, in two Ranks, about two Yards distant from each other, Face to Face; one Rank of them receiving from the Dresser the King's Meat, and the other the Prince's, at one and the same Time; they never stirring, or removing from their Places, but delivering Dish after Dish, from one to another, 'till it came to the Sewers, who placed it upon the Table.

Their Majesties Meat was proportioned into four Services. The first consisted of 50 Dishes of cold Meats, as Brawn, Fish, and cold baked Meats planted upon the Garnish or Side-Table. The three other Services were of all Sorts of hot Flesh and Fish, boiled, roasted and baked; to the Number of 120 Dishes. After which was served up a curious and well-ordered Dessert.

At the High Table dined his Majesty, his Royal Consort the Queen, the Prince, the Duke of York, the Princess Mary, and the Prince Elector Palatine, in this Order:

The King sat under the Cloth of State, and her Majesty close to him, on his left Hand: On his Majesty's right Hand (about a Yard distant) sat the Prince; and about the same Distance from his Highness, sat the Prince Elector.

At her Majesty's left Hand (about a Yard's Space from her) was placed the Princess Mary; and not far from her, the Duke of York.

The Service for the Tables of the Lords and Ladies was thus ordered:

The Liveries before-mentioned (after the Meat was placed on the High Table) served up the Dinner to those Tables, but in another Posture; for, whereas before they stood in two Ranks, Face to Face, they now turned Back to Back. The Reason was, because (the Meat being served up to both Tables together) the one Rank of them might face to one Table, and the other to the other.

To these two Tables were appointed ten Messes, consisting of 500 Dishes.

These two Tables being likewise furnished, Care was taken for the rest of the Train, that were thought fit to be entertained within the Hall, who were all served so plentifully, that not a Man was heard to go discontented away.

And, because it was conceived before-hand by the Committees, that there might come more Company with their Majesties, than could be conveniently provided for within the Hall, large Provision was made abroad for the Guard, Footmen, Coachmen, and the like, where there dined about 150 Persons of all Sorts.

His Majesty received such Content, as well in the Freedom of the Entertainment, as in the Well-ordering thereof, that he was pleased by Words to express his Royal Thoughts, as well at Dinner as afterwards, (so did the Queen, Princes and Nobility) how great Content and Satisfaction he received.

His Majesty also, after Dinner, sent for Mr. John Pettus, a Gentleman of an antient Family in the County of Suffolk, who had married the Lord-Mayor's Daughter, and bestowed the Honour of Knighthood upon him; knowing that whatsoever in this Kind he should do to his Lordship, or his, must necessarily redound to the Honour of the City, and be an Expression of his Grace and Favour to it.

Their Majesties having reposed themselves a while after Dinner, (the Days being short) the Word was given for their Departure; and by this Time the three Companies of the twelve, and the rest of the inferior Companies, that had not waited in the Morning, had taken their Standings from St. Laurence-Lane End, Westward towards Temple-Bar.

The two Captains also, with the three Marshals, had ordered the Horsemen after this Manner:

They first drew up the Sheriffs Men in the Front, by two and two; then they caused the Rear of the Horsemen, that had made the first Stand at Bishopsgate in the Morning, to pass thro' the rest of the Companies, after the Sheriffs Men, and so the rest according to their former Order, 'till the Number of 500 were ranked again, by two and two, as in the Morning, and so passed thro' Cheapside, 'till the Rear of the first Company, which was the Lord-Mayor's, came even with St. Laurence-Lane End; and in this Order they staid 'till their Majesties were ready to come out of Guildhall, which was about four o'Clock in the Afternoon.

The Lord-Mayor carrying the Sword before his Majesty, as in the Morning, and the rest that conducted him from Cheapside to Guildhall, led his Majesty thither again, where the Word was given for the Horse to advance, which they did, and every one fell into the same Order, in which they were in the Morning; the greatest Difference being, That, whereas in the Forenoon the Footmen carried Truncheons in their Hands, they now went with lighted Torches, which gave so great a Light, as that the Night seemed to be turned to Day.

As their Majesties passed along, the Trumpets and City Musick were placed in several Parts founding and playing; which, together with the several several continual and joyful Acclamations of the People, gave great Content to both their Majesties.

The little Conduit in Cheapside, and the Conduit in Fleet-Street, running with Wine, as the other two Conduits had done in the Morning; and in their Passage by the South Door of St. Paul's Church, the Choir (with Sackburs and Cornets joining with them) sang an Anthem of Praise to God, and Prayers for their Majesties long Lives; which pleased his Majesty so well, that he gave them an extraordinary Respect.

And in their Passage to Temple-Bar, he made such Expressions of his gracious Acceptance of the City's Love, that the People could not sufficiently make manifest the Joy they conceived at it: So that by this Time the whole Day seemed to be spent in a kind of Emulation, as it were, between their Majesties and the City; the Citizens blessing and praying for their Majesties, and their Princely Issue; and their Majesties returning the same Blessings upon the Heads of the Citizens, with innumerable Thanks added thereto; inasmuch that it is hard to resolve, whether the Citizens were more joyed with the gracious Acceptance of their weak, tho' hearty and loyal Endeavours, or their Majesties with the Performance of the Day's seasonable Service: Both their Majesties, and the Citizens, seeming (as it were) not well satisfied, to whom the Thanks of this Day's Work were properly due.

But to proceed:

When the Sheriffs Men (who were in the Front) were come as far as the May-Pole in the Strand, they began to make a Stand, and singled themselves by falling off at the right Hand of the Street; their Company extending in Length as far as Exeter House; and after them the Horsemen did the like, in the same Order and Posture, as they had done in the Morning; and so continued to the Tilt-Yard, over-against his Majesty's Palace at Whitehall; to which Place the Lord-Mayor, Knights, and Aldermen, conducted their Majesties.

After the ENTERTAINMENT.

And now by this Time it might be conceived, that a Period might be set to this Relation; and that his Majesty had given ample and sufficient Testimony of his gracious Acceptation of the City's Love and loyal Affection towards him. But Manet alid mente reposum, in a better Sense than the Poet spoke it. His Majesty had taken so deep Impression of his poor Subjects Love, that he thought he had not sufficiently expressed himself by all that he had already so graciously been pleased to demonstrate. And therefore, when the Lord-Mayor had brought their Majesties into Whitehall, and was taking his Leave in humble Manner, his Majesty most graciously embraced and thanked him, and withal gave him in Charge, That in his Name the whole City might be thanked.

Whereupon, against Tuesday Morning following, being St. Andrew's Day, the Lord-Mayor caused a Common Council to be warned; where Mr. Recorder, in an eloquent and pithy Speech, related the Charge and Command that his Majesty (by the Lord Mayor) had imposed upon him: And withal (as was thought fit) he read his Speech to his Majesty, and his Majesty's most gracious Answer, which so much revived and increased the Joy of all the Commons, that an Act was there made; and the Lord-Mayor was intreated to appoint Mr. Recorder, and so many Aldermen and Commoners as his Lordship should think fit, to attend his Majesty, and to return their humble Thanks for all his great and princely favours to the City; and to prefer to his Majesty such other Desires of the City, as should be thought necessary and convenient.

In the mean Time, his Majesty (studying, as it were, how to add more Honour to the Lord-Mayor, and in his to the whole City) had sent to his Lordship his gracious Letters Patents, whereby he created him a Baronet.

The Lord-Mayor, according to the Power given unto him, by the Act of Common Council, called a Committee to his House, where he appointed how many Aldermen (besides those of the Committee for the Entertainment) should attend his Majesty, with Mr. Recorder, in Pursuance of the said Act; where it was concluded; what Desires they should humbly represent to his Majesty, on the City's Behalf.

Upon Friday the 3d of December, Mr. Recorder, with these Aldermen, viz. Sir George Whitmore, Alderman Cordal, Alderman Soames; Alderman Gayer, Alderman Gerrard, Alderman Wollaston, and the two Sheriffs (being Aldermen likewise) with eight of the Commoners of the said Committee, went by his Lordship's Appointment to Hampton-Court; where they were received by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorset, Lord Chamberlain to her Majesty, Sir Peter Wyche, Comptroller of his Majesty's Household, and other Officers and Gentlemen of Quality, till they should be admitted into his Majesty's Presence. And after some small Stay, his Majesty, with his Consort the Queen, (attended by the Duke of Richmond, Marquis of Hamilton, and the Earl of Dorset) came into her Majesty's Presence-Chamber; and soon after, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, and Commoners were called in; where, after their humble Duties tendered, Mr. Recorder, in an elegant Speech, presented the loyal Affections and humble Thanks of the City to their Majesties, together with two humble Petitions, formerly agreed on to be preferred to his Majesty, in Words to this Effect:

"That according to his Majesty's Commandment, given to the Lord Mayor and himself, they had published that which his Majesty had graciously expressed at his Entry into the City, not only to particular Men thereof, but at a Common Council, which is the Representative Body of the City: And there made known the most gracious Acceptance, by both their Majesties, of the Endeavours of the Citizens, for their Welcome and Entertainment that Day.

"That, after the publishing of it, they all forthwith, with one Heart, and one Voice, earnestly entreated, and pressed the Lord-Mayor, that by his Means, and in such Way as he should think fit, their most humble

"and hearty Thanks might be tendered and presented to both their Majesties, for that singular Honour they have done the City, in vouchsafing their Presence among them, and for those real Testimonies his Majesty had given of his Princely Favour and Affection towards them, tending so much to their Profit and Advantage; and especially for both their Majesties gracious Acceptance of their poor (tho' hearty) Endeavours: With these, and the like Expressions, which came from among them; That if they had done a thousand Times more, it had been but their Duty: That the Memory of this Honour, and these Favours, should ever live among them: That it should be preserved to Posterity: That their Desires and Studies should be, as much as in them lay, that they might be thought worthy of these Honours and Favours, and of so good and gracious a King and Queen.

"Thus the Lord-Mayor had required us that were present, to attend their Majesties with this Message from the City; and to make this thankful Acknowledgment to them; beseeching their Majesties (as an Addition to their former Favours) to take it in good Part from them: And this was the first Part of our Errand.

"That we had two humble Petitions to prefer to both their Majesties: And we had the Rife and Encouragement to both, from that which his Majesty was pleased to deliver to us.

"Our first Petition was, That their Majesties would vouchsafe this Honour to the City, (if it might stand with their good Pleasures) to make their Residence at this Season of the Year at the Palace at Whitehall. Their Presence was very joyful to us; and his Majesty was pleased to tell us, That he would study our Prosperity, and restore the Trade of the City, which of late had been in some Disorder. Their Residence there would give a good Quickening to the Retailing Trade, and by Consequence to the Merchant.

"Our second was, Whereas, since his happy Return hither, there had been some late Disorders about Westminster, among some People that met there, that their Majesties would not impute this to the Body of the City, or to the better Sort of Citizens. We held it a Misfortune and a Scandal upon us, that, when these Disorders were mentioned, the City was named with it: And that our Desire was to vindicate and redeem it, by some publick disavowing it: And we could not begin better, than in the Presence of their Majesties, to take it into their Considerations, that the Skirts of the City, where the Lord-Mayor, and Magistrates of London, have neither Power, nor Liberty, are more populous than the City itself, and fuller of the meaner Sort of People: And if any Dwellers in the City should be Actors in it, (as, who can deny, but among Millions of People some there may be?) yet their Purpose was unknown to us: And to give their Majesties some Assurance herein, there were some present there among us; Men that had lived in the "City above forty Years together, that knew the City, and the better Sort of Citizens, and were at Westminster, attending other Occasions, when those People met there, and took a heedful View of them: And they have affirmed, that they knew not the Face of one Man among them."

Mr. Recorder having ended, his Majesty presently, and graciously gave Answer, thus, in Effect:

"That he was very well pleased with the hearty and loyal Affections of the Citizens: For which he gave them Thanks. And for the first Petition, though he and her Majesty had before purposed to winter at Hampton-Court; yet being now fully persuaded, that the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the most considerable Part of the Citizens of London, had not any Hand in the Disorder mentioned by Mr. Recorder, in his second Petition, he intended (and so he knew her Majesty would) to alter his Resolution, and with all convenient Speed repair to Whitehall, there to keep their Christmas, and be ready to do any Thing else that might promote the Trade of the City: Desiring Mr. Recorder to join with him, in taking some Course for Prevention of the like Disorders for the future."

After his Majesty had ended his Answer, and that Mr. Recorder, and Sir George Whitmore had kissed his Royal Hand, the next Alderman, in Seniority, kneeled down, to receive the like Princely Favour; when suddenly, and unexpectedly, his Majesty drew a Sword, and, instead of giving him his Hand to kiss, he laid his Sword upon his Shoulder, and knighted him: The like he did to all the other Aldermen, and the two Sheriffs, being in Number seven.

This done, their Majesties gave them their Hands to kiss: The like Princely Favour vouchsafed they to the Commoners of the Committee: And after many gracious Demonstrations of Love to them, and the whole City, his Majesty commanded that they should dine, before they left the Court.

His Majesty's Command was fully and effectually performed; for, as soon as they had, in most humble Manner, taken their Leaves of their Majesties, they were brought by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorset, and by Mr. Comptroller, and other Officers of the Court, into a Room, where a Table was prepared for them, and no others, to dine at; where they were bountifully feasted, being honoured with the Presence of the Earl of Dorset, who vouchsafed to dine with them, and, in their Majesties Name, gave them exceeding great Welcome, expressing to them that Love, which he ever had abundantly manifested to the City. Mr. Comptroller likewise dined with them, using them with very great Respect.

While they were at Dinner, there came two Gentlemen to them, one from his Majesty, the other from the Queen, to let them know, their Majesties had remembered the Health of the Lord-Mayor, and the whole City: Which they entertained with due Respect, returning humble Thanks for their Majesties extraordinary Favour.

Dinner

Dinner being over, they took their Leaves of the Earl, and other Officers of Quality, and departed; returning to the Lord-Mayor, to whom they gave a Relation of their Majesties Grace and Favour to his Lordship, the whole City, and themselves.

The Mayor and Aldermen in 1648 refused to proclaim an Act for a Commonwealth.

Thus have you seen the City's Love and Loyalty to King Charles I. And however afterwards, upon that unfortunate Monarch's being put to Death, they were forced to comply with the Government that was set up by a strong Hand; yet, for a lasting Memorial of the City's Steadfastness to the antient Kingly Government, and Maintenance of English Freedom, we must relate how the Lord-Mayor, and several of the Aldermen, utterly refused to publish an Act, made by the Commons, soon after the King was beheaded, intituled, An Act for the Exheredation of the Royal Line, the Abolishment of Monarchy in the Kingdom, and the Setting-up of a Commonwealth. These, that so refused, were Sir Abraham Reinardson, Mayor; Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen: For which the Mayor was put out of his Mayoralty, and he, with those Aldermen, committed to the Tower. In April following, the three Aldermen were to be brought to the Bar of the then governing Lords; which they hearing of, bravely and stoutly, as good Citizens, and true Englishmen, refused their Authority, and signified to the Lieutenant of the Tower, that they would not obey his Order to bring them before the Bar of that House; declaring their firm Resolution to stand for the Defence of the established Laws of the Land, and their Protestation against the Lords Jurisdiction over them, or any other Commoners, in Criminal Cases: With an Appeal from the said Lords to their proper and competent Judges, i. e. a Jury of their Equals, and Judges sworn to proceed according to the known Laws of England. All this may be seen by the Letter and the Petition following:

A Salva Libertate, sent to Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower, on Sunday, April 23, by Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of London, now Prisoners in the Tower: Being occasioned by the Receipt of a Paper sent unto them by the said Lieutenant; wherein the said Lieutenant was seemingly authorised to carry them before the Lords on Tuesday the 25th of April.

"To our Honour'd Friend, Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower.

"S I R,

"We received a Letter from you, seeming to authorize you to carry our Persons before the Lords, to answer to a Charge: We are constrained to inform you hereby, That our Persons ought not to be hurried to and fro, or disturbed at the Pleasure of any Man; neither can we yield Obedience to the Commands of any, which are not legal: And therefore, in case you intend to disturb us on Tuesday next, we expect to see a legal Warrant from some Person, or Court, which have Jurisdiction over us, in case of a real or supposed Crime: And we must acquaint you, That the Lords

"have no legal Power to summon us to answer to any Crime whereof we are accused or suspected: And therefore you must expect to answer for whatsoever Injury you offer to our Persons: And know hereby, That we shall not voluntarily go from hence to Westminster, by Virtue of the Paper received, but shall suffer you to carry us, if you shall send Force which we cannot resist.

Your Friends and Servants,

From our Chambers in the Tower of London, April the 23d, 1648.

Thomas Adams,
John Langham,
James Bunce.

"To the Right Honourable the Lords Assembled in Parliament: The humble Petition of Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of London, &c.

"Sheweth,

"That, if your Petitioners shall submit to your Lordships Jurisdiction over Commoners in those Criminal Cases, or Novelisms in Law, intituled, Articles of Impeachment of High Treason, and other Misdemeanors, they shall not only be Feloes de se, but also shall murder the Persons, and ruin the Estates of all the Free-born People of England: And that which is more, they shall betray the Common Law, which is the Supreme Authority (under GOD) of the Nation, and the Inheritance of every Freeman's Posterity: And that which is worst of all, they shall be instrumental to pull down all the Judicatories of the Kingdom, and re-edify an arbitrary Government, many Stories higher than ever the Star-Chamber, High-Commission, or Council-Table were. And by the same Rule that your Lordships have fined several Commoners 500*l.* a Man for not kneeling, or submitting to your Lordships Jurisdiction in Criminal Cases, for which there is no Law; nay, which is absolutely and apparently against the fundamental Laws of the Land, and the ordinary Rule of your own Court of Judicature; usually referring those Causes, which appertain to the Common Law, to the other Courts of Justice, especially if the People desire it; so you may fine their Fellow-Citizens, and Commoners of England, as many Millions, and take away the Lives and Estates of all, as well as some, to the perpetual Destroying and Enslaving the whole Kingdom. By the 29th Chapter of the Great Charter, all Commoners are to be tried by their Equals; and there are thirty Sessions of Parliament, which confirm the Great Charter, being a Statute declaratory of the Common Law; especially those eminent Laws, wherein your Lordships had your Shares in making them; viz. The Petition of Right, 3 Caroli, and the Act for abolishing the Star-Chamber, and regulating the Council-Table, in the 17th Caroli, in which many Statutes are enumerated; That Commoners ought to be tried by their Equals, by Bill of Indictment, or Writ Original, and by those of their Neighbourhood: And all Decrees and Judgments made contrary thereto are declared thereby to be null and void in Law, which bars all Precedents. And by several Declarations

"rations and Ordinances your Lordships have declared, That Ordinances are no Laws; but temporary, during the Wars; and the Case of Necessity being taken away, your Lordships have promised the free People of England, that they shall be governed according to the known Laws of the Land, as it appears in the Ordinance, dated the 15th of January, 1647. And it is against the Law of God, Nature, and Nations, that any Person or Persons should be Judge and Parties, Examiners, or Accusers, in their own Cause, or to be tried any otherwise than by a known Law; for where there is no Law, there is no Transgression. It is declared by Sir Edward Coke, That the Parliament cannot make a Law against the Law of Nature, which is Custom, according to right and necessary Reason: That Precedents are nothing in Comparison of the Common and Statute Laws; these being known Maxims in Law, A Facto ad Jus non valet Argumentum. Gubernandum est Legibus, non Exemplis. Articles are nothing in Law but meer Innovations, and Privileges extrajudicial, especially when ordinary Persons are in question. The old Maxim in Law is, Non recurrendum est ad Extraordinaria, quando fieri potest per Ordinaria. And your Lordships are not only sworn, but have imposed several Oaths, as the Protestation, and solemn League and Covenant, upon the free Commoners of England, to defend the fundamental Laws of the Land; and they are confident your Lordships will be very tender of the Preservation of the Great Charter, in which are wrapped up our Lives, Liberties, and Estates: Your noble Predecessors being so glorious and famous Instruments in assisting this People in purchasing the same.

"Concerning the Point of Precedent, which is all can be said for your Lordships, we shall give you the Answer:

"1. It is observable, that all such Commoners, which have submitted to your Lordships Jurisdiction, were in the Time of the Civil Wars, Flagrante Bello, not by Compulsion, but by voluntary Petitions of the Commons, in a summary Way, to the King in Person.

"2. One Precedent against your Lordships Jurisdiction is of more Consequence than a thousand for it. The Reason is plain; because all Courts of Judicature are bottomed upon the Law of the Land, and it cannot be supposed, that any Court can be miscognizant of its own Jurisdiction. Your Lordships have confessed in Sir Simon de Benisford's Case, that it is against the Law for Peers to try Commoners; and your Predecessors have promised, upon Record, that they will never do the like again, tho' that Occasion were superlative. Rot. 2. Rot. Parl. 5. Numb. 45.

"3. The Corporation of Cambridge was accused before the King and Lords for complying with the Rebels of Essex, Kent, and Hertford; their Counsel pleaded against the Jurisdiction of the Lords House in the Point of Treason, and the King and Lords allowed the Plea,

"4. As there are many Precedents, more may be alledged, that Commoners have denied your Lordships Jurisdiction; and that your Lordships have transmitted such Causes to the Common Law, if desired by the free People; so there can no Precedent be shewn, that Commoners, which have refused to be tried by your House, have been over-ruled by them in Point of Jurisdiction.

"5. There was never any Precedent since there were Parliaments in England, that the same Sessions of Parliament hath imprisoned, fined, or any otherwise disseized or destroyed any Man for obeying or executing the Laws, Ordinances, or Orders of the same Parliament. And there are many Ordinances in Force, which indemnify all those which have acted by the Authority of Parliament, viz. May 26, 1642. P. Book Decl. P. 281. June 14, 1642. P. 377. The Premises considered,

"Your Petitioners, being free Commoners of England, according to the known Laws of the Land, (de Jure) claim their Birth-right, which is, to be tried by God and their Country, in his Majesty's Court of Justice, by the sworn Judges of the Law, and a Jury of their Equals of their own Neighbourhood, where the pretended Fact was done, the Courts of Justice being open.

"And your Petitioners shall pray."

C H A P. XXXIII.

The City's Petition to Parliament for Reformation, and against the King's dismissing of Sir William Belfour from the Lieutenantancy of the Tower. Apprentices Petition against the new Lieutenant and the Bishops. Commotions ensuing thereupon. The five impeached Members protected by the Citizens. House of Commons appoint a Committee to sit at Guildhall. King's Speech to the Common Council, and their Remonstrance, with his Majesty's Answer. The five Members and Committee escorted by the Citizens to Westminster. City Train-bands ordered to attend the House daily, and to guard the Tower. City's Remonstrance to the Parliament's Demand of a Loan of 100000l. His Majesty's Letter against it. The Parliament's Declaration concerning the King's Letter.

BY these reciprocal Professions of Duty and Affection on one Side, and Love and Protection on the other, one would have thought that a more loyal City, nor a more happy Prince, ever were. However, many of the Citizens being of Opinion, that, by the Continuance of the Popish Lords and Church Prelates in the House of Peers, the Work of Reformation was greatly obstructed, they drew up the following Petition:

City Petitioners Parliament for Reformation.

"To the honourable the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of the House of Commons in Parliament,

"The humble Petition of the Aldermen, Common-Councilmen, Subsidy-men, and other Inhabitants of the City of London, and the Suburbs thereof,

"Sheweth,

"That they doe with all humble Thankfulnesse acknowledge that great Labour and Care, which this honourable Assembly hath undergone now for the Space of above one whole Yeare, endeavouring the Reformation and Removal of those many Pressures and Grievances in Church and Commonwealth; and do humbly present that grateful Acceptance and high Esteem, which not only the Petitioners, but also all well-affected to the Honour of his Majesty and Prosperity of this Kingdom have, of these your great and unwearied Endeavors; which altho' they (by reason of the Popish Lords and Bishops voting in the House of Peeres, and other Impediments, as they humbly conceive) have not hitherto produced those happy Effects you aymed at; yet, to the Petitioners great Comfort, divers of those Pressures are already removed, as Arbitrary Courts, Ship-Money, Monopolies, and other illegal Impositions, wherewith they were burdened, and further Hopes given by the happy Act of this Parliament's Continuance.

"That (notwithstanding all this) the Papists and their Adherents, whose Malice ceaseth not, have, by sundry secret and desperate Plots, attempted the Ruin and Destruction of this State and Kingdom; and however some of them have hitherto by God's Providence, and your Prudence, been discovered and become abortive; yet the sad Effects of others of them are not only felt, and much more feared in this Realme of England, but also have of late broken out into open Rebellion in Ireland, where most barbarous, savage, cruel and inhuman Actions are practised towards our Brethren by Nation and Religion, whose lamentable and deplored Condition the Petitioners much pity and lament, and have just Cause to fear, that as already there hath been much Christian Blood spilt, so in short Time, if speedy Helpe be not sent, not only the many great Debts there owing to divers of the Petitioners, and others of this Kingdom, will be wholly lost, but (which is farre more) the very Name of the English and Protestant Religion there will be rooted out, which those Rebels (the Foundation of whose Religion is written in Letters of Blood) do only oppose.

"And for that divers of the Petitioners receive daily Information from all Parts of this Kingdom of the bold, insolent Carriage and threatening Speeches of the Papists in this Realm, arising (as the Petitioners humbly conceive) not only from the prevailing of the Rebels in Ireland, but also from the want of such secure and speedy Course against Papists here, as the present Condition of this Kingdom requireth, and this honourable Assembly hath earnestly endeavoured.

"From which Grounds, the Petitioners cannot omit to represent unto you the great Terrors, Fears, and Distractions that they lie under of a

"suddaine Surprize by their bloody Hands; by means whereof, the Trading of this City and Kingdom is much more of late decayed than it hath been for divers Years past, no Man following his Trade chearfully, while the Lives of himself and Family, and the publique Safety of the Kingdom, are in Danger, and while he knoweth not how soon they may feel the like Cruelty and Inhumanity from the Papists and their Adherents, as these in Ireland have done; which if ever it shall happen, this honourable Assembly must expect to have a deep Share in their Malice and Cruelty, against whom they have already, by themselves and their Abettors, endeavoured to raise a Disrespect in the Hearts of the People, to divide between the King's Majesty and his Parliament, and seditiously to misconstrue the Citizens dutifull and loyall Entertainment of his Majesty, to be a deserting of this honourable Assembly, the least Thought whereof the Petitioners doe utterly detest and abhorre.

"To the End, therefore, that the destructive Plots of the Papists and their Adherents may be defeated, the Grounds of their Hopes and Insolencies removed, considerable Forces with all Expedition sent to subdue those abominable and bloody Rebels in Ireland, this City and Kingdom (for Prevention of the like Mischiefes here, and securing the Peace thereof) put into a Posture of Defence, the Petitioners freed from their Fears, encouraged in their Trades, and in due Time receive such just Answers to their former Petitions, as shall seem best to your great Wisdoms:

"It is humbly prayed, that you will vouchsafe to be a Meanes to the King's Majesty and the House of Peeres, that Life may be speedily given to your good Endeavours by their Concurrence with you in the punishing of Delinquents, and redressing the Pressures and Grievances in Church and Commonwealth (amongst which the Abuses crept into the antient Government of this City, they humbly desire, may in due Time be taken into Consideration;) and, for the better effecting hereof, that the Popish Lords and Bishops may be removed out of the House of Peeres, as was desired in the Presence of divers of this honourable Assembly by the representative Body of this City in the Guildhall, when 50000*l.* was freely lent to raise Forces for Ireland, the greatest Part whereof was speedily brought in by the Petitioners.

"And the Petitioners, who well know their own Safeties are wrapt up in yours, shall not fail to put up daily Prayers to Almighty God for your good Successes, and to maintaine and defend, to the utmost Hazard of their Lives and Estates, (according to their late Protestation) the King's Majesty, and High Court of Parliament, against all wicked Counsellors and malignant Opposers, who endeavour either by secret Plot or open Force to prejudice the one or the other, or to make Division between his Majesty and the Parliament, whom God, and the Laws of this Land, have united in so neare a Relation."

chants, and others of great Rank and Quality, two hundred whereof did ride in Coaches, (the 11th of December, 1641) to deliver the same. The House of Commons, after some Meditation, admitted their Persons and Petition; which Petition was presented by Mr. Fookes, Merchant, who related to the honourable Assembly, that he could have brought them as many Persons as there were Hands to the Petition, but that he judged it not fit to come thither in a tumultuous Manner; declaring likewise, how they met with some Obstructions in their gathering of Hands by ill-affected Persons. And, when he had thus done speaking, they were commanded to withdraw. In the Interim, the Petition was read in the House, and then they were called in again. They being come in, the honourable Assembly certified unto them, that their Petition was very lovingly and thankfully accepted of with Reality of Affections; promising them, that they would take the several Branches of their Petition into Consideration; giving them Order likewise, to present the Names of such ill-affected Persons as did hinder or discourage them in seeking to redress their Grievances in so lawful a Way, and a strict Order should be taken with them.

Sir William Belfour, Lieutenant of the Tower, dismissed.

The King, on the 23d of the same Month, having discharged Sir William Belfour, a Scotsman, from being Lieutenant of the Tower of London, he appointed Colonel Lunsford, a Person very obnoxious to the House of Commons, to succeed him. This Removal so highly affected the Citizens, whose Interest was inseparable from that of the Commons, that the same Day they drew up the following Petition, intitled, "The humble Petition of divers Common-Councilmen, and others of the City of London;" and presented the same to the House of Commons:

"Shewing,

Ibid.
City Petition against it.

"That whereas the Tower of London was originally ordained for Defence of the City, and to be the chief Magazine of the Kingdom, and that the whole State is deeply interested in the safe Custody thereof, but more especially the said City, which lately hath been put into Fears of some dangerous Design from that Citadel, whereupon it pleased this high Court to mediate with his Majesty for removing those Fears: And whereas the Petitioners are informed that Sir William Belfour, a Person of Honour and Trust, is displaced from the Office of Lieutenant; and the same Place bestowed upon Colonel Lunsford, a Man outlawed, and most notorious for Outrages, and therefore fit for any dangerous Attempt: The Petitioners, and many more who have Intelligence thereof, are thereby put into such an Height of Fear and Jealousy, as makes them restless till they have discharged their Duty in representing the same to this honourable House.

"May it therefore please this honourable Assembly to take the Premises into such Consideration, as may secure both the City and Kingdom against the Mischief which may happen, as to your great Wisdom shall be found most fitting, &c."

Ibid.

After some Debates upon this Petition, the Commons desired a Conference with the Lords, wherein they assigned several Reasons for the Lords joining to address his Majesty for the Removal of Lunsford; which their Lordships having taken into Consideration, returned for Answer, That they did not think fit to join in such an Address, because they conceived it would be an Infringement upon his Majesty's Prerogative. However, the Lord-Mayor, on the Sunday following, attended his Majesty at Whitehall, and acquainted him with the Rumour of a general Insurrection of the City Apprentices, in case Lunsford should not be removed from the Lieutenantancy of the Tower, and that, if he should be continued much longer in that Post, they were resolved, at all Hazards, to attack the Tower itself, in order to dispossess him: Which Report was chiefly owing to the City Apprentices presenting the following Petition to the House of Commons, on the same Day the last-recited Petition was delivered:

"Whereas we, tho' the lowest Members of the City and Kingdom, touched with the common Sense of all good Subjects, do by Experience find, by our own and our Masters Tradings, the Beginning of great Mischief coming upon us, to nip us in the Bud when we are first entering into the World, the Cause of which we can attribute to no others but to the Papists and Prelates, and that malignant Party which adheres unto them: And whereas by the late Protestation we stand solemnly engaged in the Presence of Almighty God, by all lawful Means, with the utmost of our Lives, Power, and Estates, to defend your sacred Majesty and royal Issue, with the Rights and Liberties of Parliaments, and all your Majesty's Subjects, against Papists and popish Innovators, such as Archbishops, Bishops, and their Dependents, appear to be; the Extirpation of which Government, Root and Branch, by several Petitions from this City, and many Parts of this Kingdom, hath been humbly desired:

"We hold it our bounden Duty, after long Expectation of due and just Proceedings against the fore-named Papists and popish Innovators, now to the last to become most humble Suitors to your Majesty in this present Parliament, that you would please to take Notice, that notwithstanding the much unwearied Pains and Industry of the House of Commons to subdue Papistry and popish Innovators, neither Popery is subdued, nor Prelates are yet removed; whereby many have taken great Encouragement desperately to plot against the Peace and Safety of this and other your Majesty's Dominions; witness the most barbarous and inhuman Cruelties perpetrated by the Papists now in Ireland; from whence ariseth in us a new Spring of Fears and Jealousies, what the Issue of these Things may be in this your Kingdom of England also, without a speedy and timely Prevention of the same.

"In Hope therefore of your Majesty's willing Readiness, by the Advice of this honourable Court of Parliament, to provide for our present Relief and Safety, we humbly supplicate, that the Popish Lords, and other eminent and dangerous Papists in all Parts of this Kingdom, may be narrowly looked unto and secured, the Laws against Priests and Jesuits fully executed, "the

Commotion, occasioned by Colonel Lunsford's drawing his Sword in Westminster-Hall.

Lord-Mayor's Care to prevent the bad Consequences thereof to
the City.

These unprecedented Menaces occasioned the King's calling a Council, to deliberate upon and prevent the threatened Mischiefs; at the breaking-up of which, Charles, for quieting the Minds of the People, was graciously pleased to remove Lunsford from his Command of the Tower. But, before the same was publicly known, the Citizens and Apprentices, that had petitioned against him and the Bishops, repaired in great Numbers to Westminster; and, stopping at Whitehall, insolently exclaimed, No Bishops, no Bishops, no popish Lords! and that for the future they'd have no Porter's Lodge, but would speak with the King when they pleased; which so irritated the Bishop of Lincoln, then passing to Westminster, that he violently seized upon a young Fellow, one of the most active; which the Populace observing, they soon rescued him, and, encircling the Bishop, unanimously cried out, No Bishop! and, without offering the least Violence to his Person, suffered him to depart. However, one David Hide, (a reformed Officer, of the late Army employed against the Scots, and now designed for the Service in Ireland) accompanied by divers of his Brethren, Cavaliers, observing what passed, was greatly enraged at the insolent Deportment of the Rabble, insomuch that he threatned to cut the Throats of those round-headed Dogs that bawled against the Bishops; whence arose the Appellation of Round-Head and Cavalier, by which the antiprelatical and royal Parties were distinguished during the Course of those Troubles. Hide had no sooner expressed himself in this furious Manner, than he drew his Sword, and desired his Friends to second him; which they refusing, he was instantly apprehended by the Citizens, and carried before the House of Commons, who not only immediately committed him to Prison, but likewise discharged him from all Service in Ireland.

Upon the same Day Colonel Lunsford, accompanied by thirty or forty Gentlemen of his Acquaintance, going thro' Westminster-Hall, upon his espying a great Multitude of Citizens and Apprentices, drew his Sword; but whether with an Intent to offend, or defend himself, is uncertain: Be that as it will, a Scuffle ensued, wherein divers Persons were wounded: News whereof being carried to the City, it occasioned a mighty Commotion in all Parts, all being in the utmost Confusion; and every one, threatening Revenge, armed instantly after the best Manner they could; and, notwithstanding the great Expedition of the Lord-Mayor to prevent their Design, many hundreds of the Citizens got out before the City Gates could be secured to prevent them; however, his Lordship causing the same to be shut as soon as possible, and, placing a strong Guard at each thereof, happily hindered the major Part from following; and having placed sufficient Guards in proper Parts of the City, attended by the Sheriffs, he patrolled the Streets all the following Night to appease the enraged Multitude, and the next Morning raised the Train'd-bands, to keep the City in Peace and Quietness. These dangerous Tumults and Insurrections not only obliged the King, for the Security of himself and Family, to command a Party of the Train'd-bands of Westminster and Middlesex to do Duty at Whitehall, but likewise to send the following Message to the City by the Lord Newburgh; who, upon his being admitted into the Common-Council, addressed himself to that Court as follows:

His Majesty
orders the Train'dbands to do Duty at Whitehall

"Gentlemen, his Majesty, out of his good Affection towards the City, and acknowledging of your great Loves lately shewed unto his Highness, hath sent me in a Message unto you;" assuring it to be the same contained in a Paper, which he presented, and desired to be read in this Common Council, viz.

Ibid.

"There having been of late many tumultuary and riotous Assemblies of People about our Palaces of Whitehall and Westminster, to the great Disturbance of us and our Parliament; and we having received Information, that some ill-affected Persons do still endeavour to incite the like Tumults again; we have thought fit to recommend to your special Care the preventing them, as far as in you lies, especially in the ensuing Holidays, at which the Idleness of many may make them apter at such Disorders."

Ibid.

His Majesty
thereupon to the City
Common

"We have thought fit likewise to let you know, that we are so well assured of the good Affections of our City of London, by the great Expressions which it hath made unto us of late, that we can in no ways understand it to have any Share in the Fault of these Tumults and Distempers, but that they proceed merely from the mean and unruly People of the Suburbs: And as we are most confident of the Hearts and good Affections of our City of London towards us and our Government, and will not entertain any other Opinion, so we do desire them not to be disturbed by any Jealousies that ill-affected Persons may endeavour to sow, but to rest most confident and assured, that the Safety, the Protection, and the Prosperity of the City, shall ever be with us a principal Care."

Some Time after, the Attorney-General, by the King's Command, having in the House of Lords impeached the Lord Kimbolton, and five Members of the House of Commons, of High Treason, the Serjeant at Arms, by his Majesty's Command, immediately repaired to the House of Commons, and demanded the said five Members to be delivered up to him; which the House having considered of, instead of complying with the royal Demand, voted that Proceeding a Breach of Privilege; which the King so highly resealed, that the Day after he repaired to the House with an armed Power, in order to apprehend the said Members: But the Commons having had previous Notice of his coming, the Gentlemen intended to be seized withdrew, and repaired to London for their their Security, to shew the Citizens that they entirely relied upon them as a sure Refuge of the Oppressed, and real Sanctuary of their Privileges against Violence; in which they found themselves not mistaken; for, notwithstanding all the Lord-Mayor could do (who was heartily in the King's Interest) to prevent Tumults, the Citizens had Recourse to Arms for their Protection.

The House of Commons appoint a Committee to sit in Guildhall.

By this violent Proceeding, the House, apprehending that they could sit no longer at Westminster with Safety, appointed a Committee to sit in the Guildhall of London, to deliberate upon such Things as related to the Safety of the City and Kingdom, and then adjourned the House to Tuesday following.

Ibid.

The King repairs to the City, and is affronted by the Way.

The King, having miscarried in his Design of securing the impeached Members, came on the 5th of January into the City, with his usual Attendance; when, on his Way thither, the People, with loud Exclamations, cried, Privileges of Parliament! Privileges of Parliament! At which Time one Henry Walker, an Ironmonger and Pamphleteer, threw into his Majesty's Coach a Paper, whereon was writ, To your Tents, O Israel! for which he was immediately apprehended, and committed to Prison. In the Interim the King being arrived at Guildhall, where the Common Council was assembled, he made the following Speech to them:

Henry Walker seized and imprisoned.

Ibid.

His Majesty's Speech to the Common Council.

"Gentlemen,
"I come to demand such Persons as I have already accused of High Treason, and do believe are shrowded in the City. I hope no good Man will keep them from me; their Offences are Treason and Misdemeanours of an high Nature. I desire your loving Assistance herein, that they may be brought to a legal Trial.

"And whereas there are divers Suspicions raised that I am a Favourer of the Popish Religion, I do profess, in the Name of a King, that I did and ever will, and that to the utmost of my Power, be a Prosecutor of all such as shall any ways oppose the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom, either Papists or Separatists; and not only so, but I will maintain and defend that true Protestant Religion which my Father did profess, and I will continue in it during Life."

Dinner with one of the Sheriffs.

The King, to ingratiate himself with the Citizens, had no sooner ended his Speech, than he invited himself to Dinner with one of the Sheriffs, tho', of the two, the least inclined to his Service; and, after the Entertainment, returned to Whitehall, without the least Disorder or Disturbance. However, the Citizens, neither approving of the Demand nor Declaration, drew up the following Remonstrance, which they entitled, "The humble Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London:"

"May it please your Most Excellent Majesty,

The Remonstrance of the Common Council, &c.

"The often Experience of your most gracious Acceptance of the Manifestation of the Petitioners Duty and Loyalty, and the frequent Declarations of your Majesty's great Care of the Good and Welfare of this City, and of the true Protestant Religion, and of protecting and preserving the Persons and Privileges of your great

"Council assembled in the high Court of Parliament, hath encouraged your Petitioners to represent the great Dangers, Fears, and Distractions wherein the City now is, by reason of the prevailing Progress of the bloody Rebels in Ireland, fomented and acted by the Papists and their Adherents, &c. the Want of Aid to suppress them, and the several Intimations they have had, both foreign and at home, of the driving on of Designs tending to the utter Ruin of the Protestant Religion, and the Lives and Liberties of your Majesty's loyal Subjects; the putting out of Persons of Honour and Trust from being Constable and Lieutenant of the Tower, especially in these Times, and the Preparations there lately made; the fortifying of Whitehall with Men and Munition in an unusual Manner; some of which Men, with provoking Language and Violence, abused divers Citizens passing by; and the drawing divers Swords, and therewith wounding several other Citizens in Westminster-Hall, that were unarmed; the late Endeavours used to the Inns of Court, the calling in divers Cannoneers and other Assistance into the Tower; the late Discovery of divers Fire-works in the Hands of a Papist, and the Misunderstanding betwixt your Majesty and Parliament, by reason of Misinformation, as they humbly conceive.

"Besides all which, the Petitioners Fears are exceedingly increased by your Majesty's late going into the House of Commons, attended with a great Multitude of armed Men, (besides your ordinary Guard) for the apprehending divers Members of that House, to the endangering your sacred Person, and of the Persons and Privileges of that honourable Assembly. The Effect of all which Fears tend not only to the Overthrow of the whole Trade of this City and Kingdom, which the Petitioners already feel in a deep Measure, but also threatens the utter Ruin of the Protestant Religion, and the Lives and Liberties of all your loyal Subjects.

"The Petitioners therefore most humbly pray your most sacred Majesty, that, by the Advice of your great Council in Parliament, the Protestants in Ireland may be speedily relieved, the Tower put into the Hands of Persons of Trust, that, by Removal of doubtful and unknown Persons from about Whitehall and Westminster, a known and approved Guard may be appointed for the Safety of your Majesty and Parliament; and that the Lord Mandevill, (another Title of the Lord Kimbolton's) and the five Members of the House of Commons, lately accused, may not be restrained of Liberty, or proceeded against otherwise than according to the Privileges of Parliament.

"And your Petitioners shall, &c."

To which Petition the King returned the following Answer:

"His Majesty, having fully considered the Matter of this Petition, is graciously pleased to declare, that being unalterably resolved to make good all his Expressions and Declarations of his Care of this City, of the true Protestant Religion, and of the Privileges of Parliament, his

Ibid. His Majesty's Answer.

"his Majesty takes in good Part the Intimation given by the Petitioners of the Fears and Difficulties wherein the City now seems to be; and, tho' he conceives he did on Wednesday at the Guildhall satisfy most of these Particulars, is pleased to add this further Answer:

"1. That, for the said Business of Ireland; his Majesty cannot possibly express a greater Sense than he hath done, there being nothing left on his Majesty's Part unoffered or undone; and he hoped, by the speedy Advice and Assistance of his Parliament, that great and necessary Work would be put in a sure Forwardness, to which his Majesty will contribute all his Power: And how zealous he is and hath been herein, will appear in a Declaration speedily to be set forth by his Majesty.

"2. For the Tower; his Majesty wonders, that, having removed a Servant of good Trust and Reputation from that Charge, only to satisfy the Fears of the City, and put in another of unquestionable Reputation and known Ability, the Petitioners should still entertain those Fears; and whatever Preparation of Strength is there made, is with as great an Eye of Safety and Advantage to the City as to his Majesty's own Person, and shall be equally employed to both.

"3. For the fortifying Whitehall with Men and Munition in an unusual Way; his Majesty doubts not but the Petitioners have observed the strange Provocation he hath received to entertain that Guard; that by the disorderly and tumultuous Conflux of People at Westminster and Whitehall, his Majesty's great Council was not only disquieted, but his own royal Person in Danger; most seditious Language being uttered even under his own Windows, whilst the Examination and punishing such Tumults by the Course of Law were interrupted and stopped: And if any Citizens were wounded or ill-treated, his Majesty is confidently assured, that it happened by their own evil and corrupt Deemeanours.

"4. His Majesty knows no other Endeavours to the Inns of Court, than a gracious Intention, that he received the Tender of their loyal and dutiful Affections with very good Approbations and Acceptance, and an Encouragement given them to continue the same upon all Occasions. Neither doth his Majesty know what Discovery hath been lately made of Fire-works in the Hands of any Papist.

"5. For his going to the House of Commons, when his Attendants were no otherwise armed than as Gentlemen with Swords; his Majesty is verily persuaded, that if the Petitioners knew the clear Grounds upon which these Persons stand accused of high Treason, and what will be proved against them, (which in due Time they shall be acquainted with) and considering the gentle Way his Majesty took for their Apprehension, which he preferred before any Course of Violence, (tho' that Way had been very justifiable; for his Majesty is very well assured, that it is notoriously known, that no Privilege of Parliament can extend to Treason, Felony, or Breach of the Peace) the Petitioners

"would believe his Majesty's going thither was an Act of Grace and Favour to that House, and the most peaceable Way of having that necessary Service, for the Apprehension of those Persons, performed; especially if such Orders have been made, which his Majesty is not willing to believe, for the Resistance of all lawful Authority, as are discussed of.

"6. And for the Proceedings against the Persons mentioned in the Petition, his Majesty ever intended the same should be with all Justice and Favour, according to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, to the which all innocent Men would cheerfully submit.

"And this extraordinary Way of satisfying a Petition of so unusual a Nature, his Majesty is confidently persuaded, will be thought the greatest Instance that can be given of his Majesty's clear Intentions to his Subjects, and of the singular Estimation he hath of the good Affections of this City, which, he believes, in Gratitude will never be wanting to his just Commands and Service."

The grand Committee, appointed by the House of Commons to sit in the Guildhall of this City, not finding that a convenient Place, by reason of the Multiplicity of the City Affairs, adjourned to Grocers-Hall, where they appointed a Sub-Committee, to draw up certain Heads for their safe Return to Westminster on the Tuesday following; who resolved, that the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex should raise the Posse Comitatus, to guard the King and Parliament for that Day.

At the same Time divers Mariners presented a Petition to the Committee, signed by a thousand Hands; wherein they tendered their Service to guard the said Committee by Water to Westminster: Which being accepted, they were ordered to provide such Artillery and other Arms as were necessary, against next Tuesday Morning; but that they should in a particular Manner take Care, that neither their great Guns nor Muskets should be charged, to the End there might be no Shooting that Day, except in Case of Resistance; all which they faithfully promised to perform, according to the late Protestation taken by both Houses.

Just after, a great Number of Apprentices repaired to the Committee, and offered their Service to guard them to the Parliament-House on the Tuesday after; and, being called in, the Chairman returned them Thanks for their great Affection and Readiness to serve the Parliament, and acquainted them, that they should have no Occasion for their Assistance at that Time, seeing a Guard was already provided to attend them by Water.

On the 11th of the same Month the Parliament, according to Adjournment, met at Westminster; whither the Committee, accompanied by the Lord Kimbolton, and the five Members, repaired; who, taking Water at the Three Cranes, were attended by about forty Long-boats, well armed for Defence, together with a vast Number of Citizens and Seamen in other Boats and Barges; while the London Train'd-bands marched by Land to Westminster, accompanied by a great Multitude,

The Commons, in Return for the great Favours received from the Citizens of London both by Land and Water, resolved not only to thank them for the same, but likewise to indemnify them from all Harm on that Account; and, in order thereunto, the Sea-Captains that commanded the Boats to Westminster were first called in; to whom the Speaker, by Order of the House, addressed himself as follows:

Ibid.

"1. That the House did take special Notice of the Performance of this Service of theirs to this House and to the Commonwealth, and gave them Thanks for it; and desired them to communicate the same to the rest of the Seamen and Mariners.

"2. For the Petition which they delivered to the Committee of this House the other Day in London, that this House will take it into speedy Consideration, as also any other Desire of theirs that they shall make to this House."

Ibid.

Then the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex were called in, to whom the Speaker spoke as follows:

Ibid.

For which they receive the Thanks of the House.

"That this House was very sensible of their great Care, and Love, and Respect to this House, and in them to the Commonwealth, as also to the Committee of this House that sat in London, and for the special Service done this Day; and hath commanded him to give them hearty Thanks for it, and to desire them to return the like to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen."

Then the following Resolution of Indemnity passed the House:

Ibid.

Obtain an Act of Indemnity for their Actions.

"That the Actions of the Citizens of London, and others, in the Guarding and Defence of the Parliament, or the Privileges or Members thereof, either by the Train'd-bands or otherwise, are according to their Duties, and the late Protestation, and the Laws of this Kingdom; and that, if any Person should arrest or trouble any of them for so doing, he doth thereby break the Privileges of Parliament, violate the Liberty of the Subject, and is hereby declared an Enemy of the Commonwealth."

City Train'd-bands ordered to attend the House daily.

And immediately thereupon the House of Commons ordered, that, for their Security, two Companies of the London Train'd-bands should daily attend the House, under the Command of Sergeant-Major Skippon, a Citizen of great Experience in Military Affairs. And, being informed of the sending away the Artillery and Ammunition from the Tower of London, for the more effectually securing the Stores in the said Tower, the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex were ordered to place a sufficient Guard round it by Land and Water, under the Command of the aforesaid Sergeant-Major Skippon.

The Parliament solicit a Loan of 100000l.

The Parliament, having great Occasion for Money, sent, on the 22d of the said Month of January, a Committee into the City, to solicit a Loan of one hundred thousand Pounds; which Message occasioned the Lord-Mayor and Citizens to deliver the following Petition and expostulatory Answer or Remonstrance to the House of Commons:

"That the Committee of this honourable

"House, upon the 22d of this Instant January, sent a Message to the Petitioners for the Loan of one hundred thousand Pounds; or of so much thereof as could conveniently be forthwith raised, for levying Forces to suppress the Rebels in Ireland; to which Message something was then answered, and a further Answer in Writing promised.

"In Performance whereof, they humbly presented the Answer following, together with the Reasons thereof, desiring the same (being the best that for the present they are able to give) may favourably be accepted:

"The Petitioners are duly and deeply sensible of the great Miseries of their Brethren in Ireland, and of the imminent Danger, not only of the total Loss of that Kingdom, but of the Ruin of this also, if that of Ireland should (which God forbid) be lost. And as they have hitherto shewed themselves ready, even beyond their Abilities, to serve the King and Parliament, so shall they ever continue to the utmost of their Power, with all Chearfulness and Duty; but at the present they are compelled to repeat their former Answer, That they have no Power to raise any Sums by Way of Tax for any foreign Use.

"And do further answer, that they have no Means to do it, otherwise than by the immediate personal Consent of every particular Lender; which they cannot hope to obtain, in regard of these Obstructions following; which the Petitioners humbly present, together with this their further Answer, as the Reasons thereof:

"1. That immediately before the Parliament, and sithence, divers great Sums for the Service of the King and Kingdom have been already lent by the Citizens of London, beside the fifty thousand Pounds for the Supply of Ireland in particular; a great Part whereof the Lenders were compelled to borrow, and cannot to this Day repay.

"2. That such Part of those Monies as are already due to the Citizens from the Parliament, and should have been repaid out of the Poll-Money and Subsidies, is not yet done, because there is not any considerable Sum come in from the Country, as was expected, to satisfy the same.

"3. That the said fifty thousand Pounds lent for Ireland was hastened and speedily paid, within near about two thousand Pounds, upon this Ground then urged by the Parliament; that, if it were forthwith lent, it might be of more Use to preserve that Kingdom, than the Loan of two hundred thousand Pounds could be, if deferred but six Weeks; yet no considerable Forces are sent thither to this Day. And we find that Men will not be willing to lend any Thing, till they be assured that a good Strength be sent thither, with full Commission to relieve Londonderry, and other Parts of that Kingdom.

"4. The general Withholding of very great Sums of Money from the Petitioners, and many others, which Monies have been long due, not only from Chapmen and other Debtors in England, but from very many in Ireland, (who owe

"owe many hundred thousands of Pounds to the "Citizens of London) doth render divers Persons,
"of good Estates and Credit, hardly able to go
"on with Trade, or pay their Debts, and main"tain their Charge.

"5. The brotherly Officers of Scotland to send
"ten thousand Men into Ireland, not yet so ac"cepted as to produce any Relief to that bleeding
"Kingdom, while yet our Brethren are daily mar-
"tured there, discourageth most Men from lend"ing any Money, were they ever so able.

"6. The not passing the Bill for pressing of "Soldiers here, whereby such Forces as are re"quisite might be timely sent from hence into "Ireland, puts many Men into Fears; that there "may be some Design rather to lose that King"dom, and to consume this in the losing of Ire- "land, than to preserve either the one or the "other; for that it cannot be conceived, that the "Rebels (being grown so powerful) will be sup"pressed by Volunteers.

"7. The slow Issuing of Commissions to those "who, being in Ireland, or going thither, are "willing to enter the Field against the Rebels,
"disables them from doing any effectual Execu"tion upon the Enemy, unless in their own De"fence; and so all the Monies that have been,
"or may be sent thither, are exhausted to main"tain our Forces to do little or nothing worthy "of them, rather than employed to chastise the "Rebels, and to reduce them to Obedience; by "Means whereof, the Number and Power of the "Rebels are greatly increased, divers Castles and "Towns are by them taken, much Protestant
"Blood is daily spilt, many thousand Families
"destroyed, the malignant Part of Papists and "their Adherents here are encouraged, and those "Rebels so much emboldened, that they boast
"they will extirpate the British Nation there,
"and then make England the Seat of War.

"8. The not disarming of Papists here in Eng- "land, after many Discoveries of their Treache-"ries and bloody Designs upon the Parliament
"and Kingdom; the great Decays of Fortifica"tions, Block-houses, and other Sea-Forts; the "not managing of them, nor furnishing them
"with Ordnance and Ammunition; the not plac"ing all of them in such Hands in whom the "Parliament may confide; and the not settling
"this Kingdom in a Posture of Defence, in Times "of so many Fears and Jealousies of foreign In"vasions and intestine Conspiracies; the not re"moving the present Lieutenant of the Tower,
"and putting such a Person into that Place as "may be well approved of by the Parliament,
"notwithstanding the earnest Petitions exhibited
"to this honourable House for that Purpose,
"which hath produced a Forbearance to bring "Bullion into the Tower in this Time of "Scarcity of Monies; all which cannot but "overthrow Trading more and more, and make "Monies yet more scarce in the City and Kingdom.

"9. The King's Ships, that ought to be a "Wall of Defence to this Kingdom, and a Con"voy to the Merchants, (for which Tonnage and "Poundage was granted) are not fitted and em"ployed as the present Condition of this King"dom and Ireland requires, but some of them "for the conveying away of Delinquents, who

"durst not abide the Test of the Parliament, to "the great Encouragement of the rest of the ma"lignant Party here; who, when their Designs
"and themselves be detected, know how to escape
"the Hand of Justice through the Abuse of a "royal Conduct.

"10. The not questioning those many thou"sands of unknown Persons who are sheltered in "Covent-Garden, and thereabouts; which do not "employ themselves in any lawful Calling, and;
"it's very probable, lie in a Readiness to ad"venture upon some desperate Attempt, to the "endangering of the Welfare, Peace, and Safety "of the King's Majesty, Parliament, and City.

"11. The Misunderstanding between the King "and the Parliament, the not vindicating the "Privileges of Parliament; the not suppressing
"of Protections, the not punishing of Delin"quents, and the not executing of all Priests and "Jesuits legally condemned, while others, con"trary to Privilege of Parliament, have been "illegally (as the Petitioners conceive) charged "with Treason, to the deterring of worthy Mem"bers from discharging their Duties, and to the "destroying of the very Being of Parliaments,
"do exceedingly fill the Minds of Men well-"affected to the Publick with many Fears and "Discouragements throughout the Kingdom;
"and so disables them from that cheerful Assis"tance which they would be glad to afford.

"12. By Means of the Premises, there is such "a Decay of Trading, and such Scarcity of "Money, (neither of which can be cured, till the "former Evils be removed) as it is likely, in a "very short Time, to cast innumerable Multi"tudes of poor Artificers into such a Depth of "Poverty and Extremity, as may enforce them
"upon some dangerous and desperate Attempts,
"not fit to be expressed, much less to be "justified; which they leave to the Wisdom "of this House speedily to consider and prevent.

"These are the Evils under which the Peti"tioners do exceedingly labour and languish,
"which they humbly conceive to have sprung
"from the employing of ill-affected Persons in "Places of Trust and Honour in the State, and "near to the sacred Person of his Majesty; and "that these Evils are still continued, by Means "of the Votes of Bishops and Popish Lords in the "House of Peers.

"And now, that the Petitioners have faithfully
"represented the true Reasons which do really "enforce them to return this Answer, most of "which have been formerly offered to this ho"nourable House in sundry Petitions; and that "they have done all that in them lies (even be"yond all Precedent) to serve the King, Par"liament, and Kingdom; they humbly crave
"Leave to protest before God, and the high "Court of Parliament, that if any further Mi-"series befall their dear Brethren in Ireland, or if "any Mischief break in upon this Kingdom, to "the endangering or disturbing thereof, it ought "not to be imputed to the Petitioners, but only "to such as shall endeavour to hinder the effectual
"and speedy Cure of the Evils before-recited,
"that so much disable and discourage the Peti"tioners from doing that which by this honou"rable House is desired of them."

the Parliament.

In the Year 1641, twelve Bishops were accused by the House of Commons of high Treason, ten of which were committed to the Tower, where they continued about four Months.

Some time after, the King being denied Admittance into his Town and Fortrefs of Hull, by Sir John Hotbom, the Governor, whose Conduct in that Respect being highly approved of by Parliament, it occasioned his Majesty to regard the same as a Declaration of War; wherefore he issued out Commissions of Array for raising Troops in divers Counties; one whereof being sent to the Lord-Mayor of this City, he endeavoured by Proclamation to put the same in Execution; which the Commons were no sooner acquainted with, than they made an Order for his Commitment to the Tower of London, and forthwith began to provide for their Security, by raising of Troops, and causing the Militia in the several Counties they confided in to be disciplined; and the following Order of Parliament was made in Respect to the City Militia:

"That the Persons intrusted with the Ordering of the Militia of the City of London shall have Power to draw the Trained-Bands of the City into such usual and convenient Places within three Miles of the said City, as to them from Time to Time shall seem fit, for the Training and Exercising of the Soldiers; and that the said Soldiers upon Summons shall from Time to Time appear, and not depart from their Countours, without the Consent of their Officers, as they will answer their Contempt to the Parliament."

About the same Time, the King receiving Advice of the Parliament's having applied to the City for large Supplies of Men and Money, it occasioned his sending the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London:

"Trusty and Well-beloved, we greet you well.
Whereas we have received several Informations of great Sums of Money endeavoured to be borrowed of our City of London, by some Directions proceeding from both our Houses of Parliament; and likewise that great Labour is used to persuade our Subjects to raise Horse, and furnish Money, upon Pretence of providing a Guard for our Parliament: These are to let you know, That (notwithstanding any scandalous Votes, which have presumed to declare our Intention of levying War against our Parliament, and to lay other Aspersions upon us, so fully disavowed by us in the Presence of Almighty God, by our several Answers and Declarations) all our Desires and Purposes are for the publick Peace, and that we have not the least Thought of raising or using Force, except we are compelled to it for the Defence of our Person, and in Protection of the Law; and therefore we must expect, that you suffer not yourselves to be misled by such vain and improbable Suggestions; and do declare, That if you shall lend any Sums of Money toward the Relief of Ireland, (to which we have contributed all the Assistance could be desired of us, which way soever the Money given and raised to that Purpose is disposed) or towards the Payment of our Scots Subjects, we shall take it as an acceptable Service at your Hands;

but if upon general Pretences, contrived by a few factious Persons against the Peace of the Kingdom, you shall give or lend any Money, provide or raise any Horses or Arms towards the raising such a Guard, we shall look upon it as raising Force against Us, and to be done in Malice and Contempt of Us, and our Authority.

"And we do therefore straitly charge and command you to publish this our Letter to the several Masters and Wardens of the several Companies, that they may be assured, that such Money, as they shall lend out of their good Affection to the Kingdom, may be only employed for Ireland or Scotland, and not toward such Guards, which (in Truth) are intended by the Contrivers of that Design (though we believe many honest Men, seduced by them, do not yet see their End) to be employed against us: And if you and they shall herein fail punctually and severally to observe our Commands, we shall not only proceed against the several Companies for deceiving the Trust reposed in them, but against the particular Persons, as Contemners and Opposers of our Authority, and of the Law of the Land, in the most exemplary Way the known Law of the Land shall prescribe to us; and shall be compelled to question the Charter of your City, which we are willing yet to believe (notwithstanding the barbarous and insolent Demeanour of the meaner and baser Sort) in a good Degree to continue loyal to us. And of your Obedience to these our Commands we do expect and require a full Account, and of the Names of such Persons who shall oppose the same. Hereof fail not, as you will answer the contrary at your Peril.

"Given at our Court at York, the fourteenth Day of June, in the eighteenth Year of our Reign, 1642."

The Parliament having taken this Letter into Consideration, it occasioned their making the following Declaration concerning the same:

"Whereas in a Paper inscribed, To our Trusty and Well-beloved, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of the City of London, dated the fourteenth of June, 1642, it is affirmed, That great Labour is used to persuade his Majesty's Subjects to raise Horse, and furnish Money, upon Pretence of a Guard for the Parliament, but in Truth to be employed against his Majesty: The Lords and Commons do declare, That the Design of those Propositions is, as was formerly declared, to maintain the Protestant Religion, the King's Authority and Person in his Royal Dignity, the free Course of Justice, the Laws of the Land, the Peace of the Kingdom, and Privileges of Parliament, against any Force which shall oppose them.

"And they further declare, That as the Forces already attending his Majesty, and the Preparation which his Majesty is now making of Arms, Horse, and Ordnance, within this Kingdom and without, at first coloured under Pretence of a Guard, do evidently appear to be for some great and extraordinary Design, so they give just Cause of Fear and Jealousy to

"the Parliament; and do fully justify those "Votes, of the King's Intention of levying War "against the Parliament, to be altogether free
 "from any Imputation of Scandal, as is injuri"ously cast upon them by that Paper: For, so "long as his Majesty shall continue those Levies
 "and Preparations, the Lords and Commons
 "having been so often threatened and reviled
 "for their Proceedings about Hull and the Mili"tia, so necessarily undertaken for the Good
 "and Peace of the Kingdom, they cannot be "secured by his Majesty's solemn Protestation
 "alone, expressed in this and other Declarations, "that all his Desires and Purposes are for the "Publick Peace, and that he hath not the least "Thought of using Force, except he be com"pelled to it for the Defence of his Person,
 "and Protection of the Laws; seeing his Ma"jesty, in a Declaration published at Heworth-
 "More, doth interpret the Protection of the "Laws in such a Manner, as giveth just and "full Occasion to believe, that, by protecting
 "the Laws, his Majesty intendeth Force upon,
 "or against those who shall submit to the Ordi"nance of the Militia; and because it appears "by divers Expressions and Proceedings of his "Majesty, he hath discovered an Intention of "making some Attempt upon Hull: In both
 "which Cases they do declare, That whatsoever
 "Violence shall be used either against those that "exercise the Militia, or against Hull, they can"not but believe it as done against the Parlia-
 "ment.

"And whereas the Houses have upon Loan
 "received great Sums of Money for the Service "of Ireland from the Companies of London, (for "which they give them great and hearty Thanks)
 "they do declare, That these Sums shall be dis"pended, as the former have been, to that only
 "Service, notwithstanding any Insinuation, lay"ing an Aspersions upon them, as if they had "done otherwise. Further, whereas it is declar"ed, to the great Reproach of the Parliament,
 "That the Sums desired towards the raising of "Horse and Arms are contrived upon general
 "Pretences, by some few factious Persons; we "leave it to the World to judge, how it is pos"sible the Houses should have all their Members,
 "seeing divers of them are by his Majesty sum"moned to York, and there, contrary to the Law
 "of the Land, and Privileges of Parliament,
 "detained, nay, protected from the Justice of
 "both Houses.

"And secondly, how that can possibly be cal"led a Faction, which is done by both Houses of "Parliament, the greatest Court of England, and "the most faithful Council his Majesty hath?
 "But at such Language as this they wonder not,
 "considering by what wicked Counsel his Ma"jesty's Affairs are guided, and by what malig"nant Spirits his Majesty's Affections to the Par"liament of late have been misled.

"Both Houses, well weighing the Premises, do "forbid any Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, or other "Officers whatsoever, to publish or spread that "Paper, as they will answer their Contempt to
 "the Parliament; and do assure themselves,
 "that neither his Majesty's Commands, nor his
 "Threats, will withdraw or deter Men, well-

"affected to the Publick, from doing their Duty,
 "in contributing such Money, Horse, and Plate,
 "as will be necessary for the preserving the Be"ing of the Parliament, the Peace of the King"dom, and those other Ends before-mentioned,
 "for which they are desired: The dangerous and "mischievous Intentions of some about his "Majesty being such, that whatsoever is most "precious to Men of Conscience and Honour,
 "as Religion, Liberty, and Publick Safety, are "like to be overwhelmed and lost in the general
 "Confusion and Calamity of the Kingdom;
 "which will not only question, but overthrow
 "the Charter of the City of London, expose the "Citizens, their Wives and Children to Vio"lence and Villany, and leave the Wealth of "that City as a Prey to those desperate and ne"cessitous Persons.

"The Lords and Commons, as they hope by "this Means those horrid Mischiefs may be pre"vented; so those of the City which contribute "hereunto, (whereof none are so mean and
 "base, as to deserve the Reproaches cast on "them by that Paper) and all his Majesty's
 "good Subjects, may be assured, that, in doing "their Duty herein, they shall be protected and "secured in their Persons, Liberties, and Estates,
 "by the Power and Authority of both Houses
 "of Parliament, according to their former En"gagements, which they will ever faithfully per"form."

ing his Majesty's Commission of Array to be proclaimed in divers Parts of the City, preferred several Articles of Impeachment against him; for which he was, by the Sentence of the Peers, not only degraded from the Office of Mayoralty, but likewise for ever rendered incapable of bearing any Office, or receiving any further Honour; and also to remain a Prisoner in the Tower of London during the Pleasure of the House of Lords.

The Earl of Essex, being appointed Generalissimo of the Parliament Army, set out from London in great State, accompanied by many of the Members of both Houses, to his Head-Quarters at St. Alban's, and from thence to Northampton; where he put himself at the Head of his Army, consisting of above fifteen thousand Men. The Petition the Earl carried along with him from the Parliament to the King, was rejected by his Majesty, who now, by the great Increase of Men and Money, found himself in a Condition to face his Enemies, and, with that Intent, began his March towards London; which the Parliament receiving Advice of, in the utmost Consternation, they immediately ordered the London Trained-Bands to be in a Readiness, and all the Passages and Avenues leading to the City to be fortified with Posts, Chains, and Courts of Guard. The Terror of the Citizens on this Occasion was so great, that a prodigious Number of Persons of all Ranks, Ages, and Sexes, that were able to labour, willingly offered themselves to work, who by an unfeigned Application in digging, carrying of Earth, and other Materials, soon accomplished their Works of Fortification.

The Cavaliers or Royalists, willing to expose the Pusillanimity of the Citizens on this Occasion, made an opprobrious Ballad upon them, intitled, Round-headed Cuckolds, come dig.

The Epithet of Round-head, together with the Discipline of the Sword and Cudgel, were some time before conferred upon the City Rabble, by certain Half-pay Officers, for insulting the Court at Whitehall, as already mentioned.

Ibid.

In the mean time, the Earl of Essex, by an express Order from the Parliament, hastening his March after the King, both Armies met at Edgehill on the twenty-third of October, and fought a terrible and bloody Battle; of which Relations were published on both Sides, wherein each Party claimed the Honour of the Victory, as will in an especial Manner appear by the following Pieces:

On one Side, the Lord General, knowing of what great Consequence it was to keep up an Interest in the City, and that it was necessary at this critical Juncture to obviate any bad Consequences, which might follow to the Parliament, from any Insinuations of Advantage gained over their Forces by the Royalists, deputed Lord Wharton, Mr. Strode, the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Holland, and the Lord Sey, to represent the Issue of this Battle in the most favourable Circumstances, and to spirit the Citizens up to a more vigorous Opposition to the King's Forces. To whom the Lord Wharton, after declaring, "That it was the Lord General's particular Respect to this City, to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council, and all the Commons

"of this City, that they might be acquainted "with the Success of that Business, towards "which they themselves had been at so much
"Expence, &c. in the first Places apologizes
"for the Absence of many of the Parliament
"Forces from the Battle, by alledging, that they "were posted for the Preservation of the Coun"ties that were behind, and of this City; which,
"continued his Lordship, is the particular Thing
"in Care, and now under the Diligence of the "Lord General to preserve. And then he informs "them, that the King's Army came unexpected"ly upon that of the Parliament, down Edge-hill,
"on Sunday Morning about Seven o'Clock; and "that the Lord General was obliged, at a great "Disadvantage of Ground, and the Wind a"gainst him, to sustain their Attack with the "small Army of eleven Regiments of Foot, and "not quite forty Troops of Horse. And then,
"says he, Gentlemen, I shall tell you the worst as "well as the best, that you may know all; and "that, when you have known the worst, you "may find it in your Judgments, to give the "more Praise to God for his Mercy, after
"there was so much Probability of having such an "ill Success. After that we had shot two or three "Pieces of Ordnance, they began for to shoot
"some of theirs; and truly not long after, be"fore there was any near Execution, there were "three or four of our Regiments, which fairly "ran away, namely, Sir William Fairfax's Regi"ment, Sir Henry Cholmley's, Lord Mandevill's,
"and my own: But those of this City did us
"extraordinary Service. However, we killed Sir
"Edward Varney, the King's Standard-Bearer, and "took his Standard, which was raised up against "the Parliament; as also the King's General, Lord
"Willoughby, his Son, Colonel Lunsford, my "Lord Auberney, Sir Edward Stradling, Sir Ed"ward Munro, Colonel Vavasour, and several "other Persons of Quality and Distinction.
"About three thousand Men were killed, tho'
"we had not above three hundred of ours
"slain. And this was to be observed of God's "Providence in this Day's Work, That, though
"it began so improbably, yet before the Close "of the Day, which was only two Hours Space,
"the Engagement not beginning till about Four "o'Clock in the Afternoon, we had got the "Ground that they were upon, and we had "gotten the Wind; and the King, under the "Cover of the Night, first drew his Forces up
"the Hill, and before the Morning was march"ed quite out of Sight."—Mr. Strode (a Par"liament-Man) confirmed the Premises, and add"ed, "That the Brunt of the Battle had been "sustained, and the Victory was owing to the "Courage of the Regiment raised in Essex, ano"ther raised in London under the Command of "Mr. Hollis, and of Lord Breake's Regiment,
"who were ignominiously reproached by the "Name of Round-heads; and by these Round"heads did God shew himself a most glorious "God." And concludes, "I can say no more "to you in such a Cause as this is, that you have "undertaken with your Purfes, and with your "Persons. God hath shewed himself with us:
"Be you but courageous, and we need never "doubt it; and so we say all."—The Earl of

By Lord

Earl of Pembroke.

Earl of Holland.

Lord Say
and Seale.

Speeches, and then addressing himself more particularly to the Audience, said, "Gentlemen, "You have shewn yourselves like brave and noble Citizens: You have done it with that Nobleness and Alacrity, and with that Love to God, King, and Parliament, that none of your Ancestors before you never shewed more Love, nor Care, nor Zeal, nor performed that you have done better. I have only this to say to you, If the Times are such (not that I think there is any great Peril in the King's Army now) yet so far as they pretend to Victory, and threaten to carry on Hostilities with greater Vigour, you will find there is very good Cause for you to crown this Work, which must be by following it with the same Zeal, Love, Care, Nobleness, and Alacrity."—The Earl of Holland continued thus, "As God hath now begun to deliver you only by his Hand, and by his Power, he will expect that you, my Lord-Mayor, and Gentlemen of the City, will express such a Thankfulness to him for it, as now to make his Cause your Work, and to do it with your Hands boldly and with Courage. The King is determined to try every Method to force you to his Side, or to destroy the City, your Persons, and to prey upon your Fortunes. And truly, having those ill Intentions that they certainly have, it is the wisest Course they can take; for in your City is the Strength of the Kingdom indeed: It is not only the Life, but the Soul of it: If they can destroy you here, the rest of the Kingdom must all submit and yield, and in that Yielding must give over the Maintenance of all that is most dear to them. Therefore, if you will now consider how God hath shewed you first, that he hath kept the first Blow from you, by delivering of you indeed from such an imminent Danger, as it could not be believed it could have been recovered, but by himself, and by the Power of his Hand; this may give you Encouragement to pursue all Things that are for his Glory, and for the Defence of your Religion, and his Cause. I am confident, as you will do it with Thankfulness, and Duty, and Sincerity to him, so in Wisdom and Reason you will (seeing what Threatenings there are unto you, you will) defend yourselves, and your Families: Nature directs you to it, as well as Piety. We only recommend this to you, that you may but know it, and take it into your Thoughts, and into your Hearts; and then we are confident your Hearts will be raised with so much Piety, with so much Courage, and with so much Resolution, as you will defend yourselves, and, in defending yourselves, defend us, the Parliament, and the Kingdom. You may do it; you have Power; and we expect it from your Affections." The Lord Say and Seale then enforced the Premises in these Words: "My Lords and Gentlemen, That little that I have to say, shall not be to set forth your approaching Danger; but I shall rather apply myself to stir up your Spirits, to encourage you, and to settle this Opinion in you, That, if you be not wanting unto yourselves, which "cannot be imagined in this Cause, you will have no Cause to fear Danger. It cannot be doubted by that which you have heard, but that these malignant mischievous Counsellors, and these Men of desperate Fortunes that they have gathered to them, and into whose Hands they have put our King, that their Intentions are, that this rich glorious City should be delivered up as a Prey, as a Reward to them for their Treason against the Kingdom and the Parliament; and that your Lives should satisfy their Malice; your Wives, your Daughters, their Lust; and Religion itself, the dearest Thing of all others to us, should be made Merchandise of, to invite Papists, to invite Foreigners. Notwithstanding their Intentions, let no Man's Heart be discouraged: You have Power enough in your Hands to bring all this Wickedness upon their own Heads, through God's Blessing: If you will use your Hands, if you will hold them up to serve your God, to defend the true Religion of Almighty God, to defend your Lives, to defend this Kingdom and the Parliament, you need not fear any Thing that can be done by this broken Army, nor fear those Things that are threatened, nor those Things that are falsely buzzed abroad by a malignant Party in your City to amaze you: There is no Fear of Danger, but in Security, in sitting still: And therefore, if you will be stirred up (as I cannot doubt, we cannot imagine but you will) to do that, that every Man, both by the Law of God, and by the Law of Nature, in this Case will be induced to do; through God's Blessing, you shall both honour God, maintain the true Religion, save this Kingdom, save the Parliament, and crown your good Beginnings, that God hath pleased to shew himself unto us in. This is now not a Time for Men to think with themselves, that they will be in their Shops to get a little Money; this is a Time to do that, that you do: In common Dangers, let every Man take his Weapons in his Hand; let him offer himself willingly to serve his God, and to maintain true Religion. You may remember what God saith by the Prophet, My Heart is set upon these People, that are willing to offer themselves willingly upon the high Places: Let every Man therefore shut up his Shop, let him take his Musket, let him offer himself readily and willingly: Let him not think with himself, Who shall pay me? but rather think this, I will come forth to save the Kingdom, to serve my God, to maintain his true Religion, to save the Parliament, to save this noble City; and, when this Danger is overcome, I will trust the State, that they will have a Regard unto whatsoever may be fit, either for my Reparation in any Loss, or for my Reward. Do as you do in common Dangers: When there is a Fire, Men ask not who shall pay him his Day's Wages; but every Man comes forth of his Doors, helps to quench the Fire, brings a Bucket if he have one, borrows one of his Neighbour if he have not: When the Fire is quenched, then the City will regard to repay any Man that hath suffered all Day. That do you; every one bring forth his Arms, if he have it; if he have it not, let him borrow

"row Arms of his Neighbour, or he shall be "armed from the State: Let every Man arm
 "himself, and arm his Apprentices, and come "forth with Boldness, and with Courage, and
 "with Cheerfulness; and doubt not but God "will assist you; for, though you be concerned in "all you have, yet this is God's Cause; that "should be your Encouragement: For they are
 "Papists, they are Atheists, that come to de"stroy you: They come indeed, in the first and "principal Aim they have, to destroy Religion:
 "Papists are invited, they have Commissions:
 "Are these Men that should defend the Protestant "Religion, when they are Papists and Recu-"sants? Therefore, if that you shall come "forth, God will go forth with you, he will "fight for you, he will save you: But how?
 "He will not save you without yourselves. You "may remember what was said, Curse ye Meroth,
 "because they came not out to help the Lord against
 "the Mighty. He needs not your Help; but he "will use your Service, that he may bless you.
 "And therefore let every Man be encouraged;
 "let him shew his Readiness, let him shew his "Forwardness. Remember what the Scripture
 "saith, Hear, O Israel, God is with you, so long "as you are with him: The Lord will be with you
 "in this Cause, for it is his Cause; but then you "must shew yourselves ready to be with him."

As soon as these Speeches were notified to his Majesty, the King issued the following Proclamation:

Rush. Col.
vol. 3. p. 2.

The King's Proclamation, disavowing any bad intention against the City.

"Whereas, amongst other Acts used by the "Promoters of this horrid and desperate Re"bellion against Us, great Industry and Subtlety
 "hath been applied to corrupt our Subjects of "our Cities of London and Westminster; first by "engaging them in Factions and Tumults, to "awe the Members of both our Houses of Par"liament, who would not consent to their sedi"tious Designs; then by persuading them to "Loans and Contributions for the Maintenance "of the Army now in Rebellion against us, up"on Pretence that the same was raised for the "Defence of our Person, the Protestant Reli"gion, the Laws of the Land, and Privileges of "Parliament (whereas in Truth it is for the "Destruction of them all;) by their yielding
 "Obedience to, and executing their pretended "Ordinance of the Militia; and lastly, by infu"sion into them a desperate Sense of their "own Condition, and that we are so much in"censed against them for the Premises, that we "intend to plunder and give up the Wealth of "those our Cities, as a Prey to our Soldiers:

"We do hereby declare, That we are yet far "from being so much incensed against those our "Cities, as these Men desire to be believed, and "in Truth have endeavoured to make us; but "we believe, that those Tumults were contrived
 "by the Persons whom we have formerly accus"ed of that Practice, and raised out of the mean"est and poorest People of those our Cities and "Suburbs, without the Privy and Consent of "the best and substantial Citizens and Inhabi"tants; and that the Loans and Contributions "which have been since raised, (though they
 "have passed more generally than we expected "from the Duty and Sobriety of Men of For"tunes and Understanding) have been wrested

 "and extorted from them by Threats and Me"naces, and Fear of Plundering and Vio"lence.

"And therefore we do hereby offer our free
 "and gracious Pardon to all the Citizens and In"habitants of our said Cities of London and West- "minster for all Offences concerning the Premises
 "committed against us before the publishing of "this our Proclamation; except all those Per"sons, whom we have excepted in our Declara"tion of the twelfth of August; and except Al"derman Fulke and Captain Mantwaring; against "all which we shall proceed according to the "Rules of Law, as against Traitors and Stirrers
 "of Sedition against us: And we do assure them, "on the Word of a King, That no Violence
 "shall be offered by our Army, or any Part of
 "it, to any of them; not doubting but their "Demeanour will henceforward be such, that "we shall not be compelled to bring our Army "against them.

"Provided that this our Grace shall not ex"tend to any Person, who, after the publishing
 "of this our Proclamation, shall presume, by "Loan or Contribution, to assist the said Army
 "of Rebels to assemble and muster themselves in "Arms without Authority derived from us un"der our Hand, or to enter into any Oath of "Association for the Assistance of the Earl of "Essex, how speciously soever the same be pre"tended for our Safety; for since the Encounter
 "on Sunday the twenty-third of this Month,
 "where they used all possible Means and Malice
 "to have destroyed us, and where it pleased God
 "to give so us great a Victory over them, (though "with the Loss of many worthy Men) no Man
 "can be unsatisfied in the Mischief and Malice
 "of their Rebellion: And therefore we must

"Given at our Court at Ayns, this seven-and-"twentieth of October, in the eighteenth
"Year of our Reign, &c."

Since the Battle of Edgehill, and the King's March to Oxford, the Parliament, to the utmost of their Power, heartily endeavoured, not only to recruit, but likewise to increase their Army; and, for the more effectually raising Men in this City, gave great Encouragement to Apprentices to enlist in their Service, as will appear by the following Declaration:

Ordinance
of Parliament for enlisting
Apprentices.

"Whereas in Times of common Danger and "Necessity the Interests of private Persons
"ought to give way to publick, it is ordained "and declared by the Lords and Commons in "Parliament, That such Apprentices as have "been, or shall be lifted to serve as Soldiers,
"for the Defence of the Religion and Liberty
"of the Kingdom, his Majesty's Royal Person,
"the Parliament, and the City of London, their "Sureties, and such as stand engaged for them,
"shall be secured against their Masters, their "Executors, and Administrators, from all Loss
"and Inconvenience by Forfeiture of Bonds,
"Covenants, Infranchisement, or other Ways:
"And that, after this publick Service ended, the "Masters of such Apprentices shall be com"manded and required to receive them again
"into their Service, without imposing upon them "any Punishment, Loss, or Prejudice, for their "Absence in the Defence of the Common"wealth.

Masters indemnified.

"And the Lords and Commons do further "declare, That if it shall appear, that the Ma"sters of such Apprentices have received any "considerable Loss by the Absence of their "Apprentices, they will take Care that rea"sonable Satisfaction be made unto them out of "the publick Stock of the Kingdom, according "to Justice and Indifferency."

The King's Advance to Brentford.

Soon after the King, on his March towards this City, received Advice that Effex with his Army from London was marching against him; (but this Intelligence proved false; for Effex was then in the City, and only Part of his Army, which were quartered at Brentford, Alton, and Kingston, gave Birth to this Report;) wherefore he commanded Prince Rupert with Part of the Army to advance, (while the other Part thereof followed) in order to dispossess the Parliament Troops of Brentford, which they had fortified with a Rampart, and wherein was only Hollis's Regiment, who by a gallant Resistance defended themselves till joined by the Regiments of Brooks and Hampden; however, by a superior Force, they were, after a brave Defence, and great Loss, dislodged, and the Town possessed by the King's Troops.

Roth. Col.
vol. 3. p. 2.

This Attack was no sooner reported at London, by the Royal Artillery thundering against the Fortress, than an Express arrived, which confirmed the same. This dreadful News struck both the Parliament and City with such a Terror, that the former not only ordered the Earl of Effex, their General, forthwith to repair to the Army; but they likewise sent a Committee into the City for the Trained Bands to be got ready with the utmost Expedition to join Effex, for their mutual Security: Wherefore Orders were instantly given for the immediate March of all the City Militia; who assembling with an amazing Expedition; cheerfully marched out under the Command of their Major-General Skippon, who with short Speeches endeavoured to encourage them in Words to this Effect: Come, my Boys, my brave Boys, let us pray heartily, and fight heartily; I will run the same Fortunes and Ha- zards with you; remember the Cause is for God, and for the Defence of yourselves, your Wives and Children: Come, my honest, brave Boys, pray bear- tily, and fight heartily, and God will bless you.

NUMB. XXXI.

Skippon having joined Effex at Tarnham-Green, his Army by this potent Reinforcement was increased to above twenty-four thousand Men; which, being formed in Order of Battle, stood fronting that of the King's for several Hours, which, according to a celebrated Author, was not a fifth Part of their Number: However, it was not thought fit to attack them, though so great a Disparity; adding, That he had been told by many knowing Men, and by some who were then in the City Regiments, that, had the King advanced and charged that vastly superior Body, they would in all Probability presently have given Ground, seeing the great Numbers in each Regiment so well-affecting to the Royal Cause.
However this might be, the Behaviour of above two hundred Citizens on Horseback, whose Curiosity led them to see the two Armies, and who, upon the least Advance or Shout of either, would clap Spurs to their Horses, and with the greatest Expedition gallop off towards the City, so intimidated many of the Parliament Army, that they privately made off, and returned to London:
And both Armies parting without an Engagement, the King's retreated toward Kingston, and Effex's towards the City.

Some Time after, a Letter from the Hague to Mr. Secretary Nicholas was intercepted, containing an Account of the great military Preparations carrying on in Holland and Denmark for the Support of the Royal Cause. The Parliament, though indefatigable in providing against all Emergencies, yet this Letter served as a Spur to quicken their Resolutions, as will appear by the following Order of the Lord-Mayor:

"Whereas certain Letters from foreign Parts,

"intercepted, and brought unto the Parliament,
"discovering the desperate Designs and Plots of "Papists, and others ill-affected, in collecting the destructive War carrying on between him and the Parliament, whereby the Commerce of London, with other Parts of the Kingdom, was greatly and particularly obstructed, was graciously pleased to issue a Proclamation, in which, having premised the Damage and Mischief of such Obstruction, he declares,

"Given at our Court at Oxford, the eighth
"Day of December, in the eighteenth Year
"of our Reign."

The Citizens of London suspecting, that the King was of Opinion, that they were the only Persons that obstructed an Accommodation between him and his Parliament, to wipe off all Suspicion in that Respect, as well as to vindicate their own Innocence, sent the following Petition to Oxford, by a Deputation from the Common-Council of two Aldermen and four Commoners:

"Shewing,

"That the Petitioners, your Majesty's most "humble and loyal Subjects, being much pierced "with the long and great Divisions between your "Majesty and both your Houses of Parliament,
"and with the sad and bloody Effects thereof, both
"here and in Ireland, are yet more deeply wound"ed by the Misapprehension which your Majesty
"seemeth to entertain of the Love and Loyalty
"of this your City, as if there were some Cause "of Fear, or Suspicion of Danger to your Royal "Person, if your Majesty should return hither;
"and that this is made the unhappy Bar to that "blessed Reconciliation with your great and "most faithful Council, for preventing that De"solation and Destruction which is now most ap"parently imminent to your Majesty and all "your Kingdoms.

"For Satisfaction therefore of your Majesty,
"and clearing of the Petitioners Innocency, they "most humbly declare, (as formerly they have "done) That they are no way conscious of any
"Disloyalty, but abhor all Thoughts thereof;
"and that they are resolved to make good their "late solemn Protestation and sacred Vow made "to Almighty God; and with the last Drop of "their dearest Blood to defend and maintain "the true Reformed Protestant Religion; and,
"according to the Duty of their Allegiance, your "Majesty's Royal Person, Honour, and Estate, "(whatsoever is maliciously and falsely suggested
"to your Majesty to the contrary) as well as "the Power and Privileges of Parliament, and "the lawful Rights and Liberties of the Sub"ject; and do hereby engage themselves, their "Estates, and all they have, to their uttermost
"Power to defend and preserve your Majesty,
"and both Houses of Parliament, from all Tu"mults, Affronts, and Violence, with as much "Loyalty, Love, and Duty, as ever Citizens "expressed towards your Majesty, or any of "your Royal Progenitors, in their greatest "Glory.

"The Petitioners therefore, upon their bended
"Knees, do most humbly beseech your Majesty
"to return to your Parliament, (accompanied "with your Royal, not Martial Attendance;)
"to the End that Religion, Laws, and Liberties
"may be settled and secured, and whatsoever
"is amiss in Church and Commonwealth re"formed by their Advice, according to the fun"damental Constitution of this Kingdom; and "that such a Peace may thereby be obtained, as "shall be for the Glory of God, the Honour
"and Happiness of your Majesty and Posterity,
"and Welfare of all your loyal Subjects, who
"(the Petitioners are fully assured, whatsoever is "given out to the contrary) do unanimously de-
"fire the Peace herein expressed."

The King, having seriously considered this Petition, returned the following Answer by one of his Domesticks; supposing that, if it were sent by the City Deputies, it might probably either be suppressed, or not communicated in the Manner he desired. However, it being shewn to the said Deputies, they unanimously declared, That his Majesty had acted very wisely in sending it by one of his own immediate Servants, which was much more proper than by them: Yet nevertheless they faithfully promised, that at their Return to the City they would procure the Calling of a Common Hall, or General Convention of the Citizens, for its Reception; which the Parliament receiving Intelligence of, occasioned their making an Order, That the Lord-Mayor should not presume to call a Common Hall, 'till he heard further from them on that Head: For which Reason, tho' the Royal Messenger frequently solicited the Lord-Mayor to assemble the Citizens, for the Delivery of his Message; yet a considerable Time elapsed, before he could obtain that Favour. However, at last a Day being appointed, a Committee of Lords and Commons attended at the Reading of the said Answer, thereby to prevent its having an Effect contrary to what they intended; which, by the artful and elaborate Speeches of the Earl of Manchester and Mr. Pym, was not only easily accomplished, but likewise the governing Part of the City intirely secured to the Parliament, without shewing the least Regard to the Answer, which was as followeth:

Ibid.

The King's
Answer.

"That his Majesty doth not entertain any Misapprehension of the Love and Loyalty of his City of London; as he hath always expressed a singular Regard and Esteem of the Affections of that City, and is still desirous to make it his chief Place of Residence, and to continue and renew many Marks of his Favour to it; so he believes much the better and greater Part of that his City is full of Love, Duty, and Loyalty to his Majesty; and that the Tumults which heretofore forced his Majesty for his Safety to leave that Place, though they were contrived and encouraged by some principal Members thereof (who are since well known, though they are above the Reach of Justice) consisted more of desperate Persons of the Suburbs, and the neighbouring Towns, (who were misled too by the Cunning and Malice of their Seducers) than of the Inhabitants of that City. He looks on his good Subjects there, as Persons groaning under the same Burthen, which doth oppress his Majesty; and awed by the same Persons who begat those Tumults, and the same Army which gave Battle to his Majesty. And therefore, as no good Subject can more desire from his Soul a Composure of the general Distractions, so no good Citizen can more desire the Establishment of the particular Peace and Prosperity of that Place, by his Majesty's Access thither, than his Majesty himself doth.

"But his Majesty desires his good Subjects of London seriously to consider, what Confidence his Majesty can have of Security there, whilst the Laws of the Land are so notoriously despised and trampled under Foot, and the wholesome Government of that City (heretofore so famous

"over all the World) is now submitted to the arbitrary Power of a few desperate Persons of no Reputation, but for Malice and Disloyalty to him; whilst Arms are taken up, not only without, but against his Consent and express Command, and Collections publickly made; and Contributions avowed, for the Maintenance of the Army, which hath given him Battle, and therein used all possible Means, Treason and Malice could suggest to them, to have taken his Life from him, and to have destroyed his Royal Issue; whilst such of his Majesty's Subjects, who out of Duty and Affection to his Majesty, and Compassion of their bleeding Country, have laboured for Peace, are reviled, injured and murdered, even by the Magistrates of that City, or by their Directions.

"Lastly, What Hope his Majesty can have of Safety there, whilst Alderman Pennington, their pretended Lord-Mayor, (the principal Author of those Calamities, which so nearly threaten the Ruin of that famous City) Ven, Foulke, and Manwaring, (all Persons notoriously guilty of Schism and High Treason) commit such Outrages, in oppressing, robbing and imprisoning, according to their Discretion, all such his Majesty's loving Subjects, whom they are pleased to suspect but for wishing well to his Majesty.

"And his Majesty would know, whether the Petitioners believe, that the reviling and suppressing the Book of Common Prayer, (established in this Church ever since the Reformation) the discountenancing and imprisoning godly, learned, and painful Preachers, and the cherishing and countenancing Brownists, Anabaptists, and all manner of Sectaries, be the Way to defend and maintain the true Reformed Protestant Religion? That to comply with and assist Persons who have actually attempted to kill his Majesty, and to allow and favour Libels, Pasquils, and seditious Sermons against his Majesty, be to defend his Royal Person and Honour, according to the Duty of their Allegiance? Whether to imprison Mens Persons, and to plunder their Houses, because they will not rebel against his Majesty, nor assist those that do; Whether to destroy the Property, by taking away the twentieth Part of their Estates from them; and by the same arbitrary Power to refer to four Standers by of their own Faction, to judge what the twentieth Part is; be to defend the lawful Rights and Liberties of the Subject? And, if they think these Actions be Instances of either, whether they do not know the Persons before-named to be guilty of them all? Or, whether they think it possible, that Almighty God can bless that City, and preserve it from Destruction, whilst Persons of such known Guilt and Wickedness are defended and justified amongst them, against the Power of that Law, by which they can only subsist?

"His Majesty is so far from suffering himself to be incensed against the whole City, by the Actions of these ill Men, though they have hitherto been so prevalent, as to make the Affections of the rest of little Use to him; and is so willing to be with them, and to protest

"test them, that the Trade, Wealth, and "Glory thereof, (so decayed and eclipsed by "these publick Distractions) may again be the "Envy of all foreign Nations; that he doth
 "once more graciously offer his free and general
 "Pardon to all the Inhabitants of that City of "London, the Suburbs and City of Westminster, "(except the Persons formerly excepted by his "Majesty) if they shall yet return to their Duty,
 "Loyalty and Obedience.

"And, if his good Subjects of that his City of "London shall first solemnly declare, that they "will defend the known Laws of the Land, and "will submit to, and be governed by no other "Rule: If they shall first manifest, by defending "themselves, and maintaining their own Rights,
 "Liberties and Interests, and suppressing any "Force and Violence unlawfully raised against "those and his Majesty, and with their Power to "defend and preserve him from all Tumults,
 "Affronts and Violence:

"Lastly, If they shall apprehend and commit "to safe Custody the Persons of those four Men,
 "who enrich themselves by the Spoil and Op"pression of his loving Subjects, and the Ruin
 "of the City; that his Majesty may proceed
 "against them by the Course of Law, as guilty
 "of High Treason: His Majesty will speedily re"turn to them with his Royal, and without "his Martial Attendance, and will use his ut"most Endeavour, that they may hereafter enjoy
 "all the Blessings of Peace and Plenty, and will "no longer expect Obedience from them, than
 "he shall, with all the Faculties of his Soul,
 "labour in the preserving and advancing the "true Reformed Protestant Religion, the "Laws of the Land, the Liberty and Pro"perty of the Subjects, and the just Privileges of
 "Parliament.

"If, notwithstanding all this, the Art and In"terest of these Men can prevail so far, that they "involve more Men in their Guilt, and draw that "his City to sacrifice its present Happiness and "future Hopes, to their Pride, Fury and Ma"lice, his Majesty shall only give him this "Warning, That whosoever shall henceforward
 "take up Arms without his Consent, contribute "any Money or Plate, upon what Pretence of "Authority soever, for Maintenance of the "Army under the Command of the Earl of "Essex, or any other Army in Rebellion against "him, or shall pay Tonnage and Poundage, 'till
 "the same shall be settled by Act of Parliament;
 "every such Person must expect the severest "Punishment the Law can inflict; and in the "mean time his Majesty shall seize upon any "Part of his Estate within his Power, for the "Relief and Support of him and his Army,
 "raised and maintained for the Defence of his "Person, the Laws, and this his Kingdom:
 "And since he denies to his Majesty the Duty and "Benefit of his Subjection, by giving Assistance "to Rebels, which by the known Laws of the "Land is High Treason, his Majesty shall
 "likewise deny him the Benefit of his Protection;
 "and shall not only signify to all his foreign "Ministers, that such Person shall receive no Ad"vantage by being his Subject, but shall by all "other Ways and Means proceed against him, as "a publick Enemy to his Majesty and this

 "Kingdom.

"But his Majesty hopes, and doubts not, but "his good Subjects of London will call to Mind
 "the Acts of their Predecessors, the Duty, Affec"tion, Loyalty, and Merit towards their Princes,
 "the Renown they have had with all Posterity
 "for, and the Blessing of Heaven, which always "accompanied those Virtues; and will consider
 "the perpetual Scorn and Infamy, which un-
 "avoidably will follow them and their Children,
 "if infinitely the meaner Sort in Quality, and "much the lesser Part in Number, shall be able "to alter the Government so admirably esta"blished, destroy the Trade so excellently set"tled, and to waste the Wealth so industriously "gotten of that flourishing City: And then they "will easily gather up the Courage and Refo"lution to join with his Majesty in Defence of "that Religion, Law, and Liberty, which hitherto "hath, and only can make themselves, his Ma"jesty, and his Kingdom happy.

"For concurring with the Advice of his two "Houses of Parliament, which, with Reference "to the Commonwealth, may be as well at this "Distance, as by being at Whitehall, his Majesty
 "doubts not, but his good Subjects of London
 "well know how far (beyond the Example of his "Predecessors) his Majesty hath concurred with "their Advice, in passing of such Laws, by "which he willingly parted with many of his "known Rights for the Benefit of his Subjects,
 "which the fundamental Constitutions of this "Kingdom did not oblige him to consent unto,
 "and hath used all possible Means to beget a right
 "Understanding between them; and will there"fore apply themselves to those, who, by "making just, peaceable, and honourable Propo"sitions to his Majesty, can only beget that Con"currence."

The happy Effects this Answer might have produced, were unluckily prevented by the artful Management of the Earl of Manchester and Mr.
Pym, the former of whom addressed himself to the Citizens in the following Words:

"My Lord-Mayor and Gentlemen, you of "the City of London; This Assembly can never be "looked upon by any Members of both Houses
 "of Parliament, but there must be some Offer"ing of Gratitude made to you, both of Thanks "and Acknowledgment for your former large"hearted Expressions, both of Affection and "Care for the Preservation both of the Parlia"ment and Kingdom. The Occasion why my "Lords and these Gentlemen of the House of "Commons are come hither, is this: They have "read an Answer to an humble Petition of the "Lord-Mayor and Common Council and Citi"zens of London to his Majesty; in which An"swer they find many wounding Aspersions cast "upon Persons of very eminent Authority in your "City, and upon others of very great Fidelity
 "and Trust among you.

"This Answer they do find, as it is printed,
 "to agree with that which the Gentleman from "his Majesty hath here read; and they, owning "themselves equally interested (in all Things that "concern you) with you, have commanded this "Gentleman (Mr. Pym) to make some Obser-

Answer.

"various

"uations by way of Vindication both of the "Proceedings of both Houses of Parliament,
 "and of the Proceedings of the City, with this "Assurance, that they will never desert you,
 "but will stand by you with their Lives and For"tunes, for the Preservation of the City in gene"ral, and those Persons in particular, who "have been faithful and deserved well both of "Parliament and Kingdom; and they will pur"sue all Means, both with their Lives and For"tunes, that may be for the Preservation of this "City, and for the procuring of Safety, Happi"ness and Peace to the whole Kingdom."

This Oration was no sooner finished, than Pym began his Discourse as follows :

Rush Col.
vol. 3. p. 2.

Mr. Pym's
Speech against the King's Defence.

"My Lord-Mayor, and you worthy Citizens
 "of this noble and famous City of London, I am "commanded by the Lords and Commons, to "let you know, That in this Answer, which "hath been published to you, they do observe
 "many Things of great Aspersions upon the "Proceedings of Parliament, and very scanda"lous and injurious to many particular Members "of this City; whereupon they think it becomes "them, both in Tenderness of their own Ho"nour and Respect to you, to take away all these "Aspersions, and to let you know the Truth of "their Proceedings, which have been full of "Honour and Justice, as they stand in Relation "to their own Duty, and full of Humility and "Obedience towards his Majesty, and of Care "for the common Good, and so shall ever be.

"And they have commanded me to let you "know the true Answer to most of those Things "that are imputed either to the Parliament, or "to the City, by observing some Particulars of "this Book, which hath been read to you, and to "let you know the Proceedings in their own "native Condition, clear from those Misrepre"sentations, which make them appear in a Qua"lity much different from the Truth; which "before I enter into, I am to declare, as the "Sense of both Houses, that your Petition was "so full of Loyalty, Humility and Obedience,
 "that you might well have expected an Answer
 "of another Kind.

"The first Observation I am to make to you, is
 "this; That it is said here, that his Majesty
 "was enforced by Tumults to leave the Parlia"ment, and go from Whitehall, and to with"draw himself into those Courses which now he "hath taken.

"In answer thereunto, I am commanded to "tell you, That there was no Occasion given by "any Tumults rising out of the City, or the "Suburbs, which might justly cause his Majesty's "Departure; and you may very well remember,
 "that after his violent Coming to the Commons
 "House of Parliament in that unusual and un"heard-of Manner, (which was the Beginning "of these unhappy Differences) that the very "next Day his Majesty came into the City with"out any Guard; that he was present at the "Common Council, dined at the Sheriff's, and "returned back again, with manifold Evidences "of Fidelity on the Part of the City, and with"out any such Expressions as were unbecoming
 "the Majesty of a King, or the Duty of Sub"jects: That he resided divers Days at Whitehall,

"and afterward at Hampton-Court, Windsor, and "Places adjoining, with small Forces about him;
 "and yet never was any Attempt made, which "might give him any Apprehension of Fear.
 "By all which it is manifest, that this is an unjust
 "Aspersions cast upon this City, that any tumultu"ous Carriage of yours was the Occasion of his "Majesty's leaving the Parliament, and with"drawing himself to remoter Parts.

"It is affirmed, That the Government of your "City hath been managed by a few desperate
 "Persons, and that they do exercise an arbitrary "Power.

"In answer to which, the two Houses of "Parliament give you this Testimony, That you "have, in most of the great Occasions concerning "the Government of the City, followed their "Direction; and that Direction, which they have "given, and you have executed, they must and "will maintain to be such, as stands with their "Honour in giving it, and your Trust and Fide"lity in the Performance of it.

"It is objected, in the third Place, That Con"tributions have been publickly made for the "Maintenance of that Army, which did join Bat"tle with the King, and did, by all the Means that "Treason and Malice could suggest, endeavour
 "to take away his Life, and destroy his Issue.

"To this I am commanded to say, That the "Design of bringing up the English Armies, the "gathering together of the Cavaliers about White"hall, the violent coming to the House of Com"mons, the King's going into the North; and "raising Arms there, are clear Evidences that "Violence was first intended, and divers Practi"ces were made against the Parliament, before "they took any Course, or made any Prepara"tions to take up Arms for their Defence. For "the Danger of his Majesty's Person, they were "sorry for it, and did by divers humble Petitions
 "labour to prevent it.

"And as touching the Royal Issue, they have "sufficiently declared to the World their good "Affections towards them, by the Care they "have taken both for the Safety and Maintenance
 "of those who are left here.

"It is further expressed in this Answer, That "the King demands the Lord-Mayor, Mr. Al"derman Foike, Col. Ven, and Col. Mantwaring,
 "to be delivered up as guilty of Schism and
 "High Treason: Concerning which I am com"manded to tell you, as the Sense of both "Houses of Parliament, That this Demand is "against the Privilege of Parliament; (two of "them being Members of the Commons House)
 "most dishonourable to the City, that the "Lord-Mayor of London should be subjected to "the Violence of every base Fellow, be assault"ed, seized on, without due Process, or War"rant, which the Law doth afford every private "Man; and that you should be commanded to "deliver up your chief Magistrates, and such "eminent Members of the City, to the King's "Pleasure, only because they have done their "Duty in adhering to the Parliament, for the "Defence of the Kingdom; and that it is "against the Rules of Justice, that any Man "should be imprisoned upon such a general
 "Charge, when no Particulars are proved against
 "them;

“ them; and this you are to take Notice of, as “ the Answer to those Scandals, and to that Dif“ grace upon my Lord-Mayor, and the other “ Members of the City.

“ And I am further to tell you, That there is “ little Cause for his Majesty to make this De“ mand, considering that he himself doth by “ Force keep away many accused in Parliament, “ as my Lord Digby, and many more impeached “ of High Treason, besides divers other great “ Delinquents, that stand charged there for “ heinous Crimes; all which by Force are kept “ from the due Proceedings and legal Trial in “ Parliament.

“ It is alledged in his Answer, That my Lord-“ Mayor, and those other Persons named, are “ Countenancers of Brownists, and Anabaptists, “ and all manner of Sectaries.

“ To this I am commanded to say, That hereof “ there is no Proof: It doth not appear, that they “ give any such Countenance to Sectaries of any “ Kind whatsoever; and, if it did, his Majesty “ hath little Reason to object to it, while, notwith“ standing the Profession he hath often made, that “ he will maintain the Protestant Reformed Re“ ligion, he doth in the mean time raise an Army “ of Papiſts, who by the Principles of their Re“ ligion are bound (if Power be put into their “ Hands) to destroy and utterly to root out the “ Protestants, together with the Truth which “ they profess.

“ It is affirmed, That Men's Persons have been “ imprisoned, and their Houses plundered, be“ cause they will not rebel against his Majesty.

“ To this I am commanded to declare, That “ no Man's House hath been plundered, by any “ Direction of the Parliament, but that they have “ been very careful to restrain all such violent “ Courses, so far as they were able; and that “ they have never committed any Man, but such “ Men as by due Information they conceived to “ be seditious Persons, and like to trouble the “ Peace of the State.

“ It is objected further, That the Property of “ the Subject is destroyed by taking away the “ twentieth Part by an arbitrary Power.

“ To this they say, That that Ordinance “ doth not require a twentieth Part, but doth “ limit the Assessors, that they shall not go be“ yond a twentieth Part; and that this is done “ by a Power derived from both Houses of Par“ liament; the Lords, who have an hereditary “ Interest in making Laws in this Kingdom;
“ and the Commons, who are elected and chosen “ to represent the whole Body of the Common“ alty, and trusted for the Good of the People, “ whenever they see Cause, to charge the King“ dom. And they say further, that the same “ Law, that did enable the two Houses of “ Parliament to raise Forces to maintain and de“ fend the Safety of Religion, and of the King“ dom, doth likewise enable them to require “ Contributions, whereby these Forces may be “ maintained, or else it were a vain Power to “ raise Forces, if they had not a Power likewise “ to maintain them in that Service for which they “ were raised.

“ And to this Point I am commanded to add “ this further Answer; That there was little “ Reason for this to be objected on his Majesty's “ Behalf, when it is well known, that from the “ Subjects, which are within the Power of his “ Army, his Majesty doth take the full yearly “ Value of their Lands, and in some Cases “ more; that not only particular Houses, but “ whole Towns have been plundered by Com“ mand and Design; and that by Proclamations “ Men are to forfeit all their Estates, because “ they will not obey arbitrary Commands;

“ and this commonly practised by his Majesty,
“ and on his Part; and therefore there was little “ Reason to charge the Parliament with so ne“ cessary and moderate a Contribution as the “ twentieth Part.

“ It is declared, That the King expects to be “ kept from Tumults and Affronts.

“ Upon which I am commanded to observe, “ That his Majesty's Expressions in his Answer “ tend to the making of a Division in this City, “ and to the raising of a Party, which may make “ some Disturbance in that orderly Govern“ ment, which is now established; both which “ will certainly prove equally destructive to “ him and both Houses of Parliament; and “ more prejudicial to his quiet Abode here, than “ any thing that hath ever been acted by the “ Houses of Parliament, or the present Gover“ nors of the City.

“ They observe further, That in this Answer “ his Majesty doth profess, that he will seize upon “ the Estates of those who shall contribute any “ thing towards the Maintenance of the Parlia“ ment's Army, and will put them out of his Pro“ tection, and by his Ministers in foreign States “ will take such Course, that they may be proceed“ ed against as Enemies; that is, destroyed and “ spoiled.

“ To which the Lords and Commons do de“ clare, That this is an Excess of Rigour and “ Injustice beyond all Example, that particular “ Men should lose their private Estates here “ without Law, or judicial Proceeding; and “ that our Prince, who owes Protection to the “ Kingdom, as well as to particular Persons, “ should suffer the Wealth thereof to be robbed
“ and spoiled by foreign States; upon due Con“ sideration whereof, they hope his Majesty will “ be induced by better Counsel to forbear the “ Execution, than that by which he hath been “ persuaded to publish such a Resolution.

“ Besides these Observations out of the An“ swer, I am to observe one out of a Narrative “ that was received from the Common Council, “ That the King did declare, that he would send “ some Messengers here to observe your Carriage “ in the City, and what was done amongst you.
“ The Parliament have just Cause to doubt, that “ these will be Messengers of Sedition and Trou“ ble, and therefore desires you to observe them,
“ and find them out, that they may know “ who they are.

“ I am, for a Conclusion, to commend to your “ Considerations, That you see, by the Proceed“ ings to which the King is drawn by the ill “ Counsel now about him, that Religion, the “ whole Kingdom, this glorious City, and the “ Parliament, are in great Danger; and that this “ Danger cannot be kept off in all Likelihood,
“ but

"but by the Army that is now on Foot; and "that the Lords and Commons are so far from "being frightened by any thing that is in this "Answer, that they have for themselves and "the Members of both Houses declared a fur"ther Contribution towards the Maintenance
 "of this Army, and cannot but hope and desire,
 "that you, who have shewed so much good Af"fection in the former Necessities of the State,
 "will be sensible of your own and of the Con"dition of the whole Kingdom, and add to that "which you have already done some further "Contribution, whereby this Army may be "maintained for all your Safeties."

These Speeches were received and entertained with a general Applause, and the Assembly concluded with the loudest Acclamations, and hearty Declaration, That they would live and die with the Parliament, and other Expressions of their sincere Attachment to both Houses; insomuch that all Thoughts of farther Address or Compliance with the King from the City seem to have been intirely laid aside; which occasioned his Majesty's sending the following Letter declaratory to the Sheriffs and City of London:

Roth. Coll.
 vol. 3. p. 2.

His Majesty's Letter to the Sheriffs of London.

"Trusty and Well-beloved, we greet you well.
 "We received lately a Petition from the Al"dermen and Common Council of our City of "London, by the Hands of Persons intrusted by "them for the Delivery, who found such a "Reception from us, as well manifested our Re"gard to that Body which sent them, though
 "we well knew by whom that Petition was fra"med, and where perused and examined, before "it was approved by those from whom it seem"ed to be sent: Yet we were so willing to enter "into a Correspondence with that our City, and "to receive any Address and Application from "them, according to that Invitation we had "given by our late Proclamation; and were so "glad to find, that there were yet some Hopes
 "they would look to the Peace and Happiness of "that City, and at last sever themselves from "any Faction or Dependence which might in-"fensibly involve them in those Calamities they did "not foresee; that we returned such a gracious
 "Answer thereunto, so full of Candor and Af"fection, that the meanest Inhabitant of that
 "our City, if he carefully consider the same,
 "will find himself concerned at it, and that we "have had an especial Care of his Particular.

"With this Answer of ours, we sent a Servant
 "of our own, in the Company of those who had "been so well used here, to require and see that "it might be communicated to the whole Body
 "of that our City, not doubting but that both
 "it and the Bringer should receive such Enter"tainment there, as might manifest their due "Regard of us, and of our Affection to them:
 "But, to our great Wonder, we find, that after "ten Days Attendance, and suffering ridiculous
 "Pamphlets to be published in our Name, as if "we retracted our former Resolutions (which "Pamphlets we have caused to be burned by the "Hand of the Hangman, as we also require you "to see done) instead of that Admission we ex"pected to our Messenger and Message, Guards
 "of armed Men have been brought to keep our "good Subjects, to whom that our Answer was "directed, from being present at the Reading

 "thereof; and Speeches have been made by "Strangers (who have been admitted to the City
 "Councils, contrary to the Freedom and Custom "of those Meetings) to blast our said Answer,
 "and to dishonour and slander us; which if our "good Subjects there shall suffer, we shall be "much discouraged in our desired Correspon"dence with that our City; and so by the Cun"ning and Power of those Incendiaries men"tioned in our Answer (Alderman Pennington,
 "to shew his great Loyalty to us, and his Fit"ness to be the Chief Magistrate of such a City,
 "being informed, that a desperate Person there
 "said, that he hoped shortly to wash his Hands
 "in our Blood, refused to send any Warrant,
 "or to give any Direction to any Officer for his "Apprehension; Yen, Fulke, and Mantwaring, who "have plunged that our City into such unspeak-"able Calamities, in which they would still keep "it, to cure their own desperate Condition) our "good Subjects there are not suffered to receive
 "our gracious Answer to that Petition: We "have therefore thought fit to write these our "Letters to you, requiring you the Sheriffs of "our said City to take care for the publishing
 "that our Answer (which we herewith send you)
 "to our good Subjects of that our City.

"And our Pleasure is, That you the Masters
 "and Wardens of the several Companies of our "said City forthwith summon all the Members
 "of your several Companies, with all the Free"men and Apprentices (whose Hopes and Inte"rest are so much blasted in these general Dif-"fections) belonging thereunto, to appear at "your several Halls, where you shall cause our "said Answer, together with these our Letters,
 "to be publicly read; that all our good Sub"jects may clearly understand how far we have "been from begetting, how far we are from con"tinuing or nourishing these unnatural Civil "Diffentions, and how much it is in their own "Power to remove the present Pressures, and to "establish the future Happiness and Glory of that "famous City: And most seriously weigh every "Part of that our Answer, as well that which "carries Caution in it for the future, as Pardon "for what is past; for assure yourselves, for the "Time to come, we shall proceed with all Seve"rity against such who shall incur the Penalty of "the Law in those Points, of which we have given "them so fair a Warning in our said Answer.

"And whosoever shall not behave himself like "a good Subject in this our Kingdom, shall not
 "(if we can help it) receive the Benefit and Ad"vantage of being our Subject in any other;
 "but all foreign Princes shall know, that as "such Person hath parted with his Loyalty to "us, so he must not hope for any Security by "us; and to that Purpose we shall henceforward
 "have a very inquisitive Eye upon the Actions
 "of all our Subjects, that some Example may "be made, how easy it is for Us to punish their "Disloyalties abroad, who for a Time may avoid
 "our Justice at home.

"And to the End that none of our good Sub"jects of that our City may think themselves
 "bound to obey any of the Orders or Commands
 "of the pretended Lord-Mayor, (whom we "have and do still accuse of High Treason, and
 "con-

"conspiring to take our Life from Us) it is well known to those Citizens who understand the Charter of that City, (so amply granted by our Royal Progenitors, and so graciously confirmed by Us, and of which, We presume, our good Subjects there do still desire to receive the Benefit) that the said Isaac Pennington was never regularly elected, or lawfully admitted to be Lord-Mayor of that our City; that in truth Alderman Cordwell was by the Plurality of Voices chosen; and that this Man was never presented to, or admitted by us, in such Manner as is prescribed by their said Charter; neither had that Judge, who presumed to swear him, any more Colour of Law or Authority to administer such an Oath to him, than he hath to do the same To-morrow to any other Aldermen of the City.

"And We do therefore hereby declare the said Isaac Pennington not to be Mayor of that our City of London, and to have no lawful Authority to exercise the same, and that our good Subjects of that our City ought not to submit to any Orders, Directions or Command, which shall issue from him as Lord-Mayor of that our City; but that the same are void, and of none Effect. And We do once more require you the Sheriffs of our said City, and all other the Magistrates of the same, in which all our good Subjects of that City will assist you, that you cause the said Isaac Pennington, Ven. Fulke and Mattwaring, to be apprehended and committed to safe Custody; that We may proceed against them as guilty of High Treason, and principal Authors of those Calamities which are now so heavy upon our poor Subjects of that City, and, if not suddenly remedied, will in a short Time utterly confound a Place and a People lately of so flourishing an Estimation in all Parts of Christendom.

"And whereas We are informed, that one Brown, a Woodmonger, Tickburn, a Linnen-draper, and one Harvey, a Silkman, have exercised great Insolences and Outrages in that our City; and when many of our good Subjects there have assembled together in a peaceable and modest Manner, to consult about the Peace and Welfare of that City, the said mutinous and seditious Persons have presumed to lead Multitudes of armed Men against them; and by such Force have beaten, wounded and killed our good Subjects; our Will and Pleasure is, That if the said Brown, Tickburn and Harvey, or either of them, shall so far neglect our gracious Offer of Pardon, as still to engage themselves in those unwarrantable and seditious Courses, that our Sheriffs of London raise a Power to suppress the said Force, and that you, and all our Ministers of Justice, use your utmost Means to apprehend the said Persons, and to bring them to condign Punishment.

"And we do hereby declare, That it shall be lawful for any of our loving Subjects to resist and oppose the said Persons; and if they shall hereafter, in such a warlike Manner, endeavour to molest them, as they would do Rebels and Traitors: And we hope, that all our good Subjects of that our much-injured City of London do take Notice of our Grace and Favour towards them, in our so freely passing by and pardoning the Offences there committed against Us, as we have offered by our Proclamation, and our late Answer, and of our very earnest Desire to be with them, and to reside among them, for their Comfort, Support and Protection, if they shall, by first providing for their own Security; (in such Manner as we have directed them in our late Answer) give Us an Instance, that We may be safe there too.

"And that they do likewise observe, that, being by such Violence kept from them, We have done our utmost Endeavour to continue and advance the decayed Trading of that our City, by permitting and encouraging all Resort and Traffick thither; and therefore, if by the stopping of Carriages, and seizing Commodities by other Men, the Commerce and Correspondence be broken between that Place and our good Subjects of other Countries, they will impute that Mischief to the true Authors of it, and look upon Us only as not able to help them. Do but your Duties; and this Cloud, which threatens a present Confusion, will quickly vanish away; and you will enjoy all the Blessings of a happy Nation; to the which no Endeavour of ours shall be wanting."

This Letter was no sooner received, than the Sheriffs acquainted the Parliament therewith, who immediately thereupon made an Order to prevent its Publication. However, divers Masters of the City Companies proving refractory, were taken into Custody; and some Time after a Declaration was made by Parliament, justifying the Conduct of the Sheriffs in that Respect, and their ready Conformity to their Commands, in not reading the said Letter, for which they were indemnified from all Damages on that Account. This Proceeding seems to corroborate what has been elsewhere observed, that the greatest Part of the Citizens were averse to all Thoughts of a Reconciliation with the King, notwithstanding all his gracious Condescensions in their Favour.

There being but little Prospect of an Accommodation between the King and his Parliament, the Common Council, on the twenty-third of February, passed an Act for the better Defence of the City, by fortifying the same with Outworks at certain Places. It was also by the said Common Council enacted, That all the Passages and Ways leading to the City should be shut up, except those entering at Charing-Cross, St. Giles's in the Fields, St. John's Street, Shoreditch and Whitechapel; and that the exterior Ends of the said Streets should be fortified with Breast-works and Turnpikes, Musket-proof; that the several Courts of Guards, and Rails at the extreme Parts of the Liberty of the City, be fortified with Turnpikes, Musket-proof; that all the Sheds and Buildings contiguous to London-Wall without be taken down; and that the City Wall with its Bulwarks be not only repaired and mounted with Artillery, but likewise that divers new Works be added to the same at Places most exposed.

And, towards defraying the Expence of those great Works, no less than eight whole Fifteenths were granted by the same Authority, to be raised in the several Wards of the City. This Act of Common Council was soon after confirmed by the following Order of Parliament:

A PLAN of the City and Suburbs of LONDON as fortified by Order of PARLIAMENT in the Years 1642 & 1643.

Just.
Comm.
Comm.
Confirmed by Parliament.

"It is this Day (March the seventh) ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament, That the Lord-Mayor and Citizens of the City of London, for the better Securing and Safety of the said City, Suburbs, Parliament, City of Westminster and Borough of Southwark, shall have Power to intrench and stop all such Highways and Byways leading into the said City, as well within as without the Liberties, as they shall see Cause; and shall also have full Power and Authority, according to their Discretion, to fortify and intrench the Places aforesaid with such Outworks, and in such Places, as they shall think meet; and, for his and their Furtherance and Assistance, to call in all, or any Deputy-Lieutenants, Justices of the Peace, Bailiffs, Constables, and other Ministers, Officers, and other his Majesty's loving Subjects, to be aiding and assisting, as they will answer the contrary at their Peril.

Ibid.

"And it is further ordered, That the Deputy-Lieutenants, and Justices of the Peace for the Counties of Middlesex and Surrey, City of Westminster, and Borough of Southwark, or any three or more of them, within their several and respective Limits, shall have Power to impose upon the Inhabitants within the said Trenches and Fortifications, and without the Liberties of the said City, towards the Charges of fortifying the said Places as aforesaid, upon every House that shall be lett for, or may be valued worth five Pounds per Year, six Pence; and for every House of greater Rent, after the Proportion of two Pence in the Pound that the Tenant of the said House payeth, if he hold it at a Rack Rent, or otherwise, after the Rate the said House shall be valued to be worth; which Assessment shall be forthwith made and collected in all the Parishes, Precincts, and Liberties aforesaid, and paid to the Treasurer chosen, or to be chosen, by the Common Council of the City of London, to be disbursed as aforesaid; the said Money to be paid by the Tenant or Inhabitant where Houses are inhabited, who is to deduct the same out of his next Rent payable to the Landlords, if it be a Rack Rent; and by the Landlords, where Houses shall stand empty.

Ibid.

"And it is further ordered, That whereas the Common Council of London have, in this Time of imminent Danger, passed an Act for the fortifying of the City of London, and other Places above-mentioned; in Pursuance whereof, a Committee of Common-Councilmen and others are appointed, and have already proceeded in the said Fortifications, before this Ordinance could be effected; it is hereby declared, That their said Pursuance of that Act, and executing the same, is a good Service to the Commonwealth; and the said Parties, and all such Engineers or others that shall be employed by them, shall be by Power of Parliament saved harmless, both for what they have done, and shall do herein for Time to come."

This Order was no sooner published, than the Work was set about with the greatest Alacrity, and the same prosecuted with such an amazing Dispatch, that an earthen Rampart or Wall, with Bastions, Redoubts, &c. was in a short Time erected round the Cities of London and Westminster, and Borough of Southwark, as it appears in the Plan annexed.

However, the Parliament, to satisfy the long-ling Desires of many of the people in their Interest, proposed a Treaty for accommodating all Differences between the King and them; in order to which, they drew up Articles for a Cessation of Arms; yet, at the same Time, they passed an Order for a weekly Assessment throughout the Kingdom, whereby was imposed upon this City (exclusive of Westminster and the other Out-parts) the weekly Sum of ten thousand Pounds, which amounted to five hundred and twenty thousand Pounds per Ann. A Sum so exorbitant at that Time, that it is hardly credible.

On the other Side, Sir Nicolas Crispe, and divers other loyal Citizens of London, being willing to contribute all they could in Support of the Royal Cause, applied to the King for a Commission under the Great Seal, that, by Virtue thereof, they might, at a proper Season, be empowered to exert themselves in the King's Service; which his Majesty approving of, he granted them the following Commission:

"Charles, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our trusty and well-beloved Sir Nicolas Crispe, Sir George Stroude, Knights, Sir Thomas Gardiner, Knight, Recorder of London, Sir George Binion, Knight, George Edes, and Marmaduke Roydon, Esquires, Thomas Broom, Esquire, Peter Paggen, Charles Jennings, Sir Edward Charlton, Robert Abbot, Andrew King, William White, Stephen Belton, Robert Alden, Edmund Foster, Thomas Blinkborn, of London, Gentlemen; and to all such other Person and Persons, as, according to the true Intent and Purport of these Presents, shall be nominated and appointed to be Generals, Colonels, Serjeant-Majors, or other Officers, or of our Council of War, greeting.

"Whereas in our Cities of London and Westminster, and Suburbs thereof, our Borough of Southwark, and County of Middlesex, there are raised and continued great Numbers of military Forces, both Horse and Foot, who, under the Command of Robert Earl of Essex, as their General, and under the Conduct of divers others, pretending to derive their Authority from the two Houses of Parliament, have traitorously levied War, and rebelled against us their natural Liege Lord; and many of our Subjects have been seduced by false Informations, by the Practice of a few, who have been the Contrivers of these mischievous Plots, and have joined with them, either in Person, or by aiding of them with Men, Money, Horses, or other Things; and many of our good and loyal Subjects, over-awed by the Power of the Rebels, have been enforced to contribute to them for the Maintenance of this unnatural War; and others refusing, have been plundered and robbed of their Estates, and some committed to several Prisons, and others barbarously used, contrary to the Liberty of free-born Men, the Laws of the Land, and contrary to all Humanity: Of which Injuries and Calamities falling upon

The King's Commission to Sir Nicolas Crispe, &c.

"upon our good Subjects, we are very sensible, and desirous to give Relief to our good Subjects by all the best Means we can, and to resist the Violence and Insolence of the Rebels and their Adherents: We having no other End therein, but to preserve the true Protestant Religion in the Integrity and Purity thereof, to maintain the Laws of the Land, and the Liberty of the Persons, and the Property of the Estates of our Subjects, and the just Privileges of Parliament, have thought fit, for our better Service, to settle a Council of War in or about our City of London, who may take Things into their said Considerations, which may conduce best to this End, and to have such Commanders and Officers settled in the Places aforesaid, which may both raise and govern, and lead such Forces, as may be raised there.

"Know ye therefore, that we, reposing special Trust and Confidence in your Fidelities, Industries, and good Discretions, have made Choice of, nominated, and appointed you to be our Council of War for the said Cities of London and Westminster, and Suburbs thereof, our said County of Middlesex, and Borough of Southwark; and do hereby give and grant Authority to you, or any four of you, to make Choice of such other able and discreet Persons as you shall think fit to nominate, under the Hands and Seals of any four of you, which, with yourselves, shall make up, in all, the Number of one-and-twenty, and no more.

"And we do give and grant to you, or any four of you, Power and Authority, at such Times and in such Places as you shall think convenient, to assemble and meet together, and there to consult, advise, and resolve of all such Things, and of such Ways and Means, as you, or any four of you, shall think fittest, for the raising of Forces, both of Horse and Foot, either of the Inhabitants of the said Cities, County, and Borough, or adjacent Counties, or other Places, who will voluntarily associate themselves to that Purpose; and these Forces to arm, muster, conduct, order, lead, and govern, in the Places aforesaid, or in any the Counties adjacent or elsewhere, in such Manner as you yourselves, or such other able and fit Persons as you, or any four of you, shall appoint, according to these Presents, and shall think fit.

"And, the better to effect this our Service, we do further give and grant to you, or any four of you, Power and Authority, under your Hands and Seals, to make Choice of and appoint such a fit Person as you shall think meet, to be Captain-General of all the Forces thus to be raised, and such other Persons as you, or any four of you, shall in like Manner make Choice of and appoint, to be Colonels, Lieutenant-Colonels, and Serjeant-Majors over the said Forces, in such Manner and in such Places as you shall appoint; who, by Virtue thereof, and by Virtue of these Presents, shall have Power and Authority to do, execute, and perform all such Things, which to these several Offices and Employments, according to Law Martial, do belong.

"And we do hereby promise and grant, that with all convenient Speed, after we shall have Notice from you, or any four of you, under your Hands and Seals, of your Nomination of any Person or Persons to those several Places, we shall grant and confirm unto them, and every of them respectively, those several Places to which you have nominated them, as aforesaid, under the Great Seal of England, or otherwise, as shall be reasonably devised and required of us.

"And we do further by these Presents give and grant unto you full Power and Authority, by all such good Ways as you, or any four of you, under your Hands shall agree upon, to raise Money for the cloathing, arming, furnishing, and paying of all such Soldiers as shall be thus raised, and for the providing of all Ammunition and other Necessaries for the War; all which Money, upon a just Account, we do, for us, our Heirs, and Successors, promise, grant, and agree well and truly to repay, so soon as we shall be enabled thereunto, and in the mean Time to secure the same to those, who, for our Service, and by your Mediation and Industry, shall lend or disburse the same.

"And we do further by these Presents grant, that such Generals, Colonels, Lieutenant-Colonels, and other Officers, so by you nominated as aforesaid, shall have full Power and Authority, by Virtue of these Presents, to lead and order the Soldiers severally under their Charges, and with them to fight against our Enemies and Rebels, and them to slay and destroy, or them to save, according to the Martial Law or Course of War; for the doing of all which, this shall be to you, them, and every of them, a sufficient Warrant.

"Willing and commanding all such Officers and Soldiers, which by Virtue hereof you shall retain, to obey readily, and receive and accomplish your Directions, Commands, and Summons in all Things hereto appertaining or necessary to be done; as also all Mayors, Sheriffs, Justices of Peace, Commissioners of Army, and all other our Officers and loving Subjects, to be aiding and assisting, both to you, and to all such Officers and other Persons whom you shall appoint, under any four of your Hands and Seals, for the Furthering and Advancement of this our special Service; for which, this shall be to you, to them, and to every of them, a sufficient Warrant.

"In Witness whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness ourselves at Oxford, the 16th Day of March, in the eighteenth Year of our Reign."

This Commission being brought from Oxford to London by the Lady Aubigny, the Conspirators, in Pursuance thereof, entered into Consultation how to put the same the most effectually and expeditiously in Execution; when, after divers Meetings, they came to the following Resolutions:

- "1. To rescue the King's Children from the Custody of the Parliament.
- "2. To seize divers Members of both Houses of Parliament, the Lord-Mayor of London, and

But, before these Resolutions could be put in Execution, one Roe, Servant to Mr. Tomkins, one of the Conspirators, discovered the Conspiracy; whereupon Mr. Waller, Mr. Tomkins, Mr. Cbulloner, &c. were apprehended; the former of which, by the Dint of Rhetorick, preserved his Life; while both the latter were convicted, and executed upon Gibbets before their own Doors in Cornhill and Holbourn; and some on the same Account dying in Prison; others, against whom no Proof appeared, other than that of Malignancy, had their Estates confiscated.

Jour. Com. Coun. A.D. 1643

On the 27th of April the Common Council ordered the City Representatives to apply to Parliament for Leave to demolish the Crofs in Cheapside, and the superstitious Figures thereon. And, on the 10th of May, the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex put in Execution the Ordinance of Parliament passed on the 5th, for burning the Book of Sports by the Hands of the common Hangman in Cheapside.

The King, highly resenting the undutiful Behaviour of the Citizens of London towards him, and their sincere and hearty Attachment to the Parliament, his Enemies, and all Hopes of reclaiming them being vanished, it occasioned his publishing the following Proclamation:

The King's Proclamation, forbidding all Commerce with London.

"Whereas, out of our tender Care to our City of London, and in Hope to reduce them to their due Obedience to us, we, by our Proclamation, bearing Date at our Court at Oxford the 8th Day of December now last past, did declare our royal Pleasure to be, that there should be no Stop or Interruption to any of our loving Subjects, as they should travel to our City of London with any Cloths, Wares, or Merchandizes, but that they should freely and peaceably pass, without any Let, Trouble, or Molestation whatsoever; which Grace and Favour unto them have in these many Months wrought this contrary Effect, that, above all other Parts of this our Kingdom, a prevalent Faction of that City (which over-rules the whole) hath so far joined with and in that horrid Rebellion, that it hath denounced War against the whole Kingdom, by violently opposing all the possible Ways to Peace; and so that City, formerly famous for their Loyalty and Love to their Sovereigns, is now become the Head of that traiterous Faction, and the Receptacle of all such as are disaffected to our Government and the Laws of the Kingdom; and not only willingly consents and submits to all Burthens and Impositions laid upon them for the Support and Maintenance of the rebellious Armies raised against us, but maliciously, prosecutes and pursues all such who are but suspected to wish well to our Service.

"And when we, pitying the desperate and deplorable Condition of our People, were graciously pleased to desire a Treaty for an Accommodation, and propounded, that, whilst that Treaty should continue, there might be a Cessation of Arms, and a free Commerce for all our loving Subjects in all Parts of the Kingdom, that so, the Benefit of Trade and Commerce being enjoyed, our good People might be more in Love with Peace; yet this Motion thus proceeding from us was nevertheless by special Incitation from the City of London (which, by the Grace of our said Proclamation, enjoyed the said Advantages of the whole Kingdom) scornfully neglected by the Enemies to Peace, and all Intercourse interdicted to our City of Oxford, the present Seat of Residence for our Court and Army; and that Restraint is continued upon all those who are thought to be serviceable, or but well-affected to us.

"We therefore being thereunto enforced out of this Necessity, and finding that the Trade and Commerce of the Kingdom, which ought to be maintained for the publick Benefit of all our good People, is by this Means inverted only for the Advantage of those Places and Persons which cherish this Rebellion; the Goods and Merchandize of such, who are thought well-affected to us, being seized, when they are brought to London:

"We have thought it fit and reasonable to revoke and recall that our former Act of Grace and Favour, and by this our Proclamation we do publish and declare to all our Subjects, That whosoever of them, either in their Persons, shall from henceforth travel into the City of London, without Licence from ourself, or one of our principal Secretaries of State, the Generals or the Lieutenant-Generals of our Armies, or the Governors of any of our Towns, Castles, or Forts, or with their Goods, Cattle, Victual, or Merchandizes of any Sort whatsoever, shall from henceforth unto or for our said City of London, or Suburbs thereof, without our expresse Licence for the same, under our Sign Manual, shall adventure the same at their own Perils, we being resolved, by all possible Means, to seize the same; and that all those who, from any Parts of this our Kingdom, shall furnish or serve our said City of London, or Suburbs thereof, either by Sea or Land, with any Victuals, or other Provisions, or with any Merchandize to maintain them or their Trade, as long as they shall obstinately stand out in Rebellion against us, we shall esteem as Persons disaffected to us and to our Government, and as Aiders and Assisters to the Rebels, and shall accordingly deal with them and proceed against them; and that this Restraint shall continue upon them, until such Times as the Inhabitants of the said City, finding their Errors, shall return to their due Obedience to us; strictly commanding all the Officers of our

"Armies,

"Armies, and all other our Officers and Ministers, and loving Subjects, in all Places thro' which any Person, Goods, Cattle, Victual, or Merchandize shall pass or be conveyed towards the City of London, to apprehend the Persons, and seize and detain the Goods, until, upon speedy Notice to us, they shall receive our speedy further Directions; we hereby assuring them, that they shall receive Part of such Goods so seized, in Satisfaction and for their Reward. But for the continuing of the general Trade and Commerce of the Kingdom, and the Manufactures thereof, (which we desire to uphold and advance) we leave all our Subjects to trade freely in and unto all other Parts, and in and unto all other Ports or Havens of this our Kingdom, not being in actual Rebellion against us; and from those Ports to trade with their Merchandizes freely, into any other Parts wheresoever beyond the Seas, being in Amity with us, without any Restraint whatsoever.

In what

Clar. Hist.
Rebel.

The Lord-Mayor and Commonalty having received Advice from the House of Commons of the Approach of some of the King's Troops, the Common Council, on the 18th of July, made an Act for raising the Sum of fifty thousand Pounds by Way of Loan, on the Security of the City Seal, to be employed in Defence of the City. At which Time it was, by the same Authority, ordered, to move the Parliament for an Ordinance to compel all monied Men within the Bills of Mortality to advance Money on this Occasion, according to their respective Abilities.

Upon the Parliament's receiving Advice of the Reduction of the City of Bristol by the King's Troops, and the miserable State of their Army under the Earl of Essex, by martial and pestilential Events, they were struck with dreadful Apprehensions of the King's immediate Approach to London; insomuch that the House of Lords desired a Conference with the Commons, wherein they acquainted them with their Resolution of sending Propositions to his Majesty for Peace; which, being reported in the House of Commons, occasioned long and hot Debates, wherein the violent Party furiously inveighed against the Design, in which they were seconded by the London Divines, who, the Sunday after, from their Pulpits, founded an Alarm of Ruin and Destruction to the City, if Peace was now offered to the King; and the more to incense the Citizens against all Terms of Accommodation, Papers were stuck up in all publick Places of the City, requiring the well-affected to rise as one Man, in order to go to the House of Commons next Morning; for that the malignant Party had outvoted the good, and, if not prevented, would speedily clap up a Peace.

Ibid.

The Citizens prepossessed with these Notions, Sir Isaac Pennington, the Lord-Mayor, summoned a Common Council to meet at Guildhall, where the following Petition, intitled, The humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled, was presented to the House of Commons:

"That your Petitioners having heard, that such Propositions and Offers have been lately sent from the House of Peers to this honourable House, which (as we greatly fear) if yielded unto, would be destructive to our Religion, Laws, and Liberties; and finding already by Experience, that the Spirits of all the well-affected Party in the City and Counties adjacent, that are willing to assist the Parliament, both in Person and Purse, are much dejected thereat, and the brotherly Assistance from Scotland, as well as the raising and maintaining of Forces ourselves, thereby likely to be retarded; (all which the Petitioners refer to your serious Consideration;) and, considering our present sad Condition lies upon us in a special Manner, thro' the incensed Patience of the Almighty, by Delay and Want of Execution of Justice upon Traitors and Delinquents, and having yet an Opportunity afforded us to speak, our Desires are,

City Petition against an Accommodation.

"That you would be pleased so to persist in your former Resolutions, whereupon the People have so much depended, and when you have so deeply engaged yourselves, (tho' you should perish in the Work) that Justice may be done upon Offenders and Delinquents; and that since we are as willing as ever to expose what we are, and have, for the crowning of so good a Cause, you will be pleased, by speedy passing the Ordinance hereunto annexed, or one to this Effect, to put us into a probable Way for our and your Defence; wherein your Petitioners will, by the Blessing of God, never be wanting, but will ever pray."

With this Petition the Lord-Mayor, attended by a vast Concourse of Citizens, repaired, on the 7th of August, to Westminster, and presented the same to the House of Commons; but the delivering it in such a tumultuous Manner so intimidated many of the Members, that they withdrew for Fear; while others, out of Dread, joined the most forward in returning the City Thanks for their Petition, Advice, and Courage, and rejected the Propositions for Peace. However, to prevent such riotous Proceedings for the future, the Commons recommended it to the Lord-Mayor to take some effectual Course to obviate the same: Whereupon the Mayor, in Obedience to this Recommendation, published an Order, strictly enjoining all Persons within the City and Liberties thereof from appearing in unlawful Assemblies, or to print or disperse any Papers encouraging Insurrections, upon the severest Penalties.

As the aforesaid Petition served to widen the Breach, and inflame Matters between the King and Parliament; so did the following, of the London Virago's, intitled, The humble Petition of many civilly-disposed Women, inhabiting in the Cities of London and Westminster, the Suburbs, and Parts adjacent, occasion the Parliament to use Force to repress the Insolence of the Petitioners:

"That your Petitioners (tho' of the weaker Sex) do too sensibly perceive the ensuing Desolation of this Kingdom, unless by some timely Means your Honours provide for the speedy Recovery

"Recovery thereof. Your Honours are the Physicians that can, by God's special and miraculous Blessing, (which we humbly implore) restore this languishing Nation, and our bleeding Sister the Kingdom of Ireland, which hath now almost breathed her last Gasps.

"We need not dictate to your Eagle-eyed Judgments the Way: Our only Desire is, that God's Glory, in the true Reformed Protestant Religion, may be preserved, the just Prerogatives and Privileges of King and Parliament maintained, the true Liberties and Properties of the Subject, according to the known Laws of the Land, restored, and all honourable Ways and Means for a speedy Peace endeavoured.

"May it therefore please your Honours, that some speedy Course may be taken for the Settlement of the true Reformed Protestant Religion, for the Glory of God, and the Renovation of Trade, for the Benefit of the Subject, they being the Soul and Body of the Kingdom.

"And your Petitioners, with many Millions of afflicted Souls, groaning under the Burden of these Times of Distress, shall (as bound) pray, &c."

The Answer from the House of Commons

The Persons that carried up this Petition, on the 9th of August, were attended by two or three thousand of the meaner Sort of Women, with white Ribbands in their Hats. The Commons, having received and read their Petition, returned for Answer, That they were no ways Enemies to Peace, and did not doubt in a short Time to answer the Ends of their Petition; and, in the mean Time, desired them to return quietly to their several Habitations. But those Termagants, not satisfied with this Answer, continued about the House; where, before Noon, their Number increased to above five thousand; among whom were intermixed a great Number of Men in Women's Apparel; at whose Instigation they went to the Door of the House of Commons, and loudly exclaimed, Peace! Peace! But their Insolence increasing, they cried out, Give us those Traitors that are against Peace, that we may tear them to Pieces! Give us that Dog Pym! Wherefore 'twas found necessary to send for an armed Power to repress them; but, instead of being intimidated at their Approach, they let fly a Volley of Brickbats and Stones among them; which so irritated the Train'd-Bands, that they returned it with Fire; which killing some, and wounding others, they soon dispersed.

Ruth. Col. vol. 3. p. 2.

For the better Defence of London, it was by the Common Council, on the 11th of August, enacted, That a farther Sum of fifty thousand Pounds be advanced by the City Companies; for which they were to have the Mayor and Commonalty's Bond. This, with the Act of the 18th of July, for raising the like Sum, were both confirmed by Parliament. And the City of Gloucester being closely besieged by the King, the Committee of the City Train'd-Bands, by Virtue of an Ordinance of both Houses of Parliament, dated the 17th Day of August, which gave them Power to command the shutting-up of all Shops within the Lines of Communication, to the End the Inhabitants thereof might the better fit themselves for the Defence of the said City, and Parts adjacent, resolved forthwith to send out a Force, both of Horse and Foot, for the Relief of the said City of Gloucester; and, for the better Furtherance of that Service, required all Persons, inhabiting within the Lines of Communication, immediately to shut up Shops, and to continue them so shut up, until Gloucester be relieved, or till farther Orders shall be given by both Houses of Parliament, or this Committee, and to apply themselves to the furthering of this so necessary a Service, &c. &c.

In Pursuance of this Order, six Regiments, viz. one of Horse, two of Train'd-Bands, and three of Auxiliaries, were got ready with incredible Celerity, and, joining the main Army with a Train of Artillery on the 4th of September on Brackley-Heath, they so intimidated the Royalists, that, upon their Arrival under the Command of the Earl of Essex in the Neighbourhood of Gloucester, the King raised the Siege with great Precipitation. However, his Majesty, having Advice, that, on their Return towards London, these Forces had surprized Cirencester, and taken two Regiments of Horse and forty Loads of Provisions belonging to him, pursued them; and, commanding Prince Rupert to advance with all the Cavalry, to keep the Enemy in Play till the Infantry could arrive, he furiously fell upon Essex's Rear, on Aveborne-Chace, and, putting the same in great Disorder, obliged him to quarter that Night in the Fields near Hungerford; whence he pursued his March next Day to Newbury; but, being arrived within two Miles of the same, found the King had possessed himself thereof; whereupon both Armies immediately prepared for Battle; wherein Prince Rupert, with his usual Bravery, performing Wonders with his Cavalry, routed that of the Enemy; but returning and attacking the Infantry, which, being composed only of the foresaid five Regiments of the London Train'd-Bands and Auxiliaries, was too much despised by the Field Army, his Highness met with such Bravery and Resolution from that Body, that, notwithstanding his utmost Efforts, he could make no Impression upon their Intrepidity. And to the amazing Bravery of this Body of Londoners is justly ascribed, not only the Preservation of Essex's Army, but likewise the Success of the Parliament in their future Proceedings; for it disabled the King from attempting to reduce London to his Obedience, and ruined his Interest amongst those who waited the Issue of a Battle, before they would declare themselves, being resolved to join the strongest Side.

This was the longest and most desperate Battle during the Course of that unnatural War; for it began about Six o'Clock in the Morning, and held till near Eleven at Night, with the greatest Obstinacy on both Sides; which has occasioned a celebrated Author to think, that neither Side had much the better. But the noble Author has left us in the dark in respect to the Disposition and Behaviour of the King's Infantry in that Battle; however, it cannot be presumed, that our gallant Citizens could at the same Time resist the united Power of the King's Horse and Foot; therefore I think 'tis more reasonable to imagine, that, during Prince Rupert's Engage-

Sir John Coniers, Lieutenant of the Tower of London, having of both Houses of Parliament demanded (for what Reason is uncertain) his Demission; which being readily agreed to, they conferred the Command of that Place of great Trust and Honour upon their Darling, Sir Isaac Pennington, Mayor of this City.

Some Time after, Sir Lewis Dives was sent with a Detachment from the King's Army to fortify the Town of Newport-Pagnel, in order to strengthen the Communication with the Northern Parts, and also to prevent all Intercourse between the City of London, and the associated Counties in the Interest of the Parliament. Essex, their General, sensible of the great Advantage that would accrue to the Royal Interest from such a Work, marched with the utmost Expedition from Windsor to St. Alban's; where being joined by the London Trained-Bands and Auxiliaries, he advanced thither, and, driving the Enemy from thence, possessed himself of the Place, and made it a very useful Fortrefs.

And it was thereby ordained, "That the Alderman, Deputy and Common Council-men of every Ward, or the major Part of them, should appoint a certain Place within the Ward, where the Inhabitants that are so appointed to watch, should first meet, and should also appoint to what Places they should afterwards go unto to watch in the said Ward; and that the Beadles the Day preceding every Watch should give to all the Constables of each Precinct in the Ward a List of the Names of every Inhabitant that is to watch each Night in the several Divisions of the said Ward, that every Constable may know what Persons he is to warn to watch every several Night, and that the Constable do the Day before his Watch-Night warn them accordingly.

"That the Beadle should, in the Presence of the Constable, and one of the Supervisors hereafter mentioned, call over the Names of those whose Course should be to watch each Night respectively, as well at the Hours appointed for their meeting in the Evening, as also at the Time appointed for the breaking up of the Watch in the Morning: And that they the Beadle and Constable, or one of them, in case the Supervisor be absent at any of the said Times, should take a Note in Writing, of the Names of such of the said Inhabitants then appointed to watch, as should be absent from their Watch at the Hours appointed, Evening or Morning, or any Part of the Night; and should deliver the said Note the next Day to the Supervisor or Supervisors, that they might prosecute against them.

"That every one of the Trained-Bands within this City, when his Course should be to watch, should appear (except he be actually in Service in the Trained-Bands) and watch in his Arms, viz. the Musqueteers with Powder, Bullet, and Match lighted; but not discharge or shoot off any Piece during the Time

"Time of his Watch, on Pain of Imprisonment, unless there should be just Cause to do it; and the Corselets, instead of a Pike, with a compleat Halbert, and a Sword: And the other Watchmen, not being of the Trained-Bands, to watch with a good Halbert or a Brown Bill.

"That the Deputy, or one of the Common Council-men of every Ward; or such trusty Person as they, or one of them, by Writing under his or their Hand, should appoint, should have delivered unto him out of the City's Store a small Barrel of Gunpowder, containing ten, twenty, or thirty Pounds, according to the Largeness of the Ward, with a fitting Proportion of Match and Bullets; and such Person to cause the said Powder to be papered up Half an Ounce in a Paper, and to deliver, or cause to be delivered, the same to every Musqueteer that doth appear to watch, allowing two Half-Ounces for two Charges, and two Yards of Match; and that a fitting Proportion of Gunpowder, to the Quantity of Half a Pound or a Pound, and a Quantity of Bullets, be kept in a Readiness in the Court of Guard, or some other convenient Place; every Night, for Supply, in case there be Need to use the same.

The above-mentioned Proclamation issued by the King, prohibiting all manner of Trade and Commerce with this City, not having the desired Effect; and the City still continuing sincerely attached to the Interest of the Parliament; Charles, for the more effectually preventing the Trade thereof for the future, as well as that of divers other Cities and Towns, published the following Proclamation:

"His Majesty having, with unwearied Patience, hitherto expected that the City of London, and the Citizens and Inhabitants thereof, should at last return to their Obedience; having used all the Endeavours he could to reduce them thereunto; but finding that, by the Malice of their Misleaders, they are so obdurate, that the very Name of Peace and Reconciliation is with them accounted a Crime, and that that City is both the Seat of Rebellion, and the Pattern to all ill-affected Subjects of the Kingdom; by whose Example and Assistance some other Cities and Towns do also stand out against his Majesty in open Rebellion, not only to the Disturbance, but even to the Destruction of the whole Kingdom, if God in his Mercy do not timely prevent it; his Majesty therefore, by his Royal Proclamation, dated at Oxford the seventh Day of July now last past, for the many Reasons in that Proclamation mentioned, did prohibit all Persons, with any of their Goods, Victuals, or Merchandize whatsoever, to travel to or for the City of London, or Suburbs thereof, without his Majesty's express Licence for the same, under his Sign Manual, under the Palms and Penalties in the said Proclamation mentioned.

"And his Majesty now perceiving, that, notwithstanding that Proclamation, that rebellious City, by continuing their Trade, as well at home, as also from foreign Parts, do hereby drain their Monies from all other Parts of the "Kingdom; and traiterously dispose of the same to the Maintenance of this unnatural War against their Sovereign and Fellow-Subjects; and that many of the Freemen and Citizens of that City; and some of the Aldermen and Trained-Bands of the City, in their own Persons, have lately gone from the said City to assail his Majesty, and to fight with him; and were in the late Battle near Newbury; and that many of the said City are involuntarily compelled to take up Arms, and to expose their Lives to the Slaughter; for the Maintenance of the Malice of a few; and the Fuel for all this unnatural Fire is taken from the City; who spare neither their own Persons, Estates or Fortunes, nor the Persons or Estates of the Inhabitants of the neighbouring Counties, but either persuade or compel them to contribute to this horrid and barbarous War:

"Now his Majesty, being moved with a just Indignation against that City, and some few other Cities and Towns, who in like manner do obstinately stand out in Rebellion, doth hereby prohibit all Persons, and straitly charge and command them, upon the severest Penalties and Punishments, which by the Law can be inflicted upon them as Traitors, Aiders, and Assistants unto Traitors, That from and after the Time of publishing this Proclamation, they, or any of them, do not presume, without the King's special Warrant under his Sign Manual, either by Land or Water, to drive, carry, or convey any Manner of Victuals, alive or dead; or any Sort of Provision for Man or Horse, or any Goods or Merchandize of any Kind whatsoever, directly or indirectly, or willfully suffer the same to be carried or conveyed unto or from the City of London, or City of Westminster, or Suburbs thereof; or to or from the Cities of Gloucester and Coventry; or to or from the Towns of Kingston upon Hull, Warwick, Northampton, Portsmouth, Southampton, Poole and Linne-Regis, or any of them; or to or from any other Cities or Towns within this Kingdom, being in Rebellion against his Majesty; until they and every of them respectively shall return to their Obedience; nor do presume to trade, or traffick, or buy or sell with the Citizens or Townsmen of or in the said Cities or Towns, or any of them; or any other Persons inhabiting or residing in any of the said Cities or Towns, until the said Cities and Towns respectively shall conform themselves to their Loyalty and due Obedience.

"And his Majesty doth further declare his Pleasure to be, That no Subject of his Kingdom of Scotland; or of any foreign Kingdom or State in Amity with him; directly or indirectly, shall bring any Ammunition, Victuals, Goods, or Merchandize whatsoever, unto or for the said City of London, or any other Port or Place of this Kingdom, which doth obstinately stand out in Rebellion against his Majesty, until they shall return to his Majesty's Obedience; but shall apply themselves and their Trade to such other Ports and Places of this his Kingdom, which do continue in their Obedience; which his Majesty, with all the Speed he can, purposeth to signify to his Kingdom

" Kingdom of Scotland, and by his Ambassadors, Agents, or Ministers, to the Kings, Princes, and States of those foreign Parts respectively; and if any of his Subjects of his Kingdom of Scotland, or of any of those Kings or States beyond the Seas, shall do otherwise, contrary to his Majesty's Pleasure declared, his Majesty shall esteem of all such, as of Persons who adhere unto and maintain his Majesty's Subjects in their Rebellion: Yet, lest any Merchant-Strangers, at unawares, not having Knowledge before, come or send into the Port of London, or other the Ports aforesaid, and so might incur the Danger whereof they are by these Presents forewarned;

" His Majesty doth further declare, That he will give Directions for the Seizure only of such foreign Goods, Ships, and Merchandize, and not dispose of the same as forfeited, or confiscate, until it shall be first examined, whether they had Knowledge of this his Proclamation. And his Majesty doth further declare his Pleasure and Command to be, That his Armies, or any Part thereof, or any other of his loving Subjects, may and shall seize all such Goods, Victuals and Merchandize to his Use, which shall be in passing unto or from any of the said Cities or Towns, (without the King's special Warrant, as aforesaid) and to bring the same to his next Garrison, or to the chief Commander of that Part of his Army, who shall be next or near to the Place of such Seizure; out of which Goods, those who shall seize the same shall be rewarded with a third Part thereof, and the rest shall, upon Account, be converted towards the Maintenance of his Majesty's Army. And his Majesty doth further command, That no Person whatsoever, being out of the Cities and Towns before-mentioned, do pay, or convey any Money, or other Satisfaction for any Rent, Debt, or other Duty due or payable to any Person, or for the Use of any Person, residing or abiding in the said City of London, or any other of the said Cities or Towns, (so as such Persons be not actually in Prison) whilst those Cities and Towns respectively shall be Aiders and Assistants to them who are in this Rebellion. And his Majesty doth hereby declare, That he is resolved to require a strict Account both of this and of the said former Proclamation.

" And his Majesty doth lastly declare, and would have all his good Subjects to understand him thus; That although he hath been beyond Measure provoked, and that this Rebellion is transcendent in many Circumstances thereof, even beyond all former Examples; yet he is so much a Lover of the Peace and Prosperity of his good Subjects, that as he hath been ever ready to extend his Mercy, rather than to exercise his Justice; so he can yet spare that City of London, (which he hath esteemed and favoured as the Seat of his Empire) and the other Cities and Towns in Rebellion against him, if they shall speedily submit themselves, and return to that Obedience which becometh dutiful Subjects, and not persist any longer in their Rebellion, and shall also deliver up those Incendiaries to the Hand of Justice, to be proceeded against according to the known Laws of the Land, whom his Majesty by former Proclamations or Declarations hath by Name excepted from his Offer of Grace and Pardon.

" Given at our Court at Oxford, the seventeenth Day of October, in the nineteenth Year of our Reign."

Soon after, Colonel Read, Sir Basil Brook, and Thomas Violet, a Goldsmith, (Prisoners in the King's-Bench for certain Services performed to the King) formed a Design for accommodating all Differences between the King and City of London; and having prevailed upon Theophilus Riley, Scout-Master-General of the City, to join them in that Undertaking, he soon after procured Liberty for Read and Violet, who thereupon heartily set about the Execution of their Project; when, after divers Consultations, 'twas resolved, That the most effectual Way to obtain so salutary an End, would be, to procure the Citizens to petition his Majesty for Peace, and immediately thereupon a Treaty to commence between the King and City, exclusive of the Parliament, for which Purpose they framed the following Propositions as the Basis of the intended Treaty:

" 1. That the City might be satisfied, that the King would settle the Protestant Religion; for without that neither the Parliament nor City would admit any Treaty.

" 2. That the Debts contracted upon the publick Faith on either Side, by King or Parliament, should be satisfied; and the most likely Way for doing thereof was to settle the Excise for those Purposes.

" 3. That it was conceived, that in respect to the King's late Declaration, that the two Houses at Westminster were no free Parliament; and that therefore the King could not treat with them any more; the Treaty was to be immediately between the King and the City, and the City was to be the Medium between the King and the Parliament. But, if any Parliament-Men would join with the City in Treaty, they also might come with them to Oxford, under the same Safe-Conduct granted to the City, though their Names be not particularly mentioned; and so much was to be declared and expressed.

" 4. That there must be an Act of Oblivion for all Parties and Delinquents whatsoever, and a general Pardon; and that no Cessation be expected during the Treaty."

And, the better to dispose the City to this Overture of petitioning, 'twas judged necessary, that the King should write a Letter to the Citizens, to encourage them to engage in so laudable a Work; pursuant to which, the following Letter was sent to be read at a Common Hall, or General Convention of the Citizens, directed to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and all other well-affected Subjects of the City:

" Charles Rex.

"have conferred upon that our City of London; and the many Examples of eminent Duty and Loyalty, for which that City hath been likewise famous; We are willing to believe, notwithstanding the great Defection We have found in that Place, that all Men are not so far degenerated from their Affection to Us, and to the Peace of the Kingdom, as to desire a Continuance of the Miseries they now feel: And therefore, being informed, that there is a Desire in some principal Persons of that City to present a Petition to Us, which may tend to the procuring a good Understanding between Us and that our City, whereby the Peace of our whole Kingdom may be procured;

"We have thought fit to let you know, that We are ready to receive any such Petition, and the Persons who shall be appointed to present the same to Us, shall have a safe Conduct: And you shall assure all our good Subjects of that our City, whose Hearts are touched with any Sense of Duty to Us, or of Love to the Religion and Laws established, (in the quiet and peaceable Fruition whereof they and their Ancestors have enjoyed so great Happiness) that we have neither passed any Act, nor made any Profession or Protestation for the Maintenance and Defence of the true Protestant Religion, and the Liberties of the Subject, which we will not most strictly and religiously observe, and for the which we will not be always ready to give them any Security that can be desired. And of these our gracious Letters we expect a speedy Answer. And so we bid you farewell.

How rendered abstract.

Violet, one of the Conspirators, having disclosed the whole Affair to Sir David Watkins, for his Advice and Assistance, he seemed highly pleased therewith, yet nevertheless from Time to Time discovered their Proceedings to certain Members of the House of Commons; wherefore the Parliament, a Day or two before the Meeting of the intended Common Hall, caused Sir Basil, Violet, and Riley, to be secured, and with them the above-recited Letter; and they being strictly examined concerning the Conspiracy, a Committee of eight Lords and sixteen Commoners was appointed to repair to the City, where in a Common Hall they caused the said Letter and Examinations of the aforesaid Persons to be read; when the Earl of Northumberland, one of the Committee, concluded with this Speech:

Ibid.

The Earl of Northumberland's Speech against it.

"My Lord-Mayor, and you Gentlemen of the City of London, you have fully heard delivered by these Gentlemen all the Proceedings in their late Discovery: You are well able to make a right Judgment upon the whole Matter. I am commanded, in the Name of both Houses, to read unto you here their Opinions, and the Sense they have delivered, and are of, amongst themselves, viz. That the Matter of this Report containeth a seditious and Jesuitical Practice and Design, under the fair and specious Pretence of Peace, having its Rise and Foundation from known Jesuits and Papists, to work Divisions between the Parliament and City of London, to raise Factions in both, thereby to render them up to the Designs of the Enemy; and tending also to the Breach of the publick Faith of this Kingdom unto our Brethren of Scotland, engaged by the late solemn Covenant and Treaty entered into by both Nations, thereby not only to weaken us in our united Force against our Popish and common Enemies, but to embroil the two Nations in unhappy Differences."

The City on this Occasion, to shew their grateful Sense of the indefatigable Endeavours and constant Care of the Parliament for the Interest and Welfare of the City and Kingdom, invited both Houses to honour them at Dinner in Merchant-Taylors-Hall, at such Time as they themselves should please to appoint; for which Favour both Houses returned Thanks, and engaged themselves to live and die with them in the Cause they were jointly embarked in.

My Author observes, that the Design of this Invitation was to ridicule the late Plot, and to shew how vain a Thing it was, to pretend to raise Jealousies or foment Divisions between the Parliament and City, seeing their Interests were inseparable.

In the Morning of the Day appointed for this sumptuous Entertainment, both Houses of Parliament repaired to Christ-Church in Newgate-Street to Sermon; whence they walked to Merchant-Taylors-Hall, the Trained-Bands lining both Sides of the Streets thro' which they passed. The Procession was regulated as follows: First walked the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen in their Scarlet Robes, followed by the Common Council; then the Earl of Essex, the General; the Earl of Warwick, Lord Admiral; the Earl of Montbret, with many of the Nobility, attended by divers Colonels and other Officers of the Army; after whom followed the Members of the House of Commons, the Scottish Commissioners, and the Assembly of Divines, who closed the Procession: In passing thro' Chesham, they were diverted with a great Bonfire of Popish Trumpery, and other superstitious Stuff.

The Season for Action drawing near, the City sent out two of its best Regiments of Auxiliaries, to join the Army under the Command of Sir William Waller; who, likewise receiving considerable Reinforcements from other Parts, marched in Quest of the Royal Army under the Lord Hopton; who, getting Intelligence of Waller's Approach, advanced with the utmost Expedition to engage him; when both Armies meeting on Cheriton Down, a sharp and bloody Conflict ensued, wherein Hopton was defeated. The City Troops in this Action behav'd with the greatest Gallantry.

This Battle, by different Authors, goes by divers Appellations, viz. Cheriton, Alresford, and Winchester. The Engagement was no sooner over, than the City Regiments were detached, under the Command of Colonel Whitehead, to reduce Walton-House, which they soon obliged to surrender on hard Terms, the Officers being only allowed their Swords and Horses, and the Soldiers Staves in their Hands.

This great Victory occasioned the Parliament's making an Ordinance for a publick Thanksgiving on the ninth Day of April within the Bills of Mortality: And, in order to defeat the Endeavours of the Royalists, who were resolved to make their best Effort to retrieve the Loss lately sustained, the Parliament resolved to put themselves in such a Posture, as to be able to resist any Power that his Majesty should bring against them, and caused their Troops to defile from several Parts to join the Earl of Essex: Of which, by the following Order, they commanded the Ministers from their respective Pulpits to acquaint the People:

Order of Parliament for drawing all their Forces together.

"It is this Day (the eighth of April) ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, That the Ministers within the several Parishes of London and Westminster, Lines of Communication, and Bills of Mortality, do Tomorrow, being the Day of Thanksgiving for the great Victory over Sir Ralph Hopton's Forces, publish in their several Churches the Resolution taken by the Parliament to draw all their Forces together, and pursue this Victory, and put it to a Day, and fight with the Enemy, to put a speedy Issue (by the Blessing of Almighty God) to these lingering Miseries and to exhort the People to contribute to the uttermost for the sending forth what possible Strength can be had."

And, for the better enabling the City to exert itself on this extraordinary Occasion, the following Order of the above Day and Date was made by Parliament:

Ibid.

The like Order made for the City.

"It is this Day ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, That the Committee of the Militia of the City of London shall have Power, and is hereby authorized, from Time to Time, to command so many of the several Regiments of the Trained-Bands, and of the Auxiliaries and Troops of Horse, or other Forces raised, or to be raised under their Command, within the Cities of London and Westminster, Lines of Communication, and Parishes mentioned in the weekly Bills of Mortality, as to them shall seem convenient, to march under the Conduct of such Person or Persons, as the said Committee of the Militia shall think fit to lead and conduct them, for the Defence of the Parliament, Cities of London and Westminster, and Parts adjacent, into any Parts or Places of the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, to assist the Forces under the immediate Command of his Excellency the Earl of Essex, the Earl of Manchester, Sir William Waller, or any other Forces raised or to be raised for the Defence of the King and Parliament, by the Advice and Consent of both Houses of Parliament, or the Committee of both Kingdoms.

"And it is further ordained, That the said Committee of the Militia shall have Power, and is hereby authorized, to cause all or any of the said Forces to march with their Colours to any Place or Places aforesaid, and not to depart from the same without Licence from their Captains, and to impose reasonable Fines, or to imprison all Colonels, Lieutenant Colonels, Serjeant-Majors, Captains, and other Officers and Soldiers whatsoever, under their Commands, whether Masters or Servants, as shall disobey the Commands or "Directions of the said Committee of the Militia, from Time to Time, as they shall think fit, or otherwise to proceed against them, according to the Course of War.

"And it is further ordained by the said Lords and Commons, That the said Committee of the Militia shall have Power, and is hereby authorized, to call back all such Forces as they shall appoint to march forth by Virtue of this Ordinance, when they shall think fit. And it is further ordained, That such Forces, as shall be sent forth as aforesaid, shall be paid by the Parliament, for the Time that they shall continue abroad, according to the new Establishment of the Army, under the immediate Command of his Excellency the Earl of Essex. And the said Committee, and all other Persons acting in the Premises according to the Intent of the said Ordinance, shall be saved harmless by Authority of Parliament."

The Lord-Mayor, by Order of Parliament, summoned a Common Hall, or General Assembly of the Citizens, to meet in the Evening of the Thanksgiving-Day; whither a Committee of the Lords and Commons repaired, and, by Dint of Rhetorick, endeavoured to excite the Citizens to contribute to the utmost of their Power at this critical Juncture, as will appear by the following Speeches:

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"Upon this happy Victory, that you have had, for which you have given God Thanks this Day, the Parliament understands, that the King and your Enemies are presently drawing into the Field, and they are drawing all their Forces into the Field, to come against you; and the Parliament upon this, have thought fit to draw all their Forces into the Field, that (with God's Blessing upon them) they may make an End of these unhappy Distractions that are among us; and they hope, that as you have been very forward and active in this Cause of God, and the publick Liberty; so you will not be wanting now in drawing yourselves into the Field, with all our Armies, to defend God's Cause, and the publick Liberty: The rest, my Lord, I shall leave to some worthy Gentleman of the House of Commons."

Sir Henry
Vane's
Speech.

"The Houses of Parliament have seldom, in Matters of any great Importance, but been ready to communicate them unto yourselves, as knowing how nearly you have interested yourselves with them in these publick Dangers, and for the publick Liberties of the Kingdom, and Preservation of Religion: At this Time, above all the rest, they have thought it necessary to acquaint you with a Resolution which they have taken, in regard that as they have had former Experiences in your ready Affections in all Cases of Exigency to assist them, and in them yourselves, and the whole Kingdom; so they do not doubt but at this Time they shall be prevented by your own Inclinations, considering that what they have now in Hand, is, if it can be possible, to put a speedy Issue to these "unhappy,

"unhappy, and to these lingering Distractions, that we have had thus many Years together.

"The Occasion of their Resolution is this: It having pleased God, by the late Overthrow which he gave to the Enemy by Sir William Waller's Forces, for to occasion the Enemy now to draw out all his Garrisons, to endeavour to take the Field with all that Power he can make, and, if it be possible, to come suddenly upon those Forces that so lately routed them; the Parliament thought it Wisdom and Providence for to give Order for all their Forces on the South Side Trent; those under my Lord Manchester's Association; those likewise of the several Garrisons, that can be spared; those also of his Excellency my Lord General's Army, that at this Time is in a hopeful Way of recruiting; and likewise, in the last Place, those they might expect from your own ready Affections. They have known your Willingness, they have known your Watchfulness at all Times, for to comply with their Occasions, and with the Necessities of the Commonwealth: At this Time they doubt not but you will be the more encouraged to it, because (through the Blessing of God) it may put an Issue unto this War; at least it is that, as is in the Parliament's Desire, and will be in their Endeavours: They have therefore thought fit thus publicly to recommend this Business to you, to quicken your Affections, which are at all Times very much stirred up for their Service, and they doubt not therefore will be to this.

"They desire you therefore, as knowing the several Ways that you have among yourselves, for Subscriptions, for Contributions, for setting out those that are of able Bodies, and of good Affections to the Cause, knowing how much that this City hath sent forth, and those Persons that have been an Honour to the City, in behaving themselves with that Gallantry, as that it may be truly said, That the Enemy doth apprehend no Forces like unto those that come out of this City; being Persons that, for Religion, for Faithfulness to the Cause, and for Publickness of Spirit to the Parliament, have ever shewed themselves as firm and as forward as any whatsoever: They do not doubt but you will shew yourselves so at this Time also, and acquit yourselves like Men; which is that I am to recommend to you. There are others that I doubt not will follow, will do it with a great deal of more Exactness than I can do; but this is the Substance, as I can remember."

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"You have here understood by a noble Lord, my Lord Admiral, and this noble Gentleman of the House of Commons, the Desire of both Houses of Parliament; they have acquainted you too what the King's Intention is, to draw all his Forces together, and what the Parliament doth intend in drawing all their Forces they can Southward, and what great Victory God hath given Sir William Balfour and Sir William Waller; so I am only to take this Opportunity to give you all Acknowledgments

"and Thanks for those great Aids that I have had always to go along with me; for I must needs acknowledge, that most of the Things that have been done by me, especially the Business of Gloucester, have been done by your Helps; I should desire the like still, and what shall come to me I shall use with good Respects, and venture my Life with them; and I should have been very glad that my Army had been in that Case, that I might not have needed to take any of you from your own Houses, knowing how much Expence you have been at already both in your Estates and Blood, in the Service of Religion and this Cause; but whatsoever Forces you please to draw out, I shall venture my Life with them, and be ready to give a quick End to this Cause."

"Gentlemen,

"I am a very ill Speaker; but, I thank God, I am a very dutiful Subject to God, and to the Kingdom, and in this Cause; though I am an ill Orator, yet I have a good Heart, and I cannot be silent in such a Cause as this is. I shall not need to trouble you with the Effects of the Cause, because so many of my Lords and Gentlemen have opened it; but I shall not forget, in the Name of both Houses, to give you many Thanks, both my Lord-Mayor and all the City, for all the Love and Affection you have shewed, not only now, but heretofore, and above all that ever any of your Ancestors did; for, though the City of London have often shewed themselves with Abundance of Love to the Kingdom, yet they have never gained so much Honour as in these Times; for I must needs say, that, under God, it is the Love and Fidelity of this City hath saved all.

"And therefore I may desire you, for your own Honours, that you would so second it now in these Times, that God hath given you so fair an Opportunity for it: I think you have but little to do, but to go on with it, and you see what Accidents had been like to fall out (as my Lord General told you) for want of recruiting his Army heretofore. I speak not this to shew that it is any Fault of yours; but let us not lose this Opportunity, and let those Experiences make us know how to help our Failings hereafter; for (as my Lord General hath told you) if my Lord General's Army had been ready, we might have put an End to this Business; but I doubt not but your Care, and your Love, and your Fidelity will make that Issue, that will quit the Kingdom of all these Villains, that have been the Cause of all this."

"My Lord-Mayor, and Citizens of this famous City, which have done so famous Things for Religion, for the Parliament, for the whole Kingdom;

"Truly there need not many Words to encourage you, your own Affections prevent all that can be said. You have been sufficiently told the Occasion of this meeting with you by these Committees, which are sent from the two Houses of Parliament. Your own Wisdoms do sufficiently inform you of the Necessity of doing

 "hath told you how ready and how willing he is "to engage himself, to adventure his Person, his "Life, his Fortunes, all that he hath, with you;
 "he had Experience of your Fidelity before, and "hath received the Fruits of it several Times,
 "and that makes him (I am sure) the more "cheerfully offer himself to you again; and we "all know your Affections to him to be such, as "you will not suffer him to go into the Field,
 "but as is fuitable to the General of the Forces
 "raised by the Parliament for the Defence of "Religion and the Publick Liberty: If his "Army had been recruited, this had not been "needful unto you at this Time; for then he "would have been willing to have spared you.

"He knows how much it concerns the Wealth "and Trade of this City, that you should keep
 "at home to follow your Occasions here; and "that your Purfes (as they have always been)
 "should have been open to supply the Wants "of the Army, he would have spared your "Persons; but now the Parliament throw them"selves upon your Affections, and desire you to "offer yourselves, as one Man; for it is to no
 "Purpose to go by little and little; it is but as "a little Water thrown on the Fire, that doth
 "but enrage it, and will not quench it: But "now, if all will join their Purfes, their Per"sons, and their Prayers together, I doubt not "but we shall (through God's Blessing) see an "End of these miserable and distracted Times;
 "and the Lord put it into your Hearts to do
 "that which is fit for you to do, which we "know you will do."

 Glyn, Record of London's
 Speech.

"I am commanded by these Lords and Gen"tlemen (that are come from both Houses of "Parliament to present what they have already "spoken) to add one Word more. First, you "have had Notice of the great Blessing that "God Almighty hath been pleased to bestow on "us by the late Victory, and you have now the "Experience of the Care of both Houses of "Parliament, to ascribe that Blessing unto Al"mighty God, by setting apart this Day for to "give him Thanks for it; and they have "thought it a Day of Opportunity, when we "all join in Prayer and Thanksgiving unto "God Almighty, that we should now again meet

 "at this Time to improve that Blessing; and "therefore it hath been set out unto you, that "you would be pleased, in pursuance of what both "Houses have resolved, and my Lord General,
 "to draw all the Forces, that they can get toge"ther, unto a general Rendezvous about Mile- bury. The nineteenth of this Month all the "Forces have Directions to draw together:
 "And now they apply themselves to you (hav"ing had Experience of your great Affections,
 "and God having wrought so much by the "Forces that you have sent abroad) to desire "that you would now at this Time (which we "hope will give an Issue to all our Troubles)
 "shew your Affections, by sending out as many "Forces as you can, to join in this Work, to
 "to make a speedy End of it: Only I shall add
 "this Word to it; my Lord General is recruit"ing his Army, both Houses of Parliament have "put him in a Way, and now he desires your "Assistance and Concurrence only to help him "with the Bodies of Men, that every Man in "his particular Work may do what he can; that "that Army may be raised as shortly as possibly
 "may be; there shall be no Want in both "Houses of Parliament, or my Lord General;
 "and they are all confident there shall be no
 "Want in you; and that is that they have "commanded me to add; and God put it into "your Hearts to do what shall be best unto
 "him."

By these Speeches it is apparent, that the City of London was the very Soul of the Cause; and, had it not been for the powerful Assistance of the Citizens, both with their Persons and Purfes, the Parliament would never have been in a Condition to have opposed the King in the Field; and at this Time, by these alluring Orations, the Citizens were so greatly inflamed, that they offered to raise no less than twenty thousand Men at their own Expence; but the Parliament not approving of that Proposition, as requiring too much Time to put it in Execution, the City, as a more expeditious and effectual Way, sent out four Regiments of its Trained-Bands and Auxiliaries, consisting of four thousand two hundred Men, to reinforce the Earl of Essex's Army: These Troops, at the second Battle of Newbury, signalized themselves in a gallant Manner. Besides these four Regiments, there were sent from the Suburbs the three Regiments of Trained-Bands of the Tower Hamlets, Westmin- ster, and Borough of Southwark, (consisting of the same Number of Men as those of the City) as a Reinforcement to the Army commanded by Sir William Waller.

At this Time the Parliament, being apprehensive of some new Commotions in the City, to preserve the Peace and Quiet thereof, thought proper to make the following Order:

"It is this Day (May the fifteenth) ordered by "the Commons assembled in Parliament, That "Directions be given to the Lord-Mayor, Court

" And likewise to take Order, That all the Forces of the Cities of London and Westminster, Suburbs and Line of Communication, may be put in a Posture ready to march at two Hours Warning; and that they will give Order, That good Watches, by faithful and good Men, may be kept at all the Guards, and upon all the Avenues to the City. The like Directions, mutatis mutandis, to the Committees of the several and respective Counties. They are further required, That if, upon the Search after suspicious Persons, they shall meet with any Soldiers, that they take Course that they may be sent to their Colours, to be proceeded with according to their Demerits, and the usual Course of War."

THE City of London, to shew its grateful Acknowledgments to the House of Commons for their indefatigable Care and Pains in the Preservation of the said City, presented the following humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council assembled, on the sixteenth of May, viz.

" Shewing,

" That the continued Industry, Courage, and Constancy, which this Honourable House have manifested in all Affairs concerning the Publick; the faithful Endeavours of the Lords and Commons of the Committee of both Kingdoms; the special Care taken of putting the Tower of London and Castle of Windsor into safe Hands, and your favourable Resolutions not to dispose of them otherwise, than as may stand with the Security and Satisfaction of this City; have laid a great Obligation of Thankfulness upon the Inhabitants thereof, and their Posterity, and encourage the Petitioners humbly to represent their Apprehensions and Fears, arising from the Discontinuance of that Honourable Committee, especially at this Time, when our Enemies are so active, and all our Armies in Motion; from the Want of Execution upon Delinquents; the not putting Tilbury Fort into safe Hands; and from the Endeavours of divers Members of Parliament to be re-admitted into that great Council, who have, contrary to the Trust in them reposed, kept Correspondence with the Enemy, joined in other Councils, and taken up Arms against the Parliament.

" For Removal of which Apprehensions and Fears, and Prevention of the sad Consequences thereof, your Petitioners make it their earnest and humble Suit to this Honourable House, That the Committee of both Kingdoms may be so speedily re-established, as the present Exigents of Affairs require.

" That the Tower of London and Castle of Windsor may be continued in safe Hands, and the Garrison at Windsor timely and constantly supplied with Money and other Necessaries, and the Fort of Tilbury well manned, and put into the Hands of Persons of Trust, and that have Ability to discharge the same.

" That a Course may be forthwith taken for the Trial and Punishment of Delinquents.

" That none of the said Members may be re-admitted, without special Assurance and Satisfaction first given to both Houses of Parliament for their Fidelity in Time to come.

" That this Honourable House will persevere in your Endeavours and Resolutions, tending to the Publick Good, notwithstanding all Discouragements.

" And to rest assured, That the Petitioners, for the promoting thereof, will cheerfully obey your Orders and Directions, from Time to Time, and adhere unto you, to the utmost Expence of their Lives and Estates, according to their late solemn Covenant."

To which Petition the House of Commons, on the eighteenth following, returned this Answer:

"upon Thursday, the sixteenth of this instant
 "May, by the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and divers
 "others, appointed a Committee from the said
 "Council, and, after Consideration of the Con"tents, do return this Answer :

Rush. Col.
 vol. 3. P. 2.

"They do acknowledge it an especial Bless"ing of Almighty God, That their Endeavours
 "wherein they have done but their "Duty, have been so well understood and ac"cepted by this famous City, without whose "constant Affections and Assistance they could "not have brought this great Work to that hope"ful Condition, wherein, by the Mercy of God,
 "it now stands.

"To the Particulars desired, they have esteemed
 "them so necessary for the Publick Good, that "the settling of them hath already been resolved
 "upon in this House.

"For the Continuance of the Committee of "both Kingdoms, an Ordinance is depending for "that Purpose, the speedy Perfecting whereof
 "they will endeavour.

"For the Tower of London, Castle of Windsor,
 "and Fort at Tilbury, they will take such far"ther Course, as shall be for the Security and "Satisfaction of the City.

"For the Trial and Punishment of Delin"quents, the House hath already resolved up-
 "on an Ordinance for the settling a constant "Council of War within the Lines of Commu-
 "cation.

"For the not re-admitting of such Members
 "of Parliament, who, contrary to the Trust
 "reposed in them, have deserted the same, and "adhered to the Enemy; this House hath passed
 "an Ordinance, as is desired, and will endea"vour the speedy Perfecting thereof.

"For the Expressions of adhering to the "House of Commons, the Endeavours of pro"moting the Publick Good, they have been "demonstrated by Action in the Times of grea"test Difficulty, wherein the City have spent "their dearest Blood, and vast Sums of Treas"ure, omitting no possible Supplies of Per"sons and Purse.

"In their most seasonable Desires, Offer and "Promise, they now make, (never to be for"gotten by the House of Commons) they ma"nifest, That their Affections can admit of no "Decrease; which are great Encouragements to "this House to persevere in the Endeavours and "Resolutions desired; wherein (by the Blessing "of Almighty God) they will persist, to the ut"most Hazard of their Lives and Fortunes, a"gainst the greatest Discouragements, until the "Affairs of the Church and Commonwealth re"ceive such a happy Conclusion, as all good "Men desire and pray for.

"And, in return for their great Affection, the "House of Commons doth declare, they will,
 "in a most peculiar Manner, be mindful of the "Merit of this City, which, upon all Occasions,
 "they shall acknowledge, and will endeavour to "requite; and in the mean Time they give "them most hearty Thanks."

 Trade to the City
 Westward, by Water,
 how obstructed.

In the mean Time, the Trade of this City Westward, by Water, was greatly obstructed by the Garrisons of Greenland and Basing-Houses, near the River Thames; for the redressing of which, a Committee of both Houses was sent to the City to consult about proper Measures for remedying the same. Whereupon the Lord-Mayor and Common Council (notwithstanding the great Number of their Troops already in the Field) resolved to send out two Brigades of Horse and Foot, under the Command of Colonel Brown; which Choice the Parliament so highly approved of,

 that the Day after (the eighth of June) he was,
 by an Ordinance of both Houses, constituted Serjeant-Major-General, and Commander of all the Forces raised, and to be raised, not only for the Reduction of the aforesaid Houses, but likewise of the City of Oxford, and the Towns of Wallingford and Banbury, with their Castles.

The King's Troops; under the Marquis of Newcastle, being in Possession of the Town of Newcastle upon Tyne, and the Countries adjacent, from whence this City was wholly supplied with Pit-coal Fuel; the Marquis, to chastise the Citizens for their Disobedience to his Majesty, prohibited the Exportation of Coals to this City; whereby it became a very great Sufferer. And, as the Parliament had no Prospect of reducing those Parts to their Obedience in a short Time, they carefully set about supplying the City with Fuel from other Places, as appears by the following Ordinance :

The Newcastle

 structed.

"The Lords and Commons in Parliament as"sembled, taking into their serious Considera"tion the Necessity of the timely Provision of "Fuel for the Cities of London and Westminster,
 "and Places within the Lines of Communica"tion and Bills of Mortality, heretofore furnish"ed with Coals from the Town and Parts near "Newcastle, and to the End the Scarcity, which "is like to be, of that kind of Fuel may in "Part be supplied with Turf and Peat, where-

The London Clergy, becoming weary of the State of spiritual Anarchy they had so long groaned under, applied to Parliament for Re-drefs of divers religious Grievances, as appears by the following Writing, intitled, *The humble

"Parliamentary Authority undermined, fearful

"in the West.

"May it therefore please your Wisdoms (as a

Which being read on the eighteenth of Septem-of the House, but soon after an Ordinance of Parliament was made for the Ordination of Ministers (pro tempore) within this City; whereby twenty-three Ministers, or any seven of them, were to ordain; and all Persons presuming to preach, or exercise the Ministerial Function, not an exemplary Manner.

Some time after, the Commissioners appointed by Parliament met those of the King at Ux-unfortunately breaking off without Success, the Parliament sent to the Lord-Mayor of this City to call a Common Hall to meet on the fourth of March; when their Commissioners attended, and acquainted the Citizens with their whole Proceedings in that Treaty, and of the strong Aversion on the King's Side to the Thoughts of Peace; wherefore it was now absolutely necessary for their own Security effectually to supply the Army under Sir Thomas Fairfax, and for that Purpose, desired of the City a Loan of eighty thousand Pounds.

which they readily obeying, chose Colonel West,

City Petition for

Church-Government.

On the sixteenth of January, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City petitioned the House of Lords for a speedy Settlement of Church-Government, according to the Covenant: And "That no Toleration be granted of Popery, Prelacy, Superstition, Heresy, Schism, Prophaneness, or any Thing contrary to sound Doctrine; and that all private Meetings, contrary to the Covenant, may be restrained."

swer of the

The Lords, in a complaisant Return, thanked the City, for "Their Care and Zeal for God's Worship, and assured them, as they had been, so should they continue ready to advance so good a Work, whereto they hold themselves obliged by the Covenant; and they recommend it to the City to suppress such unlawful Courses, as are by them mentioned in their Petition."

The great Zeal of the Citizens of London in Matters of Religion, and their sincere Attachment to the Measures entered into by the Parliaments of England and Scotland, occasioned that of the latter to transmit the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of this City:

Letter of Thanks from a cotland.

"Right Honourable,

"Your several Addresses to the Honourable Houses of Parliament, and the Relation of our Commissioners, have given us so perfect Knowledge and deep Impression of your Affection and true Zeal for the Reformation of Religion, and Uniformity of Church-Government, as hath much refreshed us in our greatest Difficulties, and doth far exceed our Acknowledgments.

"Your constant Care of advancing and furnishing very great Sums of Money to the Armies, who stand for Defence of Religion, and the just publick Liberty of the Subjects, in all the three Kingdoms, is an evident Demonstration how much you prefer the Good of the Publick to your private Interest: And your special Regard, in cheerfully supplying the Armies of this Kingdom with Money and other necessary Provisions in the Times of their most urgent Necessities, hath so greatly endeared unto us the brotherly Affection of that famous City, as will not only be a real Tie of Amity for the present, but will likewise lay a firm Foundation of reciprocal Kindness and inviolable Friendship for all succeeding Ages.

"And as the many real Proofs of your Affections and Fidelity, in doing and suffering for the Cause of God, give unto us full Persuasions and Confidence of your Constancy for promoting thereof, till (by God's Blessing) upon the joint Endeavours of both Nations)

"Truth, with a just Peace, (which is the highest of our Desires) be settled in all the Kingdoms: So we conceive it suitable to your Deserts, and agreeable to the Gratitude of this Kingdom, to return you most hearty Thanks; and to assure you, that all our Actions shall witness the Candor and Sincerity of our Intentions, and most earnest Desires to embrace and improve all Opportunities, which may conduce to the Prosperity of your City, and testify the brotherly Affection of, &c.

"Dated at St. Andrew's, the seven-and-twentieth of January, 1645-6."

Some time after, a Rumour was spread of the King's intending to come privately to London; but, to intimidate his Majesty from such an Attempt, the following Resolutions were passed by both Houses of Parliament:

Ibid.
A.D. 1646

"1. That in case the King shall, contrary to the Advice of both Houses of Parliament already given to him, come or attempt to come within the Lines of Communication, that then the Committee of the Militia of London shall have Power, and are hereby enjoined, upon Advice had with the Committee of Lords and Commons for the Army, to raise such Forces as they shall think necessary to prevent any Tumult that may arise by his Majesty's coming, and to suppress any that may happen.

Ibid.
Resolutions of the Parliament to prevent the King's coming to London privately.

"2. That, in case the King shall come to any of the Guards about the City, the Officer that commands that Guard, with such Assistance as may be procured, shall conduct his Majesty to St. James's House, with a Guard to secure his Person from Danger, and to prevent Resort unto him.

"3. That in such Case the Committee for the Militia are forthwith to send such other Officers, as shall be sufficient there to secure his Person from Danger, and prevent Resort unto him, until the Houses shall be acquainted therewith, and take further Order: And until those other Forces shall come to St. James's, the first Guard is to tarry there.

"4. That for such Guards as shall come with the King, the Officer that commands the Guard (with such Assistance as may be procured) shall apprehend and secure them in such Prisons and other Places, as the Committee of the Militia shall think fitting, until the Houses shall take further Order.

"5. That the Officer that commands the Guards shall prevent the Resort of any Person unto the King; and, in case any shall endeavour in a forcible Manner to have Access unto him, that the Officers shall apprehend and secure them, until further Orders from the House.

"6. That, if there be any Resistance in any the Cafes aforesaid, the Officer and Soldiers shall, by Force of Arms, according to the Course of War, observe these Directions, in Pursuance of the Ordinance of Parliament.

"7. That upon this Occasion the Committee of the Militia shall strengthen their Guards, both within and without the City, and employ such "such Men as for their Fidelity and Ability they can confide in."

And, as a farther Discouragement to the King and his Adherents to come to the City, the same Day the following Order passed both Houses of Parliament:

Roth. Col.
vol. 4. p. 1.

Order of both Houses of Parliament, commanding all Papists, &c. to depart the City, &c.

"The Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, taking Notice of the great Confluence and Resort of Papists, Officers, and Soldiers of Fortune, and such as have borne Arms against the Parliament of England, from the Enemy's Garrisons and Quarters, unto the Cities of London and Westminster, and other Parts within the Lines of Communication, do, for the Prevention of such Inconveniencies as may thereby arise, think fit to order, and it is hereby ordered by the said Lords and Commons, That all Papists whatsoever, and all Officers and Soldiers of Fortune, and other Persons that have borne Arms against the Parliament of England, not being under Restraint, do, before the End of the 6th Day of April, 1646, depart out of the said Cities of London and Westminster, and Lines of Communication. And, if any such Person shall continue within the said Lines after that Time, such Person is hereby declared a Spy, and shall be apprehended, imprisoned, and proceeded against as a Spy, according to the Rules of War.

Under Pain of being proceeded against as a Spy.

"And the said Lords and Commons do further order, that all such Persons do forbear, upon the Penalty aforesaid, to return or come within the said Lines, without Licence under the Hands of the Committee appointed for Compositions at Goldsmiths-Hall. And the Committee of the Militia of London, and their Sub-Committees in their several Limits respectively, are hereby required to keep strict Guards and Watches, and cause frequent Searches to be made, and to take Care for the due Execution of this Order. Provided, that this Order, nor any Thing therein contained, shall extend to any Person or Persons who shall obtain Licence under the Hands of the Committee of Goldsmiths-Hall to continue within the Limits aforesaid: Provided, that this Order, or any Thing herein contained, shall not extend to any Person or Persons who came in to the Parliament before the 1st of June last, and are cleared by both Houses of Parliament from their Delinquency: Provided also, that no Peer of this Realm shall resort unto the Committee of Goldsmiths-Hall for Licence to continue within the Limits aforesaid, but shall repair only to the House of Peers for their said Licence. This Order to continue for the Space of one Month after the said 6th of April, and no longer."

Licences by whom to be granted.

Ibid.

The Parliament receiving Advice from their General before Oxford, that the King was retired from that City, and, as generally reported, for London; this Intelligence instantly occasioned their publishing an Order by Beat of Drum and Sound of Trumpet, thro' this City and that of Westminster, to this Purport:

Ibid.
Order against harbouring or concealing
the King.

"Ordered, That it be, and it is hereby declared by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, That what Person soever shall harbour and conceal, or know of the harbouring or concealing of the King's Person, and shall not reveal it immediately to the Speakers of both Houses, shall be proceeded against as a Traitor to the Commonwealth, forfeit his whole Estate, and die without Mercy."

Numb. XXXIII.

The Penalty in Case of High Treason.

But they might have spared themselves this unprecedented Ordinance; for their Fears were soon allayed by a Letter which his Majesty wrote from the Scottish Army, lying before Newcastle, to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, as follows:

"Charles, Rex.

"Right trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well.

Ibid.

"Having expressed our Resolution to the two Houses of our Parliament of Scotland to give all just Satisfaction to the joint Desires of both Kingdoms, we have now likewise thought fit to assure the two chief Cities of both our Kingdoms, that nothing is more grievous to us than the Trouble and Distractions of our People; and that nothing on Earth is more desired by us, than that in Religion and Peace, with all the comfortable Fruits of both, they may henceforth live under us in all Godliness and Honesty. And this Profession we make for no other End, but that you may know immediately from ourselves our Integrity and full Resolution to comply with our Parliaments in every Thing for settling Truth and Peace, and our Desire to have all Things speedily concluded, which shall be found requisite for that End; that our Return to that our ancient City may be to the Satisfaction of our Parliament, the Good-liking of you and all our good People, and to our own greater Joy and Comfort. We bid you heartily farewell.

"Newcastle, May 19, 1646."

The Distractions and Licentiousness of this Time of Anarchy and Confusion had given such Opportunity to Enthusiasts and Hypocrites to propagate their Errors, and to impose upon weak and wavering Christians, that the City abounded with separate and schismatical Congregations, to the great Disturbance of Mens Minds, and the Disgrace of Christianity; which the Civil Magistrates fearing might shortly tend to a Breach of the City's Peace, and the Overthrow of the Civil Government, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council presented the following Remonstrance to the Parliament, May 26, 1646:

"Our Duty, in the first Place, doth lead us to begin all our Addresses, as we most heartily and humbly do this, with all due and humble Acknowledgment of the great Labours and Endeavours which this honourable House hath these many Years employed in Reformation both of the Church and Commonwealth, and the Preservation of both, with the humble Tender of our constant Devotion to serve the Parliament, according to our Covenant made before Almighty God.

Counc.

City Remonstrance against separate Congregations and Sectarian, &c. &c.

"In the next Place, we do most humbly crave Pardon, although we do presume to return again unto this honourable House, and humbly, yet plainly, lay open the Sorrow and Fears of our Hearts, even in this Season,

"whenas

"whenas God hath blessed our Armies with "the greatest Success, and that a Man might "persuade himself that the War is almost at "an End.

"For, just when we remember that this honourable House hath long since declared it to be "far from their Purpose or Desire to let loose
"the golden Reins of Discipline and Government in the Church, or to leave private Persons or particular Congregations to take up
"what Form of divine Service they please; when "we look upon what both Houses have resolved
"against Brownism and Anabaptism, properly so "called; when we meditate upon your Protestation and Covenant; and, lastly, when we peruse the Directory and other Ordinances for "Presbyterial Government; and yet find private "and separate Congregations daily erected in divers Parts of the City and elsewhere, and commonly frequented; and Anabaptism, Brownism, and almost all Manner of Heresies, Schisms, and Blasphemies boldly vented and "maintained, by such as to the Point of Church-Government profess themselves independent;
"we cannot but be astonished at the Swarm of "Sectaries which discover themselves every where;
"who, if by their Endeavours they should get "into Places of Profit and Trust in martial or "civil Affairs, may tend much to the Disturbance of the publick Peace, both of the Church "and Commonwealth.

"And we cannot but be thoroughly awakened,
"when we consider how the said Sectaries do encourage themselves, by their Misconstruction
"of that Expression in the late Declaration concerning tender Consciences, to expect a Toleration contrary to the national Covenant, (as "we humbly conceive) which must needs be of
"very great Hindrance to that happy Agreement of all the Differences in Matters of Discipline and Government of the Church, endeavoured by the Wisdom of both Houses of "Parliament, and which hath been so long prayed and hoped for by us.

"And in pursuance of that noble Resolution "of this honourable House, for the due Observation of the Covenant, and their Expectation "of the Conformity of the People of England thereunto, expressed in the late Declaration;
"we do resolve, by the Grace of God, not to "receive Impressions of any forced Construction thereof; being already fully satisfied in our "Consciences, from the very Letter of the Covenant, of the true Meaning and Intention "thereof; and in this Particular of God's Worship and the Discipline and Government of the "Church, without any farther Exposition, we "are clearly convinced.

"That Noblemen, Barons, Knights, Gentlemen, Citizens, Burgesses, Ministers of the "Gospel, and Commons of all Sorts in the "Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland,
"are sincerely, really, and constantly, through
"the Grace of God, to endeavour in their several Places and Callings the Reformation of "Religion in the Kingdoms of England and "Ireland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and
"the Example of the best reformed Churches;
"and are to endeavour to bring the Churches

"of God in the three Kingdoms to the nearest "Conjunction and Uniformity in Religion,
"Confession of Faith, Form of Church-Government, Directory for Worship and Catechising, that we and our Posterity after us may,
"as Brethren, live in Faith and Love, and the "Lord may delight to dwell in the midst of us;
"and in like manner, without Respect of Persons, to endeavour the Extirpation of Popery, "Prelacy, Superstition, Heresy, Schism, Prophaneness, and whatsoever shall be found to be "contrary to sound Doctrine, and the Power of "Godliness; lest we partake in other Mens "Sins, and thereby be in Danger to receive of "their Plagues; and that the Lord may be One,
"and his Name One, in the three Kingdoms:
"And therefore, from the Bottom of our "Hearts, we seriously profess before Almighty
"God, that we do not conceive it in the Power
"of any human Authority to discharge or absolve us from adhering thereunto, and endeavouring in our Places and Callings to maintain and defend the same.

"We also cannot but call to Mind, what "Vows we have made to God in the same Covenant, as well as our former Protestations, to "preserve the Rights and Privileges of the Parliament, and the Liberties of the Kingdoms,
"and to preserve and defend the King's Majesty's Person and Authority, in the Preservation "and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms; that the World may "bear Witness with our Consciences of our "Loyalty, and that we have no Thoughts or "Intentions to diminish his Majesty's just Power
"and Greatness; and do humbly rest in the "Assurances we have received in the many former Declarations of both Houses, concerning "their Intentions towards his Majesty, his "Royal Posterity, and the Peace of this Kingdom.

"And furthermore, we humbly acknowledge "the particular Assurance this honourable House
"hath again given the whole Land, in their "late Declaration to lay hold on the first Opportunity of procuring a safe and well-grounded Peace in the three Kingdoms; which "we doubt not but this honourable House will "pursue with all speedy Dispatch of Propositions to his Majesty, now whilst God doth so "mercifully and miraculously go along with "your Armies, in all the Parts of the Kingdom.

"We may not, in the next Place, forget our "Brethren of Scotland, how first they were invited to engage with this Kingdom in God's "Cause, when yet they were at Peace at Home;
"in what Covenant this Nation is mutually "linked with them; at what Time, in relation
"both to the weak Condition of our Forces
"then, and the Season of the Year, they adventured upon an Enemy warmly lodged, and "well-armed and prepared; what they have "since suffered for this Cause in their own
"Kingdom; how successful ever since God hath "made our Forces, in suppressing the common "Enemies of both Nations; and what present
"Hopes we have of a well-settled Peace, while
"we continue in this mutual Amity; and then "cannot

"cannot but lament the many Jealousies, which "the Enemies of our Peace, Union, and good "Government do now strive to beget between "both Nations, and tremble at the sad Effects thereof, if not timely prevented by the "Wisdom of the Parliaments of both Kingdoms.

"We cannot also but with Reverence look "upon this honourable House, as trusted with "a great Share of the supreme Power of this "Kingdom, and as it is the Representative of "the whole Nation, out of which and by whom
"the Members thereof are chosen, do fix our "Hearts the more upon the same, and do by
"the Mercy of God, so long as this Kingdom
"doth adhere to our Covenant, promise ourselves now, and in all future Ages, great Blessings and Assurances from the Endeavours and "Labours of this honourable House; and, in "regard of this Dignity of Trust, we have and "do submit to all Privileges of Parliament. Yet,
"because it may now become a Tenure for "Life, if this Privilege should be so made Use
"of by such Members of Parliament as owe
"great Sums of Money, and protest divers under them, as Servants, Attendants, Officers,
"yea, and their Servants: If all this should be "exempted from Course of Law, how many "Citizens of London, and other Subjects of this "Kingdom, may be undone?

"We do therefore, with all Duty and Thankfulness, put this honourable House in mind,
"that in a Remonstrance to the Kingdom, of "the fifteenth of December, Anno 1642, we find "this Expression, viz. That for the Matter of "Protections, the Parliament is so sensible of "it, that therein they intend to give whatsoever
"Ease may stand with Honour and Justice;
"and are in a Way of passing a Bill to give Satisfaction concerning the same.

"And now that the Kingdom is almost reduced, by which Means the Revenues of the "Kingdom will be unburthened, and the Customs and Excise increase, and the publick
"Charge of the Kingdom decrease; now that "Delinquents do daily come in and compound;
"and now that the Enemy hath but few Holds
"left; we hope, that the great and extraordinary
"Taxes and Burthens in the City and their "Trade shall be in the future abated; that the "Debts owing to the City and Citizens of London, either by particular Assurances of the "Parliament, or upon the publick Faith of the "Kingdom, be taken Care for and discharged,
"as well as those assigned upon the Excise, and
"may not be diverted from the Uses appointed "by former Acts and Ordinances.

"And we cannot but with all due Acknowledgments remember what this honourable "House hath lately declared concerning the extraordinary Ways the Parliament hath been "put upon for procuring of Money for their "many pressing Occasions. And hereupon we "presume to present to the Consideration of this "honourable House the Committee at Haberdashers-hall, as being one of the greatest Grievances of this City, and which, so long as it
"is continued, doth hinder the Concourse of "People thereunto, and tendeth much to the "Destruction of Trade and Inhabitants thereof.

"And now also we doubt not but God will "give the Parliament some better Means and "Opportunity for the Relief of our bleeding
"Brethren in Ireland, and the suppressing of "those horrid Rebels, and reducing of that "Kingdom; wherein, beside the publick and "common Interest, we are particularly concerned.

"Lastly, We should have much to say for "this City, if we could imagine its Fidelity and "constant Services and Devotion to the Parliament could either be questioned or forgotten.
"That little we shall express on the Part of "the City, is not to repeat how zealous we have "been in the Cause of God and this Parliament;
"how we have spilt our Blood, and spent and "laid out ourselves and Effects in Maintenance
"thereof; how many publick Acknowledgments
"we have by us of the favourable Acceptance of them, and Promises to leave Testimonies thereof to all future Ages: But only to "beseech this honourable House to consider how "much our Hearts may justly be dejected, now
"that God hath followed your Endeavours and "our Prayers with so many Successes, and "brought the War to a probable Period, as to "the Sense of Man, that this City should yet
"in us receive so great a Mark of the Displeasure of this honourable House, as that the "Letter sent us from the Parliament of Scotland should still be detained, although petitioned for; as if this honourable House were "doubtful of our Fidelity: That although, in "the last Propositions to his Majesty at Uxbridge, the Power of the Militia of this City "was fully represented, that it should now be reassumed, and endeavoured to be altered, to
"the endangering of this City and the Parts
"adjacent, as if we now deserved less Trust
"from this honourable House than a Twelve-month ago: And that some late Petitions of "this City, presented to this honourable House,
"should yet lie unanswered: That Quartermen,
"a notorious Sectary, one whom the City not "long since cast out for his Misdemeanors,
"should presume, in Contempt of the Privileges "and Government thereof, to enter the City, and "to make Proclamation with Trumpet, without "acquainting the Lord-Mayor therewith; the "like of which (to our best Knowledge) in no
"Age, when the City was most neglected, was "ever so much as attempted.

"And lastly, That after the present Lord-Mayor had so faithfully behaved himself in his "Office, and, with the Testimony of the City,
"so carefully discharged the same, that yet he "should be suspected and questioned upon general Information, which (it may well be doubted) might be designed to divide between the "Parliament and the City.

"We could add much more of the daily Invektives against us from the Pulpit and other "Places, where the Bouteffews of these Sectaries
"are admitted; the scurrilous and seditious
"Pamphlets daily broached against and in the "City; and the great Contempt of, and Discouragement unto the Ministers of the Gospel,
"who

" who adhere to the Presbyterian Government.
 " But we shall conclude with this brief and humble Representation of our Petitions and Desires to this honourable House, in the Name of the whole City :

" 1. That some strict and speedy Course may be taken for the suppressing of all private and separate Congregations.

" 2. That all Anabaptists, Brownists, Hereticks, Schismaticks, Blasphemers, and all such Sectaries as conform not to the publick Discipline established or to be established by Parliament, may be fully declared against, and some effectual Course settled for proceeding against such Persons.

" 3. That as we are all Subjects of one Kingdom, so all may be equally required to yield Obedience unto the Government set forth, or to be set forth by the Parliament.

" 4. That no Persons disaffected to the Presbyterian Government, set forth or to be set forth by the Parliament, may be employed in any Place of publick Trust.

" 5. That this honourable House will please to hasten Propositions to his Majesty for settling of a safe and well-grounded Peace amongst us, after so long and unnatural a War.

" 6. That this honourable House, according to the Covenant and Treaties, will please to study all Means to preserve the Union between the two Nations of England and Scotland, and to remove all Jealousies, which may endanger our mutual Agreement.

" 7. That this honourable House will please to consider of some Means, whereby the Privilege of Parliament, which its Members, their Servants, and others enjoy, by being protected and exempted from being proceeded against for their Debts, may be so qualified, as that the Subject may be able to recover his own in some due Time.

" 8. That all publick Revenues and Receipts may be employed to publick Uses, that so the Taxes of the City may be abated.

" 9. That the Estates and Compositions of the Delinquents may, according to the Engagements by Ordinances of Parliament, be applied to discharge the great Sums owing to this City and Citizens.

" 10. That the Plymouth Duty may be taken off the Trade, especially now the West is reduced.

" 11. That the Committee at Haberdashers-Hall may be presently dissolved, or at least so limited and regulated, as that the City may have no Cause of Complaint.

" 12. That the reducing of the Kingdom of Ireland may be taken into Consideration, before the good Party there be too far waisted and discouraged.

" 13. That the original Letter from the Parliament of Scotland to this City may be returned.

" 14. That the City may enjoy the Militia fully, as it was presented at the last Treaty at Unbridge.

" 15. That Quarterman may be brought to some exemplary Punishment for the Affront

" done by him to the Privileges and Government of this City.

" 16. That the Lord-Mayor of this City may be fully vindicated.

" And lastly, and above all, That this honourable House will please not to look upon any Expressions of this our Remonstrance and Petition as charging any thing upon this honourable House, or as intended to intrench upon any Privileges thereof, but favourably to accept thereof, and so interpret the same, as, from a single and humble Heart, it is sincerely, and without any By-ends, or to comply with any Party whatsoever, intended and breathed forth from the sad Hearts of the Petitioners, who are overwhelmed with many Fears on all Sides; and who call God, the Searcher of all Hearts, to witness, that, according to their Covenant and Duty, their Zeal, Devotion and Obedience is as fervent and prostrate as ever to serve the Parliament with their Lives and Estates against all the Enemies of our Peace, to conjoin the City more and more to the Parliament, and to maintain the Union of both Nations against all Opposers whatsoever."

The Lords returned Thanks for this Testimony of their Duty and good Affections, and acknowledged the great Services and Merit of the City: But the Commons had a different Notion of the same; for the independent Members shewed their Detestation thereof, because by it the Presbyterian Faction in the City endeavoured to prescribe Laws to the Parliament. However, for Answer, they acquainted them, that they would take the Remonstrance into Consideration on a proper Occasion. In the mean Time, Designs were set on Foot to raise Divisions among the Citizens; to which End the Independents were prevailed upon to present a Counter-Petition, signed by many thousands of Citizens, setting forth the Power of Parliaments, and the Labours and Successes of the present Parliament, which causeth the more Opposition against them, prays them to proceed in managing the Affairs of the Kingdom according to their own best Wisdoms, and the Trust reposed in them, and to punish Delinquents, and procure Peace; and that they would never suffer the free-born People of this Kingdom to be enslaved upon any Pretence whatsoever, or any other to share with the Parliament, or to prescribe to them, in the Government or Power of this Nation: That the Petitioners will stand by the Parliament with their Lives and Fortunes. For this acceptable Petition, the Petitioners were called in, and had the Thanks of the House for their good Affections.

Tho' the Presbyterian Remonstrance was but badly received by the House of Commons, yet their Brethren of Scotland greatly applauded them for their hearty Zeal, as will appear by the following Letter from the General Assembly of that Kingdom to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of this City:

*A Letter of Thanks to the Lord
Mayor, &c. from the Scotch Presbyterians.*

"in your humble Remonstrance and Petition
"to the honourable Houses of Parliament,
"hath so revived the Remembrance of your "former Faith and Zeal, and proclaimed you
"the worthy Seed of so noble Ancestors in that "famous City, as we cannot but acknowledge "with all Thankfulness the Grace of God be"stowed on you, and stir you up to take Notice,
"how, since you were precious in the Lord's "Sight, you have been ever honourable. The "Lord hath ever loved you, given Men for you,
"and People for your Life: What an Honour
"was it in the Days of old, when the Fire of the "Lord was in Zion, and his Furnace in your Je"rusalem, (even in Queen Mary's Days) that "there were found in you Men that loved not "their Lives unto Death?

"What a Glory in After-times, when Satan
"had his Throne, and Antichrist his Seat, in the "midst of you, that there were still found not a "few that kept their Garments clean? But the "greatest Praise of the good Hand of God up"on you hath been in this, That amidst the "many Mists of Error and Heresy, which have "risen from the bottomless Pit, to bespot the "Face and darken the Glory of the Church,
"while the Bride is making ready for the Lamb,
"you have held the Truth, and most piously en"deavoured the settling of Christ upon his "Throne.

"We need not remember how zealous you "have been in the Cause of God, nor how you "have laid out yourselves and Estates in the "Maintenance thereof, nor how many Acknow"ledgments of the same you have had from the "honourable Houses, nor how precious a Re"membrance will be had of you in After-
"ages, for your selling of all to buy the Pearl
"of great Price: We only at this Time do ad"mire, and in the Inward of our Hearts do bless
"the Lord for your right and deep Apprehen"sions of the great and important Matters of "Christ in his Royal Crown, and of the King"doms in their Union, while the Lord maketh "Offer to bring our Ship (so much afflicted and "tossed with Tempest) to the safe Harbour of "Truth and Peace.

"Right memorable is your Zeal against Sects
"and Sectaries; your Care of Reformation ac"cording to the Word of God and the Example "of the best Reformed Churches; your earnest
"Endeavouring and noble Adventures for pre"serving of the Rights and Privileges of Parlia"ment, and Liberties of the Kingdom, together "with his Majesty's just Power and Greatness;
"and your high Profession, That it is not in the "Power of any human Authority to discharge or "absolve you from adhering unto that our so so"lemnly sworn League and Covenant, or to en"force upon you any Sense contrary to the Let"ter of the same.

"Besides your other good Services done to the "Lord and unto us, in strengthening the Hands "of the Reverend Assembly of Divines, and of "our Commissioners, in their asserting of the "Government of Christ, (which the more it be "tried, will be ever found the more precious "Truth) and vindicating of the same from the "Usurpation of Man, and Contempt of the "Wicked: These all, as they are so many "Testimonies of your Piety, Loyalty and un"daunted Resolution to stand for Christ; so "are they, and shall ever be, so many Obli"gations upon us your Brethren, to esteem

"highly of you in the Lord, and to bear you
"on our Breasts before him Night and Day, and "to contribute our utmost Endeavours, and to "improve all Opportunities for your Encou"ragement.

"And we do beseech you in the Lord, Ho"nourable and Well-beloved, go on in this your "Strength, and in the Power of his Might, who "hath honoured you to be faithful. Stand fast in "the Liberty, wherewith Christ hath made you "free; and, in pursuance of his Truth, we are "broken.

"Now the Lord Jesus Christ himself, and "God even our Father, which hath loved and

"solation and good Hope through Grace, com"fort your Hearts, and establish you in every "good Word and Work.

This Letter was gratefully received, and Thanks returned by the Common Council to the Scotish Commissioners, who presented the same.

The Parliament, at this critical Juncture, being extremely jealous of their Safety, to obviate all Mischiefs that might arise from the great Number of Royalists repairing to the City, published an Order, That all such Persons, of what Degree or Quality soever, Officers, Soldiers and others, as come out of Oxford, or any other of the King's Garrisons, while they remained within the Cities of London and Westminster, and Lines of Communication, should not go armed, or keep any Arms in their Lodgings or Houses; and after nine of the Clock at Night, not to be out of their Lodgings.

That all Persons, of what Degree or Quality soever, comprized within the Articles of Oxon, Exon, and all other Garrisons, that are already come to the Cities of London and Westminster, and Places within the Lines of Communication, should before the ninth of July repair to Guildhall, Lon- don, and there, in Presence of any three of the Committee of the Militia of London, produce their Passes, and engage themselves by Promise not to bear Arms against the Parliament, nor wilfully to do any Act prejudicial to their Affairs, so long as they remained in their Quarters; and that all Persons, of what Degree or Quality soever, comprized within any of the said Articles, as should hereafter come within the said Cities and Lines of Communication, should within four Days after their coming repair to Guildhall, London, and should there likewise produce their Passes, and make the like Engagements: And whosoever should neglect or refuse to observe this Order, or do any thing contrary to the said Articles, should forfeit the Benefit of the said Articles.

Which the Commons accepted of, and returned the Common Council Thanks.

On the first of March, a Petition, signed by many thousands of young Men and Apprentices of this City, was presented to the House of Commons, earnestly desiring, "That all Occasions of Breaches between the well-affected Party may be taken away; that those who have adventured their Lives for the Parliament may be countenanced, and the contrary Party not favoured; and that a sufficient Guard and Strength may be kept up for the Safety of the Kingdom; that they may enjoy the Grants and Privileges of the City, and that some Times for Recreation may be set apart for Servants."

For this the Petitioners received the Thanks of the House for their good Affections.

On the seventeenth of the aforesaid Month, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council presented a Petition to the House of Commons, wherein they professed their great Zeal to the Parliament and Covenant, and their terrible Apprehensions by the Advance of the Army towards the City, and of a dangerous Petition now upon the Anvil, a Copy whereof they had annexed to theirs; praying the said Petition might be suppressed, and the Army disbanded; and that they might annually chuse their Committee of Militia.

To which the House returned for Answer, That most of the Particulars in their Petition were then under Consideration, and that the House would do what they thought most for the Ease, Safety and Satisfaction of the City and Kingdom; and, after returning Thanks for their sincere and hearty Affection, acquainted them, That they had referred the annexed Petition to the Consideration of a Committee, to be treated according to its Merit.

All Things now tending to a Rupture between the Parliament and Army, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council drew up and presented the following Petition to the House of Commons on the eighth of June:

"Shewing,

"That as your Petitioners acknowledge the Parliament of England to be the supreme Judicature of the Kingdom, from whom the Subjects of this Nation have found Shelter in Danger, and Relief in Distress; so now your Petitioners, having (with the whole Kingdom) a great Share and Interest in these Privileges, do therefore at this Time humbly, yet earnestly, present these their important Desires to this Honourable House:

Ibid.

City Petition to prevent a Rupture between the Parliament and the Army.

"1. That all honourable Ways and Means may be used to prevent the further Effusion and Shedding of Christian Blood; and to that End, That all just Satisfaction may be given to the Army, and all other Soldiers who have adventured their Lives for the Defence of this Parliament and Kingdom; that though the Condition of your Affairs do not enable you to give full Satisfaction at present, yet that their Accounts may be adjusted, and put into a certain Way of Payment, to the quieting of many thousand discontented Persons; which, we humbly conceive, will be much to the Glory of God, the Honour of the Parliament, and Quiet of the Kingdom.

"2. That according to our Allegiance, the Covenant and Agreement of both Nations, his Majesty's Royal Person may be preserved, and so disposed of, that the Parliaments of both Kingdoms may have free Access unto him, that thereby a right Understanding may be obtained between them; and this tottering Church and Kingdom, after all our Fears, Sorrows and Sufferings, may enjoy the Blessing of a well-grounded and long-desired Peace; whereby this Kingdom may be the better enabled to send speedy Relief and Help to miserable bleeding Ireland.

"3. That, for the better Defence and Security of the Parliament and City in these tumultuous and troublesome Times, this Honourable House will be pleased to renew so much of an Ordinance of Parliament of the seventeenth of January, 1645, as concerneth the raising, maintaining and ordering of Horses, and Power of making Searches, (a Copy whereof is hereunto annexed;) whereby the Committee of the Militia of London, and Parishes mentioned in the Weekly Bills of Mortality, may be the better enabled to suppress all tumultuous Assemblies,

"and to prevent any Dangers that may happen
"to the Parliament and City.

"And as this City, from the Beginning of these "Troubles, have faithfully adhered to the Parliam"ent; so we are resolved, by the Blessing of "God, never to desert the same; but, with the "utmost of our Lives and Estates, will stand and "fall, live and die, with the Parliament of Eng"land, according to our Covenant."

Ibid.

How recited.

After some Debates upon this Petition, an Ordinance was ordered to be brought in, according to the Desire of the Petitioners; who being thereupon called in a second Time, the Speaker, by Command of the House, declared to them the true Sense the Commons had of their constant Care and sincere Affection for the Parliament, who were well assured, That no Vicissitude whatsoever could alienate their Duty and Love; for which he gave them the heartiest Thanks of the House; and also took Notice of the Lord-Mayor and Committee of Militia's ready Compliance with the Order of Parliament, by so seasonably sending a good Guard for their Security at such a feditious Juncture; for which he was likewise to return Thanks to the Lord-Mayor and Committee of Militia: And, in Compliance with the Desires of the Citizens in their above-recited Petition, the following Ordinance of Parliament was published on the eleventh of the same Month:

Ibid.

*Ordinance imparting the London
Militia to search for Arms, &c.*

"The Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament do hereby declare and ordain, That the "Committee of the Militia of London shall have "Power, and are hereby authorized, by them"selves, or such as they shall appoint, to search
"all Houses and Places within the Lines of Com"munication, and Parishes mentioned within "the Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Hamlets
"of the Tower, where the said Committee shall "have Cause to suspect, that any Papists are, or "other Persons, who cannot give a good Ac"count of their Business or Abode within the "Limits aforesaid, or who have or shall disco"ver their ill Affection to the Parliament, by "any Offence for which they ought to be se"questered or punished by any Ordinance of "Parliament; and likewise to search for Arms,
"Ammunition, and Materials for War, in the "Custody of such Persons, and to seize and take "away the same; and to commit such Persons to "safe Custody, or to expel them out of the Li"mits aforesaid, if they shall see Cause; and, in "case of Resistance, to command any Constable
"or Constables to break open any House or Place "within the said Limits, where any Resistance
"shall be made.

"And it is further declared and ordained, That
"the said Committee shall hereby have Power "and Authority to charge such Inhabitants, who "are constantly dwelling within the Lines of "Communication, and Parishes mentioned with"in the Weekly Bills of Mortality, and Hamlets
"of the Tower, or such Persons who have any
"Stocks going in Trade within the Limits afo-

"them to be able) to find and maintain Horses,
"with Riders and Furniture, at their proper
"Charge, for the Defence of the City and Parts "adjacent, (so as no Person shall be charged for

"the raising and maintaining more than two "Horses) to be put under such Commanders
"and Officers, as the said Committee shall think "fit. And, if any Person or Persons, who shall "be charged to find Horses, Riders and Furni"ture, as is aforesaid, shall refuse or neg"lect to provide the same within three Days
"after Notice thereof given to them; or left in "Writing at their Dwellings, they shall forfeit and "pay twenty Pounds: And if they shall neglect
"or refuse to send forth their Horse, or Horses,
"with Riders, provided and furnished as is afo-
"said, when and as often as he or they shall be "summoned thereunto by the said Committee,
"or such Commanders or Officers as they shall "appoint; in default thereof, that then they "shall forfeit and pay ten Shillings for every such
"Failing, or suffer four Days Imprisonment,
"without Bail or Mainprize, to be inflicted "upon every such Offender, in such Manner
"and Form, and by such Officers and Persons,
"as are appointed for the inflicting of Penalties
"upon Failing of the Foot-Soldiers of the "Trained-Bands, expressed in an Ordinance
"dated the second Day of May, Anno Dom. 1643:
"And the said Fines to be employed by the "said Committee toward the Payment of the "Commanders and Officers of the said Horse,
"and for such other Uses as the said Committee "shall find necessary for the better carrying on "the said Service.

"And be it hereby further declared and ordain"ed, That for the better executing this present
"Ordinance, and such former Ordinances which "are now in force concerning the Militia of the "City of London, and the Places aforesaid,
"Power and Authority be hereby given to the "said Committee to make one more Sub-Com"mittee or Sub-Committees within the said
"Limits, as they shall think fit, for the executing
"this, and the said former Ordinances. And "all Constables, Headboroughs, and other infe"rior Officers, within the said Limits, and all
"Commanders and Soldiers of the said Militia,
"are hereby required to obey and execute such
"Warrants, as they from Time to Time shall re"ceive from the said Committee or Sub-Com"mittees for and concerning the Execution of "the same accordingly.

"And lastly, That no privileged Place or "Person, within the Limits aforesaid, shall be "exempted from the Power of this Ordinance,
"except the Peers of this Realm, and the Mem"bers of the House of Commons, and Assistants
"of the House of Peers, and Officers and At"tendants of both Houses of Parliament respec"tively, who shall be exempted from this Ordi"nance, and all Things therein contained: Pro"vided, that this Ordinance shall continue for a "Month, and no longer."

At the same Time 'twas ordered, That a Committee of both Houses be appointed to join with the Committee of the London Militia, to deliberate upon the occasional Arming of all Persons within the City of London, Westminster, and Lines of Communication, for the Safety of the Parliament and City. But in the mean Time, Advice being brought of the Army's Approach towards London, the Parliament was so greatly intimidated, that

that they immediately revived the Committee of Safety, and ordered them to sit the same Night for the Security of the Kingdom. In the Interim the Common Council and Sheriffs of the City went and acquainted the Commons of their having received the following Letter of Yesterday's Date, from the Army at Roydon, addressed to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London:

*Rush. Col.
vol. 4. p. 1.*

*Letter from the Army
to the City of London.*

" Right Honourable and Worthy Friends,

" Having by our Letters and other Addresses, presented by our General to the Honourable House of Commons, endeavoured to give Satisfaction of the Cleanness of our just Demands, and also in Papers published by us remonstrated the Grounds of our Proceedings in Prosecution whereof; all which having been exposed to publick View, we are confident, have come to your Hands, and at least received a charitable Construction from you. The Sum of all which our Desires, as Soldiers, are no other, than a Desire of Satisfaction to our Demands as Soldiers, and Reparation upon those who have, to the utmost, improved all Opportunities and Advantages, by false Suggestions, Misrepresentations and otherwise, for the Destruction of this Army, with a perpetual Blot of Ignominy upon it; which we should not value, if it singly concerned our own Particulars, being ready to deny ourselves in this, as we have done in other Cases for the Kingdom's Good: But under this Pretence, finding no less involved in it, than the Overthrow of the Privileges both of Parliament and People, wherein, rather than they shall fail in their Designs, or we not receive in the Eyes of all good Men what is just, endeavour to engage the Kingdom in a new War and this singly; by those who, when the Truth of these Things shall be made to appear, will be found the Authors of these Evils that are feared, as having no other Way to protect themselves from Question and Punishment, but by putting the Kingdom into Blood, under Pretences of their Honour of, and their Love to the Parliament, as if that were dearer to them than us, or as if they had given greater Proof of their Faithfulness to it than we.

" But we perceive that, under these Veils and Pretences, they seek to interest their Design in the City of London, as if that City ought to make good their Miscarriages, and should prefer a few self-seeking Men before the Welfare of the Publick; and indeed we have found these Men so active to accomplish their Designs, and have such apt Instruments for their Turn in that City, that we have Cause to suspect they may engage many therein, upon Mistakes, which are easily swallowed in Times of such Prejudice against them, that have given (we may speak it without Vanity) the most publick Testimony of their good Affections to the Publick, and to that City in particular.

" For the Thing we insist upon, as Englishmen, and surely our being Soldiers hath not stript us of that Interest, although our malicious Enemies would have it so; We desire a Settlement of the Peace of the Kingdom, and of the Liberties of the Subject, according to the Votes and Declarations of Parliament, which, before we took up Arms, were (by the Parliament) used as Arguments and Inducements to invite us, and divers of our dear Friends, out; some of which have lost their Lives in this War; which being, by God's Blessing, finished, we think we have as much Right to demand, and desire to see a happy Settlement, as we have to our Money, and the other common Interest of Soldiers, which we have insisted upon. We find also the ingenuous and honest People, in almost all the Parts of the Kingdom where we come, full of the Sense of Ruin and Misery, if the Army should be disbanded, before the Peace of the Kingdom, and those other Things before-mentioned, have a full and perfect Settlement.

" We have said before, and profess it now, we desire no Alteration in the Civil Government.

" We desire not to intermeddle with, or in the least to interrupt the settling of the Presbyterian Government. Nor do we seek to open a Way to licentious Liberty, under Pretence of obtaining Ease for tender Consciences. We profess, as ever, in these Things, when the State have once made a Settlement, we have nothing to say, but to submit or suffer: Only we could wish, that every good Citizen, and every Man that walks peaceably in a blameless Conversation, and is beneficial to the Commonwealth, may have Liberty and Encouragement, being according to the just Policy of all States, even to Justice itself.

" These in brief are our Desires, and Things for which we stand, beyond which we shall not go; and for the obtaining of these Things we are drawing near your City; professing sincerely from our Hearts, we intend not Evil towards you, and declaring, with all Confidence and Assurance, That if you appear not against us in these our just Desires, to assist that wicked Party, that would embroil us and the Kingdom, nor we, nor our Soldiers shall give you the least Offence: We come not to do any Act to prejudice the Being of Parliaments, or to the Hurt of this, in order to the present Settlement of the Kingdom: We seek the Good of all, and we shall here wait, or remove to a farther Distance, there to abide, if once we be assured that a speedy Settlement of Things be in Hand, until they be accomplished; which done, we shall be most ready, either all of us, or so many of the Army as the Parliament shall think fit, to disband, or go for Ireland.

" And although you may suppose, that a rich City may seem an enticing Bait to poor hungry Soldiers to venture far to gain the Wealth thereof; yet, if not provoked by you, we do profess, rather than any such Evil should fall out, the Soldiers shall make their Way through our Blood to effect it; and we can say this for most of them, for your better Assurance, that they so little value their Pay, in comparison of higher Concernments to a publick Good, that

"that rather than they will be unrighted in the "Matter of their Honesty and Integrity, "which hath suffered by the Men they aim at,
"and desire Justice upon, or want the Settle"ment of the Kingdom's Peace, and theirs,
"with their Fellow-Subjects Liberties, they will "lose all; which may be a strong Assurance to "you, that it is not your Wealth they seek, but "the Things tending in common to your and "their Welfare, that they may attain: You shall "do like Fellow-Subjects and Brethren, if that "you solicit the Parliament for them on their "Behalf.

"If, after all this, you, or a considerable Part "of you, be seduced to take up Arms in Oppo"sition to, or Hindrance of, these our just Under"takings, we hope, by this brotherly Premoni-"tion, to the Sincerity whereof we call God to "Witness, we have freed ourselves from all that "Ruin which may befall that great and popu"lous City, having thereby washed our Hands
"thereof. We rest

"Your affectionate Friends to serve you,

ment.

After some Debates upon this Letter, a Committee of both Houses was ordered to repair into the City, to deliberate with the Committee of Militia upon proper Measures to be taken in so dangerous a Juncture; and who, being met, spent the Night in Consultation; as did almost all the House of Commons; who at last ordered Letters to be dispatched from both Houses to the General, to desire that the Army might not advance within five-and-twenty Miles of this City. But Intelligence arriving of the Army's nearer Approach, and that the Horse would be at London next Day at Noon, it occasioned a Consternation inexpressible among People of all Ranks; wherefore the Committee of the City Militia published an Order for the immediate Shutting-up of all Shops, and the Trained-Bands to arm, upon Pain of Death; however, upon a further Consideration, they were dismissed, only strong Guards being commanded to the Line, which incircled the Cities of London and Westminster, Borough of Southwark, and Parts contiguous; whereupon the Shops were opened again, and the City restored to its former State of Quiet.

In the mean Time the Common Council being assembled, they, after mature Deliberation upon the aforesaid Letter, came to a Resolution, with the Approbation of Parliament, to return the following Answer, which they sent by a Deputation of four Aldermen and eight Commoners, who were likewise empower'd to treat with the General about a right Understanding and fair Correspondence between the City and Army:

Ibid.

The City's
Answer.

"Right Honourable and Worthy Commanders,
"Your Letter, dated at Roylton, the tenth of "this Instant June, We, the Mayor, Aldermen,
"and Commons in Common-Council assembled,
"have seriously perused, and presented a Copy
"thereof to each House of Parliament; and, for "your and our farther Satisfaction, we have "sent a Committee of Aldermen and Commons

"with this our Answer thereto; and, to pre"vent all Misunderstanding betwixt that so well-
"deserving Army and this City, we take notice,
"by that Letter, of your drawing near this "City with your Army, for the obtaining your "Desires, as Soldiers, and as Englishmen; and
"of what you do, and do not intend thereby;
"more especially, that you come not to do any "Act to prejudice the Being of Parliaments, or "to the Hurt of this, in order to the present
"Settlement of the Kingdom; and of your De"claration, that if we appear not against you in "those your just Desires, to assist those that "would embroil you and the Kingdom in a new "War, that you intend no Evil towards the "City, nor that you or your Soldiers shall give
"it the least Offence.

"But we desire, that in regard your Ap"proaches may, contrary to your Intentions, be "an Occasion to increase the Price of Victuals,
"and to discontented Persons to make some ill
"Use thereof in raising Tumults, that you will "be pleased to take it into your further Conside"ration, and, in order to your own Resolution
"concerning the City's Safety, to forbear quar-
"tering within thirty Miles thereof, which we "shall look upon as a special Evidence of the "Sincerity of your Intentions expressed in your "Letter.

"We cannot pass by that Expression of yours,
"to hazard your own Blood for our Preserva"tion; nor can we return you more real Thanks
"for it than this, to declare our Resolutions,
"that the very Thoughts of engaging this King"dom in a new War we unanimously detest;
"and that we intend no Evil to you, but only
"defend the Parliament and ourselves against "any unlawful Violence: For Prevention where"of, lest it should happen, (though you never "intended it) we have, by the Direction of Par"liament, and for our own Safety, put ourselves
"in a Posture of Defence, but not with the least
"Intention to do any Prejudice to that Army,
"whom God hath made so eminent an Instru"ment of our Deliverance and Safety.

"And we do disavow the raising of any
"Forces, or taking up of any Arms, in Oppo"sition to, or with Intent to hinder the obtain"ing of your just Demands; yea, so far have
"we been, and shall be from that, that, both be"fore and since the Receipt of your Letter, we "have made our humble Addresses to the Parlia"ment for the obtaining thereof; which we shall "not fail to prosecute, as Occasion shall present:
"Only this Request we earnestly make, in the "Name of the City, That you will be careful,
"when you descend into Particulars, to desire no
"more than what shall be just and reasonable,
"and in such a Way as may consist with the Ho"nour, Power, and Privilege of Parliament,
"Liberty of the Subject, and the Safety of the "City and Kingdom; and we shall appeal to "God, and to the present and future Generations,
"to judge of your and our Performance, ac"cording to the several Engagements.

City Petition to Parliament thereupon, complaining of bad Management, and prescribing Rules for better Regulation of Government.

a Letter from the General and chief Officers of the Army, to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, in answer to theirs of the twelfth current, containing many endearing Expressions, with a hearty Desire of maintaining a good Understanding between the Army and City, and that the only Way for the effecting of which would be to prevent raising of Forces in the City. This Letter being read in the Common Council, to the Satisfaction of all, an Answer was prepared to be returned by the said Commissioners; whereby they assured the General, That no Forces should be raised in London against the Army; and, instead of which, they intended to move the Parliament for Money for their more regular Payment, that thereby they might the better be enabled to remove to a greater Distance. This Answer being agreed to, it was sent to the Commons for their Approbation; who being previously acquainted with its Contents, as also of the Transactions of the City Commissioners with the General of the Army, they approved of both, and, with the Thanks of the House, were desired to proceed in that laudable Affair of Mediation, between the Parliament, City, and Army. Strange were the Vicissitudes of Fortune at this Time; for the Parliament, that just before had been adored by most Men, were now become the Dupes of the Army, whom every one fervently revered!

The Citizens of London, not a little pleased with their mediatorial Office, prepared another Letter to the Army, to which they desired the Concurrence of the House of Commons; who after long Debates (with a dastardly Spirit, though they did not approve of the same) left it to the Common Council to do therein as they should think proper.

On the same Day the Lord-Mayor, with the Approbation of the Common Council, published an Order, enjoining all the Trained-Bands and Auxiliaries of the City to appear personally at their Colours upon every emergent Occasion (reminding them of their former Omissions) for suppressing of Tumults and other unlawful Assemblies in the City.

At the same Time, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council received a Letter from the General and other Officers of the Army, acquainting them of their nearer Approach to London; but assured them, that by their Advance no Prejudice was intended to the City; but, on the contrary, they would inviolably maintain their Faith and Promise to the Citizens, and ever be as tender of their Peace and Welfare, as of that of themselves. These soothing Expressions occasioned the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council to present this Petition to both Houses of Parliament:

"That your Petitioners cannot but call to mind the Deliverance which they and the whole Kingdom did justly expect from this Parliament, after so many Years suffering under the Power of an arbitrary Government, both in their spiritual and temporal Concernments; and they do humbly acknowledge, that this Parliament hath removed many Obstacles, and are confident would, by this Time, with God's Blessing, have restored the Kingdom to its just Liberties, and settled a sure Foundation for its future Happiness, if they had not been diverted by the great Contrivers of the Kingdom's Slavery, who, rather than submit to the Justice of this High Court, have raised and maintained a bloody, unnatural, and long War against the Parliament of England. In the Suppression whereof as much Blood hath been spilt, so great Treasure hath been spent; and the Kingdom is still left involved in many Engagements and Debts, both to their Brethren of Scotland, (who, like true Christian Brethren, came in to its Aid against the common Enemy) and also to a Multitude of Officers and Soldiers, and others the well-affected People of this Land, who did engage in the Defence and Support thereof.

And although the Petitioners, in the Obligation which the Cause of God and the publick Safety did cast upon them, have all this Time both freely contributed and cheerfully submitted to many great and unusual Assessments, which also could not be levied but in an extraordinary Way; yet they cannot be unsensible how much arbitrary Power hath been, during these Distempers, exercised by Committees and others, by whom the good Subject hath been oftentimes more oppressed, than the Delinquents suppressed, and who have mismanaged the Receipts and Revenues, which were designed to maintain the publick Charge, so disorderly and ineffectually, that the Kingdom cannot but be unsatisfied concerning the due Employment thereof, and doubt that much of the publick Money hath been employed to private Ends, and remains obscured in the Hands of such as were intrusted with the Collection of those Assessments, and the Improvement of all Sequestration to the Publick, and best Advantage.

And indeed, the Petitioners have Reason to attribute much of the late Discontent and Disorders of divers Officers and Soldiers unto the Want of such Monies, as, if duly collected and faithfully managed, might have in good part, if not fully, satisfied the Soldiery; and do humbly conceive, that the Parliament hath so much the more Reason to enquire into the same, because that from this Defect have risen those late Attempts of some of the Soldiery; and there is such Use made of the Vote passed by the Parliament for their Satisfaction, to invite and draw together very great Numbers of Officers and Soldiers from all Parts of the Kingdom, under Pretence of sharing the Money so obtained, that it may very much endanger the Peace and Safety of the City.

The Petitioners therefore, for Remedy of the said Grievances, and Prevention of those Dangers which otherwise may be feared, and for Settlement of this miserable and distracted Kingdom, do humbly pray,

1. That present Command be given, that no Officer of War, or Soldier, other than such as are already come in, do enter the Line of Communication, under any Pretence to share in the Monies lately appointed by Parliament towards the Satisfaction of any Arrears.

2. That

" 2. That such Officers and Soldiers, who are already paid according to the late several Ordinances of Parliament in this Behalf made, if their usual Habitation and Employment have been within the Line, be enjoined forthwith to betake themselves to their Callings, or some honest Condition of living, and to be prohibited from their looser and tumultuous wandering and meeting within this City, and other Places adjacent, under Penalty of losing their Arrears: And that such Officers, and Soldiers, as have Dwellings, or other Relations in the Country, be required to depart the Line within two Days after Publication; and to return to their Homes or Habitations, and there to apply themselves to their several Callings, upon the like Forfeiture of their Arrears; except such, whose present and lawful Occasions may require their Continuance, to be approved of by a Committee for that Purpose to be appointed: And that the Parliament would please to make some speedy and certain Provision for the satisfying all Arrears to the Soldiery, who have served the Parliament, within some short and convenient Time, to be paid in the several Counties and Places of their Abode, according to the Conditions of their Entertainments.

" 3. That all Officers and Soldiers, who have been in Arms against the Parliament, or others who have assisted or contributed therunto, be enjoined, upon Pain of Imprisonment, within twenty-four Hours after Publication, to repair to their several Habitations, and fall to their lawful Callings: And that such Officers, Soldiers and others, as have no Habitations nearer, be commanded forthwith to withdraw themselves, and to continue, at least, twenty Miles from London, for the Space of forty Days; except such as, by a Committee authorized and appointed to that Purpose, shall have Licence, upon just Cause by them allowed, to remain in or near London so long Time, until they have dispatched such Business as they shall have in or near the City; which ended, then presently to retire twenty Miles from the City, upon Pain of Imprisonment, as aforesaid.

" 4. That such Commanders and Soldiers, as, according to former Orders of the Parliament, have come in from the Army, having received their Monies, may be otherwise disposed of, as the Parliament shall think fit.

" 5. That all Persons whatsoever, that are possessed of any Monies or Goods belonging to the Publick, may be enjoined to bring the same within one Month after Publication, into such publick Treasury as is or shall be appointed for that Purpose, under Penalty to forfeit treble the Value, which shall be duly proved to be so concealed; the Half of the Forfeiture to be given to such Persons as shall make Proof of such Concealment, and the other Half to be applied to the Service of the State.

" 6. That all Revenues (as well such as are due by Sequestration, or otherwise) be managed under such Commissions, and by such Persons, as notwithstanding any Privilege of Parliament, or otherwise, may be held to such Rules as are or shall be prescribed therein by Ordinance of Parliament, and be liable (for Breach thereof) to answer the same in due Course of Law; and that no arbitrary Power may be exercised to the contrary by any Person whatsoever.

" 7. That the Parliament would for the present please to lay aside all Businesses of lesser Consequence, of private Concernment, and improve their Time, and utmost Endeavour, that such Laws may be prepared for his Majesty's Royal Concurrence, as may settle the Government of the Church, secure the People from all unlawful and arbitrary Power whatsoever in future, and to restore his Majesty to his just Rights and Authority, according to the Covenant; without all which the Petitioners can never expect any lasting Establishment; that so this long divided and distracted Kingdom may attain to the Blessings of Peace and Unity in Church and Commonwealth.

" 8. And, that the People may be the better secured to enjoy the intended Effects of such Laws as shall be so made with the Royal Assent, that especial Care be taken, that all Officers of State, and other Ministers of Justice, may be Persons of Honour, of considerable Interest, and of known Integrity to the Parliament and Kingdom.

" 9. That the Parliament would please to provide for the carrying on of the Affairs in Ireland, by a speedy Transporting the Forces which lie ready on the Sea-side, and such others as shall be willing to engage in that Service, and by such continual Supplies as are requisite to reduce that Kingdom to the Obedience of the Crown of England, and rescue the good Party left there out of the bloody Hands of those barbarous Rebels. And, for the better Encouragement of the Subjects of this Kingdom to continue their Supplies for that Service, that, with as much Speed as conveniently may be, the Parliament will please to take Care that the People be eased of such extraordinary Charges and Burthens, as have long lain, and still remain upon this Kingdom.

" 10. That, by just and good Means, the Correspondence with our Brethren of Scotland may, according to the national Covenant, be maintained and preserved.

" 11. That this Honourable House would please to give Order for a speedy Examination of all unlawful Elections and Returns of the Members thereof, and purge the House of all such as have been unduly chosen, or have been in Arms or in Action against the Parliament, and provide for the Supply of their Room, according to the Laws of the Land.

" 12. That some speedy Course may be taken for the deciding of all Causes formerly determinable in the Court of Admiralty; the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and the Correspondence with foreign Nations, being very much prejudiced, disturbed, and endangered, for want of due Provision herein, as hath formerly at large been represented unto the Honourable House.

" 13. And

" 13. And lastly, That Satisfaction being made " by Delinquents, according to the Wisdom of " Parliament, an Act of Oblivion may be passed
" for an utter Abolition and final Reconcilement
" of all Parties and Differences, and for the quiet " Settling of Peace, Love, and Unity among the " Subjects of this Kingdom."

Nothing can more evince the declining Power of the Parliament, than this Petition: For, notwithstanding the gross Hints therein of their defective Management, and the prescribing, as it were, Rules for their future Regulation; yet the Petitioners had the Thanks of both Houses returned them for their hearty and constant Affections to the Parliament, and were acquainted, that, the Petition being long, they would consider of it in due Time.

20000 l.
&c.

The Week after, the Sheriffs of London, accompanied by a Deputation from the Committee of the City Militia, petitioned the House of Commons, That they might be allowed twenty thousand Pounds, from Weavers-Hall, for defraying the Charge of the Trained-Bands; and that the Order of the eleventh of June, for raising Horse for Defence of the City, might be revived: Which being readily assented to, an Ordinance was passed for the raising of a Regiment of Horse, to consist of six hundred Men.

Different Factions.

At the same Time the City being strongly con-vulsed by different Factions, they both petitioned the Houses of Lords and Commons, under the Appellation of young Men and Apprentices, being thereunto instigated by their Masters and others: The first whereof was as follows:

Ibid.

The young Mens Petition to Parliament

" That whereas, upon the first of March last
" past, your Petitioners presented to this Ho" nourable House an humble Petition, subscrib" ed with many thousand Hands, containing " many Things of publick Concernment, both in " relation to the Kingdom in general, and your " Petitioners in particular, as may appear by a " Copy of the same hereunto annexed; at the " Reading of which, your Honours were pleas" ed to promise the taking the same into " serious Consideration, in convenient Time:
" In Hopes of which, your Petitioners have,
" with all Humility and Modesty, according to " our Duty, waited ever since for the Accom" plishment of the same, forbearing all clamorous
" and tumultuous Conventions, whereby your " Honours might in the least have been disturb" ed in the quiet and peaceable Prosecution of " your weighty Affairs.

" And we cannot but with all Thankfulness " acknowledge what you have already acted to" wards the Satisfaction of our just Desires in " part; but finding, to the great Grief of our " Hearts, that in Matter of greatest Concern-
" ment, instead of hoped Redress, our heavy " Grievances are increased, by the late Ejection
" of Men of known Fidelity out of their sever" al Offices in the City Regiments of Trained-" Bands and Auxiliaries, to the great Grief of " most honest Men, who have been Eye-wit" nesses of their Faithfulness and Forwardness
" in the Discharge of their several Trusts, and " without any Crime laid against them, so much
" as to give a pretended Ground of this their un" just Repulse.

" Likewise, instead of Composure of Differ" ences, we find, that Encouragement is given to " Men of turbulent and seditious Spirits to stir
" up Divisions, by rendering those that concur
" not with them in every Puntilio, (in Point " of Judgment) as Men unworthy to enjoy their " Birthrights, Privileges, or Subsistence in the " Kingdom, notwithstanding they have given " never so eminent Testimony of their sincere " Affections to the common Good; whereby " those too officious Incendiaries seem more to " drive at their particular Designs, than the Con" servation of Peace and Unity in the Common" wealth; and hereby, together with their late " Industriousness in striving to exasperate the " City against the Army, have endeavoured,
" what in them was, to embroil the Kingdom in " a second War, most dreadful to all well-mind" ed People to think of.

" Neither is it the least of our Grief to remem" ber the late Abuse of the Authority of this " House, by the too great Influence of some " arbitrary Spirits, in the late abusing and slight-
" ing Petitioners, contrary to their former De" claration, touching the Liberty of the Sub" ject, the very Foundation of which was by " this Means most miserably shaken: Nor " can we be unsensible of the Misery some free-
" born Subjects yet undergo, by being detain" ed in Prison from Time to Time, without " being brought to a legal Trial, notwithstanding
" their several Appeals to this Honourable Court.
" Upon these and other pressing Considerations,
" we assume the Boldness once more to present
" these our ensuing Requests to this Honourable
" House:

" 1. That you will be pleased, with all con" venient Speed, according to your Promise, to " take the several Heads of our former Petition
" into serious Consideration.

" 2. That your Authority, so apparently ab" used, contrary to Right and Equity, by those " that have of late effected the Ejection of Men
" of known Fidelity and Account out of Places
" of so important Trust, may be forthwith re" deemed out of their Hands; and that those that " have been so unreasonably expelled, may be " again restored to their Places, till sufficient " Ground may be made apparent to the con" trary.

" 3. We further pray, that you will be pleased " to declare against all manner of Invectives
" of the Clergy or others, tending to the Ag" gravation of Differences amongst peaceable
" Spirits.

" 4. And, That those Persons, who have " appealed to this honourable Court for Justice,
" may be forthwith put into a Way of impartial
" Trial.

" And lastly, That the Sum of all your En" deavours may tend to the sweet Composure of " Differences on all Sides, so far as it may be
" congruent to the Rules of Piety and Equity."

The Petitioners received for Answer from the City Members, That divers Matters of great Concern were then before the House; therefore would consider it in Time convenient; and that the Commons acknowledged their good Inclinations and Deportment.

The Apprentices
Petition.

The next Day, the contrary Party of young Men, seemingly in the Royal Interest, sent their Petition, signed by above ten thousand Hands, by a Deputation of six of their Number; one of whom, on his delivering the same at the Bar of the House of Lords, made the following Speech:

"My Lords,

Ibid.

Speech made by one of them at delivering it at the Bar of the House.

"If it may please this honourable House, we are commanded by the young Men and Apprentices of the City of London to present your Honours with this their humble Petition, being in pursuance of their Covenant with God, which is upon them; humbly craving your charitable Constructions, their Ends being single, for the Glory of God, the Peace of the Kingdom, and Vindication of the Parliament."

"The humble Petition of divers well-affected young Men and Apprentices of the City of London, &c.

"Humbly sheweth,

The Petition.

"That your Petitioners have, with the Forwardest, been ever ready in this common Cause of Religion, Laws, and Liberties, to adventure their Lives for the Preservation thereof, which we hoped, after so much Expence of Blood, and (by God's Providence) such happy Success of your Armies, would have been settled to us and our Posterities in a lasting Peace; yet, to the Grief of our Hearts, your Petitioners cannot but take Notice, how in these unhappy Times of Distraction, divers discontented Persons labour to sow new Seeds of Discord and Divisions among us; whereby Incendiaries and Malignants are encouraged, your faithfulest Friends discountenanced, the Privileges of Parliament violated, Magistracy opposed, the publick Worship of God slighted, and the Liberties and Properties of the Subject much endangered; all which your Petitioners laying sadly to Heart, and having more before their Eyes the Glory of God, and the Happiness of his Majesty's Kingdoms, than their own private Interests, (which we shall readily sacrifice for the Publick) do in all Humility most humbly pray, "1. That, according to our solemn League and Covenant, his Majesty's Royal Person may be defended; and that his just Power and Greatness (in the Preservation and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms) may be established.

"2. That the Rights and Privileges of Parliament may be vindicated, and the lawful Liberties and Property of the Subjects preserved and maintained.

"3. That the Government of the Church may be speedily settled, Conventicles (the Seminaries of Separation) suppressed, and Toleration of licentious Liberty effectually declared against.

"4. That all Incendiaries, Malignants, and evil Instruments, which hinder the Reformation of Religion, dividing the King from his People, or one of his Kingdoms from another, or make any Faction or Parties among the People, (contrary to the solemn League and Covenant) may be brought to publick Trial, and receive condign Punishment.

NUMB. XXXIV.

"5. That all Obstructions in the ordinary Courts of Justice may be removed, and the insufferable Abuse of Committees and their Officers considered.

"6. That the Arrears of your Soldierly of this Kingdom may be satisfied, and Security granted for their further Indemnity for all Acts done by them tempore & loco belli.

"7. That the Army now on Foot may be disbanded, or otherwise disposed of, that so this almost exhausted Kingdom may be freed from those many grievous Taxes and Oppressions it now groans under.

"8. And whereas there have been, and still are, great Abuses, and insufferable Injuries done to your Petitioners by the Sale of Freedoms, and Foreigners intruding into the Suburbs, and Places near adjacent to this City, whereby your Petitioners are much discouraged in their Service, the Freemen of this City prejudiced, and the Franchises and Liberties thereof infringed: We therefore humbly beseech this honourable Assembly to resolve on some Course, (as you in your Wisdom shall think fit) as well for the Expulsion of such as have so unduly crept in amongst us, as for the future Prevention of the like insufferable Injuries, that may redound to your Petitioners hereafter."

To which the Lords, by their Clerk, returned hearty Thanks for their good Affections, and pious Care for the publick Peace of the Kingdom; and that they would speedily take the Contents of their Petition into Consideration.

Some Time before the Parliament, being under dreadful Apprehensions at the Army's Approach towards London, judged it necessary to provide for their Security; for which End, on the fourth of May, they passed an Ordinance for chusing a new Committee of Militia in the City of London; at which Time the Government thereof being intirely Presbyterian, none were elected into that Committee, or other Office of the Militia, but such as were of that Denomination, who were all zealously devoted to the Service of the Parliament. The Army, which chiefly consisted of Independents, were highly irritated at this Proceeding, infomuch that it occasioned their sending a positive Resolution to the Parliament, to publish a Declaration for restoring the Government of the City Militia into the Hands of those lately discharged from that Office, and such others (Independents) as were in the same Interest. On which Occasion, Sir Thomas Fairfax, General of the Army, upon the nineteenth of July, sent the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, to concur with them in their Application to Parliament in the said Affair:

"My Lord, and Gentlemen,

"In the carrying on of the great Business of the Kingdom, towards a general and happy Settlement, it hath been a fixed Principle with us, to make it our first Endeavours with the Parliament, that all Things, which threaten an Engagement of the Kingdom in a second War, might

General Fairfax's Letter to the City thereupon.

"might be removed, before we could have a confident Expectation of a good Issue, upon a Treaty with their Commissioners; which Course of ours, although it might have some Appearance of Delay, yet by Men that are zealous of the Kingdom's Good, (we hope) no Endeavours will be judged unnecessary, that may secure the Kingdom from the Danger of any new Embroilments.

"We are now come thus far, that the most material Particulars, which we have in Preparation to propose, for the general Settlement of the Affairs of the Kingdom, have been communicated to the Parliament's Commissioners; and we hope, they are satisfied, that they contain in them Things tending to a general Good, and to lay a hopeful Foundation for common Right and Freedom to the People of this Land for the future, and for a lasting Peace amongst us: But, before we can securely intend, and without Interruption apply ourselves unto the Proceedings, and Dispatch of the Treaty thereupon, we have delivered into the Hands of their Commissioners the Paper, which consists of three Particulars; in the last whereof (which is the Militia [Committee of the Militia] of the City) you being most immediately concerned, to the end you may see we would ask nothing which relates to you, without giving you a just Account thereof, and all the possible Satisfaction therein; we have also given a Copy thereof to your Commissioners, to be herewith sent unto you.

"We should not desire this, or any thing of that Nature, were we not persuaded, that what we desire is reasonable, and for yours and the Kingdom's Good and Quiet; and we should willingly have been silent, (as to this) but considering the just Jealousies which lie against some Persons, now authorized in that Power amongst you, and those Attempts which have been made by some, who would have engaged your City in a new War, had not your Lordship, and Court of Aldermen, and Common Council, by your Wisdom prevented it, by getting those Votes, which were passed by the Militia, made null.

"We cannot, in a Case of this Importance, but deal freely with you, in desiring your Concurrence with ours to the Parliament, that the Militia may be changed into those Hands, out of which it was taken; of whose Care and Fidelity to the Publick there hath been so long and large Experience, as few Ages have paralleled; and, if the Interest we have so long fought for be still the same, let it not seem strange, that we desire, both of Parliament and City, that those may be in Places of such a Trust, who have given the best Proof of their Courage and Constancy in Prosecution of the same.

"Having thus far declared ourselves with all Freedom and Cheerfulness to you, as we do not doubt of your good Acceptance of our Intention therein; so we desire your Forwardness into a Work so much tending to mutual Confidence, and to prevent the Designs of any, who would be glad to put Obstructions in the Way to a happy Conclusion, and envy nothing more than

"the Continuance of a right Understanding between you and us."

Tho' the City did not comply with the Desire of the Army in this Affair, yet the Parliament, out of a servile Fear, did, by reversing the Order complained of; which enraged the Presbyterians to such a Degree, that all the Officers and Soldiers of the Trained-Bands and Auxiliaries, young Men and Apprentices of the Cities of London and Westminster, Sea-Commanders, Seamen, and Watermen, together with great Numbers of the Officers and Soldiers within the Line of Communication, and Bill of Mortality, of that Denomination, entered into a solemn Engagement to oppose the Army with their utmost Efforts; and, in order to obtain the Assistance and Sanction of the City therein, presented the following Petition and Engagement to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council:

"Shewing,

"That your Petitioners, taking into serious Consideration, how Religion, his Majesty's Honour and Safety, the Privileges of Parliament, and Liberties of the Subjects are at present greatly endangered, and like to be destroyed; and also sadly weighing with ourselves, what Means might likely prove the most effectual to procure a firm and lasting Peace, without a further Effusion of Christian English Blood; have therefore entered into a solemn Engagement, which is hereunto annexed; and do humbly and earnestly desire, that this whole City may join together, by all lawful and possible Means, as one Man, in hearty Endeavours for his Majesty's present coming up to his two Houses of Parliament, with Honour, Safety, and Freedom, (and that without the nearer Approach of the Army) there to confirm such Things, as he hath granted in his Message of May last, in Answer to the Propositions of both Kingdoms; and that by a personal Treaty with his two Houses of Parliament, and the Commissioners of the Kingdom of Scotland, such Things as yet are in Difference may be speedily settled, and a firm and lasting Peace established: All which we desire may be presented to both Houses of Parliament, from this honourable Assembly."

The Engagement.

"Whereas we have entered into a solemn League and Covenant, for Reformation and Defence of Religion, the Honour and Happiness of the Kingdoms, and the Peace and Safety of the three Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland; all which we do eminently perceive, not only to be endangered, but like to be destroyed: We do therefore, in pursuance of our said Covenant, Oath of Allegiance, Oath of every Freeman of the Cities of London and Westminster, and Protestation, solemnly engage ourselves, and vow unto Almighty God, that we will to the utmost of our Power cordially endeavour, that his Majesty may speedily come to his two Houses of Parliament, with Honour, Safety, and Freedom, (and that without the nearer Approach of the Army) there

"there to confirm such Things, as he hath granted in his Message of the 12th of May last, in Answer to the Propositions of both Kingdoms; and that by a personal Treaty with his two Houses of Parliament, and the Commissioners of the Kingdom of Scotland, such Things as are yet in Difference may be speedily settled, and a firm and lasting Peace established: For the effecting hereof, we do protest, and re-oblige ourselves, as in the Presence of God, the Searcher of all Hearts, with our Lives and Fortunes, to endeavour, what in us lies, to preserve and defend his Majesty's royal Person and Authority, the Privileges of Parliament, and Liberty of the Subject, and, in their full and constant Freedom, the Cities of London and Westminster, Lines of Communication, and Parishes mentioned in the weekly Bill of Mortality; and all others that shall adhere with us to the said Covenant, and Oath of Allegiance, Oath of every Freeman of London and Westminster, and Protestation: Nor shall we by any Means admit, suffer, or endure any Neutrality in this common Cause of God, the King and Kingdom, as we do expect the Blessing of Almighty God, whose Help we crave, and wholly devolve ourselves upon, in this our Undertaking."

vol. 4. p. 1.
The General's Proceedings thereupon.

In Pursuance of this Engagement, the City was in a great Commotion; Assemblies being held, Soldiers lifted, and Orders given them to be ready upon the first Notice. In the mean Time, the Army having with the utmost Dispatch received Copies of the said Petition and Engagement, with an Account of the dangerous Proceedings thereon, the General immediately sent the same by Letter to the Parliament, and acquainted them with the pernicious Consequences such a desperate Combination might be attended with; therefore desired a speedy Stop might be put to those mischievous Agitations; and, to prevent such dangerous Practices from having any Influence upon his Army, caused all Cavaliers, or Persons which had borne Arms for the King, to be expelled his Troops. And the Parliament, upon Receipt of the General's Dispatches, made a Declaration, whereby all Persons, after the Publication thereof, that should consent to or subscribe the said Engagement, were deemed guilty of High Treason, and who, on that Account, were in all Respects to suffer as Traitors.

The Parliament's Declaration against the Engagement.

Tho' this Declaration seems to have quashed the Engagement, yet the Presbyterian Faction were highly enraged against the Parliament for repealing the Ordinance of the 4th of May, and making a new one, whereby they were excluded from any Share in the Government of the City Militia; therefore, rather than see their Rivals, the Independents, triumph, resolved to run all Hazards: Wherefore the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, by reason of two Petitions received from divers of the principal Citizens, young Men, and Apprentices, presented the following to the House of Commons:

The Petition of the Lord-Mayor, &c.

"That the Petitioners have, by Ordinance of Parliament, dated the 23d (July) present, taken Notice of the Pleasure of both Houses, for constituting a new Committee for the Militia of the City of London, and the Liberties thereof, and of all other Places within the Lines of Communication, and the weekly Bills of Mortality; and for determining of a former Ordinance for the Militia of this City, &c. dated the 4th of May last; which being taken into serious Consideration, the Petitioners could not but call to Mind how far both Houses of Parliament had formerly honoured the City, when they first established the Committee for Militia, and since enlarged or altered the same, to take the Sense of this Court, before they finally resolved thereupon; which Confidence the Petitioners are not conscious to themselves to have forfeited.

to Parliament for re-establishing the Militia.

"And next, being sensible, by two Petitions presented to this Court, (the Copies whereof are annexed) the one entitled, The humble Petition of divers well-affected Citizens of the City of London; and the other entitled, The humble Petition of divers young Men, Citizens, and others Apprentices of this City; what a general Distemper this sudden Change hath already made, and may further raise in this City; besides that hereby the City is for the present put out of all regular Posture of Defence:

"The Petitioners could not but return unto this honourable House, and humbly and earnestly pray, That the Militia, which was established by Ordinance of the 4th of May last, as aforesaid, and then ordered to continue for one whole Year, may be re-established, that so the present Fears and Distempers in the City may be dispersed and appeased: Whereunto as the Petitioners humbly conceive this to be the only present safe Means, next under the mighty Hand of God, so they will not doubt but that the said Militia, as hitherto they have done, will in all Things perform their Duties, according to their Trust."

The Petitions, that occasioned this Petition, being of such an imperious Strain, especially that delivered to both Houses of Parliament by the young Men and Apprentices of the City, I have therefore judged it necessary to insert them, for the Satisfaction of the Reader:

The first whereof being that of the Well-affected; the second, that of the young Men, &c. to the Common Council; and the third, that of the young Men, &c. to both Houses of Parliament. The first

"In this Streight and Exigency we are bold, in all Humility, yet with all Earnestness, to pray, that this honourable Court would sadly weigh the present Dangers; and as in former Times it hath been your Honour to be instrumental for the Preservation of this miserable and dying Kingdom, by the Interposition of your Courage, and Power, and Wisdom, in Time of Need, so you would not suffer it to be buried in perpetual Oblivion and Reproach, by yielding up that Militia, which, by the good Providence of God, and the Authority of a free Parliament, hath been invested in your Hands, the only visible Means, under God, we have now left for the Security of our Religion, Lives, and Liberties."

The second "Humbly sheweth,

The Petition of the young Men, &c.

"That your Petitioners, being sadly affected with the Distractions of these Times, (wherein divers discontented Persons, for the Advancement of their own Interests, labour to sow new Seeds of Division and Discord among us; whereby Incendiaries are encouraged, the Well-affected discountenanced, the Privilege of Parliament violated, the publick Worship of God slighted, the Liberties and Properties of the faithful Subjects of this Kingdom, and especially of this City, much endangered, and the long-desired-for End of these Troubles, by his Majesty's gracious Compliance with, and his safe and honourable Return to his Parliament, (which we hoped was almost obtained) now retarded, and for the present altogether frustrated) have presented their humble Petition to both Houses of Parliament, a Copy whereof is hereunto annexed; the which they have thought it their Duty likewise to tender unto this honourable Court; being confident, that as their Desires in these their humble Addresses arise from no other Ends whatsoever, but the Glory of God, and the Discharge of their Consciences, in Pursuance of that solemn League and Covenant which lies upon them, to endeavour to their utmost, in their Places and Callings, to use all lawful Ways and Means for the Conservation and Maintenance of the just Rights and Privileges of Parliament, (lately so much violated) the Preservation and Defence of his Majesty's Royal Person and Authority, together with the true Religion and Liberties of this Kingdom, and for the discovering and bringing to condign Punishment all evil Instruments whatsoever, which labour, by fomenting groundless Fears and Jealousies, to divide and make Parties amongst the People, thereby to retard the Settlement of Church and State: So we doubt not but this honourable Court (who have been instrumental to invite us, both by Example and Persuasion, according to several Ordinances and Declarations of Parliament, to engage ourselves to the Prosecution of the said Ends; wherein you have already done very much, to your everlasting Praise and Commendation) will still with all Reality, Constancy, and undaunted Magnanimity, pursue the same, and likewise encourage those that shall, according to their Duty, labour to promote the same Ends.

"Wherefore we humbly pray, that this honourable Court would be pleased to use their utmost Endeavours, by their Addresses to the Parliament, and otherwise, as they in their Wisdoms shall think fit, for the furthering of your Petitioners Desire contained in the above-mentioned Petition.

"We cannot likewise but with all Thankfulness take Notice of what this honourable City has done, for the putting in Execution of several Ordinances of Parliament, that none be put into any Place of Trust, either in Church or Commonwealth, but such as have taken, and now stand well-affected to the Covenant, to which we are confident that you will still adhere.

"And whereas there have been, and still are, several factious Persons, who stile themselves the Well-affected of this City, (tho' unworthy of that Name) who labour to traduce the Actions thereof, thereby to bring an Odium upon it, and to lay it open to their Malice; a fresh Instance whereof we have in a Petition (already recited) presented to the Parliament, pretended to be the Petition of the young Men and Apprentices of the City, as also by a Petition pretended to be presented to Sir Thomas Fairfax; the which we are ready to produce, and refer the Consideration of them to this honourable Court.

"And further pray, that as both the Militia of the City hath been legally chosen by this honourable Court, according to the Ordinance of Parliament; and the Common Council legally chosen by the several Wards, according to the antient Custom of this City; you would be pleased to retain the same Power, both Civil and Military, in your own Hands: And that you would be pleased (for the Prevention of many imminent Dangers, to which this City may be liable, by Reason of these Distractions) to take such effectual and speedy Course for the Safeguard and Defence thereof, that the Fear either of any Mutiny within, or any unwarrantable Power from abroad, may in some Measure be taken away; whereby Trade (the main Support of this City, now mightily impaired) may be again revived, and the Franchises and Liberties of this honourable City (to which we are the apparent Heirs) maintained and defended.

"And as your Petitioners are in Duty bound, both by that Relation they stand in to the honourable City, as by that solemn Engagement whereinto they have entered, so they will be always ready to hazard their Lives for the Defence thereof, and not suffer themselves, directly or indirectly, by any Terror or Persuasion, to be drawn from their Duty herein."

The third "Sheweth,

"1. It is our humble Desire, in regard Religion, our Lives, Liberties, and Estates, are so much endangered, and the Peace and Safety of this City and Kingdom, that the pretended Ordinance for the Change of the Militia of the City of London may be presently repealed, before the Rising of the Houses; and that former Ordinance,

Ibid.

The Petition of the young Men to both Houses of Parliament for Repeal of their last Ordinance for the Militia, &c.

"Ordinance, that was conferred for a Year by a free Parliament upon the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, and by them legally chosen, may be established; in regard we do conceive that no Justice, tho' it run in ever so free a Channel, can lawfully dispossess them of it, unless it shall appear to be abused, contrary to the Trust reposed in them.

"2. It is likewise desired, That the City of London may immediately be vindicated against a late pretended Declaration of both Houses, which declares all those Traitors, and so to forfeit Life and Estate, who shall, after Publication thereof, act thereupon to get Subscriptions; and that the said Declaration be now presently reversed and cancelled.

"3. That both Houses of Parliament do presently make an Order, upon some special Penalty, for the calling in of all their Members of either Houses, to discharge the Trust the Kingdom has reposed in them, especially eleven late accused Members, against whom there has been nothing proved of their Accusation to this Day; that yet again we may come to be so happy, as to enjoy the healing Influence of a full and free Parliament in these distracted Times.

"These Particulars we cannot but insist upon, since the Distractions among us begin to grow so high, and the Honour and Privileges of Parliament, the Peace and Safety of the City and Kingdom are so greatly violated."

But, lest these Petitions should not have Weight sufficient to prevail upon the Parliament to remove the Grievances complained of, therefore to enforce the same, the last was (at the Command of their Masters) backed, by a great Number of the rude Petitioners, who went into the House of Commons with their Hats on; and, keeping open the Doors, cried, Vote, Vote, Agree, Agree, Dispatch, We'll wait no longer! whilst all without incessantly exclaimed to have such Members delivered to them as voted against their Interest. In this exclamatory Posture they continued, till they obliged the House to repeal both the late Ordinance and Declaration; to which the House of Lords immediately concurred; whereby 'tis manifest, that, between the City and Army, the Parliament was divested of all its Power, and sat only as so many Cyphers stripped of all Authority; for, as the latter compelled them to reverse the Ordinance of the 4th of May concerning the City Militia, and to make a Declaration against subscribing the above-recited Engagement, so the former at this Time forced them to repeal both.

The Army, not willing to admit of a Rival in Power, were highly enraged at these Proceedings of the Citizens; wherefore Sir Thomas Fairfax, the General, sent this sharp and cutting Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council:

My Lord and Gentlemen,

"You may please to remember the forward Compliance of this Army with your Desires to remove to this Distance, and that upon the "Assurance you gave them of your Concurrence with their declared Desires, for the settling of the Liberty and Peace of this Kingdom, (against which you never yet offered us one Exception, or any Ground of Dissent) as also of your great Tenderness and Resolution to secure the Parliament and their Privileges from any Violence or Attempt; the chief Reason given us of your late lifting of new Forces, and wherein we did most acquiesce.

"That, upon this Confidence, we had disposed of the Army into several Parts of the Kingdom, for the Ease of the whole; some of them to above an hundred Miles distant; we had given up ourselves to the effecting such Proposals as might tend to the comfortable Settlement of this poor Kingdom; and we were in a hopeful Way for speedy Relief for Ireland.

"We cannot then but be deeply sensible of the unparalleled Violation acted upon the Parliament upon Monday last, by a Multitude from your City, because therein the Guards sent from the City did not only neglect their Duty for the Security of the Parliament from such Violence, and the whole City to yield any Relief to the Houses in that Extremity, but, I am assured from Eye and Ear-witnesses, that divers of the Common Council gave great Encouragement to it; which doth not only gainsay your former Professions, but does Violence to those many Obligations, that, by your Charter, Protestation, and sundry other Ways, laid upon you to protect the Parliament.

"For my Part, I cannot but look on you (who are in Authority) as accountable to the Kingdom for your present Interruptions of that hopeful Way of Peace and Settlement Things were in for this Nation, and for relieving Ireland, occasioned by a late destructive Engagement, especially by the latter prodigious and horrid Force done upon the Parliament, tending to dissolve all Government; upon which Score we and the whole Kingdom shall have Cause to put every Thing of the like Nature that may happen to the Parliament, to any who are Friends to them and this Army, except by your Wisdom, Care, and Industry, the chief Actors in the Premises may be detected, secured, and given up to the procuring of Justice for the same, and the best Endeavours used to prevent the like for the future.

"Bedford, July 29, 1647."

Upon the reading of this Letter, and Advice of the Army's Advance towards London, the Lord-Mayor and Committee of the Militia gave immediate Order for the Train'd-Bands to march to the Works of Fortification; and, for the more expeditiously raising Auxiliaries for Defence of the City, Proclamation was made by Beat of Drum, that all Persons capable of bearing Arms should next Morning repair to the several Places of Rendezvous with such Arms as they had; and those unprovided were to be supplied out of the publick Stores.

occasioned by the late Insult, the remaining Members, entirely in the City Interest, voted, 1. That the King should come to London. 2. That the Committee of the City Militia should have full Power to raise such Forces as they should deem requisite for the Defence of the City. 3. That they make Choice of a Commander in Chief, to be approved of by Parliament; and such Commander to present other Officers for the Approbation of the said Committee.

Pursuant to these Votes, the Committee chose Major-General Massey for General, and ordered, That all Reformado Officers, and others, should appear the next Day in St. James's Fields, in order for their being taken into the City's Service, and the Persons already inrolled to be forthwith formed into Regiments; and immediately thereupon the Lord-Mayor and Common Council published a Declaration of this Tenor:

City Declaration for enlisting Men, and forming Regiments.

"Taking Notice of the Army's surprizing of the King at Holmeby, and denying his Residence nearer London than their Quarters; that the City have endeavoured the Settlement of the Kingdom, Relief of Ireland, Ease of their Fellow-Subjects, and a good Understanding between themselves and the Army.

"That the Privileges of Parliament have been violated, by the Army's causing the eleven Members to withdraw, and the Militia of London now demanded, which hath been established by Ordinance, and is subject to no other Cognizance but of the King and Parliament.

"That they desire nothing more than that his Majesty may be in a free and honourable Condition and Capacity; and, whilst he is invironed by an Army, and under their Power, he can neither freely grant, nor will there be Hope to enjoy what he grants in this Condition.

"That they are resolved earnestly, yet with Humility, to apply themselves to the Parliament to this Purpose; and hope that all good Subjects, who are touched with any Sense of that Duty and Allegiance, which, by the Law of God and Man, they owe unto their King, will unanimously join with them therein.

"They state the Difference between them and the Army to be, that they could not submit the Militia of the City to be altered at the Will of the Army, after it had been so orderly settled in the Hands of such as were intrusted therewith for one whole Year, when there was a full and free Parliament.

"That they desire a happy and speedy Peace, by the Settlement of true Religion in this Kingdom, and by re-establishing his Majesty in his just Rights and Authority, by upholding all lawful Privileges of a free Parliament, by maintaining the fundamental Laws of the Land, by restoring and securing the Subject unto and in his just Liberty and Property, and by freeing this long-oppressed Kingdom from all Taxes and enforced Free Quarters towards the Maintenance of an Army, which, for a long Time, hath had no visible Enemy to encounter."

On the same Day the Parliament declared,

That the Ordinance which put the Land-Forces under the Command of Sir Thomas Fairfax, does not give him any Power over the Train'd-Bands, Garrisons, &c. which Declaration was published in this City by Sound of Trumpet.

In Consequence of Yesterday's Order of the Committee of Militia for inlisting Reformado's, &c. there was a very great Appearance in St. James's Fields; whereupon an Order was published for shutting up all Shops, and preventing Horses from going out of the City, in order to their being employed in Military Service.

Upon the withdrawing of the Speakers of both Houses, on Account of the late Force upon the Parliament by the City Apprentices, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council gave both Houses the strongest Assurances, that, for the future, they would provide such Guards for their Security, as should effectually prevent all Disturbances whatsoever; whereupon these Resolutions passed both Houses: 1. That Thanks be returned to the City for their Offer to provide for the Parliament's sitting in Safety. 2. That the Care of the King's Children be committed to the Lord-Mayor of London. 3. That the Committee of Safety do repair to, and consult with, the Committee of the City Militia about the Safety of the King, Parliament, City, and Kingdom; and, just after, dispatched the following Letter to the General of the Army:

"May it please your Excellency,

"The Houses having this Day received from their Commissioners a Copy of your Letter to them, dated at Bedford, the 29th of July, with a Copy of another Letter of the same Date, writ to the City of London; in both which tho' there be no Accounts at all of the Motion of your Army, yet the Houses understand, by the Letters from their Commissioners, in which the Copies were inclosed, and otherwise, that you have given Orders for the marching of the Army towards London, upon Pretence of defending the Houses from the Danger of Tumults; upon Consideration whereof, the Houses have commanded us to let you understand, that as they cannot but have a deep Sense of the undue Liberty which some Apprentices of the City of London, and others, from whom they might have expected more Obedience, have taken to themselves to violate the just Authority, Privileges, and Freedom of Parliament, in which the Safety of the whole Kingdom is concerned, and so they doubt not but the Sense of so great an Offence will at last strike all their Breasts, that have been accessory thereto, with a Detestation of any Practices of the like Nature for the future.

"And as the Houses cannot imagine, that the Disorder committed by some Apprentices, or those that mingled with them, had the Allowance of the City of London, so they have since received full Satisfaction, by the strict Orders given out by the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of the City to all Masters to have a Care of their Servants, and by their Declaration proclaimed in the several Parts of the City for the preventing and suppressing of Tumults, that they shall sit with much Freedom "And therefore, the Houses seeing no Cause to command that Army, or any Part thereof, to march up for their Defence, but rather judging, by the Distractions raised at the News thereof, that the Motion of the Army near the City is like to precipitate the City and Army in a desperate and bloody Engagement, not only to the Disturbance of the Parliament's sitting, but also to the Destruction thereof, and of all Authority, by casting the whole Kingdom into Confusion: For Prevention thereof, they have sent you this inclosed Order, requiring you, as you tender the Freedom of Parliament, the Safety of the City, and whole Kingdom, to give exact Obedience thereunto. This being all we have to command, we rest, &c.

Westminster, July 30, 1647."

And, as a farther Encouragement for the Citizens to exert themselves in Defence of the City, this Order was made by Parliament on the last Day of July:

Ibid.
Ordinance enforcing the Power of the City Militia.

"Whereas the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, by Ordinance, dated the 10th of July, 1647, did give Power to the Committee of the Militia of London for raising Horse; and, amongst other Things, did ordain, That if any Person or Persons, charged to find Horses, Riders, and Furniture, should refuse or neglect the same, shall forfeit and pay twenty Pounds: It is hereby ordained and declared, That their Committee, and their several Sub-Committees respectively, or such as they shall appoint, shall hereby have Power to levy the said twenty Pounds, or any Part thereof, by Distress and Sale of the Goods of the Party offending; or to imprison their Persons till the same be paid, as they shall think fit.

"And if any Person charged to find a Horse, shall send in an unserviceable Horse, or insufficient Arms, or shall not send a sufficient or serviceable Person to ride the said Horse, he shall forfeit and pay for every such Default, in any the Cases aforesaid, ten Pounds, to be levied as aforesaid.

"And it is further ordained, That the said Committee of the Militia, and their several Sub-Committees, shall have Power, and are hereby authorized, to lay and impose upon every Foot-Soldier, either of the Train'd-Bands or Auxiliaries, that shall neglect or refuse to appear at his Colours upon Beat of the Drum, forty Shillings, as a Fine for every such Neglect or Refusal, to be levied by Distress; and, in Default thereof, that the said Committee, or their Sub-Committees, shall have hereby Power to commit such Person, so refusing or neglecting his Duty, unto Prison, there to remain until he shall have paid the said Fine of forty Shillings.

"And the said Committee of the Militia, and their Sub-Committees, shall have hereby Power to disarm any Person or Persons residing or being within the City of London, Lines of Communication, weekly Bills of Mortality, and Hamlets of the Tower, and secure their Persons that shall resist, oppose, obstruct, dissuade,

"discourage, or any Ways hinder the present Service of the King and Parliament, in the present and future Preservation of the Parliament, City, and Places aforesaid, upon any Pretence whatsoever; and such Persons shall be, and are hereby accounted and adjudged as Deferters of the Parliament and City. And the said Committee of the Militia shall from Time to Time hereby have Power to elect and chuse a Major-General, or any other Officer, for the Forces raised and to be raised within the City of London, and Places aforesaid, and them to remove and displace at Pleasure, and to chuse others in his or their steads.

"And it is further ordained and declared, That the said Committee for the Militia of the City of London, and Parts adjacent, within the Lines of Communication, and Parishes mentioned in the weekly Bills of Mortality, or any of them, whereof three to be Aldermen, are hereby authorized and required to put in Execution within the Liberties aforesaid, and also within the Hamlets of the Tower, all former Ordinances for the Militia of London, that were in Force at the Time of the passing of this Ordinance, according to the true Meaning of the said Ordinances for the safe-guarding of the Parliament, City, and Places aforesaid; and also for the Suppression of all Forces, Rebellions, Insurrections, and Invasions, that may happen within the said Places, or that shall approach against the same.

"And it is also ordained, that all Fines imposed by Virtue of this Ordinance shall be taken and employed by the said Committee of the Militia, and their Sub-Committees, for the Advancement of the Service, in such Manner as they shall respectively think fit; and the said Committee of the Militia, and their Sub-Committees, for and touching any Act or Acts done by them, or which hereafter shall be done, in Execution of this Ordinance, or any other Ordinance heretofore made touching the Militia, shall be, by the Authority of Parliament, saved harmless and indemnified.

"And lastly, That no privileged Place, or Person within the Limits aforesaid, shall be exempted from the Power of this Ordinance, except the Peers of this Realm, and Members of the House of Commons, and Assistants of the House of Peers, and Officers and Attendants of both Houses respectively, who shall be exempted from this Ordinance, and all Things therein contained: Provided this Ordinance continue for a Month, and no longer."

Notwithstanding all the Precautions taken, and Encouragement given, for the Citizens to oppose the Army, many were of Opinion, that it would be much more for the Interest of the City to accommodate Matters in an amicable Way, rather than expose it to the Ravages of an incensed and rapacious Enemy; therefore, upon Advice of the Army's being advanced to Colebrook, a Common Council was instantly summoned; when divers Officers, and other Inhabitants of the Borough of Southwark, petitioned, That they might not be compelled to assume Arms, nor march forth under the Command of any, but such as should be approved of by the Generality of the said Borough, and that they might be entirely left to their own Defence.

This Petition was followed by another, in the Name of many thousands of well-affected Citizens, praying, That Means might be used for the accommodating of all Differences: Whereat General Poynts, and other Officers of the new List, were so highly enraged, that they, in a very cruel and barbarous Manner, fell Sword in Hand upon the naked Petitioners, and, by killing some, and wounding others, obliged the rest to fly for Safety. In the mean Time, a pacifick Alderman made an eloquent Speech in the Common Council, wherein he gracefully depicted the great Dangers that would necessarily result from a new War, both to the City and Kingdom; therefore earnestly pressed his Fellow-Citizens to resolve upon such Measures as might effectually prevent the same: Whereupon they, after long Debates, concluded to send the following Letter to the General, by a Deputation of six Aldermen and twelve Commoners:

“ Right Honourable,

Ibid.
*City's Letter to General
Fairfax.*

“ Unto all our present Unhappiness we have this added, that we have not yet received any Answer from your Excellency to our two last Letters, altho' the Army be approached so near unto us, and that some of our Committee have daily attended to that Purpose; but we are resolved to omit nothing unattempted, tho' all Discouragements do manifest, as we have always professed, how much we desire Peace, and abhor a new War; and to this End we have added six Aldermen and twelve Commoners to the Committee we formerly appointed to attend your Excellency; from whom your Excellency will please to receive our Sense of the great

“ Offence that the Army hath taken against this City, and give Ear and Credit unto those Things which they delivered unto your Excellency; and your honourable Council of War, on our Behalf: We have no more to say, but to pursue them with our Prayers, that God will give a Blessing to their and our Endeavours, and avert his heavy Judgment from this City, and incline your noble Heart to weigh seriously the Miseries of a new War, wherein whatsoever Share is allotted to this City, the Desolation will have an Influence upon the whole Kingdom.”

Early next Morning the Deputation from the Common Council set out for Colebrook, where the same Day they delivered the above-recited Letter to the General, who returned them a Declaration of this Purport:

“ 1. That the Citizens, by their incessant Importunities, had in a Manner forced the Members of both Houses to yield to the turning out of the old Commissioners of the City Militia, who had so faithfully served both City and Parliament upwards of four Years; and, in their stead, substituted Men no otherwise distinguished than by their Coolness in the Parliament's Service at the Beginning of the War; which gave Room for Suspicion that something farther was intended, which soon after appeared; for the said Persons, with the same Eagerness, pressed the disbanding of the Army, before the Security and Liberty of the Kingdom were settled; and, at the same Time, the Common Council was new-modelled, and a Mayor fit for their Turn elected; and, under Pretence of Disqualifications, many Men of Merit were precluded from Preferment either in Church or State, and that with no other View, than to render all the Blood and Treasure hitherto spent ineffectual, by concluding an Accommodation with the King, more consistent with the private Views of selfish Men, than the publick Good.

“ 2. When the City claims, as its Birth-Right, the Power of changing the Militia, not only of London, but also these of Westminster, Middlesex, the Tower Hamlets, and Southwark, without the least Colour of Right or Justice, other than by the Indulgence of Parliament; therefore 'twas high Time for the Kingdom in general to stand up in Defence of their Rights, when such a Claim was made, in open Defiance of the Parliament and their Fellow-Subjects; which if tacitly submitted to, the Citizens, after the disbanding of the Army, would become Masters of the Parliament's Freedom and Resolutions, and consequently of the Rights and Liberties of their Fellow-Subjects.

“ 3. It being manifest how forward the eleven impeached Members were in complying and jointly acting with the Committee of the City Militia, in their Endeavours to foment a new War; and, in order thereunto, having obtained a Majority of Votes, immediately set about lifting of Men privately; which the Army receiving Intelligence of, judged it high Time to interpose; and, to prevent a War, desired that the Militia might again be put into the Hands of those who had so faithfully discharged

"that Trust, to the Satisfaction of the Parliament, Kingdom and Army.

"4. It being notorious to all the World, with what an unparalleled Insolence, Rage and Violence, the London Apprentices compelled both Houses to repeal their late Ordinance, whereby they had settled the Government of the Militia upon the former Commissioners: By which execrable Outrages and terrible Threats, the Speakers of both Houses, and many of the Members, not thinking themselves safe at Westminster, withdrew, to avoid those furious and dangerous Tumults; wherefore the Army, in Justice, thought themselves indispensibly obliged to restore the said Members, that they might, as formerly, with Freedom and Security, sit and vote as a free and legal Parliament; for which End they were upon their March to London."

The City in great Agitation.

This melancholy News of the Army's Advance put the City under the most dreadful Apprehensions; which occasioned the Common Council and Committee of the City Militia instantly to assemble at Guildhall, for taking into Consideration the aforesaid Declaration, on which Occasion a vast Number of Citizens repaired thither, to wait the Result of their Deliberations. In the Interim, an Express arrived with Advice of the Army's halting: This the Citizens imagined to be owing to a Dread of their Power; therefore, as one Man, they boldly cried out, Let us one and all march out and destroy them: But unluckily another Express arriving upon the Heels of the former, with an Account of the Army's being in full March to the City, their Courage failed, and Tone instantly changed to Treat, Treat, Treat; and the Common Council and Committee of the Militia, willing to divert the impending Storm, spent most of the Night in Consultation, when at last they resolved to send the following submissive Letter to the General:

"Right Honourable,

Ibid.

Their submissive Letter to the General.

"We have, by some of that Committee, which we sent down unto your Excellency this Morning, received the Declaration of your Excellence, and your Council of War, on the Behalf of yourselves, and the whole Army, as we were sitting in Council, about five of the Clock in the Afternoon, and have heard the same read, and considered seriously thereupon; and by our Committee we have had a full Relation of all Passages between your Excellency and them: And so far as we observe from the said Declaration, the chief Cause that hath drawn your Excellency and your Army thus near the City, is to bring home those noble and honourable Members of both Houses, who, because of the Tumults at Westminster the twenty-sixth past, have retired themselves, to the end they may be placed in Safety, and in free Parliament at Westminster, we cheerfully and heartily join with your Excellency therein; and, according as we shall have Directions from your Excellency, they shall find all Ports and Passes open to receive you and them, as also such Guards of two or three Regiments, as your Excellency shall think fitting, for their Conduct to the two Houses of Parliament; and, the Parliament being safe with Peace and Safety, we shall humbly submit to their Direction, what Forces of yours and ours to continue for their future Guard; in which Service we humbly offer the whole Strength of this City. All other Matters, which in this Streight of Time we cannot go through, we wholly refer and submit to be determined by both Houses, when they shall be safe in Safety at Westminster, as aforesaid: And, in Confidence that God will give a Blessing to these our Endeavours for the taking away all Offences and Misunderstanding, we have recalled our late Declaration, published in the Name of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled; and now we well hope that your Excellency will receive such Satisfaction hereby, as that you will withhold the Soldier from doing any Offence or Prejudice to the City or Lines of Communication."

The Inhabitants of Southwark, not having for some Time approved of the Proceedings of the Citizens of London against the Army, sent privately to acquaint the General, That they were willing to surrender their Borough to him. This being an Offer too great to be rejected, Fairfax immediately sent a Brigade, under the Command of Colonel Rainsborough, to take Possession thereof; who, being admitted into the Works about two o'Clock in the Morning, soon became Master of London-Bridge, (with all its Fortifications) the common Passage of the River Thames, which laying the City open on that Side, intirely disconcerted all the Measures entered into for Defence of the City, and was the chief Occasion of sending the above-recited submissive Letter; which being delivered to the General at Thistleworth, on the fourth of August, he acquainted the City Deputies with his Demands; who immediately returning, acquainted the Common Council therewith, who the same Afternoon sent the following Answer:

The General, having remov'd his Quarters from Whitehall to Hammer-smith, was there attended by the London Commissioners, who acquainted him that the City were well satisfied with his Demands; and, in Obedience to them, had deliver'd up all the Forts on the West Side of the City, from St. Giles's in the Fields to the River Thames, which his Troops were then in actual Possession of; and thereupon earnestly press'd his Excellency for an Answer to their last Letter, which he was pleas'd to return as followeth:

I am, with the rest of the Army, march'd up to Hammer-smith, in order to the Security of the Lords and Commons, who, I suppose, will Tomorrow sit in Parliament: The preserving of their Privileges, and securing them from Violence, that with Freedom they may sit and discharge their Trusts, hath been the Cause of my near Approach to your City; and whereas you are pleas'd to express your Hopes of Preservation from Violence, you may be confident nothing shall pass from this Army, but shall be for the Safety of this City: And I doubt not, though some disaffected Persons to the Peace of the Kingdom have endeavour'd to beget a Misunderstanding between this Army and the City, hoping thereby to embroil the Kingdom in new Troubles, yet this Army will always so behave themselves, as to witness to the World the Integrity of their Hearts, in having no other Design, but the quiet and happy Settlement of a firm and lasting Peace; wherein both the whole Kingdom, and your City particularly, will have Cause to rejoice in the Goodness of God; the Accomplishment whereof will truly glad the Hearts of this Army, and in particular of General Fairfax congratulated by the Lord Mayor, &c. on his Arrival at Westminster.

It made Constable of the Tower.

The next Day the General, upon his Approach to Westminster, was met at Hyde-Park by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, who, in the Name of the Citizens, congratulated his Excellency upon his Arrival, and the happy Accommodation between the Army and City; and as he pass'd Charing-Cross, he was saluted by the Common Council of this City, who attended his Coming: And the same Day, by an Ordinance of Parliament, Sir Thomas Fairfax, the General, was constituted Constable of the Tower of London; whither he went three Days after, and took Possession of the same; where being attended by a Deputation from the Common Council, Alderman Gibbs, in a handsome Speech, returned his Excellency Thanks for his great Love and Care of the City; and, after some Compliments, recommended to him the Bravery and Integrity of the Colonel, Lieutenant of the Tower; and concluded with an Invitation of him and his principal Officers to honour the City at Dinner. The General returned Thanks for their distinguishing Marks of Affection towards him; but more especially for the great Regard they had shewn to the publick Tranquillity; adding, that for Lieutenant of the Tower, he had already appointed Colonel Tieburne, a Gentleman of Worth and known Fidelity, dwelling among them; and who was in all Respects qualified for so great a Trust; and that he would acquaint his Officers with their kind Invitation; and earnestly exhorted them to exert themselves in the establishing of Uniformity and Peace.

He appoints Col. Tieburne his Lieutenant.

The Day following, the Army, consisting of twenty thousand choice Troops, both Horse and Foot, under an admirable Discipline, and with a noble Train of Artillery, march'd through the City without the least Disorder, or offering any Injury to any Person either by Word or Deed.

The Army march'd thro' the City.

Three Days after the afore said Deputation attended his Excellency again for his Answer to the City Invitation; when he was pleas'd to excuse his Non-acceptance on Account of the many great and weighty Affairs then transacting, for settling the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, wherein he and his Officers were continually employed. In the mean time, the City gave Orders for making a Golden Basin and Ewer, about the Value of twelve hundred Pounds, as a Present for the General. This I take to be that, by a certain Author, called a Cup, and said to be tendered his Excellency by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, at their receiving him at Hyde-Park on the sixth Instant, and by him fully rejected: But that the noble Author is mistaken, I apprehend, will appear from the General's last Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, wherein he not only highly approves of their late Conduct, but likewise seems fully reconciled to the City; therefore it is not in the least probable that he fully refused their Present. Besides, it is not to be expected, that an absent Historian can be of so good Authority, as a Collector of Facts transacted in those Times, or as a private Memorialist who was immediately concerned in most of the said Transactions. Therefore I am of Opinion, that an Author that differs so widely from the said Authors, deserves not the same Credit.

On the seventeenth of the same Month of August, an humble Acknowledgment and Congratulation of many thousands of young Men and Apprentices of this City was presented to the General for his many great and faithful Services to the City and Kingdom, and for his indefatigable Endeavours to establish a good and lasting Peace; which his Excellency not only received very respectfully, but likewise returned the following Answer:

City excuse themselves from a Loan.

Whit. Mem. Engl. Affa.
Fortifications about London, &c. demolished.

The Parliament, having occasion for Money for defraying a Donation formerly voted the Army, appointed a Committee to treat with the City about a Loan; on which Account the Citizens being earnestly pressed to advance the Money, returned for Answer, That it could not be complied with, by reason the City had for three Years past been a great Sufferer, not only by Loans and Advance of Money, (a great Part whereof remaining still unpaid) but also by the many intolerable and grievous Assessments and Taxations. At the same Time, at the Desire of the Army, a Vote was passed for demolishing the Rampart, Bastions, and other Works of Fortification which incircled the Cities of London and Westminster, and Borough of Southwark.

The City of London not complying with the Desires of the Parliament in advancing Money for the Service of the Army, occasioned the General's sending this Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council:

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"Being informed that the City of London is in Arrear to the Army a very great Sum, and understanding that Care is taken by the Committee of Parliament for the Army to provide Money seasonably for the Payment thereof, by sending to you to advance fifty thousand Pounds, upon the Security of what is due from you, which is a far greater Sum than is desired to be presently advanced by you; although we cannot conceive, that there will be any Backwardness in you to answer this Desire, which is so reasonable, and of such Necessity to the Satisfaction and Well-ordering of the Army, yet we thought good to write unto you about it, that so you may understand so much from us with this; that Delay will be equal to a Denial, and cause us to think, that little Regard is had of us, or the Endeavours now in Hand tending to the Settlement of the Peace of the Kingdom, which is so much desired and hoped for by us, and all honest Men, and to the obtaining of which timely Supplies of Money, and especially the present Payment of the Sum above-named.

"P. S. We understand it is near a Fortnight since the Committee applied themselves to you in this Business, and that nothing is done; we desire there may be a present Performance,

"the Condition of the Army not admitting any longer Delay. Putney, Sept. 6, 1647."

The Lord-Mayor and Common Council, having duly considered the above Letter, returned the following Answer:

"Right honourable Sir, and honourable Gentlemen,

"Your Excellencie, and your Councell of Warre, had before this received an Account of the Arrears due by the Inhabitants of this City to your Army, whereof you put us in Mind by your Letter of the sixth present, but that the same was not communicated to us before Saturday last; although a Court was called on Friday to that Purpose, which for want of a full Number was dismissed. There hath indeed some Weeks past a Proposition been made to us by the Parliament to advance fifty thousand Pounds upon the Security of those Arrears; unto which we made this Return, That we humbly prayed it might be taken Notice, that the same was no Debt of this Court; and that we found ourselves unable to compass so great a Sum upon such a Security, which we foresaw would fall short by the Decay, Decay and Removal of many Persons out of this City, since the Assessments were made; and yet withall we did tender our ready Endeavours for advancing the Sum upon other Security; which might content the Lenders; and in the Interim, whilst the same was under Consideration before the honourable House of Commons, proceeded vigorously to raise the Money, and accordingly got in something; although, as aforesaid, your said Letter were not sooner imparted to us, because the Court of Aldermen did daily expect an Answer from the House of Commons upon the Petition of this Court, which might the better enable us to give your Excellencie and the Army an Account thereupon. But, it having pleased the said honourable House of Commons, by their Order of the ninth present, to declare, that they were not satisfied therewith;

"We, the eleventh present and this Day, have again employed our most serious Thoughts and Councells, how we might fully and finally put an End to this Business, according unto the Duty we are obliged in towards the Parliament, and the great Respect we owe and bear to your Excellencie and your Army. We thankfully acknowledge the favourable Opinion, which your Excellencie and your honourable Councell expresse of us; That you cannot conceive that there will be any Backwardness in us to answer your reasonable Desires for the speedy advancing of this Money; and shall strive to preserve and deserve the same, by all ready Offices and Compliance on our Part, as also by all other Services and Respects, whereby we may give your Excellencie and your Councell an Assurance and Testimony of our great Desires to uphold all good Correspondence and Understanding between your Excellencie and your Army, and this City.

"We are also very sensible of what Necessity this Service is to the Satisfaction and Well-ordering of your Army, and by God's Help, shall

 "by your Excellencie and your Army, so none can "have a more high Esteeme thereof, or be more
 "thankfull Acknowledgers of the same, nor can

 "Blessings, which all good and honest Men may "promise themselves and this Kingdome from the "constant, unwearied, and sincere Endeavours of "your Excellencie and that renowned Army; whereof
 "also, in God's good Time, we shall readily give

The further Excuse
of the Citizens.

And, in order to hasten the raising the Sum demanded by Fairfax, the House of Commons sent a Committee into the City, who, among other Things, reminded the Citizens, that some Time before the Advance of the Army towards London, they would gladly have parted with a much greater Sum to have purchased their Favour. Whereupon the City, for the more effectual raising the Sum required, applied to Parliament for a Power to compel all Persons to pay what they should be assessed at. However, upon the great Opposition made in the City against raising the said Sum, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council acquainted the House of Commons, that the City at that Time could not advance the said Sum; therefore prayed they might be excused at present.

Two Days after, the Committee, appointed to enquire into the late outrageous Attempt made upon both Houses of Parliament by the London Apprentices, made their Report; whereby it appeared,

 That there were sufficient Grounds for impeaching
 Sir John Gayer, the Lord-Mayor, Thomas Cullam,
James Bunce, John Langham, and Thomas Adams, Aldermen, for abetting the late compulsive Tumult against the Parliament; wherefore they were all committed Prisoners to the Tower of London, and the Committee ordered to draw up Articles of Impeachment against them: In the Interim the House took into Consideration the Manner of governing the City, the Mayor being in Custody; and, after some Debates, agreed to refer it to the Aldermen and Common Council, to consider how the Civil Government of the City might be administered according to their Charters, now they have no acting Mayor; by Virtue of which Reference and Order of the Commons, a Common Hall was summoned to meet on the twenty-seventh of September, for the Election of a Mayor; when Alderman Warner was elected to officiate the remaining Part of that Year, as well as the succeeding: In pursuance of which Election, the said Alderman was on Michaelmas Day presented to and approved of by the House of Peers, as Lord-Mayor of this City.

The City of London increasing in Arrears to the Army, occasioned their petitioning the Parliament for a Power to levy the same by Distress; but the General dispatched a Letter to the Committee of the Army, wherein he acquainted them, that he had commanded Colonel Hewson's Regiment to take up their Quarters in London, in order to assist in raising the Arrears due from the City. This Letter being communicated to the House of Commons, it occasioned warm Debates, till at last it was ordered, that Lieutenant-General Cromwell should write to the Colonel, to retard his March for some Time; whereupon a Committee was appointed to acquaint the City therewith, and the great Inconveniences that would necessarily result therefrom, if proper Care were not speedily taken to collect the Arrears due to the Army: In Return for this Favour, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, by their Deputies, gave hearty Thanks to the House of Commons for their generous Care, and timely Notice of the General's Intention to quarter Soldiers in the City; which was no sooner performed, than the City received from Fairfax the following Letter:

The Lord-Mayor and Common Council have-ing seriously considered the above Letter, returned the following Answer to Fairfax:

"May it please your Excellency,

"Your Letter, dated at Kingston the 19th Instant, we received this Day; and having duly weighed the Contents thereof, we cannot but, as in the first Place, with all due Thankfulness, acknowledge the great Favour and Respect unto this Citie, for the Tenderneſs and Care had by yourself and the Army to preserve it from the least Damage or Prejudice, and for other your Favours in the Letter intimated; so also expresse our hearty Sorrow for your Communication, in such Places as he finds fittest, untill the Service of Collection and

"Verily we cannot but with Sadness of Heart

Reply.

"My last to your Lordship at Kingston was not intended to charge you with the Arrears of the City, or to put the Levying thereof upon any other, besides those that are impowered and charged by the Parliament for that Purpose. But the Business of sending for their Assistance some Soldiers into the City being resolved on, as the best Way, and of present Necessity for the timely and effectual Dispatch of that Service, I thought fit by the Letter to acquaint you therewith, both as a Respect to your Lordship and the City, and that by you the City might the better understand the Grounds and Intentions of that Resolution, to prevent any Inconveniencies from Misapprehensions thereof; nor did I expect, that either that Resolution, or the Letter, instead of a vigorous and speedy Dispatch in a Business so just and necessary, should beget any Interposals or Intercourse, tending to further Delays: But, since the Parliament hath thought fit to put a Stop, for the present, to that Way of proceeding, which here was conceived most necessary, and agreeable to their Orders, and to undertake some other effectual Course in the Business, I shall wait the hoped Issue thereof; and if your promised, concurrent Endeavours prove not timely answerable to their Undertakings, to your Professions, and the Army's and Kingdom's Expectations, I much doubt, the Consequences, whatever you and I can do to prevent them, will be every way sad, and that no more to the Parliament, Kingdom, or Army, than to the City itself; the Safety and Prosperity of which shall be always endeavoured, as much as lies in the Power of, &c.

"Windsor, 24th November, 1647."

About the same Time, a Petition, addressed to the Parliament under the Appellation of the Supreme Authority of the Nation, was read, and voted to be a seditious and contemptuous Avowing and Prosecution of a former Petition and Paper annexed, called, An Agreement of the People, formerly adjudged by the Commons to be destructive of the Being of Parliaments, and fundamental Laws of the Kingdom: Whereupon divers of the Presenters of the said Petition were committed to Newgate, and the Gatehouse in Westminster. However, this Treatment was not sufficient to deter others from the like Practices; for the very Week after many of the Citizens of London and others attended at the House, with another of the same Stamp, but worse in its Contents, as highly reflecting upon the Proceedings and Partiality of the Commons; insolently desiring to know, what their Freedoms are, and that the Persons committed for last Week's Petition might be immediately discharged.

The Lord-Mayor, and Committee of the City Militia, out of their Zeal to the Parliament, gave Intimation of this Petition, before it was presented, and at the same time offered a sufficient Number of the City Train'd-Bands to guard both Houses; for which they received Thanks, and were ordered to send the same as they should see Occasion. From which may be observed, the sudden Vicissitudes of Fortune, and the perplexed and despicable Condition of the Parliament's Affairs; for the Army which they raised, commissioned and paid, not only spurned at them, but were become their Masters; and the Citizens of London, their old Friends, constant Assistants, joint Actors, and principal Support with their Lives and Fortunes, began to despise them, question their Integrity, reproach and cast them off; which was a Prelude to that which soon after happened, of their being expelled the House by Oliver Cromwell.

On the first of December, the Common-Council of this City presented a Petition to both Houses of Parliament, the introductory Part whereof much resembled the two former, as appears by their Acknowledging the Parliament to be the supreme Power of the Kingdom, constituted for the Defence, Safety and Freedom of the Nation; to which all other Powers and Societies of Men ought to submit: Acknowledging their unwearied Pains, incessant Labour, and constant Endeavours in the common Cause of God and the Kingdom: Disavowing all Engagements in Differences, excusing their Declarations, &c. that Free-quartering of the Army about the City has occasioned the Dearth of Provisions, and given Opportunity to evil-disposed Persons to foment Differences.

"Wherefore the Petitioners humbly pray, That the Honour, Power, and Privileges of Parliament may, by their Wisdom and Justice, be inviolably preserved; That the Army may be so provided for, that they may be enabled to remove their Quarters to a farther Distance from the City, whereby the Price of Provisions may be abated, and Trade encouraged; That Free-quarter may be prevented, and superfluous Forces disbanded; That a more vigorous Course may be taken in settling the Peace and Government of this Kingdom, so long desired; That the Covenant may be duly observed; That all well-affected Persons, that have adhered to the Parliament, may be effectually protected and defended; That the Recorder, Aldermen, and other Citizens now imprisoned, (so as it may stand with the Honour and Wisdom of the Parliament) may be enlarged.

"Which the Petitioners shall esteem a great Favour to this City; and that all the late unhappy Proceedings, as unto this City and Members thereof, may be forgotten and obliterated; that the Petitioners may enjoy the Splendor of their former Favours, and be thereby enabled to be the more serviceable to the Preservation of Parliament and City, re-uniting all that were well-affected thereunto."

Ibid. For this Petition the Citizens received the Thanks of both Houses, and were told, as to their Desires, some thereof were under Consideration, and as to that touching their imprisoned Members, the House would do therein what should be consistent with their Honour and Justice.

Ibid. Soon after, Information was given to the Speaker of the House of Commons of a Conspiracy in the City for raising an Army; wherefore an Ordinance passed both Houses, for obliging all Papists, Officers, Soldiers and others, who had carried Arms against the Parliament, or assisted the Enemy in the late War, to depart the City, and all Places within twenty Miles thereof, in the Space of six Days, upon Pain of being apprehended and proceeded against as Traitors; and for the more effectually preventing the carrying on of any such Design for the future, the following Ordinance of Parliament was made for regulating the Choice of Common-Councilmen and City Officers:

Ibid. "Be it ordained by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That no Person whatsoever, that hath been imprisoned, or hath had his Estate sequestered for his Malignancy against the Parliament; that hath adhered to the King against the Parliament, at any Time during this unnatural War; or who hath contrived, abetted, persuaded, or who hath entered into that late Engagement in or about the City of London, adjudged treasonable by both Houses of Parliament, which preceeded that horrid Force of the twenty-sixth of July last, against the Houses of Parliament, by the Apprentices, Reformadoes, and others; or who hath had a Hand in the said Force, or gave Encouragement thereunto; or who hath contrived, abetted, persuaded, or entered into that Engagement, entituled, The Agreement of the People, declared to be destructive of the Being of Parliaments, and fundamental Government of the Kingdom; shall for the Space of one whole Year, to be accounted from the fifteenth of December, 1647, be elected, chosen or put into the Office and Place of Lord-Mayor of the City of London, or of Alderman, Sheriff, Deputy of the Ward, or Common-Councilman of the said City; nor shall have Voice in Election of any such Officers: And all such Persons are hereby made incapable, and declared so to be, of any of the said Places. And, if any Election shall be made of any such Person, the same is hereby ordained to be null and void. And the Lord-Mayor of the City of London for the Time being is from Time to Time to give special Order, that this Order be published at all Elections, and that the same be strictly and punctually observed."

A few Days after, a Petition was preferred to the House of Commons by divers Shop-keepers in the Cities of London and Westminster, who the Christmas before had been greatly abused for opening their Shops on that Day, notwithstanding their being countenanced therein by an Ordinance of Parliament; wherefore the House made an Order, that the Committees of the Militia of London and Westminster should take Care to prevent all such Insults for the future.

Some time after, Sir Thomas Fairfax, the General, with his principal Officers, were magnificently entertained at Dinner by the Lord-Mayor.

A few Days after, an Ordinance of Parliament was made, for empowering the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs of this City to pull down and destroy all the Play-houses within their Jurisdiction; and to cause all the Actors and Players thereunto belonging to be apprehended and punished as common Rogues and Vagabonds; and also every Person frequenting such Play-houses to forfeit the Sum of five Shillings.

This Year Corn was so excessive dear, that Wheat was sold at three Pounds thirteen Shillings and eight Pence the Quarter; and other Grain in Proportion.

On Sunday the tenth of April, a Multitude of rude and disorderly Persons assembled in Moorfields, to tittle and divert themselves at Play; but, being opposed by a Company of Train'd-Bands, posted at Finsbury, to prevent the Profanation of the Day, by suppressing all riotous and tumultuous Proceedings in that Neighbourhood, fell upon the same in a furious Manner, and, having dispersed them, seized upon their Colours; whereupon the Tumult increased prodigiously, by a general insurrection in all Parts of the City; and dividing themselves into divers Bodies, they ran several Ways; one Party to Whitechapel, who seized upon the Colours of a Captain's Company; whilst another went to Smithfield: But much the greatest Body hurried to Whitehall; where being soon dispersed by the Parliament's Troops at the Mouth, they returned to the City Fury-like; and being joined by the other Parties, like a mighty Torrent, drove all before them; and breaking open Houses, Prisons, and Magazines, carried off Arms, Plate, Money, and other Things of Value; and seizing upon the Drums that were beating ing up for the Train'd-Bands, they employed them in beating up for People to join themselves; and being mightily increased in Number, began to form into military Order; and, having possessed themselves of the Gates and Chains of the City, went and attacked the Lord-Mayor's House, wherein were his Lordship, the Sheriffs, and Committee of Militia: When, after a vigorous Assault, and killing of one Man, and wounding others, they forced the Guard, and carried off a Piece of Ordnance, wherewith they repaired to Leadenball, and, by its Assistance, soon possessed themselves of that Magazine. In the mean Time they had not only Drums beating in all Parts of the City, but likewise upon the River Thames, to excite all Mariners and Watermen to join them for God and King Charles.

General Fairfax, in the Interim, spared no Pains to repress this dangerous Insurrection; to which End, he called a Council to deliberate upon the present Emergency; wherein was debated, whether it would be proper to attack the Rioters with the two Regiments at Whiteball and the Moufe, or wait for a Reinforcement from the Army; but, considering that upon such a pressing Occasion no Time was to be lost, they resolved to attack them with the said Regiments, though they should be cut in Pieces. In consequence of which Resolution, Orders were immediately given to those Regiments to be ready to march early the next Morning; who entering betimes at Aldersgate without Opposition, marched to Leadenball; where charging their main Body, they received the Fire of their Cannon, whereby divers Soldiers were wounded, and a Woman killed; but not being able to make any further Resistance, took to their Heels, and dispersed themselves in all Parts of the City; when after the killing of some, and wounding and taking many others, by Ten o'Clock in the Morning, the City Gates were opened, and every thing as still and quiet, as if no such Commotion had happened.

Resolutions of the Common Council concerning the same.

This dangerous Tumult so happily suppressed, a Common-Council was summoned to meet the next Day; wherein it was resolved, that the Committee of the London Militia should attend both Houses of Parliament, and, in the Name of the City, acquaint them with their utmost Detestation and Abhorrence of the late horrid and villainous Outrage; and humbly to request, that a Day of Thanksgiving might be appointed for the City's great and wonderful Deliverance from the imminent Danger it was involved in. And the Committee was likewise enjoined to apply for a special Commission of Oyer and Terminer, for trying the Aggressors concerned in the late detestable Sedition: And also, in the Name of the City, to return hearty Thanks to his Excellency the General for his speedy and seasonable Assistance, by which they were happily rescued from the Brink of Destruction.

Posts and Chains taken away.

Two Days after, the said Committee presented to the Parliament a Narrative of the late Tumult, with the above-mentioned Resolutions taken thereon; which being taken into Consideration, their Requests were granted, with an Order for taking down all the Posts and Chains in and about the City. 'Twas likewise ordered, That, for the better Security of the City, the Garrison of the Tower of London, for the future, should consist of one thousand Foot, and one hundred Horse.

Soon after, an Information was presented to the Common Council by John Everard, acquainting them with a dangerous Conspiracy of some Officers of the Army, for disarming the City; which when effected, they'd arm all the Citizens that were Friends to the Army, and grant unto them an authoritative Power over their Fellow-Citizens, who should be obliged to maintain them; by which Means the City would, on all Emergencies, be obliged to supply the Army with Money, upon Pain of military Execution. This Information greatly alarmed the Citizens, insomuch that the Common Council drew up and presented this Petition to both Houses of Parliament:

The City's Representation thereof to the Parliament.

"That they had lately presented to them an Intimation from one John Everard, a true Copy whereof is hereunto annexed, whereby he doth give Information of some Speeches that passed from certain Persons at Windsor, of an Intention to disarm the City, and then to plunder the same; and that divers Reports to that Effect have been brought unto us, by Letters and otherwise, from divers Parts of this Kingdom, and from foreign Parts; which Reports, together with the present drawing and continuing of the Army so near the City, and the Increase of the Number of Soldiers in the Tower, hath been, now is, and will be the Occasion of great Fears, and a great Decay of Trade, and an Inhancing of the Prices of Victuals within this City: The which Fears are much increased by the taking and keeping down of the Chains within the same. And the Petitioners do humbly conceive, that their Danger is increased, and their Strength much abated, by the disuniting of the Command of the Forces of the City, and the Parts within the late Lines of Communication, and the Weekly Bills of Mortality. For the removing of which Fears, and obtaining of those Things which may conduce to the Safety of the Parliament, and of the City,

"The Petitioners do humbly pray,

"1. That Consideration may be taken of the Information given by the said John Everard, and that, upon a further Examination thereof, such Course may be taken therein, as your Honours shall think fit.

"2. That the Chains within the City of London, which were lately pulled down, may forthwith be repaired and set up again, and the Army may speedily be removed to a further Distance from the City.

"3. That, by an Ordinance of Parliament, Major-General Skippon, who was long since chosen, and still by Act of Common Council continued Major-General over the Forces of the City, may be appointed Major-General within the Lines of Communication, and the Weekly Bills of Mortality; by which Means he may the better be enabled to re-unite the Forces within the City, and the said Lines of Communication, and Weekly Bills of Mortality, for the better Defence of the City and Places adjacent, and likewise for the Preservation

"tion of the Parliament, to whom the City do "resolve to adhere, according to their solemn "League and Covenant."

After reading this Petition in the House of Lords, the following Answer was returned by the Speaker of that House:

"the good Affections that they have expref-
"sed in this Petition, asserting the Resolutions
"of the City to adhere to the Parliament,
"according to their solemn League and Cove"nant.

"As to the Particular of setting up the Chains
"within the City, they do fully leave it to the "Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council,
"to do therein as they shall think it.

"To the last Particular, concerning Major-"General Skippon, he being a Member of the "House of Commons, the Lords can resolve
"nothing therein, without the joint Concurrence
"of that House; but they will take it further "into Consideration."

After reading the City Petition in the House of Commons, they came to these Resolutions:

Ibid.

An Answer of the Commons.

"1. That the Desires of the Petitioners con"cerning the Chains be granted, and that the "Committee of the Militia see it done.

"2. That the Thanks of the House be re"turned to the Citizens for their good Affection "expressed in their Petition. Mr. Speaker was "appointed to acquaint the Citizens, That draw"ing Part of the Army so near the City was "occasioned by Orders given out in the Time "of the late Tumult; that the House will take "the Business into serious Consideration, and do "that therein which may be for the Good and "Safety of the Parliament and City, so far as "thereby they may receive Satisfaction."

Ibid.

On account of divers Rifings in several Parts of the Kingdom, in behalf of the Royal Cause, the Army found themselves obliged to withdraw from this City and Neighbourhood; on which Occasion, the General's Letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons was, by their Order, communicated to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of London; and at the same Time a Committee of both Houses were appointed to treat with the City for providing sufficient Guards for the Security of the Parliament in absence of the Army. The Consideration of these Things induced the Lord-Mayor and Common Council to present the following Petition to the House of Commons:

Ibid.

City Petition for Power to regulate the Militia, &c.

"That your Petitioners do thankfully acknow"ledge the great Favour of this honourable
"House in the speedy granting their Desires ex"pressed in their late Petition.

"And upon Consideration of a Letter from "the Lord General to the Speaker of the ho"nourable House of Commons, and by him
"communicated to the Petitioners, they do hum"bly conceive, that there is an Expectation that "the Parliament shall be guarded by the Forces "of the City and Places adjacent: The which

"with all Willingness your Petitioners are ready "to do, (according to their late Undertaking)
"being put into a Capacity to perform the same,
"by settling the Militia of London, and being au"thorized so to do.

"That they have received Intimation by a "Petition from divers worthy and well-affected "Citizens, That the Bringing-in of Bullion is "much impeded, and Merchandizing greatly di"verted, (of which your Petitioners are very "sensible) by reason that your former Favour
"afforded to the City, in the nominating of "the Lieutenant of the Tower, hath been of "late suspended, and many Soldiers therein "placed, unknown to the City; whereby Trading "is much decayed, and poor People, for want "of Employment, in extreme Misery, and the "City greatly endangered by their important Ne"cessities.

"That your Petitioners (being encouraged by
"many former Favours received from this ho"nourable House) are bold to make these their "Addresses, and humbly pray, That the Lord-"Mayor, Aldermen and Commons, in Common "Council assembled, may, by Ordinance of "Parliament, be authorized to nominate and "present to both Houses of Parliament a Com"mittee for the Militia of the said City, as by "several Ordinances hath been formerly grant"ed; whereby Commanders and Soldiers may "be the better united and encouraged to per"form their Duties for the Safety and Preser"vation of the Parliament, City, and Places ad"jacent; and that the Command of the Tower "of London may be put into the Hands of such "a Person as shall be nominated and presented "to both Houses of Parliament by the Lord-"Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of "the said City; and that the Soldiers now there "remaining may be removed; which will give "good Satisfaction to the City, and remove ma"ny Fears and Doubts, and be an Invitation
"and Encouragement unto Merchants (both "English and Strangers) to bring in Bullion,
"and an Occasion to increase Merchandizing,
"and quicken Trade, and consequently a Com"fort to poor People, in having Employment for "their Subsistence."

After reading this Petition, and having Debates thereon, the Commons resolved, That the Desires of the Citizens be granted, according to the Prayer of the said Petition; and ordered an Ordinance to be brought in by the City Representatives, pursuant to the said Resolution.

The House of Commons having received Intelligence of a dangerous Conspiracy, entered into by the Cavaliers, who, being all sworn to Secrecy, had enlisted many thousands of Men both for Horse and Foot Service; wherewith they intended to destroy the City and Parliament, Presbyterian and Independent, and, by a general Massacre of the Roundheads, to recover at once what they could not by a septennial War:

To obviate the Execution of this destructive Design, the House of Commons immediately acquainted the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City therewith, and ordered, that the Committee of the London Militia should forthwith put the several Regiments of Trained-Bands into

To this the Lord-Mayor and Common Council returned for Answer, "That they were firmly resolved to act jointly with both Houses against their common Enemy, who seeketh all Opportunities to divide them, that they might the more easily destroy both; and that they gratefully acknowledged the assiduous Endeavours of the Parliament for the Welfare of the City and Kingdom; and that they looked upon the wonderful Discovery of this wicked Plot as the immediate Work of Providence; therefore declared, that as theirs and the Interest of of both Houses were inseparable, they would, according to their Protestation, live and die with them." Whereupon both Houses passed an Order for the more effectual removing all disaffected Persons from the City of London, and twenty Miles thereof.

The City, having obtained of the Parliament what they requested in their late Petition, were thereby encouraged to address themselves again to the House of Commons by this Petition:

Roth. Col.

City Petition to Parliament for settling the Peace of the Kingdom.

"That as your Petitioners in all Humility do thankfully acknowledge the many former Favours of this honourable House manifested to this City; so in particular, in granting their Desire expressed in their late Petition concerning the Tower and Militia of London, and in communicating unto the Petitioners several Votes of both Houses of Parliament; wherein, to your Petitioners great Joy and Comfort, are expressed your Resolutions, that you will not alter the fundamental Government of the Kingdom, by King, Lords and Commons; that you will preserve inviolably the solemn League and Covenant, and the Treaties between the Kingdoms of England and Scotland; and that you will be ready to join with the Kingdom of Scotland in the Propositions agreed upon by both Kingdoms, and the Preservation of the Union, according to the Covenant and Treaties.

"And your Petitioners further humbly presented to this honourable House, that the Inhabitants of the City are much grieved, in that their Magistrates and Fellow-Citizens have for a long Time been under Restraint, and the City thereby deprived of their Service.

"And humbly pray,

"That, in Prosecution of your said Votes, you will be pleased to improve all good Opportunities in perfecting so desirable a Good as is therein expressed, for the speedy Settlement of the Peace of both Kingdoms, and Preservation of the Union, according to the Covenant and Treaties, and preventing a new and bloody War.

"That the Aldermen now in the Tower, the Recorder, and the rest of their Fellow-Citizens restrained upon the same Occasion, may be discharged and restored; whereby the City may be the better united, their Hands strengthened, and they made more serviceable to the Parliament and City for their Preservation and Safety,

"which they shall endeavour to the utmost of their Power and Abilities."

The Lords returned Thanks for this Petition, and assured the Citizens that they would earnestly endeavour to comply with their Desires, as an Encouragement for the Citizens to persevere in their hearty Affections to the Parliament.

The Lords Answer, and Proceedings thereupon.

And the Commons, willing to secure the Citizens in their Interest, as a further Obligation, voted the Discharge of Mr. Glyn, their Recorder, Colonel Bromfield, and six others of the City Colonels, besides Captains, from Prison; but were told, that the Affair of the imprisoned Aldermen was of such Importance, that they had resolved further to consider of the same.

Ibid.

A few Days after, Letters were sent by the Kentish Malecontents to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City, desiring Assistance, and an Association with them; but, instead of answering their Requests, they communicated their Letters to the Parliament; which was so kindly taken, that the House not only returned Thanks for the same, but likewise immediately ordered the Discharge of three of their Aldermen from their long Imprisonment in the Tower of London.

Their Letter communicated to Parliament.

Some Time after, the City petitioned the Parliament, purporting, That a personal Treaty might be had between the King and both Houses in this City, or some other Place convenient, and most consistent with his Majesty's Honour and the Safety of Parliament. To which Treaty they humbly desired that their Brethren of Scotland might be invited; so that, according to their Allegiance and the Covenant, his Majesty's Royal Person, Honour and Estate might be preserved, the Power and Privilege of Parliament maintained, the just Rights and Liberties of the Subject restored, Religion and Church-Government in Purity established, all Differences composed, a firm and lasting Peace concluded, the Union of the two Kingdoms, according to the Covenant, continued, all Armies disbanded, and the Soldiers Arrears justly paid.

Another Petition from the City for Treaty with the King.

Both Houses having returned Thanks for this Petition, and the Continuance of the good Affections of the Citizens towards Peace, added, they were as sincerely and deeply affected with the Sufferings of the People by War, as the Citizens could be; and therefore had appointed a Committee for settling a speedy and well-grounded Peace: But the City soon after, perceiving the Remissness of the Parliament to treat with his Majesty about an Accommodation, petitioned again on the same Subject:

"1. That the Militia of London and Parts adjacent might be settled in one Committee; and that, if any Person should be added by both Houses to the said Committee from the Out-parts, such Person or Persons to enjoy no Place of Profit under the Parliament, whereby they might be encouraged to continue the War.

Another Petition on the same Subject.

"2. That the King might be brought to London with Freedom, Honour and Safety, to treat with his Parliament about a safe and lasting Peace.

To which the Lords made Answer, That they had considered their Petition, and already made some Progress in the Affairs therein specified; and declared, they granted their Desires in every Particular; in confidence that the City will be careful to make good their Engagements for securing his Majesty's Person and the Parliament from all Tumults and Disorders, and that, according to the Covenant, they will live and die in the Defence of both:

And the Commons acquainted the Petitioners, That, according to their Desire, they had agreed to join the Militia in the Out-parts to that of the City; whereupon a Committee of both Houses was appointed to repair to the City to treat with the Common Council (summoned for that Purpose) about the Security promised for the Defence of the King and Parliament, during the intended Treaty in London. The Committee, having transacted the said Affair, reported, That the Common Council had explained themselves upon the Particulars in their former Petition, as followeth:

Ibid.
The City's Engagement.

"1. They will engage, that the King and Parliament may meet and treat, free from Force and Violence; this they mean by the Word safely.

"2. By the Word defend, they mean, that during the Treaty they will defend the King and Parliament (so much as in them lies) free from Force and Violence.

"3. That, if the Treaty be in London, the City will for the present defray the Charge of the Guard during the Treaty, and afterwards refer themselves to the King and Parliament for the Satisfaction thereof.

"4. That, in case the intended Treaty shall be in London, and his Majesty and the Parliament shall not agree, then the City conceive themselves bound to submit to the Wisdom of both Houses, touching the Disposal of the King's Person.

"5. That the Common Council and Officers Military do declare, that they are ready, according to their Engagement, as much as in them lies, by the Trained-Bands, to guard and defend the King and Parliament against all Force and Violence.

"And they desire to have the Militia united, and to be enabled to raise Forces, and that, during the Treaty, no Forces may come within thirty Miles of London, without their Consents.

"That those who shall make any Tumult or Disturbance during the Treaty, may be punished with Death; that none who have borne Arms against the Parliament, or contributed thereunto, shall, during the Treaty, come within thirty Miles of London, without Leave of Parliament.

"That the Treaty may be with all Expedition, for preventing of further Inconveniences; and that, if the Treaty be in London, the Common Council will endeavour to find out a convenient Place for it, and Accommodations."

Great Debates arising upon this Explanation, which was looked upon to be of such Consequence, that tho' the Parliament was adjourned from Friday till Tuesday; yet, for the Satisfaction of both City and Country, it was resolved, that the House of Commons should sit for the Dispatch of that Affair both on the Saturday and Monday following.

About the same Time the City acquainted the Parliament with the declaratory Letter and Account they had received from the Duke of Buckingham, and Earls of Holland and Peterborough; wherein they declared their Intentions of joining with the Forces of Surrey, Sussex and Middlesex, to release his Majesty, and bring him to his Parliament, to settle Peace, and preserve the Laws of the Nation; wherefore they invited the City to join with them in so good a Work, or at least not to act against them; as will in some measure appear by the said Letter, directed to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City, in Common Council assembled, which is as follows:

"Having a long Time beheld the sad Calamities and Miseries of these Kingdoms, and finding no other Means for Redress, we are forced into this Undertaking, which we desire may be rightly understood of all that are well affected, but not to the present Designs; especially of this City, whose Actions and Endeavours do sufficiently evidence their good Affections: To this End we have inclosed a brief Account of our Intentions, or Pretences of Peace to the Kingdom, which we hope may give Satisfaction both to you and the whole Kingdom; whose Assistance, with God's Blessing, we desire no farther, than our Designs are real for the Good and Happiness both of the King, Parliament and Kingdom, according to our Covenant."

The House of Commons, having taken this Letter into Consideration, voted that the said Peers ought to be proceeded against as Traitors.

Voted traitors.

The Citizens of London being apprehensive that some Inconveniences would arise from General Skippon's inlisting such a Number of Horse and Foot in the City, by Order of Parliament; therefore, to obviate any Disturbance that might happen on that Account, applied to the Parliament, and humbly prayed, that a Stop might be put to such Proceedings, and that such as were already lifted might be discharged. The Answer of the Lords gave great Satisfaction, by their saying, they would live and die with the Petitioners. But that of the Commons shewed, that their present Circumstances could not admit of any Relaxation; and, as a Proof thereof, communicated to the Common Council divers intercepted Papers, among which was the Prince of Wales's Declaration; which, together with other Reasons, fully convinced the Citizens of their pressing Occasions.

Ibid.

A few Days after, a Committee of the Common Council of this City presented to the House of Commons a Copy of a Letter and Declaration sent by the Prince of Wales to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of London, commanding Copies thereof to be delivered to both Houses of Parliament, before they did any thing them-

the King,
&c.

The Londoners, out of their great Inclination to Peace, and strong Propensity to the King's Safety, presented a Petition to both Houses of Parliament, of this Tenor: "1. That the King's Majesty may be free from Restraint. 2. Invited to a Treaty. 3. That all Acts of Hostility, by Sea and Land, may, by Command of King and Parliament, cease. 4. That the Government of the Church may be settled, according to the Covenant. 5. That distressed Ireland may be relieved. 6. The People of England, by disbanding all Armies, eased; the Liberty of the Subject restored; the Laws of the Land established; the Members of both Houses enjoined to attend the House for the Service of the Kingdom; that the Self-denying Ordinance may be effectually observed; and speedy Consideration had of the Condition of such Merchants, whose Ships and Goods are stayed by those with the Prince in the revolted Ships; and that some Expedient may be thought of for Discharge of all Ships, that Trade be not destroyed."

Soon after, a Petition from the Common Council, signed by many thousands, was presented to the House of Commons, for Unity and Amity between the Parliament, City and Army; which being well approved of, Thanks were given to the Petitioners.

This Petition was quickly followed by another of a different Stamp, intitled, The humble Petition of thousands of well-affected Persons in and near the City of London; setting forth their Reasons why they at first assisted the Parliament, from whom they at present expected something else than a mere Treaty; whose Demands, couched by them in twenty-seven Articles, being of such an insolent and singular Nature, I shall, for the Satisfaction of the Curious, insert the Heads thereof:

Ibid.

1. That they would have the Supremacy of the People made good from all Pretences of negative Voices, either in the King or Lords.
2. That they would have Laws made for the annual Election of Representatives, without Writ or Summons.
3. That their Time of sitting exceed not forty or fifty Days at most, and that a Time be fixed for terminating the present Parliament.
4. That they would have all Things relating to Religion and the Worship of God exempt from the compulsive or restrictive Power of any Authority.
5. That none be forced or pressed to serve in War.
6. That they would have Kings, Queens, Princes, Dukes, Earls, Lords, and all other Persons, made equally liable to the Laws of the Land.
7. That all Commoners be freed from the Jurisdiction of the Lords in all Respects; and to have Care taken, that all Trials be only by twelve Men duly sworn; and no Conviction but upon two or more sufficient Witnesses.

8. That none be examined against themselves, nor punished for doing that, against which no Law is in Being.

9. That the Proceedings in Law be abbreviated, and the Charge thereof ascertained in all Particulars.

10. That all Trade and Commerce be laid open, and monopolizing Companies and others reduced.

11. That the Excise, and all Kind of Taxes, except Subsidies, be taken off.

12. That they would have all late Inclosures laid open, or those chiefly employed for the Use of the Poor.

13. That they would have the vast Number of poor imprisoned Debtors considered, and Care taken for their Enlargement.

14. That they would have some effectual Course taken to prevent Begging and Beggary in so fruitful and opulent a Nation.

15. That they would have Punishments more equally proportioned to Crimes, that Mens Lives and Estates for the future might not be forfeited upon trivial and slight Occasions.

16. That they would have the grievous Burden of Tythes removed, Satisfaction made to Impropropriators, and a more equal Maintenance for poor Ministers.

17. To have a Stock of Money raised out of the forfeited Estates, for the Payments of those who voluntarily contributed above their Abilities, before those that disbursed out of their Superfluities.

18. To bind themselves and all future Parliaments from abolishing Property, levelling Mens Estates, or making all Things common.

19. That they would have declared what is the Duty or Business of the Kingly Offices, and the Revenue thereof settled, so as to prevent Differences for the future about the same.

20. That they would have the Election of City Officers regulated, as also those of the several Companies in London; the Commonalty thereof restored to their just Rights, unjustly withheld from them for the Maintenance of corrupt Interest, in Opposition to common Freedom, and the Trade and Manufactures of the Kingdom.

21. That they would have ample Satisfaction made to all Persons aggrieved by oppressive Sentences in the Courts of High-Commission, Star-Chamber, and Council-Board, or by Monopolizers or Projectors, and that out of the Estates of those that were Authors, Actors or Promoters of such intolerable Mischiefs, and that without much Attendance.

22. That they would have all Committees abolished, and all Business conveyed into the true Method of usual Trials.

23. That they would not have the Examples of former tyrannous and superstitious Parliaments followed, in making Acts or Ordinances, or appointing Punishments, concerning Opinions or Things supernatural, by styling some Blasphemies and other Heresies.

24. That they would have declared what the Business of the Lords is, and their Condition ascertained, without derogating from the Liberties of other Men, in order to prevent Controversies on that Account.

25. That

25. That they would have Justice done upon the capital Authors and Promoters of the former or late Wars.

26. That they would have constant Pay provided for the Army, and Rules given to all Judges, and other publick Officers throughout the Nation, for their Indemnity; and also for the indemnifying of such as have assisted them.

27. That they would have laid to Heart the vast Quantity of innocent Blood inhumanly spilt, and the dreadful Spoil and Havock made amongst the People, by express Commission from the King; and seriously to consider, whether the Divine Justice or Wrath is to be satisfied or appeased by an Act of Oblivion.

Notwithstanding the imperious Style of the sanguinary Petitioners, the Commons returned them Thanks for their great Pains and Care for the Welfare of the Nation, and told them, That they would quickly take their Requests into Consideration.

The City of London having advanced the Sum of ten thousand Pounds for carrying on a Treaty with the King at Newport in the Isle of Wight, but the Time for treating not proving sufficient, 'twas, by an Order of the Lords and Commons, prolonged for fourteen Days; whereupon a Committee of both Houses were, on the third of November, sent to meet the Common Council at Guildhall, to solicit an additional Loan of four thousand Pounds, for defraying the Charge of the said Treaty for that Time.

Some Time after, Sir Thomas Fairfax, the General of the Army, sent the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council to advise them of the Army's March towards London:

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"Being upon an immediate Advance with the Army towards London, we thought good hereby to give you Notice thereof; for the Grounds and Necessity leading us hereunto, we refer you to our late Remonstrance, and to our late Declaration concerning the same: We have only this further to add, that as we are far from the least Thought of Plunder, or other Wrong to your City, or any of the Places adjoining, which we hope your former Experiences of us will give you Cause enough to credit us in; so for the better Prevention of any Disorder in the Soldiery, or of any Abuse or Inconvenience to the Inhabitants in the quartering of the Soldiery at private Houses, we earnestly desire that you would take a present Course for the Supply of Money to pay these Forces, while we shall be necessitated to stay there: Upon which we assure you, we shall so dispose of them into great and void Houses about the City, as much as may be possible, as that few or none of the Inhabitants shall be troubled with quartering of any Soldiers at all. And for this Purpose we desire that forty thousand Pounds may be forthwith provided upon the Security of your Arrears, to be ready to be paid out to the Forces To-morrow Night, if possible: And we shall be ready to receive from you any Intimations for the further Prevention of Hurt or Inconvenience to the City in this Business.

"Windfor, November 30, 1648."

The Lord-Mayor having summoned the Common Council to deliberate upon this Letter, after some Debates thereon, resolved to send a Deputation to acquaint the House of Commons therewith, and that they would take no other Resolution in that Respect, till they knew the Sentiments of the House in that Affair. The Commons having read the said Letter, after long Debates, resolved, That, considering the great Arrears due from the City to the Army, they declared it to be their Pleasure, that the City advance the forty thousand Pounds as Part thereof, for the immediate Support of the Army: In consequence of which Declaration, the Lord-Mayor, &c. dispatched an Answer to the aforesaid Letter; wherein they promised to exert themselves, to the utmost of their Power, for levying the Arrears due by the City to the Army; and that in the mean time they would, with the utmost Expedition, endeavour to raise the Sum desired; therefore, in the Height of their Consternation, they humbly intreated, that the Army might be removed to a greater Distance from London, and a right Understanding cultivated between the Army and the City; to which they sincerely promised to contribute all that in them lay for the obtaining so salutary an End: Yet, notwithstanding the earnest Desires of both the Parliament and City, the Army arrived two Days after in the Suburbs and Neighbourhood of London; and the General, with several Regiments of Horse and Foot, took up their Quarters in Whitehall, St. James's, the Meuse, York-House, and other large Buildings in the Out-parts; while the other Part was quartered in the circumjacent Villages, without the least Abuse or Indignity offered to any Person; which was the Effect of the following Proclamation, and that of their admirable Discipline:

"These are to require all Officers and Soldiers of Horse and Foot, who shall quarter in and about the City of London, and Suburbs thereof, that they behave and demean themselves civilly and peaceably towards all Sorts of People, not giving any just Cause of Offence, or Provocation, by Language, or otherwise, upon Pain of such severe Punishment, as to a Court-Martial shall be thought meet; and not do any unlawful Violence to the Person or Goods of any, either in their Quarters or elsewhere, upon Pain of Death. And, for the more due Execution hereof, all Commanders and Officers are hereby required not to be absent from their several and distinct Charges, without Leave first had in Writing from their Superiors, upon Pain of such Punishment as the Party injured shall sustain, and such further Censure as to Justice shall be thought fit. Given under my Hand, December 4, 1648.

"Fairfax."

The next Day other Troops arriving in the Suburbs of London, they were likewise quartered in the Out-parts; many whereof in great Houses, in that rigorous Season, were obliged to lie upon the bare Floors, with little or no Firing; wherefore the General wrote to the City to provide them with Bedding, to be allowed out of their Arrears, otherwise to find them Quarters in the City.

The Army
seizes the City Treasure.

The Army, in conjunction with divers Members of the House of Commons, having resolved to bring the King to a publick Trial; for their greater Security in carrying on the Prosecution, the City Trained-Bands were discharged, and in their Stead a Regiment of Horse, and another of Foot, from the Army, were appointed as Guards for the modelled Parliament.

The City not having as yet paid any Money to the Army according to Promise, the General commanded two Regiments of Foot and divers Troops of Horse to march into London, and take up their Quarters in Black-Friars, and its Neighbourhood; whence, by Order, they went and secured the Treasuries in Weavers, Haberdashers and Goldsmiths-Hall; from the first of which they carried off above twenty thousand Pounds: The Reasons for which Proceeding will more fully appear by the following Letter from the General to the Lord-Mayor:

"My Lord,

Rush. Col.
vol. 4. p. 2.

The General's Letter thereupon.

"I have given Order to Colonel Dean, and some others, to seize the Treasuries of Goldsmiths-Hall and Weavers-Hall, that by the said Monies I may be enabled to pay Quarters, whilst we lie hereabouts; having also ordered Receipts and Assurance to be given to the Treasurers of the said Monies, that they should be fully reimburs'd for the said Sums out of the Assessments of the City due to the Army, and of other Assessments thereunto belonging: And indeed, although I am unwilling to take these strict Courses, yet having sent so often to you for the said Arrears, and desired Sums of Money to be advanced by you, (far short of the Sums due from you) yet I have been delayed and denied, to the Hazard of the Army, and the Prejudice of others in the Suburbs, upon whom they are quartered: Wherefore I thought fit to send and seize the said Treasuries, and to send some Forces to quarter in the City, until I may be satisfied for the Arrears due unto the Army; and, if this seem strange unto you, it is no less than that our Forces have been ordered to do by the Parliament in the several Counties of the Kingdom, where Assessments have not been paid, and there to continue until they have been paid.

"And here give me leave to tell you, the Counties of the Kingdom have borne free Quarter, and that in a great Measure for want of your paying your Arrears equal with them: Wherefore these Ways, if they dislike you, yet they are merely long of yourselves, and are of as great Regret to me, and to the Army, as to yourselves; we wishing not only the Good and Prosperity of your City, but that Things may be so carried towards you, as may give you no Cause of Jealousy. I thought fit to let you know, that if you shall take a speedy Course to supply us with forty thousand Pounds forthwith, according to my former Desire, and provide speedily what also is in Arrears, I shall not only cause the Monies in the Treasuries to be not made use of, but leave them to be disposed of as of Right they might, and also cause my Forces to be withdrawn from being in any Sort troublesome or "chargeable to the City; and let the World judge, whether this be not just and equal Dealing with you. I rest, my Lord,

Your affectionate Servant,

W. W. W.
December 8, 1648.

T. Fairfax.

The Troops that secured the above-mentioned Halls, at first, by Mistake of Orders, marched to the Excise-Office; which the General was no sooner acquainted with, than he sent this Letter to the Commissioners:

"Gentlemen,

"Whereas upon this present eighth of December a Party of Horse and Foot came to the Excise-Office in Broad-Street; which perhaps will occasion some to think the Army came thither with a Purpose to interrupt any more levying of the Excise: These are to assure them, the said Forces came thither by a Mistake, and that there was not any Intention to give Interruption unto the due Levying of the Excise, or to seize upon Money in Cash; and that you may proceed as formerly, according to those Ordinances and Orders of Parliament which you have received concerning the same; and that no Molestation or Hindrance shall be given by the Army."

Ibid.

The General's Letter to the Commissioners of Excise.

Upon this extraordinary Proceeding of the General's, the Common Council assembled, and, after some Debates, appointed a Committee to attend his Excellency with the following Propositions:

"1. That the City, for their Security of the forty thousand Pounds desired, may have all the Arrears upon Assessments made for this Army within London and Liberties thereof, which did grow due, to be paid before the five-and-twentieth of March last, freed from all Engagements.

Ibid.

Propositions from the City to the General.

"2. And of those Arrears, all that Money paid into the Treasury since the thirtieth of November last to be accounted Part of the forty thousand Pounds desired; and that with the Money received out of Weavers-Hall, and the five thousand five hundred Pounds lately received by the Treasurers, the rest shall be paid on Monday next.

"3. That the Common Council have undertaken to discharge the General's Engagements concerning the Money taken out of Weavers-Hall, to pay the same thither out of the said Arrears.

"4. That the Common Council hath promised to get in the rest of their Arrears, and also to make the new Assessments for the six Months ending at Michaelmas last, and to collect the same with all Expedition.

"5. And upon this Engagement, they do humbly pray, that the Army may this Night be drawn out of the City, and Liberties thereof, according to the Intimation of Colonel Whalley and Colonel Thomlinson."

But these Proposals not proving satisfactory, occasioned the General's returning the following Answer:

"My

The General's Answer.

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"I have perused your Paper, and I find the Point of Security hath much troubled you and us, whereby we are yet without our Money, and Necessities daily grow upon us; to prevent which, and to make Things clear, which I do not conceive your Paper does, I desire that you will, within fourteen Days, or sooner, if you please, cause all the Money charged upon the City of London for the Army until the five-and-twentieth of March next, and in Arrears, to be brought in. This being done, I shall repay the Money brought from Weavers-Hall, and withdraw all the Forces from the City: The Continuance of which in the City, in the mean Time, will, I conceive, facilitate your Work in collecting your said Monies.

Final Proceedings in the Parliament-House.

The House of Commons, since its late Purgation by the Army, being intirely antimonarchical, they, in a wicked and tyrannical Manner, resolved to punish all the Citizens of London that subscribed the Petition for a Treaty with and bringing the King to London; to which End, they passed an Ordinance, That, for the future, all such Citizens should be rendered incapable of being elected Mayor, Aldermen or Common Council-men of this City.

Ibid.

The City's Reply thereto.

This Ordinance occasioned the City to send a Committee of Common Council, to acquaint the House, That by their late Ordinance none were eligible for the Offices of Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, or Common Council-men of this City, that had borne Arms against the Parliament, been in the late Rebellion, or signed the Petition for a personal Treaty with his Majesty: Wherefore they declared, that upon a strict Inquiry 'twas found, that the Citizens were so generally engaged in the said Petition, that all the old Common Council-men, whom they were to have re-elected on Thursday last, were all concerned in the said Petition, except a very few; therefore could not find Men enough out of that Restriction, that would stand for Common Council-men, nor a sufficient Number to serve for Questmen, Jurymen, Constables, and other City Officers; therefore prayed, that some speedy Course may be taken for their Relief. After the House had some Debates thereon, 'twas referred to the Consideration of a Committee, who soon after reported it, as their Opinion to adhere to the aforesaid Ordinance; which being confirmed by the House, an Order was forthwith dispatched to the Lord-Mayor and Citizens, to proceed immediately in the Election of Common Council-men, according to their late Ordinance.

Ibid.

The King's Trial proclaimed in London.

Soon after, on the ninth of January, Denny, Serjeant at Arms, by Order of the Commons, proclaimed the King's Trial in Cheapside in the City of London, in order to encourage all Persons to bring in their several Accusations against his Majesty; and, for the greater Security of the Persons that were to be his Judges, Fairfax, the General, issued a Proclamation, strictly commanding all Papists, Delinquents, and disaffected Persons, to depart London, and ten Miles thereof, in twenty-four Hours, and not to return for the Space of one Month, upon Pain of being punished as Deserters.

The Presbyterians of this City, being for an amicable Accommodation between the King and Parliament, unanimously signed the above-mentioned Petition for a Treaty, and bringing his Majesty to London. The Independent Members of the castrated House of Commons were so highly incensed at this Proceeding, that they made the above-mentioned iniquitous Order in their Disfavour; and, having by that Means gained the Ascendant in the Common Council, petitioned the House of Commons to have the King brought to Justice! With this Petition a Narrative was delivered, containing an Account of the Deportment of Sir John Warner, the Lord-Mayor, and divers of the Aldermen, in Common Council; who, rather than concur with the Petitioners in their wicked Proceedings, chose to leave the Court, accompanied by the Common-Serjeant and Town-Clerk; after whose Departure, the Petition was illegally passed without Opposition. However, the House of Commons, who were upon no better a Foundation than the Petitioners, approved of the Petition, and declared, That it may and ought to be entered in the Court Books among other Acts of Common Council; and then returned them Thanks for the same. 'Tis not to be wondered at, that the House were so highly pleased with this Petition, seeing they were thereby doubly obliged, first by approving of the Prosecution against the King, and by ascribing to them the Appellation of Supreme.

in disobeying the Orders of Parliament, and neglecting and refusing to proclaim the Act for abolishing the Kingly Office in England and Ireland within the said City, his Lordship was brought to the Bar of the House of Commons, and, after some Queries proposed concerning his Non-performance thereof, he replied, That, according to the Oath of Allegiance which he had taken, he could not in Conscience proclaim the said Act for the abolishing of the Kingly Office, and Government of Kingship; declaring, that the Business was only proper for the Sheriffs of the City: And, being remanded from the Bar, the House voted as followeth:

Lord-Mayer degraded and fined for refusing to proclaim the Abolishment of the Kingly Office.

"Resolved by the Commons of England assembled in Parliament, That the Lord-Mayer of the City of London, for his Contempt in disobeying the Orders of Parliament, be fined 2000*l*.

On the 3d of April Alderman Atkins was chosen Mayor of this City, in the room of Sir Abraham Reynardson (lately degraded and imprisoned by Order of the Commons, as above-mentioned); who being to be presented to the House of Commons for their Approbation, they, for the greater Solemnity of the Ceremony, commanded the Commissioners of Chancery to bring in the Great Seal, and lay it upon the Table.

The above-named Ordinance for abolishing of Monarchy was, on the 30th of May, proclaimed in this City by the Lord-Mayer, assisted by twelve Aldermen: But Sir Thomas Soames and Mr. Chambers, Aldermen, refusing to attend at that Ceremony, they were ordered to appear at the Bar of the House of Commons to answer for their Contempt. When Sir Thomas was asked, why he did not attend upon that Occasion, seeing he had previous Notice thereof; he replied, That that Affair was inconsistent with the several Oaths he had taken, as well as contrary to his Judgment and Conscience, therefore durst not attend: And Chambers, being interrogated in the same Respect, answered, That his Heart did not go along with that Business. However, for their Disobedience, the former was expelled the House of Commons, degraded from the Office of Alderman, and rendered incapable of bearing any publick Office for the future: These two last Punishments were likewise imposed upon Mr. Chambers.

A Day of publick Thanksgiving being appointed by Parliament for suppressing of the Levellers, the Lord-Mayer and Common Council sent a Deputation to intreat the House of Commons to honour the City at Dinner at Grocers-Hall on that Day, and that they might have the Honour of solemnizing that Festival with the House at such Church as they should please to appoint. The Commons, accepting the Invitation, appointed Christ-Church in Newgate-Street for the Place, and ordered hearty Thanks to the Citizens for their great Affection and sincere Attachment to the Parliament and Kingdom; and, at the Time and Place prefixed, the House, with their Speaker, the General, with his principal Officers, and the President and Council of State, repaired to the City; when, after the Hearing of two Sermons, they walked in great State to the aforesaid Hall, where they were most sumptuously regaled by the City; the Musick, at this magnificent Entertainment, being no other than Drums and Trumpets: And the Citizens, to evince their great Satisfaction on this Occasion, besides the vast Surplusage of Provisions left, gave to the Poor the Sum of four hundred Pounds in Money.

Whit. Mem. Engl. Affa. A.D. 1650 The Parliament, having received a Confirmation of the King's Design of returning from Holland to Scotland, resolved to put the Nation in a good Posture of Defence; and, to begin with themselves, passed an Act to empower the Committee of the London Militia to raise six hundred Horse for their Security.

Ibid. On the 19th of September, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City kept a Day of Thanksgiving for Cromwell's Victory over the Scots at Dunbar; on which Occasion they invited divers Members of Parliament, Officers of the Army, and others, to Dinner at Guildhall, where they were most elegantly entertained.

Whit. Mem. Engl. Affa. A.D. 1651 On the 23th of August the City Trained-Bands were mustered in Totbil-Fields, and reviewed by the Speaker and most of the Members of the House of Commons, before whom they performed their several Evolutions with great Dexterity and Applause.

Ibid. A.D. 1652 Cromwell, after his Victory at Worcester, on his Return to London, was met by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Committee of the City Militia, who congratulated him upon his great Success and safe Arrival, and invited him to Dinner. Pursuant to this Invitation, Cromwell, accompanied by most of the Members of Parliament, and principal Officers of the Army, repaired to Guildhall on the 16th of September, and were magnificently entertained by the Citizens.

Chron. Preci. The great Dearth still continuing, Wheat was sold at three Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence the Quarter.

Whit. Mem. Engl. Affa. A.D. 1653 Cromwell having divested the Parliament of all Power, by turning them out of Doors, occasioned divers Aldermen and Citizens of London to address him for reinstating them. Whereupon a Counter-Address was presented to Cromwell by many other Citizens, shewing their Dislike of, and Dissent from, the former, and their firm Resolution to adhere to Cromwell.

wife by divers other Addressees from the Army, Fleet, and Country, constituted a certain Number of Persons to take upon them the Government of the Kingdom; which they accepting of, he invested them with the charming Appellation of the Supreme Authority: And by Virtue of which having assumed the Name of Parliament, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City presented them a Petition, wherein they prayed,

"1. That the precious Truths of the Gospel may be preserved in Purity; and the Dispensers thereof, being approved to be learned, godly, and void of Offence, may be sent forth to preach the Gospel. 2. That their settled Maintenance by Law might be confirmed, and their just Properties preserved. 3. That the Universities may be zealously countenanced and encouraged." The Petitioners had the Thanks of the House for their good Affections, and were desired to continue their Care and Endeavours for the Peace and Safety of the City.

On the 2d of February, three preternatural Tides happened in the River Thames within the Space of six Hours.

The Supreme Authority, or Mock Parliament, (artfully chosen by Cromwell) tired with their sham Power, surrendered the same into the Hands of him from whom they received it: Whereupon Cromwell was, by the Council of Officers, chosen Protector: And soon after being invited by the City to dine at Guildhall, he was received with all the Honours usually paid to their lawful Sovereigns; the City Companies in their Stands lining the Streets thro' which he passed, he was received and attended by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities on Horseback. And, after being sumptuously entertained, at his Departure he conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon the Lord-Mayor.

At the same Time the Dearth so happily decreased, that Wheat was sold at one Pound fifteen Shillings and six Pence the Quarter, and Malt at one Pound eight.

Cromwell, out of his great Affection to the City of London, invited the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen to Dinner; and, on the 16th of May, entertained them in a very sumptuous Manner.

A few Days after a Conspiracy being discovered against Cromwell, and divers Persons on that Account apprehended, he issued a Proclamation for taking the Number of all disaffected Persons within the Bills of Mortality; and being sensible, that nothing would so effectually prevent such Practices, as the securing of this City to his Interest, for the attaining so salutary an End, he sent for the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and sixty Common-Councilmen to Whitehall; where he acquainted them with the Nature of the late Conspiracy, and Confessions of divers of the Conspirators, and earnestly recommended to them the Peace and Safety of the City; and, in order to oblige them in an extraordinary Manner, granted them a Commission, whereby a Committee of Citizens were empowered to have the entire Direction of the City Militia, and from Time to Time to raise such Forces as they should judge necessary, to be commanded by their old, experienced, and faithful Leader, Major-General Skippon; for which Favour the City had for many Years solicited. And, as a further Obligation upon the Citizens, he remitted them some customary Burdens and Taxes; whereby he became very popular, and effectually secured the City to himself.

The Lord-Mayor, and Committee of the City Militia, some Time after addressed the Protector for Leave to revive the Artillery Company, for the better disciplining the Citizens, whereby they might upon any Emergency be enabled to act in his Defence; and promised, that none should be admitted into that Company, but such as were well-affected to his Highness; to which he readily assented.

The Number of Hackney-Coaches to be kept in this City and Suburbs, were, by a Protectorial Ordinance, limited at two hundred, to be under the Care and Government of the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen. And, as an additional Favour, he granted the Mayor and Commonalty a Licence, annually to import from Newcastle, or elsewhere in England, four thousand Chaldron of Coals, for the Use of the poor Citizens, free from the Duty of twelve Pence per Chaldron.

Notwithstanding divers Proclamations and Orders were made against building upon new Foundations within the City of London, and ten Miles thereof; yet many Builders, out of an avaricious Temper, without the least Regard to those Injunctions, continued to build as formerly. Therefore to punish the Disobedient, and prevent such Practices for the future, an Ordinance was made by Cromwell; whereby all Persons who had erected Houses in Contempt of the said Prohibitions, since the 25th of March, 1620, should, for every such House, not having four Acres of Land thereunto belonging, pay to the Protector one Year's Rent; and for every House erected after the 29th of September, 1656, without Land as aforesaid, to forfeit one hundred Pounds for the Use of the Protector.

At the Inauguration of Cromwell, as Lord Protector, the Lord-Mayor of this City assisted, by carrying the City Sword before him, accompanied by the Earl of Warwick, who carried that of the State, and who, during the Ceremony in Westminster-Hall, stood on the right Side of Cromwell's Chair, and the Lord-Mayor on the left.

Upon the Demise of the Protector, Richard, his eldest Son, was in the City proclaimed his Successor, in Presence of the Lord-Mayor, accompanied by the Privy Council. And, at the Celebration of the funeral Obsequies of Cromwell, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen assisted, attended by a great Number of the principal Citizens.

At the same Time, by a great Scarcity of Grain, Corn became so very dear, that Wheat was sold at three Pounds and five Shillings the Quarter.

Soon after the Death of Cromwell, divers Parties were formed in the Kingdom towards restoring the King; which the Parliament being acquainted with, they ordered the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London to attend the Council of State; when the President informed them of the dangerous Designs of the Enemies, the Care and Vigilancy of the Parliament and Council, the apprehending of divers of the Conspirators, and defeating their horrid Designs of destroying all that were Friends to the Parliament, with an Intent of bringing in the King. Then, after reading a Proclamation that was ready for publishing, returned Thanks to the City for their good Affection and faithful Adherence to the Parliament, earnestly exhorting them to persevere therein, for the mutual Good and Safety of the Parliament, City, and Kingdom.

The Citizens, approving of this Information, soon after invited the Parliament, Council of State, and principal Officers of the Army, to dine with them at Grocers-Hall, on the Day of Thanksgiving for the late Victory obtained by Lambert over Sir George Booth in the West. Pursuant to this Invitation, the said three Bodies, on the 6th of October, repaired to the City and Hall appointed, where they were splendidly entertained by the Lord-Mayor and Citizens, with mutual Expressions of the sincerest Friendship.

Soon after, Advice was brought of General Monck's marching from Scotland in Defence of the Parliament, against the Impositions of the Army in England, who had newly erected a Court of Officers and others (denominated the Committee of Safety) for the Government of the Kingdom, independent of Parliament; a Deputation whereof were sent to acquaint the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City with Monck's Proceedings, who, they said, intended to bring in the King: Therefore, to prevent a new War, earnestly exhorting them to take all the Precautions imaginable to secure the Peace and Safety of the City, and to join with them for the Security of the Kingdom.

The Citizens, under terrible Apprehensions of an approaching War, wisely declined declaring either for the Parliament or Army. However, what the Masters durst not, the Apprentices did, by shewing their Dislike of the present Government, and, assembling in great Numbers, declared, that they would have a free Parliament; and tho' Colonel Hewson, who was left to guard the Committee of Safety, suppressed that Commotion, by marching into the City, and killing divers of the young Citizens, yet the Loss of them inflamed the City the more against the Army, which they said was only kept on foot to murder the Citizens. Whereupon the Common Council appeared more refractory than ever, and refused to concur in any Thing that was proposed to them by the Committee of Safety; which began to be universally abhorred, as likely to be the Original of such another Tyranny as that erected by Cromwell, seeing it wholly depended upon the Power and Spirit of the Army. And, having appointed a Committee of their own Body, with Orders to give their Opinion at this critical Juncture, they came to the following Resolutions, and ordered them to be reported to the whole Body in Common Council assembled, on the 20th of December, by Alderman Foote; which was done accordingly in the Tenor following:

"Voted,

Votes of the Common
Committee.

"1. That this Committee conceive the City of London is at this Time in imminent and extraordinary Danger.

"2. That they judge it absolutely necessary, at this Time, for the Court of Common Council to put this City forthwith in a Posture of Defence.

"3. And in order thereunto, that the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, settle six Regiments of Train'd-Bands, with their respective Commanders and Officers.

"4. That the Naming of those Commanders and Officers be left to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council.

"That the said Commanders and Officers Commissions shall be under the Common Seal of the City, to be sealed in open Court, before the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council.

"Touching the Letters received from Perthmouth, and the Fleet, the Opinion of the Committee is, "That several Commissioners be forthwith appointed to confer with the Lord Fleetwood, with Sir Arthur Haslerig, Colonel Morley, and Colonel Walton, and with Vice-Admiral Lawson, and other Officers of the Fleet, in order to the Safety of the City, and the Peace and Settlement of the Nation, and in due Time to give an Answer to General Monck's Letter.

"That, in order to the obtaining of that Peace and Safety, the Common Council do empower those Commissioners to propound the Convening of a free Parliament, according to the late Declaration of this Court.

"Voted, That these Votes be reported to the Common Council by Alderman Fosroke."

Which Report being read, and every Part thereof severally debated, was by the said Court confirmed and approved of, saving the Right of the Court of Aldermen.

Then Alderman Fosroke, Mr. Richard Ford, and William Bateman, Esq; were appointed Commissioners to confer with Vice-Admiral Lawson; Alderman Tompson, Colonel Bromfield, and Maximil. Beard, appointed Commissioners to confer with Sir Arthur Haslerig, &c. and Alderman Bateman, William Vincent, Esq; and John Jolly, Esq; appointed Commissioners to confer with the Lord Fleetwood, and the Speaker.

This Behaviour of the Citizens proved a very great Mortification to the Committee of Safety, tho' not to be compared to that occasioned by the Revolt of divers Regiments of the Army, and a Squadron of Ships under the Command of Vice-Admiral Lawson, who declared for the Parliament; to whom it was such agreeable News, that the Speaker, at a Conference, acquainted the Citizens, that the Members would meet again in a very few Days; and thence repairing to the Tower of London, removed the Lieutenant placed there by the Committee of Safety, and constituted another in his stead.

The Difference between the Parliament and Army occasioned a general Interruption of Receipts and Collections; whereby the Parliament was so destitute of Money, that they had not wherewithal to defray the necessary Expence; therefore required the Citizens of London, with the utmost Dispatch, to collect and bring in their Arrears of former Taxes; and, in the Interim, endeavoured to borrow of them a Sum sufficient to supply the present Exigency: And, tho' they were sensible that the City had no greater Affection for them than they had for the Army, they nevertheless applied to the Common Council for a Loan; who, instead of complying with their Desires, not only gave them an absolute Denial, but likewise objected to their Authority, and roundly told them, that they would not submit to any Imposition that was not granted by a free and lawful Parliament.

At the same Time (January 8, 1659-60) a Remonstrance of the Citizens of London, touching Liberty and Freedom, was presented to the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled; wherein they thankfully acknowledged the just and prudent Resolution of that honourable Council, expressed in their Declaration of the 20th of December last past; and withal humbly remonstrating, that no Power or Persons whatsoever might impose any Law or Tax upon any of those Citizens, with whose general Concernment that Court was intrusted, until the Authority thereof be derived from their Representatives in Parliament. By which Means they doubted not, next under God, to have their languishing Trades revived, and their Hearts and Purfes together enlarged to a cheerful and liberal Contribution toward their lawful Government and Protection, according to Magna Charta, and the Petition of Right.

Upon the presenting whereof, it was put to the Vote, Whether they should prosecute those lawful Means that may lead to the Attainment of a free Parliament, &c. But, the Lord-Mayor dissenting, the Resolve and Sense of the Court was transmitted to the Council of State. Whereupon the Lord General Monck was ordered to march into the City with his Army, for reducing of the Citizens to the Obedience of the Parliament; in order whereunto, the several Regiments both of Horse and Foot took their respective Stations throughout this great Metropolis, strong Guards being placed at all the Gates and Posterns, and the Streets planted with Soldiers, continuing in their Arms, and sometimes upon Motion, for many Hours together: At which Time, divers Aldermen and Common-Councilmen were seized and committed to Custody; their Names being as followeth:

Alderman Vincent ,	Major Chamberlain ,
Alderman Bludworth ,	Mr. Brown ,
Col. Bromfield ,	Mr. Ford ,
Lieut. Col. Jackson ,	Mr. Spencer ,
Major Cox ,	Mr. Fenning .

This being done, his Excellency sent a Letter to the Parliament, dated from Guildhall, London, which being read, the Resolve of the House was,

"Resolved, That the Answer to this Letter be to send unto General Monck the Resolves of the Parliament, that the Gates of the City of London and the Percullifes be destroyed; and that he be ordered to put the said Vote in Execution accordingly.

" Resolved, That the present Common Council of the City of London, elected for this Year, be discontinued, and be, and are hereby declared to be null and void, and that the Lord-Mayor have Notice thereof.

" Ordered, That it be referred to a Committee to bring in a Bill for the Choice of another Common Council, with such Qualifications as the Parliament shall think fit, with Order to meet at eight of the Clock, in the Speaker's Chamber, on Friday morning.

The House, having received a Report from the Council of State of some Resolutions taken by the Council in the City of London,

" Resolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State hath done, in ordering that the Commissioners for Government of the Army do appoint Forces to be and continue in the City of London, for preserving the Peace thereof, and of the Commonwealth, and for reducing of the City to the Obedience of the Parliament.

" Resolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State have done, in ordering that the Commissioners for the Army do take Order that the Posts and Chains of the City of London be taken away.

" Resolved, That the Gates of the City of London, and the Percullises thereof, be forthwith destroyed.

" Resolved, That the Commissioners for Government of the Army be, and are hereby impowered to apprehend and seize any of the nine late Officers, who were ordered by the Parliament to leave the Town, who have not obeyed the former Order in going to the Places appointed for them; or any other dangerous Persons, who have been in Arms against the Parliament and Commonwealth.

" Resolved, That the Parliament doth approve of what the Council of State and Commissioners of the Army have done in seizing and apprehending of Mr. Vincent, Merchant, in Bishopsgate-Street, and Mr. Thomas Brown, Grocer, in Wood-Street, Daniel Spencer, in Friday-Street, Laurence Bromfield, in Tower-Street, Major Chamberlain, and Richard Ford, in Seething-Lane, Major Cox, at the Swan in Dowgate, Mr. Bludworth, and Mr. Fenning, in Fenchurch-Street, and Lieutenant-Colonel Jackson."

In pursuance of the afore-named Resolves and Orders, most of the Posts and Chains were pulled down, the City Gates broke and cut to Pieces, and the Percullises taken down and destroyed: Which being done effectually at Cripplegate, Bishopsgate, and Aldgate, where many thousands of sad Objects with no small Terror beheld these unexpected Ruins, the Soldiers afterwards went to Aldersgate, Newgate, and some other Places: But the Work did not prove so feasible; for they being both of an extraordinary and impregnable Strength, proved the more difficult; so that a longer Time was required: However, they dismounted the Gates from off the Hinges, and with Iron Wedges and great Hammers rent and tore to pieces Part of the Percullises.

An Account whereof being given to his Excellency the Lord General at Guildhall, about four of the Clock in the Afternoon, he marched from thence to Whitehall; and in the Evening, the Council being fate, his Excellency ascended the Stairs, representing to their Lordships an Account of his Transactions amongst the Citizens, in Obedience to the Resolves and Authority of that Honourable Council, for the pulling up of the Posts and Chains, and destroying of the Gates and Percullises: Which by them was well received, and hearty Thanks from the Members returned.

After all which, the Guards of Horse and Foot being placed, and the City Constables with their several Watches set, betwixt eleven and twelve of the Clock on Friday Night, a considerable Company of Foot (commanded by the Captain of the Round-Guard) came to Newgate, where the said Captain would have dismissed the Constable and his Watch; but they refused it, saying, They must obey the ancient Orders and Customs of the City, and could not depart their Duty without Orders from the Lord-Mayor.

The Captain replied, That, since they were to make a Garrison of the City, there ought to be no other Watch or Guards kept, but what should consist of their own Military Force; and that they had not been nine Years out of their native Country, but they had sufficient Experience how to manage the publick Affairs of a Nation, in defence of Civil and Christian Liberty, against all restless Spirits whatsoever: But, upon the Importance of the Constable, the Captain wheeled off with his Men, and peaceably marched them through the Gate, without any further Dispute or Opposition.

The Parliament, unmindful of the great Services done them by Monck, were sapping his Authority at Westminster, (while he was employed in executing their Commands in London) by passing an Act to curtail his Power, by joining others with him in the Command of the Army: Which ungrateful Return was so highly resented by Monck's Officers, that they bitterly inveighed against the Ingratitude and Proceedings of the Parliament, and Indignity offered to their General, whom they acquainted with the little Arts and underhand Endeavours to alienate the Affections of his Soldiers, than which, they declared, that nothing could be stronger Proofs of his intended Destruction; therefore advised him to provide for his own Security.

Monck, roused at this Alarm, began to imagine himself in Danger; for the obviating of which, the first Step he took was, to secure his Army to his Interest; and to that End, held a Consultation with his Officers, who unanimously assured him of their sincere and firm Resolution to adhere to him upon all Emergencies. This Assurance was no sooner obtained, than early next Morning he marched his Army toward the City, and drew up the same in Finsbury-Fields. But, how to regain the Love of the enraged Citizens after his late ill Usage, was the Thing to be considered of; well knowing, that, without their Assistance, it would be impossible for him with his Handful of Troops to accomplish his great Design. Therefore, to atone for his past Offence, he sent Clarges, his Confident, to the Lord-Mayor, with an Acknowledgment of his Fault, and to acquaint him, that he was heartily

His Exce.
This Acknowledgment of the General's not only occasioned the Lord-Mayor's calling a Common Council, according to his Request, but likewise to invite him to Dinner; after which they repaired to Guildhall; where meeting the Common Council, Monck in a Speech testified his great Concern for having accepted a Command, which in the Execution had given so much Uneasiness to the Citizens; urging, that he was under a Necessity of accepting thereof, or throwing up his Commission, which he judged necessary to keep for the Good of the City and Kingdom, whose Happiness and Prosperity no Man had more at Heart than himself; and, as an incontestable Proof of his Sincerity, communicated to them the Copy of a Letter sent by him to the Parliament at his leaving Whitehall, wherein he upbraided them with their unjust and unreasonable Proceedings, advising them, (by way of Command) within a certain Time, to issue out Writs for a new Parliament, as the only Expedient to restore Peace and Happiness to the Kingdom; which both the Army and Nation expected from them.

Ibid.
Clar. Hist. Rebell.
Mutual Engagements between the City and Monck.
By this Letter the Common Council perceived, that he was deeply embarked against the Parliament, and, there being little Hopes of a Reconciliation, believed they might safely trust him. Whereupon they mutually engaged to stand by one another at all Events. This happy Coalition between the City and Monck was soon proclaimed by Ringing of Bells, and at Night by an infinite Number of Bonfires and Illuminations, with such universal Acclamations as had not been heard of, with such particular Signs of Scorn and Contempt of the Parliament, as rendered it ridiculous to every one; there being scarce a Bonfire where a Rump was not roasted, or something resembling one, which was declared to be done in Celebration of the Parliament's funeral Obsequies: And there was no Invention of Fancy, Wit, or Ribaldry, that was not exercised that Night, to expose the Parliament and magnify the General.

Whit. Mem. Engl. Affs.
Monck's Proceedings towards a Restoration
Chosen by the City Major-General.
Monck having regained the City's Favour, and secured and settled every thing according to Desire, returned to his Quarters at Whitehall, and disposed his Army in such Places as he deemed most convenient: And, having restored the secluded Members of Parliament, an Ordinance was made, to restore the Common Council to their ancient Rights, the imprisoned Apprentices released, and the Posts, Chains, Gates and Portcullises of the City to be replaced: For which the Citizens returned hearty Thanks; and, according to the Desire of the House of Commons, cheerfully agreed to advance the Sum of sixty thousand Pounds. And the City, farther to evince their good Opinion of Monck, chose him Major-General of all their Forces: Whereupon he immediately advised them to disarm all dangerous Persons, and keep a strong Guard, for the Peace and Quiet of the City, during the Interval of Parliament. Whereupon the City invited the Council of State and the General to reside in London for their greater Safety; for which Kindness they returned Thanks, without accepting the Offer.

At the same Time a very great Dearth happened, wherein Wheat was sold at three Pounds six Shillings the Quarter.

All Things seeming now to conspire towards a Restoration, the Citizens of London resolved to contribute all in their Power for the happy accomplishing so good a Work; to which End the Officers of the City Train'd-Bands, by their Orator, Alderman Robinson, declared, that they were firmly resolved to adhere to their Major-General Monck, the Council of State; and the ensuing Parliament. At which Time strong nightly Guards were kept in the City, with the Chains drawn cross the Streets, till the Morning; and by Day frequent Entertainments were made by the several Companies at their Halls, for regaling the Council of State, the General, and his principal Officers.

At this Time the City Forces were mustered in Hyde-Park, before the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and a great Number of the Nobility, who were highly pleased with their fine Appearance.

Matters of the greatest Consequence, preparatory to the Restoration, being now upon the Carpet, King Charles the Second sent divers Letters, with a Declaration, from Breda in Holland, to General Monck, the Houses of Lords and Commons, and the Fleet; and the following to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London:

"Charles Rex.

"Trusty and Well-beloved, we greet you well.

"In these great Revolutions of late happened in that our Kingdom, to the Wonder and Amazement of all the World, there is none that we have looked upon with more Comfort, than the so frequent and publick Manifestations of their Affections to us in the City of London; which hath exceedingly raised our Spirits, and which, no doubt, hath proceeded from the Spirit of God, and his extraordinary Mercy to the Nation; which hath been encouraged by you, and your good Example, to assert that Government, under which it hath so many hundred Years enjoyed as great Felicity as any Nation in Europe, and to discountenance the Imaginations of those, who would subject our Subjects to a Government they have not yet devised; and, to satisfy the Pride and Ambition of a few ill Men, would introduce the most arbitrary and tyrannical Power that was ever yet heard of. How long we have all suffered under those and the like Devices, all the World takes Notice, to the no small Reproach of the English Nation; which we hope is now providing for its own Security and Redemption, and will be no longer bewitched by those Inventions.

"How desirous we are to contribute to the obtaining the Peace and Happiness of our Subjects, without Effusion of Blood; and how far we are from desiring to recover what belongs to us by a War, if it can be otherwise done, will appear to you by the inclosed Declaration; which, together with this our Letter, we have intrusted our right trusty and well-beloved Cousin, the Lord Viscount Mordaunt, and our trusty and well-beloved Servant, Sir

"John Greenville, Knight, one of the Gentlemen of our Bed-chamber, to deliver to you; to the End that you, and all the rest of our good Subjects of that our City of London (to whom we desire it should be published) may know, how far we are from the Desire of Revenge, or that the Peace, Happiness, and Security of the Kingdom should be raised upon any other Foundation than the Affections and Hearts of our Subjects, and their own Consents.

"We have not the least Doubt of your just Sense of these our Condescensions, or of your Zeal to advance and promote the same good End, by disposing all Men to meet us with the same Affection and Tendernefs, in restoring the fundamental Laws to that Reverence that is due to them, and upon the Preservation whereof all our Happiness depends. And you will have no Reason to doubt of enjoying your full Share in that Happiness, and of the improving it, by our particular Affection to you. It is very natural for all Men to do all the Good they can for their native Country, and to advance the Honour of it; and as we have that full Affection for the Kingdom in general, so we would not be thought to be without some extraordinary Kindness for our native City in particular; which we shall manifest on all Occasions, not only by renewing their Charter, and confirming all those Privileges which they have received from our Predecessors, but by adding and granting any new Favours, which may advance the Trade, Wealth and Honour of that our native City; for which we will be so solicitous, that we doubt not but that it will, in due Time, receive some Benefit and Advantage in all those Respects, even from our own Observation and Experience abroad. And we are most confident, we shall never be disappointed in our Expectation of all possible Service from your Affections: And so we bid you farewell.

Richmond Park to the Crown.

Upon the Receipt of this Letter, the Citizens were elevated with the greatest Raptures and Transports of Joy imaginable, for his Majesty's having graciously deemed them worthy of such an Honour, considering they had had so great a Hand in expelling his Father. On this joyful Occasion the Common Council being assembled, they presented the Lord Mordaunt, and Sir John Greenville, (the happy Messengers of this great and good News) with the Sum of three hundred Pounds; and at the same Time deputed fourteen of their principal Members to attend his Majesty in Holland, and to assure him of their Fidelity and most cheerful Submission, and that they placed all their Felicity and future Hope of Prosperity in the Assurance of his royal Grace and Protection; for the meriting of which their Lives and Fortunes should always be at his Majesty's Disposal.

Four Days after, the Common Council made an Order, that Richmond-Park, lately conferred upon the City by Cromwell, should be presented to his Majesty at his Return, and at the same Time to assure him, that they had kept it with no other View, than as Stewards for the Royal Interest.

The Day after, his Majesty was proclaimed King at the usual Places in this City, with the greatest Solemnity, in Presence of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder and Sheriffs, attended by the Train'd-Bands, amidst the incessant and joyful Acclamations of the Citizens. In the mean time the City Deputies being arrived at the Hague, they were introduced to, and most graciously received by his Majesty; to whom, in the Name of the City of London, they presented the Sum of ten thousand Pounds. Whereupon the King told them, that he ever had a particular Affection for the City of London, the Place of his Birth; and that he was exceedingly pleased to hear of their bearing so good a Part in his Restoration; which he graciously acknowledged by returning them Thanks, and conferring the Honour of Knighthood upon them all, to their great Satisfaction and Delight.

The King, to the inexpressible Joy and Satisfaction of his Subjects, landed on the Twenty-sixth of May at Dover; whence, on his Approach to London, he was on the Twenty-ninth following met at St. George's Fields in Southwark, by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City; the former of which delivering the City Sword to his Majesty, had the same returned, with the Honour of Knighthood. On this solemn Occasion, the City caused to be erected in the said Fields a very magnificent Tent, provided with a sumptuous Collation; which the King having participated of, he proceeded towards London, which was pompously adorned with the richest Silks and Tapestries, and the Streets lined with the City Corporations and Train'd-Bands; while the Conduits flowed with a plentiful Variety of delicious Wines, and the Windows, Balconies and Scaffolds, were crowded with such an infinite Number of Spectators, as if the whole collective Body of the People had been assembled to grace the Royal Entry. And, as this seems to have been the most stately and glorious Cavalcade hitherto seen in this Nation, I shall therefore insert an Account thereof, as described by a late Author:

"First marched a gallant Troop of Gentlemen in Cloth of Silver, brandishing their Swords, and led by Major-General Brown: Then followed another Troop of two hundred in Velvet Coats, with Footmen and Liveries attending them in Purple: Then another Troop, led by Alderman Robinson, in Buff Coats, with Cloth of Silver Sleeves, and very rich green Scarves; and after these a Troop of about two hundred, with blue Liveries laid with Silver, with six Trumpeters, and several Footmen, in Sea-green and silver: Then a Troop of two hundred and twenty, with thirty Footmen in grey and silver Liveries, and Four Trumpeters richly habited. Then another Troop of an hundred and five, with grey Liveries, and six Trumpets; and another of seventy, with five Trumpets: And then three Troops more, two of three hundred, and one of one hundred, all gloriously habited, and gallantly mounted. After these came two Trumpets with his Majesty's Arms; the Sheriffs Men in red Cloaks, richly laced with Silver, to the Number of fourscore, with Half-pikes in their Hands: Then followed

"six hundred of the several Companies of London on Horseback, in black Velvet Coats, with Gold Chains, each Company having Footmen in different Liveries, with Streamers, &c. After these came Kettle-Drums and Trumpets, with Streamers; and after them twelve Minstrels, at the Head of his Majesty's Life-Guard of Horse, commanded by the Lord Gerrard's Next the City Marshal, with eight Footmen in divers Colours, with the City Waits and Officers in Order: Then the two Sheriffs, and all the Aldermen of London in their Scarlet Gowns and rich Trappings, with Footmen in Liveries, red Coats laid with Silver and Cloth of Gold: The Heralds and Maces in rich Coats: Then the Lord-Mayor, carrying the Sword, bare, with his Excellency (the General) and the Duke of Buckingham, bare also: And then, as the Lustre to all this splendid Triumph, rode the King himself between his Royal Brothers, the Dukes of York and Gloucester. Then followed a Troop of Horse with white Colours; and after them the General's Life-Guard, led by Sir Philip Howard, and another Troop of Gentry; and last of all, five Regiments of the Army Horse, with Back, Breast, and Head-Pieces, which diversified the Shew with Delight and Terror."

The Citizens of London, further to evince their dutiful Affection to his Majesty, prepared a magnificent Entertainment at Guildhall; whither the King, the Princes his Brothers, the great Officers of State, and both Houses of Parliament repaired on the Fifth of July, according to Invitation; when they were sumptuously and splendidly regaled with the most exquisite Rarities, fit for the Entertainment of such illustrious Guests.

Insurrection of the Fifth-Monarchy-Men.

Just after, a horrid and unparalleled Insurrection happened in this City, by a small Number of wild, barbarous, most desperate and bloody Enthusiasts (called Fifth-Monarchy-Men) that ever appeared in this, or perhaps any other Nation; and of whose approaching Frenzy such dangerous Symptoms appeared some Time before, that they occasioned the apprehending and imprisoning of Colonel Overton, Major Wild, Cornet Day, and others the principal of that pestiferous Sect. This Proceeding so highly irritated the rest of the Confederates, that assembling in their Meeting-House in Swan-Alley, Coleman-Street, on Sunday the sixth of January, in the Evening, about sixty in Number, well-armed, broke into open Rebellion, under the Conduct of their Preacher, Thomas Venner, a Cooper; and being possessed with a frantick Notion, That no Weapons formed against them should prosper, nor a Hair of their Heads be touched; for one should chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight; and their Design being to erect a Fifth Monarchy for the personal Reign of Jesus Christ upon Earth; they, in their Declaration, intitled, A Door of Hope opened, declared, "That they would never sheath their Swords, till Babylon, as they called Monarchy, became a Hissing and a Curse;

Each Hist. Engl.

"and there be left neither Remnant, Son, nor Nephew: That, when they had led Captivity captive in England, they would go into France, Spain, Germany, &c. and rather die than take the wicked Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance: That they would not make any Leagues with Monarchists, but would rise up against the Carnal, to possess the Gate, or the World, To bind their Kings in Chains, and their Nobles in Fetters of Iron."

This Declaration was no sooner read, than they marched to St. Paul's Church-yard, in Number between fifty and sixty, and, declaring for King Jesus, killed a Man that declared for King Charles; which Sir Richard Brown, the Lord-Mayor, receiving Intelligence of, he hastened with a Party of the Train'd-Bands to suppress them; which they fell upon with such an incredible Impulse of Infatuation, that they soon routed them, and, marching towards Bishopsgate, passed without Opposition, and, by way of Whitecross-Street, re-entered the City at Cripplegate: But, being informed of a Party of Horse marching against them, they retreated back as far as Beech-Lane; where being opposed, they killed a Headborough, and hastened to Cane-Wood in the Neighbourhood of Hampstead, where they reposed themselves for that Night; but the next Day they were dispossessed of the Wood by the above-mentioned Horse, assisted by a Party of Foot; and some of them being taken Prisoners, they were committed to the Gatehouse, Westminster. However, the Day after they rallied again, and returned to London; where dividing themselves into two Parties, one marched towards Leadenhall; but, being pursued by the Train'd-Bands, a smart Skirmish ensued in Little Eastcheap, where, after an obstinate Resistance, they were dispersed: And Venner, at the Head of the other Party, marched to Haberdashers-Hall in Maiden-Lane, with a Design to surprize the Lord-Mayor, but, missing of him, passed into Wood-Street, where a desperate Battle ensued; when, with a brutish Fury, they not only repelled the Train'd-Bands, but likewise the Horse-Guards that came to their Assistance, and continued fighting till Venner was dangerously wounded and taken, and two others of their Preachers and fiercest Combatants killed. Whereupon the rest retired towards Cripplegate, the Rear firing in good Order upon the Troops in pursuit of them; and the more effectually to prevent the Advance of their Enemies, Colonel Cox, the commanding Officer, posted ten Men in a neighbouring Alehouse, who defended the same with great Vigour, till the House was surrounded and entered on all Sides, and seven of them killed: Which occasioned my Authors to say, That, had their Numbers been equal to their Spirits, they would have subverted the City, Kingdom and World. The quelling this dangerous and desperate Rebellion cost the Lives of twenty of the King's Troops, besides those of the Train'd-Bands and others. And the Rebels having lost about twenty Men, and fourteen taken, eleven whereof were soon after convicted and executed; which entirely put an End to those dreadful Comotions.

The Twenty-third of April being the Time appointed for the Solemnization of his Majesty's Coronation, the Day before the King, according to ancient Custom, rode from the Tower of London, through the City, to Westminster. The Cavalcade was performed with such an extreme Magnificence, that the Riches, Glory and Splendor thereof greatly astonished all the Spectators; infomuch that the great Number of curious Strangers then present could not help declaring, That for Glory, Grandeur and Magnificence, it excelled every thing they had ever seen. Nay, even the French Quality were forced to acknowledge, that the late nuptial Solemnities at their King and Queen's publick Entry into Paris were far inferior to the Pomp of this. The Citizens on this Occasion not only embellished and adorned their Persons and Houses in the most rich and glorious Manner, but likewise erected four costly and magnificent Triumphal Arches.

The first of them was erected in Leadenball-Street, made after the Dorick Order, representing his Majesty's happy Arrival in England.

The second was a Naval Representation, and was erected in Cornhill, near the Royal-Exchange.

The third, consisting of the Corinthian and Composite Orders, being the Representation of Concord, was erected in Cheapside, near Wood-Street End.

The fourth, consisting of the Dorick and Ionick Orders, and the Representation of Plenty, this was erected in Fleet-Street, near White-Fryars.

For the more effectually paving and cleansing the Ways and Streets in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, 'twas by Parliament enacted, That all Hackney Coaches (the Number then being four hundred) in and about the said Cities, should annually pay towards the Charge thereof the Sum of five Pounds each; and every Load of Hay six Pence, and Straw two Pence. The said Act likewise provided for enlarging divers streight and narrow Passages, viz. That at Stocks-Market; from the Fleet-Conduit to St. Paul's Church; the Passage and Gateway out of Cheapside into St. Paul's Church-yard; the Passage at St. Dunstan's Church in Fleet-Street; the Passage from Cheapside into Bucklersbury; the Passage at Temple-Bar; and several others in the Out-parts: And also for paving the following Streets, viz. Original Incorporation
of the Irish Society.

This Year, on the tenth Day of April, his Majesty, by Letters Patent, confirmed to the Citizens of London their Property in the Irish Estates, of which they had been deprived by a Decree in the Star-Chamber, during his Father's Reign: And, as it is by this Tenure the City of London and several of its Companies at present enjoy those Estates, it cannot be accounted any Digression to give the following short historical Account of the original Incorporation of The Society of the Governor and Assistants, LONDON, of the new Plantation in ULSTER, within the Realm of IRELAND.

Regist.
of the Society.

The Province of Ulster in the Kingdom of Ireland in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth had been greatly depopulated by the Suppression of several Insurrections in that Part of the Kingdom: And the City of Derry and Town of Colrain were quite ruined and waste.

Therefore, in order to prevent the like Insurrection for the future, it was thought the most prudent Method that could be taken, to re-people that Part of the Country with Protestant Families.

King James I. soon after he came to the Crown of England, looked upon it as a Matter worthy his Attention, and signified his Pleasure by several of his Privy Council to some of the Aldermen and Commoners of the City of London, who procured a Common Council to be called; and a Committee was appointed to treat with the Lords of the Council concerning the Plantation: A Deputation was sent over to view the Place for the intended Plantation, at the City's Charge: And the Deputies, upon their Return, having made their Report, another Committee was appointed by the Common Council, to consider of all Circumstances and Matters fit to be remembered concerning the Plantation; and in December 1609 fifteen thousand Pounds were ordered to be expended on the Plantation, and five thousand Pounds to purchase or buy out private Interests: And in January following a Committee was appointed to meet and confer with such Commissioners, as should be appointed by the Privy Council, touching the Plantation: And a Taxation was made, and a present Levy ordered, of the fourth Part of the said twenty thousand Pounds, to be raised by way of Companies; which was payed in to the Chamber of London.

See P. 295.

Soon afterwards Articles of Agreement were entered into betwixt the Lords of the Privy Council and the Committee on behalf of the Mayor and Commonalty of the City; and his Majesty agreed, if necessary, to give his Consent to Acts of Parliament, both here and in Ireland for confirming the same.

These Articles being approved of by the Common Council, it was there enacted, That, for the better managing of the Plantation, there should be a Company constituted in London, to consist of a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Assistants, to direct what ought to be done on the Part of the City concerning the Plantation: And, in pursuance of such Agreement, the King on the twenty-ninth of March, in the eleventh Year of his Reign, by his Letters Patents incorporated the City and Town of Derry, and named it the City of Londonderry, and constituted the County of Londonderry, and incorporated the Committee whom the City had nominated, by the Name of The Society of the Governor and Assistants, LONDON, of the new Plantation in ULSTER, within the Realm of IRELAND; and directed that the same should consist of a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Assistants; whereof the Governor and five of the Assistants were to be Aldermen; the Recorder for the Time being to be an Assistant, and the Deputy-Governor and the rest of the Assistants to be Commoners.

The King thereby also granted to the Society, and their Successors, the City, Fort, and Town of of Derry, and the whole Island of Derry, the Town of Colrain, and all the Castles, Towns, Villages, and Lands in the County of Londonderry, particularly mentioned in the Charter. To hold the City of Londonderry, and four thousand Acres of Land adjoining upon the Derry Side, and the Town of Colrain, and three thousand Acres next adjoining, of the King, his Heirs and Successors, in Fee Burgage, and of his Castle of Dublin: And to hold the rest of the Castles, Manors, Lands and Tenements, of the King, his Heirs and Successors, as of the Castle of Dublin, by Fealty only, in free and common Socage, and not in Capite or by Knight's Service.

So soon as the City had obtained this Charter, the Society set about the rebuilding of the City of Londonderry, and Town of Colrain, and in improving and planting the other Parts of the County, and made a great Progress therein: And, in order to reimburse the twelve chief Companies, and such other inferior Companies that had contributed under them towards the Expence of the Plantation, the Society divided the whole County of Londonderry into thirteen Parts: The first Part consisted of the City of Londonderry and Town of Colrain, with some Lands adjoining to each of them, and the Fisheries; which were retained by the Society in their own Possession, to defray the Charge of the general Work of the Plantation, and to answer the other Purposes of the Charter; and the Surplus of the Rents, whatever it happened to be, was from Time to Time divided among the twelve Companies by the Society.

The Remainder of the County being divided into twelve Parts or Lots, as near in Value as could possibly be done, the twelve Companies drew Lots for the same; and each Company had the Part that fell to it by Lot: And the Society created, or erected each Lot into a Manor, (having Power so to do by their Charter;) and also obtained a Charter of Licence from the Crown to convey to each of the Companies the Lands fallen to it by Lot, to hold the same in Perpetuity; and did accordingly convey the same to them.

Upon the unhappy Disputes and Differences, that afterwards ensued between King Charles I. and the City of London, that unfortunate Prince was prevailed on to order his Attorney-General to prosecute the Society in the Star-Chamber, under Pretence that the Charter had been unduly and surreptitiously obtained; and the Charter was ordered to be cancelled by a Decree of that Court, and the Lands seized into the King's Hands.

The Society and Companies were afterwards reinstated in their Possessions, and in the Year one thousand six hundred fifty-seven Oliver Cromwell granted to the City a new Charter; and the Society made new Conveyances to the twelve Companies of their respective Lands and Estates.

King Charles II. upon his Restoration, taking Notice, that his Father had intended to have restored the Charter again to the City, and to the Society and the Companies their Estates and Lands in Ireland, but had been prevented by the Wars and Troubles breaking out shortly after in Ireland; did by his Letters Patents, bearing Date the tenth of April, one thousand six hundred sixty-two, grant them again to the City of London, and incorporated the Society for the Plantation in Ulster anew; and by a Charter of Licence empowered them to regrant the Manors and Lands to the respective Companies: And the Society did accordingly convey to each of the twelve Companies the Manor and Lands which formerly belonged to it; and the Companies have quietly enjoyed their Estates ever since.

The Governor and Deputy-Governor of the Society are by this, as well as the former Charters, chosen annually; and twelve of the Assistants go off every Year, and twelve new Members are chosen in their Stead by the Common Council, viz. two out of each of the twelve chief Companies of the City; who meet as often as necessary, by the Appointment of the Governor or Deputy-Governor, in the Irish Chamber at Guildhall, London, to transact their Affairs.

Nine (whereof the Governor or Deputy-Governor to be one) make a Court.

They have a Secretary and a Messenger of their own Appointment to attend them. All By-laws made by the Corporation of Londonderry must be confirmed by the Society, before they can be of Force; and the Society hath the Right of Presentation to the Churches of Londonderry and Colrain; and they appoint a General Agent in Ireland to correspond with them, who looks after their Concerns, and transacts all their Affairs in Ireland; also a Receiver to receive their Rents.

The present Governor, Robert Alfep, Esq; Alderman.

Deputy-Governor, James Walton, Esq;

Treasurer, Mr. William Woolley. The Treasurer is chosen annually, and gives Security to account with the Society for what Monies he receives.

General Agent and Receiver, William Richardson, Esq;

Secretary, Francis Sparrow, Gent.

Messenger, Joshua Redshaw, Gent.

The City of Londonderry choose the Sheriffs as well for the City of Londonderry, as for the County of Londonderry, and have the like Officers belonging to their Corporation, as the City of London.

The grievous Dearth still increasing, Wheat was sold at three Pounds fourteen Shillings the Quarter, and Malt at two Pounds two Shillings.

In the Year 1663, on the twenty-fourth of June, his Majesty, in return for the late Tokens of Loyalty discovered towards his Person and Government by the City of London, in their effectual Aid to restore him to the Crown and Dominion over these Realms, granted them a Confirmation of all their Charters, Privileges, Liberties, Rights and Customs, in the following Words, after reciting the particular Charters granted to them by his Progenitors and Predecessors, Kings and Queens of England; declaring,

"fourth Day of June, in the fifteenth Year
 "of our Reign".

A great Difference happening between England and Holland upon the Account of Trade, the King, at the Request of both Houses of Parliament, came to a Resolution of declaring War against the Dutch ; but Money, the Sinews of War, being wanting, to supply that Defect, he sent divers Lords of his Privy Council to move the City of London for a Loan of one hundred thousand Pounds : Upon this extraordinary Occasion, the Citizens, sensible of their great Sufferings in Trade, highly approved of his Majesty's Resolution, and cheerfully advanced the Sum required. But, this Sum not proving sufficient, they soon after, with the greatest Alacrity, raised the like Sum for the Use of the Publick. The City's ready Concurrence on this Occasion was so kindly taken by the Parliament, that, by a Deputation from both Houses, this Order was sent to and read in the Common Council assembled in Guildhall on that Account : "Die
 "Veneris, 25 Novem. 1644. Ordered by the Lords
 "Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in Par"liament assembled, That the Thanks of both "Houses of Parliament be given unto the City "of London for their Forwardness in assisting "his Majesty ; and in particular, by furnishing "him with several great Sums of Money towards "his Preparations for the Honour, Safety and
 "Trade of this Nation."

About the Beginning of May, one of the most terrible Plagues, that ever infected this, or perhaps any other Kingdom, broke out in this City ; by whose direful Ravages sixty-eight thousand five hundred and ninety-six Persons were swept away ; which, together with the Number of those that died of other Distempers, made the Bill of Mortality of this Year amount to ninety-seven thousand three hundred and six. This Contagion happening just forty Years after the horrid Pestilence Anno 1625, occasioned some to impute a Fatality to that Number ; as if, in this Sense, the Land was to have Rest only forty Years.

The Week wherein this hideous Distemper was at first discovered, it carried off nine Persons ; whereby the Citizens were so greatly alarmed, that an universal Dread diffused itself amongst People of all Ranks : But the Week after that Number, according to the Bill of Mortality, being reduced to three, the Citizens Fears were greatly alleviated : But the next Week the Number increasing to fourteen, and progressively to forty-three, the People were struck with a mighty Consternation, which begot Thoughts in many of leaving the City : But in the Month of June, the Number having gradually increased to four hundred and seventy per Week, it put the Nobility, Gentry and principal Citizens upon the Wing of Safety ; all being instantly in an amazing Hurry, and the City emptying itself into the Country, the Streets and Roads were excessively crowded with Travellers and Passengers : But in the Month of July, the Bill increasing to two thousand and ten, all Houses were shut up, the Streets deserted, and scarce any thing to be seen therein, but Grass growing, innumerable Fires for purifying the infected Air, Coffins, Pest-Carts, Red Crosses upon Doors, with the Inscription of Lord, have Mercy upon us! and poor Women in Tears, with dismal Aspects,

Under these dreadful and deplorable Circumstances, the Citizens, when in the greatest Want of Spiritual Guides, were forsaken by their Parochial Ministers; and the People, crowding into Eternity, bewailing the want of Spiritual Assistance, the Nonconformist Ministers, considering their great Obligations to God, and indispensable Duty in this dreadful Visitation to their Fellow-Creatures, were induced, tho' contrary to Law, to repair to the deserted Church-Pulpits; whither the People, without Distinction of Church and Dissenter, joyfully resorted: The Concourse on those Occasions was so exceeding great, that the Ministers were frequently obliged to clamber over the Pews to get at the Pulpits; and if ever Preaching had a better Effect than ordinary, it was at this Time; for the People as eagerly caught at every Word as a drowning Man at a Twig, and with the same Greediness as if their eternal Happiness had thereon depended.

Bill. Meet.

In the Month of September Death rode triumphant; for, having borrowed (if I may be allowed the Expression) Time's fatal Sythe, he mowed down the People like Grass, for the Burials then amounted to six thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight; but the Week after, the Bill falling to six thousand five hundred and forty-four, gave glimmering Hopes that the Distemper was past its Crisis: But the great Increase the Week following, to seven thousand one hundred and sixty-five, re-immersed the People into an Abyss of Horror and Despair; for now they were struck with the dreadful Apprehensions, that in a few Days the Living would not suffice to bury the Dead. However, they were happily mistaken; for after this the Contagion gradually decreased, 'till it pleased the Almighty to restore this desolate and miserable City to its pristine State of Health.

In Cause.

As to the natural Causes of this hideous Plague, Physicians greatly differ; some ascribing the Origin thereof to an inveterate and most inveterate Pox; while others, with more Reason, to infected Goods imported from Holland, where the Plague, in the preceding Year, committed great Ravages.

on the Seas.

During the dreadful Havock made by this mercilefs Pestilence, 'twas observed by Dr. Baynard, an ingenious and learned Physician, that there was such a general Calm and Serenity of Weather, as if both Wind and Rain had been expelled the Kingdom, and that for many Weeks together he could not discover the least Breath of Wind, not even so much as to move a Fan; and the Fires in the Streets, with great Difficulty, were made to burn, thro' the great Scarcity of Nitre in the Air; and by the extreme Rarefaction thereof the Birds did pant for Breath, especially those of the larger Sort, who were likewise observed to fly more heavily than usual.

Rad Means used to stop it.

Surely the Means made use of at this Time to put a Stop to the devouring Pestilence, were the worst that could be devised; for, by the shutting up of Houses wherein the Contagion happened, the Healthy were offered a Sacrifice to the unmerciful Devourer; whereas, had the distemper'd Person, or those in Health, been removed out of each House, as soon as infected, (according to the modern Practice) the former to a Lazaretto, and the latter to a Place for the Performance of Quarantine, it may reasonably be supposed, that one Tenth of the above-mentioned Number would not have died.

And, as Heat is demonstrably a great Nourisher of the verminous Effluvia emitted from pestilential Ulcers, 'twas highly unreasonable to make Fires in every Street, with a View to purify the Air, and destroy the Plague.

The Terror which this Mortality spread throughout the City, did not deter the Magistrates and Common Council from their Application to redress the Complaint of their Fellow-Citizens, of late greatly oppress'd or impos'd upon by Carmen and Woodmongers; who, after mature Deliberation, enacted in Common Council, on the first of June, 1665, "That the Rule, Oversight and Government of Carts, Carriages, Carters and Carmen, should be thence-forward lodged in the President and Governors of Christ's-Hospital, London. That the Number of Carts should not exceed four hundred and twenty. To pay seventeen Shillings and four Pence per Ann. each, and twenty Shillings upon every Admittance, or Alienation of a Carroon. That the Prices of Carriages should from Year to Year, in September, be ascertained by the Court of Aldermen, more than which no Carman should take, on the Penalty of ten Shillings. That all Coal-Sacks and Measures should be sealed at Guildhall." And then this Act proceeds,

"And for a constant Store and Provision of Seacoals to be had and made hereafter for Supply of this City, and especially for the Benefit and Relief of the Poor in Times of Dearth and Scarcity, which hath happened in this and many other Years heretofore, by reason of Wars and Troubles at Sea, or by the subtle Combination and Practice of the Retailers at Home for their private Gain and Profit, to the common Abuse and Detriment of the Citizens, and others his Majesty's Subjects;

"Be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That, besides the general Stock employed by this City for Provision of Coals for the Benefit of the Poor within the said City and Liberties, there shall be provided yearly hereafter at the best Hand, betwixt Lady-day and Michaelmas, by the several Companies of this City, the several Chaldrons of Seacoals hereafter mentioned: That is to say, Mercers, four hundred and eighty-eight; Grocers, six hundred and seventy-five; Drapers, five hundred and sixty-two; Fishmongers, four hundred and sixty-five; Goldsmiths, five hundred and twenty-five; Skinners, three hundred and fifteen; Merchant-Tailors, seven hundred and fifty; Haberdashers, five hundred and seventy-eight; Salters, three hundred and sixty; Ironmongers, two hundred and fifty-five; Vintners, three hundred and seventy-five; Clothworkers, four hundred

The Fire of
 London

London Restored Or SIR JOHN EVELYN'S Plan for Rebuilding that Ancient Metropolis after the Fire in 1666.

"pulling down Houses, and making great Intervals; but all in vain, the Fire seizing upon the Timber and Rubbish, and so continuing itself even through those Spaces, and raging in a bright Flame all Monday and Tuesday, notwithstanding his Majesty's own, and his Royal Highness's indefatigable and personal Pains to apply all possible Remedies to prevent it, calling upon and helping the People with their Guards, and a great Number of Nobility and Gentry unweariedly assisting therein; for which they were requited with a thousand Blessings from the poor distressed People.

"By the Favour of God, the Wind slackened a little on Tuesday Night, and the Flames meeting with Brick Buildings at the Temple, by little and little it was observed to lose its Force on that Side; so that on Wednesday Morning we began to hope well; and his Royal Highness, never despairing or slackening his personal Care, wrought so well that Day, assisted in some Parts by the Lords of the Council before and behind it, that a Stop was put to it at the Temple-Church, near Holborn-Bridge, Pye-Corner, Aldersgate, Cripplegate, near the End of Coleman-Street, at the End of Basinghall-Street, by the Postern, at the upper End of Bishopsgate-Street, and Leadenhall-Street, at the Standard in Cornhill, at the Church in Fenchurch-Street, near Clothworkers-Hall in Mincing-Lane, at the Middle of Mark-Lane, and at the Tower-Dock. [See the Plan of the Ruins annexed.]

"On Thursday, by the Blessing of God, it was wholly beat down and extinguished, but so as that Evening it unhappily burst out again at the Temple, by the falling of some Sparks (as is supposed) upon a Pile of Wooden Buildings. His Royal Highness, who watched there that whole Night in Person, by the great Labours and Diligence used, and especially by applying Powder to blow up the Houses about it, before Day most happily mastered it.

"Divers Strangers, Dutch and French, were, during the Fire, apprehended, upon Suspicion that they contributed mischievously to it; who were all imprisoned, and Informations prepared to make a severe Inquisition thereupon by my Lord Chief-Justice Keeling, assisted by some of the Lords of the Privy Council, and some principal Members of the City; notwithstanding which Suspicions, the Manner of the Burning all along in a Train, and so blown forwards in all its Way by strong Winds, makes us conclude the whole was the Effect of an unhappy Chance, or, to speak better, the heavy Hand of God upon us for our Sins, shewing us the Terror of his Judgments in thus raising the Fire; and immediately after his miraculous and never-enough to be acknowledged Mercy in putting a Stop to it, when we were in the last Despair, and that all Attempts for the quenching it, however industriously pursued, seemed insufficient.

"His Majesty then sat hourly in Council, and ever since hath continued making Rounds about the City in all Parts of it, where the Danger and Mischief was greatest, till this Morning, that he hath sent his Grace the Duke of Albemarle, whom he hath called to assist him

"on this great Occasion, to put his happy and successful Hand to the finishing this memorable Deliverance."

During the fatal Reign of this direful Calamity, Orders were given for pulling down divers Houses in the Tower of London, in order to preserve the great Magazine of Gunpowder in that Fortress; to the Preservation whereof the violent Easterly Wind contributed more than the Precaution.

As the Plague by its dreadful Ravages in the preceding Year had spoiled the Houses of this City of their Inhabitants; so by this horrid Conflagration the surviving Citizens were deprived of their Habitations, and many thousands of them compelled to retire to the Fields, destitute of almost every Thing, where for some time they were exposed to the Inclemencies of the Weather, 'till a sufficient Number of pitiful Huts could be built for their Accommodation; and for supplying them with Provisions, a Proclamation was published, and Orders issued to the neighbouring Justices of the Peace, to encourage the Bringing-in of all Sorts of Victuals. And in the mean time the King, for their immediate Relief, was graciously pleased to give a great Quantity of Naval Bread to be distributed amongst them.

Whether this dismal Catastrophe was occasioned by Accident or Design, is controverted amongst the People, according as they are swayed by Party or Prejudice; therefore I shall, with the utmost Impartiality, endeavour to set this intricate Affair in the best Light I can.

According to Kennet and Eachard, this conflagration at first was by most People looked upon as the just Vengeance of Heaven upon a wicked City and Nation, not sufficiently humbled by the preceding Pestilence. But, as great Calamities naturally produce various Conjectures and monstrous Imaginations, Men seldom considering, that the most stupendous Effects often proceed from the most minute Causes, or remote Contingencies, therefore People began to suspect Treachery; and considering, that divers of the Republican Party had some time before been executed for conspiring the King's Death and Subversion of the Government, 'twas thought that Party was the most likely to have been the Incendiaries; especially considering, that the Firing of the City was mentioned upon the Trials of the above Persons said to be executed so long before it opened. The Account whereof, as published in the London Gazette of the preceding Month of April, I shall subjoin for the Information of the Reader:

"At the Sessions in the Old-Bailey, John Rathbone, an old Army Colonel, William Saunders, Henry Tucker, Thomas Flint, Thomas Evans, John Myles, William Westcot and John Cole, formerly Officers or Soldiers in the late Rebellion, were indicted for conspiring the Death of his Majesty and the Overthrow of the Government; having laid their Plot and Contrivance for the Surprizal of the Tower, the killing his Grace the Lord General, Sir John Robinson, Lieutenant of his Majesty's Tower of London, and Sir Richard Brown, and then to have declared for an equal Division of Lands, &c. The better to effect this hellish Design, the City was to

The Tower was accordingly viewed, and its Surprise ordered by Boats over the Moat, and from thence to scale the Wall.

"One Alexander, who is not yet taken, had likewise distributed Sums of Money to these Conspirators; and, for carrying on of the Design more effectually, they were told of a Council of the Great Ones, that sat frequently in London, from whom issued all Orders; which Council received their Directions from another in Holland, which sat with the States; and that the third of September was pitched on for the Attempt, as being found by Lillie's Almanack, and a Scheme erected for that Purpose, to be a lucky Day, a Planet then ruling which prognosticated the Downfall of Monarchy. The Evidence against these Persons was very full and clear, and they accordingly found guilty of High Treason."

Reasons for suspecting the Dutch to be concerned with the Incendiaries.

And, in order to corroborate the above Relation in respect to the Dutch, (who were then at War with us) and bring them in as the insidious Incendiaries that destroyed this City, one Taylor, a Boy of ten Years of Age, and Son to a Dutchman residing in London, upon his Confession before the Lord Lovelace, declared, That himself, Father and Uncle were the Persons that set Fire to the House in Pudding-Lane, by throwing Fireballs in at a Window, and divers other Circumstances relating to the Execution of that horrid Design; yet, tho' this Confession was referred to the Lord Chief-Justice for a further Inquiry, never any Proceedings were had thereon; therefore, I think 'tis not to be doubted but his Lordship discovered him to be an Impostor.

Burn. Hist. own Time.

We are told by a late learned Prelate, That after the English had ravaged and burnt the Isle of Vly, on the Coast of Holland, a Proposal was made to De Wit, (Pensionary of Holland) by way of Revenge, to burn the City of London; but he, having generously rejected the Proposition, declared, That it was his Business to accommodate and not to inflame Matters. But, as soon as the News of the Conflagration reached Holland, he began to suspect, that a Design had been formed to draw him into it, with an Intent to throw the Odium upon the Dutch.

More Reasons for suspecting the French.

The chief Thing that occasions the Burning of this City to appear like a concerted Design (and that the French were the Incendiaries, who were then also at War with us) is the following Confession, as reported to the House of Commons by Sir Robert Brook, Chairman of the Committee appointed to inquire into the Firing of London:

Acc. Infor. Com. Parl.

Robert Hubert's Confession.

"Robert Hubert, of Roan in Normandy, who acknowledged that he was one of those that fired the House of Mr. Farryner, a Bakery, in Pudding-Lane, from whence the Fire had its Beginning, confessed, That he came out of France, with one Stephen Piedloe, about four Months before the Fire, and went into Sweden with him, where he also staid with him as his Companion four Months; and then they came together into England in a Swedish Ship called "the Skipper, where he staid on Board with the said Piedloe till that Saturday Night in which the Fire broke out; when Piedloe, taking him out of the Ship, carried him into Pudding-Lane; and he being earnest to know whether he would carry him, he would not satisfy him, till he had brought him to the Place; and then he told him, that he had brought three Balls, and gave him one of them to throw into the House. And he would have been further satisfied in the Design, as he said, before he would execute it; but Piedloe was so impatient, that he would not hear him; and then he did the Fact, which was, that he put a Fire-ball at the End of a long Pole, and, lighting it with a Piece of Match, put it in at a Window, and staid till he saw the House in a Flame. He confessed, that there were three-and-twenty Accomplices, whereof Piedloe was the Chief."

And, to corroborate this Confession, Mr. Graves, a French Merchant residing in London, acquainted the Committee, "That he had known Hubert ever since he was four Years old, and hath ever observed him to be a Person of a mischievous Inclination, and therefore fit for any villainous Enterprize; and, because of the Knowledge he had of him, he went to visit him in Prison, where when he saw him, he could not but commiserate the Condition whereunto he had brought himself. And, for his better Discovery of the Fact, he told him the said Hubert, That he did not believe he had done that of which he confessed himself guilty. To which Hubert replied, Yes, Sir, I am guilty of it, and have been brought to it by the Instigation of Monsieur Piedloe, but not out of any Malice to the English Nation, but from a Desire of Reward, which he promised me upon my Return into France."

And, as a farther Corroboration of Hubert's Guilt, the Report proceeds:

"It is observable, that this miserable Creature, who confessed himself to the Committee to be a Protestant, was a Papist, and died so. And as for the aforesaid Piedloe, the said Mr. Graves informed, that he had a full Knowledge of him, and knew him to be a very debauched (debauched) Person, and apt to any wicked Design. Moreover, for a clear Conviction of the Guilt of the aforesaid Hubert, Mr. Lowman, the Keeper of the White-Lion Prison, was appointed to set him upon a Horse, and go with him, and see if he could find out the Place where he threw the Fireball. Upon which Hubert, with more Readiness than those that were well acquainted with the Place, went to Pudding-Lane, unto the very Place where the House that was first fired stood, saying, Here stood the House. The Jaylor endeavoured to draw him from that Belief, and put him upon seeking for some other Place: But he positively persisted in what he had first said, and affirmed that to have been the said House.

"It being intimated to the Committee, that, notwithstanding the Confession of the said Hubert, it was confidently reported, That the Fire in the forementioned Farryner's House began by Accident; the Committee therefore "sent for him, the said Farryner, before them; who being examined, said, That it was impossible any Fire should happen in his House by Accident; for he had, after twelve of the Clock that Night, gone through every Room thereof, and found no Fire but in one Chimney, where the Room was paved with Bricks, which Fire he diligently raked up in Embers. He was then asked, Whether no Window or Door might let in Wind to disturb those Coals? He affirmed there was no Possibility for any Wind to disturb them; and that it was absolutely set on Fire of Purpose."

This Paragraph of the Report is chiefly founded upon the following Certificate, deliver'd to the Committee by the above-named John Lowman, Keeper of his Majesty's Goal for the County of Surrey:

Ibid.
John Lowman's Certificate.
"In Obedience to an Order directed to me from the honourable Committee of the House of Commons, then sitting in the Speaker's Chamber, of the second of October, 1666, I did carry Robert Hubert to St. Catherine's Tower, by Water, to let me know the Place where the Swedish Ship lay, that brought him and other Frenchmen from Stockholm; and he brought me to the Dock over-against Mr. Corfelli's Brewhouse, and did then verify to me and Mr. Corfelli, that the Ship lay there, until such Time as he, with Mr. Piedloe and others, did go and set Fire to a House. And this Hubert did then further say, That Mr. Piedloe did fix two Fire-balls to a long Pole, and put them into a Window; and that he the said Robert Hubert did fire one in the said Manner, and put it in at the same Window. But, with all the Inquiry and Diligence that I could use, I could neither find nor hear of any such Vessel. And from thence I carried the said Robert Hubert to Tower-Hill, and did then desire him to shew me the House that they did fire, and he said, that it was near the Bridge. So we went along Thames-Street towards the Bridge; but, before we came to the Bridge, the said Robert Hubert said, that the House was up there, (pointing with his Hand up Pudding-Lane;) so I bid him go to the Place, and he went along the Bricks and Rubbish, and made a Stand. Then did I ask one Robert Penny, a Wine-Porter, which was the Baker's House? And he told me, that was the House where the aforesaid Hubert stood. So I went to Robert Hubert, and stood by him, and turned my Back towards the Baker's House, and demanded of him, which House it was that he fired, (directing to other Houses, contrary to that House;) but he, turning himself about, said, This was the House (pointing to the Baker's) that was first fired. Then, by reason of his Lameness, I set him on a Horse, and carried him to several other Places, but no other Place he would acknowledge; but rode back again to the Baker's House, and said again, That was the House, (pointing at the Baker's House.) And this I do humbly certify to this honourable Committee."

By what has been said, it appears from the above-mentioned Relations, Allegations and Confessions, that the Burning of this City is charged both upon Protestants and Papists; and, seemingly to fix it upon the latter, a late learned Prelate has brought a Relation he had from Dr. Lloyd (since Bishop of Worcester) and the Countess of Clarendon; and, tho' the same was told him as a real Fact, he only calls it a Presumption. Therefore, the better to enable the Reader to judge in this Affair, I shall subjoin the said Relation.

Bishop Burnet writes in these Words: "The most extraordinary Passage, tho' it is but a Presumption, was told me by Dr. Lloyd and the Countess of Clarendon: The latter had a great Estate in the New River that is brought from Ware to London, which is brought together at Islington, where there is a great Room full of Pipes, that convey it through all the Streets of London. The constant Order of that Matter was, to set the Pipes a running on Saturday Night, that so the Cisterns might be all full by Sunday Morning, there being a more than ordinary Consumption of Water on that Day. There was one Grant, a Papist, under whose Name Sir William Petty published his Observations on the Bills of Mortality: He had some Time before applied himself to Lloyd, who had great Credit with the Countess of Clarendon; and said, he could raise that Estate considerably, if she would make him a Trustee for her. His Schemes were probable; and he was made one of the Board that governed that Matter: And by that he had a Right to come, as oft as he pleased, to view their Works at Islington. He went thither the Saturday before the Fire broke out; and, calling for the Key of the Place where the Heads of the Pipes were, he turned all the Cocks that were then open, and stop't the Water, and then went away, and carried the Keys with him. So, when the Fire broke out next Morning, they opened the Pipes in the Streets to find Water, but there was none. And some Hours were lost in sending to Islington, where the Door was to be broke open, and the Cocks turned. And it was long before the Water got to London. Grant indeed denied that he had turned the Cocks; but the Officer of the Works affirmed, that he had, according to Order, set them all a running, and that no Person had got the Keys from him besides Grant, who confessed he had carried away the Keys, but pretended he did it without Design."

In order to inform myself in respect to Bishop Burnet's Relation, regarding Dr. Lloyd, the Countess of Clarendon, and Mr. Grant, I applied to the Governor and Company of the New River, who generously ordered Mr. Jasper Bull, their Clerk, and Mr. Henry Mill, their Engineer, to let me have such Accounts belonging to the Company as were proper to be published. Whereupon I had Recourse to their Minute-Book, wherein I found, that a general Court of the said Company was held at Mr. Clifton's in Covent-Garden (a Tavern, I suppose, because the Company's Courts were long before and after kept at such Houses) on the twenty-fifth of September, Anno 1666; at which Court John Grant, Esq; was first admitted a Member of the said New River Company, (in the room of Alexander Broom, deceased) in Trust for one of the Shares belonging to Sir William Backhouse, Knight;

Burn. Hist. own Time.

An Account of this Fire by Bishop Burnet.

New Riv. Min. Book.

Confuted from the Books of the New River Company.

Knight, who dying in the Year 1669, Dame Flower Backhouse (I suppose, his Relict) became possessed of nine of his Shares, and, on the 12th of November in the same Year, she appointed the said Mr. Grant as one of her Trustees in the said Company: Whereby 'tis manifest, that the above-recited Relation, which the Bishop had of Dr. Lloyd and the Countess of Clarendon, has not the least Foundation: For by what has been said it is evident, that Mr. Grant was not admitted into the Government of the New River Company till twenty-three Days after the Breaking-out of the Fire of London, and then put in Trust by the above-named Sir William Backhouse; whose Relict, Daughter, Relation, or Namesake, the above-mentioned Dame Flower Backhouse, was some Time after married to Henry, Lord Cornbury, eldest Son to the Earl of Clarendon, and who, by Right of his said Lady, was first admitted a Member of the said Company on the tenth of November, in the Year 1670, and afterwards, as Earl of Clarendon, on the ninth of November, 1676; being the first of that Family that ever was concerned in the New River Company.

Having gone thro' the several Relations, Allegations, Confessions, and Charges, concerning the Fire of London; I shall now give the Opinions of those that are for and against the City's being fired by Hubert.

Reasons for and against Hubert's
Confession.

The former whereof say, that Hubert's Confession is of itself sufficient to prove him to be the Incendiary that fired this City; but the latter, by the following Reasons, are of Opinion, that he was not:

Hist. Europe, v. 4.
Each Hist. Engl.

Against the Confession.

1. That Robert Hubert, according to the Opinion of our Historian, was a Person greatly disordered in his Senses, occasioned by a dead Palsy; therefore he has not been positively charged by any of them as the Incendiary that fired this City: Wherefore they are of Opinion, that his Confession was the Effect of his Dis-temper.

2. Hubert, in his confused Confession, declares, that Stephen Piedloe and he sailed from France to Sweden about four Months before the Fire, where they resided four Months at Stockholm. Here's a Month lost at least; for 'tis well known, that with the fairest Wind it will at least require a Month's Time (including the Loss of Time at Elfsinore in Denmark, where all Ships are obliged to stop and pay Toll) to perform a Voyage from Roan in Normandy to Stockholm in Sweden, and back to London, without reckoning the Time they staid on board till the fatal Night.

Acc. Infor.
Com. Parl.

3. Hubert, in his Confession, only takes Notice of himself and Piedloe's coming over in the Ship; whereas, in his Discourse with Lowman, others of his Countrymen are said to have been in Company. And Piedloe, having brought him from on board the Ship on Saturday Night, to the Place where the Design was to be put in Execution, gave him a Fire-ball to be put into the House above-mentioned; but Hubert, unacquainted with the Secret, refused to obey his Order, till he informed him of the Design. However, thro' the Impatience of Piedloe, he complied; and, by fixing the said Fire-ball at the End of a long Pole, conveyed it into the House thro' a Window, and staid till the same was in Flames. And Hubert, in his Discourse with Lowman, said, that Piedloe (with himself and others) put two Fire-balls in at the same Window; tho' no Mention thereof is made in his Confession.

4. That this Part of Hubert's Confession is of a Piece with the former; for nothing can be more absurd than to imagine, that Piedloe would run the Risk of being discovered, by employing a Number of Persons in such a dangerous Enterprize, when he was present, and could have performed the same himself with much Ease, more Safety, and without Expence. Besides, as Piedloe could not reasonably expect that the Firing of one House would destroy the whole City, it behoved him, as the chief Person concerned, to secure the Performance of the Work, by not only engaging Hubert in the same, but likewise the other twenty-three Persons mentioned by him, to have fired so many Houses in different Parts of the City at the same Time: But, that ever any other House was fired the Night the Fire broke out, besides the Baker's in Pudding-Lane, has never yet been mentioned.

5. As to the Character given Hubert by Graves, that might proceed from Fear; lest, by speaking in his Favour before the Committee of the House of Commons (before whom he was summoned to attend, on an Information of his having been to speak with Hubert in Prison) he might be deemed as one of his Accomplices; therefore, probably, he thought it more consistent with his own Safety to give Hubert the above-recited Character.

6. And as for Hubert's shewing Lowman the Place where the House stood that was at first set on Fire, they imagine that was no difficult Matter for him, or any other Stranger, going from the Tower of London to the Bridge; for at this Time we see how curious People are in repairing for many Days successively to the Place where any considerable Fire has happened; therefore it may reasonably be supposed, that People then, in great Numbers, daily resorted to see the Place where this great and deplorable Conflagration had its Origin; which in some Measure does appear by Lowman's asking Robert Penny, a Wine-Porter, (then upon the Spot) which was the Baker's House? Besides, it may reasonably be presumed, that such a Multitude of People, as probably were in that Neighbourhood from Morning till Night, must have been seen at a considerable Distance, all being then a Plain; therefore Hubert, without any Difficulty, might as well have shewn Lowman the Place from Tower-Hill as from Thames-Street.

7. But, that Hubert could shew Lowman the Place of his own Knowledge, they think is ridiculous to imagine; for, had the House been standing, it is not only very improbable, but almost impossible, for him to have found it, considering, by his own Confession, he was brought thither from on board a Ship at St. Catherine's Dock in the dead Time of the Night; but, as the House, with all the rest far and near, were reduced to a Plain of Rubbish, they are of Opinion that Farryner, the late Inhabitant, would have been puzzled to have found the Site thereof immediately; therefore think it was impossible impossible for Hubert to have found it without the Help aforesaid; seeing it does not appear, that ever he was in London before this Time.

8. And as to the Accounts published at this Time, of the seizing of several Persons with Flax, Tow, Powder-horns, and Fire-balls in their Pockets, they think they are not to be depended on, seeing that, without naming any of the said Persons, we are told they made their Escape. And as the said Accounts mention six Persons to have been apprehended in the very Act of firing Houses; yet, as none of the same appear to have been punished for the said Crimes, they must, after their several Examinations, have been discharged by the respective Magistrates they were brought before: Which is in some Measure confirmed by a Right Reverend Historian, who acquaints us, "That many Stories, which were published with a good Assurance, came to nothing upon a strict Examination." For, of all the Persons that were taken up and examined concerning this dismal Catastrophe, Hubert (who surrendered himself) was the only Person that was condemned and executed, without any other Evidence but that of his own Confession.

9. And, in regard to what has been said, that the Fire (after the first Night) broke out in divers Places at once; they say, that might well have happened without Design, when the Impetuosity of the Flames and Wind waisted innumerable Flakes of Fire to a very great Distance; which, showering down upon the Houses, entered where they found a Passage, and quickly set all in a Flame; whereof many Instances on the like Occasions might be produced.

But the most material Passage of any is, that Laurence Peterson, the Master of the Ship that brought Hubert over, upon his Examination some Time after, declared, that the said Hubert did not land till two Days after the Fire. If this Relation may be depended upon, 'twill of itself be sufficient to shew, that the Fire was casual, and that that dreadful Event was occasioned by Accident, and not Design; for at that Time all Things seem to have conspired the Destruction of this City, as will appear by the following Observations:

1. This dreadful and deplorable Fire broke out in the dead Time of Saturday Night in the House of Mr. Farryner, a Baker, in Pudding-Lane, when the Eyes and Senses of all were locked up in Sleep. The House was a wooden Building, pitched on the Outside, as all the rest in the Lane were; the Lane too exceeding narrow, and, by the jutting over of the several Stories, the Houses on each Side almost met at Top. Add to these, that the House in which the Fire began being full of Brush and Faggot-Wood, the Fire soon got to a Head, and furiously seized on the neighbouring Houses on all Sides, running four Ways at once, it fell upon the Star Inn, then full of Hay and Straw; whence communicating its Fury to New Fish-Street, it set all on a Flame: And another Branch raging down the Lane, laid hold on Thames-Street, the Repository of all Combustibles, as Butter, Cheese, Wine, Brandy, Sugar, Oyl, Hemp, Flax, Rosin, Pitch, Tar, Brimstone, Cordage, Hops, Wood, and Coals; where, re-dividing itself, it ran both Eastward and Westward with a Fury inexpressible, and, attacking the adjacent Lanes, committed the most deplorable Ravages; and its two main Branches meeting at London-Bridge, soon reduced all the Buildings thereon, together with the Water Machines under the same; whereby they were at once deprived of the Assistance of that Element, (the New River Water not being then laid into those Parts) whereupon it immediately got to such a Head, as to triumph over all Means whatsoever.

2. As it happened on Saturday Night, and in the Dead of the Vacation, a vast Number of the principal Citizens were in the Country, either about Business or Pleasure, and their Houses left to the Care of Servants, took off a great Number of Hands, that otherwise would have been of great Service in helping to extinguish the Flames.

3. The Spring and Summer preceding had been the dryest in the Memory of Man; whereby the Houses, which were all built of Wood, and without Party-Walls, were prepared, as it were, for Fuel for this terrible Conflagration.

4. At the breaking out of the Fire, a violent East Wind blew; which continuing to rage for the Space of three Days, it drove the Flames with such an excessive Rapidity, that, considering the Nature of the Buildings, it was of itself sufficient, without the Help of Villainy, to reduce the City to a Chaos.

After this dreadful and destructive Fire had for three Days raged with the utmost Violence, and seemingly in Contempt of all Means used to extinguish the same, it was at last, by the ceasing of the Wind, conquered; after it had laid waste and consumed the Buildings on four hundred and thirty-six Acres of Ground, four hundred Streets, Lanes, &c. thirteen thousand two hundred Houses, the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, eighty-six Parish Churches, six Chapels, the magnificent Buildings of Guildhall, the Royal-Exchange, Custom-House, and Blackwell-Hall, divers Hospitals and Libraries, fifty-two of the Companies Halls, and a vast Number of other stately Edifices, together with three of the City Gates, four Stone Bridges, and the Prisons of Newgate, the Fleet, the Poultry and Wood-Street Compters; the Loss of which, together with that of Merchandize and Household Furniture, by the best Calculation, amounted to ten Millions seven hundred and thirty thousand and five hundred Pounds. Yet, notwithstanding this terrible Devastation, only six Persons lost their Lives thereby. See the Plan of the Ruins facing Page 433.

Whatever the unfortunate Citizens of London suffered by the late dreadful Fire, 'tis manifest, that a greater Blessing could not have happened for the Good of Posterity; for, instead of very narrow, crooked, and incommodious Streets, (fitter for a Wheel-barrow than any nobler Carriage) dark, irregular, and ill-cointrived wooden Houses, with their several Stories jutting out, or hanging over each other, whereby the Circulation of the Air was obstructed, noisome Vapours harboured, and verminous, pestilential Atoms nourished, as is manifest, by this City's not being clear of the Bill Mort. Plague for twenty-five Years before, and only free from Contagion for three Years in above seventy. But, since the Enlargement of the Streets, and modern Way of Building, by the Re-edifying of London, there is such a free Circulation of sweet Air thro' the Streets, that offensive Vapours are expelled, and the City freed from all pestilential Symptoms for these eighty-nine Years; during which Time it may be justly averred, that there's no Place in the Kingdom, where the Inhabitants enjoy a better State of Health, or live to a greater Age, than the Citizens of London.

This great and opulent City, thus reduced, from the greatest Height of terrestrial Pomp and Splendor, to a lamentable Heap of Rubbish, greatly affected the whole Nation; and the King, having a great Regard to its Re-construction, prohibited the Rebuilding of Houses, till publick Care might be had for its Re-edification with greater Magnificence and Uniformity than formerly, and with such Materials, and in such a Manner, as might most effectually prevent a general Destruction thereof by Fire for the future:

“Charles R.

His Majesty's Declaration to his City of London upon occasion of the late Fire.

“As no particular Man hath sustained any Loss or Damage by the late terrible and deplorable Fire in his Fortune or Estate, in any Degree to be compared with the Loss and Damage we ourself have sustained, so it is not possible for any Man to take the same more to Heart, and to be more concerned and solicitous for the rebuilding this famous City with as much Expedition as is possible; and since it hath pleased God to lay this heavy Judgment upon us all in this Time, as an Evidence of his Displeasure for our Sins, we do comfort ourself with some Hope, that he will, upon our due Humiliation before him, as a new Instance of his signal Blessing upon us, give us Life, not only to see the Foundations laid, but the Buildings finished, of a much more beautiful City than is at this Time consumed; and that as the Seat and Situation of it is the most convenient and noble for the Advancement of Trade of any City in Europe, so that such Care will be taken for the Re-edification of it, both for Use and Beauty, and such Provision made for the future against the ordinary and casual Accidents by Fire, as may, as far as human Wisdom can provide, upon the sad Experience we have had, reasonably secure the same, and make it rather appear to the World, as purged with the Fire (in how lamentable a Manner soever) to a wonderful Beauty and Comeliness, than consumed by it: And we receive no small Encouragement in this our Hope, by the Alacrity and Cheerfulness we observe in those who have undergone the greatest Loss, and seem the most undone; who, with undaunted Courage, appear to desire the same we do, and resolve to contribute their utmost Assistance thereunto. We have therefore thought fit, most necessary, and agreeable to the great and constant Affection we have always had, and always shall retain for this our native City, to use this Expedition in publishing our Thoughts, Resolutions, and “Intentions upon this great Affair; that though such present Rules and Directions cannot be formed, as must, upon more mature Deliberation, be established for the Re-edification; yet such Inconveniences may and shall be prevented, which may arise by the hasty and unskilful Buildings many may purpose to erect for their present Conveniences, before they can know how the same will suit and consist with the Design that shall be made: And if this Candor of ours, which resolves, with the Blessing of God, so to provide for the just Right and Interest of all, that no Man shall have Cause to complain of Wrong and Oppression; and if this our reasonable Animadversion shall not meet with that prudent Submission we expect, but that some obstinate and refractory Persons will presume to erect such Buildings as they shall think fit, upon Pretence that the Ground is their own, and that they may do with it what they please, such their Obstinacy shall not prevail to the publick Prejudice: But we do hereby require the Lord-Mayor, and the other Magistrates of the City of London, in their several Limits, to be very watchful in such Cases, and speedy to pull down whatsoever such Men shall presume to set up, so much to the Disturbance of publick Order and Decency; and that they forthwith give Notice to us or our Privy Council of such their Proceedings, and return the Names of such refractory Persons who presume to contemn this our Injunction, and we shall give Order for their exemplary Punishment, without the Violation of the publick Justice.

“And because no Man shall complain or apprehend, that by this Caution or Restraint of ours they shall or may for a long Time be kept from providing Habitations for themselves, and for the carrying on their Trades, though we make no question, but in a short Time, with the Assistance and Advice of the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, (who have besought us for some Time to put this Restraint) to finish the whole Design, even before any Men can make Provision of Materials for any valuable Edifice; we do declare, that if any considerable Number of Men (for it is impossible to comply with the Humour of every particular Man) shall address themselves to the Court of Aldermen, and manifest to them in what Places their Ground lies, upon which they design to build, they shall in a short Time receive such Order and Direction for their proceeding therein, that they shall have no Cause to complain; and so we proceed to the setting down such general, to which all particular Designs must conform themselves.

“In the first Place, the woeful Experience in this late heavy Visitation hath sufficiently convinced all Men of the pernicious Consequences which have attended the building with Timber, and even with Stone itself, and the notable Benefit of Brick, which in so many Places hath resisted and even extinguished the Fire: And we do therefore hereby declare our express Will and Pleasure, That no Man whatsoever shall presume to erect any House or Building, great or small, but of Brick or Stone; and if any Man shall do the contrary, the next Magistrate

" shall forthwith cause it to be pulled down,
 " and such further Course shall be taken for his " Punishment as he deserves. And we suppose " that the notable Benefit many Men have re" ceived from those Cellars which have been " well and strongly arched, will persuade most " Men, who build good Houses, to practise that " good Husbandry, by arching all convenient " Places.

" We do declare, that Fleet-Street, Cheap-side,
 " Cornhill, and all other eminent and notorious " Streets, shall be of such a Breadth, as may, with " God's Blessing, prevent the Mischief that one " Side may suffer if the other be on fire; which " was the Case lately in Cheap-side; the precise " Breadth of which several Streets shall be, upon
 " Advice with the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen,
 " shortly published, with many other particular
 " Orders and Rules, which cannot yet be ad" justed: In the mean Time we resolve, tho'
 " all Streets cannot be of equal Breadth, yet
 " none shall be so narrow as to make the " Passage uneasy or inconvenient, especially " towards the Water-Side; nor will we suffer
 " any Lanes or Alleys to be erected, but " where, upon mature Deliberation, the same " shall be found absolutely necessary; except " such Places shall be set aside, which shall be " designed only for Buildings of that Kind, and " from whence no publick Mischief may proba" bly arise.

" The irreparable Damage and Loss by the " late Fire being, next to the Hand of God in " the terrible Wind, to be imputed to the Place
 " in which it first broke out, amongst small Tim" ber Houses standing so close together, that as no " Remedy could be applied from the River for
 " the quenching thereof, to the Contiguity
 " of the Buildings hindering and keeping all " possible Relief from the Land-Side, we do re" solve and declare, that there shall be a fair Key
 " or Wharf on all the River-Side; that no House
 " shall be erected within so many Feet of the " River, as shall be within few Days declared in
 " the Rules formerly mentioned; nor shall there
 " be in those Buildings which shall be erected
 " next the River, which we desire may be fair " Structures, for the Ornament of the City, any " Houses to be inhabited by Brewers, or Dyers,
 " or Sugar-Bakers; which Trades, by their con" tinual Smoaks, contribute very much to the " Unhealthiness of the adjacent Places; but we " require the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of Lon" don, upon a full Consideration, and weighing
 " all Conveniences and Inconveniences that can " be foreseen, to propose such a Place as may be " fit for all those Trades which are carried on by " Smoke to inhabit together, or at least several " Places for the several Quarters of the Town for " those Occupations, and in which they shall " find their Account in Convenience, and Profit,
 " as well as other Places shall receive the Benefit
 " in the Distance of the Neighbourhood; it being
 " our Purpose, that they who exercise those ne" cessary Professions, shall be in all Respects as " well provided for and encouraged as ever they " have been, and undergo as little Prejudice as " may be by being less inconvenient to their " Neighbours.

" These Grounds and Foundations being laid,
 " from the Substance whereof we shall not depart,
 " and which, being published, are sufficient Ad" vertisements to prevent any Man's running into,
 " or bringing an Inconvenience upon himself, by
 " a precipitate Engagement in any Act which " may cross these Foundations: We have, in " order to the reducing this great and glorious
 " Design into Practice, directed, and we do " hereby direct, that the Lord-Mayor and Court
 " of Aldermen do, with all possible Expedition, " cause an exact Survey to be made and taken of " the whole Ruins occasioned by the late lamen" table Fire, to the End that it may appear to " whom all the Houses and Ground did in Truth
 " belong, what Term the several Occupiers were " possessed of, and at what Rents, and to whom,
 " either Corporations, Companies, or single Per" sons, the Reversion and Inheritance appertain-
 " ed; that so Provision may be made, that tho'
 " every Man must not be suffered to erect what " Buildings and where he pleases, he shall not in " any Degree be debarred from receiving the rea" sonable Benefit of what ought to accrue to him
 " from such Houses or Lands; there being no" thing less in our Thoughts, than that any par" ticular Person's Right and Interest should be " sacrificed to the publick Benefit or Convenience,
 " without such Recompence as in Justice he ought " to receive for the same: And when all Things
 " of this Kind shall be prepared and adjusted, " by such Commissioners, and otherwise, which " shall be found expedient, we make no doubt " but such an Act of Parliament will pass, as shall " secure all Men in what they shall and ought to " possess.

" By the Time that this Survey shall be taken,
 " we shall cause a Plot or Model to be made " for the whole Building through those ru" ined Places; which being well examined by " all those Persons who have most Concern-
 " ment as well as Experience, we make no " Question but all Men will be well pleased with " it, and very willingly conform to those Orders
 " and Rules which shall be agreed for the pursu" ing thereof.

" In the mean Time, we do heartily recom" mend it to the Charity and Magnanimity of all " well-disposed Persons, and we do heartily pray " unto Almighty God, that he will infuse it into " the Hearts of Men, speedily to endeavour by " Degrees to re-edify some of those many " Churches, which, in this lamentable Fire,
 " have been burned down and defaced; that so
 " Men may have those publick Places of God's " Worship to resort to, to humble themselves
 " together before him upon this his heavy Dis" pleasure, and join in their Devotion for his " future Mercy and Blessing upon us; and, as " soon as we shall be informed of any Readiness " to begin such a good Work, we shall not " only give our Assistance and Direction for the " Model of it, and freeing it from Buildings at " too near a Distance, but shall encourage it by " our own Bounty, and all other Ways we shall " be desired.

" Lastly, that we may encourage Men by " our own Example, we will use all the Expedi" tion we can to rebuild our Custom-House in
 " the

"the Place where it formerly stood, and enlarge it with the most Conveniences for the Merchants that can be devised; and, upon all the other Lands which belong unto us, we shall depart with any Thing of our own Right and Benefit, for the Advancement of the publick Service and Beauty of the City; and shall further remit, to all those who shall erect any Buildings according to this Declaration, all Duties arising to us upon the Hearth-Money for the Space of seven Years.

"Given at our Court at Whitehall the thirtieth Day of September, one thousand six hundred and sixty-six, in the eighteenth Year of our Reign."

The Parliament's Proceedings thereupon.

To which End also the Parliament assembled on the eighteenth of September, and passed an Act for erecting a Court of Judicature, for settling all Differences between Landholders and Tenants, respecting Houses burnt down and demolished by the late Fire; and, as Judges of the said Court, appointed the Justices of the Courts of King's-Bench, Common-Pleas, and Barons of the Exchequer: Who were,

Stat. Large. 19 Car. II.

"1. To hear and determine all Differences and Demands, that have or might arise between Landlords, Proprietors, Tenants, Lessees, or Under-Tenants, concerning the Repairing, Building, or Rebuilding of Houses, Yards, Grounds, Wharfs, &c. in those Parts of the City and Suburbs lately consumed; or concerning the Payment, Defalcation, Apportioning, or Abatement of any Rent or Rents; or respecting any Covenant, Condition, or Penalty relating thereunto; or concerning the Limiting of any Time for such Repairs, Building, Rebuilding, or any Rate or Contribution to be borne, or paid thereunto by any Person or Persons concerned in the Premises, and all Incidents thereunto belonging.

"2. That the said Judges, or any three of them, should, from Time to Time, at such Place as they should think fit, with or without Adjournment, summarily, and without the Formalities or Proceedings in Courts of Law or Equity, proceed upon the Inquisition of Jurors, Testimony of Witnesses, Examination of Parties, or otherwise according to Discretion, to the hearing and determining of all Demands relating to the Premises.

"3. That the definitive Order of the said Judges be final, and from which no Appeal to be, or any Writ, or Certiorari lie for the Removal or Reversal of the same.

"4. That the said Judges shall have Power and Authority to order the surrendering, increasing, abridging, ceasing, determining, or charging of any Estates in the Premises; and to order new or longer Leases of any of the Premises, not exceeding the Term of forty Years, for the Use of the late Tenants or Occupiers of the same, their Executors, &c. at such Rents and Fines, or without Rent or Fine, unless in such Cases where the Laws of the Land do forbid the diminishing of antient and accustomed Rents: And that all such Orders be conclusive to all Persons therein concerned, respectively, notwithstanding of any

"Disability by Coverture, Infancy, Non-sanity of Memory, Estate Tail, or in Right of the Church, or otherwise; and that all Infants, Females-Covert, Idiots, Non-sanity of Memory, or Persons beyond the Seas, Tenants in Tail, Bishops, Deans and Chapters, and all other Persons, Bodies natural and politick, their Heirs and Successors whatsoever, and their respective Interests be concluded by such Order or Orders respectively; any Law, Statute, or Custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

"5. That the said Judges, upon the Complaint of any of the Persons concerned, shall issue out their Warrants to summon the Persons therein mentioned; and, upon Appearance, or Default of Appearance, upon Oath made of due Notice given, the said Judges may proceed to give final Orders therein.

"6. That the said Judges be taken for a Court of Record, and that all their Judgments and Determinations, by Virtue of this Act, be recorded in a Parchment Book or Books, and all such Judgments and Declarations be signed by three or more of the said Judges; and that such Book or Books of Record be deposited in the Custody of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, to be kept among the City Records, for the Inspection of all concerned.

"7. That none of the said Judges take any Fee or Reward, directly or indirectly, for any Thing done by them by Virtue of this Act: But, as a Reward to the several Officers therein employed, the said Judges were to make such a reasonable Table of Fees, as might effect the Intent of the present Act of Parliament, which was to continue in Force till the last Day of December, Anno 1668.

"8. And if any Order or Decree be made by a Number less than seven of the aforesaid Judges, the Person aggrieved may, within the Space of seven Days, bring Exceptions against the same, to be presented to the Chief Justices and Chief Baron, who were immediately to communicate the same to the rest of their Brethren, who were to hear the Parties, and examine and consider the Exceptions; and, if seven or more of the said Judges should acknowledge the Complaint to be just, then they were to review the aforesaid Order, and thereupon reverse, confirm, enlarge, diminish, or alter, as they should judge convenient."

The above-mentioned Judges behaved themselves with such an admirable Impartiality and strict Justice in their several Decisions, that they gained the sincere Love and hearty Applause of the Citizens, both Landlords and Tenants; wherefore the City, to commit so much Worth and Merit to Posterity, caused the Portraits of these truly great and worthy Men to be depicted, and hung up in Guildhall, as Monuments to future Ages; the Number whereof, by Death and Promotions, (during the Time of their Commission) amounted to twenty-two, as appears by the present Number of Pictures. And these Decisions were followed by an Act of Parliament for rebuilding the City; wherein the following Rules and Directions were laid down, for the Regulation of all Persons concerned in re-edifying the same:

Behaviour of the Judges.

Their Pictures in Guildhall.

Rules and Directions for re-edifying the City.

" 1. That there be only four Sorts of Buildings, of the Dimensions that appear in the an-nexed Table: The first, or smallest Sort, to be erected in By-Lanes, to be of two Stories high, besides Cellars and Garrets: The second Sort, to be built in noted Streets and Lanes, to be of three Stories, exclusive of Cellars and Garrets: The third Sort, to be erected in the high and principal Streets, to be of four Stories, with Balconies before the same, besides Cellars and Garrets: And the Height of the fourth or largest Sort, for Mansion-houses for the principal Citizens and Persons of Quality, (not fronting the Street) to be at the Discretion of the Builder, provided it does not exceed four Stories. And, for the better Information of Builders, &c. the Lord-Mayor, &c. by an Act of Common Council were to ascertain such, as, for the future, should be deemed By-Lanes, Streets, and Lanes of Note, and high and principal Streets, in order to their being marked or staked out for Building; whereby their several Lengths and Breadths might be known.

" 2. That all new Buildings be built with Stone or Brick, with Party-Walls, not only for Beauty and Duration, but also as a Fence against Fire. And that all the said Houses be rebuilt within the Space of three Years, after the late Conflagration, upon Pain of having the several Sites then remaining unbuilt disposed of by the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, and the Money arising thereby to be paid to the Person or Persons interested in the same.

" 3. And, for the more effectual preventing the Citizens being imposed upon by Artificers, &c. it was enacted, That in Case of any Combination, or Exaction by Brick or Tile-makers, Lime-burners, Carpenters, Bricklayers, Masons, Plasterers, Joiners, Plumbers, or other Workmen or Labourers, the Justices of the King's Bench, upon Complaint thereof, were empowered to ascertain the Prices of their several Sorts of Goods, together with the Rates of Carriage either by Land or Water, and the Wages of Workmen and Labourers; which were to be entered by the Lord-Mayor upon a Table, for the Regulation of all such Persons. And, if any of the said Artificers, Workmen, or Labourers, should refuse to sell the said Materials at the Prices assessed, or any of the said Workmen or Labourers refuse to work for the Wages appointed them, or depart from his Work without Licence of the Person that employed him, except for Non-payment, or other just Cause; or if any Person should directly or indirectly give greater Prices or Wages than shall be assessed; every such Person, legally convicted of any of the said Crimes, should be committed to Prison for a Month, without Bail or Main-prize, unless he pay a Fine at the Discretion of the Justice, not exceeding ten Pounds, for every such Offence.

" 4. And, for the more expeditious rebuilding of London, it was enacted, that all Carpenters, Bricklayers, Masons, Plasterers, Joiners, and other Artificers, Workmen, and Labourers, Non-Freemen, to be employed in the said Work, should, for the Space of seven Years,

" or until the said Building should be fully accomplished, have the same Liberty of working as Freemen of the City; and that the said Artificers, which for the Space of seven Years shall have wrought in the rebuilding of the City, should, from and after the said Term of Years, have and enjoy the same Liberty of working in the City as Freemen during Life; provided that such Artificers, claiming this Privilege, be subject to all Offices and Duties respecting the Service and Government of the City, as Freemen of the respective Arts are liable to undergo, pay, and perform.

" 5. For the greater Convenience, Ornament, and Health of the City, it was further enacted,
That the Lord-Mayor and Common Council should be empowered, by and with the Approbation of his Majesty, to enlarge the following Streets, viz. Water-Lane in Fleet-Street, from Shoe-Lane to Ludgate, and from thence to St.
Paul's Church-yard; the Street from Cheapside into St. Paul's Church-yard; the Poultry; the Street on the North of Sticks-Market; Blow- bladder-Street, Newgate-Street, Ave-Mary-Lane, the upper End of St. Martin's-le-Grand; Old Fish-Street, Soper-Lane, (now Queen-Street) Cheap- side, New Fish-Street, Gracechurch-Street, and Thames-Street, from London-Bridge to the Tower- Dock, Mincing-Lane; and all other strait and narrow Passages within the City that are not fourteen Feet wide. And the City was likewise empowered to make a new Street (King- Street) from Cheapside to Guildhall, of such a Breadth as they should think proper, and another from Threadneedle-Street to Lotbory, now called Prince's-Street.

" 6. And, in order to balance the Advantage and Disadvantage resulting from the widening of the Streets aforesaid, 'twas likewise enacted,
That the Lord-Mayor and Common Council should be empowered, by a proper Jury, to rate and assess all Persons, according to the several Advantages and Improvements accruing to their respective Houses by such a Melioration; and that all the Money raised thereby be appropriated for the Payment of the Proprietors of such Grounds as were to be employed in the Improvement of the said Street.

" 7. And, as a perpetual Memorial of the late dreadful and deplorable Conflagration, it was, by the same Authority, enacted, that an anniversary Fast, or Day of Humiliation, should be annually kept on the second of September (when falling on a Sunday, to be kept the Day after) within the City and Liberties of London, to implore the Mercy of God, and deprecate his Wrath, accompanying such woeful Calamities.

" 8. And, in Commemoration of this lamentable Catastrophe, it was, by the same Authority, enacted, That a Column of Brass or Stone should be erected on or near the Place where the said dreadful Fire unhappily began, with such an Inscription thereon as the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen should think proper.

" 9. It was also, for the Beauty of the City and Convenience of the Citizens, enacted, That

"a spacious Wharf of forty Feet in Breadth
 "should be made to extend along the River
 "Thames from the Tower-Wharf to the Temple-
 "Stairs, clear of all Buildings, other than Cranes
 "and Sheds, for the Convenience of Landing,
 "and Preservation of Merchandize; and, for "the more effectual preventing Inundations, and "for the Easiness of Ascent, Thames-Street, and all "the Ground between it and the River Thames,
 "to be raised three Feet.

"10. And for the better enabling the Lord-"Mayor and Citizens of London to perform and "accomplish the above-mentioned Works, it was
 "by the same Authority enacted, That they "should have and receive, for the Space of ten "Years, one Shilling for every Chaldron or Ton
 "of Coals imported into the Port of London."

*As of Common Council,
April 29, 1667, for enlarging the Streets.*

Pursuant to the said Act of Parliament, a Common Council was called for the Purposes thereof; in which it was enacted, "That the Street called Fleet-Street, from the Place where the Greyhound Tavern stood to Ludgate, and from thence into St. Paul's Church-yard, shall be farther enlarged to be of the Breadth of forty-five Foot.

"That the Street leading from the East End of St. Paul's Church-yard into Cheapside, shall be further enlarged to be of the same Breadth of forty-five Foot.

"That the Street and Passage at the East End of Cheapside, leading into the Poultry, shall be enlarged to be on a level Line forty Foot broad.

"That the Street and Passage out of the Poultry, leading into the West End of Cornhill, shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of forty Foot.

"That Blowbladder-Street, leading into Cheapside, shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of forty Foot.

"That Ave-Mary-Lane shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of eighteen Foot.

"That the Street from Aldersgate, through St. Martin's-le-Grand, into Blowbladder-Street, shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of twenty-four Foot.

"That the Passage from St. Magnus Church to the Conduit in Gracechurch-Street shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of thirty-five Foot.

"That the North End of Gracechurch-Street from Leadenhall shall be enlarged to be of the same Breadth of thirty-five Foot.

"That Thames-Street, from the West Corner of St. Magnus Church aforesaid to Tower-Dock, shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of thirty Foot.

"That the Ground where the Middle-Row in the Shambles stood, and the Ground of the four late Houses in Newgate-Market, between Warwick-Lane End and the late Bell Inn there, and also the Ground where the Middle-Row in Old Fish-Street stood, shall be laid into the Streets.

"That there shall be a new Street made from the Guildhall into Cheapside, of the Breadth of thirty-six Foot.

"That Pannier-Alley, between Pater-noster-Row and Newgate-Market, shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of nine Foot, and paved with Free-Stone for a Foot-Passage.

"That St. Paul's Alley, between Pater-noster-Row and St. Paul's Church-yard, shall be also enlarged to be of the same Breadth of nine Foot, and paved with Free-Stone for a Foot-Passage.

"That Pissing-Alley and Queen's-Head-Alley in Pater-noster-Row shall be severally enlarged to be of the Breadth of nine Foot.

"That Grocers-Alley in the Poultry shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of eleven Foot.

"That Sealding-Alley there shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of nine Foot.

"That Old Swan-Alley in Thames-Street shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of fourteen Foot.

"That Love-Lane in Thames-Street shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of ten Foot.

"That the cross Lane between St. Dunstan's Hill and Harp-Lane shall be enlarged to be of the Breadth of fourteen Foot.

"And be it farther enacted, ordained, and declared, That all streight and narrow Passages, not fourteen Foot broad, which have been or shall be staked out by the Surveyor hereunto appointed by this Court to the Breadth of fourteen Foot, shall be enlarged accordingly, and in such Manner, as they now are, or shall be staked and set out.

"And this Court was farther consenting and desirous, that all other streight and narrow Passages, not before particularly mentioned, (which should be found convenient to be enlarged for the common Benefit and Accommodation, and should receive his Majesty's Order and Approbation) should and might be enlarged and made wider, and otherwise altered, before the twenty-ninth Day of May now next ensuing, as should be fitting for the Beauty, Ornament, and Conveniency thereof, and staked and set out accordingly."

And, agreeable to this Act of Common Council, we find an Order made thereon, and presented to his Majesty, who on the eighth of May following in Council allowed and approved thereof as follows:

At the Court at Whitehall, the eighth of May, 1667.

P R E S E N T

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

His Royal Highness the Duke of YORK, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Lord Privy-Seal, Duke of Albemarle, Marquis of Dorchester, Lord Chamberlain, Earl of Bridgewater, Earl of Berkshire, Earl of Bath, Earl of Carlisle, Earl of Craven, Earl of Lauderdale, Earl of Middleton, Lord Arlington, Lord Ashley, Mr. Comptroller, Mr. Secretary Morice, Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy, Sir William Coventry.

An Order made by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, of the 29th of April past, in the ensuing Words, (viz.)

*Order of Council,
May 8, 1667, concerning the Building of the City.*

"It is ordered, That the Surveyors take special Care, that the Breast-Summers of all Houses do range of an equal Height House with House, so far as shall be convenient, and there to make Breaks by their Directions.

"And that they do encourage and give Directions to all Builders for Ornament-sake, that the Ornaments and Projections of the Front-Buildings be of rubbed Bricks; and that all the naked Part of the Walls may be done of rough Bricks neatly wrought, or all rubbed, at the Discretion of the Builder; or that the Builders may otherwise enrich their Fronts as they please.

"That, if any Person or Persons shall desire in any Street or Lane of Note to build on each Side of the Street or Lane (opposite one to the other) six or more Houses of the third Rate, or that the upper Rooms or Garrets may be flat Roofs, encompassed with Battlements of Bricks covered with Stone, or Table-Ends, or Rails and Bannisters of Iron or Stone, or to vary their Roofs for the greater Ornament of Building; the Surveyors, or one of them, shall certify their Opinions therein to the Committee for Rebuilding, who shall have Liberty to give Leave for the same, if they see Cause.

"That

"That in all the Streets no Sign-Posts shall hang crofs, but the Signs shall be fixed against the Balconies, or some other convenient Part of the Side of the House.

"It is ordered, that a Postern shall be made on the North Side of Newgate, for Conveniency of Foot-Passengers; and that Holborn-Bridge shall be enlarged to run straight on a bevel Line from the Timber-House on the North Side thereof, known by the Sign of the Cock, to the Front of the Building at the Swan Inn on the said North Side of Holborn-Hill.

"Forasmuch as it is provided in the late Act for Rebuilding, that the Surveyors shall take Care for the equal setting out of all Party-Walls and Piers, and no Person be permitted to build till that be done; therefore, for Prevention of any Exaction in the taking of such Surveys, and of all Quarrels and Contentions that may arise between the Builders, it is ordered, That no Builder shall lay his Foundation, until the Surveyors, or one of them, (according to the Act) shall view it, and see the Party-Walls and Piers equally set out; and that all Persons observe the Surveyors Directions concerning the Superstructure to be erected over the said Foundation.

"And that, for the defraying that and all other incident Charges of Measuring, Staking out, Taking the Level, and Surveying the Streets and Ground, each Builder, before he lay his Foundation, or such Survey shall be taken, do repair to the Chamber of London, and there enter his Name, with the Place where his Building is to be set out, and to pay to the Chamberlain the Sum of six Shillings and eight Pence for every Foundation to be rebuilt: For which Mr. Chamberlain shall give Acquittances; upon Receipt of which Acquittances the Surveyors shall proceed to set out such Persons Foundations.

"And it is ordered, That all Persons, who have already laid any Foundations, shall forthwith pay into the Chamber of London six Shillings and eight Pence for every Foundation.

"And this Court is consenting and desirous, that all straight and narrow Passages, which shall be found convenient for common Benefit and Accommodation, and shall receive his Majesty's Order and Approbation, shall and may be enlarged and made wider, and otherwise altered, before the 20th Day of May now next ensuing, as shall be fitting for the Beauty, Ornament, and Conveniency thereof, and staked and set out accordingly.

"Several late Inhabitants of Fleet-Street intending to rebuild their Houses, which did formerly stand backward, of other Foundations near adjoining, and desiring Liberty to advance their Houses, that the whole Front may run on a straight Line; the Committee did agree to the same, if the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England and the other Lords shall approve thereof, and procure his Majesty's Approbation to the same; and the Committee do desire Liberty may be given for other Persons in other Places, where it shall be found convenient.

"And it is ordered, That the Committee for Rebuilding do present the Particulars aforesaid to the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England and the other Lords, and that the same (if they receive his Majesty's Approbation) shall be forthwith printed and published.

"Which being this Day represented to the Board by the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England, the same was allowed and approved of; and it was ordered, that the same be punctually observed in every Part thereof. And all Persons concerned are required and commanded to yield due Obedience and conform themselves thereunto."

Thames-Street, as already hinted, being by Act of Parliament appointed to be raised three Feet, the Commissioners and Surveyors for rebuilding the City, by virtue of the Power conferred upon them, and the better fitting the Streets of London, for the Convenience of Water, &c. published the following Orders, intituled,

Rules and Directions prescribed and made for the Pitching and Levelling the Streets and Lanes of the City of London, and Liberties, for the more easy and convenient Current and Conveyance away of the Waters thereof; concluded and agreed on by the Commissioners and Surveyors hereunto authorized and appointed; viz.

The Author of the Parentalia, after observing that the Manner of building in the City of London, in all former Ages, had been commonly with Timber; and that, altho' this often subjected the Town to great and destructive Fires, sometimes to the Ruin of the Whole, as particularly in the Year 1083, this Mode continued 'till this last general Conflagration; when the People began seriously to reflect on the Causes of their Calamities, both Plague and Fires, which had so lately visited them, which they ascribed to the Closeness of their Buildings, and the Combustible Materials with which they had been built, and to wish an Amendment of both, by widening the Streets, and building with Stone and Brick; he adds,

"Some intelligent Persons went farther, and thought it highly requisite, the City in the

Sir Christopher
Wren's Plan of a new City.

"Restoration should rise with that Beauty, by "the Straightness and Regularity of Buildings,
"and Convenience for Commerce, by the Well-
"disposing of Streets and publick Places, and "the Opening of Wharfs, &c. which the ex"cellent Situation, Wealth and Grandeur of "the Metropolis of England did justly deserve;
"in respect also of the Rank she bore with all "other trading Cities of the World, of which "tho' she was before one of the richest in Estate
"and Dowry, yet unquestionably the least "beautiful. Informe, ingens, cui lumen ademptum.

"In order therefore to a proper Reformation,
"Dr. Wren (pursuant to the royal Commands)
"immediately after the Fire, took an exact "Survey of the whole Area and Confines of the "Borough, having traced over, with great Trou"ble and Hazard, the great Plain of Ashes
"and Ruins; and designed a Plan or Model of "a new City, in which the Deformity and In"conveniencies of the old Town were reme"died, by the enlarging of the Streets and Lanes,
"and carrying them as near parallel to one ano"ther as might be; avoiding, if compatible
"with greater Conveniences, all acute Angles;
"by seating all the parochial Churches conspi"cuous and insular; by forming the most
"publick Places into large Piazzas, the Centers "of eight Ways; by uniting the Halls of the "twelve chief Companies, into one regular "Square annexed to Guild-Hall; by making a "commodious Key on the whole Bank of the "River, from Black-Friars to the Tower.

"Moreover, in contriving the general Plan,
"the following Particulars were chiefly consider"ed and proposed:

"The Streets to be of three Magnitudes;
"the three principal leading straight through "the City, and one or two Cross-Streets, to be "at least 90 Feet wide; others 60 Feet; and "Lanes about 30 Feet, excluding all narrow "dark Alleys without Thorough-fares, and "Courts.

"The Exchange to stand free in the Middle "of a Piazza, and be, as it were, the Nave or "Center of the Town, from whence the 60
"Feet Streets, as so many Rays, should pro"ceed to all principal Parts of the City: The "Building to be contrived after the Form of "the Roman Forum, with double Porticos.

"Many Streets also to radiate upon the "Bridge. The Streets of the first and second "Magnitude to be carried on as straight as "possible, and to center into four or five "Piazzas.

"The Key or open Wharf on the Bank of the "Thames to be spacious and convenient, with"out any Interruptions; with some large Docks
"for Barges deep loaden.

"The Canal to be cut up Bridewell, 120 Feet "wide with Saffles at Holborn-Bridge, and at the "Mouth, to cleanse it of all Filth; and Stores
"for Coal on each Side.

"The Churches to be designed according to "the best Forms for Capacity and Hearing,
"adorned with useful Porticos, and lofty orna"mental Towers and Steeples, in the greater "Parishes. All Church-yards, Gardens, and "unnecessary Vacuities; and all Trades that use

"great Fires, or yield noisome Smells, to be placed
"out of the Town.

"The Model or Plan formed on these Prin"ciples, delineated by Dr. Wren, was laid be"fore the King and the honourable House of "Commons; and is thus explained:

"From that Part of Fleet-Street which re"mained unburnt, about St. Dunstan's Church, a "straight Street of 90 Feet wide crosses the "Valley, passing by the South Side of Ludgate
"Prison, and thence in a direct Line ends grace"fully in a Piazza at Tower-Hill; but before "it descends into the Valley where now the "great Sewer (Fleet-Ditch) runs, about the once
"Middle of Fleet-Street, it opens into a round
"Piazza, the Center of eight Ways, where at "one Station are these Views:—First, straight "forward quite through the City. Second,
"obliquely towards the right Hand, to the "Beginning of the Key, that runs from Bride"well-Dock to the Tower. Third, obliquely on "the left to Smithfield. Fourth, straight on the "right, to the Thames. Fifth, straight on the "left, to Hatton-Street, and Clerkenwell. Sixth, "straight backwards, towards Temple-Bar. Se"venth, obliquely on the right to the Walks of "the Temple. Eighth, obliquely on the left, to "Currier's Alley.

"Passing forward we cross the Valley, once
"sullied with an offensive Sewer, now to be "beautified with a useful Canal, passable by as "many Bridges as Streets that cross it. — Leav"ing Ludgate Prison on the left Side of the "Street, (instead of which Gate, was designed "a triumphal Arch to the Founder of the "new City, King Charles the Second.) This great
"Street presently divides into another as large,
"which carries the Eye and Passage to the "South Front of the Exchange, (which we leave "as yet for a second Journey) and before these "two Streets, spreading at acute Angles, can be "clear of one another, they form a triangular "Piazza, the Basis of which is filled by the "Cathedral Church of St. Paul.

"But leaving St. Paul's on the left, we pro"ceed as our first Way led us towards the Tower,
"the Way being all along adorned with paro"chial Churches.

"We return again to Ludgate, and, leaving "St. Paul's on the right Hand, pass the other "great Branch to the Royal-Exchange, seated "in the Place where it was before, but free from "Buildings, in the Middle of a Piazza included
"between two great Streets; the one from Lud"gate leading to the South Front, and another "from Holborn, over the Canal to Newgate, and "thence straight to the North Front of the "Exchange.

"The Practicability of this whole Scheme,
"without Loss to any Man, or Infringement of "any Property, was at that Time demonstrated,
"and all material Objections fully weighed, and
"answered: The only, and, as it happened,
"insurmountable Difficulty remaining, was the "obstinate Averseness of great Part of the Citi"zens to alter their old Properties, and to re"cede from building their Houses again on the "old Ground and Foundations; as also, the "Distrust in many, and Unwillingness to give "up

"up their Properties, tho' for a Time only, into "the Hands of publick Trustees, or Commis"sioners, 'till they might be dispensed to them
 "again, with more Advantage to themselves,
 "than otherwise was possible to be effected; for "such a Method was proposed, that by an "equal Distribution of Ground into Buildings,
 "leaving out Church-yards, Gardens, &c.
 "(which were to be removed out of the Town)
 "there would have been sufficient Room both for "the Augmentation of the Streets; Disposition of "the Churches, Halls, and all publick Build"ings; and to have given every Proprietor full
 "Satisfaction: And, although few Proprietors
 "should happen to have been seated again di"rectly upon the very same Ground they had "possessed before the Fire, yet no Man would have "been thrust any considerable Distance from it,
 "but been placed at least as conveniently, and "sometimes more so, to their own Trades than "before.

"By these Means, the Opportunity, in a "great Degree, was lost, of making the new "City the most magnificent, as well as commo"dious for Health and Trade, of any upon "Earth; and the Surveyor being thus confined
 "and cramped in his Designs, it required no "small Labour and Skill to model the City in "the Manner it hath since appeared."

Sir John Evelyn produced another Plan, (of which there is a Copper-Plate annexed) which was calculated with the same View, to restore the City of London with greater Advantage both in Use and Ornament, and with Hopes that it would meet with less Opposition from the Citizens. But it also proved abortive.

Sir John intitles his Plan LONDON RESTORED, not to its pristine, but to a far greater Beauty, Com- modiousness and Magnificence: In which, after some Things premised concerning the Rubbish, &c. he writes, "It might haply be thought fit "to fill up, or at least give a partial Level to "some of the deepest Vallies, Holes and more "sudden Declivities within the City, for the "more Ease of Commerce, Carriages, Coaches "and People in the Streets; and not a little for "the more handsome Ranging of the Buildings:
 "For instance, That from about the Fleet to "Ludgate; which yet should be no more than "might only afford a graceful and just Ascent "from thence up towards St. Paul's; the only "Spot in the whole City, where I would plant "that antient and venerable Cathedral again: But "here is to be considered the Channel running "thence through Holborn, which would be so "enlarged, as not only to be preserved sweet
 "(by scowering it through Flood-Gates into the "Thames on all Occasions) but commodious
 "for the Intercourse of considerable Vessels "thwart this Portion of the Town; and which "therefore should be accordingly wharfed on "both Sides to the very Key of the River, and "made contiguous to the Streets by Bridges
 "arched to a due Level, as it might easily be "contrived, (and with Passage sufficient for lusty "Barges and Lighters under them) were the "Valley so elevated as 'tis projected: There is "only this Care incumbent; that all Foundati"ons upon this new Ground be searched to the "old and more solid Basis; from whence they "may also store themselves with Vaults and "Cellarage in abundance: The same might be "considered in some Sort from the Descent of "the Hill towards Thames-Street, so as to come "down upon the future Key by a far less Decli"vity, which would give those Houses that "should be built fronting to the River a more "becoming Aspect, and an easier Footing to the "Ranges above them, which would peep over

 "one another successively, with a far better
 "Grace, than those do at Genoa, where the Af-
 "cent is too precipitous.

"These Considerations and Employments
 "would greatly forward the prompt and na"tural Disposal of the more useless and cum"bersome Rubbish; unless it might be thought
 "more expedient (if there should not be suffici"ent for both) to design it rather towards the "Enlargement of a new and ample Key;
 "which I wish might run parallel from the "very Tower to the Temple at least, and, if it "were possible (without augmenting the Rapi"dity of the Stream) extend itself even as far as "the very Low-Water Mark; the Basin by this "Means kept perpetually full, without Slub or "Annoyance, and to the infinite Benefit and "Ease of Access, like that of Constantinople,
 "than which nothing could be imagined more "noble: What Fractions and Confusions our "ugly Steirs, Bridges and Causeways make, and "how dirty and nasty it is at every Ebb, we "are sufficiently sensible of; so as, next to the "hellish Smoke of the Town, there is nothing
 "doubtless which does more impair the Health
 "of its Inhabitants.

"In the Disposal of the Streets, due Consi"deration should be had what are competent
 "Breadths for Commerce and Intercourse,
 "Chearfulness and State; and therefore not to "pass through the City all in one Tenor, with"out Varieties, useful Breakings, and Enlarge"ments into Piazzas, at competent Distances,
 "which ought to be built exactly uniform,
 "strong, and with beautiful Fronts: Nor should "these be all of them square; but some of them
 "of oblong, circular and oval Figures, for "their better Grace and Capacity. I would allow "none of the principal Streets less than an "hundred Feet in Breadth, nor any of the "narrowest less than thirty, their Openings and "Heights proportionable: And of these I sup"pose there may be three, if not four, between "the Thames and London-Wall, reckoning that of "Cheapside for the chief; which, being likewise
 "the largest, may extend itself from Temple-Bar to "the very upper Part of Tower-Hill, or Crutched- Friars, and bear the Cathedral of St. Paul's
 "upon such an Eminence of Ground, as would "hardly be paralleled in any City of the World.
 "Amongst these Streets should the Parochial "Churches (which may well be reduced to a
 "Moiety; for 'tis prodigiously true, that there "are some Parishes no less than two hundred "times larger than others) be so placed and in"terspersed, as may have some Reference to the "Adornment of the Profile of the City upon all "its Avenues, and therefore at studied Inter"vals, and so built after the modern Archi"tecture

Sir John
 Evelyn's
 Plan for Rebuilding
 the City of London.

“ tecture without, and Contrivance within, as “ may best answer their pious Designation; for “ which Mr. Grant has judiciously perstringed “ our old ones, in that ingenious Piece of his “ upon the Bills of Mortality: Most of these “ I could wish might be founded in the Centers “ of spacious Areas, Piazzas, &c. so as to be “ conspicuous to several Streets, crossing upon “ them, as some of the Roman Obelisks are; and “ others at the Abutments and Extremities “ of them; which might also be observed for “ the raising of publick Fountains: It is about “ these Church-Piazzas that the Stationers “ should have their Shops, and the Ministers “ their Houses; as about that of St. Paul might “ again be re-established the Episcopal Palace;
 “ the Dean and Prebends Houses; the Gram“ mar-School; a publick Library; the Prero“ gative and First-Fruits Office, &c. all which “ would be built at ample Distance from the “ Cathedral, and with more stately Fronts, in ho“ nor of that august Pile.

“ As for the Church-yards, I would have “ them universally proscribed to the very utmost “ Walls of the City Northwards; upon which “ Inscriptions and Monuments might be aptly “ inserted; and the Dead interred, either in “ Vaults, or the open Ground; affording a use“ ful Diversion to the contemplative Passenger “ of his Mortality, and human Frailty: For,
 “ as to that superstitious Custom of bury“ ing in Churches, or having their Dormitories “ in the very Heart of Cities, where frequently “ Churches are built, I neither think it decent, “ nor sufferable.

“ In the Piazzas should be kept the several “ Markets; in other the Coaches may wait, &c.
 “ and in some should be publick Fountains “ placed; not, as formerly, immured with blind “ and melancholy Walls, but left free to Play, “ and shew their crystal Waters; as in most “ of the best Cities of Europe they do, save this “ of ours; where an Officer for a small Stipend “ might protect them from Injury and Pollution, “ till Custom has civilized us.

“ Between the Piazzas, Market-Places and “ Churches, might be the Halls for the antient “ Companies: These, if fronted at least with “ Stone, adorned with Statues, and other Or“ naments, would infinitely enrich the Streets, “ and render this City as famous for Architecture “ of the most refined Gusto, and as worthy to be “ considered of Travellers, as any City in “ Europe: But especially should the Guild, or “ Magistratical Hall of Assembly have some“ thing more Pompous and Great, after the “ Example of the State-House at Amsterdam; at “ least to some Proportion: And this likewise ought “ to be built in one of the most eminent Parts “ of the City. Near unto this might be design-“ a magnificent House for the Lord-Mayor,
 “ and others for the two Sheriffs of London;
 “ which, being erected at the publick Charge, “ ought to be the constant Residence of the “ Gentlemen who bear that Office pro tempore, “ and would therefore be contrived accordingly.

“ I should think the Royal-Exchange might “ front the Key betwixt Queenhithe and the “ Bridge: About the Stillyard I conceive were a “ proper Place, respecting the goodliest River “ in the World, where the Traffick and Busi“ ness is most vigorous: But for this I submit “ to better Judgments. Wherever it be built,

 “ it will be necessary to amplify the old Design, “ which was much too narrow for the Alle-“ m-“ blies. If it should be erected near the Thames, “ let there be spacious Piazzas about it, either “ for Dwellings, or publick Warehouses, which “ yet I should rather advise might be contrived “ in the Vaults under those Edifices; because “ a sad Experience has taught us how secure “ they are there, being prudently governed:
 “ And for such other Stores as will not be well “ preserved under Ground, there would by any “ Means some Expedient be found out, that they “ might not front the Thames on London Side; at “ least very sparingly; not only for that they may “ yet become obnoxious to the like Accidents “ (being built contiguous to the rest) but be“ cause, if there be not ample Separations and “ Distances, (which would infinitely disfigure “ and interrupt the Face of that Key) they will “ no where stand commodiously: How greatly “ therefore were it to be wished, that such a “ Depth of those wretched Houses on the oppo“ site Side of the Water were purchased and de“ molished, to make room for these Stores?
 “ The Wharfs before, and Yards behind, made “ large enough for the placing and working “ of Cranes; the laying of Deal, Timber, Clap“ board, Pipe-staves, Mill-stones, Faggots, “ Wood and Coals, and other gross Commodi“ ties; whilst the goodly Key over-against it “ might be built for the Owners, and Dwel“ lings of the principal Merchants: Or, if needs
 “ the Warehouses must be on this Side, yet “ that they were made rather to front Thames-“ Street, than the River; because of the dull “ and heavy Aspect of those kind of Erections.

“ That little Bay at Queenhithe would have the “ Key continued about it, of a good Breadth “ from the Houses, which may be cloistered “ about for the Market-men and Fruiterers:
 “ And then, where now that Wharf is, a stately “ Avenue from the Water-side up to St. Paul's, “ which might extend itself into an ample Semi-“ circle upon the Key, becoming that lovely Mar-“ gent. This I should conceive might be one “ of the five principal traverse Streets of the “ whole City, and to reach as far as Aldersgate, “ or, if you will, further along the Wall, as it “ might be carried: That from Queenhithe to “ Cripplegate: That from the Exchange to Moor“ gate: That opposite to the Bridge to Bishop“ gate: That from Billinggate near as far: That “ from the Custom-house to Aldgate; as that “ from Black-Friars Stairs as far as into West “ Smithfield: Thus decussating and crossing the “ four longer Streets, passing from East to “ West; whereof one might extend from the “ Channel, which intercepts it at St. Bride's, to “ the very Tower; this is what I call Thames-“ Street, and would destine for Store-houses, in case “ of Necessity: The second is (as has been said) “ from the Strand to the utmost Eastern Point of “ the whole City; where I would have erected “ a noble Gate, in manner of a triumphal Arch, in “ honour of our illustrious Monarch: This Street “ from

* I did read course to the Doctor before I had seen his Plat.

viz. Sept.
11.

"from St. Paul's may be divaricated like a Pythagorean Y, as the most accurately ingenious Dr. Wren has designed it, and I willingly follow in my second Thoughts, because of its handsome Address to the Bridge, and to the opposite Parts of the Town: The third from Newgate to Aldgate, and with a little Assistance butting into Holborn: The fourth and last from Aldersgate to Bishopsgate, which will be the shortest. The Wall betwixt Crip-plegate and Aldgate to be employed, as I said, for the Church-yards of the several Parishes; and the Houses opposite to them, with a large Street, for the common Inns, Receptacle and Station for Carriers, &c. which being on the North Part of the City, and nearest the Confines of the Fields and Roads, would least cumber and infest the Town, and yet have a far more commodious and easy Access to them, by reason of their immediate Approaches through the traverse Streets, than now that they are scattered up and down without Distinction.

"For the rest of those necessary Evils, the Brew-houses, Bake-houses, Dyers, Salt, Soap and Sugar-boilers, Chandlers, Hat-makers, Slaughter-houses, some sort of Fish-mongers, &c. whose Neighbourhood cannot be safe, (as I have elsewhere shewed, and a sad Experience has confirmed) I hope his Majesty will now dispose of to some other Parts about the River; towards Bow and Wandsworth on the Water; Islington and about Spital-Fields, &c. The Charge of bringing all their Commodities into the City would be very inconsiderable, opposed to the Peril of their being continued amongst the Inhabitants, and the Benefit of the Carriage, which would employ a World of People, both by Land and Water, without the least Prejudice.

"I suppose the Custom-house cannot be better situated than where it was, and as it may hold Communication with the Tower: Here might the Admiralty and Navy-Office be fitly placed.

"I have not forgotten the Hospitals, Publick Work-houses to employ the Poor in, and Prisons; which being built and re-endowed at the common Charge, should be disposed of in convenient Quarters of the City: The Hospitals would become one of the principal Streets:
But the Prisons, and Tribunal for Trial of criminal Offenders, might be built (as of old) near some Entrance of the City; about Newgate were a fitting Place, as my Plate represents it.

"The College of Physicians would be in one of the best Parts of the Town, incircled with an handsome Piazza for the Dwelling of those learned Persons, with the Chirurgeons, Apothecaries and Druggists in the Streets about them; for I am greatly inclined to wish, that all of a Mystery should be destined to their several Quarters: Those of the better Sort of Shop-keepers, who sell by Retail, might be allotted to the sweetest and most eminent Streets and Piazzas: The Artificers to the more ordinary Houses, intermediate and narrower Passages (for such will hardly be avoided)

"that the Noise and Tintamar of their Instruments may be the less importunate: The Taverns and Victualling-houses sprinkled amongst them; and built accordingly: But all these too, even the very meanest, should exactly respect Uniformity, and be more substantially built than those in Covent-Garden, and other Places; where once in twenty or thirty Years they had need be built again, and therefore to be indulged a longer Term.

"Spaces for ample Courts, Yards and Gardens, even in the Heart of the City there may be some to the principal Houses, for State and Refreshment; but with great Reservation, because of the Fractions they will make; and therefore rarely towards any principal Street:
And I hope it will please his Majesty to prescribe by a publick and irreversible Edict, that no Houses whatsoever, may for the future presume to be erected, not only about this City, but all the Nation besides, within such a Distance from Magazines, Places of publick Records and Churches, which should be preserved as Sanctuaries.

"The Gates and Entries of the City, which are to be rebuilt, might be the Subjects of handsome Architecture, in form of Triumphal Arches, adorned with Statues, Relievo's and opposite Inscriptions, as Prefaces to the rest within, and should therefore by no means be obstructed by Sheds, and ugly Shops, or Houses adhering to them: And I wish this Reformation, and the infinite Danger of their being continued, might extend to the demolishing those deformed Buildings on London-Bridge, which not only indanger all the rest, but takes away from the Beauty of it, and indeed of the whole City near the Thames: Instead of them, if there went a substantial Baluster of Iron, decorated with Statues upon their Pedestals at convenient Distances, and the Foot-Way on each Side, it would be exceedingly convenient; whilst, to secure the Passengers by Night, it might be guarded by responsible House-keepers in their Turns: Or, if they will needs have Shops, let them be built of solid Stone, made narrow and very low, like to those upon the Rialto at Venice; but it were far better without them.

"One of the last, not least Considerations, will be that of Paving; for which we have a laudable Example of my Lord Treasurer's, and Hatton-Garden, which may be imitated: And why may not some of the distorted Bricks, to be found amongst the Rubbish, be reserved for these Purposes; especially the Elevations destined for the Foot-Causeways before the Fronts of the Houses? Unless they will be at the Charge to lay it with Purbeck and flat Stones, which indeed were to be preferred:
Yet, their Clinkers in Holland do very well;
and, as I remember, the Roman Streets are so paved.

"I have now no more to add, for the Ease and Preservation of the Streets, than to wish that the Use of Sleds were introduced, and as few heavy Carts as might be countenanced:
And for the universal Benefit (especially of those who are not born to ride in Coaches) that "intolerable

"intolerable Nuisance of Spouts and Gutters might be strictly reformed, and the Waters so conveyed by close and perpendicular Pipes, (where they cannot be avoided) or to drop only from above the Modillions, as from Italian Roofs: That no Pipes for Conveyance of Water for domestick Uses be derived from the Heads thro' Church-yards, or like unclean Places, without being well immured in Plaster of Paris: That plain Tile may be only employed instead of Pan-tile, unless we could be persuaded into the Use of Slate, which is both beautiful and light: That no Bay-Windows and uncomely Juttings, nor ever Balconies, (unless made of Iron) be for the future permitted: And that, for the better Expediting of this great Design (worthy indeed of the greatest and best of Princes) Store of all Materials may be provided betimes, (Bricks and Tiles especially) because all Seasons are not fit for it, and that there be a diligent Inspection to examine their Goodness; but the greatest and almost only Defiderate will be that of Timber, which Peace and Industry will quickly furnish: And when all these were prepared, and the Undertakers too as ready, if they be permitted to gratify their own Fancies, without religiously intending to peruse the Plan, and that his Majesty (who is best able to judge of it) over-rule in this, it may possibly become a new indeed, but a very ugly City, when all is done: Whereas, if they permit themselves to be governed in this, we are not yet to despair of seeing (after a few Years) such a City to emerge out of these sad and ruinous Heaps, as may dispute it with all the Cities of the World; fitter for Commerce, apter for Government, sweeter for Health, more glorious for Beauty, and, in Sum, for whatsoever indeed could be desired to render it consummately perfect."

THE Lord-Mayor and Common-Council, for the more effectual providing against all destructive Fires for the future, by an Act of Common Council, appointed,

"1. That the City be divided into four Divisions, and each thereof be provided with eight hundred leathern Buckets, fifty Ladders of different Sizes, from twelve to forty-two Feet in Length, two brazen Hand-Squirts to each Parish, twenty-four Pickax-Sledges, and forty shod Shovels.

"2. That each of the twelve Companies provide themselves with an Engine, thirty Buckets, three Ladders, six Pickax-Sledges, and two Hand-Squirts, to be ready upon all Occasions. And the inferior Companies, such a Number of small Engines and Buckets, as should be allotted them by the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, according to their respective Abilities.

"3. That the Aldermen, passed the Office of Sheriffalty, do provide their several Houses with twenty-four Buckets and one Hand-Squirt each; and those who have not served that Office, twelve Buckets and one Hand-Squirt each.

"4. And, for the effectual supplying the Engines and Squirts with Water, that Pumps be placed in all Wells; and Fire-Plugs in the several main Pipes belonging to the New-River and Thames Water-works.

"5. That the several Companies of Carpenters, Bricklayers, Plaisterers, Painters, Masons, Smiths, Plumbers, and Paviours, do annually, for each Corporation, elect two Master-Workmen, four Journeymen, eight Apprentices, and sixteen Labourers, to be ready, upon all Occasions of Fire, to attend the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs for extinguishing the same.

"6. That all the Workmen and Labourers belonging to the several Water-works within the City, Sea-Coal Meters, Blackwell-hall, Leaden-hall, Ticket, Package, and other Porters, do constantly attend the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs in all such Services."

And on the 11th of November this same Year, 1668, the Lord-Mayor issued out a Precept, commanding, amongst other wholesome Orders for preventing Immoralities, Prophanation of the Lord's Day, Drunkenness, and Gaming, and for suppressing Rogues, Vagrants, and sturdy Beggars, That, for the Health and Cleanliness of the City, all Inhabitants, Householders, and others concerned, should keep the Streets before their Houses and Ground duly paved and swept, and the Soil should be taken up and kept in Tubs, Baskets, or other Vessels, till the Coming of the Raker, upon Pain of three Shillings and four Pence; and that they should not throw or suffer any Athes, Dirt, or other Filth, to be cast out into the Streets before their own Ground or Houses, upon Pain of five Shillings; nor before their Neighbour's, or any Church or Church-yard,

After carrying on a bloody and expensive War against the Dutch for two Years with various Success, an Overture was made for terminating all Differences; which the King readily consenting to, a Treaty was set on Foot; which, by a Concatenation of successful Negotiations, was drawing towards a happy Conclusion, and so effectually removed all Apprehensions from both the King and Ministry, that they remained in a State of Inactivity, as in a Time of the most profound Peace. Not even a Fleet was fitted out for the Defence of our Coasts; for the King, less regardful of the publick Interest than his own, applied the Money, given by Parliament for the Defence of the Kingdom, to his own Use: Which the Dutch taking Advantage of, sent Admiral de Ruyter with a mighty Fleet, consisting of seventy Ships of War; who rode triumphant upon our Coasts, and, perceiving no Opposition, entered the River Thames, possessed himself of Sheerness Fort, sailed up the River Midway, and destroyed and carried off divers Men of War. This unparalleled Attempt occasioned such a Consternation in this City, as far exceeded that either of the late Plague or Fire, seeing there was nothing to obstruct the greatest Part of their Ships from sailing directly to the Tower of London; for at that Time there was not one Gun mounted at Tilbury Fort, nor one Ship of War in the River to oppose the Enemy; which occasioned it generally to be believed, that, had they sailed directly to London, they might not only with Ease have destroyed and carried off all the Ships in the River Thames, but likewise laid in Ashes all the Eastern Parts of the City and Suburbs, left unconsumed by the late Fire.

The richer Sort of Citizens, by their great Losses in the late dreadful Conflagration, being rendered unable to contribute to the Support of their poor Fellow-Sufferers, the Sum on that Occasion collected in all Parts for their Relief, only amounted to sixteen thousand two hundred and seventy-seven Pounds and five Pence Halfpenny: A poor Pittance for the Succour of so many thousands of miserable Objects!

In clearing the Ground at Black-Friars, in order to rebuild the Houses consumed in the late Fire, a strong and thick Wall was discovered (supposed to have been Part of the antient Monastery) wherein was a Cavity, representing a Cupboard shut, being the Repository of four human Skulls, deposited in fine Pewter Cafes, with substantial Covers of the same Metal, and Rings on the Tops, for the Convenience of Portage; three of which are supposed to have been transported by some Relick-mongers; the fourth my Author saw, An. 1703, in the Possession of a curious Gentleman; when, taking it out of the Cafe, it appeared to have been wrapped in black Silk, then greatly decayed; the Skin of the Face resembling tanned Leather; the Hair of the Temples yellow, but that on the Head red, thick, and short, with a visible Tonsure, or circular Place on the Crown shaven, (whereby 'tis manifest it belonged to a Monk) the Nose flat, Mouth gaping, Teeth sound, and Features still discernible. These probably were the Heads of Saints or Martyrs, which on great Festivals and other solemn Occasions were exposed to the Publick.

Towards the Close of this Year William, Prince of Orange, (late King of England) arrived in this City, with a View of transacting some private Affairs, respecting his Honour and hereditary Claim, the Interest of his Country, and the publick Welfare of Europe, then drawing near a Crisis. On the tenth of November, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London waited upon, and complimented his Highness upon this joyful Occasion, as presaging his being the future Restorer and Preserver of their Rights and Liberties; and, on the eighteenth of December following, entertained him very sumptuously in Drapers-Hall.

The Places designed for the common Market-places in this City being almost fitted up for the Purposes intended, there passed an Act of Common Council, on the eighth Day of September this same Year, in these Words:

"Whereas the several Grounds within Newgate, in Honey-Lane and at Woolchurch, designed for common Market-places, are near prepared and fitted for those Uses; be it enacted, by the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, the Right Worshipful the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, and by the Authority thereof, That the same be common Market-places of this City for all Time to come, and be respectively called the Market within Newgate, the Market of Honey-Lane, and the Market at Woolchurch: And that the Market, which since the dismal Fire hath been kept in Aldersgate-Street, be, from and after the 25th Day of March next, removed to the said several Places, and there kept and continued accordingly, on such Days, and at such Hours, and under such Regulations, as Newgate-Market and Cheap-side-Market formerly were, or ought to have been, or as is or shall be appointed by any Acts or Orders for or concerning the keeping and regulating the common Markets of this City. And that this Act be forthwith proclaimed or published, for the Information of all Persons therein concerned."

The Surveyors for rebuilding the City of London having found it necessary, for the Good and Convenience of the Citizens, that divers Streets, hitherto unmentioned, should be enlarged; therefore 'twas by Parliament enacted, That, besides the

It was also ordered, That the sole Power of regulating, keeping clean, pitching, and paving the Streets of the City of London, and of making and cleaning Drains and Sewers of London, shall remain in the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, to be executed by such Persons as the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council shall appoint; and that the Mayor, &c. may impose a Tax upon Houses for the doing thereof. 22 & 23 Car. This same Parliament passed an Act for suppressing Conventicles; in which it was enacted, That the Fault of the Mittimus should not render it ineffectual; all doubtful Clauses in the Act to be interpreted as would most conduce to the Suppression of Meeting-houses; and that all Persons who should fly, or remove their Dwellings into another Country, should be pursued by Execution. This Act was rigorously executed in London by a military Force, to the great Terror of some, and Death of others: However, divers Reverend Historians have endeavoured to palliate the Severity thereof, by saying, that all the Laws made against Conventicles were founded upon a national Reason, and more owing to a civil and political Account than religious; therefore very necessary to awe and restrain Dissenters. Nevertheless the Meeting-houses of the City, by this Act, seem only to have changed Hands; for, instead of being appropriated to profane Uses, they were converted into so many Tabernacles for the Use of the Citizens, till their Churches should be rebuilt, during which Time they were to be regularly supplied by Church-of-England Divines: Wherefore, on the fifteenth of June, publick Notice was given, That the Places under-mentioned, of late made use of for Conventicles and unlawful Assemblies, are now, by his Majesty's particular Command in Council, appointed to be used every Lord's Day for the Celebration of Divine Worship, and preaching the Word of God, by approved orthodox Ministers appointed by the Bishop of London, to commence on the Sunday following, for the Benefit of the Inhabitants of the adjacent Parishes respectively, whose Parish-Churches were consumed by the late dreadful Fire, viz.

1. In Fisher's Folly in Bishopsgate-Street, a convenient Place, with two Galleries, Pews, and Seats.

2. In Hand-Alley in Bishopsgate-Street, a large

Room, purposely built for a Meeting-house, with three Galleries, thirty large Pews, and many Benches and Forms, known by the Name of Vincent's Congregation.

3. In St. Michael's-Lane, a large Room, with two Galleries and thirty-nine Forms.

4. In Mugwell-Street, Mr. Doolittle's Meeting-house, built of Brick, with three Galleries, full of large Pews below, with Locks and Keys to them, besides Benches and Forms.

5. The Cockpit in Jewin-Street, a Meeting-house of one Grimes, three Galleries, many Pews, Forms, and Benches.

6. In Black-Friars, Mr. Wood's Meeting-house, four Rooms opening into one another, with Lattice Partitions, each Room conveniently filled with Benches and Forms.

7. In Salisbury-Court, four Rooms opening into one another, in the Possession of John Fowl, a Schoolmaster.

8. In New-Street, Shoe-Lane, four Rooms opening into one another, with seventeen Pews, and divers Benches, in the Possession of Mrs. Turner.

The Commissioners of Sewers, pursuant to the Power given to them by an Act of Parliament for the better paving and cleansing the Streets and Sewers in and about the City of London, as above-mentioned, being willing that all Persons concerned might take Notice of a late Act of Common Council, and of several antient Customs, and other Statutes, Rules, and Orders relating to the paving and cleansing of the Streets and Lanes, and preventing other Inconveniences to the common Passages within their Jurisdiction, ordered, on the first of March, 1671-2, the following Act, made on the twenty-seventh of October, 1671, to be published: "That the several Pieces or Parcels of Ground hereafter named; that is to say, a Piece or Parcel of waste Ground on the South Side of the hither End of Mile-End Green, adjoining to the Highway there, extending from the Place called the Fert, to the hither End of the Wall of the House and Ground called the Red Lion; a Piece of Ground on the West Side of, and contiguous to, Dowgate-Dock, now or late in the Possession of Job Clark; a Piece or Parcel of Ground on the East Side of, and contiguous to, Puddle-Dock, now or late in the Possession of John Cock; and a Piece or Parcel of Ground on the West Side of, and contiguous to, White-Friars Dock, now or late in the Tenure and Possession of Robert Gosling; shall be from henceforth Places for common Lay-Stalls, to be employed for the publick Use and Benefit of this City, and Liberties thereof, in such Manner as the Commissioners authorized or to be authorized by this Court, according to the said Act of Parliament, or any seven or more of them, shall order and direct; to be purchased out of the Monies arising by the Imposition of two Shillings per Chaldron upon Coals, according to the aforesaid Act of Parliament.

"And that the said Commissioners, or any seven or more of them, are hereby farther authorized, as Need shall require, to appoint and set out such and so many other Parcels of Ground for common Lay-Stalls, and for pub-“shall be impounded by any of the Officers afore“said, till Payment thereof.

“And that all Pains, Penalties, and Forfeit“tures, in and by this Act before limited and “appointed,

"appointed, in Case the same shall not be paid
 "to the said Commissioners, or seven or more
 "of them, upon Summons to the respective "Offenders beforehand made for their Appearance before the said Commissioners concerning Payment thereof, shall and may be recovered by Action of Debt, Bill, or Information, in the Name of the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, in his Majesty's Court holden before the Mayor and Aldermen of the said City in the Chamber of Guildhall of the City of London, wherein no Essoign or Wager of Law shall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant: One third Part shall be to the Prosecutor, and the other two Parts and Residue thereof (after all Charges out of the said two Parts deducted) to the Poor of Christ's Hospital in London. In all which Suits to be brought by this Act, the Chamberlain shall recover his ordinary Costs and Charges, to be expended in and for Recovery of all such Forfeitures against the Offender or Offenders: And in Case the same Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures shall be paid to the said Commissioners, or any seven or more of them, upon Summons as aforesaid, without any farther Process, one third Part shall be disposed by the said Commissioners, for Encouragement of their Officers, who shall take Pains in the Matter aforesaid, in such Manner as they shall think fit, and the other two Parts shall be disposed to the Poor of the Hospital, as is aforesaid.

Rules, Orders, and Directions.

"I. Item, That hereafter all Streets within this City, called, known, or set down to be High Streets, shall be paved round, or Causeway Fashion: And upon Notice given to the Commissioners of any defective Pavements in any of the Streets, Lanes, and Passages within this City and Liberties, the same shall be forthwith made good and amended, unless by general Consent some better Expedient be found and published.

Paviments.

"II. That, inasmuch as it hath been found by common Experience that the Paviments, to hide and cover their bad Workmanship, have oftentimes spread and laid great Quantities of Gravel over their Pavements, to greater Charge of the Persons setting them on Work, than was needful, and which, upon a sudden Rain, did either choak the Common Sewers, or turn to Dirt and Mire in the Streets; therefore the said Paviments are required, that hereafter they do forbear to lay or spread any more Gravel on the Pavements than will only fill up the Joints of their Work, and cause the same to be swept and well-rammed, and leave the Pavements bare of Gravel, and keep a regular Method of Paving, not paving one Door higher than another, upon Pain of paying five Shillings for every Complaint.

"III. That the Breadth of six Foot at the least from the Foundation of the Houses, in such of the said High Streets which shall be allowed to be posted, shall be paved by the Inhabitants or Owners with flat or broad Stone for a Foot-Passage, unless such Parts thereof, as "shall lie before any Gateway, which may be done with square Rag by the said Breadth of six Foot, upon Pain of paying five Shillings for every Week the same shall be omitted to be done after Notice given.

"IV. That every Person having Occasion to rebuild or repair any House or Houses fronting any Street, Lane, or common Passage, do first procure Licence of Mr. Chamberlain for the Time being, to hould in a Piece of Ground before his Building, within which to lay his Materials for Building; or in Default shall pay forty Shillings, and twenty Shillings for every Week's Omission so to do.

"V. That a Fall or Cistpool of convenient Bigness shall be made and continued to every Grate of the Common Sewer within this City and Liberties, to receive the Sand or Gravel coming to the same, so to prevent the choaking thereof. And, upon Complaint at any Time made of the Want, Decay, or Defect thereof, the Commissioners will forthwith cause the same to be made or amended.

"VI. That the Fellowship of Carmen of this City, Carmen, having undertaken for one Year, to commence from the first of January 1671, to sweep and cleanse the Streets, Lanes, and common Passages within the said City and Liberties, from Dung, Soil, Filth, and Dirt, and to carry the same, together with what shall be brought out of the Houses of the Inhabitants, unto certain Laystalls appointed, or that shall be appointed, by the said Commissioners for the Time being, the several Persons by them employed in and about this Affair, (whose Names, Places of Abode, Number of Tunbrels or Cars, and the Wards to which they are respectively designated, are hereafter set down) or such others as (by Death, or Removal of any of them) shall be employed therein, shall keep, observe, and follow the Rules and Orders hereafter following, viz.

"VII. That they, their Agents, or Servants, shall come out with their Tunbrels or Cars and Horses, on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, in every Week of the Year, from the eleventh of October to the eleventh of February, by five of the Clock every Morning of the same Days; and not to continue and remain in the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, after the Hour of nine of the Clock the same Morning; and from the eleventh of February to the eleventh of October, to come out, as aforesaid, by four of the Clock every Morning of the same Days, and not to continue or remain in the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, after the Hour of seven of the Clock the same Morning; and upon every Saturday in the Year to come out as aforesaid, by two of the Clock in the Afternoon of the same Day, to remain and continue 'till Night, if Need be: And within the Hours and Times aforesaid shall cleanse all the Streets, Lanes, and Passages, every Man within his or their respective Divisions, from its Soil, Filth, and Dirt, by sweeping of the same, and carrying it away, together with what shall be brought out of the Houses of the Inhabitants, to the Laystalls appointed, or that shall be appointed, upon “ upon Pain to forfeit for every Offence ten Shillings.

“ VIII. That the several Inhabitants within this City and Liberties, or their Servants, do take care that the Dirt, Ashes, and Soil of their Houses be in a Readiness for the Carmen, their Agents, or Servants, either by setting out the same over Night in Tubs, Boxes, Baskets, or other Vessels, near and contiguous to their Houses, or by bringing out the same within convenient Time, before the Hours for their Departure as aforesaid.

“ IX. That the said Carmen, their Agents or Servants, in their several Wards or Divisions, (with the Assistance of the Servants of the Inhabitants, who are hereby directed to give such Assistance) shall in Times of Frost and Snow daily employ themselves in the opening of the Channels, and heaping up the Ice and Snow, that so the Passages may be cleared, and upon a Thaw of the same, that all the Soil and Filth found in the Streets, Lanes, and Passages be carried away, upon Pain of ten Shillings for every Day's Omision.

“ X. That no Person whatsoever do presume to cast out any Soil, Horse-dung, or Filth, or carry the same into any Street, Lane, or common Passage, after the Hours aforesaid, either by Night or by Day, upon the Penalty that the Person offending, if known (and if a Servant, his or her Master or Mistress) to forfeit and pay five Shillings; and if not known, the Party against whose House the same shall be found, (having been laid there in the Day-Time, after the Hours before-mentioned) shall forfeit one Shilling; which said several Forfeitures shall be paid, the one Moiety to the Discoverer, and the other to the Carman or Carmen appointed to cleanse that Ward wherein the Offence shall be committed.

“ XI. That the several Tunbrels or Cars employed in this Work shall be marked or numbered according to the Number of Cars appointed for each Ward, upon the Penalty of two Shillings for every Load carried without such Mark.

“ XII. That the several Carmen, Undertakers in this Affair, shall set upon the fore Part of his Tunbrel or Car, open and plain to view, a Board, whereon to be painted the City Arms, the Ward to which he or they are appointed, the Mark or Number of his Tunbrel or Car, upon Penalty of paying three Shillings and four Pence a Day for want thereof; which said Marking is to betoken the Allowance of the Commissioners, and to caution the Inhabitants from employing of foreign Cars.

“ XIII. That the said Carmen Undertakers, their Agents or Servants, shall give Notice of their being in the Streets with their Tunbrels or Cars by loudly knocking a wooden Clapper, especially in Courts, Alleys, and other back Passages, upon Pain to forfeit three Shillings and four Pence upon every Complaint duly proved.

“ XIV. That the said Carmen, their Agents or Servants, do take Care that the Falls or Cestpools belonging to any Grate within their respective Wards be once in every Week, or oftener, if Need require, cleansed of its Dirt and Filth, and the same carried away, upon Pain to forfeit five Shillings for every Complaint duly proved.

“ XV. That the aforesaid Carmen, their Agents or Servants, and no other, shall also carry away to the Laystalls aforesaid all such Soil, Dirt, and Dung, (Rubbish or Earth excepted) that shall be made or found in any of the Houses or Stables of any Inn-keeper, Livery-Stable-keeper, Brewer, Dyer, Sugar-baker, Sope-maker, or other Trader or Inhabitant within any the Wards to which they are respectively appointed and designed. For which such quarterly Allowance (over and above the customary Rates by the Scavenger's Book) shall be made by the Assessors of each Ward according to their best Discretion, Respect being had to the Trade or other Occasions in the making of more or less Dung or Soil by such Traders or Inhabitants.

“ XVI. That the aforesaid Carmen, their Agents or Servants, and no other, shall take up and carry away to such Persons or Places, as will receive the same, all such Rubbish or Earth that shall be made or found within their respective Wards or Divisions. For which there shall be paid them by the Owners or Proprietors thereof twelve Pence per Load, and no more. Provided they carry it away within one Day after Notice given for the Convenience of the Owners, and to avoid Complaint of them, upon Pain that the Person offending in either of these Cases shall pay two Shillings per Load.

“ XVII. That no other Tunbrel or Car, than what is or shall be appointed and allowed by the said Commissioners for doing the Works aforesaid, shall be employed, or shall intermeddle with the carrying of any Soil, Rubbish, Earth, Dung, Paving-Stones, Thames-Gravel, or the like, within this City or Liberties; Bricks or Tiles from the Water-Side within the City or Liberties; upon Pain to pay to the Carman or Carmen employed in cleansing the Streets as aforesaid, of the Ward where this Offence shall be committed, two Shillings for every Load so taken up or carried in a Tunbrel or Car: And for Non-payment, that such Tunbrel or Car shall be carried to the City's Pound, called the Green-Yard, and there to remain till Payment thereof. Provided, that if any the said Carmen shall not, immediately after Notice, employ himself in carrying the said Materials, to forfeit and pay two Shillings for every Load thereof, and the Owners at Liberty to employ foreign Cars.

“ XVIII. That no Coachman, Carman, Carter, Drayman, or other Person, shall feed his or their Horse or Horses with Hay or Grains in the Streets, Lanes, or common Passages, within this City and Liberties, upon Pain to forfeit and pay for every Offence two Shillings and six Pence (over and above the like Sum formerly imposed and to be paid to the Governors of Christ's Hospital) the one Moiety to the Discoverer and Prosecutor, and the other to the Carman or Carmen of the Ward in which the said Offence shall be committed: And in Case of Non-payment, to carry the Horse or Horses to the City's Pound, called

“ the

" the Green-Yard; three to remain till Payment thereof.

" XIX. That none of the aforefaid Carmen, their Agents or Servants, or other Perfon or Perfons, do sweep the Filth or Soil of the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, into any the Channels of this City, in Time of Rain, or otherwise, upon Pain to pay fix Shillings and eight Pence for every Complaint duly proved.

" XX. That no Man shall cast or lay in the Streets, Lanes, or common Passages, or Channels within this City or Liberties, any Dogs, Cats, Inwards of Beasts, Cleaves of Beasts Feet, Bones, Horns, Dregs or Drofs of Ale or Beer, or any noisome Thing, upon Pain of ten Shillings for every Offence.

" XXI. That no Perfon set a Tunbrel, Car, or Cart, in the Street by Night-Time, upon Pain to pay two Shillings, besides Satisfaction to any Perfon hurt thereby.

" XXII. That no Perfon do ride or drive a Tunbrel, Car, Cart, or Dray, a Trot in the Street, (or sit on any Part of the Car, Cart, Tunbrel, or Dray, unless another skilful Perfon lead the Horse) upon Pain to forfeit and pay two Shillings; and in Case of Non-payment, to carry the Horse to the Pound, as aforefaid, to remain till Payment thereof.

" XXIII. That no Waggon, Car, or Cart, shod with Iron, or Spignails, or having more Horses than is allowed by the aforefaid Act of Common Council, shall take up any Goods within this City or Liberties, to carry for Hire about the Streets, upon Pain to pay five Shillings for every Offence: And in Case of Non-payment, to carry the Horse or Horses to the aforefaid Pound 'till Payment thereof.

" XXIV. That no Goung-Fermer shall carry any Ordure 'till after ten o'Clock in the Winter, and eleven o'Clock in the Summer, at Night, nor shall spill any Ordure in the Streets, upon Pain to forfeit and pay thirteen Shillings and four Pence.

" XXV. That no Pudding-Cart of Shambles shall go out 'till after the Hours last before-mentioned, upon Pain to forfeit fix Shillings and eight Pence.

" XXVI. That no Artificer, Labourer, or other Perfon, shall make any Stop or Dam in any Channel, nor shall flake any Lime in the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, upon Pain to pay two Shillings for every Offence.

" XXVII. That no Man shall feed any Kine, Goats, Hogs, or any kind of Poultry, in the open Streets, upon Pain to forfeit three Shillings and four Pence for every Offence.

" XXVIII. That no Man shall cast into the Ditches or Sewers, Grates or Gulleys of the City, any manner of Carrion, stinking Fleth, rotten Oranges or Onions, Rubbish, Dung, Sand, Gravel, or any other Thing that may stop the Course of the same, upon Pain of forfeiting forty Shillings for every Offence.

" XXIX. That no Man shall make or continue any Widraughts, Seat or Seats, for Houses of Easement over, or Drains, into any the Common Sewers, without Licence of the Commissioners for the Time being, upon Pain to for" feit forty Shillings, and forty Shillings a Month for so long Time as the same shall be continued after Warning.

" XXX. That no Perfon or Persons do presume to keep any Laystall for Dung, Rubbish, Earth, or other Soil, either at the Water-Side, or other Place within this City or Liberties, other than the common or publick Laystalls, appointed, or to be set out and appointed, by the said Commissioners for the Time being; upon Pain to forfeit and pay fifty-three Shillings and four Pence, and forty Shillings a Week for every Week he or they shall so continue to do after Warning, or be indicted from Time to Time, as a common Nuisance.

" XXXI. That no Tyler, Bricklayer, or other Perfon, do throw out of Gutters, or off Roofs or other Parts of Houses, any Tyles, Loam, or Rubbish, into any Street, Lane, or common Passage; but do bring down the same in Baskets or Trays; upon Pain to forfeit three Shillings and four Pence for every Offence.

" XXXII. That no Perfon or Persons do set out in the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, any Hogsheds, Barrels, or other Casks or Vessels, to hoop, wash, or dry, or otherwise encumber the Passage; upon Pain to forfeit and pay twenty Shillings for every Offence.

" XXXIII. That the Dung, Mud, Filth, and Soil of the Wards of Billinggate, Bridge, Langbourn, Cornhill, Candlewick, Walbrook, Vintry, and Dowgate, shall be carried down to the Laystall at Dowgate-Dock: Of the Wards of Portoken, Tower, Aldgate, Duke's-Place, and Lyme-Street, to the Laystall set out at Mile-End: Of the Ward of Bishopsgate within and without to the Laystall at Holloway-Lane End, being Part of a Meadow there belonging to the City: Of the Ward of Cripplegate within and without, Aldersgate without, Bassishaw, Coleman-Street, and Broad-Street, to the Laystall at Bunhill: Of the Wards of Cheap, Cordwainer, Queenhithe, and Bread-Street, to the Laystall at or near the Three Cranes, and in Dungbill-Lane near Broken-Wharf, until such Time as the publick Wharf or Key at the River-Side shall be laid open, and afterwards to the Laystall at Puddle-Dock: Of the Wards of Farringdon within, Castle-Baynard, Aldersgate within, and St. Martin-le-Grand, to the Laystall at Puddle-Dock: Of the Ward of Farringdon without, to the Laystall at White-Friars: And this Course to be used until the Commissioners shall see Cause to alter the same; and who so shall offend herein shall forfeit and pay five Shillings for every Offence.

" XXXIV. That the Carmen Undertakers, their Agents or Servants, shall have Liberty to carry Rubbish from all Parts of the City or Liberties, into the Vineyard near [without] Aldgate, for levelling the same, 'till the first of May next, and to shoot the same there gratis, and after that Time to pay such Sum for what they there shoot as the Commissioners shall require.

" XXXV. That inasmuch as the said Carmen have undertaken to do this Work in better Manner and to greater Satisfaction than heretofore hath been done; and the Commissioners believing from what they have already observ-

" ed,

"ed, that they will accordingly perform the same, do therefore exhort all Persons, that shall be rated towards this Work, willingly and readily to pay the same; so to prevent Trouble to themselves, and Discouragement to the said Carmen, in a Work of this Nature, so requisite and necessary to the Health and Trade of the Inhabitants of this City.

"XXXVI. That the several Pains and Penalties before-mentioned, nor particularly expressed to whom to be paid, shall be paid into the Chamber of London, upon Summons or Warning by the Officers attending the Commissioners, or either of them; or, in Default, the Offender or Offenders to be indicted at the Sessions for his or their respective Offences.

"XXXVII. That if any the aforesaid Carmen, their Agents or Servants, do offend in any the Particulars aforesaid, or otherwise relating to this Affair, that Complaint be made thereof to the Commissioners at the Guildhall, who will deal with them according to their Offences.

"XXXVIII. That the Scavengers for the Time being, in the several Wards and Precincts within this City and Liberties, do take Care, either by their own Observations, or Complaints to them by any of the Inhabitants, that the said Carmen, their Agents or Servants, do accordingly perform the several Branches aforementioned to them relating; or to make Complaint thereof to the Commissioners; upon Pain that the said Scavengers shall, from Time to Time, for their Negligence or Remissness, be indicted at the Sessions; unless they shall submit to the Censure and Judgment of the said Commissioners for the Time being."

The Tythes of the City being hitherto levied with great Inequality; and since the late Conflagration, by the taking away of some Houses, altering the Sites of others, and erecting many upon new Foundations, that Affair was still more embarrassed; which, if not timely remedied, was likely to occasion endless Lawsuits; 'twas by Parliament enacted, That, in lieu of Tythes, the Ministers of the following Churches, consumed by the late Fire, should for the future have the under-mentioned Sums annually paid them by their several and respective Parishes:

But this Act was not without its Defects; and for many Years the Clergy suffered greatly by the Deficiency of their Tythes, wherever it happened that Houses within their respective Parishes stood empty; they being obliged, for Peace sake, either to put up with the Loss, or to undergo the odious Character of litigious

Ministers,

Ministers, if they insisted on the Payment of the Arrears from succeeding Tenants; till it was finally determined in their Favour by Lord Chancellor Harcourt on the twenty-fourth of December, 1713, by and with the Opinion and Advice of Mr. Baron Bury, and Mr. Baron Price: Which Order or Decree being of great Consequence both to the Clergy and Laity of this City, I shall insert it verbatim:

"Lord Chancellor's Order for fixing Arrears of "Tythes of Empty Houses, and of Houses and "Hereditaments in Possession of former Tenants,
"a Charge on the Houses, &c. and succeeding "Tenants.

Order concerning Tythes in London.

"I. Whereas William Savage, Clerk, Rector of "the United Parishes of St. Andrew Wardrobe,
"and St. Anne Black-Fryers; and Mountague Wood,
"Clerk, Rector of the United Parishes of St.
"Michael Royal, and St. Martin Vintry, London;
"did upon the twenty-ninth of October last
"prefer their humble Petition unto me, thereby "setting forth, That by an Act of Parliament
"made in the twenty-second and twenty-third
"Years of the Reign of his late Majesty King
"Charles the Second, intituled, An Act for the "better Settlement of the Maintenance of the Par- "ticularly directed and appointed; (which As- "sessments have been long since duly made in "the Petitioner's respective Parishes, as the "said Act required.) And that by the said Act

"it was further enacted, That if any of the "Inhabitants in any of the Parishes therein
"named refused or neglected to pay the Mo- "ney payable, or appointed to be paid by the "Act, (being lawfully demanded at the House,

"or any two or more of the Barons of the "Court of Exchequer, by Warrant under his "or their Hands and Seals, to do and perform
"what the said Lord-Mayor, according to the "Intent and Meaning of the said Act, might "or ought to have done; and by such Warrant
"either to empower any Person, or to autho"rize the respective Collectors, to levy the same
"by Distress and Sale of the Parties Goods as
"aforesaid.

"II. And the Petitioners by their Petition
"further set forth, That there was due and "in Arrear to the Petitioner Savage, for an "House and Wharf in the Parish of St. Anne
"Black-Fryers, in the Occupation of Joseph
"Harding, seventeen Shillings and four Pence,
"for four Quarterly Rates of Tythes, or Mo"nies in lieu thereof, at four Shillings and
"four Pence per Quarter, assessed on the said
"House and Wharf, and due at Lady-day last;
"and for an House in the same Parish, in the "Occupation of Anne Oliver, three Shillings
"and nine Pence, for five Quarterly Rates, at "nine Pence per Quarter, ending at the same "Time; and for an House in the same Parish,
"in the Occupation of Joseph Pollet, four Shil"lings and three Pence, for three Quarterly
"Rates, at one Shilling and five Pence per "Quarter, ending at the same Time: And "that there was due and in Arrear to the Pe"titioner Wood, for an House in the Parish of "St. Michael Royal, in the Occupation of The- "mas Moore, nine Shillings and seven Pence
"Half-penny, for seven Quarterly Payments, "ending at the same Time, at one Shilling and "four Pence Half-penny per Quarter; and "for an House in the Parish of St. Martin
"Vintry, in the Occupation of Anne Stockley, one "Pound fifteen Shillings and ten Pence Half-
"penny, for five Years and one Quarter's Ar-
"rear, at one Shilling and eight Pence Half-"penny per Quarter; and for an House in the "same Parish, in the Possession of Edward
"Berry, thirteen Shillings and nine Pence, for "four Quarterly Rates, ending at the same Time,
"at three Shillings and five Pence Farthing per "Quarter.

"III. That the Petitioners had respectively
"demanded of the said Inhabitants, at the "respective Houses and Premises whereout the "same were payable, the said respective Rates
"and Arrears, for the Houses and Premises
"in their respective Occupations; but they re"fused to pay the same, as by Affidavit ap"peared. And that the Petitioners applied to "Sir Richard Hoare, Knight, Lord-Mayor of the "City of London, for such Warrants as the said
"Act of Parliament directed him to give and "grant for levying the said Money, and he re"fused to grant such Warrants, as by Affidavit
"also appeared.

"III. Wherefore, and in regard the said Act
"was made for the Ease of the Clergy of Lon"don, and that their Maintenance might be "certain, and to prevent the Charge of Suits
"for recovering thereof; and for that the "Petitioners,

"Petitioners, by a Clause in the Act, were restrained from suing or taking any other Remedy for recovering of their Dues, than such as in the Petition is before set forth; it was prayed, That I would grant the Petitioners my Warrants to levy the said several Sums of Money, so respectively due to them, by Distress and Sale of such Goods of the Parties so refusing to pay, as they should find on the Houses and Premises out of which such Arrears were due, according to the Directions of the said Act of Parliament.

"V. Upon which I ordered, that, filing the Affidavits thereto annexed, with my Secretary, the Petitioners in Person, or by their Council or Agents, should attend me, touching the Matter of the said Petition, on Monday the first of November then next, at four of the Clock in the Afternoon; and that the said Harding, Oliver, Pollet, Moore, Stockley and Berry, should have four Days Notice of the said Petition; to the End they might in Person, or by their Council or Agents, attend me at the same Time, if they thought fit, to shew Cause why I should not issue out such Warrants for the Petitioners Relief, as were prayed by the said Petition.

"VI. Which Petition not coming to be heard before me at the appointed Time; and the said Pollet, after Service of my former Order, having paid the Petitioner Savage the Money so due to him as aforesaid; the Petitioners, Savage and Wood, preferred another Petition to me, praying me to appoint another Time for the Hearing of the said former Petition; and that all the said Persons, except Pollet, might then attend, according to my former Order. Upon which, on the seventeenth of November last, I ordered the said several Persons to attend me, touching the Matter of the said former Petition, on Wednesday the second Day of December instant.

"VII. And, in regard the Matter of the said Petition was of great Consequence, as well to all the Citizens and other Inhabitants, being Owners or Occupiers of any Houses, Shops, or other Hereditaments within the said several Parishes mentioned in the said Act, as to the Clergy of the said City: And forasmuch as, upon the Lord-Mayor's Refusal or Neglect to execute the Powers to him granted by the said Act, a special Jurisdiction is given by the said Act to the Lord Chancellor, or any two or more of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer for the Time being, by Warrant or Warrants under his or their Hands and Seals, to do and perform what the Lord-Mayor, according to the true Intent of the said Act, might or ought to have done: And forasmuch as no such Complaint, as is set forth in the said Petition, hath, since the making of the said Act, been made to the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, or any two of the Barons of the Exchequer; I thought fit to desire the Assistance of Mr. Baron Bury and Mr. Baron Price at my Hearing of the said Petition: And the Matter of the said Petition coming on to be heard before me on the second Day of December instant, in the Presence of Mr. Baron Bury and Mr. Baron Price; and in the Presence of Mr. Sergeant Hooper, Mr. Cowper and Mr. Mead, of Council for the Petitioners; and likewise in the Presence of the said Anne Oliver, Thomas Moore, Anne Stockley and Edward Berry (the said Joseph Harding not attending, tho' duly served with my Order for that purpose, as by Affidavit appeared) upon reading of the said Petition, and several Affidavits, and hearing what could be alledged and insisted upon by all Parties, it appeared, that several of the Quarterly Sums claimed by the Petitioners became due and in Arrear, when the Houses or other Hereditaments, whereon such Quarterly Sums were assessed, stood empty, or were in the Possession of former Tenants or Occupiers thereof. And a Question thereupon arising, Whether such Sums of Money, which had been, according to the Directions of the said Act, duly assessed upon the several Houses or other Hereditaments within the several Parishes mentioned in the said Act, for making up the certain annual Sums of Money, to be paid in lieu of Tythes within the said Parishes, were become a fixed or real Charge upon the Houses and other Hereditaments whereupon they were so assessed; so that the Arrears of the Quarterly Payments of such Sums, so assessed as aforesaid on such Houses or other Hereditaments, and which ought to have been paid by the former Tenants or Occupiers of such Houses or other Hereditaments, or which became due when such Houses or Hereditaments stood empty or unoccupied, might be levied by Distress or Sale of the Goods of the succeeding Tenant or Occupier, which should be found in or upon the same Houses or other Hereditaments; thereupon I thought fit to adjourn the further Consideration of the said Petition till this Day.

"VIII. And the said Barons having on the twenty-third Day of December instant certified their Opinion unto me in Writing in these Words following:

"IX. We are of Opinion, that by the Statute of the twenty-second and twenty-third Car. II. intitled, An Act for the better Settlement of the Maintenance of the Parsons, Vicars and Curates in the Parishes of the City of London, burnt by the late dreadful Fire there, the Sums of Money, which have been duly, according to the Directions of the said Act, assessed upon the several Houses, Buildings, and other Hereditaments within the Parishes in the said Act mentioned (for making up the Sums of Money which by the said Act are to be paid in lieu of Tythes within the said Parishes,) are become a real Charge upon the Houses, Buildings, and other Hereditaments whereupon they were so assessed; so that the Arrears of the Quarterly Payments of those Sums, which ought to have been paid by the former Occupiers of those Houses, &c. or which became due when those Houses stood empty, may be levied by Distress and Sale of the Goods of the present Occupiers, which shall be found in or upon the said Houses, &c. observing the Circumstances required by the said Act.

"X. And

"X. And the Matter of the said Petition coming on before me this Day for my Judgment, and the said Act of Parliament and Certificate of the Barons being now read, I do declare, That I do entirely concur in Opinion with the said Barons: And therefore the Petitioners are at Liberty to apply to me for Warrants of Distresses, as prayed for by their Petition.

"XI. But they are first to demand from the said Harding, Oliver, Moore, Stockley, and Berry, the said several Sums so due from them as aforesaid; to the End they may have an Opportunity of paying the said Sums of Money, without farther Trouble or Charge. And I do farther order, That the said Barons Certificate be filed with the Register.

"HARCOURT."

The Term for the Sitting of the Court of Judicature for terminating of Differences respecting Houses burnt down in the late Fire of London, expiring some Time ago, upon Application made to Parliament by the City, it was again revived, for settling of Contests concerning nine hundred Tofts, or Sites of Houses yet unbuilt; whereby it is manifest, that all the rest of the Houses consumed in the great Conflagration were re-edified before this Time, in 1673.

A.D. 1674

A great Dearth happening in 1674, Wheat was sold at three Pounds eight Shillings and eight Pence the Quarter.

In the Autumn of the Year 1674, the Places appointed for keeping the publick Markets being fitted up for their respective Uses, it was enacted in Common Council, on the 17th of September, That the former Act made by that Court on the 5th of September, 1672, concerning the Regulation of the publick Markets in this City, should be repealed; and that the following Rules, Orders, and Directions should be duly observed, viz. That every Country Butcher, Poulterer, Farmer, Victualler, Lader, or Kidder, not keeping Shop in or within two Miles of London, may sell openly in each Market Beef, Mutton, Veal, Lamb, Bacon, Pork, and other Butchery or Poultry Wares, or other Country Provisions, from Six o'Clock in the Morning until Eight in the Evening, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, weekly, and from Six o'Clock in the Morning until Ten at Night on every Saturday, in their own Right, and not as Servants, or otherwise in Behalf of any others.—That no Butcher or Poulterer residing in the City, or within two Miles of the City of London, shall sell, utter, or expose to Sale, any Butchery or Poultry Wares, or other Provisions whatsoever, in any of the said Markets, upon any Friday in the Year, on Pain of forfeiting ten Shillings.

held Sept.
17, 1674,
for the settling and well-ordering of the publick Markets.

And, to the End the respective Hours aforesaid may be the better known and observed in the said Markets, be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the Market-Bell in each respective Market shall ring thrice every Market-Day; that is to say, the first Ringing of the Market-Bell to be at Six of the Clock in the Mornings, for all Housekeepers and others, who are not Retailers of Victual, to buy in their Provisions; and the second Ringing of the said Bell to be at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon of every such Market-Day, for giving

Notice for all such as are Retailers and Traders of this City, who buy to sell again, then to enter into any of the said Markets, and not before, and there to buy and carry away such Provisions as they want or stand in Need of; and the third and last Ringing of the said Bell, for raising the said Markets, to be at Eight of the Clock in the Evening of the same Day, except on Saturdays, and then the last Ringing of the aforesaid Bell, for raising the Market, to be at Ten of the Clock of the same Night. And if any Butcher or Butchers, Poulterer or Poulterers, Victuallers, Country Farmer, Lader, Kidder, or other Person whatsoever, shall sell, put or expose to open Shew or Sale, any Manner of Butchery or Poultry Wares, or other Provisions in the said Markets, or any of them, before the Ringing of the Bell at the aforesaid Hour of Six in the Morning, such Offender or Offenders shall be proceeded against as Foretellers of the Market, as by the Law in that Case is directed and appointed. And if any Butcher, Poulterer, Victualler, Country Farmer, Lader, Kidder, or other Person or Persons whatsoever, shall sell, and put or expose to open Shew or Sale, any Butchery, Poultry Wares, or other Provisions, in any of the said Markets, after the Ringing of the Bell at the said several Hours in the Evening respectively, and shall not then depart from and quit the said respective Market, such Offender or Offenders shall, for every such Offence, forfeit and pay the Sum of twenty Shillings. And if any Retailers or Traders in this City, who buy to sell again, do come into any of the said Markets to buy or cause to be bought, or carry away or cause to be carried away, any of the Provisions brought into the Market to be sold, to his, her, or their respective Houses or Shops, before the Ringing of the Bell at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon aforesaid, such Offender or Offenders shall, for every such Offence, forfeit and pay forty Shillings: The Markets being most principally intended for the Benefit and Advantage of HOUSEKEEPERS and others, who buy for their own Use, to be spent in their Families, and may provide for themselves in the Morning at the best Hand, and pay moderate Rates for their Provisions.

That, from and after the Publication of this Act, no Butcher, Poulterer, Country Farmer, Lader, Kidder, or other Person or Persons whatsoever, shall, upon the Saturday in any Week throughout the Year, bring into any of the said Markets any Manner of Flesh-Meat, or other Victuals or Provisions, to be sold, after Three of the Clock in the Afternoon of the same Day, upon Pain that every such Offender or Offenders shall, for every such Offence, forfeit and pay the Sum of twenty Shillings.

Provided always, that all Country People resorting to the said Markets, not being Butchers nor Poulterers residing or inhabiting as aforesaid, may stand or sit, and vend their Herbs, Fruit, Butter, Eggs, and other Provisions and Commodities, in any of the said Markets, upon every Working-Day in the Week, so as the same Persons that bring them first to Market

"do

"do continue the Selling thereof, and do observe "the Hours for Ringing of the Market-Bell for "keeping the said Hours accordingly, upon Pain
"and Penalty aforeaid.

"And further, that it shall and may be lawful
"for the Gardeners and other Country-People
"reforting to any of the said Markets early "in the Morning with Fruit, Herbs, Roots, "Weeds, Plants, and other such-like Commodi"ties, and there continuing for some short Time,
"and quitting the Market about Eight of the "Clock in the Morning, to open, put and ex"pose to open Shew or Sale, such their respective "Commodities at their first coming, and before
"the Ringing of the Market-Bell.

"That no Butcher, Poulterer, Victualler, "Country Farmer, Lader, Kidder, Gardener,
"Fruiterer, Fishseller, Mealman, or Baker, or "other Person or Persons whatsoever, shall, from
"and after the Publication of this Act, sell, utter,
"put or expose to Sale by Way of Hawking,
"or as a Hawker, or in any other Way, any
"Beef, Mutton, Lamb, Veal, Bacon, Pork,
"Poultry, Butter, Cheese, Fish, Herbs, Meal,
"Bread, or other Victuals or Provisions whatso"ever, under any private Stall, or at any Tavern-
"Door, or in any private House, Lane, Alley,
"Inn, Warehouse, Street, Stall, common Pas"sage, or other Place or Places whatsoever,
"within the City of London or Liberties thereof,
"but only in his, her, or their open Shop or
"Shops, or in the publick Market-Place or "Places, and in Market-Time only, according "as is before appointed, upon Pain that every "Person and Persons so offending shall forfeit
"the same Goods so offered or exposed to Sale,
"without any Manner of Favour, according to "the antient Custom of the City of London used
"and approved.

"That no Person or Persons, from and after "the Publication of this Act, shall buy or cause "to be bought any Victuals, or other Things
"whatsoever, coming to the said City of London
"or Liberties thereof, or to any of the common "Markets of this City, to be sold, or make any "Bargain, Contract, or Agreement for the hav"ing and buying of the same, or any Part thereof,
"so coming as aforeaid, before the same shall be "brought into one of the said Markets, and there "really and bona fide, in Market-Hours ap"pointed, be exposed to publick Sale: And also,
"that no Retailers or Traders, who buy to sell
"again, that shall by any Means whatsoever ob"tain or get into his, her, or their Hands and "Possession, in any of the said Markets, any Vic"tuals, Provisions, or other Things whatsoever,
"that shall be thither brought to be sold, before
"the Ringing of the Bell at Ten of the Clock in "Forenoon aforeaid, shall from henceforth sell
"the same again in his, her, or their Shop or "Shops, or in the same or in any other of the "Markets, or in any other Place or Places within "this City and the Liberties thereof, upon Pain
"that every such Offender and Offenders shall,
"for every such Offence, forfeit and pay the "Sum of forty Shillings.

"That all and every Person and Persons refort-
"ing to any of the said Markets to sell and vend
"their Commodities, shall from henceforth pay

"unto such Person or Persons, as are or shall "from Time to Time be appointed to take and "receive the Profits of all or any of the said
"Markets, to the Use of the Mayor, and Com-
"monalty, and Citizens of the City of London,
"of and from all Market-People thereunto refort-
"ing, for their Stalls, Standings, and other Ac"commodations in the several Market-Places as "aforeaid, after the Rates following, and no
"more; that is to say,

"For every Stall or Standing, of eight Feet
"long and four Feet broad, for Sale of Flesh-"Meat or Fish, two Shillings and six Pence per "Week.

"For every Stall or Standing of six Feet
"long and four Feet broad, two Shillings per
"Week.

"For every Stall or Standing of six or eight "Feet long and four Feet broad, for other Com"modities, three Pence per Day.

"For every Horse-Load of Provisions, not "upon Stalls, nor under publick Shelter, two "Pence per Day.

"For every Dorser of like Provisions, one Penny
"per Day.

"For every Cart-Load, with not above three "Horses, four Pence per Day.

"For every Cart-Load with four Horses, or "above, six Pence per Day.

"For every Standing of tanned Leather under "publick Shelter, six Pence per Day.

"For every raw Hide, one Halfpenny per "Day.

"For all Fruit brought by Land or Water,
"and pitched in any of the publick Markets, for "each Prickel or Basket, holding not above one "Bushel, one Halfpenny per Day.

"For each Basket, Dorser, or Maund, hold"ing above two Bushels, one Penny per Day,
"to be paid by the People that bring or receive
"them.

"For every Standing of six Feet square, Length
"and Breadth, for the Gardeners, twenty Shillings
"per Annum.

"For every Standing for the poorer Sort of "Country People bringing Weeds and Physick-
"Herbs, of four Feet long and two Feet broad,
"one Penny per Day.

"For every Standing for Fruit-sellers and stand"ing Herb-Women, not above eight Feet long "and four Feet broad, or six Feet square, twelve "Pence per Week.

"For every Standing for Bakers and Ginger"bread-sellers, not above four Feet long and "three Feet broad, six Pence per Week.

"And that the said Collectors and Receivers
"shall not demand or require, nor receive or take,
"more than according to the foresaid Rates,
"without the free Consent and Agreement of the "said Market-People, for some extraordinary "Convenience or Accommodation, unless in Lea"denhall-Market, where other and larger Rates
"have been antiently paid for Stalls and Stand"ings therein.

"That the Overseer, Collector, or Receiver
"of each respective Market, and no other Person "or Persons, shall provide one or more Beam or "Beams with Scales and Weights, to be set up "in some convenient Place or Places within each "respective

"respective Market, only for the due weighing
"between Buyer and Seller all such Provisions
"as are usually bought or sold by Weight; and "that no Overseer, Collector, or Receiver shall
"or may demand or receive more than one Far"thing for every Draught, or four Pence per
"Week.

"That no Person or Persons may or ought to "demand or receive any Money or other Reward "of or from any Market-People in any of the "Markets, under Pretence of Metage, or of "any other Right of providing Boards, Stalls,
"Standings, or any other Accommodations re"lating to the said Markets, but the Collectors
"only, and that according to the Rates as by this
"All they are authorized and directed to collect and "receive."

accepts of the Freedom of the City.

Upon the Accession of Sir Robert Viner to the Mayoralty of this City, upon the twenty-ninth of October, the King was magnificently entertained at Guildhall, where he was graciously pleased to accept of the Freedom of the City, in the Chamberlain's Office, from the Hands of Sir Thomas Player, the Chamberlain. Wherefore the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, unanimously resolved to testify their deepest Sense of his Majesty's great Goodness and Condescension, in honouring the City far beyond the Example of all his Progenitors: Pursuant to which Resolution, the Lord-Mayor, attended by the Aldermen and Commonalty of the City, waited on the King, in the Banqueting-House at Whitehall, on the eighteenth of December; when the Lord-Mayor on his Knees presented his Majesty with the Copy of his Freedom in a large, square Box of massy Gold, and the Seal thereof, inclosed in another Box of the same Metal, beautifully enriched with large Diamonds of great Value; which his Majesty graciously accepted of, with many Expressions of great Kindness to the City; so that there appeared all the Marks of an indissoluble Love and Affection on one Side, as well as unalterable Duty and Loyalty on the other.

Divers Persons of no great Repute having been chosen to represent some of the Precincts of this City in Common Council, 'twas therefore, on the twelfth of December, by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, ordered, That the Precepts to be issued for holding of Wardmotes, require, that no Person be chosen a Common-Councilman, who has been convicted of defrauding in Weights, Measures, or such-like Crimes, nor any Person who has compounded,

In the Month of October a Match was concluded between William, Prince of Orange, since King of England, and the Princess Mary, eldest Daughter to the Duke of York; the News whereof, according to a celebrated Statesman, was received in all Parts of the Kingdom with the most universal Joy of any Thing that ever happened in that Reign. As soon as this agreeably surprizing and most joyful News reached the City, it was instantly proclaimed in all Quarters, by ringing of Bells, firing of Guns, with innumerable Bonfires and Illuminations, and all other Marks of the most dilated Joy. And, to complete the Happiness of the Citizens on this joyful Occasion, the Lord-Mayor gave a solemn Invitation, in the Name of the City, to the Prince and the whole Court: Pursuant to which, the King and Queen, accompanied by the Duke of York, the Prince of Orange, and the Princesses Mary and Anne, attended by the prime Nobility, repaired to the City on the Lord-Mayor's Day in great Pomp; where, after having seen the magnificent Proce-

Miles of the same; and soon after, by another Address, humbly besought his Majesty to take Care of his Royal Person; and that he would be pleased to command the Lord-Mayor and Lieu-

Which Cloth, Cloths, and other woollen Manufactures, or any of them, shall not from thence be removed to any other Place out of this City, or Liberties thereof, till after the three first Market-Days of their being brought to the said Market, unless sold in the mean Time, or removed and carried to be sold in any other Market without the Liberties of this City, except the Cloth, Cloths, and other Commodities made or mixed with Wool, Worsted, Jersey, or Cruel, bought by any Merchant, Draper, or any other that are Freemen of the said City, and inhabiting therein, (and not being a Factor in that Commodity) by Pre-contract with the said Clothier, which Cloth, Cloths, and other woollen Manufactures, shall be brought to the Hall appointed by this Act to receive the same; which being done, the said Cloths may be taken thence by the Owners as soon as they please; and except such small Parcels as being contracted for in the Country by Persons that have bought, or shall buy, the same for their own private Use or Wearings, and not to sell again; and except such Cloths and other woollen Manufactures, as, having received Damage by Wet or otherwise upon the Road, shall require drying or new dressing before they can be fit for Sale.

"And that no Person or Persons whatsoever, free or not free of this City, shall, at any Time or Times hereafter, buy, sell, or barter any of

"the aforesaid Cloths, or any other the Commodities aforesaid, or shall permit or suffer them, or any of them to be sold, bartered, or put to Sale, or opened to be put to Sale, within any Part of his or their Houses, Yards, Inns, Stables, Chambers, Shops, Warehouses, or Workhouses, or other Place or Places within the said City, or Liberties thereof, before the same be brought, pitched, and harboured within some of the said publick Markets of Blackwell-hall, Welch-hall, or Leaden-hall, respectively, appointed as aforesaid, and therein sold, or from thence removed and carried to be sold in some other Market without the Liberties of this City, or shall buy, sell, or barter, or permit any of the said Commodities, which shall at any Time hereafter be taken out of any the said Markets of Blackwell-hall, Welch-hall, or Leaden-hall, (before the same shall be there bought and sold as aforesaid) to be bought, sold, bartered, or put to Sale, or opened to be put to Sale, in any of his or their Inns, Yards, Houses, Stables, or any Part thereof, as aforesaid, within the said City, and Liberties thereof, other than in any of the said Markets of Blackwell-hall, Leaden-hall, or Welch-hall, appointed as aforesaid, (except as is before excepted.)

"And that neither Factor nor Broker belonging to Blackwell-hall or Leaden-hall, although a Freeman of this City, so long as he is in the Capacity of a Factor or Broker for Foreigners, during his being so, shall buy any of the said Cloth, Cloths, Kerseys, Baize, Fustians, or other Commodities aforesaid, within the said Markets or Market-places aforesaid, on Pain that every such Person, who shall offend herein, shall forfeit and lose for the first Offence three Pounds, for the second Offence four Pounds nineteen Shillings, and for every other Offence the like Sum of four Pounds nineteen Shillings.

"Provided, that neither such Factor nor Broker, being a Freeman of this City, shall by this Act be restrained from buying any Sort of Cloth, Cloths, or other woollen Manufactures aforesaid, within the said Markets or Market-places, within the Hours hereafter limited, which he himself doth not sell, so that the same be transported beyond the Seas upon his own Account.

"And further, that all Persons, as well Carriers as Cloth-men, or Clothiers, and others, shall, at the bringing of their Cloth, Cloths, and other woollen Manufactures, either by Land or Water, to this City or Liberties thereof as aforesaid, bring, or cause to be brought to Blackwell-hall, Leaden-hall, or Welch-hall, respectively, such of them as by this Act are appointed to be brought thither respectively, to the End they may be entered, and the Duties paid for the same; upon Pain of twenty Shillings for every Pack of Cloth, Cloths, or other Commodities, to be forfeited and paid by every such Carrier, Cloth-man, Clothier, or others, for every Offence to the contrary, and for every single Cloth, or other woollen Commodities, the Piece ten Shillings.

"And further, that the Markets at the aforesaid Blackwell-hall, Leaden-hall, and Welch-hall shall

"shall be and begin on every Thursday, between the twenty-fifth Day of March and the twenty-ninth Day of September, at Eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till Eleven of the Clock in the same Forenoon, and between the twenty-ninth Day of September and the twenty-fifth Day of March, at Nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till Eleven of the Clock in the same Forenoon; and on every Thursday at One of the Clock in the Afternoon, and continue till Four of the Clock in the same Afternoon; and on every Friday at Eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and continue till Eleven of the Clock in the same Forenoon; and shall begin in the Afternoon of the same Friday at One of the Clock, and shall continue till Four of the Clock in the same Afternoon; and shall begin on every Saturday at Eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, and shall continue till Eleven of the Clock in the same Forenoon; and that the said Hours for the Beginning and Ending of the said Market-Times shall be known by the Ringing of the Market-Bells in the Halls aforesaid, appointed for that Use and Purpose; and the same to be held and continued weekly throughout the whole Year, except Days of Humiliation or Thanksgiving, appointed to be otherwise set apart by Act of Parliament, or publick Authority; and that the respective Hall-keepers shall not permit or suffer any Buying or Selling of any the aforesaid woollen Cloths or Commodities in or at any of the said Halls in or upon any other Days or Hours than on the Market-Days and Hours appointed.

"And further, that the respective Hall-keepers, Clerks, and Master-Porters of every the Halls aforesaid, shall take Care that all the Rules and Orders, appointed to be observed by this Act, in every Branch of it be carefully put in Execution; and shall also diligently and faithfully keep their Books and weekly Registers of all the Cloths and woollen Commodities aforesaid bought and sold in any of the said Halls, or brought and pitched there; in which Books and Registers they and every of them, as they are concerned in their respective Halls, shall truly enter the Names of Baptism, Surnames, Place of Habitation, and Addition, both of the Owner, Buyer, and Seller of every of the said Commodities; to the End all Clothiers, their Factors, and others concerned, may be satisfied how their Cloths and other woollen Commodities are disposed of from Time to Time; and if any Hall-keeper, Clerk, or Master-Porter, shall refuse or neglect to perform his Duty herein, for the first Offence he shall forfeit twenty Shillings, for his second Offence forty Shillings, and for his third Offence be discharged from his Office.

"And further, that the Hall-keepers of every the Halls aforesaid for the Time being, shall attend in their respective Markets in their Gowns, and hinder all Foreigners and Aliens from coming into the said Markets; upon Pain that every Hall-keeper that shall fail in his Duty herein, shall forfeit for his first Offence twenty Shillings, for his second Offence forty Shillings, and for his third Offence be discharged from his Office.

"And further, that every Freeman of this City that shall introduce any Foreigner or Stranger into any of the aforesaid Markets, to buy or make Inspection into any of the aforesaid Commodities, shall for his first Offence forfeit and pay the Sum of five Pounds, and for his second Offence the Sum of ten Pounds, and for his third Offence the Sum of twenty Pounds; and, if any such Freeman shall again offend in the like Manner, then upon his Conviction thereof in the King's Majesty's Court, holden within the Guildhall of this City, before the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the same City for the Time being, he and they shall stand and be utterly disfranchised, as unworthy Members of this City, and shall not be readmitted but by Order and Consent of Common Council.

"And that every Factor who shall, either himself, or by his Servant, knowingly sell any of the Commodities aforesaid, in any of the common Markets before-mentioned, to any Foreigner or Foreigners, or for his or their Use, (except to such Persons as by Act of Parliament are allowed) that every such Factor so selling the same, whether a Freeman or Foreigner, shall for his first Offence forfeit and pay one third Part of the real Value of every Piece of woollen Commodity so sold to Foreigner or Foreigners.

"And further, that every Hall-keeper of the several Halls aforesaid respectively do and shall, within fourteen Days next after the publishing of this Act, present a Note in Writing to the President, Treasurer, and Governors of Christ's-Hospital, of the Names and Surnames of all Persons who then take upon them to be and to act and deal as Factors and Brokers in any of the said Halls respectively, and shall likewise hereafter, from Time to Time, at every three Months End, make like Certificate in Writing to the said Governors, of the Names and Surnames of all Factors or Brokers, or such as take upon them to act as Factors or Brokers in either of the said Halls respectively, together with the Offence or Offences by them or any of them committed, contrary to this Act, or any other Orders made for the good Government of the said Halls, upon Pain that every Hall-keeper, wilfully neglecting to do his Duty herein, shall for his first Offence forfeit the Sum of three Pounds, and for his second Offence be dismissed from his Place or Employment of Hall-keeper.

"And that, for the Observation of this Act and all the Parts thereof, there be every Year six able, experienced Freemen, Dealers in those Commodities, Surveyors, chosen by the President and Governors of Christ's-Hospital at the next Court to be holden after the second Day of February next ensuing, and so yearly from Year to Year; whose Office shall be, by themselves, or such others as they shall think fit to use for their Assistance, to enquire of all Abuses and Offences against this Act, and any two of them to present the same to the said Court from Time to Time, as often as they shall Clergymen's Widdow, &c. made a Corporation.

On the first of July this same Year his Majesty granted a Charter for erecting a Corporation for the Relief of poor Widows and Children of Clergymen; in which is set forth, That they should be a Body Politick and Corporate, with perpetual Succession, and Power to purchase and hold Lands to the Value of two thousand Pounds per Annum, (which King George I. extended to the Sum of five thousand Pounds per Annum) subject to the Visitation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Archbishop of York, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, Lord High Treasurer, Bishop of London, Lord Almoner, and Lord Mayor of London, to settle all Differences about the Government thereof, and the Disposition of their Revenues.

Great Darknes in the Forenoon.

On Sunday the twelfth of January following, a very extraordinary Event happened in this City; for between the Hours of ten and eleven in the Forenoon there was so great and sudden a Darknes, that Persons in the Churches could not see to read, nor those without Doors to distinguish one another by their Faces; which, during its Continuance, was thought to have equalled, if not exceeded, the great Solar Eclipse, which some Time before had distinguished the Day whereon it happened by the Name of Black Monday.

An Attempt to burn London by the Papists.

In the Beginning of May, a wicked and detestable Conspiracy of Jesuits and other Papists was discovered, for destroying this City a second Time by Fire, occasioned by the Burning of one Bird's House in Fetter-Lane, whereof his Servant Elizabeth Oxley was suspected; wherefore she was apprehended, and committed to Prison; where she confessed the Fact, and declared, That upon the Promise of five Pounds, by one Stubbs, a Papist, she was prevailed upon to fire the same. Stubbs being immediately secured, confessed, that he had persuaded her to it, being excited thereto by Father Gifford, his Confessor, who assured him, that, instead of its being a Sin, 'twould be a great Service to the Church to burn and destroy all the Houses of Hereticks; adding, that he had had divers Conferences with Gifford and two Irishmen upon that Affair. Besides, both Stubbs and the Maid-Servant declared, That the Papists were to make an Insurrection in London, and for their Support expected a potent Army from France. Five Jesuits were soon after convicted and executed for the above-mentioned Plot. And these dangerous Proceedings of the Papists so greatly alarmed the Parliament, that the King issued a Proclamation for banishing all Papists from the City of London, and ten Miles of the same.

Meal-Tub Plot.

The Papists, greatly nettled at this Proceeding against them, resolved to revenge themselves upon the Authors thereof; to which End they set about hatching a Plot, (known by the Name of the Meal-Tub Plot) to bring an Odium upon the Presbyterians, and Heads of the Country Party. But Dangerfield, the chief Actor in this Farce, being detected and imprisoned, applied himself to the Lord-Mayor of this City; when, in an ample Confession, he laid open the whole Scene of Iniquity, with a Discovery of the Persons that set him to work.

This wicked Contrivance so highly enraged the Citizens of London against the Papists, that it added much to the annual Solemnity of burning the Pope; for on the seventeenth of November, the Anniversary of Queen Elizabeth's Accession to the Crown, the Ceremony was celebrated with more than ordinary Pomp and Magnificence. The Procession began by a Person on Horseback, who personated the dead Body of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey (murdered by the Papists, for being too active in discovering their late atrocious Crimes) attended by a Bellman, to remind the People of his execrable Murder; next went Priests in Copes, with a large Silver Cross; then Carmelites and Grey Friars, followed by six Jesuits, after whom marched divers Waiters; then several Bishops, some with Lawn Sleeves, and others adorned with Copes and Mitres; next went six Cardinals, who preceded the Pope, enthroned on a stately Pageant, attended by divers Boys with Pots of Incense, and the Devil, as his Prime Minister, whispering him in the Ear. In this Manner they marched about five o'Clock in the Evening from Bishopsgate to Fleet-Street, where they committed his Holiness to the Flames, in the Presence of an innumerable Multitude of Spectators.

Soon after, the Duke of York arriving in London from his Exile in Scotland, was attended by the Lord-Mayor and Common Council; when the Recorder, in their Names, congratulated his safe Arrival; and a few Days after he, together with his Majesty, was sumptuously entertained at Supper by the Lord-Mayor.

Chron. Preci.

On the eighteenth of May following, a very great Storm of Hail happened in this City and Neighbourhood; the Stones whereof being of such a prodigious Size, that the like had not been seen in the Memory of Man, many of which measuring above nine Inches in Circumference, did a great deal of Mischief.

Cook. Life K. Cha. II. A.D. 1680 Hail-stones nine Inches round.

The slow Proceedings of the Court against the Persons concerned in the late horrid Popish Plot being neither agreeable to the Parliament nor City, especially considering that several Persons already tried for that detestable Design, were, by the discountenancing of Witnesses, acquitted; put the Citizens in a violent Ferment, and brought them to a Resolution to prevent all such iniquitous Management for the future, by choosing such Sheriffs as were in the Interest of their Country, and whom they could depend upon to return such Juries, as were sincerely attached to the Protestant Interest, and who would not suffer Traitors to escape, as had been lately done by divers Juries. Wherefore on the Midsummer-Day following, the usual Time for the Election of Sheriffs for the City of London and County of Middlesex, the Citizens in the Interest of their Country put up Slingsby Bethel, and Henry Cornish, whom they carried by a Majority almost double, against Box and Nicholson, put up by the Court. However, a Poll being demanded in behalf of the latter, a Tumult ensued, which Sir James Edwards, the Lord-Mayor, and Jonathan Raymond and Simon Lewis, the Sheriffs, (Devotees to the Court Interest) represented to the King in such a Manner that the same Evening it occasioned him to issue out a Commission of Oyer and Terminer for trying the Rioters. However, Bethel and Cornish being declared Sheriffs with the greatest Acclamations, Thomas Papillon, Esq; presented an Address to the Lord-Mayor, in the Name of the City, "Thereby disowning all tumultuous and disorderly Proceedings in their last Assembly, other than what might be the Effect of Emulation for his Majesty's Service, and the Preservation of their own just Rights; desiring his Lordship to represent the same to the King, and that he would in their Names humbly beseech his Majesty, that the Parliament might speedily assemble." To which the Lord-Mayor replied, "That he had not misrepresented any thing, touching their last Assembly, to his Majesty; that their Address touching the Parliament might have been spared, in regard the King had been pleased to declare to him, and assure him, that the Parliament should sit in October next: However, he would not be wanting with all Humility to lay the whole Matter before him."

The Lord Stafford, being tried and convicted of High Treason, for being concerned in the late Popish Plot, received Sentence to be hanged, drawn and quartered. This Judgment, upon Application to the King, was commuted into Beheading; which Bethel and Cornish, the Sheriffs, entertaining some Scruples about, occasioned their presenting the following Queries to the House of Commons: "1. Whether the King, being neither Judge nor Party, can award the Execution? 2. Whether the Lords can award the Execution? 3. Whether the King can dispense with any Part of the Execution? 4. If the King can dispense with some Part of the Execution, why not all?" But, lest the Commons interfering in the Affair should prevent Stafford's Execution, they were willing he should enjoy his Majesty's Favour of being beheaded.

The King, being informed that the House of Commons was not only resolved upon a vigorous Prosecution against all Persons concerned in the late Popish Conspiracy, but likewise rigorously to prosecute the Bill of Exclusion against the Duke of York, prorogued the Parliament on the tenth of January; which so greatly affected the Citizens of London, that on the thirteenth following the Lord-Mayor and Common Council presented this Petition to his Majesty:

"To the King's most excellent Majesty, the humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled,

Most humbly sheweth,

That your Majesty's great Council in Parliament having in their late Session, in pursuance of your Majesty's Direction, entered upon a strict and impartial Inquiry into the horrid and execrable Popish Plot, which hath been for several Years last past, and still is carried on, for the Destruction of your Majesty's sacred Person and Government, and Extirpation of the Protestant Religion, and the utter Ruin of your Majesty's Protestant Subjects: And having so far proceeded therein, as justly to attain, upon a full Evidence, one of the five Lords impeached for the same, and were in further Prosecution of the remaining four Lords, and other Conspirators therein: And as well the Lords spiritual and temporal, as the Commons, in your said Parliament assembled, having declared, that they are fully satisfied that there now is, and for divers Years last past hath been, a horrid and treasonable Plot and Conspiracy contrived and carried on by those of the Popish Religion in Ireland, for massacring the English, and subverting the Protestant Religion, and the antient established Government of that Kingdom: And your said Commons having impeached the Earl of Tyrone, in order to the bringing him to Justice for the same, and having under Examination other Conspirators in the said Irish Plot:

And your said Commons having likewise impeached Sir William Scroggs, Chief Justice of your Majesty's Court of King's Bench, for Treason, and other great Crimes and Misdemeanors, in endeavouring to subvert the Laws of this Kingdom by his arbitrary and illegal Proceedings; and having voted Impeachments against several other Judges for the like Misdemeanors: Your Petitioners considering the continual Hazards to which your sacred Life, and the Protestant Religion, and the Peace of the Kingdom are exposed, while the Hopes of a Popish Successor give Countenance and Encouragement to the Conspirators in their wicked Designs; and considering also the Disquiet and dreadful Apprehensions of your good Subjects, by reason of the Miseries and Mischiefs which threaten them on all Parts, as well from foreign Powers, as from the Conspiracies within your several Kingdoms, against which no sufficient Remedy can be provided, but by your Majesty and your Parliament; were extremely surprized at the late Prorogation, whereby the Prosecution of the publick Justice of the Kingdom, and the making the Provisions necessary for the Preservation of your Majesty, and your Protestant Subjects, have received an Interruption.

And they are the more affected herewith, by reason of the Experience they have had of the great Progress which the emboldened Conspirators have formerly made in their Designs, during the late frequent Recesses of Parliament: But that which supports them against Despair, is, the Hopes they derive from your Majesty's Goodness, that your Intention was, and does continue, by this Prorogation to make Way for your better Concurrence with the Counsels of your Parliament. And your Petitioners humbly hope, that your Parliament dissolved.

This Petition, instead of answering the Intentions of the Citizens, hastened the Dissolution of the Parliament; and this Proceeding (as will by-and-by appear) was so highly resented by the King, that it seemingly occasioned the Loss of all the Rights and Privileges belonging to the Citizens, by an unjust Seizure of their Charter.

City Election of new Members of Parliament.

The Parliament, as already hinted, being soon after dissolved, and Writs issued for a new Election, the Citizens set heartily about the Work; and, notwithstanding the mighty Struggle made by the Court Party, on the fourth of February they chose their four late worthy Representatives, Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Thomas Playe, Thomas Pilkington, and William Love, Esqrs. These honourable Patriots were no sooner re-elected, than the following Paper of Instructions was delivered to them, in the Name of the Citizens then in Common Hall assembled, containing a "Return of their most hearty Thanks for their faithful and unwearied Endeavours, in the two last Parliaments, to search into and discover the Depth of the Popish Plot, to preserve his Majesty's Royal Person, the Protestant Religion, and the well-established Government of this Realm, to secure the Meeting and Sitting of frequent Parliaments, to assert our undoubted Rights of Petitioning, and to punish such as have betrayed those Rights, to promote the long-wished-for Union of his Majesty's Protestant

NUMB. XL.

"Subjects, to repeal the thirty-fifth of Elizabeth, and the Corporation Act; and more especially for their assiduous Endeavours in promoting the Bill of Exclusion of James Duke of York." In fine, they concluded, "That being confidently assured, that they the said Members for the City will never consent to the granting any Money Supply, till they have effectually secured them against Popery and arbitrary Power, they resolved, by God's Assistance, to stand by their said Members with their Lives and Fortunes."

Most of the old Members being re-elected in the several Parts of the Kingdom, these Instructions were copied after by most of the Electors, and delivered to their several Representatives for their Regulation.

The foregoing Regulations of the several Markets being highly approved, the Common Council proceeded to take into Consideration the several Acts and Regulations touching the Weighing of Goods and Merchandize at the King's Beam; which being found insufficient to prevent Abuses in that valuable Privilege, granted by Charter to this City; and taking into Consideration the Increase of the Trade thereof, and being desirous to encourage both the Seller and Buyer of all Goods and Merchandizes, usually bought and sold by Weight, to make use of the said King's Beam, to the Intent that Right may be done between the Buyer and Seller; they, after reciting the antient usual Rates and Duties paid for weighing of Goods and Merchandize at the said Beam to be as follows, viz. for Iron the Ton xxd. Madder the Bale xvi d. every Draught from 14 lb. to 4 Cwt. vi d. from 4 Cwt. to 6 Cwt. xii d. from 6 Cwt. to 8 Cwt. iis. from 8 Cwt. to 10 Cwt. iii s. iv d. from 10 Cwt. to 12 Cwt. iv s. viii d. from 12 Cwt. and upwards vi s. viii d. (the which Rates were at all Times paid, three Parts by the Seller, and the other fourth Part by the Buyer) declare, "That an Abatement shall be made of the antient Rates and Duties unto all Persons that shall be Sellers to the Freeman of the said City, in Manner and under the Provisoos and Conditions following, viz. That the Freeman of this City, buying of a Foreigner or Unfreeman any Goods and Merchandizes usually sold by Weight, shall from henceforth be wholly acquitted of the said fourth Part of the said Duties and Rates which have been paid by the Freeman Buyer thereof: And that Unfreemen and Foreigners, selling to a Freeman of the said City, shall henceforth be abated out of the said antient Duties and Rates, and pay as followeth, viz. Whereas the Seller, being an Unfreeman or Foreigner, for his Part of the said antient Duties and Rates due by Prescription, ought to pay for every Draught from 14 lb. to 4 Cwt. four Pence Halfpenny; the Foreigner and Unfreeman shall pay from 14 lb. to 1 Cwt. but iid. And also for the weighing of Figs and Lipara Raisons by the Barrel, not exceeding 2 Cwt. ii d. and from 1 Cwt. to 4 Cwt. but iii d. And whereas the Foreigners and Unfreemen ought to pay for every Draught from 4 Cwt. to 6 Cwt. ix d. there shall be paid but vi d. And whereas the “ being his Majesty's free-born Subject, or made “ a Denizen, or naturalized according to Law, “ shall at any Time hereafter be desirous to be-

 “ to the Scale shall be in such Case at the “ Weighers Charge.

“ Provided always, That when and as often “ as the Duties and Rates mentioned in the De“ claration of Common Council of this City, “ intitled, A Declaration touching the Weighing of “ Goods and Merchandizes at the King's Beams, to “ be taken for weighing of Goods and Mer-

“ And forasmuch as the Weigh-house, before “ the late dreadful Fire which happened in “ London, Anno 1666, was, and Time out of “ Mind hath been, the common Market ap“ pointed for the buying and selling of Hops

"And it was further enacted, That no Tackle-Porter, Ticket-Porter, or Fellowship-Porter, or any other Porter (after the Sale of any of the Goods and Merchandizes of any Foreigners or Unfreemen, that are usually bought and sold by Weight) shall from henceforth presume to intermeddle or work within this City, or Liberties thereof, in the weighing of any such Goods or Merchandizes, for any Persons whatsoever, unless such Porter or Porters shall be thereunto appointed by one of the Weighers, or other Officers appointed, or to be appointed, to attend the said Beams by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City; upon Pain that every such Porter that shall offend contrary hereunto, upon due Proof thereof by one or more Witnesses to be made upon Oath before the said Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, shall by Order of the said Court be discharged, and put out of the Fellowship or Society of Porters, to which such Offender or Offenders at the Time of his or their Offences shall belong.

"And it was further enacted, That one Act of Common Council, made the second Day of February, Anno Domini 1658, in the Time of the Mayoralty of John Ireton, for the Regulation of the said common Beams, commonly called the King's Beams; and also that one other Act of Common Council, made the twenty-third Day of October, in the twenty-fourth Year of his now Majesty's Reign, in the Time of the Mayoralty of Sir George Waterman, Knight, intitled, An Act for the weighing of Goods at the King's Beam; and all and every the Clauses and Branches in the said several Acts of Common Council contained, and all other Acts of Common Council repugnant hereunto, are hereby repealed, annulled, and made void, to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever.

"And it was also enacted, That if any Weigher of the said King's Beams, or other Officer, now appointed or to be appointed by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City to attend the said Beams, shall at any Time hereafter, directly or indirectly, take or receive of any Person or Persons whatsoever any Fee, Gift, or Reward, for weighing of the Goods and Merchandizes appointed to be weighed, otherwise than by the said Declaration of Common Council is directed; or if such Weigher or other Officer, appointed or to be appointed as aforesaid, shall not from henceforth on every Saturday Afternoon give a fair and just Account, to the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, of the Monies by him or them received for the Rates and Duties as aforesaid, and of whom received, and pay the same into the Chamber of London, for the Use of the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of this City; That then every such Offender, being convicted of such Offence, either by his own Confession, or by the Oath of one or more credible Witnesses, to be taken before the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of this City, shall ipso facto be discharged and removed out of his said Place or Office.

"And it was further enacted, That the Chamberlain of the City for the Time being shall from henceforth pay unto the Lord-Mayor of the City of London for the Time being the Sum of forty Pounds per Annum out of the Profits of the said Beams, in Consideration of his particular Care and Trouble to be given in the Management of this Affair, and of the Advantages formerly accruing to the Lord-Mayor of this City; and that all other Profits to be made and raised out of the Duties of the said Beams, all necessary Charges being first deducted, shall wholly be to the Use of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of this City, to be paid and accounted for accordingly to the Chamberlain of the said City for the Time being, and to no other Use or Purpose whatsoever."

In this same Year (October 15) the Citizens also took into their Consideration the several Abuses and Impositions of Carters, Carmen, and the Dealers in Coals; which produced an Act of Common Council for the better Government of Cars, Carts, Carroons, Carters and Carmen, and for the Prevention of Frauds in the Buying and Selling of Coals: By which it was enacted, That the Act made for that same Purpose on the second of April, 1677, in the Mayoralty of Sir Thomas Davies, Knight, should be repealed: That the Government of all Cars, Carts, Carters and Carmen, and of all other Persons that do work or use Cars and Carts in London or its Liberties for Hire, shall be in the President and Governors of Christ's-Hospital: That their Number shall be limited to four hundred and twenty: That each of them shall have the Arms of this City upon its Shaft, and a Piece of Brads with the Number upon it: That all Persons working Cars or Carts for Hire, without Licence, shall forfeit thirteen Shillings and four Pence: That no Wharfinger, Woodmonger, or other Retailer of Fuel, shall work or use any unlicensed Car or Cart, under the Penalty of thirteen Shillings and four Pence for every Offence; for which Cars or Carts they shall pay as for the Carriage of other Goods and Commodities: Provided that Coals, Fuel, or other Goods, Wares and Merchandize brought from the Country, or carried into the Country from London, shall not be subject to the Penalties of this Act, and that every Retailer of Fuel may bring home to his own House or Wharf all manner of Fuel by and with his own or with any Car or Cart.

THE Court at this Time, finding itself very much gravelled in their arbitrary Proceedings by the Sheriffs of London, began to interest themselves in the Election of those Officers more than ever: But the Citizens, imagining that their Lives, Liberties, and Estates chiefly depended upon the Integrity of such Men, so effectually bestirred themselves therein, that they chose Thomas Pilkington and Samuel Shute, Esqrs, Men in all Respects qualified for so great a Trust; which the King, at a convenient Opportunity, shewed his Dislike of: For, on the thirteenth of October, Sir George Treby, the Recorder, and the said Sheriffs, were sent to intreat his Majesty to honour the City at Dinner in Guildhall, on the approaching Lord-Mayor's Day. To which he answered, "Mr. Recorder, An Invitation from my Lord-Mayor and the City is very acceptable to me; and to shew that it is so, notwithstanding that it is brought by Messengers so unwelcome to me as those two Sheriffs are, yet I accept it." However, it was observed, that his Majesty had just before condescended to a much meaner Thing, by distinguishing the loyal Apprentices of London, in giving them a Brace of Bucks for Dinner at Sadlers-Hall, on the fourth of August; and, as a further Honour, sent divers of his principal Courtiers to dine with them, and ordered his Son, the Duke of Grafton, to serve as one of the Stewards.

A.D. 1682

The Duke of York's Picture in Guildhall being very much cut and mangled by a Person unknown, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, to remove the Imputation of that Offence from the City, did, by a solemn Order of the twenty-seventh of January, declare their Abhorrence of this great Indignity, saying, that it could be no otherwise understood, than the Effects of an impotent Malice against his Royal Highness; and therefore, out of a just and due Regard to his Honour, and their deep Repentment of that insolent and villainous Act, offered a Reward of five hundred Pounds for discovering the Author. And when the Duke of York arrived in this City from Scotland, on the tenth of April, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Recorder, who, in the Name of the City, congratulated him on his happy Return, attended him to St. James's: And soon after he was solemnly invited by the Artillery Company to their annual Feast at Merchant-Taylors Hall; which, as their Captain-General, he accepted of; and at the Time prefixed, attended by a great Number of the Nobility, and other Personages, he was there entertained in a very splendid and elegant Manner.

A publick Meeting proposed by the Citizens against the Duke's Succession.

The Citizens and others that were most active against Popery and the Duke's Succession, to shew and improve their Strength, and, as it were, in Opposition to the Duke's Entertainment, appointed a publick Meeting, with a Sermon and a Dinner, as is usual among publick Societies. The Guests were invited by a Ticket of this Tenor: "It having pleased Almighty God, by his wonderful Providence, to deliver and protest his Majesty's Person, the Protestant Religion, and English Liberties hitherto, from the hellish and frequent Attempts of their Enemies the Papists; in Testimony of Thankfulness herein, and for preserving and improving mutual Love and Charity among such as are sensible thereof, you are desired to meet many of the Loyal Protestant Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Citizens, on Friday the twenty-first of this Instant April, 1682, at Ten of the Clock, at St. Michael's Church in Cornhill, there to hear a Sermon, and from thence to go to Haberdashers-Hall to Dinner; and to bring this Ticket with you." This voluntary and amicable Proposition was represented to the Court to be of a dangerous Consequence; wherefore the following Order of Council was made on the nineteenth of the said Month, to prevent their meeting:

"Whereas the Appointment of publick Fasts and Thanksgivings is Matter of State, and belongs only to his Majesty, by his Prerogative; and his Majesty being informed, that in the City of London Invitations have been made of great and unusual Numbers, by printed Tickets, one of which is hereunto annexed; his Majesty looks upon the same as an insolent Attempt, in manifest Derogation of his Right, and of dangerous Consequence; the Matter of the said Invitation being of a publick Nature, and the Manner of carrying it on tending to Sedition, and raising Distinctions and Confederacies amongst his Subjects, against the known Laws and Peace of the Kingdom: His Majesty therefore, by the Advice of his Council, hath thought fit, and doth hereby strictly charge and command the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, as they will answer the contrary at their Peril, to take immediate and effectual Care to prevent and hinder the said Meeting, as an unlawful Assembly; and all Sheriffs, Constables, and other his Majesty's Officers in the said City, are hereby commanded to be aiding and assisting therein."

Ibid.
Forbidden by Order of Council.

At this Time Party-Matters running very high in the City, each Side exerted themselves in a very extraordinary Manner to secure the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex in their Interest; therefore Sir John Moor, the Lord-Mayor, willing to run all Lengths to serve the Court, resolved to secure one of the Sheriffs in the same Interest for the Year ensuing, by insisting on his Right of Nomination, by the Ceremony of Drinking to one of his Fellow-Citizens; and accordingly, says my Author, (who at the very Time published a true and impartial Account of the Proceedings of the Common-Hall of the City of London at Guildhall, on the twenty-fourth of June, 1682, for electing of Sheriffs) at the Bridge-House Feast, the 18th of May last, his Lordship was pleased to pass the Compliment of Drinking to Dudley North, Esq; a Ceremony, whereby the Person so drank to has been looked upon as put in Nomination, or to be, in the Judgment of the Chair, a very fit Man to be one of the Sheriffs, if the Common-Hall shall elect him.

Proceedings of the Common-Hall for Election of Sheriffs on June 24, 1682.

Soon after, Mr. North, before he was chosen by the Common-Hall, and indeed a considerable Time before the Day of Election, merely upon such my Lord's drinking to him, came to a Court of Aldermen, and gave Bond to hold Sheriff.

The Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor then issued forth his Precept to the respective Companies; but it ran in an unaccustomed Form, as followeth:

"By the Mayor.

"These are to require you, That on Midsummer-Day next, being the Day appointed as well for Confirmation of the Person who hath been BY ME CHOSEN, according to the antient Custom and Constitution of this City, to be one of the Sheriffs of this City and County of Middlesex for the Year ensuing, as for the Election of the other of the said Sheriffs, and other Officers, you cause the Livery of your Company to meet together at your common Hall early in the Morning, and from thence to come together decently and orderly in their Gowns to Guildhall, there to make the said Confirmation and Election. Given the nineteenth of June, 1682.

"JOHN MOOR."

This occasioned much Discourse and some Distraction amongst the Companies, some issuing out their Summons to their Members, To meet and chuse Sheriffs, &c. (as antiently) others (after this new Mode) for Confirmation and Election, and some only for Electing City-Officers.

On Friday, the twenty-third of June, the Matter being taken into Debate at the Court of Aldermen, after some Time it was desired that Mr. Recorder would deliver his Sentiment; who, in a judicious Speech, gave his Opinion, That the Right of Election of both the Sheriffs lay in the Commonalty, and that the Sheriffs pro tempore were Judges of the Poll, if any were: And the whole Court acquiesced therein. Whereupon some Companies that had sent forth Summons for Confirmation and Election awarded new ones for Election only.

On Midsummer-Day, the annual appointed Time for Choice, the Liverymen assembled in Common-Hall very numerous; and, after the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen were come upon the Hustings, the Common-Crier made Proclamation and said to this Purpose, You Gentlemen of the Livery of London, attend your Confirmation. Upon which the Common-Hall vigorously interrupted, and cried, No Confirmation! No Confirmation! and so continued urging their Right in that Behalf near half an Hour, not suffering him to go on. After which Mr. Recorder stepped upon the Hustings, and made a Speech; wherein he set forth the Excellency of Government in general, and the Happiness particularly of our own, and especially of this great and opulent City, more immediately as to their great Privilege of chusing their own Sheriffs, citing for the same the Grant in the Charter of King John, &c.

The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen then withdrew, and Mr. Common-Serjeant offering to speak, the Common-Hall cried, Election! Election! and the Work of the Day! But the Sheriffs desiring their Patience, he went on, and spake a few Words, relating in general to the Business of the Day.

The Hall then proceeded in the usual antient Method; and, the Contest about Confirmation being relinquished, there were put in Nomination for Sheriffs the before-named Dudley North, Thomas Papillon, John Dubois, and Ralph Box, Esquires.

Upon View of the Hands, the Election was declared to fall upon Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois, they having apparently the Majority by a thousand or twelve hundred Hands. But however a Poll was demanded and granted for all the said four Candidates.

Between Two and Three o'Clock the Poll began, eight or nine Books and Writers being prepared in Guildhall-Yard, and Persons appointed to inspect them on either Side. It was desired by some, that a distinct Column might be for such as were for Confirmation; but that being resolved in the Negative, and the only Dispute now not being for or against Confirmation, but which two of the four Gentlemen should be chosen by the Common-Hall for Sheriffs, the same was refused as impracticable and impertinent, but all left at Liberty to poll for which of the four Competitors they pleased. Yet some few factious and troublesome Men, only to create Occasion for Cavil, demanded to be polled for Confirmation, (as they called it) yet refused to declare who they would confirm, or name any that they would poll for, and yet complained to the Court of Aldermen, and some of them (as particularly Mr. Masters in St. Paul's Church-yard) offered to make Oath, that they were denied or refused to be polled.

It was to be taken Notice of, that there were fluttering up and down the Hall a great many Swordmen and hectoring Persons, (no Citizens) who insolently affronted People; as some of them did Mr. Recorder, and others some of the Aldermen and Citizens; giving unreasonable and almost insufferable Provocations, especially in the Afternoon, on purpose, as 'tis reasonably believed, to cause some Disturbance; but the Moderation of the Citizens was such, as scorned to take Notice of these foolish Extravagants, further than modestly to reprove their Want of Respect to Authority, and their Incivility.

It appearing that the Suffrages were likely to fall upon Papillon and Dubois, several that were for North and Box applied themselves to my Lord-Mayor, suggesting as if they were denied to poll, and that many of their Party were absent, and the like Complaints; which occasioned his Lordship's coming to the Hall, (some People following very rudely, with Huzzas and unusual Clamour.) His Honour sending for the Sheriffs into the Council-Chamber, they excused themselves for the present, being busy in the Work of the Day, but promised to wait on his Lordship as soon as the Poll concluded. His Lordship came to the Polling-Place, and seemed to forbid the further Proceeding in the Poll; but the Sheriffs offered several Reasons why they ought to go on, being in the legal Discharge of their Office, and so proceeded.

About Seven o'Clock in the Evening, the Mayor, and some few Aldermen, came to the Hustings (the Sheriffs being still polling in the Yard); where the Common-Crier, by Direction from from his Lordship, spoke to the promiscuous Company in the Hall to this Effect; All you that were summoned to appear here this Day, are required to depart, and to give your Attendance on Tuesday, at Nine o'Clock in the Morning. But, omitting to mention the Occasion, some of the People asked, For what? But the Generality called a Poll! a Poll! However, his Lordship being gone, the Sheriffs continued the Poll as before, intending, for the Ease of their Fellow-Citizens, to have dispatched it that Night; but it growing near Nine o'Clock at Night, and there being present some small Number of Persons who then unseasonably demanded to be polled, the Sheriffs thought fit to adjourn into the Hall for half an Hour: In which Time there were assembled in the great Hall three or four thousand People, calling out, a Hall! a Hall! a Hall! until the Sheriffs came upon the Hustings, and then Mr. Sheriff Skute spoke to this Effect: Gentlemen, we have had a Poll To-day; and we, the Sheriffs, as we are the King's Ministers, so we have done and will all therein with all Fairness and Hengty, as becomes us. My Lord-Mayor hath taken upon him to adjourn this Court; but we do now tell you, that we do adjourn this Court until Tuesday Morning Nine o'Clock, then to declare the Poll, or to poll any such as have Right to poll, and have not yet polled already.

Then the Sheriffs went home, attended with great Multitudes of Citizens, following them with loud and grateful Acclamations of, God bless the Protestant Sheriffs, God bless Papillion and Dubois, &c. However, upon the Complaint of the Mayor, that he was there jostled almost off his Legs, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs were commanded to attend the Privy Council the Monday following; and, being severally examined concerning the late Riot, Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Skute, the Sheriffs, and Alderman Cornish, were committed Prisoners to the Tower of London, by a Warrant signed by twenty-four Privy-Counsellors; who at the same Time gave Orders to the Attorney-General to exhibit an Information in the Court of King's-Bench against them, and all such as, upon Examination, should be found to have been Promoters and Encouragers of the late Tumult, to be proceeded against to the utmost Severity of the Law.

On the Friday following the said Prisoners were, by a Writ of Habeas Corpus, carried by the Lieutenant of the Tower to the King's-Bench Bar; where having pleaded Not Guilty, they were admitted to Bail: Whereupon the Sheriffs met a Common-Hall on the first of July; when the Lord-Mayor, tho' indisposed, sent an Order to the Recorder, to adjourn the Hall to the seventh following; but the Sheriffs, again denying the Validity of such Adjournment, proceeded in the Election, and declared Papillion and Dubois duly elected.

Pursuant to this Adjournment, the Lord-Mayor and his Party met on the seventh of July, and heard Council on the Validity of the late Adjournments; but, coming to no Conclusion, the Court was again adjourned to the fourteenth; at which Time the following Order of Council was produced:

"His Majesty being informed by the Lord-Mayor, and divers of the Aldermen of London,

"that the Disorders and Riots arisen in the City, upon the Day appointed for the Election of Sheriffs, have been chiefly occasioned by the Proceedings of the Common-Hall in an irregular Way, contrary to what hath been antiently accustomed; his Majesty, by the Advice of his Council, hath thought fit, for the better keeping of the Peace of the City, to direct, and hereby to require the Lord-Mayor to maintain and preserve entire the antient Customs of the City; and, for the better doing thereof, to take effectual Order, that, at the Common-Hall to be held To-morrow, all Proceedings be begun anew, and carried on in the usual Manner, as they ought to have been upon the twenty-fourth of June last."

This Order being read in the Common-Hall, it was vigorously opposed by many of the most eminent Citizens, as an Innovation, tending to destroy their antient Rights and Privileges. However, the Lord-Mayor, in Obedience to the said Order, declared North duly elected by him, without the Sanction of a Common-Hall; and then proceeded to a Poll for another Sheriff, to which none coming that had voted for Papillion and Dubois at the former Election, Box was chosen without Opposition; and North and he were returned duly elected; while Papillion and Dubois were left to seek their Remedy at Law.

On the twenty-seventh of the same Month, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen re-assembled in Guildhall; where, for their greater Security, a Company of Train'd-Bands were posted. Thither great Numbers of Citizens resorted from all Parts, and required an Answer to their late Petition, for the swearing in of Papillion and Dubois, as Sheriffs for the Year ensuing; whereupon some of the principal of them being called in, they received, as final, this disagreeable Answer:

"Gentlemen,

"This Court hath considered of your Petition, and will take Care that such Persons shall take the Office of Sheriffs upon them as are duly elected, according to Law, and the antient Customs of this City; and in this, and all other Things, this Court will endeavour to maintain the Rights and Privileges of the Chair, and of the whole City; and wherein ye think we do otherwise, the Law must judge between us."

Mr. Box, it seems, being sensible that the Manner of his Election could not be legally justified, prudently declined serving the Office of Sheriff, by paying the accustomed Fine of Exemption. Wherefore 'twas necessary to proceed to a new Election; to which End a Common-Hall was summoned, wherein Mr. Peter Birch (Bishop Burnet calls him Rich) was chosen; who, together with Mr. North, was sworn before the Lord-Mayor.

The Violence and Injustice, with which this Matter was managed, shewed that the Court was resolved to carry their Point at any Rate; and this gave great Occasion of Jealousy that some wicked Design was on Foot; for which it was necessary, in the first Place, to be sure of favourable Juries.

And it appears also to have been the Opinion of others; for Lord Ruffel takes Notice of these Proceedings in his dying Words, after the same Manner, and concludes, That he was not much surprized to find the Consequence to fall upon himself.

Soon after, Sir William Hooker and Sir Henry Tulse, Aldermen of this City, informed against their Brother, Alderman Pilkington, for saying, That the Duke of York has fired this City, and is now come to cut our Throats. The Duke commenced a Process against Pilkington for Scandalum Magnatum, which was tried on the twenty-fourth of November, when the Jury gave the Plaintiff no less than an exorbitant Sum of one hundred thousand Pounds Damage. So forward were the Juries of this Time to oblige the Court at the Expence of the Ruin of their Fellow-Citizens! Whereupon Pilkington surrendered himself in Discharge of his Bail; and North, one of the Sheriffs, was chosen to succeed him as Alderman.

At the Time, as 'twas sworn, that Pilkington reflected upon the Duke of York, besides Hooker and Tulse, Sir Patience Ward, the late Lord-Mayor, was also present; who, upon Pilkington's Trial, deposed, That, to the best of his Remembrance, he did not hear the Words spoken, said to be criminal. This seems to have been Crime enough; for, two having sworn it, it must of Course be true; and the third, for not hearing it, must be deemed perjured; therefore Ward was indicted and convicted of Perjury: Which occasioned a certain Historian to say, that Juries at that Time were a Reproach to Religion, and a Scandal to the Nation.

The sixth of June, 1683, at a Common Council this Day, a Report was brought into this Court, by the Committee appointed to inspect the Acts and Proceedings entered into the Journals of this Court in the Times of Usurpation, or at any Time before or since, that might be fit to be explained or repealed. The Tenor of which Report is as followeth; that is to say,

Report of

the Committee to inspect the Acts, &c. in the Time
of the Usurpation.

"To the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London.

"Whereas, by a late Order of this honourable Court, it was referred unto them, whose Names are subscribed, [These were Sir William Turner, Sir James Edwards, Sir John Moor, Sir Henry Tulse, Sir Thomas Langham, Francis Griffith, Nathaniel Hawes, Henry Leads, Peter Aikworth, Nicholas Charlton, and Thomas Vernon] to inspect the Acts and other Proceedings entered in the Journal of this Court in the Times of Usurpation, or at any Times, &c. that may be thought fit to be explained or repealed, they did humbly certify, that, in Pursuance of the said Order, they had perused and examined those Journals, wherein they found not only many Innovations and Irregularities brought into that Court, and the Government of the City, but also most pernicious and abominable Proceedings, in abetting and carrying on those wicked and unnatural Divisions then raised in the Kingdom, and serving the Usurpations of those Times; all or most of which, they persuaded themselves, could never have had Place

"in this Court, had not Violence been offered to the Government of the City. The Lord-Mayor first arraigned and imprisoned, divers loyal Aldermen and Commoners were, some imprisoned, others displaced, and all loyal Citizens generally discountenanced and discouraged; and others of factious, unquiet, and turbulent Spirits got themselves into the Common Council, and made up the greater Number therein. That all these Actions and Proceedings might (as they deserved) be obliterated and wholly expunged, that no Remembrance thereof might be transmitted to Posterity, to the Shame and Dishonour of this Court and City; but that other Matters were therewith all intermixed, which (for the Substance of them) were, in their Opinion, inoffensive, useful, and fit to be continued. That several Committees had been appointed formerly by this Court to obliterate the said unjust Proceedings; and there were Lines crossed over divers of them, which they presumed were made by the said Committees: But not being thereby obliterated, but still remaining in the Books of the Acts and Proceedings of this Court, and having never been particularly proclaimed and repealed by any Vote or Act of this Court, that they had observed, they thought it were fitting that the said and all other like disloyal and irregular Proceedings should, by an express Act of this Council, be renounced, repealed, and made absolutely null and void. Which Proceedings, or the most of them, they set down and presented to this Court for that Purpose; and desired, that some few of them might be openly read, to beget in this Court, as it hath done in them, a just Abhorrence and Detestation of such Proceedings."

And then followed a Catalogue of them from the Year 1641, and so yearly down to the Year 1657.

"All which Particulars (as the said Committee did proceed) being highly disloyal, and favouring of the Faction and Usurpation of those unhappy Times, they thought fit, should by Act of this Court be disclaimed, revoked, abrogated, and repealed to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever; both to demonstrate the Love and good Affection of the present Members of this Court to his Majesty, and the established Government, and to vindicate them from all Imputations of the like pernicious Principles and Practices, and express their Dislike of all factious Innovations. So also will it prevent any ill Use that may be made in Time to come of the said irregular Actions."

After the Reading of which Reports openly in the Court, they were approved of, and agreed to and confirmed. And then the Court proceeded to consider a Bill proposed to regulate the Election of Sheriffs; when it was enacted, That a Freeman chosen should be fined four hundred Pounds, an Alderman six hundred Pounds, if they refused to serve the Office of Sheriff.

These Animosities and Divisions in the City put the Court upon a Resolution to deprive it of the Power of electing its own Sheriffs; and, for the accomplishing so politick an End, no Expedient dient could be thought of so effectual as the taking away their Charter, which would not only give the Ministry an Opportunity of making a Common-Hall, but likewise open a Way to that of a House of Commons, (about four Fifths whereof being Burgeses and Barons of the Cinque Ports;) for who would dare to contest their Charters, if the City of London could not hold hers by Law? Therefore, in the Michaelmas Term following, a Quo Warranto was brought against the City, contrary to Justice, the City Charters, and all the Rights and Privileges of the Citizens therein contained.

Sir Robert Sawyer was at that Time Attorney-General; who, as Bishop Burnet says, was a dull, hot Man, and forward to serve all the Designs of the Court. He undertook, by the Advice of Sanders, the Lord Chief Justice, a learned, but a very immoral Man, to overthrow the Charter.

That which gave the Occasion of the King's causing this Quo Warranto to be brought against this City's Charter, was a Petition the Court of Aldermen and City made to the King, upon his Prorogation of the Parliament, when they were going to try several noble Persons upon the Popish Plot; and for their printing and publishing the said Petition, which was looked upon as seditious, and possessing the People with an ill Opinion of the King and his Government. Another Pretence was, that the City had imposed new Taxes on their Wharfs and Markets, which was an Invasion of the Liberty of the Subject, and contrary to Law. It was said, that all the Crown gave was forfeitable back to the Crown again upon a Malversation of the Body; and that, as the Common Council was the Body of the City, chosen by all the Citizens, so they were all involved in what the Common Council did: And they inferred, that since they had both scandalized the King's Government, and oppressed their Fellow-Subjects, they had thereupon forfeited their Liberties.

The Information set forth, "That the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, by the Space of a Month last past, and more, used, and yet did claim to have or use, without any lawful Warrant or regal Grant, within the City of London aforesaid, the Liberties and Privileges of the same City, viz. these Liberties and Privileges following: 1. To be of themselves a Body Politick, by the Name of Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London. 2. To be Sheriffs of the City of London and County of Middlesex, and to name, elect, make, and constitute them. 3. That the Mayor and Aldermen of the said City were Justices of Peace, and held Sessions of Peace. All which Liberties, Privileges, and Franchises, the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of London, upon the King, had by the Space aforesaid usurped, and yet did usurp."

And the great Arguments insisted upon, whereby it was endeavoured to be proved that the City had forfeited their Liberties and Privileges, were these:

1. Because they took Authority to levy Money upon the King's Subjects to their proper Use, by Colour of Laws and Ordinances by them de facto ordained; and in the Prosecution thereof the seventeenth of September, 26 Car. II. in Common Council, published a Law for the levying of several Sums of Money, of all that came to the publick Markets within the City to sell Provisions, viz. of every Person for every Horse-Load of Provisions two Pence per Day: For every Cart not drawn with more than three Horses four Pence per Day; if drawn with more than three Horses, six Pence per Day; and, if any paid them not, then to be removed from their Place in the Market. And that, by Colour of this Law, the Mayor, &c. had for seven Years received great Sums of Money, amounting to five thousand Pounds per Annum, in Oppression of the King's Subjects.

2. That the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, on the thirteenth of January, 32 Car. II. (Sir Patience Ward then being Mayor) in their Common Council did give their Votes, that a certain Petition, under the Name of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, should be exhibited to the King; the Import whereof was, that by the Prorogation of the Parliament (which was from the tenth of January, 32 Car. II. to the twentieth of January then next ensuing) the Prosecution of the publick Justice of the Kingdom, and the making necessary Provisions for the Preservation of the King, and of his Protestant Subjects, had received Interruption; and that they did order the said Petition to be printed, and the same was printed accordingly: Which was charged and aggravated upon the City to be done unlawfully, maliciously, advisedly, and seditiously, with Intention that the said Petition might be dispersed among the King's Subjects, to the Hatred of the King's Person and Government, and to disturb the Peace of the Kingdom."

The Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, in Rejoinder, (as to the former Argument) pleaded by protesting, "That those Pleas, by the Attorney pleaded, were insufficient in Law to forejudge or exclude the Mayor and Commonalty from being a Corporation: Protesting also, that no Act or Deed or By-Law, made by the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. is an Act or Deed of the Body Corporate. Lastly, protesting that they, the Mayor and Commonalty, &c. never took upon them any unlawful or unjust Authority to tax the King's Subjects coming to Market such yearly Sums as were alledged."

"That London is the Metropolis of England, and very populous, & celeberrimum Imperium totius Europe."

"That there are, and Time out of Mind have been, divers publick Markets for Provision and Merchandize within the said City to be sold."

"That the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens have been, Time out of Mind, and yet are, seized of these Markets in Fee, and by all the said Time at their own Costs and Expences have provided, and have accustomed and ought to provide, at their own Costs, Places for the holding the said Markets, and Stalls and Standings, and other Accommodations for Persons bringing

"bringing Provisions and Merchandizes to the "said Markets, and Supervisors and other Officers "for the better preserving and ordering the said
 "Markets, and of the great Concourse of Per"sons coming to the same; and for the sustain"ing and supporting of the said Costs and Ex-"pences, by all the Time aforesaid have had,
 "and ought to have, reasonable Tolls, Rates,
 "or Sums of Money, of Persons coming to the "said Markets, for their Stalls, Standings, and "other Accommodations by them, for the bet"ter exposing their Commodities, had and en"joyed.

"They further say, that the Citizens and Free"men of London are very numerous, viz. 50000
 "and more.

"That within the said City there hath been,
 "Time out of Mind, a Common Council as"sembled, as often as necessary, consisting of the "Mayor, Aldermen, and of certain of the Ci"tizens, not exceeding two hundred and fifty "Persons, thereto annually elected, called the "Commons of the said City.

"That there is a Custom within the said City
 "for the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Coun"cil, to make By-Laws and Ordinances for the "Regulation and Government of the publick
 "Markets within the City.

"That these Liberties and Customs of the City
 "were confirmed by Magna Charta, and other
 "Statutes.

"That by Reason of the burning of the City
 "in September, 1666, and the Alterations in the "Market-Houses and Places thereby occasioned,
 "for the establishing and resettling the Markets
 "within the City, Sept. 17, 26 Car. II. the then "Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Com"mon Council assembled, according to the said
 "Custom, for the better Regulation of the said
 "Market, did make and publish an Ordinance,
 "entitled, An Act for the Settlement and Well- ordering the publick Markets within the City of London; by which said Ordinance reciting "that, for the Accommodation of the Market-
 "People with the Stalls, Shelters, and other Ne"cessaries for their Standing in the Markets, and "for the Amendment, Paving, and Cleansing of "the Market-Places, and for the Support and "Defraying of the incident Charges thereof, there "have been always certain reasonable Rates and "Duties paid for the same. And to the Intent
 "that the said Rates may be ascertained and made
 "publick to all Market-People, and the Col"lectors restrained from exacting—it was enacted
 "and ordained by the said Common Council,
 "that the Rates and Sums in the Replication
 "should be paid to the Use of the Mayor and "Commonalty and Citizens; or, upon Refusal, to "be removed out of the Market. And they aver,
 "that these are all the Rates or Duties paid, and "were reasonable Sums to be paid; and these
 "they have demanded and received for the Use
 "and Purpose aforesaid, as was lawful for them
 "to do."

"As to the other Matter alledged by the At"torney-General in assigning the Forfeiture, they "say,

"That within this Kingdom, viz. at the "Parish of St. Michael Bassishaw, London, there "was an execrable Plot and Conspiracy pro"secuted by Papists to destroy the King, and "to subvert the antient Government, and sup"press the true Religion in this Kingdom esta"blished.

"That Sir Edmundbury Godfrey took Exa"minations of Witnesses, and Informations of "the same; and also of the Burning of London by "the Papists.

"That divers of the Conspirators had lain
 "in wait for him, and murdered him, to the "Intent to suppress his Examination, and to "deter other Magistrates from acting in the "Discovery.

"That Green and others were tried and hanged
 "for this Murder.

"That Coleman and others were also tried and "executed for the same Conspiracy.

"That William Lord Powis, Lord Arundel of Warder, Lord Petre, Lord Bellasis, were im"peached by the Commons in Parliament of "High Treason for the same Conspiracies, and "sent to the Tower.

"That the King, in his Speech to that Parlia"ment, had recommended to them the further
 "Pursuit and Examination of that Conspiracy,
 "declaring, he thought not himself nor them
 "safe, till that Matter was gone through with;
 "and therefore it was necessary that the said Lords
 "in the Tower should be brought to their Trial,
 "that Justice might be done: And the Parlia"ment having made an Address to the King,
 "wherein both Lords and Commons declared
 "their being deeply sensible of the sad Condition "of the Realm, occasioned chiefly by the Con"spiracies of a Popish Party, who had plotted "and intended the Destruction of the King, and "Subversion of the Government and Religion
 "of the Kingdom: And thereupon a solemn "Fast was kept, pursuant to the King's Pro"clamation, grounded upon the said Address,
 "and divers Bills prepared to be passed into "Laws for Preservation of his Protestant "Subjects.

"These Impeachments and Bills being thus "depending, and the Lords in the Tower not "tried, the Parliament was, upon the tenth of "January, prorogued, as the Attorney-General
 "above in his Replication hath alledged; by "Reason whereof the Citizens and Inhabitants of "the said City, being faithful Subjects to the "King, were much disquieted with the Sense
 "and Apprehensions of the Danger threatening
 "the Person of the King, his Government and
 "Realm, by Reason of the Conspiracies afore"said, as is by both King and Parliament af"firmed and declared; and conceiving no better
 "Means to prevent, than by the sitting of the "Parliament; and having received a Petition "from divers faithful Subjects, Citizens of Lon- don, to the same Effect; and it being lawful
 "to petition, the Mayor, Sir Patience Ward, and
 "the Aldermen and Commons, in Common "Council assembled, for the Preservation of the "King and his Government, did cause to be "written the Petition in the Replication men"tioned, which is set forth in hæc Verba; and "did order, that, after the same was presented "to the King, it should be printed for the Satis"faction

"faction of the troubled Minds of the said Citizens; and traverse the Writing or making any other Petition, or making this to any End or Intent than they have pleaded."

Plead. on the Quo Warranto.

This great Cause was only twice argued at the Bar: First, by Mr. Finch, the King's Solicitor, for the King; and Sir George Treby, Recorder of London, for the City. And next by Sir Robert Sawyer, the King's Attorney-General, for the King; and Henry Pollexfen, for the City.

The first Argument was in Hilary Term, on Wednesday, Feb. 7: The second was in Easter Term, on Friday, April 27.

Born. Hist. own Time.

In Answer to the pretended Crimes, the City Plea and Rejoinder were as full and nervous, as the Arguments brought to support the Information were weak, trifling and ridiculous. However, the Ministry having at all Events predetermined to remove the sacred Fence, and destroy the dear-bought Liberties and Privileges of the Citizens, the Chief Justice Pemberton, for not approving of these Proceedings, was removed to make way for Sanders, the wicked Contriver of that detestable Scheme; and Dolben, another of the Justices of the said Court, was for the same Offence discharged, to make room for Wilkins, a Court-Favourite: But, on the very Day before Sentence, Sanders died of an Apoplexy. However, Justice Jones, on the twelfth of June, in Trinity Term, pronounced the following Sentence against the City:

Ibid. Judgment on the Quo Warranto.

"That a City might forfeit its Charter; that the Malversations of the Common Council were the Acts of the whole City; and that the two Points set forth in the Pleadings were just Grounds for the forfeiting of a Charter. Upon which Premises the proper Conclusion seemed to be, That therefore the City of London had forfeited their Charter:" But the Consequences of that were so much apprehended, that they did not think fit to venture on it; so they judged, that the King might seize the Liberties of the City. The Attorney-General moved, contrary to what is usual in such Cases, that the Judgment might not be recorded.

Each. Hist. Engl. Ken. Hist. Engl.

This Sentence made a great Noise everywhere, and the Attorney-General's Motion was looked upon as a Design to make the Citizens resign their own Liberties, instead of being condemned to a Deprivation of them. However, the Judgment was observed by many to be strange and unwarrantable, as being given only by two Judges; one of whom, Sir Francis Wilkins, had only heard one Argument; and, as a farther Aggravation of his Crime, declared in the Absence of Sir Edward Hubert, that he was of his Opinion; which Sir Edward afterwards positively denied, to the eternal Reproach of Wilkins, and Jones, his Collegue. And to give a greater Sanction to the said Judgment, they both declared upon the Bench, That their Brother Raymond was of the same Opinion, as was also the Chief Justice Sanders; when 'twas well known, that the latter, upon their consulting him, had only Understanding enough to expostulate with them, why they should trouble him, seeing he had lost his Memory.

Born. Hist. own Time.

The Citizens greatly surprized at this unjust and arbitrary Sentence, a Common Council was summoned to deliberate upon that Exigency; which being assembled, the Country Party were for entering the Judgment, 'till a proper Occasion offered for its Reversal: But the Court Party insisted upon an absolute Submission to the King, before Judgment was enter'd; which was in effect a voluntary Surrender of the City Liberties, and depriving themselves of the Means of getting the same reversed.

This Opposition produced many Arguments, amongst which the following Paper was published, to shew in a narrow Compass the Citizens Loss if the Charter of London should be given up or forfeited: The Author whereof writes, "There being so great a Murmur, and so much Discourse, that the Charter of this City of London is to be made forfeit, or else surrendered by a Common Council, 'tis fit for every Member of this City to understand, that the Meaning or Intent of such a Forfeiture or Surrender, is to dissolve the Body Corporate or Politick of the City, to spoil it irrecoverably of all its antient Government, Laws, Customs and Rights, which have been its Glory throughout Europe near two thousand Years, to bring it into the same State with the Country Villages, only capable to be created a new Body Politick by the Grace and Favour of his Majesty, and to obtain such Privileges as the Crown can grant, which are infinitely inferior to the Customs, Franchises, Rights and Government it now holds by the Laws and Statutes of the Kingdom.

"If then there be any Danger either of a Forfeiture or Surrender of this City's Charter, every Member of it is concerned, not only in Interest, but in Duty, to contribute what Assistance he can to preserve and secure it.

"For that Purpose every Citizen upon taking his Freedom is sworn to maintain the Franchise and Customs of the City, and to keep the City harmless, to his Power; and whatsoever Citizen shall openly attempt, or privately contrive, the Destruction of the Corporation, its Customs, or Franchises, betrays the Community, and violates his said OATH, from which no Power on Earth can absolve.

Citizen's Duty according to his Oath.

"The Means at present projected for the Forfeiture of the Charter, and the utter Ruin of this antient Body Politick, is the Prosecution of a Quo Warranto against it, assigning thereupon some Acts of Common Council, made and intended for the City's Welfare, whereby is pretended a Forfeiture of all its Privileges, Authorities and Wealth, and its very Being: As if it were reasonable, that a Mistake in a Common Council in the Extent of their Authority (if any such be) should bring so great a City, and all its Members, no way concerned in such Mistake, to suffer such a heavy, dreadful and unheard-of Judgment.

"The mischievous and fatal Consequences of any Dissolution of this antient Body Politick are so many, that the wisest and ablest Lawyers cannot number them, nor foresee the Evils that may

" may attend it: Some of the most visible are these that follow, (viz.)

" First, Whatsoever the City hath claimed and enjoyed in all Ages by Customs and Prescriptions, as their great Inheritance, will be so extinguished, that they can never be again revived by any Grant from the Crown; as

" Tolls in their Markets and Fairs, for Goods not sold, payable by Freemen and Foreigners.

" Water Balliage, and all Duties thereby growing.

" Wharfage, with Power to distrain for the same.

" Metage, Weighage, Scavage, Hallage. Such Customs likewise will be for ever extinct, as are belonging to the several Courts in London, and are different from the Common Law.

" The Jurisdiction of the antient Court of Hustings will be lost in many Things of great Consequence, (viz.)

" In holding Pleas of Land.

" In all real Actions whatsoever.

" In correcting Errors in the Sheriffs Courts.

" From most Duties in London, which Foreigners are subject to, and from serving on Juries out of London.

" To be discharged of Wharfage, and many other Privileges; all which must be lost forever, though a new Charter should be obtained.

" There are also other general Privileges depending upon the Custom, not restorable by Charter; as, That

" The Customs of this City shall be tried in the Courts at Westminster by Certificate of the Mayor and Aldermen made by the Mouth of the Recorder.

" Custom to punish Whores by the Civil Magistrate.

" The Forfeitures to the City of Goods Foreign bought, and Foreign sold.

" 37 Hen VIII. 12. Gives the Mayor of this old and present Corporation of the City Power to determine Controversies of Tithes.

" 3 Jacob. 15. Lord-Mayor and Aldermen are to appoint two Aldermen and twelve Commissioners to be Commissioners for a Court of Conscience for recovering of small Debts, as is before-mentioned.

" 3 Jacob. 18. The Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens, and their Successors, shall make, have, and maintain a new Cut or Stream of Water, from Chadwell, Arwel, &c. to London.

" 22, 23, 25 Car. II. The several Acts for Rebuilding of London, so much thereof not yet executed, as relates to the Mayor, &c. (viz.) Lord-Mayor and Aldermen to determine Appeals concerning Maintenance-Money, assessed in lieu of Tithes.

" Power to value and sell unbuilt Grounds, to determine Controversies about Lights, Ways and Party-Walls, to give Satisfaction to Owners.

" 43 Eliz. 12. The Court of the Policies of Assurance, for the Reasons before-mentioned.

" But, above all, there can be no Revival of that solemn Confirmation of all the Liberties, Franchises, Free Customs, and Privileges of the City of London, by MAGNA CHARTA, which have been since renewed and confirmed thirty NUMB. XLI.

" Times in Parliament, many of which were accompanied with the Invocation of Vengeance upon the Infringers of the same, and their Posterity.

" 3dly. Many Privileges held by ancient Charter of former Kings, if lost or surrendered, can never be restored by any new Charter from the Crown.

" The Citizens by ancient Charter are exempted from the Duty to the Crown of Prisage of Wines; but, if the Corporation be dissolved, every Citizen is disfranchised, and thereby made liable to pay it; and the like Exemption cannot be regranted by the King, at least 'till the Determination of a long Lease of the same Duty in being, because his former Grant will prevent it during the Term.

" In like manner the Citizens of London are very antiently exempted from Tolls throughout England; but, if the Corporation be dissolved the Crown is barred from regranteeing the like by many Grants of the Tolls to others, from which no new Exemption can be given.

" Let such as read this small Collection consider, that the ancient and excellent Composition of Customs, Laws and Liberties in this City, made by the Wisdom, and approved by the Experience, of so many Ages, confirmed by twenty-three Kings and thirty-three Parliaments, must for ever be broken to Pieces, with the Loss of its Charter.

" And let them think, whether it be possible for any Man, or Number of Men, to foresee the Distraction, Disorders, and Mischiefs, that may be the Event of such a fatal Stroke to so great a Body Politick?

" The Children unborn may groan under such Consequences of it, as are not now intended, nor can be imagined. Who can tell when the Cries of the Widows and Orphans will cease? The supposed Provision made for Citizens Wives and Children is void and null, if the Corporation be dissolved.

" No new Charter can give them any Right to their customary Shares and Divisions of their Husbands and Fathers Estates, so much depended upon in Marriages.

" The deluded Fathers must be vexed with new Cares, who have given great Portions with their Daughters to Citizens, upon Consideration only of the City Custom, without taking Jointures for them, or Prospect of any other Dower.

" How great will be the Distraction and Confusion in and about the Courts of Justice, notwithstanding any Provision which can be made by any new Charter for other Courts!

" All Causes and Actions depending in the present Courts, and the Proceedings therein, must cease, as if they had never been; and all Judgments obtained, not executed, will be void and null, and no Citizen will know where or how to seek his former wonted Relief, either in Law or Equity.

" All the Offices belonging to the City Courts of Justice must perish with the Courts; and all the Officers belonging to them, who have obtained their Places by Purchase, or "otherwise, must seek out new Ways for themselves and Families.

"The same sad Fate will attend all the Officers whose Offices depend upon the Government of the City, or its Magistrates, or its Revenue; and if any of them should hope by Grace and Favour to obtain some new Office under a new Charter, they can never claim their old customary Fees.

"The present Orphans, to whom the City owes their Portions, must be turned to Begging; or Starving, or to live upon the future Charity of a new Corporation. When the Body Politick of the City shall be dissolved, no Creditor can implead it for any Debt, neither can any of his Debtors be impleaded.

"The Death of a Corporation reduceth it to nothing; and 'twill then be, as if it had never been, in respect of Debts or Credits; there can be no Successor, Heir, or Executor to demand or answer for the Body that was.

"Therefore all the Goods and Chapels of the City must fall to the King, to be given and disposed of, as he pleaseth.

"And all its Lands and real Estate in the Exchange, Guildhall, &c. must of Right revert unto the Heirs of the Donors, if there be any, or escheat to the Crown, for want of such Heirs.

"But the Face of Confusion is so full of Horror, that will appear after the Dissolution of this mighty Body by Forfeiture or Surrender of its Charter, that I tremble to look upon it afar off.

"The Lord Cook says, It would require a Volume of itself to treat of the great and notable Franchises, Liberties and Customs of this City: And no less a Volume would be necessary to describe the Disorders, Losses, Distractions, Mischiefs and Confusions, that must attend the Destruction and the Death of so great a Body Politick.

"And the City of London by this Means, which is now one of the antientest Cities in the whole World, will at the time of such Surrender be the youngest City and Corporation in England."

However, the Proposition was carried by a great Majority, and, agreeably thereunto, a submissive Petition drawn up, intitled, The humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled; wherein they "Acknowledged their hearty and unfeigned Sorrow for the Misgovernment of the City of late Years, whereby the Citizens had fallen under his Majesty's Displeasure, which had occasioned a Quo Warrants, and Judgment to be pronounced against them: That they were deeply and thankfully sensible of his Majesty's great Favour in not requiring Judgment to be immediately entered thereon: And considering this their distressed Condition, they humbly cast themselves at his Royal Feet, imploring his Princely Compassion and Grace, to be extended to this his antient City, most humbly begging his Majesty's Pardon for all their Offences, with most solemn Promises and Assurances of constant Loyalty and Obedience to his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, and of a regular Administration of his Government in that City for the future; and humbly begged his Majesty's Commands and Directions."

On the eighteenth of June, the Lord-Mayor, at the Head of a Deputation from the Common Council, repaired to Windſor, where they presented this Petition to his Majesty; which being read, they were ordered to withdraw; and, being called in again, North, the Lord Keeper, by Command of the King, acquainted them, "That, for the sake of so many of the present Magistrates, and other eminent Citizens in London, who were of undoubted Loyalty and Affection to his Majesty's Service, his Majesty would still shew the City all the Favour they could reasonably desire; and tho' he had obtained Judgment in a Quo Warrants, it was not his Intention to prejudice them in their real Properties or Customs. That the City had not been well advised to defer their Application thus long, even till the Court had pronounced Judgment: It might have been done with a much better Grace, if it had been more early. However, his Majesty would not reject their Suit, if they agreed upon the Particulars the King did now require of them; which were,

"1. That no Lord-Mayor, Sheriff, Recorder, Common-Serjeant, Town-Clerk, or Coroner of the City of London, or Steward of the Borough of Southwark, shall be capable of, or admitted to, the Exercise of their respective Offices, before his Majesty shall have approved them under his Sign Manual.

"2. That, if his Majesty shall disapprove the Choice of any Person to be Lord-Mayor, and signify the same under his Sign Manual to the Lord-Mayor, or, in default of a Lord-Mayor, to the Recorder, or senior Alderman; the Citizens shall within one Week proceed to a new Choice: And, if his Majesty shall in like Manner disapprove the second Choice, his Majesty may, if he please, nominate a Person to be Lord-Mayor for the ensuing Year.

"3. If his Majesty shall, in like Manner, disapprove the Persons chosen to be Sheriffs, or either of them, his Majesty may appoint Persons to be Sheriffs for the ensuing Year by his Commission, if so he please.

"4. That the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen may also, with the Leave of his Majesty, displace any Alderman, Recorder, &c. ut supra.

"5. Upon the Election of an Alderman, if the Court of Aldermen shall judge and declare the Person presented to be unfit, the Ward shall chuse again; and, upon a Disapproval of a second Choice, the Court may appoint another in his Room.

"6. The Justices of the Peace are to be by the King's Commission; and the settling of these Matters to be left to his Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General, and Council learned in Law."

To which the Lord Keeper added, "That, these Regulations being made, his Majesty would not only pardon this Prosecution, but confirm their Charter in such a Manner as should be consistent with them." Concluding thus, thus, "My Lord-Mayor, The Term draws towards an End, and Midsummer-Day is at Hand, when some of the Officers used to be chosen, whereof his Majesty will reserve the Approbation: Therefore it is his Majesty's Pleasure, that you return to the City, and consult the Common Council, that he may speedily know your Resolutions hereupon, and accordingly give his Directions. That you may see the King is in earnest, and the Matter is not capable of Delay, I am commanded to let you know, he hath given Order to his Attorney General to enter upon Judgment on Saturday next, unless you prevent it by your Compliance in all these Particulars."

The Constitution accepted in the Common Council by a Majority of 18.

In Obedience to this Order, the Common Council, at their Return, met at Guildhall; when the Question was put, Whether they should agreed and submit to his Majesty's above-recited Regulations? This occasioned long and warm Debates, by a vigorous Opposition of the brave Asserters of Liberty, who generously declared, that, rather than accept of such vile and slavish Conditions, they would sacrifice all that was near and dear to them: However, it was carried for a Submission by a Majority of eighteen, to the great Surprise of all the Friends of Liberty.

To what has been said in respect to the illegal, arbitrary and unjust Measures taken to deprive this City of her antient Rights and Liberties, I shall only add the Remarks of a late Writer upon the iniquitous Proceedings of the Ministry at that Time:

Ibid.
Remarks on the ministerial Proceedings at this Time.

"The Charters of the City of London, and other Corporations, stood in the Way of an absolute Government; and it was resolved to break through this Barrier; in order to which, Quo Warranto's were brought against them; and, in Process of Time, they were either surrendered by the Corporations themselves, or vacated in Westminster-Hall by a Set of Judges picked out for that Purpose. And it was resolved thereby to make one of the Estates of Parliament depend intirely upon the Will and Nomination of the Prince. While these Quo Warranto's were going on, whole Peals of Anathemas were rung out against those Patriots, that had stood up for the Liberties of their Country in the preceding Parliaments: And it was looked upon as a Crime against the State, for any one to regret the approaching Fate of his Country. Even the Holy Scriptures themselves were made a Stale for arbitrary Power; and the Laws that were given to the Jews, as they were a Political State, were now brought in, upon every Occasion, to countenance the Designs of the Court; as if those Laws, which were intended only to support the Political Government of the Jews, were the real Foundation of the Christian Religion; or that the Constitution of England was founded upon the Jewish Doctrine. All which was not much for the Honour of those Gentlemen that broached that Notion. This was a Time never to be forgot, when to wish well to our Country was a Crime, and when Heaven itself was ranked upon our Enemies' Side, by some that pretended to expound its Will. In some Places, new Kinds of Funeral Harangues came in Fashion; our Laws, our Liberties, our Parliaments, our native Rights were to be buried: But, instead of dropping a Tear at their Funeral, fulsome Panegyrics were made upon their Murderers, and Curfes denounced against those that would have retrieved them from Destruction."

On the eighth of May, fourteen of the chief Citizens were tried at Guildhall, before the Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, for a Riot and Assault made upon Sir John Moore, the late Lord-Mayor, on Midsummer-Day last; when, after a long Trial, they were all found guilty, and the following exorbitant Fines imposed upon them: Lord Gray, Cornish, Betbel and Shute, one thousand Marks each; Pilkington, Player, Swinock and Goodenough, five hundred Marks each; Deagle, four hundred Marks; Jenkes and Freeman, three hundred Marks each; Jekyl, two hundred Marks; and Keys and Wickham, one hundred Marks each.

Prosecutions and Fines of several Aldermen.

Papillon and Dubois, mentioned to have been chosen Sheriffs in the preceding Year, being set aside by the Lord-Mayor, and some of the Aldermen; for which Reason having sued out of the Court of King's-Bench a Writ of Latitat, in an Action upon the Case against the Lord-Mayor, Sheriff North, and divers of the Aldermen; who being all therewith served by Brown, an Attorney, and Clerk to the Skinners Company, they went along with him as his Prisoners to Skinners-Hall, where he kept them in Custody 'till one o'Clock in the Morning; but, being himself then arrested for Debt by a Sheriff's Officer, who carried him to the Compter, no Person being left in Charge of his Prisoners, they returned to their respective Habitations.

Each Hist.

A Latitat sued out against the Lord-Mayor, &c.

The Court was so highly enraged at this Proceeding against their Friends, that the City, on the twenty-second of May, thought proper to disclaim the same by the following Order of Common Council:

"That whereas Sir William Pritchard, Knight, Lord-Mayor of this City, was in a rude Manner lately arrested at the Suit or in the Name of Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois; and whereas it hath been alledged by the said Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois, that the Action upon which the said Arrest was, was prosecuted at the Instance of the Citizens of London: The Members of this Court, to deliver themselves and the said Citizens from this undue Imputation, do declare, That they were not privy or consenting to the said Action or Arrest, and do disown and disapprove the same."

Ken. Hist.

Disclaimed by the Common Council.

We have already seen, that the Citizens of London complied with every thing the King required of them in respect to their Charter: But it seems Charles thought the Terms he had granted were too favourable (whereas in truth nothing could be more servile); therefore pretended, That the City had not tendered him a formal Submission; for which Reason he commanded the Judgment upon the Quo Warranto to be entered; which was no sooner effected, than by a Commission under the Great Seal he granted the Office of Mayor to Sir William Pritchard, (the present Lord-Mayor) to hold during Pleasure; and also the Offices of Sheriff, to Peter Daniel and Samuel Deftwood, upon the same Terms; and at the same Time, with the Honour of Knighthood, constituted Thomas Jerner Recorder of the City, in the Room of Sir George Treby, displaced. And soon after, by a Commission, he appointed sixteen of his favourite Aldermen Justices of the Peace, and degraded eight of the Aldermen that were in the Country Interest; and on the thirteenth of the same Month of October appointed eight Persons in their Places, who on the Sunday after attended the Lord-Mayor at Guildhall Chapel in their Formalities, and the next Day in the Court of Aldermen. And on the twentieth, the King, to shew another Instance of his new Power, appointed Sir Henry Tulse (one of the Informers against Alderman Pilkington) to execute the Office of Mayor during Pleasure.

Frost.

This Winter was very remarkable for a violent Frost, which began about the Beginning of December, and, without Intermission, continued intensely sharp till the fifth of February; which congealed the River Thames to that Degree, that another City, as it were, was erected thereon; where, by the great Number of Streets, and Shops with their rich Furniture, it represented a great Fair, with a Variety of Carriages and Diversions of all Sorts; and near Whitehall a whole Ox was roasted upon the Ice.

At this Time, there was little else remarkable but arbitrary Prosecutions and Surrendering of Charters; whereby the King attained to such a despotical Power, that he became the Dread and Terror of all publick Societies; wherefore the Hamburg Company of Merchants Adventurers, to engage the Affections of a Prince armed with such Power, erected to his Honour, in the Centre of the Royal Exchange, a noble Statue of Grey Marble in a Roman Habit, with this pompous Inscription on the Pedestal: Carolo II. Cesari Britannico, Patriæ Patri, Regum Optimo, Clementissimo, Augustissimo, Generis humani Delicis, utriusque Fortunæ Victori, Pacis Europæ Arbitro, Maris Domino & Vindici, Societas Mercatorum Adventur' Angliæ, quæ per CCCC jam prope annos Regia Benignitate floret, Fidei intemeratæ, Gratiitudinis æternæ, hoc Testimonium venerabunda posuit. Anno Sal. Humanæ MDCLXXXIV. The King was so highly pleased with this Performance, that, by a special Order, he strictly enjoined all Persons not to copy, publish or print any thing thereunto belonging, without Leave of the celebrated Statuary, Grinling Gibbons.

KING Charles II. departed this Life on the sixth of February, 1685: But his Death was very far from putting a Stop to the arbitrary Measures of the Court in seizing upon the Charters, and prosecuting particular Persons, who had distinguished themselves in promoting and supporting the Bill of Exclusion, and in their Opposition to Popery: For the Duke of York, who ascended the Throne by the Title of James the Second, immediately resolved to re-examine the Affair of the Rye-House Plot: And Henry Cornish, an Alderman of this City, was singled out as a Sacrifice to Popery; for, being Sheriff of London in the Year 1680, he had exerted himself in an uncommon Manner in the Detection and Prosecution of the Popish Plot, and inquiring into the Mystery of Fitz-Harris's Treason; wherefore the Papists deemed this a very proper Time to revenge themselves upon him. To which End on the thirteenth of October following he was apprehended and committed to Newgate, without the Use of Pen, Ink, or Paper, 'till Saturday Noon, when he received Notice of an Indictment of High Treason being prepared against him, on which he was to be tried the Monday following. In the Interim, his Children humbly petitioned the King for Time for their Father to prepare for his Defence. James, artfully to avoid the Imputation of Injustice, referred their Petition to the Judges, who, he well knew, would run all Lengths to serve him: Answerable to this Opinion, they unjustly denied their humble and equitable Request, tho' the unhappy Prisoner knew not whether they intended to proceed against him for a Crime in this or the preceding Reign: Besides, his most material Evidence then was above an hundred and forty Miles from London. And, to exult over the Misfortunes of this innocent Gentleman, the Attorney General wickedly told him, that he had not so well deserved of the Government, as to have Time allowed him; which, in plain English, is as much as if he had said, that he was to expect neither Favour nor Justice in the Prosecution.

Cornish was on the Monday following indicted for conspiring with other false Traitors to raise a Rebellion in the Kingdom, to destroy the King, and subvert the Constitution in the late Reign. The only material Evidence against him was Colonel Rumsey, an infamous and profligate Wretch; and Goodenough, the other Evidence, an Out-law in the highest Degree, was pardoned, and his Testimony made legal, for his appearing against Cornish; and tho' what he deposed did not affect the Prisoner, he was nevertheless condemned, and on the twenty-third of the same Month hanged, drawn and quartered at the End of King-Street, Cheapside, fronting his own House.

the Petition of Cornish's Children, his Innocence would soon have appeared, from Rumsey's former Depositions, as it was soon after his Death clearly evinced; inasmuch that it is said, that the King not only regretted his unfortunate End, but likewise restored his Estate to his Family; and confined the Witnesses to separate Prisons during Life.

In the Year 1685, James Duke of Monmouth was beheaded on Tower-Hill. When he went to the Scaffold, he was attended by a very strong Guard, who, it is said, had Orders to shoot him, if any Attempt had been made of a Rescue, as had been talked of. The Executioner, at the Block, was in very great Disorder, trembling all over, and gave him at first only a slight Stroke, at which he turned and looked at him; then the Duke laid himself down again, and the Headsmen gave him two Strokes more, but then threw down the Ax, and cried out, That he could not go on; but the Sheriff, with Threats, obliged him to take it up again; and so at two Strokes more his Head was taken off.

At this Time, a dreadful Persecution raging in France against the distressed Protestants, they were obliged to seek Refuge in most Protestant Countries; many thousands of whom came into this Kingdom, as appears by fifteen thousand and five hundred of them being relieved in this Year, by Money arising from a Brief, whereon was collected the Sum of sixty-three thousand seven hundred and thirteen Pounds two Shillings and three Pence. Thirteen thousand and five hundred of the said Refugees settled in this City and Parts contiguous, besides such as wanted no Charity. On this melancholy Occasion the Citizens of London exerted themselves in a very laudable Manner, striving to outdo one another in their charitable Benefactions, for the Support of their afflicted Christian Brethren.

In the Year 1688, Dr. Sancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury, and six other Bishops, viz. Dr. Lloyd, Bishop of St. Asaph; Dr. Kenn, Bishop of Bath and Wells; Dr. Turner, Bishop of Ely; Dr. Lake, Bishop of Chichester; Dr. White, Bishop of Peterborough; and Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Bishop of Bristol; were committed to the Tower. The Court, expecting some Disturbance upon this Occasion, had ordered that they should be carried thither by Water; but the People ran in Crowds to the River Side, to wait their coming, and filled the Banks of the Thames, by which they were to pass, and expressed all the Transports that Love, Compassion, and Rage could beget. They were soon after brought to their Trial, and acquitted. But these and other tyrannical Proceedings of a Prince, by whose Management in the late Reign the City Charter was taken away, and the Citizens deprived of all their ancient and valuable Rights and Immunities, not only during the remaining Part of that Reign, but also during the Course of the present, had brought the City and Nation into the utmost Despair; and obliged the most zealous Patriots of the Protestant Religion and the established Church to invite the Prince of Orange, the King's Son-in-Law, to defend and deliver them by an armed Force from that Abyss of Slavery, Oppression and Popery, to which otherwise the Laws and Religion must submit. But the News of this Prince's Resolution no sooner reached Whitehall, than the unhappy, deluded and pusillanimous King, with a Meanness of Spirit equal to that of enslaving his People, sent for the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs of London to Whitehall; where he told them, that out of his great Concern for the Welfare and Peace of the City, and as a Mark of the great Confidence he had in them at this Time, when the Kingdom was threatened with an Invasion by the Prince of Orange, he had resolved to restore to them their ancient Charters and Privileges, and put them in the same Condition they were in before the Two Warrants was brought against them; that thereby they might the better be enabled to serve him with that Duty and Loyalty, which they had given the late King his Brother and himself so many Testimonies of, and upon which he would now depend.

Pursuant to this Declaration, the very wicked Chancellor, Jefferies, on the sixth of October, brought back the City Charter, with two Grants under the Broad Seal for restoring the same; which he delivered to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, (rather Custos and Assistants) then sitting in the Council-Chamber at Guildhall; by Virtue whereof, Sir John Chapman was constituted Mayor, until the Feast of St. Simon and Jude; and Sir Samuel Thompson and Sir Humphrey Edwin, the present Sheriffs, to continue 'till the Election of others. Whereupon the Lord-Mayor, accompanied by Jefferies the Chancellor, the Aldermen and Sheriffs, repaired to the great Hall; where Jefferies had no sooner acquainted the Citizens with the Restitution of their Rights and Liberties, than the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs in the Court of Hustings, with the usual Solemnity, took the Oaths, and subscribed the Declaration in the Act 13 Car. II. for regulating Corporations. And the Aldermen being likewise restored to their respective Wards, all then present took the Oaths, and subscribed the said Declaration. Whereupon the Court ordered an Address of Thanks to be drawn up and presented to the King, as follows:

"To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

"We your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs of your City of London, humbly return our most hearty Thanks to your Majesty, for the great Grace and Favour shewn to the Citizens of this City, in restoring to them their ancient Liberties and Franchises; and we beg Leave to assure your Majesty, that we shall with all Duty and Faithfulness, cheerfully and readily, to the utmost Hazard of our Lives and Fortunes, discharge the Trust reposed in us by your Majesty, according to the avowed Principles of the Church of England, in Defence of your Majesty and the established Government."

Pursuant to the Grants for restoring the City Charter, at a special Court of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, held on Sunday the seventh of October, an Order was made for restoring the Livyemen of the several Companies of the City,

Soon after, upon the Delivery of the Queen of a Prince, as 'twas said, a Rumour was spread of his being an Impostor; wherefore the King judged it necessary for quashing that Report, to cause all that had been present at the Queen's Delivery to be examined in Presence of all the Peers Spiritual and Temporal in Town, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Judges; whereby 'tis manifest, that the King was of Opinion, that an Affair of that Consequence could not be safely performed without the Presence of the City Magistrates.

News being brought of the Prince of Orange's Landing at Torbay, the King declared his Resolution to march against him with his Army; wherefore the Lord-Mayor waited upon his Majesty, to wish him good Success. On this Occasion the King earnestly recommended to him the Care of the City during his Absence; and told him, that he had left a sufficient Number of Troops for their Defence, and that upon any Emergency he might apply to the Privy Council for Assistance and Advice; assuring him, that, if he returned victorious, he would punctually perform all he had promised, for the Security of their Religion and Liberties. But the Defection soon became so general, not only in most Parts of the Kingdom, but likewise in the Army, that it occasioned the King's speedy Return to London; where apprehending himself in great Danger, he resolved to provide for his Security by leaving the Kingdom.

Prince of Orange's third Declaration.

In the mean time, the following Paper, intitled, The Prince of Orange's Third Declaration, was before Witnesses delivered to Sir John Shorter, the Lord-Mayor, with a strict Injunction of seeing the same punctually executed.

"We have in the whole Course of our Life, and more particularly by the apparent Hazards, both by Sea and Land, to which we have so lately exposed our Person, given to the World so high and undoubted Proofs of our fervent Zeal to the Protestant Religion, that we are fully confident no true Englishman and good Protestant can entertain the least Suspicion of our firm Resolution rather to spend our dearest Blood, and perish in the Attempt, than not to carry on the blessed and glorious Design, which, by the Favour of Heaven, we have so successfully begun, to rescue England, Scotland and Ireland from Popery and Slavery, and in a free Parliament to establish the Religion, the Laws and Liberties of these Kingdoms on such a sure and lasting Foundation, that it shall not be in the Power of any Prince for the future to introduce Popery and Tyranny.

"Towards the more easy compassing this great Design, we have not been hitherto deceived in the just Expectation we had of the Concurrence of the Nobility, Gentry and People of England with us, for the Security of their Religion, and the Establishment of their Liberties and Properties. Great Numbers of all Ranks and Qualities have joined themselves to us; and others, at great Distances from us, have taken up Arms, and declared for us: And, which we cannot but particularly mention, in that Army which was raised to be the Instrument of Slavery and Popery, many, by the special Providence of God, both Officers and common Soldiers, have been touched with such a feeling sense of Religion and Honour, and of true Affection to their native Country, that they have already deserted the illegal Service they were engaged in, and have come over to us, and have given us full Assurance from the rest of the Army, that they will certainly follow this Example, as soon as we shall approach near enough to receive them without Hazard of being prevented or betrayed.

"To which End, and that we may the sooner execute this just and necessary Design we are engaged in for the publick Safety and Deliverance of these Nations, we are resolved with all possible Diligence to advance forwards, that a free Parliament may be forthwith called, and such Preliminaries adjusted with the King, and all Things settled upon such a Foot, according to Law, as may give us and the whole Nation just Reason to believe, the King is disposed to make such necessary Condescensions on his Part, as will give entire Satisfaction and Security to all, and make both King and People once more happy. And that we may effect all this in the Way most agreeable to our Desires, if it be possible, without the Effusion of Blood, except of those execrable Criminals, who have justly forfeited their Lives, for betraying the Religion, and subverting the Laws of their native Country; we do think fit to declare, that as we will offer no Violence to any, but in our own necessary Defence; so we will not suffer any Injury to be done to the Person even of any Papist, provided he be found in such Place, and Condition, and Circumstances, as the Law requires. So we are resolved, and do declare, that all Papists who shall be found in open Arms, or with Arms in their Houses, or about their Persons, or in any Office Civil or Military, upon any Pretence whatsoever, contrary to the known Laws of the Land, shall be treated by us and our Forces, not as Soldiers and Gentlemen, but as Robbers, Freebooters and Banditti; they shall be incapable of Quarter, and intirely delivered up to the Discretion of our Soldiers.

"We do farther declare, That all Persons who shall be found any ways aiding or assisting to them, or shall march under their Command, or shall join with, or submit to them in the Discharge or Execution of their illegal Commissions or Authority, shall be looked upon as Partakers of their Crimes, Enemies to the Laws, and to their Country. And whereas we are certainly informed, that great Numbers of armed Papists have of late resorted to London and Westminster, and Parts adjacent, where they remain, as we have Reason to suspect, not so much for their own Security, as out of a wicked and barbarous Design to make some desperate Attempt upon the said Cities, and their Inhabitants, by Fire, or sudden Massacre, or both; or else to be more ready to join themselves to a Body of French Troops,

"Troops, designed, if it be possible, to land in England, procured of the French King, by the Interest and Power of the Jesuits, in Pursuance of the Engagements, which, at the Intigation of that pestilent Society, his Most Christian Majesty, with one of his neighbouring Princes of the same Communion, has entered into for the utter Extirpation of the Protestant Religion out of Europe: Tho' we hope to have taken such effectual Care to prevent the one, and to secure the other, that, by God's Assistance, we cannot doubt but we shall defeat all their wicked Enterprizes and Designs.

"We cannot however forbear, out of the great and tender Concern we have to preserve the People of England, and particularly those great and populous Cities, from the cruel Rage and bloody Revenge of the Papists, to require and expect from all the Lord-Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, and Justices of the Peace, Lord-Mayors, Mayors, Sheriffs, and all other Magistrates and Officers, Civil and Military, of all Counties, Cities, and Towns of England, especially of the County of Middlesex, and Cities of London and Westminster, and Parts adjacent, that they do immediately disarm and secure, as by Law they may and ought, within their respective Counties, Cities, and Jurisdictions, all Papists whatsoever, as Persons at all Times, but now especially, most dangerous to the Peace and Safety of the Government; that so, not only all Power of doing Mischief may be taken from them, but that the Laws, which are the greatest and best Security, may resume their Force, and be strictly executed.

"And we do hereby likewise declare, that we will protect and defend all those who shall not be afraid to do their Duty in Obedience to these Laws. And that for those Magistrates and others, of what Condition soever they be, who shall refuse to assist us, and, in Obedience to the Laws, to execute vigorously what we have required of them, and suffer themselves at this Juncture to be cajoled and terrified out of their Duty, we will esteem them the most criminal and infamous of all Men, Betrayers of their Religion, the Laws, and their native Country; resolving to expect and require at their Hands the Life of every single Protestant that shall perish, and every House that shall be burnt or destroyed, by their Treachery and Cowardice.

"Given under our Hand and Seal, at our Head Quarters at Sberborn-Castle, the twenty-eighth Day of November, 1688.

"William-Henry, Prince of Orange.

"By his Highness's special Command,
"C. Haygens."

Disclaimed
by the Prince.

This Declaration being disclaimed by the Prince of Orange, shews it to have been the boldest Attempt that ever was made by a private Person. However, by its amazing Effects, it fully answered the good Intentions of the Author, Mr. Hugh Speake, (who was very much concerned for the Success of the Prince of Orange's Expedition, as will presently appear) for the several Officers therein mentioned readily put it in Execution; whereby the Power of the Papists was reduced to the lowest Ebb, and the Revolution greatly hastened.

The King had no sooner put his Resolution of leaving the Kingdom in Execution, than the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in and about this City assembled at Guildhall; and, sending for the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, who readily attended, they made this memorable Declaration:

"We doubt not but the World believes, that, in this great and dangerous Conjunction, we are heartily and zealously concerned for the Protestant Religion, the Laws of the Land, and the Liberties and Properties of the Subject; and we did reasonably hope that the King, having issued his Proclamation and Writs for a free Parliament, we might have rested secure, under the Expectation of that Meeting: But his Majesty having withdrawn himself, and, as we apprehend, in order to his Departure out of this Kingdom, by the pernicious Counsels of Persons ill-affected to our Nation and Religion; we cannot, without being wanting to our Duty, be silent under these Calamities, wherein the Popish Counsels, which so long prevailed, have miserably involved these Realms: We do therefore unanimously resolve to apply ourselves to his Highness the Prince of Orange, who, with so great Kindness to these Kingdoms, so vast Expence, and so much Hazard to his own Person, hath undertaken, by endeavouring to procure a free Parliament, to rescue us, with as little Effusion as possible of Christian Blood, from the imminent Dangers of Popery and Slavery.

"And we do hereby declare, That we will, with our utmost Endeavours, assist his Highness in the obtaining such a Parliament with all Speed, wherein our Laws, our Liberties, and Properties may be secured, the Church of England in particular, with a due Liberty to Protestant Dissenters, and, in general, the Protestant Religion and Interest over the whole World may be supported and encouraged, to the Glory of God, the Happiness of the established Government in these Kingdoms, and the Advantage of all Princes and States in Christendom, that may be herein concerned.

"In the mean Time, we will endeavour to preserve, as much as in us lies, the Peace and Security of these great and populous Cities of London and Westminster, and the Parts adjacent, by taking Care to disarm all Papists, and secure all Jesuits and Romish Priests who are in and about the same.

"And if there be any Thing more to be performed by us, for promoting his Highness's generous Intentions for the publick Good, we shall be ready to do it, as Occasion shall require."

The Lords, by this Declaration, having set the Citizens an Example, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, fired with a generous Emulation, (the same Day) drew up the following remarkable Address, and sent it to his Highness the Prince of Orange, by a Deputation of four Aldermen and eight Commoners:

Though all the Precautions imaginable were taken to preserve the Peace and Safety of the City against the evil Designs of Papists, and dangerous Tumults of others, by keeping the Militia of London and Westminster continually in Arms, till the Arrival of the Prince of Orange, yet nevertheless a very great Commotion happened; for the Populace, regarding the Papists as the Authors of their late Misfortunes and present Distractions, furiously fell upon the new-erected Mass-Houses both in the City and Suburbs, which they soon levelled with the Ground, and consumed the combustible Part thereof by Fire, with the greatest Acclamations. Nor did they stop here, but, rolling along with an impetuous Fury, assaulted the Houses of the Spanish and Tuscan Ambassadors, which were the Asylums of the principal Papists, and wherein they had deposited their best and most valuable Effects; both of which they pillaged of every Thing of Value; and what they could not carry off, they burnt; among which was a very valuable Library both of printed and manuscript Books. But, by the succeeding Parliament, the Ambassadors received ample Satisfaction for their several Losses. From those Places they hastened to the King's Printing-House, where all the Pa-apprehended, and, after a fortunate Deliverance from the Mob, who would have torn him in Pieces, he was carried before the Lord-Mayor, who, during his Examination, fell into a Fit of an Apoplexy, and died immediately; which occasioned his begging to be sent Prisoner to the Tower of London, to prevent his falling into the Hands of an enraged Multitude, ready to devour him; from whom he was, by a strong Party of the Train'd-Bands, with the greatest Difficulty protected, in order to bring him to condign Punishment by an exemplary Death. He was no sooner arrived at the Tower, than he was charged by a Warrant of Commitment from the Assemthe Thoughts of his detestable Villainies, or thro' a natural Cowardice, he fell to excessive Drink-

On the thirteenth of December, one of the most dreadful and shocking Alarms was given to this the Irish, in a diabolical Fury, were marching general Massacre upon the Citizens; and to piloccasioned such an inexpressible Consternation in the City and Suburbs, that in an Instant all was in the utmost Confusion; for the People, in the greatest Distraction, flying from their Beds, the Timorous fled for Safety, while the Brave ran to Arms; and others, by barricading the Ends of Streets leading to the Fields, put themselves into the best Posture of Defence that a Time of such Hurry and Perplexity would admit of. In the ting the Windows to enlighten the Streets, for better discovering the Enemy at their Approach. And such was the Expectation of the Men at Arms, that, with an amazing Celerity, they in a few Minutes repaired to the usual Places of Rendezvous appointed for each Company of the Train'd-Bands, completely armed, and, forming themselves into divers Bodies, marched to join the regular Troops in the Suburbs, that had declared for the Prince of Orange, who together formed a great Army.

This Alarm was not peculiar to this City, but extended to all the principal Places in the Kingdom. This Stratagem, by some Authors, is ascribed to the Duke of Schomberg, the Prince of Orange's chief General; and, by others, to some Country Fellows, who observed certain Irish Soldiers setting Fire to a House; which are equally without Foundation, as the last is absurd; as if those Clowns, by running to London in a Fright to give Notice of the approaching Danger, could at the same Time have diffused the Rumour in all other Parts of the Kingdom.

The Author of this Stratagem (as we are told by himself) was Hugh Speake; who, out of a sincere Love to the Protestant Religion, and Laws of his Country, made it (after the Duke of Tork's Accession to the Crown) his Business to travel twice over the Kingdom, to discover the Numbers and Interest of the principal Whigs and Tories in the several Counties: In the last of which Journeys, by Letters of Credence from his Friends in London, he discovered his Design to certain of the most eminent Whigs in each City and Town of Note throughout England, for engaging their Friends, preparatory to the Prince of Orange's Landing: And, in order to raise a Detestation among the People against the Irish, that they, his Confederates, in their several Stations, upon the Receipt of his Letters from London, should, according to the Time therein mentioned, give out, that the Irish were approaching to massacre the Inhabitants of their respective Places; which being faithfully and dextrously managed in all Parts, it effectually answered the Projector's Intentions, by alienating the Hearts of the People from King James, and incensing them against the cruel and blood-thirsty Irish Popish Army; whilst, on the contrary, it firmly attached all Lovers of their Country to a steady Adherence to their great Deliverer the Prince of Orange.

us. You are of a Family, most illustrious Benefactors to Mankind. To have the Title of a Sovereign Prince, Stadtholder, and to have worn the Imperial Crown, are amongst their lesser Dignities. They have long enjoyed a Dignity singular and transcendent, to be the Champions of Almighty God, sent forth in several Ages to vindicate his Cause against the greatest Oppressions. To this divine Commission, our Nobles, our Gentry, and among them our brave English Soldiers, rendered themselves and their Arms upon your appearing.

The Re-

London's Speech to the Prince of Orange.

"Great Sir, when we look back to the last Month, and contemplate the Swiftneſs and Fulneſs of our present Deliverance, astonished, we think it miraculous! Your Highness, led by the Hand of Heaven, and called by the Voice of the People, has preserved our dearest Interests, the Protestant Religion, which is Primitive Christianity; restored our Laws, which are our ancient Title to our Lives, Liberties, and Estates, and without which this World were a Wilderness. But what Retribution can we make to your Highness? Our Thoughts are full charged with Gratitude.
Your Highness has a lasting Monument in the Hearts, in the Prayers, in the Praises of all good Men amongst us; and late Posterity will celebrate your ever-glorious Name, till Time shall be no more."

The City Rabble, having already tasted the Sweets of Plunder, took Occasion, from the publick Rejoicings at the Prince's Arrival, to renew their Depredations upon the Papists, many of whose Houses they pillaged, without Distinction of English or Foreigner: Complaint whereof being made to the Privy Council, they published an Order, permitting all Foreigners to depart the Kingdom without Moleſtation; and the Prince sent his Passes to the Pope's Nuncio, and to the Envoys of Poland, Savoy, and Modena.

Prince of Orange's Order for a Meeting of Parliament-men, Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and fifty
Common-Councilmen of London.

"Whereas the Necessity of Affairs does require speedy Advice, we do desire all such Persons as have served as Knights, Citizens, or Burgesses in any of the Parliaments that were held during the Reign of the late King Charles the Second, to meet us at St. James's, upon Wednesday the twenty-sixth of this Instant December, by Ten of the Clock in the Morning; and we do likewise desire, that the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London would be present at the same Time; and that the Common Council would appoint fifty of their Number to be there likewise. And hereof we desire them not to fail."

In Compliance with the above Order, the several Members of King Charles's Parliaments, and the Aldermen and Deputies of the Common Council of this City met at the Time and Place prefixed: To whom his Highness addressed himself as follows:

His Speech at that Meeting.

"You, Gentlemen, that have been Members of the late Parliaments, I have desired you to meet me here, to advise the best Manner how to pursue the Ends of my Declaration, in calling a free Parliament, for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, and the restoring the Rights and Liberties of the Kingdom, and settling the same, that they may not be in Danger of being again subverted."

"And you, the Aldermen and Members of the Common Council of the City of London, I desire the same of you. And, in regard your Numbers are like to be great, you may, if you think fit, divide yourselves, and sit in several Places."

By this Order and Speech 'tis observable what a great Honour the Prince of Orange did this City, by making so many of her Sons happy Instruments in restoring the Kingdom and City to their antient Rights and Privileges.

His Letter to the City for a Loan of 200000l.

A few Days after, his Highness sent a Letter to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City, setting forth the present Exigencies, and the great Occasion there was for an immediate Supply of Money, (beyond what the present State of the Revenue could furnish) for supporting the Charge of the Navy, paying off Part of the Army, and sending an immediate Relief for the Defence of the Protestant Interest in Ireland. For the answering of which great Ends, he proposed to the City the raising the Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds by Way of Loan, to be secured after the best Manner, and repaid with good Interest at the Expiration of six Months. The grateful Citizens, not unmindful of their late great and wonderful Deliverance, cheerfully and unanimously voted the advancing of the said Sum; which was raised in a very short Time, Sir Samuel Dashwood, since Lord-Mayor of London, subscribing sixty thousand Pounds of the said Sum.

During the first Debates in the Convention of the States of the Kingdom assembled at Westminster for settling the Government, all Men were ignorant upon what Foundation they would fix it; wherefore some great Zealots for the House of Orange drew up the following Petition, which they assiduously endeavoured to get subscribed by as many Hands as possible, thereby intending to present it to the House of Lords, as the general Sense of the Citizens of London:

"Whereas we are in a deep Sense of the Danger of Delays, and perplexed Debates about settling the Government, at this Time vacant; by Reason whereof, the necessary Ends of Government cannot be truly administered: We humbly desire that his most illustrious Highness the Prince of Orange, and his Royal Consort the Princess, may be speedily settled upon the Throne; by whose Courage, Conduct, and Reputation, this Nation and the Protestant Religion may be defended from our Enemies at home and abroad; and that Ireland, now in a bleeding and deplorable Condition, may be rescued from its Miseries, and these Kingdoms settled on a lasting Foundation in Peace and Liberty."

The Prince was no sooner acquainted with this unjustifiable and scandalous Way of Proceeding, than he generously caused this Order to be published for its Suppression:

"By the Lord-Mayor, &c.

"Whereas his Highness the Prince of Orange has been pleased to signify to me this Day, that divers Persons, pretending themselves to be Citizens of London, in a tumultuous and disorderly Manner, have lately disturbed the present Convention of the Lords and Commons at Westminster, upon Pretence of petitioning: It being regular and usual for the Citizens of this City, that are under the Apprehensions of any Grievance, to make their Application to myself and the Court of Aldermen: Therefore, with the Advice of my Brethren the Aldermen of this City, these are to require you, that you command, within your Ward, that they forbear any tumultuous Disturbance or Assembly, as they will answer the contrary at their utmost Peril."

Address of the City to the King.

FOR the obviating of all Dangers that might result from the great Resort of Papists to the Cities of London and Westminster, during the Infancy of King William's Government, it was by Parliament enacted, That the Lord-Mayor, and Justices of the Peace in the City of London, shall cause to be arrested and brought before them all Papists coming to the said City, (that were not Inhabitants or foreign Merchants) and to tender to every such Person the Declaration made in the thirtieth of King Charles the Second, for the more effectually preserving the King's Person and Government; and every Person refusing to read and subscribe the said Declaration, to be commanded to depart the City immediately; and that every Person or Persons so enjoined, that shall hereafter be found in the Cities of London and Westminster, or ten Miles of the same, shall suffer as Popish Recusants convicted.

On the sixth of June the Dutch Ambassadors, who came to congratulate the King upon his happy Accession to the Crown, made their publick Entry into this City in a very pompous and magnificent Manner: And, soon after, divers Letters from King James being intercepted, his Majesty was not only graciously pleased to communicate the same to Parliament, but likewise to the City of London; which was so highly pleasing to the Citizens, that they drew up, and on the twenty-second of the same Month, by the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs, presented this loyal and dutiful Address to his Majesty:

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, being deeply sensible of your Majesty's great Care and tender Regard for our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and your particular Favour and Condescension to this City, do render your Majesty our most humble Thanks, for vouchsafing to communicate to us the several Letters, and other Papers, which have been now read in this Common Council, manifesting the Progress of your Enemies in your Kingdom of Ireland, and also discovering a Conspiracy within this Kingdom of England, to aid and abet your said Enemies in their Designs to invade and bring the War upon this Kingdom.

"And we most humbly beg Leave to assure your Majesty, that we will, as far as our Power extends, oppose ourselves to, and suppress all Designs of that Nature; and will search after, disarm, seize, secure, and bring to Justice, all Persons concerned therein, or contriving thereto: And we are unanimously, firmly, and unalterably resolved and determined to stand by, defend, and maintain your Majesty, and your Government, with the utmost Hazard and Expence of our Lives and Estates, against all Persons whatsoever, that shall conspire or attempt any Thing against the same."

A Bill for encouraging the Woollen Manufactures of this Kingdom being sent by the House of Commons to that of the Lords for their Approbation, a Petition was presented against the same by the Bailiffs, Wardens, and Assistants of the Company of Silk-Weavers of this City, attended by a vast Multitude of that Fraternity; which their Lordships looking upon as a Design to frighten them into a Compliance with their Desires, that Right Honourable House addressed his Majesty for a Guard to quash that tumultuous Assembly; and at the same Time ordered the Lord-Mayor of this City to get in Readiness a sufficient Number of the City Train'd-Bands, to prevent the Passage of those Men thro' the City in great Numbers.

About the same Time the Spanish Ambassador made a magnificent publick Entry into this City.

Sir Thomas Pilkington, the Lord-Mayor, being re-elected Mayor for the Year ensuing, he, with his Fellow-Citizens, were of Opinion, that they could never enough testify their Gratitude to their great Deliverer; therefore, in the Name of the City, invited the King, Queen, Prince and Princess of Denmark, and both Houses of Parliament, to dine at Guildhall on the approaching Lord-Mayor's Day; at which Time their Majesties, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses, and attended by a numerous Train of the Nobility, repaired to Cheapside, where they beheld the gorgeous Cavalcade pass; which, considering the beautiful Decorations of the Streets, the Richness of Apparel, the fine Appearance of the Militia and Artillery Company, the Pomp of the Royal Regiment of Horse Volunteers, consisting of the chief Citizens most sumptuously accoutred, and led by the Earl of Monmouth, and the Magnificence and curious Embellishments of the several Pageants, seems to have equalled, if not excelled, every Thing of the Kind hitherto seen in this City for Splendor and Magnificence.

The Show being over, their Majesties were, by the Sheriffs, conducted to Guildhall, where they were entertained with a truly royal Feast; and the joyful Day concluded with Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, and general Illuminations in all Parts of the City. And, thro' the whole Course of this Solemnity, nothing was omitted to demonstrate the dutiful Respect and hearty Affections of the Citizens to their Majesties: Yet, a few Days after, some malicious and impotent Enemy spoiled the King's Picture of the Crown and Sceptre: For the apprehending of whom the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen offered a Reward of five hundred Pounds.

Neither were their Majesties backward in their Acknowledgments for these Tokens of Loyalty and Affection towards their Government and Persons; and, as the strongest Instance of their Favour, they gave Order for the immediate Restoration of the Citizens to their Franchises. And accordingly the Parliament, in the 2 W. & M. declared the Proceedings of the former Reigns on the Quo Warranto illegal and arbitrary; and that Judgment, and every other Judgment given and recorded in the said Court, for seizing the Franchises of the said City, were reversed and made void;

Stat. Larg.
2 W. & M.
A.D. 1690

“Whereas a Judgment was given in the Court of King's-Bench, in or about Trinity-Term, in the thirty-fifth Year of the Reign of the late King Charles the Second, upon an Information, in the Nature of a Quo Warranto, exhibited in the said Court against the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, That the Liberty, Privilege, and Franchise of the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens, being a Body Politick and Corporate, should be seized into the King's Hands as forfeited: And inasmuch as the said Judgment, and the Proceedings thereupon, is and were illegal and arbitrary; and for that the restoring of the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens to their antient Liberties, of which they had been deprived, tends very much to the Peace and good Settlement of this Kingdom:

“2. Be it declared and enacted, by the King and Queen's most excellent Majesties, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by Authority of the same, That the said Judgment given in the said Court of King's-Bench in the said Trinity-Term, in the thirty-fifth Year of the Reign of the said King Charles the Second, or in any other Term; and all and every other Judgment given or recorded in the said Court, for the seizing into the late King's Hands the Liberty, Privilege, or Franchise of the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, of being of themselves a Body Corporate and Politick, by the Name of the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and by that Name to plead and be impleaded, and to answer and to be answered, or in what Manner or Words soever such Judgment was entered; is, shall be, and are hereby reversed, annulled, and made void, to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever; and that Vacates be entered upon the Rolls of the said Judgment, for the Vacating and Reversal of the same accordingly.

“3. And be it further declared and enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, shall and may for ever hereafter remain, continue, and be, and prescribe to be a Body Corporate and Politick, in re, facto & nomine, by the Name of Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and by that “Name, and all and every other Name and Names of Incorporation, by which they at any Time before the said Judgment were incorporated, to sue, plead, and be impleaded, and to answer and be answered, without any Seizure or Forejudger of the said Franchise, Liberty, and Privilege, or being thereof excluded or ousted, for or upon any Pretence of any Forfeiture or Misdemeanor at any Time heretofore or hereafter to be done, committed, or suffered; and the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, shall and may, as by Law they ought, peaceably have and enjoy all and every their Rights, Gifts, Charters, Grants, Liberties, Privileges, Franchises, Customs, Usages, Constitutions, Prescriptions, Immunities, Markets, Duties, Tolls, Lands, Tenements, Estates, and Hereditaments whatsoever, which they lawfully had, or had lawful Right, Title, or Interest of, in, or to, at the Time of recording or giving the said Judgment, or at the Time or Times of the said pretended Forfeitures.

“4. And be it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That all Charters, Letters Patents, and Grants for incorporating the Citizens and Commonalty of the said City, or any of them, and all Charters, Grants, Letters Patents, and Commissions touching or concerning any of their Liberties or Franchises, or the Liberties, Privileges, Franchises, Immunities, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, Rights, Titles, or Estates of the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, made or granted to any Person or Persons whatsoever, by the late King Charles the Second, since the said Judgment given, or by the late King James the Second, be and are hereby declared and adjudged null and void to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever.

“5. Provided nevertheless, that no Recoveries, Verdicts, Judgments, Statutes, Recognizances, Inquisitions, Indictments, Presentments, Informations, Decrees, Sentences, Executions, or any Plaints, Process, or Proceedings in Law or Equity, had, made, given, taken, or done, or depending in the Mayor or either of the Sheriffs Courts, or any other Court within the said City or Liberties thereof, since the said Judgment given, shall be avoided for Want or Defect of any legal Power in those that acted as Judges, Justices, Officers or Ministers of, in, or as belonging to any of the said Courts; but that all and every such Recoveries, Verdicts, Judgments, and other Things above-mentioned, and the Actings, Doings, and Proceedings thereupon, shall be of such and no other Force, Effect, and Virtue, than as if such Judges, Justices, Officers, and Ministers had acted by Virtue of legal Authority; and that no Person or Persons shall be in any wise prosecuted, sued, impeached, or molested for any Cause or Thing by him or them lawfully acted or done, in Pursuance of any such Charters, Letters Patents, Grants, or Commissions.

“6. Provided, that this Act shall not extend to discharge any Person or Persons from any Penalty or Penalties, or Forfeitures by him or themselves

" themselves to act upon the said Charters, Letters Patents, Grants, or Commissions.

" 7. And be it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That all Officers and Ministers of the said City, that rightfully held any Office or Place in the said City or Liberties thereof, or in the Borough of Southwark, at the Time when the said Judgment was given, are hereby confirmed, and shall have and enjoy the same as fully as they held them at the Time of the said Judgment given, except such as have voluntarily surrendered any such Office or Place, or have been removed for any just Cause; and that every Person who, since the said Judgment given, hath been chosen, admitted, and placed into any Office or Employment within the said City, upon the Death, Surrender, or Removal, as aforesaid, of the former Officers, shall be, and is hereby confirmed in his said Office or Employment, and shall have and enjoy the same in as full and ample Manner, as if he had been admitted or placed therein, according to the ancient Customs of the said City.

" 8. Provided also, and be it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That all Leases and Grants of any of the Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, and other Things, before the Time of the said Judgments given, belonging to the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens, and usually leased or granted by them, made since the Time of the said Judgment given by the said late King Charles the Second, or King James the Second, or by any Person or Persons taking upon them to be Trustees for the said City, for the Preservation or Maintenance of the Government, or publick Offices of the said City, by or upon Pretence of any Grant or Commission by their said late Majesties King Charles the Second and King James the Second, or either of them, such Grants and Leases being made for just, good, and valuable Considerations, and whereupon the old accustomed yearly Rent, or more, hath been reserved, payable into the Chamber or Bridge-House, or any of the Hospitals of the said City, shall be as good and valid for the Terms, and under the Rents, Payments, Provisos, Conditions, Covenants, and Agreements therein respectively contained, against the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the said City, and their Successors, as if the same had been made by the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the said City, under their Common Seal, and the said Judgment had never been given, and not otherwise; and the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens, and their Successors, shall have the Benefit and Advantage of all Rents, Reservations, Payments, Conditions, Covenants, Clauses, and Agreements in every such Grant or Lease contained; and the like Remedy for Non-payment, Breach, or Non-observance thereof, as if the said Grants or Leases had been made by the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens, and the said Rents, Payments, Conditions, Covenants, Clauses, and Agreements had been made payable, reserved, covenanted, or agreed to and with the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens.

Numb. XLII.

" 9. And be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That all Judgments, Decrees, and Sentences, had or obtained by any Person or Persons taking upon them to be Trustees, as aforesaid, for or concerning any Lands, Tenements, Duties, Tolls, and Interests whatsoever, of or belonging to the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the said City, shall stand and remain in Force, and shall be prosecuted and executed by and to, and for the Use of, the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens, as if the same had been obtained in the Name of the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens; and that all Persons being natural-born Subjects, or Denizens, that have been admitted into the Freedom of the said City since the said Judgment given, shall be free thereof, and have and enjoy the said Freedom to all Intents and Purposes, as if they had been thereunto admitted before the said Judgment given.

" 10. Provided always, That the present Mayor, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, and Common Council of the said City, shall continue until a new Election shall be made of such Officers, and the Persons elected sworn into their respective Offices, and that such new Election be made at the Times hereafter mentioned; that is to say, the Election of the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain shall be on the twenty-sixth Day of May, in the Year one thousand six hundred and ninety; and the Election of the Common Council shall be made on the tenth Day of June, in the Year one thousand six hundred and ninety; and such Persons so elected shall continue till the usual Times of Election of such Officers, according to the ancient Usage and Custom of the said City, and from thence shall continue for the Year ensuing.

" 11. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted, That, if the Mayor, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, and Common Council shall not be elected at the Times hereby limited, the Mayor, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, and Common Council, which were in Being at the Time of the said Judgment given, shall be and continue in those respective Offices and Places till new Elections be made of the like Officers and Common Council, according to the ancient Usage and Custom of the said City.

" 12. And be it farther enacted, that all Persons so to be restored and continued, shall be, and are hereby required, to take the Oaths appointed by a certain Act, made in the first Year of their Majesties Reign, entitled, An Act for the abrogating of the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and appointing other Oaths the next Term after such Restitution, under the Penalties, Forfeitures, Disabilities, and Incapacities in the said Act provided and appointed.

" 13. And be it enacted, That the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain, so to be elected, shall be sworn, in the usual Manner, on or before the twentieth Day of June next ensuing.

" 14. And be it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That all and every of the several Companies and Corporations of the said City, shall from henceforth stand and be incorporated,

" by such Name and Names, and in such Sort
 " and Manner, as they respectively were at the " Time of the said Judgment given, and every
 " of them are hereby restored to all and every
 " the Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Rights;
 " Titles, Estates, Liberties, Powers, Privileges; " Precedencies, and Immunities which they " lawfully had and enjoyed at the Time of " giving the said Judgment; and that as well
 " all Surrenders, as Charters, Letters Patents,
 " and Grants for new incorporating any of the " said Companies, or touching or concerning
 " any of their Liberties, Privileges or Fran" chises, made or granted by the said late " King James, or by the said King Charles the " Second, since the giving of the said Judge" ment, shall be void, and are hereby declared
 " null and void, to all Intents and Purposes
 " whatsoever. Provided nevertheless, That no " Person or Persons shall be in any wise pro" secuted, sued, impeached or molested for any " Cause or Thing by him or them lawfully acted
 " or done in pursuance of any such Charters,
 " Letters Patents or Grants.

" 15. Provided also nevertheless, and it is " hereby farther enacted, by the Authority afore" said, That all Leases, Terms and Estates
 " made or granted by any of the said Companies
 " since the giving of the said Judgment, for " just and valuable Considerations, and where" upon the old accustomed yearly Rents or more
 " are reserved, shall stand and be of the same " Force and Effect, as if the same had been " made or granted by the said several Companies
 " as hereby restored; and the said respective " Companies, and their Successors, shall have " the Benefit and Advantage of all Rents, Re" servations, Payments, Conditions, Covenants,
 " Clauses and Agreements in all and every such
 " Lease or Grant contained, and the like Remedy
 " therefore, as if the same Grants and Leases
 " had been made by the said respective Compa" nies as now restored, and the said Rents, Pay" ments, Conditions, Covenants, Clauses and " Agreements had been made payable, reserved,
 " covenanted and agreed to, or with them re" spectively.

" 16. Provided also, and be it enacted, That " all and every Person or Persons, who, at any " Time since the said Judgment, have been ad" mitted into the Freedoms of, or into the Live-
 " ries of the said Companies, according to the " Usages and Customs of the said City, and " their respective Companies, shall be, and en" joy all the Rights and Privileges of a Freeman,
 " and of a Liveryman, to all Intents and Pur" poses, as if they had been admitted before the " said Judgment.

" 17. Provided always, and be it enacted, by " the Authority aforesaid, That this present Act
 " of Parliament shall be accepted, taken and re" puted to be a general and publick Act of Par" liament; of which all and every the Judge and " Judges of this Kingdom in all Courts shall

Here it may be proper to recollect the vast

 Sums were parted with to gain their Privileges of England, for some Displeasure taken against them.

After this Act was passed, Anno 1690, a great many Members of the Common Council, to the Number of 117, subscribed a Petition to the Parliament to this Purport:

" That they hoped the late Act of Parlia-

 " it to its antient Rights and Privileges: But " that the contrary happened. For, notwith-

Dutch

City's Refosupport and defend the King, &c.

Advice being brought of the Defeat of the Dutch Fleet in the Channel, on the thirtieth of June, by that of France, after a gallant Engagement for a whole Day, tho' above three to one; and that this terrible Blow was intirely owing to the Inactivity and Misbehaviour (to call it no worse) of Torrington, our Admiral, who, during the Action, basely lay by as a Spectator; the Citizens, concluding that the French, having now none to oppose them, would undoubtedly put their Design of Landing in Execution (to their eternal Honour and Praise be it remembered), like true Patriots, acquainted the Queen (by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Lieutenancy, in the Absence of the King in Ireland) in Council, that they had, at that extraordinary Juncture, in Common Council, unanimously resolved to support and defend their Majesties Persons and Government with their Lives and Fortunes, to the utmost of their Power; and represented to her, that the City Trained-Bands, consisting of about nine thousand Men, were compleatly armed, and ready to march whither her Majesty pleased; and, as an additional Reinforcement to the said Troops, the Lieutenancy of the City had resolved to raise six Regiments of Auxiliaries; and besides which, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the Common Council, resolved, by a voluntary Contribution, not only to raise a large Regiment of Horse, and one thousand Dragoons (wherein they had already made a considerable Progress) but likewise to maintain the same for the Space of a Month, or longer, if Occasion required. And prayed, that her Majesty would be pleased to appoint Officers to command the said Regiments; when, with Thanks returned for their hearty Zeal and Loyalty, she promised to comply with their Requests.

on his Success in Ireland.

The King, after a successful Campaign in Ireland, and driving King James from thence, arrived at Kensington on the tenth of September, where the next Day he was attended by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Recorder of this City, who in the Name of the Citizens congratulated his Majesty upon the great and happy Success of his Arms, the wonderful Preservation of his Person, and his safe Return to his Kingdom.

On the twenty-ninth of October, the King arrived in this City from Holland, where he was by the Citizens received with the greatest Demonstrations of Joy. About the same Time the War in Ireland being brought to a happy Period, the brave General Ginkle, who had reduced that Kingdom, with many of his principal Officers, being arrived in London, they were by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen invited to Dinner at Merchant-Taylors Hall, where they were splendidly entertained: On which Occasion the Citizens, as well as on all others, gave all the Demonstrations of their Affection and Zeal to the Government, and Honour and Respect to those who had by their Valour supported it.

In the Beginning of May, certain Advice arrived of the late King James's having put himself at the Head of a potent French Army in Normandy, in order to recover his late Dominions. And at the same Time, a Conspiracy being discovered for favouring the intended Invasion, the Queen issued a Proclamation, commanding all Papists and reputed Papists to depart the Cities of London and Westminster, and ten Miles of the same, for preventing all Dangers that might ensue upon their continuing in these Cities. At which Time, another Proclamation was published, for apprehending twenty-three Lords and Gentlemen concerned in the said Conspiracy. Under these gloomy Apprehensions, the truly loyal and brave Citizens of London drew out their six Regiments of Trained-Bands, under the Command of the Lord-Mayor, consisting of about ten thousand Men; who, marching to Hyde-Park, had the Honour of being reviewed by the Queen, who was pleased to declare herself highly satisfied with their good Order and fine Appearance, and the great Zeal and Readiness they shewed for her Service.

Great Disputes being set on Foot about this Time, concerning the Right of the Inhabitants, Non-freemen, in the Nomination of Aldermen, and Election of Common Councilmen, it was found necessary to pass the following Act of Common Council: "It is hereby declared, That it is, and antiently hath been the Right and Privilege of the Freemen of the said City only, being Householders, paying Scot and bearing Lot, and of none other whatsoever, in their several and respective Wards, from Time to Time, as often as there was or should be occasion, to nominate Aldermen, and elect Common Councilmen, for the same respective Wards. City's Demonstration of Joy at his Majesty's Return from Holland.

On the twentieth of October following, the Queen met his Majesty on his Return from Holland to London, when entering the City they were received amidst the joyful Acclamations of the Citizens, with all the distinguishing Marks of an unfeigned Joy; and, on the Saturday after, his Majesty was attended at Kensington by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs and Recorder, who in the Name of the City congratulated his safe Return, and declared their highest Satisfaction in his great and glorious Enterprizes for the Preservation of these Nations and Good of Christendom; with a full Assurance of their steady Resolutions to assist his Arms, and support his Government to the utmost of their Power. Whereupon his Majesty, as a Mark of his Favour, was graciously pleased to confer the Honour of Knight-hood upon Salathiel Lovel, the Recorder, who in the Name of the City invited their Majesties to honour the Citizens at Dinner in Guildhall, on the Lord-Mayor's Day approaching; which being graciously accepted of, they on the twenty-ninth of the said Month repaired to the City, attended by the great Officers of State, and a numerous Train of Nobility; when having seen the Cavalcade in Cheapside, they were by the Sheriffs conducted to Guildhall, where they were most sumptuously and magnificently entertained; and, as a Mark of his Majesty's Satisfaction, he was graciously pleased to confer the Honour of Knight-hood upon John Wildman, William Gore, and James Houlton, Aldermen; Leonard Robinson, Chamberlain; Roceland Aynsworth, William Scarven, Josiah Child and John Foach, Merchants.

Entertain their Majesties at Dinner.

The City of London had laudably continued, for many Ages, to act as a common Parent to all her Orphans, but by divers Accidents and publick Calamities their Money, which had been deposited in the Chamber of the City for its Security, was at this Time so exhausted, that the Citizens became indebted to the said Orphans and other Creditors, in a greater Sum (seven hundred and forty-seven thousand five hundred Pounds) than they were immediately capable of discharging: Therefore, in order to enable them to pay their said Debts, they applied for the Assistance of Parliament; by whom it was enacted, Stat. Large & 6 Will. & Mar. The Orphan's Act.

"1. That, towards settling a perpetual Fund for paying the yearly Interest of four Pounds, for every hundred Pound due by the City to their Creditors, all the Manors, Messuages, Lands, Markets, Fairs, and other Hereditaments, Revenues and Income whatsoever, be"longing to the Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens, in Possession or Reversion, and all Improvements that shall be made thereof, (excepting the Estates and Possessions belonging to Christ's, St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas's, Bridewell, Betblehem, or any other of the City Hospitals, and the Estates appropriated for the Repair of London-Bridge) are for ever charged, from the twenty-fourth of June in the present Year, for raising annually the Sum of eight thousand Pounds, clear of all Deductions.

"2. That all the Profits arising from the several Aqueducts belonging to the City be applied towards the Payment of the said Interest.

"3. Towards the Support of the said Fund, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council are empowered annually to raise the Sum of two thousand Pounds, by an equal Assessment upon the personal Estates of the Citizens.

"4. Towards the Support of the said Fund, be paid the annual Sum of six hundred Pounds, being the Fine or Rent paid by certain Persons for the Privilege of illuminating the Streets of the City with convex Lamps." This tended very much to the Dishonour of the City, to make a pecuniary Advantage of a publick Benefit; but the same being removed, to the no small Honour of the Gentlemen in the present Direction of the City Affairs, I shall say no more on that Head.

"5. That every Apprentice, at the Time of his being bound, shall pay towards the said Fund two Shillings and six Pence.

"6. That every Person, upon his being admitted a Freeman of the City, shall pay towards the Support of the said Fund five Shillings.

"7. That every Ton of Wine, imported into the Port of London, shall pay towards the Support of the said Fund five Shillings.

"8. That, towards the Increase of the said Fund, all Coals imported into the Port of London shall pay four Pence the Chaldron Metage above what was formerly paid.

"9. And, as a further Increase to the said Fund, all Coals imported into the Port of London after the twenty-ninth of September, Anno 1700, the Measurable to pay six Pence the Chaldron, and the Weighable six Pence the Ton, for the Term of fifty Years. And to the Intent that the said Fund may be perpetual, it is enacted, That, after the Expiration of the said Term of fifty Years, when the said six Pence per Chaldron and Ton upon Coals shall cease, then all the Manors, Messuages, Lands, Tenements, Markets, Fairs, and the Duties thereof, and other Hereditaments, Revenues, and Income whatsoever, belonging to the City either in Possession or Reversion, shall stand charged with the yearly Sum of six thousand Pounds, over and above the already named Sum of eight thousand Pounds per Ann."

As the Advantages arising to the City Orphans, by this Act of Parliament are very great, I shall therefore subjoin an Account thereof for their Information and Benefit:

An Account of the Orphan's Tax.

1. All Orphans, who thro' Necessity had been obliged to dispose of their several Properties in the Chamber of London, before the twenty-fifth of December, Anno 1693, were by this Act impowered to redeem the same within the Term of three Years; for which they were only to repay the Purchase-Money, Charges, and an Interest of eight per Cent.

2. By this favourable Act, the said distressed Orphans were rescued from the devouring Hands of rapacious Agents or Solicitors, who, upon promising to procure an Act of Parliament for their Relief, had artfully deluded many of the unhappy Sufferers to enter into Obligations, for paying large Shares of their several Demands, when recovered; which amounting to very great Sums, the said Obligations were annulled, and the Solicitors, for what Trouble they had been at, referred to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen for a discretionary Compensation.

3. For better securing the Properties of the City Orphans for the future, they and their Trustees are for ever exempt from paying, or delivering into the Chamber of London, any Money, or other Parts of their Personal Estates.

4. And, as a further Security to the said Orphans, no Money of theirs, which shall be vested in the Orphans-Fund, can be removed from thence 'till they to whom it belongs be of Age, or, if a Daughter, when married: Whereby 'tis manifest, that a Guardian, who vests his Pupil's Money in this secure and profitable Fund, is eased of all the Trouble and Expence of giving Security to the City for that Money.

5. As soon as Application shall be made to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, in Behalf of any of the City Orphans, to have the Benefit of the Orphans-Fund, the Money deposited on Account of such Orphan shall be taken in at Par, (altho' the present Premium is about 12 per Cent.) on which and every such Occasion a Non-Orphan is paid off; to the Amount of the said Money, to make Room for an Orphan or Orphans, who are best intitled to the Profits thereof.

6. And, in order to make the said Fund as beneficial to the City Orphans as possible, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen have ordered, that no Fees whatsoever shall be taken by any of the City Officers, for any Business done by them in relation to the said Fund.

After all these very great Advantages in Favour of the City Orphans, 'tis very amazing to find, that, since the Commencement of the said Act of Parliament, in the Year 1694, for establishing the said Fund, all the several Sums vested therein on Account of the said Orphans, to the Year 1735, only amounted to about the Sum of one hundred thousand Pounds.

The present State of this Tax will be more particularly related in the Year 1747, when there passed an Act of Parliament to confirm the Resolutions of the Common Council towards the Aid of the Orphans-Fund.

As this undoubtedly is owing to Ignorance, and not to Neglect, I think myself indispensibly obliged to advise all the City Orphans, and their respective Guardians, to lose no Time in vesting the Personal Estates of their several Pupils in this very secure and advantageous Fund; the great Profits whereof have hitherto been ingrossed by a few cunning Men: Therefore, 'tis now high Time for the said Orphans, (who have a better Claim, and who probably at present are rich enough, to fill the said Fund, and turn out the foreign Proprietors) to apply themselves to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, to obtain the designed Advantage; which will not only be a great Benefit to them, but likewise to the helpless City Orphans hereafter, by shewing them the Way thither.

No. 42.

About the same Time, the Turkey Company, in an humble Address, represented to the Queen the vast Losses they had lately sustained at Sea by the French, for want of sufficient Convoys; where-with her Majesty was so sensibly touched, that she not only appointed a Committee of the Privy-Council to examine into the Cause of the late Misfortune, but likewise that effectual Care might be taken for preventing the like for the future. These laudable Endeavours of the Queen gave such a general Satisfaction in the City, that the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen addressed her there-upon, with hearty Congratulations upon the King's wonderful Preservation in the Battle of Landen, in Flanders; and likewise returned humble Thanks for her Majesty's gracious Care of the Merchants of this City; and withal assured her, that as they had formerly expressed their utmost Zeal for their Majesties Service, so they were heartily glad of the present Opportunity of renewing the same, by assisting her Majesty with Money upon the present Emergency; and humbly entreated her to be assured of their sincere and firm Resolution of continuing their best Endeavours, upon all Occasions, for the Support of their Majesties Authority and Government, against all Attempts whatsoever. And the Citizens, for accomplishing their Promise in the said Address, immediately in Common Council agreed to advance the Sum of three hundred thousand Pounds, required by her Majesty, which they soon after raised, and paid into the Exchequer.

The King, on the twenty-ninth of October, being returned from Holland, was received in this City in a most dutiful and joyful Manner; and three Days after was attended by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Recorder, who in the Name of the City congratulated his Majesty upon his safe Arrival after so dangerous a Campaign: To which he returned a gracious Answer; and, as a Mark of his Favour, conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Abney, one of the Sheriffs.

At this Time, by great Rains in Autumn, so great a Quantity of Corn was spoiled; that a great Dearth ensued, when Wheat was sold for three Pounds seven Shillings and eight Pence the Quarter, and other Grain in Proportion.

Some time after, the Number of Hawkers and Pedlars increased so greatly in this City, that they became as it were a Pest to the Citizens; wherefore it was by the Lord-Mayor and Common Council enacted, "That no Person should presume to sell any Goods, or Merchandize, in any Street, Lane, Passage, Tavern, Inn, Ale-house, or other publick Place within the City or Liberties thereof, other than in open Markets and Fairs, upon the Penalty of forty Shillings

"Which said Sum or Sums of Money, so forfeited and recovered from Time to Time, (the necessary Charges for the Recovery thereof being first deducted) shall be to the Uses, and disposed of as followeth: That is to say, one Moiety thereof to be paid and delivered to the Treasurer of St. Thomas's Hospital, to be employed towards the Relief of the Poor, Sick and Maimed, provided for and maintained in the said Hospital: And the other Moiety to him or them that shall and doth prosecute and sue for the same (in Manner as aforesaid) from Time to Time: Any Law, Custom or Usage contrary thereof notwithstanding."

In the Month of February, a Conspiracy was discovered for assassinating the King, the happy Detection whereof struck the People with an equal Degree of Horror and Repentment, and the wicked Design was every-where received with such a just Detestation, that it soon produced a general Association for the Preservation of his Majesty's Person, and Security of the Kingdom; which was readily entered into, and signed by the Members of both Houses of Parliament (a very few excepted). And, as an Evidence of the laudable Zeal of the City upon this surprizing Occasion, it was cheerfully subscribed by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Common Council and Lieutenancy of London; which was as follows:

"Whereas there has been a horrid and detestable Conspiracy, formed and carried on by the Papists, and other wicked and traitorous Persons, for assassinating his Majesty's Royal Person, in order to encourage an Invasion from France, to subvert our Religion, Laws and Liberty: We, whose Names are hereunto subscribed, do heartily, sincerely, and solemnly profess, testify and declare, that his present Majesty, King William, is Rightful and Lawful King of these Realms. And we do mutually promise and engage to stand by and assist each other, to the utmost of our Power, in the Support and Defence of his Majesty's most sacred Person and Government, against the late King James, and all his Adherents. And, in case his Majesty come to any violent, or untimely Death, (which God forbid) we do hereby further freely and unanimously oblige ourselves, to unite, associate, and stand by each other, in revenging the same upon his Enemies, and their Adherents; and in supporting and defending the Succession of the Crown, according to an Act made in the first Year of King William and Queen Mary, intitled, An Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and settling the Succession of the Crown."

The Dearth being somewhat abated, Wheat was now sold at two Rounds thirteen Shillings the Quarter.

An Act of Common Council was passed on the twenty-first of June, in the seventh Year of King William III. Sir Thomas Law, Mayor, for settling the Methods of Calling, Adjourning, and Dissolving the Common-Halls upon the several Elections of the City Officers therein mentioned; which Act, taking Notice in the Preamble of the Disputes concerning such Rights and Powers to Call and Adjourn, &c. declares, "That for the preventing the like Mischiefs for the future, the Right of assembling Common-Halls for the Election of Lord-Mayors, Sheriffs, and other Publick Officers for the City," (out of which their Members of Parliament are to be excepted, as will be mentioned hereafter) "and the Power to dissolve the same after such Elections are made and finished, and not otherwise, is and ought to be in the Lord-Mayor of the City for the Time being."

Upon which we must remark, that, in the first Instance, there is no Power in the Lord-Mayor, but that of Assembling and then Dissolving the Court after such Elections are made and finished.

The next Clause of the Act therefore has ordained, "That whenever any Poll or Scrutiny shall be demanded, or other Difficulty arise, which may require an Adjournment, that then the Right of Granting and Taking the Poll and Scrutiny, and adjourning the Hall from Time to Time, till the same be concluded, shall be in the Sheriffs."

But since from hence it may happen, as the next Proviso takes Notice, that the two Sheriffs, thus invested with a joint Authority, may have Disputes and Differences touching any Matter relating to the Adjournments, Polls, or Scrutinies, which might impede the completing of them within the Times limited, then and in such Case the Act directs, "That all such Differences shall be determined by the Lord-Mayor; and whatever Orders he makes therein shall be observed by the Sheriffs, or, in Default of their Compliance, he may proceed himself in Granting and Taking the Poll and Scrutiny, and in adjourning the Hall until all shall be finally concluded."

Agreeable to this Establishment, it is now the Custom, at all these Common-Halls, for the Lord-Mayor to appear upon the Hustings attended by the Aldermen, together with the two Sheriffs; and, Proclamation being made by the Common Crier for all Persons to draw near and attend their Summons, the Recorder and Common-Serjeant thereupon usually address themselves to the Livery, and open the Business and Intent of the Meeting; after which his Lordship retires with the Aldermen, and leaves the Management of the intermediate Proceedings to the Sheriffs; and accordingly, upon the Candidates being proposed, 'tis They who declare upon the Question; and, if a Poll be demanded, 'tis They who appoint the Clerks to take it; and, upon the Result, after a Scrutiny made, which is also submitted to their Judgment; 'tis They that make the Declaration of the Majority unto the Lord-Mayor; who, returning back, certifies the Election to the Common-Hall by the Recorder, and then the Court is dissolved by his Order.

But there is one Exception to the contrary of this, with respect to the Election of the Representatives of the City to sit in Parliament, who seem not to be included in the general Description of the above Statute as publick City Officers, but are chosen at a Common-Hall, met by Virtue of a Notice from the Sheriffs, in Pursuance of the Writ directed to them; in which Case the Sheriffs only are concerned in the Return, and have an exclusive Power, given and specified by other Statutes, to convene the Voters, to preside at the Poll, to adjourn from Time to Time, and to make the final Declaration; They therefore are solely the Masters of all these Proceedings, and the Lord-Mayor has no Authority of interposing.

I thought it proper to premise all this, because Magistrates and presiding Officers cannot be guilty of a more fatal Error, than either disputing the settled Jurisdiction of Others, or assuming greater Powers to Themselves than what are admitted by the Laws of the Land, or the Constitution of their own Corporation.

Ibid. Upon proceeding to the Election of a Lord-Mayor, all the Aldermen under the Chair, who have served the Office of Sheriffs, are proposed in Rotation, two of which are to be returned by the Common-Hall to the Court of Aldermen; and it has been the usual Custom of the Liverymen to nominate the two Senior Aldermen, under the Chair, and the Court of Aldermen, upon the like Example, have usually elected the Senior of those two into the Office. But that each of them have a Right to deviate from this usual Method of Rotation, is what no one can dispute; the only Question is, How far the Exercise of that Right may be justified, when it is not founded on such Motives as have a real Tendency to the greater Dignity and better Government of the Community in general?

In like Manner, upon the Election of Sheriffs, all the Aldermen who have not served that Office, are first put up in their Order of Seniority; but, by whatever Laws these might have formerly claimed the Priority of being so elected, yet 'tis certain the Liverymen at present are at Liberty to choose whom they think proper, either out of that Court, or of those nominated by the Lord-Mayor that have not been excused, or any others that shall be proposed at the Time of Election. This indeed is the true and proper Freedom of Election, which the Livery reserve to themselves upon this, as well as that other Occasion of electing Members to sit in Parliament.

Complaint being made to the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, of great Abuses committed by the Farmers of the City Markets against the Market-People, by exorbitantly extorting from them large Sums of Money; wherefore a Committee of four Aldermen and eight Commoners were appointed to examine into that Affair; which they having carefully performed, they made their Report on the twenty-ninth of July; whereby it appeared, that the said Farmers had received from the several Markets of Newgate, Honey-Lane, Stocks, and Leadenball, (as the Stalls were then lett) annually for Rent, ten thousand eight hundred and ninety-six Pounds nine Shillings and ten Pence; and besides, they had received of the present Tenants for Fines, the Sum of two thousand one hundred and ninety-four Pounds one Shilling and six Pence. By which arbitrary and extravagant Proceedings, the Committee were of Opinion, that they had forfeited their Leases, by converting the Markets to other Uses than what were intended or mentioned in their Covenants. And, for preventing all such intolerable and unjustifiable Impositions for the future, the Committee caused the Table of Rates, mentioned in the Year 1678, to be reprinted, for the Information of all such as frequent the said Markets.

By Virtue of this Report, divers Suits were commenced against Thomas Burdet, Thomas Kilner, and others, Farmers of the said Markets, the Arbitrement whereof was, by a Rule of the Court of King's-Bench, referred to Sir Nathan Wright and Sir Bartholomew Shower, Serjeants at Law; who, by their Sentence, which was definitive, awarded, that the said Farmers should return the several Sums of Money unjustly extorted by them; and that, for the future, every Thing to remain upon the antient Foundation, as regulated by an Act of Common Council in the Year 1674.

The Meeting of Parliament drawing near, the Citizens of London presented the following memorable Instructions to their Representatives:

"We, the Citizens of this City, considering that the Parliament is suddenly to meet, and seriously reflecting upon the continual Endeavours of a bloody and discontented Party, who, trusting upon the King's Clemency, and the Impunity they have hitherto met with, conspired to assassinate his Majesty's Royal Person, and to overturn the Government, in order to subject us under the Yoke of France; the Dread of which has made an incurable Wound in the Credit of this Nation, and has had a fatal Influence upon our Trade: We thought we could no longer keep Silence upon so important an Occasion, while we behold our Religion, our Estates, our Liberties, and all that is most dear to us, in imminent Danger; but that it was our Duty to declare and testify our great Zeal and Affection for the King, and our firm Resolution to aid and assist him with our Lives and Fortunes against his Enemies, and the Enemies of the Nation, and to use our utmost Endeavours to establish his Glory and our own Happiness.

"And, because we have Reason to believe that the best, or rather the only Means to preserve the King's Person, and settle the Government,

The King's

Treaty of Ryswick.

The King being returned from Holland after the Conclusion of the Treaty of Ryswick, he was humbly intreated by the Lord-Mayor and Citizens of London, on that happy and joyful Occasion, to make his publick Entry into this City; which his Majesty graciously condescending to, he was pleased, on the sixteenth of November, to set out from Greenwich in his Coach of State, accompanied by his Royal Highness George, Prince of Denmark, and attended by the great Officers of State, together with a vast Train of the Nobility and Gentry. On his Majesty's Approach to the City, he was received at St. Margaret's-Hill, in Southwark, by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, and Sheriffs, in their Formalities, on Horseback; where the Lord-Mayor, alighting, presented the City Sword to his Majesty, who returned it, with a gracious Command to bear it before him. Whereupon the Recorder dismounted, and, in a short but eloquent Speech, congratulated his Majesty on the Conclusion of the late Peace, and on his safe and happy Return to his dutiful and loyal People.

"From thence an hundred of the City Train'd-Bands led the Way, followed by two of the King's Coaches, and one of Prince George's, the two City Marshals with their Men; the Sheriffs, and City Officers, according to their several Degrees, the latter on Horseback; after whom rode the Aldermen, Sheriffs, and such as had fined for either of those Dignities.

"Then came the King's Trumpets and Kettle-Drums, the Heralds of Arms according to their Distinctions, between the Serjeants at Arms bearing their Maces, all bare-headed. Then the Lord-Mayor, in a crimson Velvet Gown, with his Collar and Jewel, bearing the Sword between Clarenceux King at Arms on his right Hand, and one of the Gentlemen-Ushers on the Left.

"Then the King, in a rich Coach of State, accompanied by Prince George, with one Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber in Waiting, and attended on each Side by his Majesty's Equerries, Footmen, and Yeomen of the Guard, led by their respective Officers, and followed by his Majesty's Life-Guards, and a long Train of Coaches, with each six Horses, of the Great

"Arriving at Whitehall, the Lord-Mayor attended his Majesty to the Foot of the Stairs leading to the Royal Apartments; where, having taken Leave of his Majesty, his Lordship and the Aldermen were conducted to the Lord-Steward's Lodging, where they were entertained with an elegant Supper.

"The Balconies and Windows were crowded with infinite Numbers of Spectators; so that it was in a Manner a double Shew, while the Cavalcade was a pleasing Sight to the Beholders, and they no less a delightful Object to the Cavalcade."

On this joyful Occasion, the City was embellished with the most pompous Decorations; and before St. Paul's School were placed the Blue-coat-Boys, one of whom congratulated his Majesty in a very handsome Speech.

KING William dying on the eighth of March, 1702, the Princess Anne, Daughter to the late King James, and Consort to his Royal Highness George Prince of Denmark, succeeded to the Crown, with the universal Joy and Satisfaction of the Nation. On which Occasion, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council of this City, as an Evidence of their Zeal and Affection to her Majesty, presented this congratulatory Address:

"Most Gracious Sovereign,

Monthly Mercury.

The City's Address to Queen Anne on her Accession to the Throne.

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, being sensibly affected with the great and surprizing Loss of our late glorious Monarch William the Third, the Restorer and Preserver of our Religion and our Liberties, humbly crave Leave to condole the same. But since kind Providence hath so amply supplied it, by placing your sacred Majesty on the Throne of your Royal Ancestors; with Hearts inflamed with Zeal and Loyalty, we humbly take Leave to congratulate your Majesty's most happy Accession to these Crowns, your most undoubted Right. Your Majesty's most gracious Declaration in Council hath fixed in us those just Sentiments which we had before entertained of your Majesty's Wisdom, Justice, and Zeal for the Protestant Religion, as by Law established; which is a convincing Proof, that the Good of your People is your only End and Design.

"We therefore (as becomes all good Subjects) humbly offer to your Majesty all the Assurance that can be given of our affectionate Zeal and constant Fidelity to your Majesty's Person and Government, and that we are ready to sacrifice all that is dear to us in Defence thereof, against the pretended Prince of Wales, the Power of the French King, (his only Supporter) and all other your Majesty's Enemies whatsoever."

At this Time Robberies and Burglaries becoming very frequent in this City, after the breaking-up of the Watch in the Morning, it was, at the General Quarter-Sessions, held at Guildhall on the twelfth of October by her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, ordered, That thenceforth all the respective Constables within the City and Liberties thereof, shall, from the first of November to the first of February, set their several Watches at Ten at Night, and continue the same till Six in the Morning.

The Queen having been graciously pleased to accept of an Invitation from the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, for honouring the City at Dinner on the approaching Lord-Mayor's Day, her Majesty, attended by the great Officers of State, and a numerous Train of the Nobility and Gentry, repaired to the City; on which Occasion the Orange and Red Regiments of Train'd-Bands lined the Streets on both Sides, from Temple-Bar to Ludgate, and her Majesty, preceded by the Artillery Company, at the West End of St. Paul's Church, was entertained with a Speech by one of the Workhouse Children; whence proceeding to the East End of the said Church, she was diverted by an excellent Speech from one of the Bluecoat-Boys; and from thence advancing to Cheapside, beheld the magnificent Cavalcade from a Balcony opposite Bow-Church; which being over, her Majesty was, by the Sheriffs, conducted to Guildhall, where she was entertained in a most sumptuous and magnificent Manner. And, to manifest her Satisfaction in that Respect, was graciously pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Gilbert Heathcote, Francis Dashwood, James Eyton, and Richard Hear, Esqrs; after which she returned to her Palace of St. James's, amidst the joyful Acclamations of the People, and Illuminations that vied with the Sun in Glory.

On this Occasion, the Streets from St. James's to Temple-Bar were lined by the Westminster Train'd-Bands, and, from Temple-Bar to Ludgate, by those of the City; and in St. Paul's Church and Church-yard were posted two Companies of Foot-Guards.

At Temple-Bar the Queen was received by the Lord-Mayor, in a Robe of crimson Velvet, who surrendering the City Sword to her Majesty, she was graciously pleased to return the same, with an Order to carry it before her, being preceded by the Aldermen and Sheriffs on Horse-back.

The Queen being arrived at St. Paul's, she was received at the West Gate by the Peers, Kings and Officers at Arms, and the Band of Gentlemen Pensioners in Waiting. The Sword of State being carried by the Duke of Ormond, her Majesty walked between the Duke of Somerset and the Lord-Chamberlain; and, having entered the Choir, seated herself on a Throne erected at the West End thereof. The Peers sat in the Area of the Church, according to their Priority; the Commons in the Stalls and upper Galleries; the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber, Maids of Honour, and other Ladies of the highest Quality, together with the Foreign Ministers, in the lower Galleries next the Throne; and the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen in the lower Galleries next the Altar. The Bishop of London in his own Stall. The Dean and Prebendaries, within the Rails of the Altar, and the Choir, in the Organ-Loft. Prayers were read and sung by the Residentiaries and Minor Canons; the Communion-Service by the Bishop of London, the Sermon by the Bishop of Exeter, and the Hymn and Te Deum, and divers fine Anthems, admirably set to Musick, were curiously performed, both vocally and instrumentally, by a great Number of the best Performers. At which Time both the Tower and Park Guns were discharged, as they likewise were at her Majesty's Departure and Return to St. James's.

The Streets thro' which the Procession passed were richly adorned with the finest Tapestries, Silks, and Carpets, and the Night concluded with the Ringing of Bells, Bonfires, Fire-works, Illuminations, and the greatest Rojoicings that had been known on such an Occasion since the Year 1588, when Queen Elizabeth came to the said Church in a very pompous Manner, to return Thanks to the Almighty for her great Success in destroying the vast Spanish Armado, absurdly called Invincible.

Account Storm.
A.D. 1703

The great November Storm.

On Friday, the twenty-sixth of November, happened the greatest and most dreadful Storm of Wind that perhaps ever was known in any Age or Nation. It began about Eleven at Night, and, increasing till about Seven in the Morning, with a redoubled Fury, committed the most unheard-of Devastations, by overturning Houses, blowing down an infinite Number of Trees, Brick Walls, and Stacks of Chimnies; by the falling of which many Persons were buried in the Ruins, many of whom being killed outright, and great Numbers grievously mangled, whilst others, without the least Hurt, were amazingly preserved among the Rubbish.

By the Impetuosity of this unparalleled Hurricane, many Spires and Turrets were destroyed, and, upon Churches and other publick Buildings, Sheets of Lead were rolled up like Scrolls, and blown from their Places to the Distance of many Feet. But the greatest Mischief in this City was among the Houses, scarce any escaping without Damage; for, at the Approach of Day, they appeared like so many Skeletons, being mostly stripped; as may be partly guessed at, by the excessive Rise of Tiles from one Pound one Shilling the Thousand to six Pounds. 'Tis not easy to conceive what an Air of Surprise appeared in the Countenances of all in the Morning; for the Thoughts of Trade were seemingly laid aside, and the principal Concern was the immediate Repair of the Houses, to preserve the Inhabitants from the Inclemency of the Weather in that rigorous Season.

Ibid.

During this terrible Disaster, the Lives of divers Persons were preserved in a very amazing and incredible Manner, but more especially in the Poultry, where two Boys lying in a Garret, a huge Stack of Chimnies fell in, which making its Way thro' that and all the other Floors to the Cellar, 'twas followed by the Bed with the Boys asleep in it, who first awaked in that gloomy Place of Confusion, without the least Hurt. The Streets, on this melancholy Occasion, were covered with Brick-bats, broken Tiles, Signs, Bulks, and Pent-houses. But, alas! the Damage at Sea far exceeded that at Land; for, in that dreadful Night, twelve Men of War were lost, with above eighteen hundred Men on board; besides the prodigious Loss of Merchant-Ships, computed at ten Times the Value: For at that Time our Sea Roads were full of Ships, especially the Downs, where most were absorbed by the merciless Waves; nay, even in the River Thames, from London-Bridge to Limehouse, only four rid it out, the rest being drove to Limehouse, lay miserably beating against one another by the irresistible Fury of the Tempest, which occasioned a prodigious Damage.

The Duke of Marlborough having obtained a compleat Victory over the French and Bavarian Armies at Blenheim in Bavaria, the Queen, to shew her Gratitude to the Almighty for this great and glorious Success, appointed the seventh of September a solemn Day of Thanksgiving; at which Time her Majesty came to St. Paul's Church to celebrate that Festival, as on the like Occasion she did in the Year 1702; to which this in all Respects was equal in Pomp and Magnificence, except the Houses of Lords and Commons not being present.

A third solemn Thanksgiving.

A fourth solemn Thanksgiving.

Several Standards taken at Ramillies presented to the City.

The Duke of Marlborough having successfully forced the French Lines in Flanders, which were almost deemed impregnable, with little or no Loss, the Queen on that joyful Occasion appointed the twenty-third of August a solemn Day of Thanksgiving for that great Success. At which Time her Majesty, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince, repaired to St. Paul's Church, with the usual State and Magnificence, where having solemnized the Day, she returned amidst the incessant and truly joyful Acclamations of the People.

The Duke of Marlborough having obtained a great and glorious Victory over the French at Ramillies in Flanders, it was attended with a Train of such amazing Successes as can scarce be paralleled in History: Wherefore the Queen, out of her pious Regard to the Almighty Author of Victory, appointed the twenty-seventh of June to be kept a solemn Day of Thanksgiving. On which Occasion her Majesty repaired again to St. Paul's Church, in the utmost State and Magnificence, where she celebrated the joyful Festival, and returned amidst the joyful Acclamations of a thankful and loving People.

Upon the humble Request of the Citizens of London to the Queen, she was graciously pleased to confer upon them the several Standards and Colours taken by the British Troops at the famous Battle of Ramillies. Pursuant to which Grant, they were, on the nineteenth of December, brought from Whitehall (where they had been for some Time deposited) by Detachments of the Horse-Guards and Grenadiers, and a Battalion of Foot-Guards. First marched the Horse Grenadiers, followed by the Detachment of Life-Guards, twenty-six whereof in the Centre carried each a Standard; and the Battalion of Foot closing the March, the Pikemen thereof, to the Number of sixty, carried each one of the Colours.

The thirtieth of the same Month being by the Queen appointed for a Day of General Thanksgivings, for the great Successes of the last Campaign in Spain and Italy, she came in the usual State to St. Paul's Church, and celebrated that Solemnity.

The long-wished-for Union of the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, which in divers Reigns had been unsuccessfully attempted, being, by the laudable Care and indefatigable Rains of her Majesty, happily accomplished; which commencing on the first of May, her Majesty appointed the same to be solemnized as a General Day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for his being graciously pleased to accomplish so great and desirable a Work, which would prove a great Blessing to the united Kingdoms.

For the solemnizing of this great Festival, the Queen came to the Church of St. Paul, in the greatest State, attended by the Nobility of both Nations most sumptuously apparalled. The Streets thro' which the Procession passed were embellished with the most pompous Decorations; and from St. James's to Temple-Bar they were on both Sides lined by the Westminster Trained-Bands; and from Temple-Bar to St. Paul's by the City Companies in their Formalities, with the City-Trained-Bands before them. At Temple-Bar her Majesty was received by the Lord-Mayor, who, after a handsome Speech, delivered to her the City-Sword, which she was pleased to return, with a Command to carry it before her, which he performed on Horseback uncovered. At the Church Door her Majesty was received by the Nobility, and handed to the Choir by the Duke of Kent, Lord Chamberlain of the Household, and the Sword of State was carried by the Earl of Seaford. On this pleasing and happy Occasion, the publick Rejoicings were such as could not be excelled.

In this Year divers great Fires happened in this City and Suburbs, chiefly occasioned by the Carelessness of Servants; which the Parliament taking into Consideration, occasioned their making an Act for preventing such fatal Accidents for the future; and, for the more effectual Publication thereof, the Lord-Mayor and Common Council caused the following Clause to be printed, and a Copy thereof to be sent to every House within the City and Liberties of London:

"Whereas divers Fires often happen by the Negligence and Carelessness of Servants; Be it therefore enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That if any Menial, or other Servant, or Servants, through Negligence, or Carelessness, shall fire, or cause to be fired, any Dwelling-house, or Out-house, or Houses; such Servant or Servants, being thereof lawfully convicted, by the Oath of one or more credible Witnesses, made before two or more of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, shall forfeit and pay the Sum of one hundred Pounds, unto the Church-Wardens of such Parish where the Fire shall happen, to be distributed amongst the Sufferers by such Fire, in such Proportions as to the said Church-Wardens shall seem just. And in case of Default, or Refusal to pay the same immediately after such Conviction, the same being lawfully demanded by the said Church-Wardens, that then and in such Case, such Servant or Servants

About the Middle of August, such a prodigi-

The French, in the Year 1688, by their cruel

Palatinate in Germany by Fire, having stripped the miserable Inhabitants of all the Conveniences of Life, they were reduced to the most deplorable State of Misery, which for many Years they industriously laboured to extricate themselves out of; but, by the frequent Incursions of their cruel Neighbours the French, all their Endeavours proved abortive; and, seeing no End of their Mi-series, left their Country, and sought Refuge in this; which, by the Fame of its excellent Constitution, Justice and Clemency of its Government, and the charitable Disposition of its Inhabitants, they chose before all others: And, in the Month of June, four thousand seven hundred and seventy-four of those distressed and miserable Oband who being soon followed by others, their Number increased to near twelve thousand.

But as these unhappy Creatures had nothing to subsist on, the Queen, out of her great Goodness and Charity, entertained them at first at her own Expence; which laudable Example was soon followed by many of her well-disposed Subjects:
But all not being sufficient to subsist so great a Multitude for any considerable Time, her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the County of Mid- dlesex, out of Compassion to their Necessities, humbly moved the Queen for a Brief, for collecting the Charity of all tender-hearted Christians in their County: Which her Majesty was not only graciously pleased to grant, but likewise for its extending to all Parts of the Kingdom: And in pursuance of which, by her Letters Patents, constituted as Trustees thereof the great Officers of State, and others of the prime Nobility, together with the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City, and other Persons of Distinction both in Church and State, in and about the Cities of London and Wexminster, consisting of a hundred and twenty-one; who were no sooner assembled than they published the following Order:

Ibid.

"By Order of the Right Honourable the "Lords, and others, appointed Commissioners "and Trustees, by her Majesty's Letters Patents
"under the Great Seal, for collecting, receiving "and disposing of the Money to be collected for "the Subsistence and Settlement of the poor
"Palatines, Notice is hereby given, that the "said Commissioners will meet in a General Meet"ing in the Chapter-House of St. Paul's every "Wednesday, at four o'Clock in the Afternoon;
"and that, in order to receive Proposals for im-"ploying and settling the said Palatines, and to "prepare Business for the said General Meeting,
"they will meet in the New Buildings adjoining
"to the Banqueting-house in Whitehall, on every "Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, at four o'Clock "in the Afternoon, the first of the said Meet"ings to be To-morrow; and that they will
"likewise meet as a Committee, in the Council-"Chamber of Guildhall, London, on every Mon"day and Friday at four o'Clock in the After"noon, and on every Wednesday at ten o'Clock "in the Morning; the first of the said Meeting
"to be on Friday next."

The Collections in divers Places were carried on with the greatest Success; whilst in others they were much obstructed by Men seemingly divested not only of Charity, but even of Humanity, in preventing the Charity of others, by absurdly insinuating, that the Government were greatly to blame for bringing over a Multitude of Beggars, seeing we had enough of our own. However, the most eminent Citizens of London were not to be imposed upon by such base Insinuations, but contributed very liberally; many whereof gave large Sums, and Mr. Girardot, a French Merchant, gave the Sum of five hundred Pounds; whereby the Sum total, collected and paid into the Chamber of London upon that Account, amounted Sachever.

Trial. Henry Sacheverel, D. D. and Chaplain of St. Saviour's Southwark, was by the House of Commons impeached of high Crimes and Misdemeanors, for preaching two Sermons, the first at the Affizes held at Derby, on the fifteenth of August, and the Last before the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of London, on the fifth of November, in St. Paul's Church. And his Trial commencing on the twenty-seventh of February, before the Lords in Westminster-hall, the Populace imagined, that instead of the Doctor's Ruin, that of the Church was intended; and believing the same to be a Contrivance of the Presbyterians, breathed Destruction to them, and all other Dissenters. And a great Multitude returning with the Doctor from Westminster (on the third Day of his Trial) to his Lodgings in the Temple, they ran from thence like so many enraged Furies, to the Meeting-house of Mr. Burgess, a Presbyterian Minister, in New-Court, Little Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, which they instantly breaking open, stript it of its Doors, Casements, Sconces, Waincoat, Pews and Pulpit, which they carried into Lincoln's-Inn-Fields; and, whilst they were erecting the same into a Pile, a Party was sent to surprize Burgess at his House, in order to have burnt him in his Pulpit on the Top of the said Pile: But Burgess providentially escaping out at a back Window, luckily got off without being made a Holocaust to Party Zeal.

Hist. Eng. Meeting-

Ibid. The Mob, being increased to an excessive Multitude, divided themselves into divers Parties, who, taking different Routs, ran and destroyed the Meeting-houses in Drury-Lane, New-Street, Leather-Lane, Black-Friers, and St. John's-Square.

Ibid. Guards commanded into the City to protect the Bank, and to disperse
the Mob. This Commotion occasioning a great Uneasiness in the Directors of the Bank, they assembled to concert Measures proper to be taken at that Juncture; pursuant to the Resolutions agreed upon, they sent to the principal Secretary of State, for a Guard to prevent an Attempt upon the Bank: This Message was no sooner received than the Earl of Sunderland acquainted the Queen therewith, who with the greatest Concern commanded his Lordship forthwith to dispatch the Guards, both Horse and Foot, to quell the Tumult; but the Earl, representing the Danger her Majesty's Person might be exposed to, by being deprived of her Guards in a Time of such general Distraction, especially by Night, (it being about eleven o'Clock) she generously replied, That God would be her Guard: Therefore desired him to lose no Time.

Ibid. Pursuant to this Command Sunderland, immediately repaired to his Office at Whitehall, where the Lord Chancellor, Duke of Newcastle, and others of the Nobility, waited his Return. The Secretary, having sent for Horsey, the commanding Officer of the Guard, ordered him immediately to mount, march, and disperse the Mob; the Captain, being upon Duty for the immediate Preservation of the Queen's Person, refused to obey the Secretary's Order; but being told that it was her Majesty's express Command, he complied upon this Condition, that Sunderland should give him an Order under his Hand; but no Time being to be lost, the Earl, upon his Honour, promised him such an Order the next Morning. Whereupon the old Soldier merrily asked, Whether he was to preach, or to fight the Mob? If the former, he desired a better Speaker might be sent; but if the latter, Fighting was his Trade, and he would do his best. Sunderland replied, that must be left to his own Discretion; but to forbear violent Means but in case of Necessity.

Matters thus agreed upon between Sunderland and the Captain, he marched at the Head of his Guard to Drury-Lane, where he easily dispersed the Mob; but George Purchase, a broken Trooper, but then a Bailiff's Follower, with a few of the most resolute of his Companions, made a Stand, and cried, Damn ye, who are you for, high Church, or low Church, or Dr. Sacheverel? And encouraging his Fellows, said, Come on, Boys, I'll lead you, I'm for high Church and Sacheverel, and I'll lose my Life in the Cause: Then running resolutely with his Sword, made a full Pass at the Captain; but being parried, was instantly apprehended, with most of his Followers. Whereupon, a small Detachment being sent to guard the Bank, the rest marched to Black-Friers, where meeting with some Opposition from the Rabble, that was rifling the Meeting-house in that Place, they attacked them, and by wounding some of the most desperate, they all took to their Heels; but divers, being taken in the Pursuit, were immediately sent to Prison. The News of this rough Treatment had no sooner reached the other Mobs, dispersed in divers Parts of the City, than they immediately retired. However, the Guards patrolled the Streets, not only the remaining Part of the Night, but likewise for divers Nights after. During this Tumult, the Trained-Bands Drums were beating to Arms all over the City, and one Regiment thereof were continually kept on Duty, during the remaining Part of Sacheverel's Trial; who at last was condemned not to preach during the Term of three Years, and his two Sermons to be burnt at the Royal Exchange, by the Hands of the common Hangman.

Tumults, in some measure, still continuing in this City, for the redressing of which, the Lord-Mayor, in Obedience to her Majesty's Command, published the following Order:

"Whereas her Majesty has been informed, that of late many loose, idle, and disorderly Persons have used in the Evenings, in a riotous and tumultuous Manner, to gather together in the Streets and other Passages of this City, and the Suburbs thereof; where they make Bonfires and Illuminations, stop the Coaches, and assault the Persons of the Inhabitants, and other her Majesty's Subjects, who happen to pass by upon their lawful Occasions, insult their Houses, break their Windows, forcibly and illegally demand Money of them; and by violent and unwarrantable Means oblige them to illuminate their Houses, and furnish Wood for the said Bonfires, and commit other great Disorders, in open Defiance of her Majesty's Royal Authority, and her Will and Pleasure declared,

"declared in her late Proclamation in that Behalf; in Contempt of the Proceedings of the High Court of Parliament now assembled, in Breach of the Peace, to the great Terror of her Majesty's Subjects, and the endangering of their Lives and Possessions, and of the Quiet and good Government of this City: The Continuance of which Riots and Tumults (as it hath been represented to her Majesty) is in a great Measure owing to the Want of Activity and Diligence in the several Magistrates and Officers, to whose Care the Preservation of the Peace, and the preventing and suppressing such rebellious and tumultuous Assemblies does appertain. At which Proceedings, so unbecoming the Loyalty for which this City has in all Times been so deservedly famous, her Majesty has expressed her Displeasure; and thereupon hath been pleased strictly to charge and command his Lordship, and all other Magistrates and Officers in this City and Liberties thereof, thereunto legally authorized, as they will answer the contrary at their Peril, that they and every of them do forthwith put in Execution, with the utmost Vigilance and Care, all and every the Laws and Statutes whatsoever now in Force against Treasons, traitorous Conspiracies, Riots, Routts, unlawful Assemblies, and other Breaches of the Peace; and such Persons as have refused or shall refuse to take the Oaths appointed by Law; and to seize and apprehend all Persons whatever offending against the same: And to tender to all Persons, whom they shall have Reason to suspect of Disaffection to the Government, the Oaths appointed by Law, particularly the Oath of Abjuration.

"The Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor doth therefore (by the Advice of his Brethren the Aldermen) in her Majesty's Name, strictly charge and command all Constables, Church-Wardens, and all other Officers and Ministers of Justice within this City, and Liberties thereof, that they fail not, from Time to Time, to prevent and suppress all Assemblies of rude and disorderly Persons in the Streets, or any other Places; and the making any Bonfires, or other Illuminations, Ringing of Bells, Setting up of Lights, or other like Practices for publick Rejoicings, within their respective Precincts and Divisions (without publick Authority for so doing); and also, That they apprehend all Persons that shall offend herein, or be found attempting any of the said Disorders, and bring them before his Lordship, or some other Justice of the Peace, within this City or Liberties, to be committed, or bound over to the Sessions for the same. Likewise, That they return, from Time to Time, to the two next Justices (whereof one to be of the Quorum) the Names of such Persons within their several Precincts, whom they shall suspect of Disaffection to the Government, to the End the Oaths aforesaid may be tendered to them. And his Lordship doth require the City Marshal to seize and apprehend, from Time to Time, all Hawkers, and other Persons, whom they shall find crying and exposing to Sale in the Streets of this City, or Liberties thereof, any

"feditious Books or Pamphlets reflecting upon the Government, and bring them before some Justice of the Peace, to be examined, and dealt with according to Law; and doth also charge the several Beadles of the several Wards to go from House to House, throughout the same, and give the Inhabitants Notice, that they suffer not their Sons, Servants, or Apprentices to be abroad in the Streets in the Evenings after it be dark, unless it be upon their lawful Occasions, as they will answer for any Misdemeanors or Disturbances that may be committed by them. And his Lordship doth especially recommended it to the several Aldermen of this City, That either by themselves, their Deputies, or such other Person or Persons as they shall intrust, they do observe and take a strict Account of the Behaviour herein, of the respective Constables, and other Officers within their Wards; and such as they shall find to have failed in their Performance thereof, to bind over to the Sessions, to answer for such their Default; and to do their best Endeavours, that the Laws be duly and strictly put into Execution against all Offenders, in the several Kinds before-mentioned, as her Majesty hath commanded, and the Duty of their Offices obliges them to."

The Number of Houses and Inhabitants being vastly increased in this City and Suburbs, the Churches were thereby rendered insufficient for their Accommodation; wherefore the Parliament, for the better Instruction of all in the Principles of Christianity, enacted, That fifty new Churches should be erected in, or near the populous Cities of London and Westminster, or Suburbs thereof; for the Building whereof, an additional Duty of two Shillings per Chaldron was laid upon all Coals and Culm that should be brought into the Port of London, and upon weighable Coals two Shillings per Tun, for the Space of one hundred and thirty-seven Days; and for the Term of eight Years after, the Sum of three Shillings per Chaldron and Tun. However, hitherto, there are only ten of the said Churches built upon new Foundations.

Soon after arrived in this City, Te Yee Neen Ho Ga Prow, Saga Yean Qua Prab Ten, Elean Ob Koom, and Ob Nee Yeath Ten Now Prow, four Kings, or Chiefs of the Iroquois Indians, adjoining to, and Confederates with the People of New England, New York and Virginia; who prevailed upon them to come hither to pay their Respects to the Queen, and also to be convinced of the egregious Falsities spread among them by the Jesuits, and other Popish Missionaries, who affirmed, that the English and all other Nations were Vassals to the French King. And, as a further Instance of their Perfidy, the said Missionaries, under a Pretence of instructing the Indians in the Christian Religion, inspire them with an irreconcilable Hatred against the English, by telling their Profelytes, that the Saviour of the World was born in France, and crucified in England. But those Chiefs, being thoroughly convinced of the Falshood of these wicked Insinuations, regarded the Authors thereof as the vilest Deceivers.

Prince Eugene's Reception in London.

On the fifth Day of January, that celebrated Hero, and Imperial General, Prince Eugene of Savoy, arrived in this City, whose great and glorious Actions had justly gained him the Affections of the British Nation, but more especially that of the Citizens of London; two whereof, viz. Sir Alexander Cairnes, and Sir Theodore Janssen, waited upon his Highness; who, after having kindly received them, was pleased to tell them, That he was extremely obliged to the Citizens, since the Raising of the Siege of Turin, and the glorious Consequences thereof, were, next to God, owing to their seasonable Supply of Money: (Some time before, the Citizens of London by her Majesty's Permission had lent Joseph, Emperor of Germany, the Sum of two hundred thousand Pounds for that Service:) The Gentlemen replied, That, when the Citizens made that Loan, they had not the Improvement of their Money so much in View, as the Honour of being serviceable to the common Cause, and of having an Opportunity to shew their Respects to a Prince so greatly distinguished for his many glorious Actions: And as they reckoned themselves particularly obliged to his Highness's Integrity, for the punctual Payment of their Interest and Principal; so, if in the Course of the present War his Highness should have Occasion for any greater Sums, they would readily advance the same upon his Highness's own Security; concluding with a Desire, that his Highness would be pleased to accept of a small Entertainment, which they intended to give him in the City, and that he would vouchsafe to fix a Day for that Purpose, as would best suit his Convenience: Which his Highness promised to do.

A Loan to the Emperor of 200000*l*.

An Intention to entertain the Prince in the City.

How presented.

The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen receiving Notice of this Invitation, and they designing likewise to shew their Respect to the Prince after the same Manner, it was proposed in their Court, to make an united Entertainment: The Motion was approved of; but an unlucky Doubt arose, that spoiled all: For it being suggested, that before they proceeded farther in that Affair, they would do well to know how the Court would take such an Invitation; wherefore a Resolution was taken to send two of their Number (one of the Sheriffs being indisposed) to attend the Earl of Dartmouth, Principal Secretary of State; but there being, it seems, some Defect of Formality in this Message, (or rather, not liking the Business the Prince came about, were not willing to have so much Respect shewn him by the Metropolis of the Kingdom) his Lordship the same Day wrote the following Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

"My Lord,

Whitehall,
January 15, 1711-12.Ibid.
A.D. 1712

"Two of the Court of Aldermen having brought a verbal Message to be delivered to her Majesty, which was, That the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, and several Citizens of the best Rank, desired to treat Prince Eugene, and ordered them to attend me to know the Queen's Pleasure; and being asked by the Lords of the Council, Whether they had their Message in Writing? answered, That they had no Order or Resolution in Writing; but that they came upon a Minute taken at the Court of Aldermen, of which "they had no Copy: They were thereupon told, That the Queen had commanded the Lords to acquaint them, that her Majesty would return no Answer to any Message, which is not brought to her with the same Respect as has always been paid by the City of London to her Predecessors. To prevent any Mistake in repeating what was said to them, I send your Lordship this Account: And am, &c."

This Letter occasioned all further Thoughts of Treating the Prince to be laid aside.

Ibid.

In the Month of March, some nocturnal Disorders being committed in the Streets of this City and Suburbs, by Rakes and drunken Soldiers, gave Birth to a Report, that great Numbers of disaffected Persons, under the Appellation of Mobbs and Havokabites, had combined together to disturb the publick Peace; and in an inhuman and barbarous Manner, without the least Provocation, assaulted and wounded those they met by Night, by sitting or flapping their Noses, cutting off Ears, gagging, or distending Mouths with an Iron Instrument, running Pins into People, and many other dreadful Cruelties.

The Mobbs disturb the Peace of the City by Night.

This Report was so industriously improved, that printed Papers were daily cried about, giving an Account of the apprehending and committing of many Persons to Prisons for the said Barbarities, among whom, it was insinuated, were divers Persons of great Distinction. This Rumour gaining universal Credit, struck such a Terror among the Credulous and Timorous, that at the Approach of Night many durst not stir abroad, for Fear of being mobbed'd.

Ibid.

These idle and fictitious Stories, artfully contrived to intimidate the People, prevailed so far as to occasion the Queen to issue out a Proclamation for the suppressing of Riots, and apprehending of such as had been guilty of the late Barbarities within the Cities of London and Westminster, and Parts adjacent; and, as an Encouragement to apprehend all such Offenders, a Reward of one hundred Pounds was promised for every Person, who, since the first of February last, had without any Provocation wounded, stabbed, or maimed, or who should, before the first Day of May, wound, stab, or main any of her Majesty's Subjects.

Ibid.

A Proclamation against Riots, with a Reward.

However, it does not appear, that ever any Person was detected of any of the said Crimes; and notwithstanding I made all the Inquiry imaginable, in those Places where the Offences were said to have been chiefly committed, I never could learn of any one Person having received the least Hurt upon that Account.

In the Summer following, another Story of the same Stamp was trumped up, of one (from his Practice, as it was said) denominated Whipping-Tom; who, according to Report, frequented the circumjacent Fields, and flogged all the Women he conveniently met with; which occasioned such a Dread among the fair Sex, both in Town and in the neighbouring Villages, that none durst walk the Fields, but under the Protection of a friendly Male.

any Goods or Merchandize by Retail. However, at this Time many Non-freemen were employed and put into Shops, under the Names and Protection of Citizens. For the remedying of which, it was, on the fourth of July, by the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, enacted, That, "Whereas by the Laws and Customs of this City of London, no Person or Persons should be willingly suffered to exercise; use, or occupy any manual Occupation or Handicraft, or to sell or put to Sale any Wares or Merchandizes by Retail, in any Shop, inward or outward, or other Place or Room kept for Shew, Sale, or putting to Sale any Wares or Merchandizes by Retail, within the said City or Liberties thereof, unless he or they were Free, or Apprentice or Apprentices with some that be Free, and bound by Indenture according to the Custom of the said City: Nor should any Artificers, or Handicrafts-Men, or other Shopkeepers, or Traders by Retail, being Free of this City, be permitted to employ, hire, or set on work in any such Handicraft or manual Occupation, or in buying, selling, or exposing to Sale by Retail, any Wares or Merchandizes within the said City, or the Liberties thereof, any Person or Persons whatsoever not being Free of the said City, or Apprentice or Apprentices, as aforesaid: The which Laws and Customs notwithstanding, divers, not being Free of the said City, do use and exercise sundry manual Occupations or Handicrafts within the same City, or Liberties thereof; and several other Artificers and Handicrafts-Men, and other Shopkeepers and Traders by Retail, being Freemen of this City, not regarding the same Laws and Customs thereof, have of late, not only willing employed, hired and set on work, within the said City and Liberty thereof, divers Foreigners from the Liberties of the same City, in divers and sundry Handicrafts and manual Occupations, and in buying and selling, and exposing to Sale by Retail, divers Wares and Merchandizes, within the said City and Liberties thereof; but have also refused to take, employ, and set on work, in their Trades and Occupations, the honest poor Citizens and Freemen of the same City, to the great Hinderance, Loss and Prejudice of the said poor Citizens, and to the utter Undoing of a great Number of the said poor Handicrafts-Men, and other Persons bred to Trades, and not of Ability to set up the same, being Citizens and Freemen of the said City, unless some speedy Remedy be herein provided.

"For Reformation whereof, be it enacted, ordained and established, by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in this present Common Council assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That no Person whatsoever, not being Free of the said City, shall at any Time after the Feast-Day of St. Michael the Archangel, now next ensuing, by any Colour, Way, or Mean whatsoever, directly or indirectly, by himself or any other, use, exercise, or occupy any Art, Trade, Mystery, manual Occupation, or Handicraft whatsoever; or keep any Shop, Room, or Place whatsoever, inward or outward, for Shew, Sale, or "putting to Sale of any Wares, or Merchandizes whatsoever, by Way of Retail, within the said City, or the Liberties thereof; upon Pain to forfeit the Sum of five Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain, for every Time wherein such Person shall use, exercise, or occupy any Art, Trade, Mystery, manual Occupation, or Handicraft whatsoever; or keep any Shop, Room, or other Place whatsoever, inward or outward, for Shew, Sale, or putting to Sale of any Wares or Merchandizes whatsoever, by Way of Retail, within the said City, or the Liberties thereof, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning hereof.

"And be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That no Person or Persons now being Free of this City of London, or who hereafter shall be Free of the same, shall after the said Feast-Day of St. Michael the Archangel, by any Colour, Way, or Mean whatsoever, set on work in any manual Occupation or Handicraft within the said City, or the Liberties thereof, any Person or Persons, being a Foreigner or Foreigners from the Liberties of the said City, knowing or having due Notice given to him or them, that such Person or Persons, so by him or them to be set on work, is, or are a Foreigner or Foreigners, as aforesaid, upon Pain of Forfeiture of five Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain, for every Time that any such Person or Persons shall offend, commit, or do any Thing contrary to the Purport, true Intent, and Meaning hereof.

"And be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That no Person now being Free of this City, or who hereafter shall be Free of the same, and shall by himself, or by any other, keep any Shop, Room, or other Place whatsoever, inward or outward, for Shew, Sale, or putting to Sale of any Wares or Merchandizes whatsoever, by Way of Retail, or use any Art, Trade, Occupation, Mystery, or Handicraft whatsoever, within the said City or the Liberties thereof, shall after the said Feast-Day of St. Michael the Archangel, directly or indirectly, employ, retain, or keep in his Service as a Journeyman or hired Servant, in buying, selling, or exposing to Sale, any Wares or Merchandizes whatsoever, by Way of Retail, any Person not being Free of the said City, knowing or having due Notice given to him, that such Person, so by him employed, retained, or kept, is not Free of the said City, upon Pain to forfeit the Sum of five Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain, for every Time wherein any such Person shall offend, commit, or do any Thing contrary to the true Intent and Meaning hereof.

It being at this Time whispered, that the Ministry were paving the Way for the Pretender's Accession to the Crown, the trading Part of the City were thereby so greatly intimidated, that it put a general Stop to all Commerce; wherefore the Queen, at this critical Juncture, found herself necessitated, for the Support of Credit, to send this Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

into this City in such a magnificent Manner, that probably nothing of the Kind ever exceeded it.
And on the seventh of the same Month, a Ge-with the greatest Solemnity; on which Occasion the Queen intended to have come to St. Paul's Church, but being prevented by the Gout, both Houses of Parliament repaired thither in great State, the Lords being in their Robes; and at Night two Fireworks were made, one on the River Thames, and the other in West-Smithfield.

At the same Time, the Papists and Nonjurors not only exerted themselves in their Writings to support the Pretender's Claim to the Crown, but were likewise very indefatigable in instilling Men for his Service, and sending them beyond the Sea to join their Master: By which dangerous Practices, the People were greatly alarmed, and under the most dreadful Apprehensions; wherefore it was judged necessary to publish a Proclamation, with a Reward of five thousand Pounds for the apprehending of the said Pretender. This Proclamation in some measure seemed to dispel the gloomy Apprehensions of the Citizens, who on that Occasion presented the following Address to the Queen:

thereupon.

"Most Gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, beg leave gratefully to acknowledge your Majesty's constant Care, not only in preserving and improving our present Happiness, but also in providing for the future Safety and Prosperity of your Kingdoms, and of the Protestant Succession in the illustrious House of Hanover; by issuing so seasonably a Proclamation, promising a Reward out of your own Revenue, as an Encouragement for apprehending the Pretender, when he shall land, or attempt to land, in any of your Majesty's Dominions; and giving your ready Assent to the Bill for preventing the Growth of Schism, and for the Security of the Churches of England and Ireland, as by Law established. "The Experience this City hath had of your Majesty's Goodness and Concern for your People is such, that (under God) they place their Dependence upon your Majesty; and do take this Opportunity humbly to assure your Majesty, that they will do the utmost that lies in them to extinguish the Hopes of the Pretender, and of all his open and secret Abettors, and to obviate the Dangers that may arise from Popery and Schism: And they will, with that Duty and Loyalty which becomes them, to the utmost of their Power, oppose all Attempts which may be made, under any Pretence whatsoever, to weaken your Authority, which always has been, and we are confident always will be, employed for the Good of all your Subjects; or to render that Reign uneasy to you, which has been so happy to your People; the long Continuance whereof is the greatest Blessing we can ask of Heaven."

The Report and Order concerning Coal-Meters.

The Office of Coal-Meters in this City being charged with divers Irregularities and Misdemeanors, a Committee of Enquiry into the same was appointed, which on the sixteenth of March, 1713, delivered into the Court of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, a Report, signed by Sir William Ayscough, Sir Thomas Abney, and Sir John Parsons, Kts and Aldermen; in which, after reciting that what they had done was in Obedience to two Orders of this Court, they said, "That the Mayor and Commonalty of this City, have had Time out of Mind the Office of Measurer of Coals; which Office has been usually exercised by their Officers and Ministers called Sea-Coal-Meters, who were admitted and sworn before the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen.

"And how that, by an Act of Common Council, 24 Henry VIII, it is directed how the Lord-Mayor should dispose the Office of Measuring to be yearly executed, with Proviso to pay yearly into the Chamber of London such Sums as were then answered for the same.

"By an Act of Common Council, 44 Eliz. it is enacted, (inter alia) That every of the said Officers, viz. the Sea-Coal-Meters, shall from Time to Time, upon Presentment of any honest Freeman for his Deputy to the Lord-Mayor for the Time being, have him admitted and sworn his Deputy: In which said Act there is a Proviso, That if the Master-Meters, or their Deputies, misdeemean themselves in

No. 43.

"their Offices, that they shall be punished by the Court of Aldermen, and the Offence of the Deputies shall not prejudice the Master-Meters.

"And by an Act, 18 Jac. I, in the Mayoralty of Sir William Cockaine, it is ordained, That no Deputy-Corn-Meters, Coal-Meters, or Salt-Meters, or Corn-Fillers, should be thereafter received, admitted, or allowed by any Master-Corn-Meter, Coal-Meter, or Salt-Meter, or Corn-filler, or Salt-Filler, but only such as should be of the Fellowship or Brotherhood of Fellowship-Porters: And by the said Act, the said Meters are to call upon the Rulers of the said Fellowship to appoint them Men for the said Work: And it is also by the said Act ordained, That the said Company and all the Members thereof, shall be subject to all such Ordinances and Rules as shall be, from Time to Time, made and set down by the Court of Lord-Mayor, and Aldermen of this City, in the Council-Chamber of this City, for the good Government of the Men of the said Fellowship, under such reasonable Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures, as the said Court shall limit and appoint.

"And that they did also find, That the Government of the said Fellowship hath been exercised by the Alderman of Billingsgate-Ward, subject to the Direction and Control of this honourable Court.

"And that they did find, That, by an Act of Common-Council made the third of March, one thousand six hundred and fifty-three, before Sir Thomas Viner, Lord-Mayor, reciting, That whereas the hearing of sundry Offences and Disorders in the said Society or Fellowship, committed by the Members thereof, were by former Acts and Orders committed to the Alderman and Deputy of the Ward of Billingsgate, by them to be determined; It was therefore thereby enacted, That the Rulers and Assistants should hear Complaints; provided, that if any Person found himself aggrieved, that then such Person might appeal from the said Rulers and Assistants to the Alderman or his Deputy, who in such Cases were to hear and determine the same as formerly, any Thing in the said Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

"That they had found, after due Examination, That the Office of Coal-Meter is executed by the fifteen Deputies or Sea-Coal-Meters, who are the Officers and Ministers of this City for that Purpose appointed, and are admitted to the said Office by this honourable Court; and each of the said Coal-Meters is to have, hold, exercise, and enjoy the same Place, with all Fees, Profits, and Commodities thereunto, and of Right belonging by himself, or his sufficient Deputy or Deputies, being Freemen of this City, and first to be liked and allowed of by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen; and at the Time of their Admission do take an Oath to the Form and Effect following, viz.

"You shall swear, that you shall indifferently measure all Coals that to you belongeth for to measure, and just Measure you shall give to every Person, as well to Poor as to Rich, without Partiality, or shewing Favour; and you shall buy

"no

"no Coals but to your own Use, and in no wise for
"to utter or sell again, as long as you shall stand "in your Office. Also you shall take no more for your "Labour for the meting or measuring of Coals, but "as of old Time it hath been ordained and used.
"Also you shall make no Deputy for to mete any Coals;
"but you are to bring the same Deputy before the "Mayer for the Time being, there to be Sworn duly
"and truly for to occupy the same Office.

"We do also find, That the said fifteen Coal-
"Meters have the Management of the said Coal-"Office, and the Care and Inspection over
"the just Weight and Measure of Coals properly "belongs to them; and they ought (as their Pre"decessors antiently did) to be diligent in search"ing and viewing the Weight and Metage of "Coals, and inspect and oversee the Behaviour
"of the Under-Meters therein.

"And we do find, That for carrying on the "Work and Duty of the Coal-Office, which is of "too large Extent to be managed by fifteen Per"sons, there are appointed several Deputies or "Under-Meters, upon whom the Care and Trust
"of weighing and measuring Coals does princi"pally depend; whose Business it is to attend
"each Coal-Ship, and observe the due Weight
"and Admeasurement of Coals, to top the Vats,
"to take Account of the Coals measured, and to "make a due Return thereof in Writing to "the Coal-Office; by which Return, or Cer"tificate, of the Under-Meters the Duties on "Coals are collected; and for this their Labour "and Trouble they antiently received the Fee of "one Penny per Chaldron for all Coals measured,
"and two Pence per Ton for all Coals weigh"ed; and the said Under-Meters are admitted "to the said Office and Sworn in the outer Court,
"whose Oath is to the Tenor or Effect follow"ing, viz.

"You shall swear, that you shall indifferently mea"sure all Coals that to you belongeth for to measure,
"and just Measure you shall give to every Person, as "well to Poor as Rich, without Partiality, or show"ing Favour; and you shall buy no Coals but to your "own Use, and in no wise for to utter or sell again
"as long as you shall stand in your Office; and you "shall take no more for your Labour for the Mea"suring and Meting of Coals, but as of old Time it "hath been ordained and used. As God help you.

"And we find, That when any Master-Meter
"was admitted to his Place, the Orders and Rules "of the said Coal-Office were, at his first enter"ing into the said Office, laid before him, and he "required to act and proceed by those Rules
"and Orders, which were to the Effect follow"ing, viz.

"I. Each of the said fifteen Masters had four "Deputies or Under-Meters appointed to his "Number, called First-men, Second-men, Third-
"men, and Fourth-men; for that the said Depu"ties or Under-Meters were divided into four "Numbers or Classes, and, being sixty in Num"ber, were appointed fifteen to each Number or "Class.

"II. It was the constant Course to ship the "Under-Meters according to their Number and "Seniority, and the Senior has a Right to be
"be shipped before his Junior; and a Senior-
"Mate returning from Duty, was usually shipped again before his Junior; but the Ships of "Scotch Coals, as also Ships called Cockbells and "Remnants, were not given according to Num"ber and Seniority.

"III. The Master-Meters usually attended the "Coal-Office by Turns, viz. one to each Day,
"who attended the said Office upon the Penalty
"of half a Crown: And if a Master-Meter did "not attend by eight o'Clock in the Summer,
"and by nine in Winter, the said Half-Crown
"was forfeited to the Master-Meter who did
"first attend; and the said Master-Meters punc"tually observed the Method of Shipping ac"cording to Seniority, save that the Master in "waiting had the Privilege to employ his own
"Deputy first, and then began again at the prior "Number.

"IV. If any Under-Meter took a Ship out
"of Turn, he was obliged to refund the Me"tage-Money to the Person whose Turn it was "to have delivered such Ship.

"V. Besides the said Deputy Under-Meters,
"or Placemen, there were sworn and admitted
"certain Persons called Supernumeraries, or "Men at large, which were usually thirty in "Number, who were also employed according to "Seniority, if present; but were not permitted "to work in Coals if a Placeman was ready "to take his Turn; and the said Men at large
"had a Right, according to Seniority, to succeed
"in the Vacancies of Placemen.

"VI. When a Placeman was sick or super-"annuated, he had his Turn and Course of Bu"siness as before, and another Under-Meter "(usually a Man at large, if a Placeman refus"ed) was obliged to deliver such Ship for Part "of the Metage-Money.

"VII. When any Placeman died, his Widow
"was allowed two or three Ships, or more (ac"cording to her Circumstances) to be worked
"at Half-Pay.

"VIII. The said Master-Meters did never here"tofore pretend to a Right of suspending, punish"ing, or removing any Under-Meter at their "own arbitrary Will and Pleasure, without a "sufficient Cause to be allowed by the Alderman
"or Deputy of the Ward, and acquainting them
"therewith; though sometimes the said Master-"Meters have taken upon themselves, upon just "Complaint, to suspend a Meter from his "Work, till the first Thursday in the Month; at "which Time the Master-Meters usually held a "general Meeting in the Office, and then heard
"the said Complaint; but, if the Under-Meters
"accused desired it, the said Complaint was re"mitted to the Alderman or his Deputy, to "whose Determination all Parties submitted.

"IX. When any Under-Meter had commit"ted a Misdemeanor, it was usual to amerce him
"half a Crown, which was put into a Poor's
"Box; and, when no Ships were employed, it was "usual to send Supply therout to a sick Under-
"Meter, by five or ten Shillings at a Time.

"X. When an Under-Meter was appointed to "go on a Country Voyage to Gravesend, or else"where, a Senior had Liberty to refuse such "Turn; and a Junior, or Man at large, was "obliged to go and deliver such Ship; and such "Senior, so refusing his Turn, was obliged to "give

"give five Shillings out of his own Purse to such Meter who undertook such Voyage; and such Under-Meter had also five Shillings more from the Crimp, over and above his Metage-Money.

"We are therefore humbly of Opinion, That the said antient Order and Method of the Coal-Office ought to be observed and kept, and that it is incumbent on the Alderman of Billinggate-Ward to see the same performed.

"And that as well the said Master-Meters, as the said Under-Meters, are liable to be punished by Suspension, Removal, or otherwise, as this Court shall think fit.

"That the said Master-Meters have no Right to employ what Deputies or Under-Meters they please; but that it is the Right of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, to allow, or disallow of the Deputies or Under-Meters, and that no other ought to be employed but such as they allow.

"That the said Deputies or Under-Meters ought not to be displaced, but upon a reasonable Cause, and that upon Application to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen for that Purpose; but the Alderman of the said Ward may suspend an Under-Meter till the Pleasure of this Court be known therein.

"That the Books of the Coal-Office do concern the Right of the Inheritance of this City, and ought to be used and inspected by this Court, as they shall find occasion; and that the City does intrust the Custody of the antient Books of the said Office with the said Master-Meters, for the better Management of the said Office only; and the said Books are of a publick Nature, in regard the same do contain the Account of the Importation of Coals, in which many Persons have Interest: And, in regard this City has no other Way to inspect the Account of the Orphan's Duty belonging to this City, all Persons who have an Interest in the said Importation ought to have the Satisfaction of viewing the said Books, and to have Recourse to the same, (when their Occasions require); and the said Master-Meters, in refusing to produce the said Books of the Office before this Committee, are guilty of a great Misdemeanor and Contempt to this honourable Court.

"And we also think proper to acquaint this Court, That no Under-Meter ought to begin to work in Coals, before a Cocket of Permit has been issued from the Lord-Mayor's Office. And we find, that antiently, when a Permit was issued from the Cocket-Office, the Number of the Clafs to which such Ship belonged was indorsed on the said Cocket, at the Cocket-Office.

"Which Report being here read, was well-liked and approved by this Court, and ordered to be entered into the Repertory. And it was thereupon ordered, That the said Master-Meters do observe the antient Method and Usage of shipping their Under-Meters according to their Seniority; and that they restore such Under-Meters to their Offices as have been dismissed or suspended from them, since the Difference happened between the said Deputies and the said Master-Meters, about the Crown's Allowance.

"And that all Under-Meters be ordered to work according to the usual and antient Method set forth in the said Report, and not to take their Fellows Labour out of their Turns, by Pretence of any Order of the Master-Meters or their Clerk.

"And that, upon any Complaint against them for so doing, they shall be suspended from their Labour, by the Alderman of Billinggate-Ward for the Time being, or his Deputy, until they shall appear before this Court to answer any such Complaint; who will punish all Offenders in the Premises amongst the said Under-Meters, by dismissing them not only from their Places as Under-Meters, but from all Labour in the Fellowship of Billinggate-Porters.

HER Majesty Queen Anne being removed by Death, the illustrious George Lewis, Elector of Hanover, was, on the first of August, proclaimed King of Great-Britain, &c. in this City, with the usual Solemnity; on which Occasion the Kings at Arms were accompanied by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and a great Number of the Nobility.

The King soon after arriving in England, made his publick Entry into London on the twentieth of September; which, for its great Pomp and Magnificence, I shall insert an Account of, as published by Authority.

The Demise of Queen Anne, and Accession of King George I.

K. Geo. I. publick Entry.

The

The King, being arrived from Greenwich at St. Margaret's-Hill in Southwark, was met by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, and Officers of the City of London; in whose Name the Recorder made the following congratulatory Speech to his Majesty:

"May it please your Majesty,

The Recorder's Speech on that Occasion.

"Your Majesty is now entering into the Liberties of the City of London. The Citizens have with Impatience waited for your Royal Presence amongst them, to secure those invaluable Blessings, which they promise themselves from a Prince of the most illustrious Merit.

"Enlivened by the distant Influence of your Majesty's Government, they have earnestly desired its nearer Approaches. The long-expected Day is now come, a Day of universal Joy, to see your Majesty's solemn Entrance, with his Royal Highness the Prince, into the Capital of your Kingdoms.

"The Citizens of London never met any of your Predecessors, Kings or Queens of this Realm, with more Duty and Loyalty than they meet your Majesty, nor with a greater Desire to testify their Joy in the most becoming and affectionate Manner.

"History hath preserved the Memory of several triumphant and joyful Entries; but the Exultations and Triumphs of those Entries, even in the most joyful, are not to be mentioned with the Extacies and Rejoicings of this. There was not the like Reason and Occasion for them.

"We now behold a Prince, famed for his Justice, Clemency, and Wisdom, come to take Possession of his Kingdoms; we see our Religion secured, our Laws and Liberties preserved, our publick Credit advanced, our utmost Wishes exceeded, the Protestant Succession, concerning which we had many anxious and solicitous Thoughts, taking Effect in a quiet and peaceable Possession, and a Prospect of a lasting and continued Settlement under your Majesty, and your Royal Posterity after you.

"We have nothing now to do, but, securely enjoying our own, to beseech Almighty God to bless your Majesty with a long, happy, and glorious Reign, and to do every Thing in our respective Stations, which may contribute to make your Majesty's Government safe, prosperous, and easy."

The Lord-Mayor having delivered the City Sword to the King, he graciously returned the same, with a Command to carry it before him: Then his Majesty proceeded to St. James's in the following Manner:

*The Procession from
St. Margaret's-
Hill to St.
James's.*

"A Detachment of Horse-Grenadiers to clear the Way; a Detachment of the Artillery-Company in Buff-Coats, &c. the two Marshals on Horseback, with their Men on Foot, to make Way; two of the City Trumpets on Horseback; the Sheriffs Officers on Foot, with Jewels in their Hands; two City Trumpets on Horseback; the Lord-Mayor's Officers in black Gowns on Foot, two and two; two more of the City Trumpets on Horseback; the City

"Banner, borne by the Water-Bailiff on Horseback, with a Servant on Foot in a coloured Livery; then the City Officers on Horseback, in their proper Gowns, each attended by a Servant on Foot in coloured Liveries; the four Attornies, two and two; the Solicitor and Remembrancer, the two Secretaries, the Comptroller, the four Common Pleaders, the two Judges, the Town Clerk, the Common Serjeant, and the Chamberlain; two more of the City Trumpets on Horseback; the King's Banner, borne by the Common Hunt on Horseback, with a Servant on Foot in a coloured Livery; the Common Crier in his Gown, and the City Sword-Bearer in his black Damask Gown, and a gold Chain, both on Horseback, each having a Servant on Foot in coloured Liveries; then those who have sined for Sheriffs or Aldermen, or served the Office of Sheriff or Alderman, in scarlet Gowns on Horseback, according to their Seniorities, two and two, the Juniors first, each attended by two Servants on Foot in coloured Liveries; the two Sheriffs in scarlet Gowns on Horseback, with their gold Chains, and their white Staves in their Hands, each attended by two Servants on Foot in coloured Liveries; the Aldermen below the Chair on Horseback, in scarlet Gowns, two and two, each attended by his Beadle, and two Servants on Foot in coloured Liveries; then the Aldermen above the Chair, in scarlet Gowns, on Horseback, wearing their gold Chains, attended by their Beadles, and two Servants each in coloured Liveries. Then the Coaches of the Nobility, Great Officers of State, &c. to the Number of above two hundred, with six Horses each; the Knight-Marshal's Men on Horseback, two and two; the King's Kettle-Drums; the Drum-Major; the King's Trumpets, two and two; the Serjeant-Trumpet with his Mace; Pursuivants of Arms uncovered, two and two; Herald's of Arms, Kings of Arms, Serjeants at Arms, with their Maces, bare-headed; the Recorder in a scarlet Gown on Horseback, uncovered; the Lord-Mayor of London in his crimson Velvet Gown, on Horseback, wearing his rich Collar and Jewel, uncovered, bearing the City Sword by his Majesty's Permission, with only four Servants on Foot, bare-headed, in coloured Liveries; Garter King of Arms, or his Deputy, on the right Hand, uncovered; Gentleman-Usher of the Black Rod, on his left Hand, uncovered; the King and Prince in a Coach; the Yeomen of the Guard; the King's Footmen; Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard; Lieutenant of the Yeomen of the Guard; Equerry; the King's Footmen in Waiting; Yeomen of the Guard; his Majesty's Horse-Guards closed the Proceeding.

"Thus the King passed from St. Margaret's-Hill to his royal Palace at St. James's, where his Majesty arrived between Seven and Eight of the Clock in the Evening. The Train'd-Bands of Southwark, by Order of the Lord-Lieutenant of Surrey, lined the Way from Kenil-Street End to the End of London-Bridge; three Regiments of the City Train'd-Bands made a Guard from the Bridge to St. Marks-Market; the

"several

"several Companies of London, with their Ensigns, lined the Streets on both Sides, from Stoke-Market to St. Paul's Church-yard; at the East End whereof the Children of Christ's-Hospital stood, and one of the King's Boys made a Speech to his Majesty; and the other three Regiments of the City Train'd-Bands guarded the Way from St. Paul's Church-yard to Temple-Bar; from Temple-Bar, the Steward, High-Bailiff, and Burgeſſes of Westminster, in their Gowns, attended by all the Constables and Beadles, with their respective Staves, and the High Bailiff's Officers, with their Ensigns of Office, lined the Way; and, next to them, the Militia of Westminster made a Guard, leaving a Space between them and his Majesty's Foot-Guards (who lined the Way from St. James's into the Strand) for the Artillery Company of London to draw up in, who proceeded so far, with the Consent of the Lord-Lieutenant of Middlesex, and there made a Stand. The great Guns at the Tower were fired when his Majesty took Coach, as also when he passed over London-Bridge. At his Majesty's Arrival at his Palace, the Cannon in the Park were three Times discharged; and the Evening concluded with Bonfires, Illuminations, and all other Marks of Joy."

Soon after, the City and Lieutenancy of London presented the following Addresses to his Majesty:

The City's Address.

Monthly
Mercury.
City's Address.

"Pardon us, dread Sovereign, if we want Words to express that Height of Joy and Satisfaction which so sensibly affect us, your most dutiful and loyal Subjects, to see your Majesty (attended by the Prince) arrived in Safety at this your Royal Palace."

"We rest now secure of enjoying all the Blessings that a wise and gracious Prince can derive to a willing and obedient People, and the Continuance of them to our Posterity by a certain (tho' we hope a late) Succession in your Family."

"We crave Leave therefore, most gracious Sovereign, to renew our Assurances of all that steady Affection to your sacred Person, and Zeal for Support of your Crown, which such a King may justly expect from the most loyal and faithful Subjects."

The Lieutenancy's Address.

Ibid.
The Lieutenancy's Address.

"Great Sir, We are highly sensible of the Honour done us by your sacred Majesty, in permitting us to appear in your Royal Presence, and humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on your safe Arrival in this your Kingdom of Great Britain."

"The many princely Virtues with which your Majesty is most eminently endowed, give us just Assurances of our being, under your Majesty's Sovereignty, a happy and flourishing People; and that your Majesty's Reign will be as truly glorious, as the greatest of your Royal Predecessors."

"We humbly assure your Majesty, that we "shall always render that grateful Tribute of Loyalty and Obedience which our Mother, the Church of England, hath taught us to pay to our Sovereign; and that we will on all Occasions demonstrate our Principles by our Practice, for the Support and Defence of your Majesty's Royal Person against the Pretender, and all others that shall attempt to subvert our happy Constitution in Church or State, or lessen the Royal Prerogatives of the Imperial Crown of this Realm, which we pray your Majesty may live to wear with the utmost Prosperity and Renown."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious answer:

"I take these Addresses very kindly. I have lately been made sensible of what Consequence the City of London is; and therefore shall be sure to take all their Privileges and Interests into my particular Protection." And, as an immediate Mark of his royal Favour, was graciously pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on John Ward, Gerard Cuyers, Thomas Scarwen, Peter Delme, Jos. Lawrence, and Robert Child, Esqrs.

The King and their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, having graciously accepted of an Invitation from this City to dine at Guildball on the approaching Lord-Mayor's Day; at which Time they repaired to the City, attended by a numerous Train of the Nobility, and, amidst the joyful Acclamations of the People, went to the usual Place of Standing opposite Bow Church in Cheapside; where having beheld the pompous Cavalcade pass, his Majesty and their Royal Highnesses were thence conducted by the Sheriffs to Guildball; at the Entrance whereof the Lord-Mayor, kneeling, presented the City Sword to his Majesty, who graciously returning the same, his Lordship carried it before the King to the Court-Room, and thence to the Hurlings, where his Majesty and their Royal Highnesses were sumptuously entertained; and below, in the Hall, Tables were provided for the Nobility, Foreign Ministers, the Judges, Ladies, and other Persons of Distinction. The Lord-Mayor having the Honour to present the first Glass of Wine to the King, his Majesty was graciously pleased to order a Patent to be passed for creating his Lordship a Baronet of this Kingdom; and likewise ordered one thousand Pounds to be paid to the Sheriffs, for the Relief and Discharge of poor imprisoned Debtors.

The twentieth of January following being a Day appointed for a General Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the King's happy and peaceable Accession to the Throne, his Majesty, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, attended by the chief Officers of State, and a numerous Train of Nobility, came to St. Paul's Church in the utmost Magnificence; where he was attended by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, the City Companies in their respective Stands, and the Streets on both Sides lined with the Train'd-Bands, and, at Night, Illuminations, Fire-works, Bonfires, and all other publick Demonstrations of Joy.

Publick Entry of the Dutch Ambassadors.

On the ninth of March following, the Dutch Ambassadors made their publick Entry into this City in a very magnificent Manner.

About the same Time, the Citizens of London having chosen Sir John Ward and Sir Thomas Scawen, Knights, and Robert Heysham and Peter Godfrey, Esqrs. their Representatives in Parliament, and the City highly resenting the Transactions of the late Ministry in respect to the Peace lately concluded with France, and the melancholy Apprehensions of an approaching War; the Citizens were thereby induced to draw up the following remarkable Instructions to be observed by their said Members in the ensuing Parliament:

Monthly
Mercury.
City's Instructions to their Representatives.

"We, the Citizens of London, who have cheerfully elected you to serve us in Parliament, and thereby committed to your Trust the Safety, Liberty, Property, and Privileges of us and our Posterity, think it our Duty, as it is our undoubted Right, to acquaint you, that we desire and expect from you, in Discharge of the great Confidence we repose in you, and what we take to be your Duty as our Representatives;

"1. We desire and expect that you will enquire by whose Counsel it was, that, after God had blessed the Arms of her late Majesty, and her Allies, with a Train of unparalleled Successes, she was prevailed upon, contrary to the grand Alliance, and her repeated Promises from the Throne to both Houses, to send to or receive Managers from France, to treat separately of a Peace, without the Knowledge and Consent of our Allies."

"2. By whose Advice the Emperor's Minister, the Count de Gallat, was discharged the Court for resenting and opposing those separate Negotiations, contrary not only to the grand Alliance, but to the Queen's particular Assurances to his Master.

"3. By whose Advice his Majesty's Memorial, delivered by his Minister the Baron de Bothmar, against those clandestine and separate Negotiations, was not only disregarded, but called a Libel, and the said Minister affronted.

"4. By whose Advice and Management her Majesty was prevailed on, first to come to a Cessation of Arms with our common Enemy, and then so surprizingly to withdraw our Troops from those of the Allies, which was attended with such dismal Circumstances.

"5. By whose Advice and Management all that had been gained by a Profusion of Blood and Treasure in a glorious and successful War, was thrown up, just as we were seizing the Prize of our Conquest, and a free-born People brought within a View of Slavery.

"6. By whose Advice and Management our Constitution was struck at, by creating twelve new Lords at once to carry a Vote in the upper House.

"7. By whose Advice it was, that the Treaty with the Dutch for settling a common Barrier in the Netherlands, and making Guarantees of the Protestant Succession, was enervated, and a new Treaty, which weakened both Securities, made in its Place.

"8. By whose Advice and Management we were mocked with the Assurances of being free from the Danger of the neighbouring Fortrefs of Dunkirk; and whether the late Ministry, or any of them, did agree that the French King should make a new Harbour at Mardyke, as Part of the Equivalent for demolishing the Fortifications and Harbour of Dunkirk.

"9. By whose Advice and Management the best Branches of our Trade were exchanged for Chimeras, and the Ruin of the whole endangered, by a vile Treaty of Commerce with France.

"10. How the Expedition to Canada came to miscarry; and by whose Advice her Majesty, contrary to her Proclamations, published in New England, &c. for encouraging that Expedition, came to allow the French to keep their Interest in Canada, to sell that in Newfoundland, and to settle on Cape Breton, to the great Detriment of our Fishing Trade, and to the manifest Danger of all our Plantations in North America.

"11. By whose Advice it was that the Confederates were refused to be invited to be Guarantees to the Protestant Succession, tho' her Majesty had promised it in her Answer to the Address of both Houses in 1708.

"12. By whose Advice it was that his now Royal Highness George Prince of Wales was denied the Liberty to come and take his Place in Parliament, when the Presence of one of the illustrious Family of Hanover was so absolutely necessary to quiet the Minds of the Subjects, and to secure us from the just Apprehensions we had of Danger from the Pretender.

"13. By whose Advice it was that his Majesty's Minister, Baron Sebutz, was discharged the Court, because he demanded a Writ for the Prince.

"14. By whose Advice was Sir Patrick Lawless, the Pretender's Agent or Envoy, entertained at Court, at the same Time, and honourably conveyed beyond Sea soon after it was complained of in Parliament.

"15. By whose Advice and Management our holy Church was in Danger of being given up to Popery, our Civil Rights to Tyranny, and the Way prepared for the Pretender.

"16. By whose Advice it was that the Jacobite Clans in Scotland were armed and kept in Pay, and the Levies of Men for the Pretender in Great-Britain and Ireland were so long continued at.

"17. By whose Management it was that the publick Affairs of the Kingdom are brought under the greatest Difficulties, as well in respect to our Trade, and the Interruption of our Navigation, as of the great Debts of the Nation, which have been very much increased since the last War, as his Majesty has been graciously pleased to inform us in his Proclamation for calling a new Parliament.

"18. We also desire and expect that you concur in demanding an Account how the Money raised by Parliament has been expended since the Change of the Ministry in 1710.

"19. That

" 19. That you not only concur in such Enquiries, but also, in a Parliamentary Way, to bring such to Justice as shall be found guilty of those Mismanagements; this being a Duty owing to ourselves, as well as our Confederates, and indispensably necessary for retrieving the Honour of the Nation, and restoring a due Confidence and Harmony betwixt us and our Allies.

" 20. That you concur in making such Laws as shall be thought necessary for the better Security of the Churches of England and Scotland, as severally by Law established; and for suppressing and preventing those Seditious and groundless Clamours of the Church of England being in Danger by his Majesty's Administration.

" 21. That you concur in giving the King such Sums as shall be thought necessary for enabling his Majesty to defend the Nation, to support and retrieve Trade, and to keep the Balance of Europe, which is threatened with a new War, by the Intrigues of our common Enemies."

A.D. 1715

A great Eclipse of the Sun.

On the twenty-second of April a very great Eclipse of the Sun happened, which began six Minutes and twenty Seconds after Eight in the Morning, and ended twenty Minutes and fifteen Seconds after Ten; in which Time that great Luminary was totally eclipsed for the Space of three Minutes and twenty-three Seconds; during which Time the nocturnal Luminaries appeared, and all other Signs of a natural Night, to the great Terror of Volatiles, Quadrupeds, and Reptiles, who in all Places were observed to be in the utmost Confusion, by retiring to their several Retreats in the greatest Precipitation.

Advice of an intended Invasion.

The King having acquainted the Parliament of his receiving certain Advices from Abroad, of an Attempt to be made upon this Kingdom in Favour of the Pretender, this City presented the following Address to his Majesty:

Jour. Com. Counc.

The City's Address on the Occasion.

" We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in Common Council assembled, do with all Humility approach your Royal Presence, craving Leave to shew our utmost Concern at the Danger that seems now to threaten your Majesty and your Kingdoms, from the intended Invasion thereof by the Pretender, as your Majesty hath been graciously pleased to inform your People from the Throne; which intended Attempt, we fear, hath been encouraged by Papists, Nonjurors, and Persons of antimonarchical and rebellious Principles, who have ever been declared Enemies to our most excellent Constitution both in Church and State.

" It is with great Satisfaction that we have observed your Majesty's repeated Assurances (on which we entirely rely) for the Protection and Support of the Church of England, as by Law established, (so much favoured and encouraged by her late Majesty Queen Anne, of glorious and immortal Memory, whereby she endeared herself to her Subjects;) which Church, as it retains the greatest Purity in Worship, so it teaches such Doctrines, and professes such Principles as are most consistent with your Majesty's Safety, the Peace of all Government, and the Preservation of our happy Constitution.

" We therefore, taught by the Doctrines of this our holy Church, do most humbly assure your Majesty, that we have the utmost Abhorrence and Detestation of all seditious Rioters and tumultuous Persons, and their open and secret Abettors, who do in the least encourage the Hopes of the Pretender, and will continue our Endeavours to suppress and discountenance the same: And do further assure your Majesty of our steady Adherence to your Royal Person and Government against the Pretender, and all other your Majesty's Enemies at home and abroad."

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to return the following Answer:

" I thank you for the seasonable Assurances you give me in this Juncture of your ready Adherence to my Person and Government. I am firmly resolved to protect and encourage the Church of England, as by Law established; and do every Thing that may promote the Good of my People."

Ibid.

His Majesty's Answer.

The Merchants of London, upon this extraordinary Occasion, thinking themselves as nearly concerned as any of their Fellow-Citizens to support the Establishment in the House of Hanover, drew up and presented the following Address to the King:

The humble Address of the Turkey, Russia, East-India, Hamburg, Dutch, Italian, Spanish, Portugal, West-India, Virginia, and other Traders of the City of London.

" Most gracious Sovereign,

" The pernicious Scheme concerted for subverting the Liberties of this Nation, the late Tumults, and the present Rebellion, cannot but awaken all your honest Subjects, and inspire them with that just Concern for their Country, which becomes Patriots and Freemen; your Majesty may place a particular Confidence in the Loyalty and Affections of the trading Part of this Kingdom: None are more deeply interested in the Fate of Britain, none have expressed, in the most dangerous Times, a warmer Zeal for the Succession of your most illustrious House; and none will contribute more liberally, or act more unreservedly in Defence thereof.

The Merchants' Address.

" The Endeavours of those who had laid Plans of Ruin and Slavery for these Kingdoms, have been not only to divide our religious from our civil Interests, but to set one Part of Property against another, by making the landed Gentlemen jealous of the Trader, as if both Interests were incompatible: They could not have contrived a more effectual Method to destroy their Country, than by discountenancing Trade, a considerable Source of its Strength and Power. This was the proper Business of Men, who designed to give up a rich and flourishing Nation. But your Majesty is both too good to place your Greatness in any Thing but the Prosperity of your People, and too wise not to know that your Prosperity depends chiefly on the Encouragement of Commerce, which it will be the Glory of your Reign to recover and enlarge; in Consequence of which, we may assuredly depend "depend on your Majesty's Goodness and Protection, not only from our Zeal for your Majesty's Person and Government, but also as our true Interests can never be distinct from those of our Country.

"As we are persuaded of your Majesty's Care and Concern for our Happiness, so we will not fail to make such Returns of Duty and Zeal, as shall convince our Enemies how desperate the Attempt is in which they are engaged, when they see you surrounded with faithful Subjects at home, and when all Hopes of Assistance are cut off from abroad.

"That your Majesty may long reign in the Hearts of your loving and obedient Subjects, that you may be the Restorer of our Trade, as you are the Defender of our Religion and Liberties; and that there may never be wanting a Prince descended from your Royal Loins, to sway the British Sceptre and adorn the Throne of your Ancestors: These, Great Sir, are the hearty Prayers of your most humble, most obedient, most loyal and dutiful Subjects, who have hereunto unanimously subscribed their Names, &c.

To this hearty and very loyal Address, his Majesty returned this Answer:

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this loyal Address, and for the just Indignation you express against the traitorous Designs and Rebellion now on foot to subvert the Religion and Liberties of my People: I shall do all I can to encourage and improve Trade, which is so essential to the Strength and Riches of a Nation."

A severe Frost.

About the End of November a very hard Frost began, which, with some short Intermittions, continued till the ninth of February, with greater Severity than could be remembered; whereby the River Thames was froze over, and a great Number of Booths erected thereon, wherein were sold all Sorts of Merchandize; and, on the nineteenth of January, two large Oxen were roasted upon the Ice.

On the ninth of December following, many of the Nobility and Gentry, taken in Rebellion at Preston in Lancashire, were brought Prisoners to this City, where they were disposed of in the several Prisons in and about London.

The Rebellion in Scotland being happily suppressed, this City, on that joyful Occasion, on the twelfth of May, presented the following Address to his Majesty at St. James's:

"May it please your Majesty,

London Gazette. A.D. 1716. The City's Address on the Suppression of the Rebellion in 1715.

"With the utmost Cheerfulness we embrace the very first Opportunity of our being assembled, to declare our Joy and Satisfaction that your Majesty has suppressed the late unnatural and detestable Rebellion; that you have subdued all the Efforts of your Enemies, and defeated the Hopes of those vile Traitors, who either openly or secretly have endeavoured the Deposing and Murdering your Majesty, the Subversion of our excellent Constitution in Church and State, and the Ruin and Destruction of our Country.

"And we do humbly presume to express the unfeigned Affection of this great and populous

"City, and their firm and steady Adherence to your Majesty, and their unalterable Aversion to that Popish Pretender to your Crown, who has so much disturbed the Peace of your Kingdoms, and who, to gratify his Ambition and Revenge, would have involved this Nation in the most extreme Calamities and Miseries.

"We are obliged also in Gratitude to make Acknowledgements for your Majesty's most gracious and repeated Assurances of maintaining and protecting the Church of England in particular, as by Law established, as well as the Protestant Religion in general; and we must, in Justice, attribute to your Majesty's Wisdom, Valour, and Steadiness, and to the Power and Influence of your Councils and Arms, that the Honour and Reputation, now Credit and Commerce of this Nation, are now in a Way to increase and flourish.

"By these, and the many other Benefits we daily receive under your Majesty's auspicious Reign, and from a just Sense of our Duty, we are resolved to contribute all in our Power to your Majesty's Welfare, Prosperity, and Glory; and we cannot think of a more effectual Method to accomplish this End, than by our sincere Endeavours in our respective Stations to give good Examples to our Fellow-Subjects; and, as we are Friends to Monarchy, to promote true Zeal and Loyalty to your Majesty's Person; as we are Members of the Church of England, to shew, that we act according to our Principles, by abhorring Rebellion, by submitting to the higher Powers, and being obedient to those in Authority over us; and, as we are assured that your Majesty's innate Goodness inclines you to desire the Affections of all your People, we shall esteem it our Duty to allay those Heats and Animosities, and to compose those unhappy Divisions, which have been industriously fomented by our common Adversaries, with Design to disturb the publick Peace and Tranquility, and to alienate the Minds of your Majesty's faithful Subjects. We shall also be constantly vigilant to prevent the ill Effects of any unjust Insinuations of your Enemies, and to suppress all Contentions, but that of distinguishing ourselves by our Fidelity and Zeal for your Majesty's Service, and by our hearty Concern for transmitting to Posterity that inestimable Blessing to this Nation, the Protestant Succession in your Royal Family."

To which his Majesty returned this gracious Answer:

"I thank you heartily for the full and ample Assurances of Duty and Affection to my Person and Government, contained in this loyal Address: I look upon the Zeal expressed upon this Occasion by my good City of London, as a sure Pledge of the future Peace and Prosperity of my Kingdoms; and, as I am persuaded that the good Example you have given will very much contribute to compose the unhappy Divisions which have been fomented by our common Adversaries, so you may be assured it shall be my

"my peculiar Care to promote your Welfare and Happiness."

Salacious Tumults in the City.

At this Time the City Rabble, on most of the publick Festivals, (especially those of the King's Birth-day, Accession to the Crown and Coronation) assembled in a tumultuous Manner; and with the most amazing Assurance, by Expressions and Representations, publicly reflected on, and dishonoured the King, in the Streets of the City; which being highly resented by the Friends of the Government, many of them formed themselves into Societies, to prevent the like Practices for the future; and, on all publick Occasions, assembled in divers Parts of the City and Suburbs, at certain Alehouses, which, from the Vessels they generally drank out of, were denominated Mug-houses: At each of which were provided a great Number of Ashen Cudgels, not unlike Quarter-staves; with which, upon Advice of any tumultuous Proceedings in the Streets, they sallied out, and frequently, after a sharp Engagement, dispersed the Mob. This so enraged the Populace, that they threatened Destruction to all such Houses; and, in order to accomplish the same, many thousands of the Rabble assembled on the twenty-fourth of July, and attacked one of the said Houses in Salisbury-Court, in Fleet-Street, with an Intent to demolish the same. The Landlord in defending his Property killed one of the Assaultants; but this did not prevent their breaking in, and rifling the House, before they could be dispersed. However, divers of the Rioters being taken, they were soon after tried; and five of them being condemned, they were executed before the said House. This exemplary Punishment put an effectual Stop to all tumultuous Practices for many Years after.

Mughouse Societies.

London Bridge Laid.

The Thames dry near London-Bridge.

By a long and dry Season, the fresh Stream of the River Thames was reduced so low, that, by the Intervention of a violent Storm of Wind at West-South-West, it was blown so dry, that many thousands of People passed it on foot, both above and below London-Bridge, and thro' most of the Arches.

Act of Common Council for Lighting the City.

There passed on the eighteenth of December, in the Year of our Lord 1716, an Act of Common-Council ordaining, "That all House-keepers, whose House, Door or Gateway does front or be next unto any Street, Lane or publick Passage or Place of the said City, or Liberties thereof, shall in every dark Night, i. e. every Night between the second Night after each full Moon, and the seventh Night after each new Moon, set, or hang out one or more Lights, with sufficient Cotton-weeks, that shall continue to burn from six o'Clock at Night, till eleven o'Clock of the same Night, on Penalty of one Shilling: And that, under the like Penalty, the Occupiers of Houses in any Court that faces any publick Place or Passage, shall alternately hang or set out such a Light, on the Outside of such Doors or Gates as shall be next the said publick Place or Passage. Provided the Party offending is not charged to the Poor, and whose House shall not be of the Rent of ten Pounds per Ann. Penalties to be levied by distress and sale of the Offenders Goods, by Warrant from the "Mayor." It also repealed annulled and made void all former Acts of Common Council, touching or concerning the Lightening of the said City.

At this Time the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, being apprehensive of receiving Trouble from sinister Men, for some Omissions in respect to their Qualifications, occasioned their presenting the following Address to his Majesty on the sixth of November:

"Shewing,

"That your Petitioners are apprehensive of being disquieted in the Execution of their Offices, by Pretence of not subscribing a Declaration against the solemn League and Covenant, at the Time of their Admission into the respective Offices, pursuant to an Act of Parliament made in the thirteenth Year of King Charles the Second. That such Subscription had been generally refused, and the said Act, in that Particular, for the most part disregarded.

"That your Petitioners have, in the Administration of their Offices, behaved themselves with all Duty and Affection to your Majesty, and your Government; and humbly hope and pray, that your Majesty will give such Directions and Orders herein, as shall effectually quiet the Minds of your Petitioners, and enable them to proceed with Cheerfulness in the Execution of their respective Offices for the Service of your Majesty, and the Preservation of the publick Peace."

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

"I am fully persuaded of your Duty and Affection to me, and my Government; and I take this Application kindly, as it is a Mark of your Trust and Confidence in me. I shall be glad, not only for your Sakes but my own, if any Defects, which may touch the Rights of my good Subjects, are discovered in my Time; since that will furnish me with Means of giving you, and all my People, an indisputable Proof of my Tenderness for their Privileges, and how unwilling I shall ever be to take Advantage of their Mistakes."

On the seventeenth of December following, War was proclaimed in this City against Spain, by the Kings at Arms, accompanied by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs.

In the Year 1711, two mighty Contests happened about the Choice of Aldermen in the Wards of Broad-Street and Langbeorn; when the Lord-Mayor, as usual, held the Wardmotes, took the Polls and Scrutinies, and returned the Persons (whom he apprehended to be duly elected) to the Court of Aldermen; and, no Opposition or Complaint appearing, Gerard Conyers and Peter Delme, Esqrs, were admitted, and sworn according to the antient Usage and Custom of the City. However, tho' the other Candidates found themselves disappointed in their Election, yet, depending upon their Interest in the Common Council, resolved to make it a Party Cause; to which End, they applied to the said Court, and obtained an Order to commence Suits in the Court of King's Bench against the new-elected Aldermen, and, for the Management of which, not only appointed a Committee of their own Members, but likewise ordered Cash out of the Chamber of London to prosecute the same.

This Affair being complained of in the House of Lords, they appointed a Committee to examine into the Charge the City had been at, upon this and other Occasions since the Year 1711, relating to Elections of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen; which Committee made the following Report to that House:

"Die Veneris 17 Aprilis, 1719.

Rot. Parl. "The Earl of Clarendon (according to Order) reported from the Lords Committee appointed to examine and report to the House what Sums of Money have been issued, or ordered to be issued, out of the Chamber of London, for the Prosecuting, Defending, or Maintaining certain Causes on Writs of Error lately Depending in this House, wherein Bolton and Bridgen were Plaintiffs, and Jeff's Defendant, and the same Parties Plaintiffs, and King Defendant, or any other Causes of the like Nature, for such Time as passed as the Committee shall think proper, and by what Warrant or Authority, and on whose Application, as follows:

"That the Committee, in order to the Examination directed, first gave Order, That the Town-Clerk and Chamberlain of the City of London should attend their Lordships, and bring with them all Petitions, Orders, and Acts of Common Council, relating to the Choice of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen for the said City; together with the Warrants for issuing Money out of the Chamber of London. And the said Town-Clerk and Chamberlain attending accordingly with the said Warrants and Proceedings, they delivered the same to the Committee; whereby it appears, that the Sum of two thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven Pounds and ten Shillings issued out of the City Cash, for carrying on Causes and Suits at Law relating to the Elections of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen, since the eighth Day of November, 1711; a particular Account whereof, as delivered by the Chamberlain with the said Warrants, is as followeth:

George Ludlam, Chamberlain.

"The Committee, after perusing the said Account, and several of the original Warrants, sent for and examined the several Persons whose Names their Lordships observed

"were

"were most frequently subscribed thereto, whether they sign'd the same, and, if they did, what induced them so to do; who thereupon severally referred themselves to the Town-Clerks Minutes; and acquainted the Committee, That, if they did sign such Warrants, the same was in pursuance of the Order of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council.

"The Committee then proceeded to enquire on whose Application the said Sums of Money were issued or ordered to be issued; and, on inspecting the Papers laid before their Lordships, find, That on the eighth Day of November, 1711, a Petition of several Inhabitants of the Ward of Broad-Street was presented to the Common Council, in relation to the Election of an Alderman for that Ward; and the same Day an Order was made, That Money should be issued out of the Chamber of London, for trying the Right of that Election; and a Committee was appointed to carry on the Prosecution, and to advise with Counsel, and to commence such Proceedings, and to order and regulate the Expences thereof, as they should think fit; and the Chamberlain was ordered to issue out and pay all such Sums of Money, as the said Committee should direct.

"We further find, That another Petition was presented to the Common Council by several of the Inhabitants of the Ward of Langbourn, complaining of the Election of an Alderman for that Ward; which being taken into Consideration on the twelfth of November, 1712, which was the next Common Council after presenting this Petition, a Debate arose thereupon; and the Question being put, whether the Court should assist and support the Petitioners, according to the Prayer of the Petition, it was carried in the Affirmative; and a Committee was appointed for that Purpose, who were to carry on the Suit begun, and to commence such other Proceedings at Law, and to order and regulate the Expence, as they should think fit; and the City Officers were directed to assist the said Committee, and the Chamberlain to issue out and pay all such Sums of Money as the said Committee should direct, for defraying the Charges of the Suit, and Proceedings already commenced or to be commenced. After which, in the Years 1714 and 1715, the Common Council took into their Consideration the Elections of Common-Councilmen in the Wards of Tower and Cheap, and directed the Issuing the City Cash for maintaining and carrying on Prosecutions at Law relating thereto.

"We likewise find, That on the sixth of February, 1717, a Petition was exhibited to the Common Council, by Edward Bridgen and Peter Bolton, and others, complaining that Robert Jeffs and Stephen King were declared duly elected Common-Councilmen for Tower Ward, in Prejudice of the Petitioners, Bridgen and Bolton, Right; which Petition was received by the Common Council, who the same Day appointed a Committee to examine the Allegations thereof, and to issue such Money as "they should appoint for Advice or other necessary Expences in that Matter. And their Lordships were informed, That this Practice of the Common Council of issuing the City Cash, in taking part with Citizen against Citizen, and in assuming to themselves a Right of judging contested Elections of the City Officers, grew so heavy, that it became necessary to apply for Remedy to the Court of King's-Bench, to put a Stop to so growing an Evil: And for this Reason the said Mr. Jeffs and Mr. King moved the said Court, and thereupon obtained a Prohibition to restrain the Common Council from intermeddling with the Examination of that Election; with Directions however to declare in such Manner as to bring the Point to be tried, whether the Common Council had or had not a Right of examining such contested Elections. And accordingly a Declaration was delivered, and therein, and in the Proceedings thereon, the Point was tendered to be put in Issue for Trial: But to avoid such Trial the Defendants demurred; which coming to be argued, Judgment was given for the said Mr. Jeffs and Mr. King; and then Writs of Error were brought returnable in Parliament: And (after a considerable Delay, on Account of a pretended Loss of the Rolls or Records) the general Errors being assigned by the Plaintiffs in Error came to be argued, and no Counsel appearing for them, the Judgment of the Court of King's-Bench was affirmed with Costs.

"The Committee think proper further to acquaint your Lordships, That they having caused a Copy of the Oath taken by the Common-Councilmen to be laid before them, and finding by Part thereof, that for the Favour of any Man they shall maintain no singular Profit against the common Profit of the City, their Lordships cannot but observe, that the Committees appointed by the Common Council have chiefly consisted of Commoners.

"The Committee having enquired touching the Claim of the Common Council of the City of London, of a Jurisdiction in hearing, examining, and determining concerning the Election of Common-Councilmen for the said City, were informed, That the Claim of such Jurisdiction sprung in the Year 1641, which was disclaimed by Act of Common Council in the Year 1683. Whereupon their Lordships caused not only a Copy of the said Act, but also several Orders of Council therein declared to be repealed and made null and void, to be laid before them: And upon this Occasion think proper further to acquaint your Lordships, That one of the said Orders of Common Council, declared by the said Act to be repealed, was made the ninth of January, 1641, whereby a Committee of Common Council was appointed to hear all Parties griev'd touching the Election of divers Common-Councilmen in several Wards in the City of London, and to consider of the Manner and Legality of their Election; and afterwards a Report was made from that Committee, and confirmed.

"And

" And their Lordships finding, That the said Orders, and other Proceedings of the like Nature, in the same and some few Years after, having been, by the said Act of Common Council in the Year 1683, so solemnly repealed, their Lordships sent for and examined Colonel Samuel Wefhall, and Mr. Deputy Coke, as to their Knowledge of the Common Council reviving their Claim of Jurisdiction: Who informed the Committee, That they never knew or heard of any Motion or Petition for an Order of Common Council for the Issuing Money on Account of Prosecutions in Election of City Officers, before the Petition, above-mentioned, presented to the Common Council the said eighth of November, 1711: And they further informed their Lordships, That since that Time a Motion was made in the Common Council, that those only who were in the Right might be allowed their Charges; but the same was over-ruled. And Colonel Wefhall at the same Time acquainted the Committee, That it was no less than thirty Years since he was first a Common Councilman.

" And the Committee further think proper to acquaint your Lordships, That they have not observed that any of the Suits so ordered to be carried on by the Common Council, for which so great a Sum has been expended, were ever determined in favour of the Professors."

Which Report being read by the Clerk, and Consideration had thereof, and Debate thereupon, the House came to the following Resolution:

Resolution
of the House of Lords.

" Resolved, By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, That it is the Opinion of this House, That the Common Councils of London, having issued great Sums of Money out of the Chamber of London, in maintaining several Suits of Law between Citizen and Citizen, relating to controverted Elections, have abused their Trust, and been guilty of great Partiality, and of a gross Mismanagement of the City Treasure, and a Violation of the Freedom of Elections in the City."

At this Time happened the greatest and most fatal Catastrophe that ever befel this City, (except those of its intire Destruction by the Bretons and Danes) which the direful Effects thereof will quickly make appear.

South-Sea
Scheme.

This dreadful Bane was occasioned by a flagitious and execrable Scheme of the South-Sea Company, for paying off the Debts of the Nation; which appears to have been weak in its Contrivance, villainous in the Execution, and destructive in the End.

The Nation being immersed in a Debt of many Millions, incurred by the late necessary Wars for reducing the exorbitant and dangerous Power of France, which for many Years had been a Terror and a Scourge to the neighbouring Potentates, by its haughty and insatiable Monarch's grasping at universal Empire: For easing the Kingdom of this immense Load, divers Projects were set on Foot, among which was that of the Company of British Merchants trading to the South-Sea, &c. wherein they proposed the enlarging of their Capital, by taking into their Fund all the Debts of the Nation incurred before the Year 1716, whether redeemable or irredeemable, amounting to the Sum of thirty-one Millions six hundred and sixty-four thousand five hundred and fifty-one Pounds one Shilling and a Penny Farthing. For the Liberty of purchasing, or taking in of which to their Capital Stock, they agreed with the Legislature to pay to the Use of the Publick the Sum of four Millions one hundred and fifty-six thousand three hundred and six Pounds; besides four Years and a Half's Purchase for all the Annuities that should be subscribed into their Fund: Which, in case the Whole should be subscribed, would amount to the Sum of three millions five hundred and sixty-seven thousand five hundred and three Pounds; which, with the above-mentioned Sum, amounts to seven Millions seven hundred and twenty-three thousand eight hundred and nine Pounds: And, in case all the said Annuities should not be subscribed into their Stock, they agreed to pay one per Cent. for all that should not.

All Things relating to that great Contract being agreed upon, between the Parliament and the said Company, an Act of Parliament was passed, to enable the South-Sea Company to enlarge their Capital, by taking in the said publick Debts. This Act no sooner received the Royal Sanction, on the seventh of April, than their Stock began to rise prodigiously; which so encouraged the Directors, that on the twelfth of the same Month they caused Books to be opened, at the South-Sea-House, for taking in a Subscription of Money for two millions two hundred and fifty-two thousand Pounds of their Stock, which they gave at three hundred per Cent. so that they received just three for one: This Sum was presently subscribed, payable at nine Payments within twelve Months.

On the twenty-first of the said Month, a general Court of the said Company was held, wherein it was resolved, that the Midsummer Dividend should be ten per Cent. and that the aforesaid Subscription, and all other Additions that should be made to their Capital before that Time, should be intitled to the said Dividend. This gave such an advantageous Turn to the Stock, that the Directors on the twenty-eighth following thought proper to open Books for a second Subscription, against one Million of their Capital, at four hundred per Cent. which being quickly completed, the Subscribers had three Years allowed them to pay the Money in.

At this Time, the Company's Affairs being in a flourishing Condition, and their Stock at a high Price, on the nineteenth of May, the Court of Directors came to the following Resolutions:

1. To allow for every hundred Pounds per Annum of the Long Annuities (except those called fourteen per Cents) seven hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at three hundred	l. s.
and seventy-five Pounds per Cent. —	2625 00
And in Bonds and Money	575 00
Total for each hundred Pounds per Annum, at thirty-two Years Purchase	3200 00

2. For every ninety-eight Pounds per Annum of the fourteen per Cent. Annuities, seven hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at three hundred and seventy-five per Cent. — 2625 00
And in Bonds and Money — 511 00

Total for each ninety-eight Pounds per Annum, at thirty-two Years Purchase. — — — 3136 00

3. For every ninety Pounds per Annum of the nine per Cent. Annuities, three hundred and fifty Pounds of the Company's Stock, at three hundred and seventy-five per Cent. — — 1312 10

And in Bonds and Money — 217 10

Total for each ninety Pounds per Annum, at seventeen Years Purchase 1530 00

4. For every hundred Pounds per Annum of the Benefits of the Lottery of Ann. 1710, four hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at three hundred and seventy-five per Cent. — — 1500 00

And in Bonds and Money — 200 00

Total for each hundred Pounds per Annum, at seventeen Years Purchase 1700 00

5. For every ninety-eight Pounds per Annum of the Blanks of the Lottery of Ann. 1710, three hundred and fifty Pounds of the Company's Stock, at three hundred and seventy-five per Cent. — — 1312 10

And in Bonds and Money — 353 10

Total for each ninety-eight Pounds per Ann. at seventeen Years Purchase 1666 00

At the same Time the Directors ordered all Persons that had subscribed their Annuities, and had not left their Orders, or Tickets, to bring the same before the twenty-fifth Instant. And that all Persons, who have left their Orders, and not signed the Books, to come by themselves, or proper Attornies, and subscribe the same, on or before the aforesaid Time, otherwise to be excluded the Subscription.

These Resolutions occasioned great Murmurings among the Annuitants, to have the Company's Stock offered them at so high a Price; insomuch that many, who had only left their Orders, withdrew them, plainly perceiving, that, instead of thirty-two Years, they were in Fact only to have eight Years and a Quarter's Purchase; but the Stock, by dint of Management, having got up to five hundred per Cent. before the Time for Signing expired, this amazing Rise occasioned the Annuitants to carry back their Orders, and happy was the Person that could subscribe first. So that now it was reckoned, that two Thirds of all the Debts were subscribed.

Soon after, the Stock rising to a surprising Height, occasioned a general Infatuation, which furiously raged to the Distraction of all: For now it was, that the wife and thinking Part of the People (who had hitherto laughed at the Folly and Madness of others, for being concerned in such a wild Chimera) begun to borrow, mortgage and sell, to raise all the Money they could, in order to plunge themselves into this Abyss of Destruction; whilst others, who had enriched themselves, strove as eagerly to get out, to secure what they had got. Surely such another

Time of general Confusion never happened; for prodigious Numbers of People resorted daily from all Parts to Exchange-Alley, the Theatre of Destruction, where, by their wild Deportment and excessive Noise and Hurry, they acted like so many Persons just escaped from their Cells and Chains; for all Thoughts of Commerce being laid aside, nothing was thought of but this iniquitous Traffick, and buying and selling of Estates; for many Persons from nothing having got immense Sums of Money, were willing to lay them out in Purchases; and, as they lightly came by their Wealth, stood not for Price, but would give double, or treble the Value; which cautious Men observing, justly concluded this was the Time to get Money, without running any Risk, wherefore they disposed of their Lands, and soon after had an Opportunity of purchasing others at less than half the Value.

Now the South-Sea Stock being risen to an excessive Price, the Directors caused Books to be opened, on the eighteenth of June, for a third Money-Subscription, for four Millions of their Stock, at one thousand per Cent. yet such was the Frenzy of the Time, that, before the End of the Month, the said Subscription was sold at two hundred per Cent. Premium, and Stock about eleven hundred per Cent. And, on the third of August, the Directors came to a Resolution of receiving Subscriptions of all the unsubscribed Annuities, for which End Books were kept open all the Week after: And on the ninth of the same Month they farther resolved;

1. To allow for every hundred Pounds per Ann. of the Long Annuities (except those called fourteen per Cents) four hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at 1. eight hundred per Cent. — — 3200

Total for each hundred Pounds per Ann. at thirty-six Years Purchase — — 3600

2. For every ninety-eight Pounds per Annum of the fourteen per Cent. Annuities, four hundred and twenty Pounds of the Company's Stock, at eight hundred per Cent. — — — 3360

And in Money and Bonds — — 168

Total for each ninety-eight Pounds per Ann. at thirty-six Years Purchase — 3528

3. For every ninety Pounds per Annum of the nine per Cents, two hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at eight hundred per Cent. which is seventeen Years and seven Ninths Purchase — — — 1600

4. For every hundred Pounds per Ann. of the Benefits of the Lottery of the Year 1710, two hundred Pounds of the Company's Stock, at eight hundred per Cent. 1600

And in Bonds and Money — — 150

Total for each hundred Pounds per Ann. and seventeen Years and a Half's Purchase 1750

5. For every ninety-eight Pounds per Annum of the Blanks of the Lottery of Ann. 1710, two hundred and ten Pounds of the Company's Stock, at eight hundred per Cent. — — — 1680

And in Bonds or Money — — 35

Total for each ninety-eight Pounds per Annum, — — —

Annum, at seventeen Years and a Half's Purchase. — — — — 1715

6. All the redeemable Debts and Annuities, both at four and five per Cent. to be taken in at one hundred and five per Cent. and be allowed for the same Capital Stock of the Company, at eight hundred per Cent.

With these Resolutions the Annuitants were highly dissatisfied, seeing, by their great Confidence in the Honour of the Directors, they had left their Orders at the South-Sea-House, without any previous Contract, not in the least doubting but they should be allowed the same Terms with the first Subscribers; but now, to their great Surprise and Disappointment, found they were only to have about half as much; wherefore many repaired to the South-Sea-House to get their Orders returned; but, finding they could not succeed, gave great Uneasiness to the Directors, by their incessant Application and Reflexions, which greatly affected the Stock, inasmuch, that at the Opening of the Books, it fell to eight hundred and twenty; which so greatly alarmed the Court of Directors, that they came to a desperate Resolution, by ordering the Books to be immediately shut again; and the next Day caused others to be opened for a fourth Money-Subscription, for one Million of their Stock, at one thousand per Cent. payable at five Terms in two Years: However, tho' this Subscription was soon completed, and bore a Premium the same Afternoon of forty per Cent. yet it, together with the great Uneasiness of the Annuitants, gave the South-Sea Stock its Death's Wound, and which ever after continued in a languishing Condition, till it fell from about eleven hundred Pounds to eighty-six; which hastened on the Destruction of the Directors, who had all their Estates confiscated by Parliament, for the Relief of many thousands of distressed Families, whom they had utterly undone by their iniquitous Proceedings. And, as farther Relief to those Objects of Commiseration, the Parliament not only remitted the four millions one hundred and fifty-six thousand three hundred and six Pounds, and the four and a half Year's Purchase, (which the Company agreed to pay the Government for the Liberty of taking in the publick Debts) but likewise appointed the increased Stock to be divided among the ruined Proprietors, which amounted to forty per Cent. additional Stock to each.

It is very surprising, that this wicked Scheme of French Extraction should meet with Encouragement here, seeing the very Year before it had almost ruined that Nation. But what's still more surprising, is, that the People of divers other Countries, who, notwithstanding their having the direful Effects of this destructive Scheme before their Eyes, and, as it were, tainted with our Frenzy, begun to court their Destruction, by setting on foot the like Projects: Which gives room to suspect, that those destructive and fatal Transactions were rather the Result of an epidemical Distemper, than that of Choice; seeing that the wisest and best of Men were the greatest Sufferers; many of the Nobility, and Persons of the greatest Distinction, undone, and obliged to walk on Foot; while others, who the Year before could hardly purchase a Dinner, were exalted in their Coaches and fine Equipages, and possessed of enormous Estates. And such a Scene of Misery appeared among Traders, that it was almost become unfashionable not to be a Bankrupt. And, soon after, this direful Catastrophe was attended with such a Number of Self-Murders, as no Age can parallel.

And, as if this wicked Project had not of itself been sufficient to ruin both City and Country, there were at the same Time a vast Number of other villainous Projects set on Foot, purely calculated to enrich the roguish Projectors, at the Expence of the middling and poorer Sort of People, who were not capable of reaching the South-Sea Traffick. Those vile Schemes were justly denominated Bubbles, as consisting of nothing but Air, and Scraps of Paper. For the Suppressing of those fraudulent and illegal Practices, Application was made (in the King's Absence in his German Dominions) to the Lords Justices, who came to the following Resolution:

" Their Excellencies the Lords Justice in Council, taking into Consideration the many Inconveniences arising to the Publick, from several Projects set on Foot for raising of Joint-Stocks for various Purposes; and that a great many of his Majesty's Subjects have been drawn in to part with their Money, on Pretence of Assurances that their Petitions, for Patents and Charters to enable them to carry on the same, would be granted: To prevent such Impositions, their Excellencies, this Day, ordered the said several Petitions, together with such Reports from the Board of Trade, and from his Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor-General, as had been obtained thereon, to be laid before them; and, after mature Consideration thereof, were pleased, by Advice of his Majesty's Privy-Council, to order that the said Petitions be dismissed, which are as followeth:

Besides these Bubbles, innumerable were those that perished in Embryo; however, the Sums intended to be raised by the above-named airy Projects, amounted to about three hundred millions of Pounds: Yet the lowest of the Shares of any of them advanced above Cent. per Cent. most above four hundred per Cent. and some to twenty Times the Price of the Subscription. Which, together with the imaginary Wealth (which appears by the Rise of Stocks below) of the undermentioned Companies, amounted to about seven hundred millions of Pounds, which is probably more than all the circulating Cash upon the Earth amounts to.

South-Sea Stock, at first sold at eighty-six Pounds, being now risen to about eleven hundred: This Advance upon their original Fund of ten millions, made their Stock about one hundred and ten millions; which, with the rise of their four Subscriptions, made the whole about two hundred and ninety-five millions. Bank Stock, originally 100*l.* was now got up to 260*l.* India, from 100*l.* to 405*l.* African, from 100*l.* to 200*l.* Turk-Buildings, from 10*l.* to 305*l.* Lustring, from 5*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to 105*l.* English Copper, from 5*l.* to 105*l.* Welsh Copper, from 4*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to 95*l.* Royal-Exchange Assurance, from 5*l.* 5*s.* to 250*l.* London Assurance, from 5*l.* to 175*l.* By which prodigious Rise it is manifest, that immense Sums must have been lost, whereby vast Numbers were both enriched and ruined.

This was a Time of such a general Infatuation, Distracted and Confusion, that the knavish Part of Mankind needed only to form Projects, which, however so absurd or ridiculous, were sure to meet with Encouragement; for the Madness of the People was such, that the Shares of divers Bubbles yet in Embryo, or before the Issuing of Permits, were sold for treble the intended Price, when in Truth they were not worth one Farthing; which occasioned the enriching Numbers of Knaves, at the Expence and Destruction of as many Fools.

Notwithstanding the above-recited Order of the Lords Justices, the Bubbles, with an Assurance worthy of themselves, continued to carry on their bubbling Traffick, in open Defiance of sundry Acts of Parliament, the King's Proclamation, and their Excellencies Resolution. Besides, divers Companies established by Charter did great Damage in the bubbling way, by endeavouring to imitate the South-Sea Company's Management, by taking in Subscriptions; which being represented to the Lords Justices, it occasioned their publishing the following Order:

"The Lords Justices having received a Memorial from the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and thereupon taking into Consideration the great Trade now carrying on, in buying and selling of Stocks not warranted by Law, which must unavoidably turn to the Destruction of publick Credit, and to the Ruin of Trade, and of many private Families, who unadvisedly engage therein: Notwithstanding his Majesty, out of his tender Regard to the Good of his Subjects, had, by his Royal Proclamation of the eleventh of June last, given sufficient Warning of the severe Penalties that would be incurred by such Practices; which are such Fines, Penalties, and Punishments, whereunto Persons convicted for common and publick Nuisances, are, by any of the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, subject and liable; and moreover, such farther Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures as were ordained and provided by the Statute of Provision and Præmunire, made in the sixteenth Year of King Richard the Second, viz. Forfeiture of Lands and Tenements, Goods and Chattels, and Imprisonment, and a Penalty of five hundred Pounds for every Broker, or Person acting as a Broker, (besides Inability and Incapacity to act as a Broker for the future) one Moiety thereof to the Crown, and the other Moiety thereof to the Informer, or Person suing in any of his Majesty's Courts of Record, with full Costs of Suits:

An ingrossed Bill being sent by the House of Commons to that of the Lords, for the Prefermentation and Encouragement of the Woollen and Silken Manufactures of this Kingdom; the Lords, having heard Counsel, and examined several Persons for and against the said Bill, put off the further Consideration thereof for six Weeks; and, in order to allay the Murmurs of the Weavers on that Occasion, addressed the King, that he would be pleased to order the Commissioners of Trade, during the Recess of Parliament, to prepare a Scheme to be laid before both Houses in the approaching Sessions, for the effectual Encouragement of the said Manufactures, by discouraging the Wear of Callicoes.

The Weavers taking this to be a rejection of the Bill, some thousands of them, with their Wives and Children, repaired in a tumultuous Manner from Spitalfields to Westminster; where, crouding the Passages to the House of Lords, they demanded Justice of their Lordships as they passed: But, Detachments of the Horse-Guards being sent to prevent their doing Mischief, the Mutineers returned home, without doing other Damage than tearing a few Callicoe Gowns off the Backs of divers Women they met; and, being arrived at their respective Habitations, Peace was preserved in that Neighbourhood by the Trained-Bands of the Tower-Hamlets for a few Days. But the hot Fit returning, they threatened to demolish the House of a French Weaver, and rifle that of the East-India Company; but Detachments of the Horse and Foot-Guards being timely sent into the City, and the Trained-Bands drawn out, their pernicious Designs were happily prevented; and divers of the Rioters being apprehended and committed to Prison, the rest immediately dispersed.

The Execution of the South-Sea Scheme having occasioned the greatest Confusions and Distractions in this City, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons presented the following Petition to the House of Commons on the third of April:

tion to the

Commons, relating to Sufferers by the South-Sea
Scheme.

"That your Petitioners think it their Duty most humbly to represent to this honourable House the present State of the City of London, so considerable a Part of the Kingdom, now filled with numberless Objects of Grief and Compassion, the sad Effects of the Mismanagement, Avarice, and fatal Contrivances of the late Directors of the South-Sea Company, their Aiders, Abettors, and Confederates, in the Destruction of their Country. Nor is it the Case of this great City alone your Petitioners lament, but the general Decay of Trade, Manufactures, and of publick Credit, whereof

"this honourable House have been always so extremely tender; as also of the Honour of the British Name and Nation.

"Your Petitioners beg leave to return their most humble Thanks to this Honourable House for the great Pains they have taken to relieve the unhappy Sufferers, by compelling the Offenders to make Restitution; as likewise for their continued Application to lay open this whole Scene of Guilt, notwithstanding the industrious Artifices of such Sharers in the common Plunder, as have endeavoured to obstruct the Detection of Fraud and Corruption. And your Petitioners doubt not, but the same Fortitude, Impartiality and publick Spirit wherewith this Honourable House have hitherto acted, will still animate them in the Pursuit of those truly great and noble Ends.

"We are too sensible of the Load of the publick Debts, not to wish that all proper Methods may be taken to lessen them: And it is an infinite Concern to us, that the Payment of a great Sum towards them (which was expected from the late Scheme) is now rendered extremely difficult, if not impracticable; and yet, as a Cloud, hanging over the Heads of the present unfortunate Proprietors of the South-Sea Company, and a great Damp to publick Credit. We will not presume to mention in what Manner Relief may be given in this arduous Affair; but most humbly submit it to the Consideration of this Honourable House. Your Petitioners therefore most humbly pray this Honourable House will be pleased to take such farther Measures as they, in their great Wisdom, shall judge proper, that Trade may flourish, publick Credit be restored, and Justice done to an injured People."

Some time after, the Princess of Wales being happily delivered of a Prince, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, on that Occasion, attended the King, when the Recorder in their Name, congratulated his Majesty as follows:

"May it please your Majesty,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly intreat your Majesty's Permission to congratulate your Majesty on the Birth of the young Prince. These your Majesty's faithful and dutiful Subjects, being sensible of their Felicity under the Government of a Protestant King, having Reason to be thankful for the Preservation of their Religion, their Laws, and Liberties, and for the many Blessings they enjoy from your Majesty's mild and gracious Disposition, cannot but rejoice at this Increase of your Majesty's Royal Progeny, at this Addition of Strength to the Protestant Interest, and on this agreeable Prospect of the Continuance of Happiness to them and their Posterity. They have great Satisfaction in the Hopes, that this young Prince will inherit the bright and virtuous Qualities of his Ancestors; they beg Leave to wish for his Health and Welfare, and that your Majesty may live long, and have the Comfort to see him flourish and prosper, and to see him prove an Ornament to your Majesty's most illustrious Family, and a Glory and Honour to the British Nation."

His Majesty's Answer.

"The Zeal and Affection you have upon all Occasions shewn to my Person and Government, leave me no Room to doubt of your Joy at this happy Increase of my Family.

"I cannot omit taking this Opportunity of assuring you, that I am truly concerned at the Calamity brought upon you by the wicked Management of Affairs in the South-Sea Company. "I have however this Comfort, that the Reproach of any Part of this Misfortune cannot, with the least Justice, be imputed to me. Nothing will give me more Ease and Satisfaction, than the seeing you delivered from your present Sufferings, your Trade revived, and publick Credit re-established."

Act Parl. 8 G. I. A.D. 1722

Orders for preventing the Spreading of the Plague.

In the preceding Year an Act of Parliament was made for performing Quarantine, in case the Plague should approach this Kingdom, (which then raged in a dreadful Manner at Marseilles in France) wherein it was enacted, That if at any Time hereafter any City, Town, or Place within Great-Britain or Ireland, should be infected by the Plague, then every such Place so infected shall be inclosed and shut up by a Line or Trench, in order to cut off all Communication between such infected Town or Place and the Country; and, for the better securing of which, a sufficient Guard be appointed for preventing any Person in the said inclosed Place or Places from making his, her, or their Escape; and that all Persons endeavouring to escape from the said infected Place or Places, without having regularly performed Quarantine, to suffer Death as Felons Convict, without Benefit of Clergy.

This Act greatly alarmed the Citizens of London, who thereby apprehended that not only their Rights and Privileges were endangered, but likewise that the Trade and Prosperity of the City were greatly concerned: Wherefore the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council assembled, drew up and offered a Petition to the House of Lords, who then had the said Act under Consideration. The Petition set forth, that it appearing by the Inspection of the Journal of that House, that their Lordships had then under Consideration the Amendment of an Act passed in a late Session of Parliament, intitled, An Act to oblige Ships coming from infected Places, more effectually to perform Quarantine, and for the better preventing the Plague's being brought from foreign Parts into Great-Britain or Ireland, and to binder the Spreading of Infection: That the Petitioners conceive, that in some Clauses of that Act, not only the Rights, Privileges, and Immunities, but the Trade, Safety, and Prosperity of the City of London are highly concerned; praying they may be heard by their Counsel, or otherwise, in relation to the said Act, at such Time and in such Manner as their Lordships shall judge most proper. However, the Petition was rejected; yet nevertheless it soon after occasioned the bringing in and passing a Bill in the House of Commons for reverting the Clauses that affected the City, which soon after likewise passed the House of Lords.

At this Time a traiterous Conspiracy being carried on against the Government, the Lord Townshend, principal Secretary of State, by his Majesty's Command, on the eighth of May, sent this Letter to the Lord-Mayor:

"My Lord,

"His Majesty, having nothing more at Heart than the Peace and Safety of his good City of London, the Protection of its Inhabitants, and the Support of publick Credit, has commanded me to acquaint your Lordship, that he has received repeated and unquestionable Advices, that several of his Subjects, forgetting the Allegiance they owe to his Majesty, as well as the natural Love they ought to bear to their Country, have entered into a wicked Conspiracy, in Concert with Traitors abroad, for raising a Rebellion in this Kingdom in Favour of a Popish Pretender, with a traiterous Design to overthrow our excellent Constitution both in Church and State, and to subject a Protestant free People to Tyranny and Superstition; but I am persuaded that it will be a great Satisfaction to your Lordship and the City to find, that, at the same Time I am ordered to inform you of this Design, I am likewise commanded by his Majesty to let you know, that he is firmly assured, that the Authors of it neither are nor will be supported, nor even countenanced, by any foreign Power. And as his Majesty has had timely Notice of their wicked Machinations, and has made the proper Dispositions for defeating them, has no Reason to doubt but, by the Continuance of the Blessing of Almighty God, and the ready Assistance of his faithful Subjects, this Effort of the Malice of his Enemies will be turned to their own Confusion.

"His Majesty makes no doubt but your Lordship, pursuant to the Trust reposed in you, will, in Conjunction with the other Magistrates of his good City of London, exert, with the utmost Care and Vigilance, your Authority at so important a Conjunction, for the Preservation of the publick Peace, and the Security of the City."

Upon the Receipt of this Letter, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen immediately drew up the following Address, and the next Day presented it to his Majesty:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"Your Majesty having been graciously pleased to signify to the Lord-Mayor how much you have at Heart the Peace and Safety of your City of London, the Protection of its Inhabitants, and the Support of publick Credit; and that your Majesty has unquestionable Advices of a wicked Conspiracy entered into by some of your Majesty's Subjects, in concert with Traitors abroad, for raising a Rebellion in this Kingdom, in Favour of a Popish Pretender to your Majesty's Crown:

"We, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of this City, most humbly intreat your Majesty's Permission to make this our immediate Approach to your Royal Presence, that we may return our most humble and unfeigned Historical Register.

Secretary Townshend's Letter to the Lord-Mayor concerning a Conspiracy.

Ibid.

The City's Address thereupon.

"unfigned Thanks for this Instance of your Majesty's tender and indulgent Regard to your faithful and dutiful Subjects of this City; and that we may have Leave to give your Majesty Assurances of our steady and unalterable Affection and Zeal for your Royal Person and Government, and for the Continuance of the Protestant Succession in your Royal Family.

"And it is an unspeakable Satisfaction to us, that we can, at the same Time, congratulate your Majesty on the happy Success of those Negotiations, which have procured Assurances, that these wicked and traitorous Purposes will not be supported or countenanced by any foreign Power.

"When we reflect on the many Blessings which Britons enjoy, under the Protection of a Prince, who makes the Laws of this Land his Rule for the Government of his People; when we consider that neither the civil or religious Rights of your Majesty's Subjects have met with the least Instance of Violation, since your Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne of these Realms; when we recollect your Majesty's Royal Clemency and Benevolence (since the last Rebellion) to Numbers of those who had offended, in the highest Degree, against their King and the Laws of their Country; we cannot but express the utmost Abhorrence of those vile and detestable Persons, who shall again conspire and attempt to bring a free and happy People under the Yoke and Tyranny of Superstition, and involve this Nation in a State of Blood, Misery, and utmost Confusion.

"And, as these must be the unavoidable Consequences attending any Enterprize to alter our present happy Establishment, and to introduce a Popish one, as Englishmen that value our Liberties, as honest Men that have sworn Allegiance to your Majesty, and who have abjured and renounced the Pretender, and as real Friends to our excellent Constitution in Church and State, (with a Protestant Prince at the Head of it) we beg Leave, in the most solemn Manner, to declare to your Majesty, That, as we are bound in Gratitude, we will exert ourselves in our several Stations with the utmost Care and Vigilance, for the Preservation of the publick Peace and Tranquility, and for the Restoring of publick Credit; and that we will use our sincere and hearty Endeavours for the firm Support of your Majesty upon the Throne, and for the making your Reign easy and happy.

"And we doubt not but, by the Blessing of Almighty God upon the Wisdom and Conduct of your Majesty, and the Vigilance of your Councils, and the ready and cheerful Assistance of your Majesty's faithful Subjects, your Majesty will entirely defeat and frustrate the Malice and Efforts of all your Enemies, their Aiders and Abettors, and that their wicked Machinations will be turned to their own Confusion."

To which his Majesty was graciously pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"Your affectionate and cordial Assurances, upon this important Occasion, of an unshaken Zeal and Fidelity to my Person and Government, give me the greatest Satisfaction.

"Your Interest and mine are, and ever must be, inseparable; and I doubt not but that, with the Blessing of God, the Precautions I have taken, and your firm Adherence to our just Cause, will soon convince our Enemies, that their wicked Designs can end in nothing but their own Confusion.

"You may depend upon my constant Care and utmost Endeavours to support the publick Credit, to protect the Privileges and Properties of this great and opulent City, and to maintain the Religion, Laws, and Liberties of this Kingdom."

The same Day a Proclamation was published for putting the Laws in Execution against Papists and Nonjurors, commanding all Papists and reputed Papists to depart the Cities of London and Westminster, and ten Miles of the same.

The Government having resolved to take all the Precautions imaginable for rendering abortive the Designs of the Conspirators, Orders being sent by the Privy-Council to the several Lieutenancies within the Bill of Mortality, to take an Account of the Number of Houses within their several Jurisdictions, the Returns thereof were as follow:

There being then no Account taken of the Number of Horses in Southwark, nor any other Part on that Side the River Thames, within the Bill of Mortality, I shall therefore compute the Horses in those Parts (which I imagine I may safely do) at the same Number with that of the Tower-Hamlets, viz. two thousand nine hundred and eighty; which makes the Number Total of all the Horses within the Bill of Mortality amount to twenty thousand five hundred and eighty-one. But being told by the worthy Lieutenant-Colonel Ellis, that, by the carelets Omifions of the Officers belonging to his own Blue Regiment (which he soon after discovered) of Middlesex, within the Bill of Mortality, the Number is very defective, it gives room to suspect, that the other Accounts are in the same Condition: If so, 'tis probable the Defects may amount to some thousands; however, by a moderate Computation, I shall only reckon them at a Tenth; which, added to the above Number, will make the whole amount to twenty-two thousand six hundred and thirty-nine.

Many Contentions frequently arising among Neighbours concerning rebuilding their Houses within the City and its Liberties, it was necessary to apply to Parliament for a certain Rule or Order, to put a Stop to those Disputes about Party-Walls and Water-Spouts; wherein it was enacted, That if any Person refused or neglected to build his Share of a Party-Wall, after due Notice given him, his next Neighbour may build it for him, and oblige the Person so neglecting it to pay the Charges of rebuilding it. And that the Water falling from the Tops of Houses, Balconies, and Penthouses, shall be conveyed into Channels or Kennels, by Pipes in the Front or Sides of the Houses, on Pain of twenty Pounds Forfeiture.

On Monday the twenty-second of March, 1725-6, the City being in a great Ferment, on account of a Bill brought into the House of Commons for regulating Elections within the City of London, the Court of Aldermen and Common-Council came to the following Resolutions:

"This Court being sensible of the great Obligations the City has to Francis Child, Esq; one of the Aldermen of this City, Richard Lockwood, Esq; and John Barnard, Esq; (three of their Representatives in Parliament) for their great Pains and Application, and for their brave, strenuous, and very honourable Behaviour, in relation to the Bill lately depending in the Honourable House of Commons, bearing the Title of a Bill for regulating Elections within the City of London, and for preserving the Peace, good Order, and Government of the said City; and to the End such signal Services may not pass without an Acknowledgment, it is ordered, that the Thanks of this Court, on Behalf of themselves and all their Fellow-Citizens, be given to the said three worthy Gentlemen, for their Endeavours to defend the antient Rights, Franchises, and Liberties of this great Corporation. And the Committee this Day appointed to prepare a Petition against the said Bill, and to oppose the same in the House of Lords, are desired to attend the said three Gentlemen with the Resolution and Order of this Court, and to deliver them a Copy thereof, which is to be signed by Mr. Town-Clerk for that Purpose."

And the Committee, consisting of four Aldermen and eight Commoners, waited upon the said three worthy Members, pursuant to the said Order.

This Affair having raised no small Ferment in the City, as observed above, some evil-disposed Persons took that Occasion to foment and heighten the Discontents; for which Purpose they and their Emissaries industriously handed about and dispersed, on Wednesday the twenty-fourth in the Evening, and the next Morning, a printed Summons, inviting the Citizens to assemble at Guildhall on Thursday the twenty-fifth, at Five o'Clock in the Afternoon, to consider of the Bill now depending for regulating Elections, &c. Hereupon the Lord-Mayor, and his Brethren the Aldermen, justly resenting this audacious Attempt upon their Authority, with great Prudence, ordered the Gates of Guildhall to be shut up, as soon as the Business of the Common Council (which was then called) should be finished. And, having acquainted the Government with what had passed, the Guards were thereupon doubled at St. James's Palace, Leicester-House, and Somerset-House. By these wise Precautions all Things were kept quiet; and, to give farther Satisfaction to the Citizens, the following printed Paper was dispersed, viz.

"London, Thursday, March 25, 1725.

"Whereas a printed Summons was last Night and this Morning industriously handed about, for a general Meeting of the Citizens at Guildhall this Afternoon, at Five o'Clock, to consider of the Bill relating to the City of London: This unheard-of Proceeding is justly supposed to be calculated to draw the Citizens together, to precipitate them into some Act, to countenance the late Disorders at Elections, and the present unsettled State of Things in the City, for the Remedy whereof the said Bill does wisely provide; and it is hoped that such as are for the Welfare of the City, and can be present at the Hall at this Hour's Notice, will bear their Testimony against such disorderly Proceedings.

"N. B. The last Petition of a Majority of the Common Council, was voted without so much as publickly reading the said Bill, as it passed in the House of Commons; but, as the said Bill is printed, it's hoped the Citizens of London will read it, which will sufficiently guard them against the unjust Misrepresentations that are made against it by designing Men."

According to the Hint or Notice given in this Paper, there was, soon after, published an Abstract of the said Bill, as follows:

"The Bill now depending in Parliament for regulating Elections within the City of London, and for preserving the Peace, good Order, and Government of the said City, seems to be so wisely calculated for effecting the good Purposes expressed in the Title of it, that one would wonder it should be opposed by any honest Citizen of London, especially considering the Time and Pains spent in it by the Honourable House of Commons, and their great Indulgence and Patience in hearing and debating the Objections made to the several Parts of it. Surely it must be for want of knowing what the Bill is, that some People join in the Clamour raised by designing Persons against it: And, since extraordinary Endeavours have been used to get Citizens, &c. to sign a Petition against they know not what, (Anglice, the Bill) it seems very reasonable to publish the following Abstract, which, for the Ease of the Reader, is distinguished under these Heads:

- "1. The Preamble.
- "2. Of Clerks of the Polls, and Oaths of Electors.
- "3. Of Proceedings on Polls and Scrutinies.

" 4. Of the Right of voting for Aldermen and Common-Councilmen.

" 5. Of Appeals upon Grievances in Assessments.

" 6. Of the Disqualifications of Voters.

" 7. Of making Acts and Orders in Common Council.

" 8. Of Freeman's making their Wills.

" 9. Of the Alterations in a Freeman's Oath.

" 10. Of the Distribution and Recovery of Forfeitures.

" 1. The Bill recites, That many Controversies have arisen in the City at Elections, and that many Persons have presumed to vote at such Elections who have no Right.

" That several wealthy Persons, not free of the City, carry on Trade and Employment therein, and decline becoming free of the same, by Reason of a Custom restraining the Freeman from disposing of their Personal Estate by their last Will.

" The Bill farther recites, That great Dissentions have arisen between Aldermen and the Commons of the Common Council, concerning the making of Acts or Ordinances in Common Council.

" 2. Now, to the Intent that suitable Remedies may be provided, the Bill enacts,

" That, after the first of June, 1725, upon every Election by the Liverymen, and upon every Election of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen, the presiding Officers shall, if a Poll be demanded, appoint Clerks, who shall be sworn truly and indifferently to take the same.

" Every Person, before he polls at any Election by the Liverymen, shall swear, or, being a Quaker, shall affirm, That he is a Freeman of London, and a Liveryman of the Company of —, and hath been so for the Space of twelve Calendar Months, and that the Place of his Abode is at — in —, and that he hath not polled at that Election.

" At Elections of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen, every Person before he polls shall swear, or, being a Quaker, shall affirm, That he is a Freeman of London, and a Householder in the Ward of —, and hath not polled at the Election.

" And, if any Person refuses or neglects to take the Oath or Affirmation, his Vote shall be void.

" The Bill farther enacts, That, at all Elections by the Liverymen, or at the Wardmotes, every Person, before he is admitted to vote, shall, if required, take the Oaths, or, being a Quaker, affirm the Effect of the Oaths appointed to be taken: Georgii; and, if any Person refuses or neglects so to do, his Vote shall be void.

" Power is given to the presiding Officers and sworn Clerks to administer the above Oaths; and any of them neglecting or refusing so to do, or otherwise offending in the Premises, shall forfeit sixty Pounds.

" If any Person falsely or corruptly takes any of the said Oaths or Affirmations, or if any Person suborns any other to do, and he accordingly does the same, every such Offender shall suffer such Penalties as Persons convicted of wilful and corrupt Perjury are liable to.

" 3. The Bill farther enacts, That, if a Poll is demanded, it shall begin the same Day; or the next Day after; and shall be daily proceeded on (Sundays excepted) till finished.

" And the Poll by the Liverymen is to be finished within seven Days, and at the Wardmotes within three Days; and the Poll-Books, upon each Day's Adjournment, to be sealed up in the Presence and with the Seals of the Candidates, or Persons deputed by them, desiring the same, and shall not be opened but at the Time and Place of Adjournment.

" In two Days after the finishing of the Poll the Books shall be publicly opened and cast up, and two Days after that the Numbers shall be declared.

" If a Scrutiny be demanded, it shall be granted, and the Candidates shall name Scrutineers, not exceeding six on each Side; to whom the presiding Officer shall, within six Days after, deliver, at the Request and Cost of the Candidates or Scrutineers, true Copies of the Poll, by him signed.

" The Scrutinies at the Elections by the Livery, shall begin within ten Days after the Delivery of the Copies of the Poll, and shall be proceeded on daily, (Sundays excepted) and be finished within fifteen Days after Commencement; and, within four Days after, the presiding Officer shall publicly declare who is duly elected, with the Numbers for each Candidate.

" If a Scrutiny be demanded at the Wardmote Elections, the Candidates or Scrutineers shall, within ten Days after receiving the Copies of the Poll, deliver to the presiding Officer the Names of the Persons against whose Votes they object, with their Reasons for such Objections; Copies whereof he shall deliver to the Candidates or Scrutineers, at their Charge and Request, within three Days; and shall, within ten Days next following, after hearing the Parties, publicly declare which of the Candidates is duly elected, with the Number of legal Votes for each Candidate.

" If any presiding Officer shall offend in the Premises, he shall forfeit two hundred Pounds, with full Cost of Suit, besides the Penalties inflicted by any other Act.

" 4. For quieting the Disputes touching the Right of Election of Aldermen and Common-Councilmen, the Bill enacts, That the Right of Election shall belong only to Freeman, being Householders, paying Scot as herein after mentioned, and bearing Lot when required.

" Provided the Houses of such Householders be of the Value of ten Pounds a Year, and that such Householders be the sole Occupiers of such Houses, and have been in Possession of a House of such Value in the Ward twelve Months before the Election.

" Provided also, that such Householder within the Space aforesaid shall have been rated, and paid his Scot to all the Rates, (except annual parliamentary Aids) whereunto the Citizens of London inhabiting therein shall be liable, or shall

"shall have paid to the said Rates, or some of them, thirty Shillings per Annum.

"There is a Proviso, that if any Partners carry on a joint Trade in a House, and have been Householders thereof for the Space aforesaid, paying their Scot, and bearing their respective Lots, shall have Votes at such Elections; so as such House be of the yearly Value of as many ten Pounds per Annum as there are Partners.

"It is also provided, that where two Persons, not Partners, have, by the Space aforesaid, severally inhabited in the same House, paying their Scot, and bearing their respective Lots, they shall have Votes at the Elections; so as such House be of the yearly Value of twenty Pounds, and that each of the Persons doth pay ten Pounds per Annum for his Part.

"There is likewise a Proviso, that nothing in this Act shall extend to oblige any Persons to pay any Scot, or bear any Lot, from the doing of which they are exempted by Act of Parliament, Charter, or Writ of Privilege, but such Persons may vote at Wardmote Elections, as heretofore.

"5. For obtaining Relief in Case of Grievance by any Assessment, or any Officers Misbehaviour relating thereto,

"The Bill enacts, That any Person aggrieved by any Assessment for the Orphans, or the Rate for the Watch, may appeal to the Court of Aldermen; and any Person aggrieved by any other Assessment, may appeal to the Persons to whom such Appeal lies by Law, and the Appellees are respectively to hear and determine the Matters complained of.

"6. No Person is to have a Right to vote at the Elections by the Livery who hath not paid his Livery-Fine, or hath received his Fine back again, or hath had any Allowance in respect thereof. Nor shall any Person have a Right to vote at those Elections, or at the Wardmote Elections, who, within two Years before the Election, hath, at his Request, been discharged from paying to the Rates aforesaid, or who hath received Alms.

"7. For putting an End to the Disputes between the Court of Aldermen and the Commons of the Common Council,

"The Bill enacts, That no Act, Order, or Ordinance shall be made in Common Council, without the Assent of the Mayor and Aldermen present, or the major Part of them, nor without the Assent of the Commons present, or the major Part of them.

"There is a Proviso, that the Election of Common-Serjeant, Town-Clerk, &c. shall be made by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council assembled, or the major Part of them.

"8. For encouraging Persons of Wealth to become free of the City, the Bill enacts, That every Person who shall, after the first of June, be made free, and every unmarried Person already free, and having no Children, may will and dispose of his Personal Estate as he shall think fit, any Custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Provided, that if any such Person shall have agreed, by Writing made, on Marriage, or otherwise, that his Personal Estate shall be subject to the Custom of the City; or, if such Person shall die intestate, his Personal Estate shall be subject to the Custom.

"9. The Bill enacts, That there shall be left out of the Freeman's Oath these Words, [Ye shall know no Foreigner to buy or sell any Merchandise with any other Foreigner within the City, or the Franchises thereof, but ye shall warn the Chamberlain thereof, or some Minister of the Chamber]; and also these Words, [Ye shall implead or sue no Freeman out of the City, whilst ye may have Right and Law within the same City]; and after these Words, [Ye shall take no Apprentice] the Words immediately following shall be omitted, viz. [But if he be free born, that is to say, no Bondfman's Son, nor the Child of any Alien]; and for [No] these Words, [For any] shall be inserted.

"10. The Forfeitures in this Act are to be distributed, one Third to the King, one Third to the Chamberlain for the Use of the City, and the remaining Third to the Prosecutors, suing within six Months after the same shall be incurred, to be recovered by Action, Bill, &c.

"This Act is to be deemed a publick Act."

Nevertheless this could not prevent the following Petition being presented by a vast Number of Citizens, in Behalf of themselves and their Fellow-Citizens against it:

"That your Petitioners waited with much Patience and Contentment of Mind (as very well became them) whilst the Bill lately depending in the Honourable House of Commons, intituled, An Act for regulating Elections in the City of London, and for maintaining the Peace, good Order, and Government of the same City, was there forming.

"That they were fully persuaded that the same at last would be there so finished, as fully to answer the Title thereof, and the good Intentions that Honourable House always bears towards the Citizens of London; but notwithstanding, your Petitioners, with great Concern of Mind, humbly crave Leave to represent to your Lordships, that the said Bill now transmitted thence to your Lordships, in the Form it now stands, will not only, as your Petitioners apprehend, highly affect the Rights and Privileges of the Freemen in particular, but the laudable and antient Government and Customs of the City in general, in many Instances, some of which, with perfect Duty, Submission, and Resignation, we beg Leave to lay before your Lordships:

"For that the said Bill takes away from great Numbers of the Freemen (other than Paupers and Nonjurors) the undoubted Rights which they before had of voting in their corporate Elections, without any Crime or Fault in them assigned.

"For that it destroys the former Qualification of a Voter in Wardmote Elections, and hath substituted a new, complicated, and uncertain one in the Room of it, and which, as your Petitioners apprehend, may be productive of various Controversies and Disputes.

A Petition
against the Bill for regulating
Election.

"For that the said Bill, in Effect, leaves all the remaining Votes of the City at the Mercy of the presiding Officer, who may still declare as he may be inclined, without granting a Copy of the Poll scrutinized, or giving any Account what Votes he allows or disallows, notwithstanding this Bill; whence the Remedy, either for the injured Candidate, or Voter, becomes exceeding difficult, if not wholly impracticable. For that the Bill, in a Manner, abolishes the antient and laudable Custom of Distribution of Freemens Personal Estates, so agreeable to natural Equity, and so wisely adapted to the Prosperity of a trading City, without just Occasion, and upon Suggestions not well grounded, as we humbly apprehend.

"Lastly, For that by the same Bill, as your Petitioners humbly apprehend, the Commoners in Common Council, who are two hundred and thirty-four in Number, and though they are all unanimous, may nevertheless be restrained from applying to his Majesty, or either House of Parliament, upon any Occasion, how necessary soever; from issuing out of the Chamber so much as one Farthing upon any Occasion, how just soever; or Seal any City Lease, tho' upon any Terms ever so advantageous; or come to any Resolution whatsoever, and how reasonable soever, without the Consent of the Mayor and Aldermen, or the Majority of them, tho' there should be no more than three of them there present; and this, as it is said, by the antient Constitution of the City: And yet, which is very extraordinary, the same Bill lays no Restraint upon the Power which the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen exercise themselves over the publick Purse and the Seal, which is now become very great and extensive. If such hath been the antient Constitution of the City, your Petitioners humbly beg Leave to say, That the same hath been so antient, that few, or no Footsteps thereof have remained to this Day; and that, in the Memories of the oldest of us, the same hath never so much as been claimed, or mentioned by the Mayor and Aldermen, except twice only; first in the Year 1674, and now again very lately, and both Times as soon relinquished as mentioned: And yet we find, by Experience, that the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen are never wanting to assert the most remote Pretensions to all their Rights and Privileges.

"From such Alterations and Innovations, your Petitioners have too just Reason to apprehend, that the good Fruit and Effect intended by this Bill, is not to be expected from it in the Form it now stands; and that Controversies and Dissensions of the City will not therefore be lessened, but increased.

"Wherefore your Petitioners humbly intreat your Lordships, to take the Premises into your tender Consideration; to ascertain the Qualifications of the several Voters in our Elections; to put a Check upon the Behaviour of the presiding Officers; and to establish the good Government and antient Customs of the City, in such Manner, as to your Lordships profound Wisdom shall seem just and reasonable, and

No. 45.

"may be comparable with the Rights, Privileges, and Freedom of the said City: And that your Petitioners may be heard by their Counsel, or otherwise, what they have humbly to offer against such Parts of the said Bill as relate to the Matters aforesaid, in such Manner as your Lordships shall think fit.

On the thirteenth of April, 1725, the Bill, intituled, An Act for regulating Elections within the City of London, &c. being read the third Time in the House of Lords, it was proposed to ask the Opinions of the Judges, "Whether this Bill does repeal any of the Prescriptions, Privileges, Customs and Liberties of the said City of London, restored to them, or preserved by the Act passed in the second Year of King William and Queen Mary, for reversing the Judgment in a Quo Warranto against the City of London, and for restoring the said City to its antient Rights and Privileges?

"After Debate thereupon,

"The Question was put, Whether the Judges shall deliver their Opinions upon the said proposed Question?

"It was resolved in the Negative.

"Dissentient."

"1. Because it being enacted and declared, by the Act mentioned in the Question, That the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, shall for ever hereafter remain, continue, and be prescribed to be a Body corporate, in Re Falso, & Nomine, by the Name of Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, and shall (as by Law they ought) peaceably enjoy all and every their Rights, Gifts, Charters, Grants, Liberties, Privileges, Franchises, Customs, Usages, Constitutions, Prescriptions, Immunities, Markets, Duties, Tolls, Lands, Tenements, Estates, and Hereditaments whatsoever, which they had, or had a Right or Interest in, or to, at the Time of giving the said Judgment: And we being apprehensive that the Alterations made in this Bill, in the Constitution of the Common Council, and other antient Rights, Franchises and Prescriptions of the City, may utterly abolish the antient legal Title of the City to their Rights, Franchises, Prescriptions, and Constitutions, in the Particulars contained in the said Bill; and may, in consequence thereof, work a total Change of the whole antient Constitution of the Corporation of the said City, or greatly confound or prejudice the same, which has stood for so many Ages upon the Foundation of its antient Title, Rights and Prescriptions, confirmed by many Grants made by his Majesty's Royal Progenitors, and by many Acts of Parliament, all which were restored so soon after the happy and glorious Revolution, and which have been peaceably enjoyed to the present Time; we are of Opinion, that the Solution of the said Question by the Judges, must have tended greatly to the necessary Information of the House, and to their better Judgment upon a Bill of so great Importance, as well as to the Satisfaction and Quiet of the Citizens of London, who, so far as we can collect from the Petitioners against the Bill, are greatly alarmed at the

6 U

"Con-

" Consequence thereof: And we are of Opinion,
 " That it was the more necessary, and more con" sistent with the Wisdom of this House, to be " informed of the Law by the Judges upon the " Question proposed, because we don't find in this " Bill, any Saving or Confirmation of any of the " antient Titles, Rights, Prescriptions, Privi" leges or Franchises of the said City restored to " them by the former Law.

" 2. We think the Question ought to have " been proposed to the Judges, the rather be" cause the Opinions of several Counsels were " admitted to be read at the Bar of the Com" mittee of the whole House, in favour of the " Bill.

*Proſeſs

paſſing the City Bill.*

" 1. Because we apprehend, That the Penalty " of two hundred Pounds upon the Officer pre" siding at Wardmote Elections, as well as at " Elections even for Members of Parliament, " is so small, that it may be construed into an In-" demnification, and be looked upon rather as an " Encouragement than a Restraint, by a wealthy,
 " partial, and arbitrary Officer: At least, we are
 " of Opinion, That such a one will not be suffi" ciently deterred by it from returning such Can" didates as he likes, rather than such as the " City chooses; and if ever that melancholy
 " Case should happen, we fear, neither the Can" didates nor Voters will be able to find an " effectual Method of doing Justice for so fla" grant an Injury, either to themselves or to the " Nation.

" 2. Because we cannot but think, from the Evi" dence given at the Bar, That this Bill will take " away from many Citizens their Right of voting
 " in Wardmote Elections, by giving an Exclu" sion to all those that inhabit Houses under ten " Pounds a Year, even tho' they pay Parish
 " Duties, or thirty Shillings in lieu of them;
 " which we conceive an unjustifiable Hardship
 " upon those who may have long enjoyed that " Right, and have had no Crime objected to " them, much less proved, as we think it ought " to be, before they can justly be deprived
 " of it.

" 3. Because by this Bill no Act is to pass in " Common Council, for the future, (except " what relates to the Nomination of some few " Officers) without the Assent of the major Part " of the Mayor and Aldermen present in such " Common Council; which we conceive will give " too great an Addition of Power to the Mayor " and Aldermen, who have already many and " large Prerogatives incontestably allowed them
 " by the Commonalty of the City: And tho' the " Counsel for the Bill insisted, That the Mayor

" and Aldermen had antiently that Right which " this Bill establishes, yet the Proof of that " Right appeared to us so remote and obscure,
 " that we ourselves were too short-sighted to dis" cern it: And on the other Side, it appeared " plain to us, that, even from the Time of in" corporating the City to this present Time,
 " such a Claim has very seldom been made,
 " and that it has never been acknowledged; and " therefore, we conceive, if there be any Foun" dation for such Right (which we are far from " thinking there is) the Dispute should be de" cided first in the inferior Courts of Justice,
 " and rather determined in the House of Lords
 " upon an Appeal, than ended by an Act of " Parliament, which seems to us such a Method
 " of determining Controversies of this Nature,
 " as may prove of the most dangerous Confe" quence to the Rights and Properties of all the " Subjects of Great-Britain.

" 4. Because the Bill abolishes the Custom re" lating to the Distribution of the Personal " Estates of free Citizens; which is a Custom
 " not only of great Antiquity, but seems to us " to be wisely calculated for the Benefit of a " trading City, and has been acquiesced under
 " for so many Years, without the least Com" plaint of any one free Citizen, that we ever " heard of; that the taking it away in this Man" ner cannot but appear to us too rash and pre" cipitate; and may too, probably, in our Opi" nion, be very detrimental to the true Interest " of this antient, populous, loyal, and hitherto " flourishing City, the Preservation of whose " good Order and Government, the Bill itself
 " very justly and judiciously allows to be of the " greatest Consequence to the whole Kingdom.

" Diffident'.

" For the foregoing Reasons, and those that " follow, (viz.)

" 1. Because we are of Opinion, That the " great Alterations made by this Bill in the " antient Constitution of the Common Council,
 " and other the Rights, Franchises, and Pre" scriptions of the City of London, will, if pass" ed into a Law, intirely subvert and destroy " the antient Title which the City at this Time
 " lawfully Claims, and has hitherto; and will " introduce and enact a new Constitution upon
 " the City, hereafter to be claimed and enjoyed,
 " not upon the Foundation of their antient
 " Title, but of this Act of Parliament; which " must, as we conceive, in all future Times,
 " whenever the City of London may have Oc" casion to assert or defend their antient Titles
 " and Franchises, bring them under insuperable
 " Difficulties, and may be followed with dange" rous Consequences, concerning the very Being " and Constitution of the Corporation, many of " which

" which it is impossible to foresee or enumerate.

" 2. We are of Opinion, That the new Constitution of the Common Council, enacted by this Bill, whereby a Negative is declared and given to the Mayor and Aldermen, not only in the making of By-laws for the Government of the City, but in other Acts concerning the Issuing and Disposal of the Treasure of the City, and also of the Seal of the City, whereby their Lands and other Estates are subjected to the said Negative; and in all other Acts and Powers at this Time, as we conceive, belonging to the Common Council, excepting only the Appointment of some few Officers, mentioned in the Bill; is a dangerous Innovation upon the City, unsupported by any Evidence offered at the Bar, and of the antient Constitution; and tho' in late Time mentioned to be claimed, yet contrary, as we conceive, to a clear, uninterrupted and convincing Proof of the Exercise of the Powers and Authorities of the Common Council in all Ages, to the twenty-ninth of January, 1723. And we conceive the Alteration made by the Bill, in this Respect, to be the more unwarrantable, because the written Evidence offered to support the Claim of a Negative, by the Mayor and Aldermen, was either conceived in general Terms, unapplicable to that Claim, and not maintained by subsequent Practice, or was drawn from Proceedings in Times of Trouble and Confusion.

" 3. We are of Opinion, That the extraordinary Power given by this Bill to the Mayor and Aldermen, will vest in them new and exorbitant Authorities over all the Citizens, their Rights, Liberties and Franchises of all Kinds; inconsistent with that Balance of Power in the City, by which the same have been preserved; and in the future Exercise thereof must, as we conceive, lay the Foundation of constant and lasting Disputes, Divisions, and Distraction in the City of London.

" 4. We think this Bill is the more dangerous, because it creates a new Constitution in several Particulars contained in it, not framed upon the antient Rights, proved or pretended to, or disputed on either Side; but is a new Model, without due Regard to the antecedent Rights, as claimed by either Side; and will deprive a great Number of Citizens of their antient Rights and Franchises in Elections, and otherwise, without leaving them any Opportunity of asserting the same by due Course of Law; and is a Precedent of the most dangerous Consequence to all the Cities and Corporations of this Kingdom.

" 5. We are of Opinion, That the Abolition of the antient Custom of the City, touching the Personal Estates of Freemen, is a dangerous Innovation, tending to let in to the Government of the City, Persons unexperienced and unpracticed in the laudable and beneficial Trade of the City and Kingdom, and unfit for the Magistracy of the City, and may thereby introduce improper and pernicious Influences over the Citizens; and we think that the Strength, the Riches, Power and Safety of the City of London, have been hitherto, in a great Measure, supported by this and other Customs of the City, as the Walls thereof; and we fear that the Decay of Trade, and with that of the Grandeur of the City of London, and the Diminution and Loss of the great Excises and Duties arising from the Trade of the City, on which the Support of his Majesty's Government so much depends, may be the Consequence of the Abolition of this antient Custom and Privilege of the Freemen of the City of London.

" 6. Because we are of Opinion, That the Petition of the many thousand Freemen of the City against this Bill, ought to be of far greater Weight, than the Petition of fifteen Aldermen for it; and that the Confusion which may arise from this Bill, if passed into a Law, may tend greatly to the future Disturbance of his Majesty's wife and gentle Government.

Wharton,      Strafford,      Coventry.

The Bill soon after passed, as at first intended, which I shall take Notice of in another Place.

Some time after, the King being arrived in this City from visiting his German Dominions, he was, on the eleventh of January, attended at St. James's by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, accompanied by the Recorder, who, in their Name, congratulated his Majesty on his safe Return to Great-Britain; acknowledged the many Blessings they enjoyed under his mild and prudent Administration, and their great Satisfaction for his tender Regard for the Cause of Liberty, the Protestant Religion, and preserving the Peace of Europe, whilst abroad; which, together with his Majesty's paternal Love and Indulgence to his own People, will by them be always attended with the most dutiful Returns of Gratitude and Affection.

The Emperor of Germany and King of Spain having concluded a Treaty very disadvantageous to the Honour, Interest, and Commerce of the British Nation, this very ungrateful Treatment of the Emperor's was so highly resented by the Citizens of London, that it occasioned their presenting the following Address to their injured Monarch:

" Most Gracious Sovereign,

" It is with very great Concern we observe, that the Peace of Europe, and the particular Interests of your Majesty's Kingdoms, are threatened with new Dangers, at a Time when we had Reason to hope they would be settled on the firmest Foundations.

" And we cannot hear, without a just Indignation, that Gibraltar and Port-Mahon (those important Acquisitions, which were gained by the victorious Arms of Great-Britain, under the auspicious Reign of our late most gracious Queen, and yielded and confirmed by solemn Treaties) are now demanded from this Nation; that our Trade is invaded in many valuable Branches, in Violation of publick Faith, by a Prince so highly obliged to the British Nation.

" We beg Leave also to express our highest Resentment, at the Engagements which the Emperor and the King of Spain have entered

 "the great Advantages gained for the Trade
 "of your Dominions by former Treaties, or
 "the unrivalled Superiority of your Fleets, or

 "and Privileges of your People, have raised the "Envy and Jealousy of foreign Powers, or to "whatever Cause their desperate Designs may "be ascribed, we know not.

"But when we reflect on the Strength of your "Naval Force, by the Situation of your Dom"inions, not only sufficient alone to frustrate "their Enterprizes, but even to deter them from "attempting to invade us :

"When we consider the brave Troops your "Majesty has by Land, and the Strength, Har"mony, and Union of your Allies, concluded by "your Majesty's consummate Wisdom, and sup"ported by the Zeal and Affection of your Peo-

 "your Majesty, by the Blessing of God, will be "undisturbed on your Throne, and the Freedom "of Commerce (so necessary and essential to the "Good of all your Subjects) be again restored to "its antient and most flourishing Condition.

"We therefore (who are immediately interest"ed in those valuable and darling Benefits of "Trade) are, in a particular Manner, obliged to "return our most dutiful Thanks to your Ma"jesty, for that prudent Care, which has hitherto "rendered abortive the chimerical and unjust De"signs of your Enemies ; and to assure your Ma"jesty, that your loyal City of London will be al"ways ready to sacrifice their Lives and For"tunes in Defence of your Royal Person and Go"vernment, and our excellent Constitution both
 "in Church and State, against all your Enemies
 "whatsoever."

To this Address his Majesty was pleased to make the following Answer :

"This very dutiful and loyal Address from "my City of London is truly acceptable to me : I "return you my kindest Thanks for the Refent-"ment you express at the Engagements entered "into in Favour of the Pretender, and for the "affectionate Assurances you give me of exert"ing yourselves to the utmost, in Defence of "my Person and Government, and of our happy
 "Constitution in Church and State ; nothing
 "could have added more Weight to this Decla"ration of your Duty and Fidelity to me, than "the Unanimity with which you have proceeded "upon this Occasion : As the Preservation of the "Trade of this Kingdom, and the Possessions of the "utmost Importance to it, has been the constant
 "Aim of the Measures I have hitherto taken,
 "you may be confidently assured of the Conti"nuance of my best Endeavours to secure and "perpetuate the Enjoyment of those inestimable "Advantages to my People ; and my City of "London, in particular, may always depend upon
 "my Favour and Protection."

The King did not think it sufficient to return his most sincere and hearty Thanks to the Citizens, for their dutiful Address ; but he likewise entertained the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, in a very sumptuous and magnificent Manner, at Dinner, in his Palace of St.
 James's ; where, being accompanied by divers of the principal Ministers of State, there never appeared greater Marks of Joy, mutual Love, and hearty Friendship, than on this Occasion.

Divers Malefactors, under Sentence of Death in the condemned Hold of Newgate, willing to escape the Halter, in the Morning of the Day of their Execution, barricaded the Door of the said Hold ; and, being provided with some Arms, they stood upon their Defence : Intimation whereof being given to Jeremiah Marden, Esq; one of the Sheriffs, he forthwith repaired to the Prison, in order to persuade them to surrender, or, in other Terms, quietly to submit to be hanged ; but such Oratory not relishing, they persisted in their Obstinacy, till the Prison-keepers fired in upon them from above ; when, after several Wounds received, they surrendered, and were executed according to their Sentence : However, the Sheriff was seized with the Goal-Distemper, whereof he died soon after.

To which his Majesty was graciously pleased to make this Answer:

At a Court of Common Council, held at Guildhall on the sixth of October, it was unanimously resolved to invite their Majesties, his Royal Highness the Duke, and the three eldest Princesses to Dinner at Guildhall, on the approaching Lord-Mayor's Day; pursuant to which, the Lord-Mayor Elect, Sheriffs, and Recorder were ordered to attend their Majesties, to know their Royal Pleasure; at the same Time a Committee of four Aldermen and eight Commoners were appointed to attend his Majesty, to desire Leave to put up his Majesty's and his Royal Consort's Pictures in Guildhall; upon both which Accounts his Majesty being attended, he was graciously pleased to accept of the former, and comply with the latter; Report whereof being made the next Day in Common Council, a Committee of eight Aldermen and sixteen Commoners were appointed to superintend the Entertainment to be provided for their Majesties. And the Sheriffs having invited the Duke and the Princesses, their Majesties, accompanied by the latter, and attended by the Great Officers of State, with a numerous Train of the Nobility, and all the foreign Ministers, came into the City, and in a Balcony in Cheapside, the usual Place of Standing, beheld the pompous Procession pass; whereupon their Majesties were conducted to Guildhall, at the Entrance whereof the Lord-Mayor, kneeling, presented the City Sword to the King, who graciously returning the same, it was by his Lordship carried before their Majesties to the Council Chamber, where the Recorder complimented his Majesty in the Name of the Citizens, as followeth:

Their Majesties visit the City on Lord-Mayor's Day.

"May it please your Majesty,

The Recorder's Speech on the Occasion.

"This Day will ever be remembered by them, with the highest Satisfaction; this happy Day, which gave Birth to their most gracious King, who is pleased thus to honour them, and who protects them in the Enjoyments of all their Rights and Privileges; a Prince, who takes Pleasure in promoting their Happiness, and who thinks it gives the truest Lustre to his Crown, to preserve the Religion, the Laws, and Liberties of his People.

"The best, the only Security of our excellent Constitution in Church and State, and of every thing which is dear and valuable to Englishmen. Gratitude and Interest make these the unanimous Sentiments of this your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful City of London."

From the Council Chamber their Majesties (preceded by the Lord-Mayor carrying the City Sword) and the Princesses, went to the Hustings, where they were most sumptuously entertained, the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber having the Honour nour to dine at the Royal Table, while other Tables were provided below in the Hall for the Nobility, Foreign Minister, Judges, Ladies, and other Persons of Distinction, together with Tables for the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen. The illustrious Company having seated themselves, and Silence commanded, the Common Crier proclaimed, That his Majesty drank to the Health of the Lord-Mayor, and Prosperity to the City of London and the Trade thereof, and that her Majesty confirmed the same. Silence being again commanded, Proclamation was made, That the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen drank Health, long Life, and a prosperous and happy Reign, to our Sovereign Lord King George. And Silence being again commanded, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen drank Health, long Life, and Happinefs to our most gracious Queen Caroline, and all the Royal Family.

Honour the Ball with their Presence.

After Dinner, their Majesties, accompanied by the Princesses, were graciously pleased to return to the Council Chamber, and thence to the Long-Gallery, where they honoured the Ball with their Presence 'till eleven o'Clock. On this Occasion his Majesty was graciously pleased to order the Sum of one thousand Pounds to be paid to the Sheriffs, for the Relief and Discharge of poor insolvent Prisoners.

Having mentioned their Majesties being magnificently entertained by the City in Guildhall, I shall, for the Satisfaction of the Reader, subjoin an Account of the Entertainment, as recorded in the Chamber of London.

For the Accommodation of the illustrious Company, fifteen Tables were erected in the said Hall; at the first whereof, upon the Hustings, sat their Majesties, the Princesses, and the Ladies of the Bed-Chamber; which, together with the other Tables, were severally served with the following Number of Dishes:

The Musick

The Concert of Musick at this sumptuous Banquet consisted of two Trumpets, one Kettle-Drum, four French Horns, eighteen Violins, two Violinchelloes, two double Basses, five Tenors, seven Bassoons, and six Hautboys; together forty-seven.

The States General of the United Provinces having sent Count Walderen and Mr. Silevis their Ambassadors Extraordinary to congratulate his Majesty upon his happy Accession to the Crown, they made their Publick Entry into this City on the fourth of March, in a very pompous and magnificent Manner.

A.D. 1728

A Design to rob the Queen in St. Paul's Church-Yard.

How she escaped.

The Streets of this City, and those of Westminster, having for a considerable Time been grievously pestered with Street-Robbers, their audacious Villainy was got to such a Height, that they formed a Design to rob the Queen in St. Paul's Church-Yard, as she privately returned from Supper in the City, to the Palace of St. James's, as confessed by one of the Gang, when under Sentence of Death. But those execrable Villains being busily employed in robbing Sir Gilbert Heathcote, an Alderman of London, on his Return in his Chariot from the House of Commons, her Majesty luckily passed them in her Coach, without being attacked.

This wicked and most impudent Design so greatly alarmed both the Court and City, that the Lord Townshend, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State, sent Letters to divers Magistrates, for suppressing those flagitious Villainies; which soon after had a very good Effect, for the several Magistrates, in Obedience to those Letters, so effectually exerted themselves, that the Streets were soon cleared of those wicked and detestable Rogues; many of whom being apprehended, they were justly condemned and executed for their many enormous Crimes.

His Royal Highness Prince Frederick, eldest Son of the King, being arrived in this City from Hanover, he was attended by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen at the Palace of St. James's, when the Recorder, in their Names, complimented him as follows:

Prince Frederick's Arrival from Hanover.

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Royal Highness on your safe Arrival in Great-Britain; they are so sensible of the many Blessings they have enjoyed since the happy Accession of your Royal Grandfather to the Crown of these Realms, and under the Protection of their present most gracious Sovereign, that they cannot view your Royal Highness but with the utmost Satisfaction.

London Gazette.

The City's Address on that Event.

"It was impossible for them not to have heard of that most engaging Disposition of Mind, and of those illustrious Qualities which have so eminently distinguished your Royal Highness, even in the Beginning of Life; and they cannot sufficiently express their Joy, when they consider that now your Royal Highness will have the happy Advantage of observing the many Princely Virtues of your Royal Parents: You will have frequent Opportunities of perceiving his Majesty's Vigilance, his Care, his tender Regard and unwearied Endeavours for the Welfare of his People; and all the amiable Qualities of her Majesty, our most gracious Queen, who makes it the Study of her Life to promote Piety and Virtue, and to encourage every thing that is good and Praiseworthy.

"Such great Examples, Sir, cannot fail to confirm your own virtuous Inclinations, and lead you on to the accomplishing of true Glory. These Reflexions yield a most agreeable Prospect of the Continuance of our present Felicity; and these his Majesty's most faithful Subjects have abundant Reason to pray for (what they are sure is the most desirable of all Things) on Earth to your Royal Highness) Health and long Life to his Majesty: They also beg Leave to assure you, Sir, of their most hearty Affection and good Wishes for your Royal Highness's Welfare and Prosperity."

Upon the twelfth of February, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, whose Names are as follows, made the four following remarkable Presentments to the Court of King's-Bench, for the Maintenance of the true Religion, good Government, and the Discouragement of Infidelity, Prophaneness, Immorality and Idleness:

1st Presentment, against Infidelity.

"We, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, considering, that, by the known Laws of this Kingdom, it is not only the Privilege, but the Duty of every Grand Jury to enquire of, and present all Offences, of what Kind soever, within their several Counties; and that it was, and usually is given in Charge, to promote the Honour of God and his Holy Religion, and to defeat all Attempts to the contrary as much as in them lies; do conceive, that former Grand Juries of this County, having true Zeal for the established Church, did, in pursuance of their Duty, present to this Honourable Court several impious and blasphemous Books: And whereas there has been lately published a Pamphlet, intitled, Remarks upon two late Presentments of the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, wherein are shown, the Folly and Injustice of Mens persecuting one another for Difference of Opinion in Matters of Religion, and the ill Consequences wherewith that Practice must affect any State, in which it is encouraged; by John Wickliffe the Author; said to be Printed for A. Moor, near St. Paul's, 1729.

"In which Pamphlet the Author avowedly contends for a Liberty to Write in behalf of Infidelity; and has, in Violation of good Manners, Decency, and Law, stigmatized the said late Presentments, as foolish and unjust, and branded them with the odious Name of Persecution: We therefore, notwithstanding the insolent Defiance which late Presentments of this Nature have met with, and the Discouragements which, we apprehend, may still make them, and all others unsuccessful, (unless supported by this Honourable Court) do present the said Pamphlet as an impious and scandalous Libel, tending to the Subversion of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and hope this Honourable Court will take the same into Consideration, not only to discountenance such audacious Attempts, but to maintain and support the Authority of Grand Juries, and consequently the Laws of this Land; and for that Purpose we earnestly request this Honourable Court to give proper Directions for punishing the Author, Printers, and Publishers of the said Pamphlet."

2d Presentment, against Geneva-
shops.

"We, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, being sensible of the great Michiefs which arise from the Number of Shops or Houses selling a Liquor called Geneva, in and about this City, think it our Duty to take Notice of them as publick Nufances, since we apprehend they may be ranked among the worst of disorderly Houses; it being notorious, that they not only harbour the vilest of both Sexes among the meanest of the People, but, by inuring them to a Habit of Laziness and Debauchery, bring them to Want and Misery; and, when intoxicated with these pernicious Liquors, they are hardened enough to attempt

"the greatest Villainies, such as were formerly scarce known to our Nation, though we now, with the greatest Concern, observe that they grow familiar to us.

"The incredible Prejudice which his Majesty's Subjects suffer by frequenting these Houses, is too obvious to pass unobserved; since the Constitutions of the labouring People are not only thereby weakened, but utterly destroyed; and we do not conceive, that even any Addition to the Revenue can be equivalent to the Loss the Publick sustains by the Ruin of such Numbers of poor Families, which fill both the City and Country with Beggars and Vagabonds, of which we at present see the fatal Consequences, and fear Posterity will feel worse, if,
by a speedy Regulation of these disorderly Houses, an effectual Stop be not put to this growing Evil."

"We therefore hope this Honourable Court will use their Endeavours to obtain a Remedy equal to so great a Mischief."

"We, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, sworn to enquire for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of this County, have, with sincere Grief of Heart, observed of late unusual Swarms of sturdy and clamorous Beggars, which is an evil in itself very grievous, and productive of many others:
Particularly, we fear it may have been one Cause, at least, of bold and frequent Robberies in the Streets, a Wickedness, that, 'till within these few Years, was unheard of among us.
We are sensible of the disagreeable and uneasy Situation of our Affairs, and of the great Inconveniences of a War, which have attended us for some Time: And we cannot but lament the many and great Losses, which our Trade has lately sustained: But though we are sensible the vast Increase of Poor may be in some Measure owing to the distressed Circumstances which we apprehend ourselves to be in, yet we hope the Evil we now complain of will be cured, without waiting till the flourishing
State of our Commerce abroad is restored.

3d Presentment, against
Beggars.

"For as we have effectual Laws in being to prevent Begging in the Streets; for want of a due Execution of which, that Nufance is now become an intolerable Burden, as well as a Disgrace to us; we think the utmost Care of the Magistrate is required to relieve us from it.

"But unless this be soon effected, (the Number of Beggars in the Streets, and other Places, making them terrible as well as uneasy) many quiet and inoffensive People will hardly venture to stir out of their Houses on their lawful Callings, for fear of being saucily importuned in the Day, and audaciously attacked and robbed in the Night.

"Therefore we hope this Honourable Court will take so manifest and great a Grievance into their serious Consideration, and will apply without Delay the proper Remedies, that we may not be thus troubled with the Poor, at the same Time we are every Day more loaded with Taxes to provide for them; that his Majesty's Subjects may have the Passage of the Streets, as in former happy Times, free and undisturbed;

4th Presentment, against Masquerades, &c.

"undisturbed; and be able to Transact that little "Business, which the Decay of Trade has reduced us to, without Molestation.

"We, the Grand Jury for the County of Mid"dlesex, should think that we do not well and "truly perform our whole Duty, or sufficiently "maintain the Privileges of a Grand Jury, if "we omitted, at this Time, to imitate a former
"Presentment which was here successfully made;
"as we have already done all in our Power to "support and confirm such late ones as have "been (we believe conscientiously) laid before "this Honourable Court, though they are since
"ridiculed and called in Question out of it.

"Therefore, when we consider, that an Af-"sembly, called the Ridotto's, was presented in "this Court in February, 1722-3, as common
"Nurances to the Publick, as Nurseries of "Lewdness, Extravagance, and Immorality,
"and also a Reproach and Scandal to Civil "Government, and was thereupon soon after laid "aside: But that the Masquerade, which we "have Reason to fear is a Meeting of more per"nicious Consequences, soon after succeeded in "its Place, where it has been ever since annually
"kept up, and, as appears by the great Ex-"pences attending it, supported by Persons of "Rank and Quality; where, under various "Disguises, Crimes equal to bare-faced Impieties
"are practised, and great Sums of Money "illegally lost, which, if not seasonably prevent"ed, will, as it has already very much debauch-
"ed, in a short Time absolutely ruin his Ma"jesty's best Subjects: And as this fashionable,
"though wicked Diversion, has hitherto escaped
"the Notice of his Majesty's Justices of the "Peace for this County, who have industriously
"suppressed many other Houses of Disorder
"and Debauchery, and fearing least our Con"nivance, at this great Place of Gaming and "Lewdness, should incline the Constables, by our "Example, to omit bringing in their Present-
"ments for the future against many lesser Houses
"of the like Sort:

"We do therefore present the Contriver and "Carrier-on of Masquerades (which to screen "himself he calls Balls) at the King's Theatre in "the Hay-Market, that he may be detected and "punished according to Law; to the more "speedy and effectual Performance of which, we "make no doubt but this Honourable Court
"will give all necessary Directions."

Petitions against the Spaniards Depredations.

On Friday the twenty-first of February, 1729, the Merchants of London trading in Tobacco, and otherwise interested in the British Plantations in America, presented a Petition to the House of Commons, complaining of great Interruptions, for several Years past, of the Trade of this Kingdom to the British Colonies in America by the Spaniards, whose Depredations in those Seas endangered the entire Loss of that valuable Trade; and that the Petitioners were without Remedy, for want of proper Powers for the Recovery of their Losses; and that the Spaniards had treated such of his Majesty's Subjects as have fallen into their Hands in a very barbarous and cruel Manner; and praying the Consideration of the House, and such timely Remedy as the House shall think fit. This Petition was seconded by
No. 46.

others from the Merchants of Brissol and Liverpool; and, after some Debates, was referred to a Committee of the whole House.

The like Complaint was afterwards made by divers Merchants trading to Portugal, Spain, Italy, &c. against the Spanish Depredations in Europe.
And their Allegations being sufficiently proved to the Satisfaction of the House, it was moved and unanimously resolved to address his Majesty, That he would be graciously pleased to use his utmost Endeavours to prevent such Depredations for the future; to procure just and reasonable Satisfaction for the Losses sustained; and to secure to his Subjects the free Exercise of Commerce and Navigation to and from the British Colonies in America.

About the latter End of June arrived in this City, Seayagusta Onkab, Seadicklofen Katagusta, Clogaitab, Collannab, Talbotsoe, and Outenmaceon, six Kings, or Indian Chiefs, of the Cherokee Nation, bordering upon South-Carolina, in America; who were sent hither by Moytoy their Emperor, or Great King, with the Consent of the whole Nation, at the Desire of Sir Alexander Cumin, Bart. who brought them over to make a Tender of their Submission, Crown and Country to his Majesty King George's Obedience; and, on the ninth of September following, signed a Treaty of Friendship and Commerce between Great-Britain and their Nation; and, after having been nobly entertained at the King's Expence, about the Space of four Months, set out from this City on the second of October, on their Return home, accompanied with considerable Presents from his Majesty.

The King being returned to London from visiting his German Dominions, he was attended by the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, at St. James's Palace, on the thirtieth of September; when the Recorder of this City, in their Names, congratulated his Majesty in the following Words:

A.D. 1730

"May it please your Majesty,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen
"of the City of London most humbly beg "Leave to congratulate your Majesty on your
"safe Arrival in Great-Britain. All your People,
"Sir, have abundant Reason to be thankful to "Divine Providence, for the Preservation of "your most sacred Person, under whose mild
"and prudent Government they enjoy so many "Blessings: And these your Majesty's most du"tiful and faithful Subjects esteem it a peculiar "Happiness, that you are pleased to allow them "an Opportunity of expressing their Joy in see"ing your Majesty returned to this Kingdom in "good Health, and secure from all Danger. It "adds to their Satisfaction, that this must be an "inexpressible Comfort to your Royal Consort,
"our most gracious Queen, who during your "Majesty's Absence, by her Wisdom and Con"duct, by her serene and most engaging Dis"position of Mind, has continued to your Ma"jesty's Subjects the most perfect State of "Quiet and Tranquility.

"We are sensible, that your Majesty's

"Mankind has inclined your Majesty to use "your utmost Endeavours for composing all

"those

"those Differences, which otherwise might have brought on the Calamities of a War, and prevented the establishing the Peace of Europe, which your Majesty has so much at Heart. We hope, and are persuaded, that these your Majesty's most laudable Purposes will soon be accomplished, to your Honour and Glory. And as your Majesty, among your other Cares, has been solicitous for promoting of Commerce, and shewn a tender Regard for the Interest of your trading Subjects, the Citizens of London are obliged, with the utmost Gratitude, to make their Acknowledgments to your Majesty, for your Royal Indulgence. And your Majesty may be assured of their sincere and hearty Attachment to your Royal Person and Government, and of their most ardent Prayers for the Continuance of your Majesty's Health and Prosperity."

To which loyal and dutiful Speech his Majesty was graciously pleased to return this Answer :

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this Mark of your Duty and Affection : The Necessity of my Affairs called me abroad, where I made my Stay as short as possible : My Return to my Dominions cannot be more acceptable to my People, than it is agreeable to my own Inclinations ; and the City of London may depend upon my peculiar Care of their Trade and Commerce upon all Occasions."

A very high Tide.

On the last Day of December, happened the highest Tide in the River Thames that had been known in the Memory of Man ; which overflowing Wapping, Tooley-Street, and many others, did incredible Damage, by filling of Cellars and Warehouses, and spoiling of vast Quantities of Goods and Merchandize.

An Epidemical Distemper.

Some time after, a Cold, attended with a Fever, raged violently in this City, and for the Space of five or six Weeks committed great Ravages, especially among the Aged, whom it cut down like Grass, insomuch that the Bill of Mortality, in one Week, increased to near quadruple the usual Number. This Distemper was so general, that it was by the best Observers computed, that not one in six escaped it.

On Monday the twenty-sixth of February, 1732-3, a Petition was presented to the House of Commons by the Sheriffs of London, from the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, setting forth, That by an Act of Parliament, made in the twenty-second Year of the Reign of Charles II. intitled, An additional Act for the rebuilding of the City of London, uniting of Parishes, and rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the said City, for the further Convenience of Trade, the Channel of Bridewell-Dock, from the Channel of the River Thames to Holborn-Bridge, was directed to be sunk to a sufficient Level, whereby to make it navigable, under such Limitations as are prescribed by the said Act, and the Profits arising by the Navigation of the said Channel were appropriated to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City ; and, in Pursuance of the said Act, the Channel was soon after made navigable from the Thames to Holborn-Bridge ; but that the Profits arising by the Navigation thereof had not answered the Charge of making the same navigable ; that Part of the said Channel, from Fleet-Bridge to Holborn-Bridge, instead of being useful to Trade, as was intended, is not only filled up with Mud, and become useless, but is now, and for some Years past hath been a common Nuisance, and that several Persons have lately lost their Lives by falling into the same ; that the Expence of cleansing and repairing the same will be very great, and that a greater annual Charge will be required to keep the same in Repair, than the Profits arising therefrom will defray, and yet the same will never answer the Intent of the said Act ; and therefore praying, that a Bill may be brought in to repeal so much of the said Act, as relates to the said Channel ; and to empower the Petitioners to fill up Part of the said Channel, from Fleet-Bridge to Holborn-Bridge, and to convert the Ground to such Uses as they shall think fit and convenient.

Leave was given to bring in a Bill, according to the Prayer of this Petition ; and four worthy Citizens, viz. Sir John Eyles, Sir John Barnard, Mr. Alderman Perry, and Sir John Williams, were ordered to bring in the same ; which is since passed into an Act, as will more fully appear hereafter.

When all the Town-Ditch was filled up except Fleet-Ditch, there were made, instead thereof, large common Drains and Sewers to carry away the Water from the Postern-Gate, between the two Tower-Hills, to Fleet-Bridge, without Ludgate ; and then many of the City Tenants, whose Ground butted upon the Wall on either Side, made bold to trespass upon the same Wall, and what was before the Ditch, by building there or inclosing for Yards, notwithstanding sixteen Feet on either Side the Wall was, or should have been reserved for the City, for their Workmen or others to enter, view, and repair the said Wall ; but these Encroachments were so many, that it was no easy Matter to find any Part of that Wall round the City not thus encroached upon : Which being taken into Consideration by the Committee appointed to let the City and Bridge-House Lands, and inspect the same, they ordered a Survey of all the City Walls on both Sides, and of all Encroachments of what Kind soever, and by whom made.

Which Survey was accordingly taken by Mr. Leybourn, and fairly engrossed in a Vellum Book, and delivered into the Magistrates in the Guildhall, where it remaineth ; in which Book are the Names, both of the City Tenants that occupied the same, and the Number of Feet by them encroached upon the said Wall or Ditch, or within sixteen Feet on either Side ; so that whosoever took a Lease of any of the City Lands that abutt upon the Walls on either Side, might pay a Rent answerable to the Improvement that the said Encroachments should be thought worth.

The Year 1733 will be ever memorable for the effectual Opposition made by the Citizens of London, against the Scheme for a General Excise.

After Christmas the Ministerial Managers in the House of Commons began to prepare the Representatives of the People, with plausible Hints of an Intention to ease the Nation of divers Taxes, by some new and advantageous Scheme, which would appear more equitably charged on the People in general, and more profitable profitable to the fair Trader in particular. But this was no sooner discovered to be a Project to introduce a general Excise, than the Guardians of our Liberties, who had constantly waited to stem the Torrent of Ministerial Innovations upon our free Constitution, treated it as a monstrous Production, intended to render a Parliamentary Power to raise Money unnecessary for the future, and thereby to enslave the Nation. And before the Minister thought convenient to move it in the House, they, in several other Debates, gave him sufficient Hints of their having discovered his artful Scheme, and of their Resolutions and Readiness to oppose it in whatever Shape he should disguise his real Intentions. In the Debate on the Motion for the Land-Tax, on the twenty-third of February, Mr. Pultney (now Earl of Bath) mentioned it by the Name of an Excise, that would destroy our Liberties: And though Sir Robert Walpole, who assumed to himself the Name of the Projector thereof, insisted that such a Scheme would be for the publick Good, and doubted not but to gain much Honour and Credit by it, declared, that it was neither his Inclination nor Interest to promote a bad Thing; Sir John Barnard, one of the City Representatives, replied, "For my part, Sir, I am so far from believing, that, when it appears in Publick, it will procure either Honour or Glory to the first Projector, whoever he be, that I am firmly convinced it will turn out to his eternal Shame and Dishonour; and that the more the Project is examined, and the Consequences thereof considered, the more the Projector will be hated and despised." These previous Hints, that his Scheme had taken wind, put the Minister upon more Caution; who, to take off the Clamour which the Name or Title of a General Excise might raise, worded it into another Form; and waited a proper Opportunity to bring it into the House, when many of the Members were gone into the Country, at the latter End of the Sessions. Therefore, when the Order of the Day on the twenty-seventh of February, for the Call of the House, was read, and a Motion was made for adjourning it till that Day Fortnight, Sir John Rybout stood up and spoke to this Purpose: "There being, as we have been told by a certain Honourable Person, a Scheme or Project to be brought into this House, said to be of great Consequence to the Nation, I with the Day may be fixed for bringing it in, before we do any thing else. We have been told, that this Scheme is to render us compleatly happy; and have waited for it ever since the Beginning of this Session of Parliament. It was even in the preceeding Session insinuated to be intended to ease us of one Shilling in the Pound, Land-Tax: But in that Particular we are already disappointed. I know not whether the original Scheme has undergone any Alterations or Amendments; but I hope it will be laid before this House with all Expedition, and not be put off till towards the End of the Session, when Gentlemen are tired out with Attendance, and obliged to return home to conduct their own private Affairs." Sir Robert acknowledged that he had such a Scheme, but added, "That he was not determined, neither when, nor what that Motion should be; though perchance he might take the Opportunity when the House should form itself into a Committee on the State of the publick Revenue, or on the Frauds committed in the collecting thereof, or on the Frauds committed in some particular Branch or Branches of the Revenue." He also acknowledged, that the Scheme had undergone several Alterations and Amendments; and then recommended it as a most effectual Means to relieve the Landed-Interest of Taxes, and to promote the Interest of every honest and fair Trader in the Nation. To which Sir John Barnard made the following honest Reply: "Sir, when the honourable Gentleman (Sir Robert) is prepared to lay his Scheme before us, I hope he will move for some general Committee: If he does, I shall not give the House any Trouble; but if he moves for a Committee to consider the Frauds in any particular Branch of the Revenue, I shall take the Liberty to oppose it, because there are Frauds in every Branch of the Revenue; and perhaps I shall be able to shew, that there are as many Frauds in other Branches of the Revenue, as there are in those which the Honourable Gentleman has a mind now to take particular Notice of. I must think, Sir, that the attaching our Inquiries at present to the Frauds committed in any particular Branch, is like singling out a Deer from the Flock in order to be hunted down; she is to be the first Sacrifice, but the whole Flock are to be hunted down at last. This I believe, Sir, is the Case; and, if I have been rightly informed, this very Scheme in its first Conception, was for a general Alteration of the Method of collecting the publick Revenue; it was for a general Excise: But, that it seems, was afterwards thought too much at once, and therefore we are now, it seems, to single out only one or two of the Branches, in order that they may be first hunted down. But the very same Reason that may prevail with us to subject any one Branch of the Revenue to the Laws of Excise, may afterwards prevail with us to subject every Branch to those arbitrary Laws; and as such Laws are, in my Opinion, abolutely inconsistent with Liberty, therefore I must think that the Question upon his Scheme, even altered as it seems it is, will be, Whether we shall endeavour to prevent Frauds in the collecting of the publick Revenues at the Expence of the Liberties of the People?"

"For my own part, Sir, I never was guilty of any Fraud; I put it to any Man, be he who he will, to accuse me of so much as the Appearance of a Fraud, in any Trade I was ever concerned in; I am resolved never to be guilty of any Fraud. It is very true, Sir, that these Frauds are a very great Prejudice to all fair Traders, and therefore I speak against my own Interest, when I speak against any Method that may tend towards preventing of Frauds; but I shall never, Sir, put my private Interest in Balance with the Interest or the Happiness of the Nation: I had rather, Sir, beg my Bread from Door to Door, and see my Country flourish, than be the greatest Subject in the

Barnard's
Speech.

"Nation, and see the Trade of my Country
"decaying, and the People enflaved and op-
"pressed."

Alderman Perry, one of the Representatives for the City of London, likewise spoke upon this Occasion, in Vindication of the Merchants dealing in the Wine and Tobacco-Trades. After which the Question was put, and the Call of the House was put off to that Day Fortnight; and it was ordered, That no Member of the House should presume to go out of Town, without Leave of the House; that no Leave should be asked for any Member to go out of Town, but between the Hours of one and two; and that Mr. Speaker should write circular Letters to the Sheriffs and Stewards of the several Counties of Great-Britain, requiring the Attendance of the Members on that Day Fortnight; and that the House would proceed with the utmost Severity against such Members as should not then attend the Service of the House.

On the seventh of March, Sir Robert moved that the House might, upon that Day Sevensnight, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to consider of the most proper Methods for the better Security and Improvement of the Duties and Revenues already charged upon and payable from Tobacco and Wines: And the same being ordered accordingly, the House did, upon Wednesday the fourteenth of March, resolve into the said Committee.

In the mean time, a Common Council being summoned and convened, they unanimously agreed to recommend it to the City Members, to use their utmost Endeavours to defeat the said pernicious Design; and the Reasons for this their Opposition were set forth in the following Representation, which was delivered to their Representatives:

Jour.
Com.
Coun.
Instructions
against the
Excise Bill.

"This Court doth apprehend, from the Ex"perience of the Laws of Excise now in Being,
"that extending those Laws to any Commodities
"not yet excised, must necessarily be very pre-
"judicial to Trade, both as it will probably di"minish the Consumption of the Commodity to "be excised, and subject the fair Trader to the "frequent and arbitrary Visitation of Officers,
"and judicial Determination of Commissioners,
"removeable at Pleasure, and from whom there
"is no Appeal.

"That the Extension of such Laws must ne"cessarily increase the Number and Power of "Officers; which will be inconsistent with those "Principles of Liberty on which our happy
"Constitution is founded; and will farther de"prive the Subjects of England of some of those "valuable Privileges, which have hitherto "distinguished them from the neighbouring "Nations.

"Wherefore, this Court doth earnestly recom"mend it to you, their Representatives, to use "your utmost Diligence in opposing a Scheme "of this Nature, should any such be offered in "Parliament, in any Shape, or however limited
"in its first Appearance; being fully convinced "that an inland Duty upon Goods now rated at
"the Custom-house cannot be effectually col"lected, even with the Extension of the Powers,
"or the severest Exercise of all the Rigours of "the present Laws of Excise."

On the fourteenth, Sir Robert Walpole, notwithstanding the Discouragements he met with in regard to the Execution of this grand Design, brought his Scheme into Parliament, and opened the Debate of this important Day in the following Manner:

"We are now in a Committee for considering
"of the most proper Methods for the better Se"curity and Improvement of the Duties and Re"venues already charged upon, and payable
"from, Tobacco and Wines: This can be done
"in no Way so proper or effectual, as that for "preventing for the future those Frauds by "which the publick Revenues have been so much "injured in Times past. I know, that who"ever attempts to remedy Frauds, attempts a "Thing that must be very disagreeable to all "those who have been guilty of them, or who "expect a Benefit by such in Time to come.
"This, Sir, I am fully sensible of, and from this "have sprung up all those Clamours which have "been raised without Doors against what I am "now to propose to you. The Smugglers, the "fraudulent Dealers, and those who have for "many Years been enriching themselves by "cheating their Country, foresee, that, if the "Scheme I am now to propose took Effect, their "profitable Trade would be at an End; this "gave them the Alarm, and from them I am "persuaded it is that all those Clamours have "originally proceeded.

Sir Robert
Walpole's
Speech.

"In this it is certain they must have been stre"nuously assisted and supported by another Set "of People, who, from Motives much worse,
"and of much more dangerous Consequence to "their Country, are fond of improving every "Opportunity that offers for stirring up the Peo"ple of Great-Britain to Mutiny and Sedition.
"But, Sir, notwithstanding all the Clamours "that such wicked and deceitful Men have been "able to raise, as the Scheme I have to propose
"will be a great Improvement to the publick
"Revenue, an Improvement of two or three "hundred thousand Pounds per Ann. and perhaps "more, and as it will likewise be of great Ad"vantage to the fair Trader, I thought it my "Duty, not only as being in the Station I am
"in, but also as being a Member of this House,
"to lay it before you; for no such Clamours
"shall ever deter me from doing what I think is "my Duty, or from proposing any Thing that I "am convinced will be of such signal Benefit to "the Revenue, and to the Trade of my Country.

"It has been most industriously spread abroad,
"that the Scheme I am now to propose was a "Scheme for a general Excise; but I do aver,
"that no such Scheme ever entered into my "Head, nor, for what I know, into the Head
"of any Man I am acquainted with: My "Thoughts were always confined solely to those "two Branches of the Revenue arising from the "Duties on Wine and Tobacco; and it was the "frequent and repeated Advices I had of the "notorious Frauds committed in these two "Branches of the Revenue, and the Clamours
"even of some of the Merchants themselves,
"that made me turn my Thoughts particularly "towards considering those two Branches, in "order to find out, if possible, some Remedy
"for

"for the growing Evil: What I am now going "to propose will, I believe, if agreed to, be an "effectual Remedy; but, if I now fail in what I "am to propose, it will be the last Attempt of "this Kind that I shall ever make; I believe it "will be the last that will ever be made, either
"by me or by any that shall succeed me in the "Station I am now in.

"At present, Sir, I shall lay before you only
"the Case as it now stands with respect to the "Tobacco-Trade, and the Revenue arising there-
"from; and here it will be necessary first to con"sider the Condition of our Planters of Tobacco
"in America: If we can believe them, if we can "give any Credit to what they themselves say,
"we must conclude that they are reduced almost "to the last Extremity, they are reduced even "almost to a State of Despair, by the many "Frauds that have been committed in that "Trade, by the heavy Duties which the Im"porters of Tobacco are obliged to pay upon "Importation, and by the ill Usage they have "met with from their Factors and Correspon"dents here in England, who, from being their "Servants, are now become their Lords and "Masters. These poor People have sent home
"many Representations of the bad State of their "Affairs, and have lately sent over a Gentleman
"with a Remonstrance, setting forth their Grievances, and praying for some speedy Relief.
"This they may obtain by means of the Scheme
"I intend now to propose, and I believe it is "from this Scheme only that they can expect any "Relief.

"The next Thing we are to consider is the
"the State of the Tobacco-Trade with Regard to "the fair Trader: The Man who deals honoura"bly and fairly with the Publick, as well as with "private Men, the Man who honestly pays all "those Duties which the Publick is justly intitled
"to, finds himself prevented and forestalled al"most in every Market within the Island, by the "Smuggler and the fraudulent Dealer: And even
"as to our foreign Trade in Tobacco, those who "have no Regard to Honour, to Religion, or to "the Welfare of their Country, but are every Day
"contriving Ways and Means for cheating the "Publick by Perjuries and false Entries, are the "greatest Gainers; and it will always be so, un"less we can fall upon some Way of putting it "out of their Power to carry on any such Frauds
"for the future.

"And lastly, Sir, we ought to consider the "great Loss sustained by the Publick by means "of the Frauds committed in the Tobacco-Trade,
"and the Addition that must certainly be made "to the publick Revenue, if those Frauds can be "prevented in Time to come. By this Addition
"we may be enabled to relieve the Nation from "some of those Taxes which it has laboured under
"so many Years; whereas, as the Case now "stands, the innocent and the honest Part of the "Nation are charged with Taxes which they "would be free from, if the fraudulent Dealers "and the Smugglers could be any Way obliged to "pay that which is justly due by them to the "Publick. This, Sir, will, I am convinced,
"be the Effect of the Scheme I am to propose "to you; and whoever therefore views it in its

No. 46.

"proper Light, must see the Planters, the fair
"Traders, and the Publick ranged upon one "Side in Favour of it, and none but the un"fair Traders and the Tobacco-Factors upon the "other.

"I shall beg Leave to mention to you, Sir,
"some of those Frauds which have come to my "Knowledge. The Evidence I have had of "them is to me very convincing: But, in such "Cases, Gentlemen ought always to consider "what Evidence it is impossible to bring, what "Evidence it is by the Nature of the Thing un"reasonable to expect."

Then he went through, and gave a most exact Account of the several Frauds which had been practised of late Years in the Tobacco-Trade; from which he made Calculations of the Loss the Publick thereby sustained, particularly that of getting the Tobacco weighed at an under Weight upon Importation, and getting it weighed again upon Exportation at a Weight much above what it ought to be: "A particular Instance of this "Fraud, (says he) Sir, we came lately to the "Knowledge of by mere Accident: One Midford,
"who had been a considerable Tobacco-Mer"chant in the City, happened to fail at a Time
"when he owed a large Sum of Money upon "Bond to the Crown; whereupon an Extent was "issued out immediately against him, and there"by the Government got Possession of all his "Books, by which the Fraud he had been guilty "of was discovered; for it appeared, as may be "seen by one of his Books I have in my Hand," (whereupon he shewed one of this Midford's Books to the Committee) "that, upon the Co"lumn where the false Quantities which had been "entered at the Importation, by Collusion be"tween him and the Officer, by which he paid or "bonded the Duty payable upon Importation, a "Slip of Paper had been so artfully pasted on "that it could not be discovered; and upon this "Slip of Paper were written the real Quantities "which were entered, because he was obliged to "produce the same Book when that Tobacco was "entered for Exportation; but then upon Ex"portation, the Tobacco was entered and weighed
"according to the Quantities marked upon this "Slip of Paper so artfully pasted on as I have "mentioned; by which he got a Drawback, or "his Bonds returned, to near double the Value of "what he had actually paid Duty for upon Im"portation. Yet, Sir, this Midford was as ho"nest a Man, and as fair a Trader, as any in "the City of London; I desire, Sir, not to be "misunderstood, I mean, that before he failed,
"before these Frauds came to be discovered, he "was always reckoned as honest a Man, and as "fair a Trader, as any in the City of London, or "in any other Part of the Nation."

After this he mentioned the several Frauds following, viz. that of re-landing the Tobacco after it was shipped off for Exportation. That of Socking of Tobacco, which was a Cant-Word used for stealing and smuggling it out of the Ships after their Arrival in the River, before they were unloaded at the Custom-House. That of stripping the Leaves from the Stalks, and afterwards splitting and pressing the Stalks by an Engine contrived for that Purpose, and then exporting them.

6 Z

That

That of giving Bonds for the Duty payable upon Importation, whereby the Government had lost several large Sums by the Failure of Payment of such Bonds. That of the rich monied Men making promp'd Payments, by which the Publick was obliged to allow them ten per Cent. Discount as to the Duties; and, by entering the Tobacco soon after for Exportation, they drew back the whole Duties, so that the Government actually lost ten per Cent. upon all the Tobacco that had been so entered.

"These Frauds, Sir, (says he) are notorious, most of them are known to the whole World; and, as the Laws of the Customs have been found ineffectual for the preventing of such Frauds, therefore it is proposed to add the Laws of Excise to the Laws of the Customs, and, by means of both, it is probable, it is, I may say, certain, that all such Frauds will be prevented in Time to come.

"The several Subsidies and Imposts now payable upon Tobacco, by several Acts of Parliament for that Purpose made, stand, Sir, thus; (here he went through, and gave an Account of the several Acts of Parliament for laying Duties on Tobacco, then he went on;) "By all which, Sir, it appears, that the Duties now payable upon Tobacco on Importation amount to six Pence and one Third of a Penny per Pound Weight, all which must be paid down in ready Money upon Importation, with the Allowance of ten per Cent. upon promp'd Payment, or otherwise there must be Bonds given, with sufficient Sureties, for the Payment thereof; which is often a great Loss to the Publick, and is always a great Inconvenience to the Merchant-Importer; whereas, by what I am to propose, the whole Duties to be paid for the future will amount to no more than four Pence and three Farthings per Pound Weight, and this Duty not to be paid till the Tobacco comes to be sold for Home-Consumption; so that, if the Merchant exports his Tobacco, he will be quite free from all Payment of Duty, or giving Bond therefore, or finding out proper Sureties for joining with him in such Bond; he will have nothing to do but to reload his Tobacco on board a Ship for Exportation, without being at the Trouble to attend for having his Bonds cancelled, or for taking out Debentures for the Drawbacks: All which I conceive, Sir, must be a great Ease to the fair Trader; and to every such Trader the preventing of Frauds must be a great Advantage, because it will put all the Tobacco-Traders in Britain upon the same Footing; which is but just and equal, and what ought certainly to be accomplished, if it be possible.

"Now, Sir, in order to make this Case effectual to the fair Trader, and to contribute to his Advantage, by preventing as much as possible any Frauds in Time to come, I propose, as I have said, to join the Laws of Excise to those of the Customs, and to leave the one Penny, or rather three Farthings per Pound, called the farther Subsidy, to be still charged at the Custom-House upon the Importation of any Tobacco, which three Farthings shall be payable to his Majesty's Civil List as heretofore. And I propose, that all Tobacco for the future, after being weighed at the Custom-House, and charged with the said three Farthings per Pound, shall be lodged in a Warehouse or Warehouses, to be appointed by the Commissioners of the Excise for that Purpose; of which Warehouse the Merchant-Importer shall have one Lock and Key, and the Warehouse-Keeper to be appointed by the said Commissioners shall have another, in order that the Tobacco may lie safe in that Warehouse till the Merchant finds a Market for it, either for Exportation or for Home-Consumption: That, if his Market be for Exportation, he may apply to his Warehouse-Keeper and take out as much for that Purpose as he has Occasion for, which, when weighed at the Custom-House, shall be discharged of the three Farthings per Pound with which it was charged upon Importation, so that the Merchant may then export it without any farther Trouble: But, if his Market be for Home-Consumption, that he shall then pay the three Farthings charged upon it at the Custom-House upon Importation, and that then, upon calling his Warehouse-Keeper, he may deliver it to the Buyer, on paying an inland Duty of four Pence per Pound Weight, to the proper Officer appointed to receive the same.

"And whereas, Sir, all the Penalties and Forfeitures to become due by the Laws now in being for regulating the Collecting of the Duties on Tobacco, or at least all that Part of them which is not given to the Informers, now belong to the Crown; I now propose, that all such Penalties and Forfeitures, in so far as they formerly belonged to the Crown, shall for the future belong to the Publick, and be applicable to the same Uses to which the said Duties shall be made applicable by Parliament: And, for that Purpose, I have his Majesty's Commands to acquaint this House, that he, out of his great Regard for the publick Good, with Pleasure consents that they shall be so applied; which is a Condescension in his Majesty, that, I hope, every Gentleman in this House is fully sensible of, and will freely acknowledge.

"I know, Sir, there has been an Objection made; I expect to hear it again made in this House, against what I now propose: The Objection is this; That a great many of his Majesty's Subjects will be subjected to being tried in a Multitude of Cases by the Commissioners of Excise, from whom there is no Appeal but to Commissioners of Appeal, or to Justices of the Peace in the Country, all named by the King, and removeable at Pleasure, from whom the Appellants cannot expect to meet with any Justice or Redress. I am far from thinking there is any Ground for this Complaint, I am far from thinking that any Man ever had a just Reason to say that he was wronged or unjustly dealt with, either by the Commissioners of Appeal, or by the Justices of the Peace at their Quarter-Sessions; but, in order to obviate any Objection of this Nature, I propose, that all Appeals in this Case, as well as in all other Cases relating to the Excise, shall for the future

"true

“ture be heard, and determined by two or three “of the Judges, to be named by his Majesty out “of the twelve Judges belonging to Westminster-Hall; and that in the Country all Appeals, from “the first Sentence of his Majesty's Justices of “the Peace, shall be to the Judge of Assize upon “the next Circuit which shall come into that “Country, who shall in all Cases proceed to hear “and determine such Appeals in the most sum“mary Way, without the Formality of Proceed“ings in Courts of Law or Equity. From such “Judges, Sir, and from such a Manner of “Proceeding, every Man must expect to meet “with the utmost Dispatch, and with the most “impartial Justice; and therefore I must think,
“that what I now propose can be no Inconveni“ence to those who may thereby be subjected to “the Laws of Excise; but that, if there was for“merly any Ground of Complaint, it may be a “great Relief to those who are already subjected “to such Laws.

“This, Sir, is the Scheme which has been re“presented in such a dreadful and terrible Light:
“This, Sir, is the Monster, the many-headed “Monster, which was to devour the People, and “commit such Ravages over the whole Nation.
“How justly it has been represented in such “a Light I shall leave to this Committee, “and to the whole World without Doors, to “judge. I have said, Sir, I will say it again, “that whatever Apprehensions and Terrors Peo“ple may have been brought under, from a false
“and malicious Representation of what they nei“ther did nor could possibly know or understand, “I am firmly persuaded, when they do come to “know and fully to understand the Scheme, which “I have now had the Honour to open to you, “they will view it in another Light; and that, if “it has the good Fortune to be approved of by “Parliament, and comes to take Effect, the Peo“ple will soon feel the happy Consequences there“of, and, when they feel those good Effects, “they will no longer think those People their “Friends who have so grossly imposed on their “Understandings.

“I look upon it, Sir, as a most innocent “Scheme; I am convinced it can be hurtful to “none but Smugglers and unfair Traders; I am “certain it will be of great Benefit and Advan“tage to the publick Revenue; and, if I had “thought otherwise of it, I never would have “ventured to have proposed it in this Place: “Therefore, Sir, I shall now beg Leave to move,
“that it may be resolved, That it is the Opinion “of this Committee, that the Subsidy and addi“tional Duty upon Tobacco of the British Plan“tations, granted by an Act of the twelfth of “King Charles II. and the Impost thereon, “granted by an Act of the first of King James II.
“and also the one Third Subsidy thereon, grant“ed by an Act of the second of Queen Anne, “(amounting in the whole to five Pence and one “third Part of a Penny per Pound) for several “Terms of Years in the said respective Acts men“tioned, and which have since been continued “and made perpetual, subject to Redemption by “Parliament, shall, from and after the twenty-“fourth Day of June, 1733, cease and deter“mine.”

Upon this Speech and Motion ensued the grand Debate, in which the following Gentlemen spoke in Substance, or to the Effect as follows, viz.

Mr. Alderman Perry said, “Sir, the honou“rable Gentleman on the Floor has taken up a “great deal of the Time of the Committee, in “stating a great Number and Variety of Facts,
“and in drawing Conclusions, and making Cal“culations upon the Supposition that every one “of those Facts was exactly as he has been pleased “to represent them to us. This, Sir, I cannot “entirely agree with the Gentleman in; for, if all “those Facts were exactly as he has represented “them, and if all the Computations he has made “upon that Supposition were just, that Quantity “of Tobacco, the Duties of which the Publick “is thereby supposed to be entirely defrauded of,
“would amount to a much greater Quantity of “Tobacco yearly than grows in the whole Coun“try from which we fetch that Commodity. I “did not expect, Sir, to have heard such a long “Detail of Facts, or so many particular Com“putations; I do not think it at all necessary “upon the present Occasion. I expected that the “Gentleman would have taken a much more ge“neral and a more just Method. I thought he “would have stated to us the Quantity of To“bacco yearly imported, the Quantity yearly “exported, and would have given us the best “Proofs that could be found for justifying his “Computations in that Respect; because, from “thence every Man might have easily seen what “Quantity remained for Home-Consumption, “and what Sum of Money that would have “yearly brought in, if the Duties had been all “regularly paid; and, upon comparing that “with what those Duties have really amounted “to for some Years past, we might have been “able to have made some Guess of the Value of “the Frauds that have been committed, and of “the Advantage that may accrue to the Pub“lick, supposing that all Frauds were to have “been by his Scheme prevented for Time to “come.

“This, Sir, is the proper Way, the only Way “of coming at any Sort of certain Knowledge in “the Affair before us; but I am afraid, if we “should consider it in this Way, we should find, “that the Scheme now proposed to us would be “of no such mighty Advantage to the publick “Revenue as has been represented, even suppo“sing that all Frauds were, for the future, to be “thereby entirely prevented; and considering “that no Method of Collection, no Pains or Pe“nalties that can be contrived, can be supposed “effectual for preventing every Fraud that may,
“in Time to come, be invented and set on foot, “we would have found no great Temptation for “agreeing to any Scheme, by which the Liber“ties of our Country may be brought into the “least Danger, for the Sake of any Advantage “that we could suppose would have thereby “accrued to the publick Revenue. That there “are Frauds committed in the Tobacco-Trade I “shall never pretend to deny; I make no manner “of doubt but that there are too many Frauds “committed in that Trade, as well as in every “other Branch of the publick Revenue; But, “upon a fair State of the Case, I am sure that “they

Mr. Alderman Perry's Speech.

"they cannot amount to near that Value which "the honourable Gentleman has been pleased "to mention; and therefore I shall beg Leave "to examine a little those particular Frauds and "Calculations which have been mentioned by
"him."

Here he went through, and examined all the Frauds that had been mentioned, and all the Computations that had been made; more particularly as to the Bonds, he said, "It has been "pretended, Sir, that the Publick has sustained,
"and are still in Danger of sustaining great Losses,
"by the Method of granting Bonds for the Du"ties payable upon Tobacco: This, Sir, I had "before heard hinted at by the honourable Gen"tleman, and therefore I have lately had a Meet"ing with several of the Merchants in London
"trading in Tobacco: We have examined that "Affair, and I can now tell that Gentleman,
"that I have it in Commission from them to pro"pose, That, if the Government will give us a "Discount but of twenty thousand Pounds, we "will give undeniable Security for the Payment "of all the Bonds they are now possessed of,
"which are not become desperate by the Bondf-
"men being already gone off, or become Bank-
"rupts."

"As to that Fraud called Socking, it has been "already discovered, and is, I hope, prevented.
"But, Sir, it is well known, that it was the Mer"chants that discovered it; the Merchants went "and complained of it to the Commissioners of "the Customs, and the Merchants joined and "assisted the Officers of the Customs in putting "an effectual Stop thereto. This I must know,
"because I had the Honour to go at the Head of "several Merchants trading in Tobacco to the "Commissioners of the Customs, to request of "them, that we might be allowed to give a Gra"tuity to one of their Officers, who had been "most instrumental in the detecting and prevent"ing of that Fraud; and accordingly I myself,
"Sir, paid that Officer a very handsome Sum of "Money, which we all thought his Diligence and "Integrity very well deserved."

"As to the Frauds committed at the Weigh"ing of the Tobacco, either on Importation or "Exportation, I am afraid they are too frequent;
"but, as the Tobacco is always weighed upon
"the publick Custom-House Keys, where Cus"tom-House Officers swarm like Bees before a "Bee-Hive, and as there must be two or three "Officers of the Customs attending and over"looking the weighing of every Cask of Tobacco,
"we cannot suppose that these Frauds were ever
"so enormous as they are represented to be.
"Whatever Frauds are committed in that Way,
"must be either by the Neglect or Collusion of "the Officers; and I cannot see how the Scheme
"now proposed to us will make the Officers,
"either of the Customs or the Excise, more dili"gent in their Duty, or more faithful to their "Trust than they were heretofore. As to the "Re-landing of Tobacco after it has been entered "for Exportation, it was never pretended that "that was practised at the Port of London, nor "can it be pretended that any great Quantities
"of such Tobacco were ever consumed in Lon"don: That is a Practice that may perhaps have "been frequent in the northern Parts of the "Island, and in some distant Creeks and Corners "of the Coast; and, while there is such a vast "Disproportion between the prime Cost and the "Duties on Tobacco, I may prophecy, that in "such remote Places this will always be a Prac"tice: It could not be prevented by ten Times

"the Number of Officers we have, even tho' we "had a much more numerous Army to support "them than we have at present. And, as for the "stripping, cutting, and pressing the Stalks, and
"the Engine that has been invented for that Pur"pose, if the honourable Gentleman mentioned
"it as a Fraud, or as a late Discovery, he mis"takes it very much; on the contrary, it is no
"Fraud, nor is it a late Discovery; it is a Busi"ness that has been openly, honestly, and pub"lickly carried on for many Years; it is a "Business that has improved our Tobacco-
"Trade, and is as common and as well "known as the Business of a Woollen or a Li"nen-Draper."

"Permit me now, Sir, to take some Notice of "the Tobacco-Planters, and of the Hardships
"they are laid under by their Tobacco-Factors,
"who are, it seems, now become their Lords and "Masters. I am sure none of them ever thought "of complaining, till they were put upon it by "Letters and by Applications from hence.
"There are Hardships in all Trades, which Men "must necessarily submit to, or give up their "Business; but every Man that understands the "Tobacco-Trade must see, that the Hardships
"the Factors labour under are by much the most "numerous and the most grievous; and, if this "Scheme should take Effect, they will become "so grievous, that no Man would be able to "continue in the Trade, by which the Planters
"would be utterly undone, and the Trade quite "lost to this Nation; for it would be impossible "for them to manage their Plantations, or to "send their Produce to Britain, without having "some considerable Merchants settled here, to "send Ships to receive the same in America, to "receive and dispose of it after it is landed here,
"and to supply them with ready Money till their
"Tobacco can be brought to a proper Market.
"As to the Remonstrance mentioned by the ho"nourable Gentleman to have been lately sent "over by the Tobacco-Planters, I know, Sir,
"that it was obtained by Letters sent from hence,
"and I believe many of those who joined in it
"now heartily repent of what they have done;
"it was drawn up in the Form of a Petition to "this House, and was designed to have been "presented, but, it seems, the Promoters of it "have thought better of the Matter: How"ever, that it was obtained in the unfair
"Manner I have represented, I am now ready "to prove, to the Conviction of the whole "World."

"This then being the Case, as the Scheme now "proposed to us cannot be supposed to be of any "great Benefit to the publick Revenue, as it will "be so far from being an Advantage to the fair
"Trader, or to the honest Planter, that it may "probably ruin both, and entirely destroy our
"Tobacco-Trade; tho' I and all honest Men
"(and I defy that honourable Gentleman, I defy
"the

"the whole World, to reproach me with one unfair Practice in the whole Course of my Life) I say, Sir, tho' I and all honest Men wish from our Hearts, that Frauds may be prevented in this, as well as in every other Branch of the publick Revenue, yet I cannot give my Assent to a Proposition that may be of so dangerous Consequence; a Proposition which I look upon to be inconsistent with our Constitution: I am convinced it would prove to be a most fatal Stroke to the Liberties of my Country, which will, I doubt not, be made plainly appear by other Gentlemen of much greater Abilities than mine; and, to every Man who has a Regard for his Country, or for the People he represents, this last must be a sufficient Reason for being against it, even though it were otherwise the most beneficial Scheme that had ever been proposed.

"But, Sir, since I look upon my being a Member of this House as the greatest Glory of my Life, since I look upon that Day on which I was chose one of the Representatives of the City of London, as the most auspicious Day of my whole Life, I cannot tamely sit still and hear the whole Body of the Merchants of that great City represented by that honourable Gentleman as a Pack of Rogues, Smugglers, and unfair Traders. It is a Treatment they no way deserve, it is a very odd, a very unkind Sort of Treatment, and such a Treatment as I am sure they never will forget, I believe they never will forgive."

Sir Paul Methuen's Speech.

In this Mr. Perry was supported by Sir Paul Methuen; who, amongst other Particulars, added; "The Danger which this Scheme seems to threaten to the Liberty of many of my Fellow-Subjects, is alone of sufficient Force to make me give my Negative to the Question moved for. Let Gentlemen but reflect, let them but cast their Eyes back, on the several Laws that have been made since the Revolution, they will there find, that there has been already more Power vested in the Crown than may be thought altogether consistent with the Constitution of a free Country; and therefore, Sir, I hope this House will never think of adding to that Power, which there may be some Ground to suspect to be already too far extended."

"The Laws of Excise, Sir, have always been looked on as most grievous to the Subject: All those already subjected to such Laws, are, in my Opinion, so far deprived of their Liberty; and since by this Scheme a great many more of his Majesty's faithful Subjects are to be subjected to those arbitrary Laws, let the Advantages accruing to the Publick from it be never so great or so many, they will be purchased at too dear a Rate, if they are purchased at the Expence of the Liberty of the meanest of his Majesty's Subjects; for even the meanest Man in the Nation has as natural and as good a Right to his Liberty, as the greatest Man in this or in any other Kingdom.

"Let us, Sir, but take a View of our neighbouring Nations in Europe, they were all once free, the People of every one of them had once as many Liberties and Privileges to boast of as we have now; but at present they are most

"of them reduced to a State of Slavery; they have no Liberty, no Property, no Law, nor any Thing that they can depend on. Let us examine their Histories, let us enquire into the Methods by which they were deprived of their Liberties, and we shall find a very near Resemblance between those Methods and the Scheme now proposed to us. Almost in every Country in the World, the Liberties of the People have been destroyed under Pretence of preserving, or of rescuing the People from some great Evil, to which it was pretended they were exposed. This, Sir, is the very Case now before us: In order to enable the Crown to prevent some little Frauds, pretended to have been committed in the ancient Method of collecting the publick Revenue, it is proposed to us, to put such a Power in the Hands of the Crown, as may enable some future Prince to enslave the whole Nation."

Then Mr. Attorney-General got up, and, with Abundance of Rhetorick, endeavoured to shew, that the Matter in debate had nothing to do with our Constitution or Liberty; and that the only Consideration should be, to find out Means to prevent and punish Frauds and Abuses in the Tobacco and Wine-Trades. He proceeded to palliate the Severity of the Laws of Excise, and declared his Belief, "That most of those People who are now subject to the Laws of Excise, look upon themselves to be as free, and to enjoy as much Liberty, as any other of his Majesty's Subjects." And, to take off the Fears that might arise from an Increase of the Number of Excise-Officers, he fixed the additional Number to one hundred and twenty-six, or not more than one hundred and fifty. He then endeavoured to quiet the Apprehensions of those who objected to the Method of Trying by Commissioners of Excise, or Commissioners of Appeal, who are entirely dependant on the Crown, and removeable at Pleasure, by informing them, that this new Law would refer them to the Opinion of three Judges in Westminster-Hall. He declared against the Partiality of Juries in Cases between the Crown and the Subject, and thence insinuated the Necessity of altering the Method of Trial by Juries in such Cases.

Mr. Attorney-General's Answer.

Sir John Barnard, having with strict Attention minuted all the Arguments in the Debate in Favour of the Motion, rose up and delivered his Opinion in the following Manner: "I find, Sir, that the honourable Gentleman who opened this Scheme to the Committee, and the honourable and learned Gentleman who spoke last, make great Complaints of some People's having grossly and maliciously misrepresented their Scheme, before those malicious Persons knew what it was. For my part, Sir, I happen to be of a very different way of thinking; for though I am far from thinking that the Scheme, as now opened to us, is the very same with what it was when first formed, yet even as it is now opened it is such a Scheme, in my Opinion, as cannot, even by Malice itself, be represented to be worse than it really is. Now that I know it, now that I see what it is, it appears to me to be a Scheme that will be attended with all those bad Consequences that

Sir John Barnard's Speech.

"ever

"ever were apprehended from it before it was known; and I plainly foresee, that it will produce none of those good Effects which Gentlemen have been pleased to entertain us with the Hopes of: They have indeed gilded the Pill a little, but the Composition within is still the same; and, if the People of England be obliged to swallow it, they will find it as bitter a Pill as ever was swallowed by them since they were a People.

"The learned Gentleman was pleased to say, that he was of Opinion that the Opposition to this wicked Scheme (for so, Sir, I must call it) proceeded from other Motives than Gentlemen are willing to own: I do not know what Motives he can mean; but I am persuaded that those Gentlemen who propose this Scheme have some secret Views, which it would neither be convenient nor safe for them to own in this Place. For, as to any Reasons or Views which may be openly avowed for the proposing of this Scheme, I know of none but that of preventing the Frauds that may be committed in that Branch of the Revenue now under our Consideration; and that this Scheme will not answer that Purpose, has, I think, been made plainly appear by my worthy Brother near me; but, granting that this Scheme should answer such a Purpose, if the Laws now in Being, duly executed, are sufficient for answering that Purpose, what Necessity is there for applying this new, this desperate Remedy, a Remedy which is certainly much worse than the Disease? Before I proceed any farther, I shall desire that the Commissioners of the Customs, who are attending at the Door, may be called in." The Commissioners were accordingly called in, and, being asked by Sir John, What they thought the Value of the Frauds committed in the Tobacco-Trade might amount to, one Year with another? Their Answer in Effect was, That they had never made any Computation: But one of them said, that, by a Computation he had made only for the satisfying of his own private Curiosity, he believed the Frauds come to their Knowledge might amount to thirty or forty thousand Pounds per Ann. one Year with another. Then Sir John put the following Question to them, Whether or no it was their Opinion, that if the Officers of the Customs performed their Duty diligently and faithfully, it would not effectually prevent all, or most of the Frauds that could be committed in the Tobacco-Trade? To which they answered, That it was their Opinion it would. Then he asked them, Whether or no it was their Opinion, that if the Commissioners of the Customs had the same Power over their Officers, that the Commissioners of Excise have over their's, it would contribute a great deal towards making them more exact and more faithful in the Discharge of their Duty than they are now? And their Answer was, That they believed it would. After this, the Commissioners being withdrawn, Sir John went on to the Effect as follows, viz.

"I now, Sir, leave it to every Gentleman in this House to consider, what real Pretence can be formed for introducing such a dangerous Scheme as what has been proposed to us. The only Pretence I have yet heard made use of is,

"the preventing of Frauds, by which, say they, the fair Trader will be encouraged, and the Revenue increased; but now you see, that it is the Opinion even of the Commissioners of the Customs, that, by a due Execution of the Laws now in Being, all, or most of those Frauds may be effectually prevented; and I am sure, if they can be prevented by the Laws in Being, the preventing of them by that Method will contribute much more to the Increase of the publick Revenue, and to the Encouragement of the fair Trader, than to the preventing of them by means of the dangerous Scheme now proposed to us. I now leave it to the whole World to judge, who are they that have secret Motives which they are not willing to own, which they dare not own? Whether it be those who are the Proposers and Promoters of this Scheme, or those who are the Opposers of it?

"The learned Gentleman seemed to be surprized how our Constitution, or the Liberties of our Country, can be brought into the present Debate; he said, he thought they had no manner of Concern in the present Question. I am sorry, Sir, to differ from a Gentleman, who by his Profession ought, and who certainly does understand the Nature of our Constitution, as well as any Man in England; but I am of Opinion, that the Constitution of our Government, and the Liberty of the Subject, was never more nearly or more immediately concerned in any Question than they are in the present; they are both so deeply concerned, that their Preservation or their total Overthrow depends entirely upon the Success of the Scheme now under our Consideration: If the Scheme succeeds, they must tumble of Course; if the Scheme is defeated, they may be preserved, I hope they will be preserved till Time shall be no more: But I must say that the learned Gentleman, and every Gentleman who appears as an Advocate for the Scheme now proposed to us, is much in the right to keep, if they can, the Constitution and the Liberties of their Country out of the Debate; it is from thence that the principal Arguments are to be formed against their Scheme; it is from thence that such Arguments may be formed against it, as must appear unanswerable to every Man who has a Regard for either.

"The Gentleman tells us, that there are but an hundred and twenty or an hundred and fifty Excise-Officers, besides Warehouse-Keepers, to be added by the Scheme now before us, and this additional Number they seem to make a Ridicule of; but, considering the Swarms of Tax-Gatherers we have already established, this small Number (as they call it) is no trivial Matter; and I would be glad to know from those Gentlemen, what they call Warehouse-Keepers, and what Number of them may be necessary. I hope they will allow, that a Warehouse-Keeper appointed by the Treasury, and paid by the Treasury, is an Officer of the Revenue, as much as any other Officer whatever; and, if the Number that there must be of them be added to the other, I believe we may find that the Number of Revenue-Officers

"to

"to be added by this Scheme must be very considerable.

"As for the new Method of Appeal proposed, I can see no Advantage, Sir, that it will be of to any unfortunate Man that may have Occasion thereof. In all Cases the Charge and Trouble of attending must be very great, and the Event very precarious; but in most Cases, where poor Retailers may have Occasion to be concerned, the Charge and the Trouble of Attendance must be much greater than the Subject can bear, so that all such People must succumb; they must submit to the Determination of the Commissioners of Excise, and can expect no other Redress but what they meet with from the Mercy of those Commissioners. The Judges of Westminster-Hall are, 'tis true, for Life, but they are all named by the Crown; I shall say nothing of the present Judges, who so worthily fill the several Benches of Westminster-Hall; but, if they should die, and if the Crown should be resolved to use that Power which the Parliament had put into their Hands, in order to oppress the Subject, they will always find Judges fit for their Purpose: Judges are but Men, they are subject to the same Frailties that other Men are, and the Crown has always Plenty of Baits wherewithal to tempt them. A Judge may be made a Lord Chief-Justice, a Lord Chancellor, and every one may have a Son, a Brother, or a Cousin to be provided for. The Crown has many Ways by which they may win over even a Judge, to administer Justice according to the Directions he shall receive from Court; more especially when he is to administer Justice in a summary Way, and without the usual Forms of Proceeding in Courts of Law or Equity. For by this new Method of Appeal, which has been so much bragged of, Care has been taken that the Subject shall not be restored to their antient Birth-right, that is, to a Trial by Jury: No, this I find is most carefully avoided; and yet I think it must be allowed, that it is the inherent Right of every Englishman to be tried by his Peers: I am not so much acquainted with Law as to give an Account of the several Cases in which this Method of Trial has been set aside, or the Reasons for so doing; but I will venture to say, that wherever that Method of Trial has been set aside, whether the same was done by the Wisdom of the Nation or otherwise, such Alteration was an Innovation, and was a dangerous Encroachment upon the original Charter of our Constitution.

"As to the pretended Partiality of Juries, so much complained of by the learned Gentleman, it is of no Weight with me; I cannot see how that honourable Gentleman, or any Gentleman, can pretend to know what Reasons a Jury may have for giving their Verdict. No Gentleman has a Right to be believed upon his single Say-so, against a Verdict given by twelve honest Men upon Oath. If there have been so many Verdicts given against the Crown, as that learned Gentleman seems to insinuate, it is to me a strong Proof, that Prosecutions have been set on foot against the Subject upon the "Evidence of Witnesses, whose Credibility or Veracity have not been very much to be depended on; which is so far from being an Argument for altering the Method of Trial by Jury, that it is a very strong Argument for the Continuance of that Method in all Time to come. But, Sir, as it is now very late, and as I shall probably have another Opportunity of giving my Sentiments more fully upon the Affair now before us, I shall therefore trouble you no farther at present, but only to declare, that now, after hearing this Scheme opened to us, I dislike it as much as ever I did any Representation of it that ever I heard of, and therefore I shall give my Negative to the Question proposed."

George Heatboste, Esq; added, "The greatest Objection arises from the Danger to which this Scheme will most certainly expose the Liberties of our Country; those Liberties for which our Ancestors have so often ventured their Lives and their Fortunes; those Liberties which have cost the Nation so much Blood and Treasure, seem already to be greatly retrenched: I am sorry to say it, Sir, but what is now in Dispute seems to me to be the last Branch of Liberty we have to contend for: We have already established a standing Army, and have made it in a manner Part of our Constitution; we have already subjected great Numbers of the People of this Nation to the arbitrary Laws of Excise; and this Scheme is so wide a Step towards subjecting all the rest of the People of England to those arbitrary Laws, that it will be impossible for us to recover or prevent the fatal Consequences of such a Scheme.

"We have indeed nothing to fear from his present Majesty, he never will make a bad Use of that Power which we have put into his Hands; but if we once grant to the Crown too great an Extent of Power, we cannot recal that Grant when we have a Mind; and, tho' his Majesty should never make a bad Use of it, some of his Successors may. The being governed by a wife and a good King, does not make the People a free People; the Romans, Sir, were as great Slaves under the few good Emperors they had to reign over them, as they were under the most cruel of their Tyrants: After the People have once given up their Liberties, their Governors have all the same Power of oppressing them, tho' they may not perhaps all make the same wicked Use of the Power that has been put into their Hands; but a Slave that has the good Fortune to meet with a good-natured and an humane Master, is no less a Slave than he that meets with a cruel and barbarous one. Our Liberties, Sir, are too valuable, and have been purchased at too high a Price, to be sported with, or wantonly given up even to the best of Kings. We have before now had some good, some wise and gracious Sovereigns to reign over us; but we find, that under them our Ancestors were as jealous of their Liberties as they were under the worst of our Kings. It is to be hoped, that we have still the same Value for our Liberties; if we have, we certainly will use all peaceable Methods to preserve and secure them; and, if such Methods should

Mr. Heatboste's Speech.

"prove

"ineffectual, I hope there is no Englishman but "has Spirit enough to use those Methods for the "Preservation of our Liberties, which were used "by our Ancestors for the Defence of their Li"berties, and for transmitting them down to "us in that glorious Condition in which we found "them. There are some still alive who bravely "ventured their Lives and their Fortunes in the "Defence of the Liberties of their Country; there "are many whose Fathers were embarked in the "same glorious Cause. Let it never be said, "that the Sons of such Men wantonly gave up
 "those Liberties for which their Fathers had "risked so much, and that for the poor Pre-
 "tence of suppressing a few Frauds in the Col"lecting of the publick Revenues, which might "easily have been suppressed without entering "into any such dangerous Measures."

Mr. Pul-tene's
 Speech.

In which he was strongly backed by William Pulteney, Esq; who declared it to be his Opinion,
 "That this Scheme breathed nothing but the "Principles of the most arbitrary and most ty"rannical Governments that have been established "in Europe: The enlarging of the Power of the "Crown, the increasing the Number of Depen"dents on the Crown, the rendering the Happi"ness of the Subject precarious and uncertain,
 "and depending in a manner entirely on the good "Will of a Prime Minister, or of those employed "under him, are the certain Consequences of the "Scheme now proposed to us; they are the cer"tain Consequences of all Schemes for extending "the Laws of Excise, and are probably the prin"cipal Views of all those who set up such Pro"jects. Let Gentlemen but read the political "Testaments of Ricblieu and Louvois, those Le"gacies which were left by the Authors to their "Master, for instructing him in the Principles "of arbitrary Government; let Gentlemen, I "say, but read those Testaments, and they will "see that the Author of this Scheme, whoever
 "he be, must be very well versed in them; they "will see how well it agrees with the Principles
 "there laid down for the establishing and sup"porting of arbitrary Power. It is for this Rea"son that the English Nation has always been so "averse to Excise-Projects of all Kinds; the very "Word Excise has always been odious to the "People of England. It is true, there has been an "Excise established by Parliament, but it was at "first given as a Purchase for the Court of Wards
 "and Liveries; and, tho' that Court was most "justly looked on as one of our greatest Griev"ances, yet the Purchase has always been reck"oned too dear, and that Parliament which gave
 "the Excise has been branded with the infamous "Name of a pensionary Parliament. Even the "great King William, notwithstanding all he had "done for the People of England, notwithstanding "his being most generally beloved and esteemed
 "by his Subjects, yet he had like to have suf"fered by a Notion's prevailing among the Peo"ple, that some new Excises were to have been "established. It was publicly said, that we "had got a Dutch King, and that therefore we "were to be faddled with Dutch Excises. That "wise King was so sensible of the Danger he "might be exposed to by the prevailing of such "a Notion, that he thought it necessary to

"disavow any such Intention by a publick De"claration.

"I wish the Gentlemen who appear so zealous
 "for this Scheme, would have some little Regard "to their Constituents. It is well known that it "was the Custom among our Ancestors, when "any new Device was proposed, to desire Time "to have a Conference with their Countries. I "am but very little conversant in Books of Law;
 "however, I some Times look into them, and I "must beg Leave to read a Passage or two on this "Subject from my Lord Coke. That great Law"yer, in the fourth Part of his Institutes, Page "14, says, It is also the Law and Custom of the "Parliament, that, when any new Device is "moved on the King's Behalf in Parliament, for "his Aid, or the like, the Commons may an"swer, That they tendered the King's Estate, and "are ready to aid the same, only in this new De"vice they dare not agree, without Conference
 "with their Countries: Whereby it appeareth,
 "that such Conference is warrantable by the Law
 "and Custom of Parliament. And again, in "Page 34, he tells us, At the Parliament holden
 "in the ninth of Edw. III. when a Motion was "made for a Subsidy of a new Kind, the Com"mons answered, That they would have Confe"rence with those of their several Countries and "Places, who had put them in Trust, before "they treated of any such Matter. If such a "Conference, Sir, was ever necessary upon any "Occasion, it is surely necessary before we agree "to the Device now offered to us; a Device
 "which, in my Opinion, strikes at the very "Root of our Liberties; it is, in my way of "thinking, a downright Plan for arbitrary "Power; and in this I am not singular, for there "seems to be many Gentlemen of the same Opi"nion within Doors as well as without; therefore
 "I must think that it is necessary, it is incum"bent upon every Gentleman in this House, at "least to desire to have a Conference with his "Constituents before he agrees to any such De"vice. This, Sir, would have been necessary,
 "if we had been entirely ignorant of the Senti"ments of our several Countries, but indeed in "the present Case such a Conference seems to be "quite unnecessary; we already know the Senti"ments of our Constituents in Relation to the "Device now offered to us; the whole Na"tion has already, in the most open Man"ner, declared their Dislike to it, and there"fore I hope the Gentlemen of this Committee "will reject it with that Scorn and Contempt it "deserves."

And by Sir William Wyndham, who delivered his Opinion after this Manner: "The Scheme,
 "as now explained to us, has, in my Opinion,
 "been no Way misrepresented. It is the very "same with what has been represented to us; it "is the very same with that which the Nation has "so openly and so generally declared their Dislike "to; it is fraught with all those Evils which "were ever attributed to it, and most apparently "strikes at the very Fundamentals of our Con"stitution. The collecting of any Duties by the "Laws of Excise has, in all Ages and in all "Countries, been looked on as the most grievous
 "and most oppressive Method of collecting of "Taxes,

Sir Willam Wyndham's
 Speech.

" Taxes; and, if one Method of raising an Excise can be more oppressive than another, it must be granted, that the Method now proposed to us, of raising this new Excise, must of all Methods be the most oppressive, and the most vexatious to the People. In all Countries, Excises of every Kind are looked on as Badges of Slavery, and tho' the English Nation be now unfortunately subjected to some of them, yet I hope they will never consent to any new Excises, or to any new Extension of the Laws of Excise, let the Pretences for so doing be ever so specious.

" But in the present Case, pray Sir, let us consider what are the specious Pretences made use of, what are the great Advantages proposed, for persuading us to consent to the subjecting of so many of his Majesty's faithful Subjects to be plagued and harrassed by the Officers of Excise. The suppressing of Frauds, and the Advantages that will accrue therefrom to the Publick and to the fair Trader, is, by what I can find, the only Pretence now made use of; and yet those Frauds, even aggravated, as they were, by the honourable Gentleman who proposed this Scheme to us, do amount to but a meer Trifle; so that the Improvement to be made, as to the publick Revenue, will be but very inconsiderable, if any at all, after deducting the additional Charges of Management, which the Publick will become liable to by the great Increase of Officers: The Pretence therefore, even when set in the strongest Light, can be no sufficient Argument for prevailing on us to expose our Constitution to the least Danger, or to subject any of our Fellow-Countrymen to great Hardships: But this Pretence is still more frivolous, since it has been made appear to us, that those Frauds are not at all so considerable as they have been represented; that all Sorts of Frauds cannot be prevented even by the Scheme now proposed; and that many of those Frauds that have been lately committed might be prevented by the Laws now in Being, if care were taken to have proper Officers, and to make those Officers diligent and faithful. I grant, indeed, Sir, that the Power and Influence of the Crown will be greatly increased and improved by this Scheme; I must own, Sir, that great Numbers of the People of this Nation will thereby be rendered most submissive and obedient to those that shall hereafter be employed by the Crown; and, if this be a Motive for agreeing to this Scheme, I must allow that it is a strong one; I believe, indeed, that it is the only real one that any Gentleman can have for giving his Consent to such a Scheme; but with me, Sir, it is so far from being a Motive for giving my Consent, that it is the strongest Motive I have for giving my Negative to the Question now before us, because I think it absolutely inconsistent with our Constitution.

" 'Tis true, Sir, an Ease to the Landed-Interest has upon this, as well as upon some other late Occasions of the like Nature, been thrown out, as a Bait for some Gentlemen; but, I hope, the Landed-Gentlemen are not to be caught by
No. 47.

" such Baits; the Hook appears so plain, that it may be discovered by any Man of common Sense: However, I must say, that the Method of arguing is unfair, the Design is wicked, for it is an Endeavour to set the Landed-Interest, in a manner, at War with the Trading-Interest of the Nation; it is endeavouring to destroy that Harmony which always ought to subsist among the People of the same Nation, and which, if once destroyed, would certainly end in the Ruin and Destruction of the whole. But every Landed-Gentleman in England will do well to consider what Value their Lands would be of, if, for the Sake of a small and immediate Ease to themselves, they should be induced to oppress and destroy the Trade of their Country; and whoever considers this, will despise all such Projects, and reject them with that Contempt which they deserve. If this Scheme should once be established, the Power and Influence of the Crown will be so great in all Parts of the Nation, that no Man can depend upon the natural Interest he has in his Country, for being a Member of this House; he must in all future Times, for such a Favour, depend entirely upon the Crown; and this, I hope, there is no Gentleman in this House would chuse to submit to.

" We are told, Sir, Why do you complain of this Scheme? Here is no new Tax to be imposed; there is nothing proposed, but only a new Method of raising those Taxes which are already due by Law: But I would have Gentlemen remember, that this Nation has once already been more grievously oppressed by a new Method of raising and collecting that Money that was before due by Law, than they ever were by any new Tax that was ever laid on them."

On which Occasion Sir William put them in mind of those two bad Ministers of State Epsom and Dudley, who, he observed, drained the Purse of the Subject, and otherwise oppressed them, not by imposing new Taxes, or by laying any new and illegal Burthens on the People; but by a severe and vigorous Execution of those Laws which before had been enacted; and then concludes thus: " There never was, in any Reign, a Scheme or Project attempted, so much to the Dislike and Dissatisfaction of the People in general; the whole Nation has already so openly declared their Aversion to the Scheme now offered to us, that I am surprized to see it insisted on; the very proposing of such a Scheme to a House of Commons, after so many Remonstrances against it, I must think most audacious; it is, in a manner, flying in the Face of the whole People of England: And since they have already declared against it, God forbid that we, who are their Representatives, should declare for it."

This Reflexion threw the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Sir Robert Walpole) into a pretty deal of Emotion; and finding it incumbent upon him to wipe off, as much as in his Power, the Insinuation of his copying the wicked Devices of Henry the VII's Ministry, he rose once more, and spoke to the following Effect: " Sir, as I was obliged, when I opened the Affair now be-7 B fore

Sir Robert
Walpole's
Speech.

“fore us, to take up a great deal of your “Time, I then imagined that I should not “have been obliged to have given you any “farther Trouble; but when such Things are “thrown out, Things which, in my Opinion, “are quite foreign to the Debate; when the “ancient Histories, not only of this Country, “but of other Countries, are ransacked for “Characters of wicked Ministers, in order to “adapt them to the present Times, and to draw “Parallels between them and some modern Cha“racters, to which they bear no other Resem“blance but only that they were Ministers, it “is impossible for one to sit still. Of late Years, “I have dealt but little in the study of History;
 “but I have a very good Prompter by me,” (meaning the Attorney-General) “and by his “means I can recollect, that the Case of Empton
 “and Dudley, mentioned by the Honourable “Gentleman who spoke last, was so very diffe“rent, from any Thing that can possibly be pre“sumed from the Scheme now before us, that I “wonder how it was possible to lug them into “the Debate. The Case as to them was, that “they had, by Virtue of old and obsolete Laws, “most unjustly extorted great Sums of Money “from People, who, as was pretended, had be“come liable to great Pains and Penalties by “having been guilty of Breaches of those obso“lete Laws, which for many Years before had “gone intirely into Disuse. I must say, Sir, and “I hope most of those that hear me think, that “it is very unjust and unfair to draw any Pa“rallel between the Characters of those two “Ministers and mine, which was I suppose what “the Honourable Gentleman meant to do, when “he brought that Piece of History into the “Debate. If I ever endeavour to raise Money “from the People, or from any Man whatever, “by oppressive or illegal Means, if my Character “should ever come to be in any Respect like “theirs, I shall deserve their Fate: But while “I know myself to be innocent, I shall depend “upon the Protection of the Laws of my Coun“try; as long as they can protect me I am safe;
 “and if that Protection should fail, I am prepa“red to submit to the worst that can happen. I “know that my political and ministerial Life “has, by some Gentlemen, been long wished at “an End, but they may ask their own disap“pointed Hearts how vain their Wishes have “been; and as for my natural Life, I have lived “long enough to learn to be as easy about part“ing with it as any Man can well be.
 “As to those Clamours, Sir, which have been “raised without Doors, and which are now so “much insisted on, it is very well known by “whom, and by what Methods they were raised,
 “and it is no difficult Matter to guess with “what Views; but I am very far from taking “them to be the Sense of the Nation, or be“lieving that the Sentiments of the Generality “of the People were thereby expressed. The “most part of the People concerned in those “Clamours did not speak their own Sentiments, “they were played by others, like so many Pup“pets; it was not the Puppets that spoke, it “was those behind the Curtain that played them, “and made them speak whatever they had a “mind.

“There is now, Sir, a most extraordinary “Concourse of People at our Door; I hope it “will not be said, that all those People came “there of themselves naturally, and without “any Instigation from others; for to my certain “Knowledge, some very odd Methods were “used to bring such Multitudes hither; cir“cular Letters, Sir, were wrote, and were sent “by the Beadles in the most publick and most “unprecedented Manner, round almost every “Ward in the City, summoning them, upon “their Peril, to come down this Day to the House “of Commons: This I am certain of, because I “have now one of those Letters in my Pocket, “signed by a Deputy of one of the greatest “Wards in the City of London, and sent by the “Beadle to one of the Inhabitants of that Ward; “and I know that such Letters were sent, in the “same Manner, almost to every Liveryman “and Tradesman in that Ward. By the same “Sort of unwarrantable Methods have the Cla“mours been raised almost in every Part of the “Nation.

“Gentlemen may say what they please of the “Multitudes now at our Door, and in all the “Avenues leading to this House; they may call “them a modest Multitude, if they will; but “whatever Temper they were in when they came “hither, it may be very much altered now, “after having waited so long at our Door; it “may be a very easy Matter for some designing “seditious Person to raise a Tumult and Disor“der among them, and when Tumults are once “begun no Man knows where they may end; he “is a greater Man than any I know in the Na“tion, that could with the same Ease appease “them; for this Reason I must think, that it “was neither prudent nor regular to use any “Methods for bringing such Multitudes to this “Place, under any Pretence whatever. Gentle“men may give them what Name they think fit;
 “it may be said, that they came hither as hum“ble Supplicants; but I know whom the Law “calls sturdy Beggars, and those who brought “them hither could not be certain, but that they “might have behaved in the same Manner.

Sir John Barnard then got up to speak, but there being some Disorder in the Committee, and the Question loudly called for, Sir John Hynd
Cotton got up, and spoke thus: “To Order; “Sir, I hope you will call Gentlemen to Order;
 “there is now a Gentleman up to speak; a Gen“tleman who speaks as well as any Gentleman “in this House, and who deserves Attention as “much as any Gentleman that ever spoke in this “House: Besides, Sir, he is one of the Repre“sentatives of the greatest and the richest City “in Europe, a City which is greatly interested “in this Debate, and therefore he must be heard;
 “and I desire, Sir, that you will call to Order, “that the Committee may shew him, at “least, that Respect that is due to every Gen“tleman who is a Member of this House.”

After which, the Committee being called to Order, Sir John Barnard went on, in Substance as follows: “Sir, I know of no irregular or “unfair Methods that were used to call People “from the City to your Door; it is certain, “that any Set of Gentlemen or Merchants may “lawfully

Speech.

"lawfully desire their Friends, they may even write Letters, and they may send those Letters by whom they please, to desire the Merchants of Figure and Character to come down to the Court of Requests and to our Lobby, in order to solicit their Friends and Acquaintances against any Scheme or Project which they think may be prejudicial to them. This, Sir, is the undoubted Right of the Subject, and what has been always practised upon all Occasions. The Honourable Gentleman talks of sturdy Beggars; I do not know what Sort of People may be now at our Door, because I have not lately been out of the House, but I believe they are the same Sort of People that were there when I came last into the House; and then, Sir, I can assure you, that I saw none but such as deserve the Name of sturdy Beggars as little as the Honourable Gentleman himself, or any Gentleman whatever. It is well known, that the City of London was sufficiently apprised of what we were this Day to be about; where they got their Information I do not know; but I am very certain, that they had a very right Notion of the Scheme which has been now opened to us, and they were so generally and zealously bent against it, that whatever Methods may have been used to call them hither, I am sure it would have been impossible to have found any legal Methods to have prevented their coming hither."

The Motion carried in the affirmative.

There were several other Gentlemen spoke, both for and against the Scheme; and at last the Question was put, upon the Motion made by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, whereupon they came to a Division:

Total for the Excise, with the Teller, 266.

Total against the Excise, with the Teller, 205.

But this Success of the Minister did not discourage the Opponents to his arbitrary Measures: For, when the Report thereof was made to the House by Sir Charles Turner, Chairman of the Committee, on the sixteenth of March, and the Question was proposed for agreeing with the Committee in their Resolution concerning the Duties on Tobacco, Sir John Barnard, in an elaborate and pathetic Speech, amongst other Particulars, said, "I am surpris'd, Sir, to hear any Gentleman say, that Brewers make no Complaints on Account of their being subjected to the Laws of Excise: I do not know what Sort of Brewers those Gentlemen may converse with, but I never conversed with any who did not complain of it as a very great Grievance, nor did I ever meet with any who could not give very good and substantial Reasons for their Complaints. There are many particular Ways by which the Officers of Excise may be troublesome and vexatious to the Brewer, but there is one which is generally practised all over the Kingdom; and that is, that those Officers not only gauge and take an Account of their Liquors, but likewise oblige the Brewers to shew them their Books as often as they have a mind; by which Means they not only pry into all the Secrets and Mysteries of their Trade, but likewise into their Circumstances and Fortunes. Can any Gentleman look upon this as no

Sir John Barnard's Speech.

Grievance? Is it not a Hardship upon any Man, to have the Secrets and Mysteries of his Trade exposed to every little Fellow whom the Commissioners of Excise shall please to put in Authority over him? But is it not still a greater Hardship, for a Man to be obliged to discover his Circumstances to one who is an utter Stranger to him, perhaps to one who is his most implacable Enemy?

The Honourable Gentleman, I find, Sir, values himself much upon the small Increase of Excise-Officers that is to be made by his Scheme, but then he seems to forget the Warehouse-keepers: They, as well as the other Officers of Excise, are all to be named by the Crown and paid by the Publick, consequently they are certainly to be called Officers of the Revenue: They will be as expensive to the Publick, and as great Slaves to the Administration, as any other Sort of Officers whatever. As there are a great Number of Tobacco-Warehouses in Britain, there must be a great Number of them employed to attend those Warehouses as often as there should be Occasion for them, otherwise it will be impossible for the Merchant to manage or dispose of the Goods he has there lodged; from whence I must conclude, that the Number of those Warehouse-keepers will be much more than double the Number of the other new Officers to be added by this Scheme.

It has been said, that Liberty has nothing to do in the Question now before us; but, in my Opinion, if it is not deeply concerned in this Question, it can never be concerned in any Question that can come before this House: Is not every Man's House looked on as his Asylum? Is, then, the giving a Power to any little paltry Exciseman to enter People's Houses, at all Times of the Day and Night, no Inroad upon the Liberty of those People? If it is not an Inroad upon a Man's Liberty, it certainly is a very direct one upon his Property, and of Consequence it will be found to be an Inroad upon his Liberty; for can any Man be said to be free, who must submit to, and be the humble Slave of his Exciseman, otherwise he must expect no Quiet or Comfort within his own Dwelling-house? The most blameless Conduct cannot secure him against Vexation, and no Man can be said to be free, who cannot depend upon his Innocence for his Protection: An Officer, invested with such Power, may fall upon twenty Ways to vex and teize the most innocent Man upon Earth: I know that one of my Acquaintance, who has the Misfortune to be subject to the Laws of Excise already in Being, was, for a considerable Time together, regularly visited by his Exciseman at the Hour the Family went to Dinner; and, if they had but civilly asked the Gentleman to call at any other Time, his immediate answer was, No, Sir, I'm in a Hurry; I have a great deal of other Business to attend besides yours; I must immediately visit such a Place; if you will not allow me, I must go, and I know what to do. By this rude Behaviour the whole Family was disturbed, and one of them was always obliged

"ed to get up from Dinner, in order to go and
"let him visit such Places in the House as he had "a mind.

"These, Sir, are the Fellows, who, by this "fine Scheme, are to be put into every Man's "House that is a Dealer in either of the two "Commodities of Tobacco or Wine: These are "the Lord-Danes, who are to be, by Law, ap"pointed to Lord it over every such Dealer and "his whole Family. We know what was the "Fate of the Lord-Danes we had formerly in "England, and I shall be very little surpris'd if "these new one ones meet with the same Fate.
"In short, Sir, Gentlemen may dress up this "Scheme in what Shape they please, but to one "who considers it coolly and impartially, as I "have done, it must appear in its true Colours.
"I am convinced that it will produce nothing
"but the most mischievous Consequences, not "only to those who are to be immediately affect"ed by it, but likewise to the Liberties and Pro"perties of the Nation in general, and therefore
"I am intirely against agreeing to the Resoluti"ons of the Committee."

*Sir Thomas Af-ton's
Speech.*

Sir Thomas Aston spoke next against it, and among other Things took Notice, that it was his Misfortune to know too much of the Influence that the Officers of the Customs and Excise had at Elections; for at his own Election, there were many of the Voters so free and open, as to come to him and tell him, that they would vote for him rather than any other, but that those Officers had threatened to ruin them if they did; and others told him, that they had Promises either for themselves or for their Sons to be made Officers in the Customs or Excise, by his Antagonist, and as their Bread depended upon getting those Promises fulfilled, which they could not expect if they did not vote against him, therefore they hoped he would excuse them. "Thus,
"Sirs, says he, I know the Evil of this illegal "Influence by Experience, and therefore I shall "always be against any Measure that may tend "to increase it, as this Scheme most evidently "will; for I hope I shall always disdain to owe
"the Honour of representing my Country in "Parliament, to any Administration whatever;
"I hope I shall always depend upon the free
"Votes of my Fellow-Subjects, and for that "Reason I must be against what I think will "destroy that Freedom, upon which only I am "always to depend."

*The Excise-
Bill carried in the Affirmative.*

Many others spoke for and against the agreeing to the Resolution; but at last upon a Division it was carried in the Affirmative, 249 against 189; and it was ordered, that a Bill should be brought in pursuant thereto.

This famous Bill was accordingly brought into the House on the fourth of April, and was read a first Time; and a Motion being made, that it should be withdrawn, on Account that some Parts thereof were not within the Resolutions of the House, pursuant to which the said Bill had been ordered to be brought in, it passed in the Negative, 232 against 176.

Then a Motion was made for adjourning, which likewise passed in the Negative; at last it was resolved, that the Bill should be read a second time; and ordered, that it should be read a second time on that Day Sevensnight, 236 against 200. Next Day, after the Bringing-in of this Bill, a Motion was made for the Printing such a Number of Copies as should be sufficient for the Use of the Members of the House; but, upon the Question's being put, it was carried in the Negative, 128 against 112.

In the mean time, the Representation delivered by the Citizens of London to their Representatives, was copied by many of the Counties, Cities, and Boroughs of the Kingdom, as may be observed to be hinted at in the Premises: And this Order of the House was no sooner made publick, but it threw the City of London into such a violent Ferment, that the Lord-Mayor, John Barber, Esq; immediately summoned a Common Council, to deliberate upon the most effectual Measures to prevent passing the said Bill; on which Occasion his Lordship made the following Speech:

"Gentlemen,

"There is a Bill depending in the House of "Commons, (a Copy of which I have procu"red) for laying an inland Duty on Tobacco;
"which Duty, it is universally agreed, will "prove extremely detrimental to the Trade and "Commerce of this great City, as well as to that "of the whole Nation. And, as the high Sta"tion I have the Honour to be in obliges me
"to be watchful over every thing that may af"fect the Interest of my Fellow-Citizens, I should "think myself wanting in my Duty, if I neglect"ed to call you together on this extraordinary "Occasion, that you might have an Opportu"nity to deliberate on an Affair of so much Im"portance, wherein our Liberty and Property
"are so much concerned."

*The Lord-Mayor's
Speech to the Common Council against the said
Bill.*

As this Bill very much concerned the Trade and Commerce of this Nation, the Lord-Mayor of the City of London procured a Copy of it soon after it was brought into the House of Commons; and having laid it before the Common Council, it was there resolved to Petition the House against it; and a Petition being then immediately drawn up and agreed to, the same was presented to the House of Commons on the tenth Day of April.

The humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled,

Sheweth,

"That your Petitioners observe in the Votes
"of this Honourable House, that a Bill has "been brought in, pursuant to the Resolutions "of the sixteenth Day of March, for repealing "several Subsidies, and an Impost now payable

The Petition of the Common Council against the said Bill.

"That

"That the Burthen of Taxes already imposed on every Branch of Trade, however cheerfully borne, is severely felt; but that your Petitioners apprehend this Burthen will grow too heavy to be borne, if it be increased by such vexatious and oppressive Methods of levying and collecting the Duties, as they are assured, by melancholy Experience, that the Nature of all Excises must necessarily produce.

"That the Merchants, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of this Kingdom have supported themselves under the Pressure of the Excise-Laws now in Force, by the comfortable and reasonable Expectation, that Laws, which nothing but publick Necessity could be a Motive to enact, would be repealed in Favour of the Trade of the Nation, and of the Liberty of the Subject, whenever that Motive should be removed, as your Petitioners presume it effectually is, by an undisturbed Tranquillity at home, and a general Peace so firmly established abroad.

"That if this Expectation be entirely taken away; if the Excise-Laws, instead of being repealed, are extended to other Species of Merchandizes not yet excised, and a Door opened for extending them to all; your Petitioners cannot, in Justice to themselves, to the Merchants, Tradesmen, and Manufacturers of the whole Kingdom, and to the general Interest of their Country, conceal their Apprehensions, that the most fatal Blow which ever was given, will be given on this Occasion to the Trade and Navigation of Great-Britain; that great Spring, from which the Wealth and Prosperity of the Publick flow, will be obstructed; the mercantile Part of the Nation will become not only less able to trade to Advantage, but unwilling to trade at all; for no Person, who can enjoy all the Privileges of a British Subject out of Trade, even with a small Fortune, will voluntarily renounce some of the most valuable of those Privileges, by subjecting himself to the Laws of Excise.

"That your Petitioners are able to shew, that these their Apprehensions are founded both in Experience and Reason; and therefore your Petitioners most humbly pray, That this Honourable House will be pleased to hear them by their Counsel against the said Bill."

The presenting of this Petition brought the Excise-Scheme again upon the Carpet in that Honourable House. The City of London has always enjoyed this Privilege, That any Petition from them is presented to the House by their Sheriffs, and is brought up by the Clerk of the House, and read at the Table, without asking Leave of the House for that Purpose: Whereas all other Petitions must be presented by a Member of the House, and cannot be by him brought up, or read at the Table by the Clerk, till Leave be first asked of, and granted by the House. Accordingly, this Petition was brought up and read at the Table; and, as soon as it was read, Sir John Barnard got up, and shewed how much the City and Citizens of London, as well as all the other trading Part of the Nation, were to be affected by the Bill for altering the Method of raising the Duties payable on Tobacco, and how just Reasons they had to insist upon being heard by their Counsel against it; and concluded with a Motion for granting them Leave to be heard by their Counsel, if they thought fit.

No. 47.

In Opposition to this Motion, it was insisted on, that it had always been the Practice of that House, never to receive any Petitions, and much less to admit Counsel, to be heard against any Bill for imposing of Taxes upon the Subject; for if any such Thing were to be admitted of, it would be impossible ever to pass any such Bill, because that there would be so many different Petitions presented against it by those who were to be subject thereto, that it would be impossible to hear Counsel separately upon every such Petition within the usual Time of the Continuance of one Session of Parliament: And that in refusing to admit Counsel to be heard, there could be no Inconvenience, because every Man, and every Body of Men had their Representatives in that House, who certainly would represent their Case to the House, if any particular Hardship was to be put upon them by any Bill then before the House.

To this it was replied, That the House had never pretended to any general Custom of refusing Petitions, except against those Bills which were called Money-Bills, that was to say, such Bills as were brought in for raising Money for the current Service of the Year; and that, even as to them, there were many Precedents where the House had admitted the Parties, whom they thought to have a real Interest therein, to be heard by their Counsel against passing of such Bills: That the admitting of Counsel even in such Cases could never prevent the passing such Bills, because the House could always order all Parties petitioning to be heard at one Time, and could give such Directions, that it would never take up many Days to hear every Thing that could be objected by every one of the Parties petitioning: That tho' every Part of the Nation had their Representatives in that House, yet it was well known, that Speaking in publick was a Talent that every Man was not not endowed with; from whence it might happen, that the particular Persons, or Part of the Nation, which was then to be aggrieved by what was passing in the House, might not have any such Members as were proper to lay their Case fully and clearly before the House; and that therefore, even as to Money-Bills, it was proper to admit Parties to be heard against them, when it appeared that they were very particularly interested therein.

But as to the Case then before them, there was not the least Pretence for refusing the Desire of the Petition, because the Bill against which it was presented, was no Money-Bill; it was granted by the Advocates for the Bill, it was even insisted on, as the greatest Argument for it, that there was no new Duties to be imposed; it was a Bill only for altering the Method of collecting the Taxes already imposed, and therefore it could never be pretended, that there was any Practice or Custom of the House for refusing to admit Parties interested to be heard against such a Bill: That if there had been such a Custom introduced, it ought not to be observed, especially when such a considerable body as the

Lord-

Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of London, come with an humble Petition to be heard against a Bill, which they thought would not only be highly injurious to them in particular, but destructive of the Trade and Commerce of the whole Nation.

In this Debate there were many Precedents brought by Mr. Sandys, Mr. Gybbon, and Mr. Bootle, where the House had received Petitions, and admitted Counsel to be heard against Money-Bills; and there were likewise Precedents brought, by Sir William Yonge and Mr. Wollaston, where the same had been refused; the Reading of which took up a great Part of the Day.

The principal Speakers for granting the Desire of the Petition were,

Sir John Barnard,	Sir William Wynabam,
Samuel Sandys, Esq;	Walter Plummer, Esq;
Philip Gybbon, Esq;	George Heatcoate, Esq;
Thomas Bootle, Esq;	Thomas Wynabam, Esq;
William Pulteney, Esq;

And the principal Speakers against granting the desire were,

Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer,	Mr. Solicitor General,
Horatio Walpole, Esq;	Mr. Attorney General,
Thomas Winnington, Esq;	Sir William Yonge,
	Hon. Henry Pelham.

Upon the Question's being put, for allowing the Petitioners to be heard by their Counsel against the Bill, there was a Division, and the Question was carried in the Negative, 214 against 197.

However, this potent Opposition of the City, &c. had so good an Effect, that the Bill, instead of being read a second Time on the eleventh of the following Month, according to an Order of the House for that Purpose, it was, upon a Motion made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, deferred 'till the twelfth of June; which plainly shewed it was to be dropt; which was soon after evinced, by an Adjournment of the House for that Day, which rendering the second Reading thereof impracticable, it has never since been heard of.

Resolutions and Orders against Tumults.

There having been great Crowds of People about the House on the eleventh of April, and some of them having behaved in a tumultuous Manner, the next Day, viz. the twelfth of April, Complaint was made to the House by several Members, who had voted in Favour of the Scheme, that a tumultuous Crowd of People had been assembled together the Night before, and several Days during the Session, in the Court of Requests, and other Avenues to that House; and that they themselves, and several other Members of the House, had been last Night, in their Return from the House, menaced, insulted and assaulted, by a tumultuous Crowd of People in the Passages to the House: Whereupon it was resolved and declared, Nemine Contradicente, first, That the assaulting, insulting, or menacing any Member of that House, in his coming to or going from the House, or upon the Account of his Behaviour in Parliament, was an high Infringement of the Privilege of that House, a most outrageous and dangerous Violation of the Rights of Parliament, and an high Crime and Misdemeanor. Second, That the assembling and coming of any Number of Persons in a riotous, tumultuous, and disorderly Manner to that House, in order either to hinder or promote the Passing of any Bill, or other Matter depending before the House, was an high Infringement of the Privilege of that House, destructive of the Freedom and Constitution of Parliament, and an high Crime and Misdemeanor. Third, That the inciting and encouraging any Number of Persons to come in a riotous, tumultuous and disorderly Manner to that House, in order either to hinder or promote the Passing of any Bill, or other Matter depending before the House, was an high Infringement of the Privilege of that House, destructive of the Freedom and Constitution of Parliament, and an high Crime and Misdemeanor.

Then it was ordered, first, That the Members of that House, who served for the City of London, should signify the said Resolutions and Declarations to the Lord-Mayor of London. Second, That the Members of that House, who served for the County of Middlesex, should signify the said Resolutions and Declarations to the Sheriff of Middlesex. Third, That the Members of that House, who served for the City of Westminster, should signify the said Resolutions and Declarations to the High Bailiff of Westminster. Which Orders were accordingly signified by their respective Members, who next Day reported their having done so to the House.

THE King having given the Princess Royal in Marriage to the Prince of Orange, this loyal and grateful City, to shew their hearty Approbation of his Majesty's wife Choice, in bestowing his eldest Daughter upon a Prince of the House of their Great Deliverer (William the Third) from spiritual and temporal Slavery, drew up and presented the following loyal Address on that joyful Occasion:

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council:

The City's Address on the Marriage of the Prince's Royal to the Prince of Orange.

"cil assembled, most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on the happy Conclusion of the Marriage of the Prince Royal, with his most Serene Highness the Prince of Orange.

"Our Minds presage the greatest Glory, the brightest Triumphs, and most distinguished Prosperity to these Nations, both in the present and future Ages, from another Alliance with that truly illustrious House, the House of Nassau, from whence so many Heroes have sprung, the Scourges of Tyrants, and the Af-feters of Liberty.

"Among these we must for ever remember that glorious Prince, King William the Third, who delivered these Kingdoms from the imminent Dangers of Popery and Arbitrary Power; and, during the Course of his important Reign, established the Constitution, and secured our Liberties in such a Manner, that he seems to have left nothing more to be done, than what we hope, was reserved to complete the Glories of your Majesty's Reign; a Reign, in which we justly promise ourselves, that nothing will be omitted which may appear necessary for the confirming our antient Constitution; for easing the People from those heavy Burthens, which the Defence of their Liberties induced them to impose upon themselves; for encouraging the Trade, and advancing the Maritime Power of this Kingdom; for making us happy at home and respected abroad.

"And, as we have a grateful Sense of the many Blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious Reign, we beg Leave to assure your Majesty of our hearty Endeavours in our Sphere to promote an affectionate Zeal for your Majesty's Person and Government, that your Reign may be easy and happy."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return the following Answer:

"My Lord-Mayor and Gentlemen,

"I return you my Thanks for this dutiful and loyal Address, and am very glad the Marriage of my Daughter with the Prince of Orange gives such general Satisfaction.

"It is a great Pleasure to me to see this Metropolis remember, with so much Gratitude, the Deliverance of these Kingdoms from Popery and Slavery, by my great Predecessor King William.

"A just Sense of the imminent Danger that this Nation then escaped, and of the inestimable Blessings that we now enjoy, will best secure to my People the Continuance and Preservation of our present Happiness, which it has been, and always shall be, my Care to support and maintain to the utmost of my Power."

The Inhabitants of the Precinct of Black-Fryers, from the Dissolution of its Monastery by Henry the VIIIth, Anno 1539, pretending a Privilege of Exemption from the Jurisdiction of the City of London, occasioned the Lord-Mayor and Citizens to ascertain their Right thereto, by a Trial in the Court of King's-Bench, on the tenth of July, between them and Daniel Watson, an Inhabitant and Retailer of Goods in the said Fryers, before the Lord Chief Justice Hardwick, by a special

Jury of Non-freemen, who determined the Cause in Favour of the City, by a Verdict of five Shillings Damage.

This District, being since constituted a Precinct of the Ward of Farringdon within, sends two Members to represent it in the Common Council of this City.

The Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City, to shew their dutiful Zeal and Affection on the Solemnization of the Nuptials of the Prince of Wales, with the Princess of Saxe-Gotha, congratulated their Majesties, and their Royal Highnesses, on the twenty-ninth of April, by their Recorder, as follows:

To the King.

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen
of the City of London most humbly intreat your Majesty's Permission to congratulate your Majesty upon the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

"Your Majesty's paternal Care for the Welfare of your Subjects has been evident upon all Occasions: And your Majesty's approving this Alliance for his Royal Highness, with a Princess of the illustrious House of Saxe-Gotha, confirms the Regard which your Majesty has always shewn for the Support of the Protestant Interest, and the Liberties of Europe; and is a fresh Instance of your Majesty's indulgent Concern for the present and future Prosperity of your People.

"As your Majesty's Subjects have Reason to be sensible of their Happiness under so mild and gracious a Prince; as they are in the full Possession of all their Rights and Liberties, Property secured, Commerce flourishing, Industry encouraged, Peace and Tranquillity at home and abroad; as their present Felicity is owing to your Majesty's Protection and Influence; and the Prospect of the Continuance of it to your Wisdom and Goodness: These your Majesty's most faithful Subjects beg Leave to express their Joy and Acknowledgments with the most grateful Hearts, and to assure your Majesty of their most dutiful and affectionate Regard to your Royal Person; of their zealous Endeavours in their Sphere for the Support of your Majesty's Government; and that they esteem themselves under the highest Obligations to do all in their Power, that your Majesty's Reign may be easy and happy to yourself, as it is an inestimable Blessing to your People."

To which Congratulation, his Majesty returned this Answer:

"I thank you for your Congratulations on this Occasion, and for the Zeal and Concern that you shew for the Prosperity and Support of my Family and Government."

To the Queen.

"May it please your Majesty,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen
of the City of London most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty upon the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of "Your Majesty's promoting the Espousal of his Royal Highness to a Protestant Princess, eminent for her Religion, Virtues and Accomplishments, shew how much your Majesty has at Heart the true Happiness of his Royal Highness, and the Welfare and Prosperity of this Nation.

"Your Majesty is a glorious Instance of the many beneficial and of the lasting good Consequences of such an Alliance; happy is it for the Princess that she has so bright a Pattern to imitate; happy will it be for the Prince and the People, her following so good, so great an Example.

"There is nothing to wish, but that Heaven would bestow on this Royal Pair a Progeny in every Respect resembling those of your Majesty; and that your Majesty may have perfect Health, and live to see, with Joy and Comfort, all the desirable Effects of this happy Union."

To the Prince.

"May it please your Royal Highness.

"The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Royal Highness, on your Marriage with her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. 'Tis an infinite Pleasure to me, Sir, that have the Honour to express to your Royal Highness the joyful Sentiments of these his Majesty's most faithful Subjects upon this happy Occasion.

"'Tis with great Satisfaction they observe your Royal Highness's Felicity accomplished in the most delightful Manner to yourself, and at the same Time yielding the most agreeable View to all his Majesty's Subjects of the Continuance of the many Blessings to future Ages.

"They intreat your Royal Highness's Permission to offer their most ardent Wishes for your Royal Highness's Health and Prosperity; that you may be blessed with a numerous Offspring; that you may have the Satisfaction to see them truly representing your Royal Highness, with the most benevolent Disposition, with the tenderest Humanity, Assertors of Liberty, and Friends to Mankind, with all other those Princely Virtues which gave a Lustre even to your Dignity, and which make your Royal Highness the Favourite of the People, and the hopeful Prospect of the British Nation.

His Royal Highness's Answer.

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

His Answer.

"I thank you for your kind and affectionate Address to me and the Princess; it is a great Pleasure to me, the Joy you shew upon this happy Occasion. You may be assured of my constant Regard for the Trade of the City, and for the Welfare of the whole Nation.

To the Princess.

"May it please your Royal Highness,

Their Address to the Princess of Wales.

"As all his Majesty's Subjects now have an Interest in your Royal Highness's Welfare,

"these presume to tender their most hearty Wishes for your Royal Highness's Prosperity, and that you may have all the Joys this Life can yield.

"And as your Royal Highness cannot fail to complete the Happiness of your Royal Consort, and to attract the most tender and affectionate Returns, may Heaven for ever continue the blissful Union of your Hearts, and all your Years roll on with the most perfect Harmony; may your Royal Highness have the Satisfaction of yielding many endearing Pledges of your mutual Love, and to be endued with all those amiable Qualities and Perfections, which will accomplish the Desires of the Prince your Royal Consort, and that of your Royal Highness, and render you the Object of an universal Admiration."

The Commonalty of London, not a little uneasy at their being postponed in this Affair of Congratulation, applied to the Lord-Mayor to summon a Common Council, that they, at this Time of universal Joy, might also have an Opportunity of paying their hearty Congratulations to their Majesties, the Prince and Princess of Wales; and, in order thereunto, drew up and presented the following most dutiful and loyal Address:

"May it please your Majesty,

"We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly beg Leave to embrace this our first Opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with the illustrious Princess of Saxe-Gotha; a Princess whose early Virtues have received the most glorious Testimony of your Majesty's Approbation.

London Gazette.

The Address of the Common Council to his Majesty.

"Those Virtues, confirmed and improved by the happy Influence of her Majesty's bright Example, will, we doubt not, reflect Honour on your Majesty's Choice; and prove her Royal Highness worthy of the high Station to which she is called.

"With the sincerest Sentiments of Duty and Gratitude, we ascribe these happy Nuptials to your Majesty's paternal Care and Concern for the future, as well as present Happiness and Security of your People.

"What Blessings may we not hope for, from the Alliance of two Houses, which have been so long conspicuous for their steady Adherence to the Protestant Interest, and their glorious Zeal in Defence of Civil and Religious Liberty?

"The Joy we feel on this Occasion can receive Addition only by anticipating the Happiness of our Posterity, to whom these auspicious Nuptials promise a long Continuance of those Blessings, which we thankfully enjoy under your Majesty's most just and gracious Government.

"We beg Leave to express our hearty Wishes, that your Majesty may live to see these Prefaces of your faithful Subjects confirmed by their Royal Highnesses being blessed with a numerous Progeny; and to assure your Majesty, that we shall do every thing in our respective "respective Stations, which may any way contribute to the Ease, Security and Glory of your Majesty's Reign."

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for your dutiful and loyal Address: The Satisfaction you express on the Marriage of my Son, and the Sense you shew of my Care and Concern for the Happiness of my People, are very acceptable to me. The City of London may always depend upon the Continuance of my Favour and Protection."

To the Queen.

"May it please your Majesty,
"The Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Councilmen of the City of London beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with the illustrious Princess of Saxe-Gotha.
"They could not but form the highest Ideas of a Princess recommended by your Majesty, and adopted by our most gracious Sovereign into the Royal Family. It is her Royal Highness's present Honour, to answer those Ideas, to engage the Attention, and command the Veneration of all that approach her. It will be her future Glory to shew the succeeding Age a Copy of the Virtues, which this Alliance will give her Royal Highness Opportunity to observe, and Ambition to imitate.
"May her Royal Highness long enjoy the Advantage of your Majesty's most excellent Pattern, the Nation the Benefit of your Royal Goodness, and latest Posterity the happy Consequences of this auspicious Event."

To the Prince.

To the Prince of Wales.

"May it please your Royal Highness,
"The Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Councilmen of the City of London beg leave to congratulate your Royal Highness on your Marriage with the Princess of Saxe-Gotha.
"The Virtues of an Heir are next in Consequence to those which adorn the Possessor of a Throne; and, by the many great Virtues you have copied from your Royal Father, your Highness is the future Hope of the Nation; and there wanted nothing but a Prospect of Perpetuity to complete their Happiness. Your Royal Highness, by the present happy Alliance, gives them this agreeable View; and their Joy is so much the greater, as it flows from a Princess designed, by every great and engaging Accomplishment, for the Honour of your Royal Highnesses Affection.
"May your Royal Highness long enjoy the present Happiness; and an illustrious Succession of your Royal Race convey the Prosperity of the Nation to remotest Ages."

His Royal Highness's Answer.

"My Lord and Gentlemen,
"Your reiterated Congratulations to me and the Princess are very acceptable to us. I have always had the sincerest Affection for the City:
NUMB. XLVIII.

"But it is greatly increased by all the Marks of Attachment you shew me on this Occasion. I hope you will be persuaded of my constant Regard for the Happiness of the Nation in general, and yours in particular, which has, and always will consist in the Preservation of our Trade and Constitution."

To the Princess.

"May it please your Royal Highness,
"The Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Councilmen of the City of London beg Leave to congratulate your Royal Highness on your Marriage with his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

To the Princess of Wales.

"Your Interest, Madam, is now the same with that of your illustrious Consort: Governed by his Inclinations, you partake of his Regard for the Welfare and Happiness of the People. Permit these his Majesty's faithful Subjects to assure your Royal Highness of the most affectionate Returns.
"May your Royal Highness enjoy that Happiness, which your Alliance to so amiable a Prince, your high Station, and those Virtues which have so eminently distinguished your Highness, conspire to give; and the Blessings we now enjoy, by being governed by the best of Kings, be transmitted by your Royal Highness to after Ages."

Till this Time, the Streets of London were perhaps worse illuminated by Night than those of any other great City, which was intirely owing to bad Management; for the same being lighted by Contract, the Contractors were annually obliged to pay to the City the Sum of six hundred Pounds for the Liberty of lighting the same! A Practice which probably cannot be paralleled, to make an Advantage of a publick Benefit; but, to the Honour of the City, the Lamps are under a much better Regulation at present. Besides, the Contractors were only to receive six Shillings per Annum of every Housekeeper who paid to the Poor; of such whose Houses exceeded the Rent of ten Pounds per Annum; and of those who put out no Lights; for all Persons who hung out a Lanthorn and Candle before their respective Houses, were exempt from paying towards the publick Lamps.

The old Contract for lighting the City by Night.

In Consideration of the Payment of the Sum of six hundred Pounds, and the Exemptions abovementioned, the said Contractors were only obliged to light their Lamps (which were about a thousand in Number) in dark Nights, till twelve o'Clock from Michaelmas to Lady-Day; for those called light Nights, in which they were exempt from lighting, were ten in every Moon, viz. from the sixth Night after the new Moon, till the third after the Full; which was only one hundred and seventeen Nights, which made the whole time of lighting about seven hundred and fifty Hours; which short Space of lighting the Streets gave great Opportunities to Rogues to commit numerous Burglaries, Street Robberies, and other nocturnal Villainies: Wherefore the Lord-Mayor and Common Council, to prevent the like enormous Crimes for the future, judged it necessary to apply to Parliament for a Power to enable them the better to enlighten the Streets, Lanes, &c. of this City. Pursuant to which 'twas enacted, That the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of London be empowered to erect a sufficient Number of such Sort of Glass Lamps as they shall judge proper, to be put up in such Places of the City and Liberty as they shall think fit, to be lighted and kept burning, from the Setting to the Rising of the Sun, throughout the Year.

And, towards defraying the Expences of purchasing and erecting the said Lamps, and the annual Charge of maintaining and repairing the same, the following Rates and Assessments are to be laid, and levied yearly upon the Inhabitants of the several Wards, viz. From the twenty-fifth of March, Anno 1736, every House under the Rent of ten Pounds per Annum, which is charged to the Poor, a Sum not exceeding seven Shillings yearly; of ten to twenty, not exceeding twelve; of twenty to thirty, not exceeding fourteen; of thirty to forty, not exceeding sixteen; of forty and upwards, not exceeding twenty Shillings per Annum.

And, for the more effectual Support of the said Lamps, 'twas likewise enacted, That all Parish-Churches, Cemeteries, Chapels, Meeting-Houses, Schools, Markets, Warehouses and other publick Edifices, (Hospitals excepted) together with some Pieces of void Ground and spacious Places, be severally taxed and assessed in due Proportion, by the Alderman, Deputy and Common-Councilmen of the respective Wards wherein such publick Buildings are situate; which several Assessments are to be paid by the chief Officers thereunto belonging, viz. The Cathedral Church of St. Paul by the Dean and Chapter (but if the said Dean and Chapter shall, at their own Expence, cause the Fence round the said Cathedral Church to be duly lighted for the same Time, by a proportionable Number of the same Sort of Lamps as above mentioned; then, and as long as they shall continue duly to light the said Fence, there shall no Rate nor Assessment be laid on the said Church) Church and Chapel-Wardens, and chief Officers, Masters, Wardens or Governors belonging to the said publick Structures, and the Chamberlain of London for the void Ground and spacious Places, viz. Moor-fields, &c.

And if any Person or Persons shall think him, her, or themselves aggrieved by such Assessment, they may, within the Space of twenty Days, appeal to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen for Redress, whose Decision shall be conclusive.

And, for collecting the Money that shall arise by the said Assessment without Expence, the Deputies and Common-Councilmen of the respective Wards shall yearly, on St. Thomas's Day, at their several Wardmotes, return the Names of six or more substantial Inhabitants of each Ward, two or more of whom, according to the Dimension of the Ward, shall be chosen as Collectors for the ensuing Year; and, as such, shall be sworn before the presiding Officer, to be true and faithful in the Execution of their respective Offices: And in case any Person or Persons so elected shall refuse to officiate, he or they shall respectively forfeit the Sum of ten Pounds, and shall nevertheless be liable to be re-elected into the said Office the Year after! And in case of a second Refusal, shall be liable to the like Penalty! And as often as he or they, in that respect, shall prove refractory.

And, to prevent chusing insufficient Persons into the Office of Collector, it is enacted, That all Embezzlements shall be made good by a Re-assessment on the Inhabitants of such Ward wherein such Defect shall happen; and all Persons refusing to pay their respective Assessments, shall, by a Warrant from the Lord-Mayor, or Alderman of the Ward wherein such Person or Persons reside, be distrained, and their Goods and Chattels sold to make Satisfaction.

And, the more effectually to prevent Embezzlements, the Rates or Assessments are to be collected half-yearly, and the Money paid into the Chamber of London, in such a manner, that no Collector shall at any Time have in his Hands for the Space of ten Days the Sum of fifty Pounds; and every Person offending in this Point, shall forfeit five Pounds. And, to obviate all Frauds, which otherwise might happen, all the Collectors are to pass their Accounts yearly in the Court of Wardmote, on St. Thomas's Day, when they are to produce the Chamberlain of London's Receipts, Cash in Hand, and a List of all such Persons as have neglected or refused to pay their respective Assessments, or have desired to be excused from paying the said Rates or Assessments; all of whom are rendered incapable of voting at divers of the City Elections, in the same manner as those who pay no Scot, nor bear any Lot. And that every Collector, who shall refuse or omit passing his Account at the Time and Place prefixed, shall forfeit the Sum of five Pounds; and also the same Sum for every twenty Days he shall continue refractory.

And, to prevent all Monopolies in setting up and lighting the said Lamps, it is enacted, That the Alderman of each Ward, with the Advice of his Deputy and Common-Councilmen, shall contract and agree for a sufficient Number of Lamps, with Irons and Posts whereon to erect the same; and for lighting, trimming, maintaining and repairing the said Lamps.

And, for the faithful Execution of the Powers abovementioned vested in the several Aldermen and Common-Councilmen, 'tis expressly provided, That none of them, nor any Person or Persons in Trust for them, shall in any manner of way be interested in or about the said Lamps.

And, for the more effectually preventing Frauds by the Collectors, or others concerned in the said Lamps, every Citizen of London is to have free Access to inspect the Accounts thereof in the Chamberlain's Office, without Fee or Reward.

And, for the better securing of the said Lamps, with their respective Furniture, it is enacted, That whatever Person or Persons shall extinguish, break down, or destroy any of the same, every Person so offending shall, for the first Time, forfeit the Sum of twenty Shillings; the second, forty; and the third Time, three Pounds: And when, by Reason of the Poverty of the Offender, the Penalty cannot be immediately had, he, she, or they shall be committed to hard Labour in the House of Correction, for any Time not exceeding three Months, or until such pecuniary Muleet be paid.

And, because of the Difficulty of ascertaining the the exact Expence that will attend the said Lamps, it is enacted, That if, at the Expiration of seven Years, a Surplus shall be found in the Chamber of London, to have arisen from the Money collected on Account of the said Lamps, all such surplus Monies shall be applied either in Aid of the Orphans Fund, or in Abatement or Diminution of the future Taxes.

Though the present Rates for lighting the City by Night do far exceed the former, yet it is to be hoped, that it will answer the End of the Citizens, by not only preventing many Burglaries, Robberies, and other nocturnal Villanies, but likewise to their great Accommodation and Honour, in having the City so nobly illuminated; for, instead of one thousand Lamps, as formerly, the Number at first put up on the new Establishment amounted to four thousand, six hundred, and seventy-nine: But, the same not proving sufficient, a considerable Augmentation has been made in most of the Wards; wherefore the Number of the whole (though not yet sent into the Chamberlain's Office) at present must amount to above five thousand. And the City, instead of being lighted about seven hundred and fifty Hours in a Year, as formerly, 'tis now lighted above five thousand Hours. And as this great Number of Lamps is only for the Use of the City and Liberties thereof, which make but about the fifth Part of the Buildings within the Bill of Mortality; therefore it may be presumed, that the whole Number of publick and private Lamps, within that District, may amount to above fifteen thousand.

At this Time the drinking of Spirituous Liquors was become so excessive among the inferior Sort of People in this City and Suburbs, that many thereof not only destroyed themselves thereby, but the Constitution and Health of others were so debilitated, as to endanger the Loss of a great Part of the Human Species; besides, by that vicious Practice, the Morals of the Populace were debauched to such a Degree, that many of the petty Shops, or Places where those destructive Liquors were sold, were Nurseries of Whores, Thieves, Sodomites, and the most abandoned Miscreants.

For remedying this intolerable and destructive Practice, it was by Parliament enacted, That after the twenty-ninth of September, Anno 1736, no Person whatsoever should presume to sell any Sort of Spirituous Liquors in a less Quantity than two Gallons, without taking a Licence for such Purpose; for which every Retailer was not only annually to pay the Sum of fifty Pounds, but likewise twenty Shillings Duty for every Gallon sold after that Manner. And every Person presuming to sell such Liquors without qualifying himself as aforesaid, is to forfeit for every such Offence the Sum of one hundred Pounds.

And, to prevent all Persons from hawking and vending of Spirituous Liquors, both by Land and Water, every Offender to forfeit the Sum of ten Pounds; and in case the Party offending is incapable of paying the Penalty, he, she, or they are to be committed to hard Labour in the House of Correction for the Space of two Months.

And whereas many Persons by this Act of Parliament will be greatly affected in their Fortunes, it was by the same Authority enacted, That all Persons who have followed the Art and Bullbess of a Distiller for the Space of seven Years, or on the twenty-fifth of March, 1736, were serving Apprentice to the same, should all and every of them have full Liberty to exercise and follow any other Trade or Business in any Part of England, any Law, Charter, Grant, Custom or Usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Company of Sadlers of this City having some time ago had the Honour to present the Freedom of their Company to the Prince of Wales, the City on that Occasion formed a Resolution to compliment his Royal Highness with the Freedom of London. Pursuant to which, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen attended the Prince, on the seventeenth of December, with the said Freedom; when the Recorder, in their Names, addressed him as follows:

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly beseech your Royal Highness, that you would be pleased to vouchsafe your gracious Acceptance of the Freedom of the City.

"Your Royal Highness, condescending to this humble Request, will yield Honour to that whole Body, and to every Member of it.

"And they beg leave to take this Opportunity of assuring your Royal Highness of their dutiful and affectionate Regard, and of their Wishes for your Royal Highness's Health, Welfare and Prosperity."

The Prince's Answer.

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"Though no Ties were wanting to make you dearer to me, yet I receive this as a new Mark of your Duty and Loyalty to the King, and of Affection to me. I am very thankful for your good Opinion, and shall try, in all Times, to deserve it, by my hearty Wishes for the Welfare of your Trade, and my constant Zeal for the Liberty of my Country."

His Royal Highness had no sooner done speaking, than the Chamberlain of London, at the Lord-Mayor's left Hand (the Recorder being on the right) on his Knee, delivered the City Freedom to the Prince: Of which the following is an exact Copy:

"The most high, most potent, and most illustrious Prince, Frederick Lewis, Prince of Great-Britain, Electoral Prince of Brunswick-Lunenborg, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Duke of Edinburgh, Marquis of the Isle of Ely, Earl of Eltham, Earl of Chester, Viscount Launceston, Baron of Renfrew, Baron of Snaudon, Lord of the Isles, Steward of Scotland, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, and one of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council; of his mere Grace and Princely Favour, did the most august City of London the Honour to accept the Freedom thereof; and was admitted of the Company of the Sadlers, in the Time of the Right Honourable Sir John Thompson, Knight, Lord-Mayor,

" The Record of which benevolent Condescension is entered in the Book signed with the Letter U of the purchasing of Freedoms, and the Admissions of Freemen, (to wit) on the seventeenth day of December, in the tenth Year of the Reign of our most gracious Sovereign Lord, George the Second, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith.

Bakers Petition.

On Tuesday the second of March, a Petition of the Master and Wardens of the Company of Bakers of the City of London, on Behalf of themselves, and the rest of the Bakers within the Bills of Mortality, was presented to the House, and read; setting forth, " That the Meal-weighers, who were officers appointed to bring in the Prices of Wheat to the Magistrates, in order to fix the Affize of Bread in the City of London, made their Cockets or Returns of the Prices of three different Kinds of Wheat, as sold at the Market of Bear-key only; from which three Prices of Wheat the Affize of three Sorts of Bread, distinguished by the Names of White, Wheaten, and Household, was always ascertained: And that the best Kind of Wheat at Bear-key was generally sold in Parcels, with Wheat of an inferior Quality, at one common Price; so that the Meal-weighers were not able to distinguish the true and real Price of the best Kind of Wheat: And that the first Sort of Bread in the Affize-table, distinguished by the Name of White-bread, being that Kind of Bread commonly called French Rolls, was of late years greatly improved; and in making such White-bread the Petitioners used only the finest Part of the Flour, produced from the choicest Kind of Wheat, collected not from Bear-key only, but from all the adjacent Markets; and even such selected Wheat afforded but a very small Quantity of that Sort of Flour, which was also used in making the finest Kind of Paste: And that, although the finest Sort of Wheat mentioned in the Cockets of the Meal-weighers was not of a Quality fine enough to make the first Sort of Bread, called White-bread, yet the Affize of such White-bread was fixed from the Price of the first Sort of Wheat inserted in those Cockets: And that the second Sort of Bread in the Affize-table, distinguished by the Name of Wheaten-bread, which was the best Kind of large Bread, wherewith the Families within the City of London, and Bills of Mortality, were daily served, was made intirely of the first Sort of Wheat mentioned in the Cockets of the Meal-weighers; and the second Sort of Wheat mentioned in those Cockets, was not of a sufficient Goodness to make such Wheaten-bread; nevertheless the Affize of that Wheaten-bread was ascertained according to the Price of that second Sort of Wheat, as returned by the Meal-weighers: And that the Petitioners apprehend, that the Affize of Wheaten-bread

" ought to be settled according to the Price of the first Sort of Wheat, mentioned in the Cockets of the Meal-weighers, being the very Grain of which the Wheaten-bread was made; and that the Affize of the White-bread ought to be advanced in Proportion: And that, although the Expences, attending the Trade and Business of the Petitioners, were very greatly increased since the making of the Table of Affize, yet they had had no Allowance in respect to such Increase of Expences: And that, by these Means, much the greatest Number of the Petitioners were reduced to very low Circumstances; and the most considerable among them, notwithstanding all their Pains, Application, and Frugality, found their Substance daily diminishing: And therefore praying the House to give Leave, that a Bill might be brought in for explaining and amending the Laws then in Being, for regulating the Price and Affize of Bread, or to give such other Relief to the Petitioners in the Premises, as to the House should seem meet."

This Petition having been referred to the Consideration of a Committee, and that Committee having, on the twelfth, made a favourable Report, a Bill was then ordered to be brought in for giving a proper Relief to the Petitioners; which was accordingly soon after brought in, and passed both Houses without Opposition.

On the same Day, the second of March, 1736, the People called Quakers, imagining themselves aggrieved by Prosecutions for Tithes, presented a Petition to the House of Commons; setting forth, " That notwithstanding the several Acts of Parliament made for the more easy Recovery of Tithes, Church-Rates, Oblations, and other Ecclesiastical Dues, in a summary Way, by Warrant from Justices of the Peace; yet, as the said People conscientiously refused the Payment thereof, they were not only liable to, but many of them had undergone grievous Sufferings, by Prosecutions in the Exchequer, Ecclesiastical, and other Courts, to the Imprisonment of their Persons, and the Impoverishing and Ruin of them and their Families, for such small Sums as were recoverable by those Acts; and therefore praying, that the House would be pleased to take the Premises into Consideration, and afford them such Relief therein, as to the House should seem meet."

Whereupon it was ordered, that Leave should be given to bring in a Bill to enlarge, amend, and render more effectual the Laws then in Being, for the more easy Recovery of Tithes, Church-Rates, Oblations, and other Ecclesiastical Dues from the People called Quakers; and that Mr. Glanville, Mr. Secretary at War, Mr. Henry Arber, and Mr. Hampden, should prepare and bring in the same.

The said Bill was accordingly presented to the House by Mr. Glanville, on Wednesday the seventeenth of March, and being then read the first Time, and ordered a second Reading, the same was ordered to be Printed.

The same Day, a Petition of several of the Parochial Clergy of the County of Middlesex was presented to the House, and read on the twenty-sixth; which Petition alledged, " That the Bill then depending

"depending in that House, to enlarge, amend, and render more effectual, &c. would, as the Petitioners conceived, if passed into a Law, be extremely prejudicial to themselves and Brethren, excluding them from the Benefit of the Laws then in Being for the Recovery of Tithes and other Dues, and thereby putting the Clergy of the Established Church upon a worse Foot than the rest of his Majesty's Subjects; and therefore desired to be heard by their Counsel upon the Subject-Matter of the said Bill, before it passed into a Law."

This Petition was ordered to lie upon the Table, until the said Bill should be read a second Time; and that the Petitioners, if they thought fit, should be then heard by their Counsel against the said Bill: Then it was ordered, that Counsel should be admitted to be heard for the Bill at the same Time; and that the Bill should be read a second Time upon that Day Sevensnight.

Many other Petitions of the Clergy from all Parts of England, against the Bill, were presented, and all received as the first.

Bill read a second time.

The second Reading of the said Bill having been put off to Monday the twelfth of April, after reading the Order of the Day for that Purpose, the Counsel for and against the Bill were called in; and the Bill being then read a second Time, and the several Petitioners abovementioned being also read, the Counsel for the Petitioners of the Province of Canterbury were heard, in Answer to whom the Counsel for the Bill were heard; and then the Counsel for the Petitioners of the Province of York were heard by way of Reply: After which, the Counsel being withdrawn, Mr. Speaker opened the Bill to the House; and then a Motion being made, that the fourteenth Section of an Act made in the twenty-second and twenty-third Years of the Reign of King Charles II. intitled, An Act for the better Settlement of the Maintenance of Parsons, Vicars and Curates in the Parishes of the City of London, burnt by the dreadful Fire there, might be read; the same was read accordingly.

The Reason, as may be supposed, for reading this was, because by a Clause in the Bill, even as it then stood, it was proposed to be enacted thus, "That if the annual Value of such Tithes, Oblations, and other Ecclesiastical Dues, Rights, Payments, or Church-Rates before-mentioned, doth not, nor shall not exceed the Sum of _____ in such Case, no Quaker or Quakers shall be sued or prosecuted, for, or on account of the same, in any other Manner than as before directed, or in any other Court; neither shall any such Tithes, Oblations, or other Ecclesiastical Dues, Rights, Payments, or Church-Rates, not exceeding the said yearly Value of _____ be recoverable against Quakers in any other Court whatsoever, nor in any other Manner, than as by this Act is directed; unless the Title of such Tithes be in Question." This Clause, in all the Petitions presented by the Clergy against the Bill, was called An excluding them from the Benefit of the Laws then in Being for the Recovery of Tithes and other Dues, and thereby putting the Clergy of the Established Church, upon a worse Foot than the rest of his Majesty's Subjects; therefore the said Section was read, in order to show that the assigning of a proper Method for the Recovery of any Right, and excluding the Persons intitled, from any other Remedy, was not a putting of such Persons upon a worse Foot than the rest of his Majesty's Subjects, nor was it without Precedent; for, by the aforesaid Act of King Charles II. all Suits for the Recovering of Church-Rates or Assessments, within the City of London, are to be brought before the Lord-Mayor, or, upon his Neglect to execute the Powers thereby granted, before the Lord Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great Seal, or two Barons of the Exchequer; and, by the said fourteenth Section, it is enacted, That no Court or Judge shall hold Plea of Money due by Virtue of that Act, either than the Persons thereby authorized; and yet the Clergy of London never had complained, nor could complain, that they were excluded from the Benefit of the Laws of their Country, or that they were put upon a worse Foot than the rest of his Majesty's Subjects.

After reading the aforesaid Section, a Motion was made for committing the Bill, upon which there ensued a long Debate, and upon putting the Question for committing the Bill, it was, upon a Division, carried in the Affirmative, by two hundred twenty-one to eighty-four, and ordered accordingly; after which it was resolved, that the Bill should be committed to a Committee of the whole House.

Bill committed.

On the twenty-first of April, the House, according to Order, resolved itself into a Committee upon the said Bill; when very great Alterations and Amendments were made to every Clause; and it was proposed to leave, to every Person entitled to Tithes, an Option to sue for the Recovery of them, either before the Justices of the Peace, as directed by that Bill, or before any of his Majesty's Courts in Westminster-Hall; but as this seemed to be inconsistent with the Preamble of the Bill, and with the Intention of the whole, it was strenuously opposed, and upon the Question's being put, it was, upon a Division, carried in the Negative, by two hundred and two to ninety-six; after which they went through the Bill, and directed Colonel Bladen (who was in the Chair) to report their Amendments, when the House should please to receive the same.

On the thirtieth, the said Amendments were, according to Order, reported to the House, when they were all, with Amendments to some of them, agreed to; and a Clause was added, and an Amendment made by the House to the Bill. Then a Motion was made for ordering it to be Ingrossed, upon which there was a new Debate; but upon the Question's being put, it was, upon a Division, carried in the Affirmative, by one hundred and sixty to sixty.

Reported.

This Bill met with further Opposition in the Commons House; but, notwithstanding all the Efforts of the Ecclesiastick Body of the Nation, they were not able to prevent its passing to the House of Lords, and even there it was with great Difficulty thrown out.

Thrown out.

The Princess of Wales being brought to-bed on the thirtieth of July, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City repaired to Hampton-Court, where the Recorder, in their Name, addressed his Majesty as follows:

Most Gracious Sovereign,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly intreat your Majesty's Permission to congratulate your Majesty upon the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, and the Birth of a Princess.

"These your Majesty's most faithful and dutiful Subjects, having a just Sense of the many Blessings they enjoy under your Majesty's Protection, rejoice at any Good attending your Royal Family, and have a real Satisfaction by this Addition to it.

"Every Branch of your illustrious Race must be dear and valuable to your Majesty's Subjects, as it gives them a pleasing Prospect of the Continuance of that Happiness which your Royal House has secured to the Nation.

"We wish that all your Majesty's Subjects were truly sensible of their Felicity; they would then acknowledge, that they are in the full Possession of their Liberties and Properties; that they are governed by Laws of their own making, under a mild and gracious Prince, who makes those Laws the Rule of his Actions. Happy is the Lot of such a People!

"These, Sir, being our humble Sentiments, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that you may depend on the most hearty Endeavours, in our Sphere, to promote a dutiful and affectionate Regard to your Royal Person and Government, and a zealous Attachment to the Protestant Succession in your Family."

"Every thing which brings Joy and Comfort to your Majesty must give a true Satisfaction to all his Majesty's Subjects. Your Majesty's constant and indulgent Regard for their Welfare, upon all Occasions, demands their most dutiful and grateful Return on their Part.

"These his Majesty's most faithful Subjects presume to tender their humble Acknowledgments, and to express their Joy upon this happy Occasion.

"The Addition of a Princess to your Royal Family yields them the agreeable Hope of another Pattern of Virtue and Goodness to be formed by your Majesty's pious Instructions: They beg leave to offer their hearty Wishes for Prosperity to your Majesty, and every Branch of your Royal Family; that they may be happy themselves, and give Happiness to others; that they may prove a Blessing to Nations, and in that and every other respect resemble your Majesty, and imitate your Royal Example."

To the Prince of Wales.

May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London having early paid their Duty to their Royal Sovereign, and to her Majesty, upon the Birth of a Princess; and, if it had then been convenient, they would then have humbly begged leave to congratulate your Royal Highness upon so happy an Occasion:

"They now, by your Royal Highness's Permission, presume to express their joyful Sentiments on so fortunate an Event: Fortunate, not only as it has given your Royal Highness this your first-born Princess, but as it yields most probable Hopes of many more Descendants from such illustrious Parents, and a most agreeable Prospect to all his Majesty's Subjects, of the Continuance of those many Blessings which they have so long enjoyed under the Influence and Protection of your Royal House.

"Your Royal Highness having done the highest Honour to the City of London, by most graciously condescending to become a Member of that Body, and having on many Occasions given evident Marks of your Royal Highness's Good-Will towards them;

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen beg leave to take this Opportunity of renewing their most grateful Acknowledgments, assuring your Royal Highness of their hearty Wishes for your Royal Highness's Welfare and Prosperity, and that they are devoted to your Royal Highness's true Interest and Service, being sincerely attached to the Protestant Succession in your Royal Highness, and your Royal Family."

To the Princess of Wales.

May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen humbly beg leave to address themselves to your Royal Highness with their most hearty Congratulations upon your safe Delivery, on the Birth of the Princess, and the Re-establishment of your Health. Your Royal Issue, Madam, will ever be dear to these his Majesty's most faithful Subjects. They now entertain the pleasing Hopes, that many amiable Qualities, Graces and Virtues, derived to the Princess from your Royal Highness, will make her in due Time an Ornament to a Throne, and a Blessing to the World. They presume to add their most ardent Wishes, that your Royal Highness may prove the glorious Instrument of Providence, by yielding a numerous Progeny, to be the Supporters of the Protestant Religion and British Liberty; and that your Royal Highness may always find in Life, true Joy, lasting Comfort, and solid Happiness."

To which the Prince made this Answer:

My Lord and Gentlemen,

"I return you my Thanks, and those of the Princess, for the Share you take in this Increase of the King's Family; and assure you, that whatever children God may bless me with, I will infuse into them Sentiments agreeable to the

Fleet-Ditch covered and turned into a Market.

The ancient Watercourse of the Fleet Rivulet, since denominated Turnmill Brook, having for divers Ages cost great Sums of Money to keep it navigable, by frequent cleansing, which proving very burdensome to the Citizens, it was at last neglected, whereby it soon became so choaked with Mud and Filth, as to be rendered unnavigable, (though, by an Anchor found some time ago at Black Mary's Hole, it may be presumed, that its Navigation extended so far, if not, as commonly reported, to St. Pancras's, where, according to Tradition, an Anchor was likewise found) on which Occasion it justly received the opprobrious Appellation of Fleet-Ditch; in which piteous Condition it continued till the great Conflagration Anno 1666. But, by an Act of Parliament for re-building the City of London, it was appointed to be restored to its ancient State of Navigation as far as Holborn-Bridge. And, by Virtue of the said Act, the Work was begun in the Year 1668, and finished in November 1673. The Length of the Canal being two thousand and one hundred Feet; in Breadth, forty; and in Depth of Water, at the upper End, by a middling Tide, five Feet: It is bounded on each Side by a strong Brick Wall, wherein were built spacious Vaults, as so many Repositories for Sea-coals: The Wharfs on each Side, which were thirty-five Feet in width, were strongly supported by the said Wall and Vaults; and the whole Charge of Sinking, Clearing, Leveling, Wharfing, Planking, Piling, Paving, Posting and Railing of the said Watercourse, amounted to twenty-seven thousand, seven hundred and seventy-seven Pounds; besides the Money laid out in purchasing of Ground on both Sides for enlarging the said Canal and Wharfs.

But this new and spacious Canal filling with Mud and Dirt as formerly, the Charge of cleansing it above Fleet-Bridge amounted to more than its annual Produce; wherefore it was again neglected, and the Rails on each Side being decayed, many Persons perished, by falling therein by Night, and Beasts by Day; so that it was become a very great and dangerous Nuisance; as is set forth in the Preamble to the Act: Which occasioned the City to apply to Parliament (in 1733) for a Power to arch over and level that Part of it above Fleet-Bridge; which was granted in this Form: "It shall and may be lawful to and for the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City of London, and their Successors, and they are hereby impowered, within the Space of three Years next ensuing the End of this present Session of Parliament, at their own Expence, to fill up all or any Part of the said Canal of Bridewell-Dock, and Fleet-Ditch, lying between the two Bridges before mentioned, and to make the Surface or Top of the Soil or new Ground (wherewith such Part of the said Canal shall be filled up in pursuance of this Act) even and level with the Surface or Superficies of the Streets or Passages now on

"each Side of, and running parallel with, that Part of the said Canal so intended to be filled up as aforesaid.

"And be it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That the Fee-simple and Inheritance of, in, and to the said Ditch and Ground, where the same shall be so filled, shall, from and after the filling the same, be, and hereby are, vested in the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City of London for the Time being, and their Successors for ever; who are hereby authorized and impowered, from Time to Time, to appropriate and apply the same to such Uses and Purposes as they and their Successors shall think proper and convenient for the Benefit and Advantage of the said City, any thing in the said in part recited Act contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

And the Fee-simple of the Ground thereof vested in them and their Successors for ever.

"Provided always, and it is hereby further enacted, That the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City of London, shall, at their own Expence, at the Time of the filling up the said Canal as aforesaid, make, erect, and build a good and sufficient Drain or Drains, Sewer or Sewers, in and through the said Canal, of convenient Depth, and from Time to Time cleanse and repair the same, so that the Shores and Rivulets, that are discharged into the said Canal, may without any Obstruction be carried and conveyed into the River of Thames.

Sufficient Drains to be made.

"Provided always, and it is hereby further declared and enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That nothing in this Act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to impower the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City of London for the Time being, or any Person or Persons holding or claiming under them, at any Time hereafter, to erect or cause to be erected any dwelling House or Houses, Sheds, or other Buildings whatsoever, exceeding fifteen Feet in Height, from the Level of the Ground to the Pitch of the Roof, on that Part of the said Ditch so to be filled up as aforesaid; saving to the King's most Excellent Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors, and to all and every Person and Persons, Bodies Politick and Corporate, his, her, and their Heirs, Successors, Executors, and Administrators, all such Estate, Right, Title, Inheritance, Claims, and Demands, of, in, to, and out of the Premises, hereby vested in the said Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, as they, every, or any of them, had before the passing this Act, or might have had and enjoyed, in case this Act had not been made.

No Houses or Sheds to be erected thereon exceeding fifteen Feet in Height.

"And be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be taken and deemed as a Publick Act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such, by all Judges, Justices, and other Persons whatsoever, without specially pleading the same."

Saving Clause to any Person interested in the Premises.

The Work was begun about the Beginning of March, Anno 1734, and two spacious Arches of ten Feet high, and six wide, as Common-Sewers, were finished and levelled over by Michaelmas's, following: And a fine Market-House, with other other Conveniences, being since thereon erected, the said Place, by the Name of the Fleet-Market, was opened on the thirtieth of September, in the Year 1737.

Over this Canal were four handsome Stone Bridges; those of Holborn, the Fleet and Bridewell remaining as common Highways, whilst that of Fleet-Lane was obliged to make way for the new Market.

The Citizens of London not having a sufficient Authority for the establishing, ordering, or well-governing of the City Watch, or for levying and collecting Money for defraying the Charge thereof, they therefore applied to Parliament, in the preceding Spring, for a Power to enable them to regulate the said Watch, for the more effectual preventing Fires, Murders, Burglaries, Robberies, and other nocturnal Outrages and Disorders in the City.

For which Purpose it was by the Parliament enacted, "That the Common Council of London

*Act Parl.
9 Geo. II.*

*Act for re-
the Watch.*

"shall, from Year to Year, be empowered to appoint such a Number of Beadles and Watchmen for the several Wards of the City, and Liberties thereof, as they shall judge necessary, to order the arming of them, to appoint the Time they are to watch, to ascertain their Wages, and to appoint the Number of Constables that shall attend in each of the said Wards.

"And, for raising of Money for defraying the Charge of the said Watch, the said Common Council is empowered to ascertain the several Sums to be raised in the respective Wards, which are to be assessed by the Aldermen and Common-Councilmen thereof respectively, and to be collected quarterly by the Constables of the several Precincts, or the Beadles of the said Wards; and every Person that shall neglect or refuse to pay the Sum he shall be assessed at, the same shall be levied by Distress, by a Warrant under the Hand and Seal of the Lord-Mayor; and, in want of Distress, the Party or Parties, by the like Warrant, to be committed to one of the Counters, there to remain in Prison for the Space of a Month, or until the Payment thereof: And in case any Person shall find himself aggrieved by any Rate or Assessment, he may appeal within twenty Days to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, whose Decision therein shall be final.

"And, by the Authority aforesaid, the Aldermen and Common-Councilmen of the several Wards are empowered to nominate and chuse such honest and able-bodied Men to be employed as Watchmen in their respective Wards, to appoint their several Stands, how often they shall go their Rounds, and to make Orders for their Government, which are to be delivered to the Constables of the several Precincts, who, together with the said Watchmen, are to watch from the tenth of March to the tenth of September, from the Hours of Ten in the Evening till Five in the Morning; and from the tenth of September to the tenth of March, from Nine in the Evening till Seven in the Morning. And the said Constables shall nightly (at least) go twice about their respective

"Wards, to see that the several Watchmen perform their Duties; and in case any of the said Constables shall neglect to attend to watch in his Turn, or shall leave his Duty during the Hours above-mentioned, he shall, for every such Offence, forfeit the Sum of twenty Shillings.

"It is likewise enacted, That every Person, duly appointed a Collector of the Watch-Money, that shall refuse to serve, shall not only forfeit the Sum of ten Pounds, but likewise be liable to be appointed to the said Office in the succeeding Year; and, in case of Non-servitude or Death, the Alderman or Common-Councilmen of such Ward may appoint another to officiate; and, in case the Person so appointed refuses to serve, he shall be liable to the Penalties above-named.

And it was thereby further enacted, "That all and every the Collector or Collectors of the Rates and Assessments aforesaid of every Ward, shall collect the same quarterly; and shall severally enter in some Book or Books, to be by them respectively kept for that Purpose, the several Sums which they shall from Time to Time receive on account of the said Rates and Assessments, and likewise the Names of the Persons from whom, and the particular Times when, they received the same; which Book and Books they shall at all convenient Times produce upon Demand, and shew to the Deputy or Deputies of their respective Wards; and they shall pay the Money by them respectively received, on account of the said Rates and Assessments, into the Hands of such Deputy, as he or they shall receive the same, and in such Manner, as that such Collector shall never have a Sum exceeding five Pounds so collected at one Time in his or their Hands, by the Space of five Days; and, if any of the said Collectors shall neglect to make such Entries, or shall refuse to produce and shew to the Deputy of their respective Wards the Book or Books hereby directed to be by them respectively kept for the Purposes aforesaid, (the same having been demanded of them) or if any of them shall keep or retain in his or their Hands more than the said Sum of five Pounds, longer than five Days, in each and every the said Cases, the Person or Persons so offending, shall respectively forfeit the Sum of forty Shillings for every such Offence; and, on Payment of every such Sum of Money into the Hands of such Deputy of each Ward, such Collector or Collectors shall take a Receipt for the same from the said Deputy, in which Receipt shall be specified and expressed the Name of such Collector or Collectors, the Sum paid, and the Name of the Precinct and Ward wherein the Money hath been collected; and the respective Deputies for the Time being shall be obliged, and he and they is and are hereby required to give such Receipt without Fee or Reward; and such Receipts shall, by the Collector or Collectors, be produced to the Alderman of the Ward, at the Time he and they shall settle and adjust his and their yearly Accompt and Accompts, and shall by the said Alderman be taken and allowed as a full and sufficient Discharge for all and every such Sum

"and Sums of Money such Collectors shall have "received and paid to such Deputies respectively,
 "as aforesaid; and the said several Collectors
 "shall, within twenty Days next after the End
 "of every three Months, after their severally
 "taking upon themselves the said Office of a Col"lector, produce and deliver to the Alderman of "the said Ward, or such Person as he shall ap"point to receive the same, the Book and Books
 "in which they entered the Sums by them severally
 "received on account of the said Rates;
 "and shall at the same Time give and deliver to
 "the said Alderman, or such Person as he shall "appoint to receive the same, a true Account in "Writing of all such Persons as shall have neg"lected or refused to pay the said Rates and "Assessments, to the Intent that the same may "afterwards be recovered and levied.
 "And, to the End that the Payment of the "said Rates and Assessments for the Purposes
 "aforesaid may be effectually enforced, be it
 "further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid,
 "That every Freeman of London, liable to pay
 "the Rates and Assessments aforesaid, who shall "have neglected or refused to pay the said Rates
 "and Assessments to the Person or Persons au"thorized and empowered to collect and receive "the same, (the same having been lawfully de"manded) or shall have desired to be excused "from paying such Rates and Assessments, shall "be under the same Incapacity of voting at "Elections within the said City of London, as any "Person or Persons now is or are, who do not "pay their Scot and Lot to the several yearly "Rates and Taxes, to which the Citizens of Lon"don are at this Time liable.
 "And be it further enacted, by the Authority
 "aforesaid, That the Deputy of each Ward of "the said City for the Time being shall and
 "may, and he is hereby authorized and required,
 "to pay all and singular the Orders and Draughts
 "on him to be made by the Alderman of such "Ward, with the Advice of the major Part of "the Common-Councilmen of each Ward re"spectively, in Discharge of the Watchmen and "Beadles, and other incident Charges in relation "to the watching of such Ward, in Pursuance of "this Act; and the said respective Deputies of "the Wards for the Time being shall, and are "hereby required to keep regular and plain En"tries, in a Book to be for that Purpose by them
 "severally provided, of all and singular the Re"ceipts and Payments they shall make, on ac"count of the nightly Watch and Beadles, within "their respective Wards as aforesaid, and other "Charges incident thereto; which Books shall "be produced yearly at the Wardmote in each "Ward, if required: And also that the Deputies "respectively for the Time being shall have the "same Account audited and passed, between "the first Day of February and the first Day of "March, yearly, by the Alderman and the major "Part of the Common-Councilmen of each Ward,
 "in which the Money so to be accounted for shall
 "be collected.
 "And be it further enacted, by the Authority
 "aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to
 "and for the Lord-Mayor for the Time being,
 "or any two or more Justices of the Peace for

"the said City, to hear and determine any of the "Offences, which are made subject to, and "punishable by, any pecuniary Penalties directed "to be levied by this Act: And the said Lord-"Mayor, or such Justices of the Peace, are "hereby authorized and required, upon any In"formation exhibited, or Complaint made in "that Behalf, within ten Days after such Offence
 "committed, to summon the Party or Parties "accused, and the Witnesses on either Side; and "in case the said Party or Parties accused shall "not appear on such Summons, (and after Oath
 "made of the Commission of any the Offences
 "above-mentioned, by one or more credible
 "Witness or Witnesses) to issue a Warrant or "Warrants for apprehending the Party or Parties
 "offending in the said City of London; and upon "the Appearance of the Party or Parties accused,
 "or his or their Contempt in not appearing,
 "upon the Proof of Notice given, to proceed to "the Examination of the Witness or Witnesses "upon Oath, (which Oath he or they are hereby "authorized, empowered, and required to ad"minister) and to give such Judgment, Sen"tence, or Determination, as shall be just and "conformable to the Tenor and true Meaning of "this Act; and where the Party or Parties ac"cused shall be convicted of such Offence, either
 "upon such Information as aforesaid, or on Con"fession of the Party or Parties accused, it shall
 "and may be lawful for such Lord-Mayor or "Justices to issue a Warrant or Warrants, for "levying the pecuniary Penalties and Forfeitures
 "so adjudged, on the Goods and Chattels of the "Offender or Offenders, and to cause Sale to be "made thereof in case they shall not be redeemed
 "in five Days, rendering to the Party or Parties
 "the Overplus, (if any there be) after deducting
 "the reasonable Charges of such Distress and Sale
 "upon Demand; and in case any Person or Per"sons shall be so convicted as aforesaid, and no
 "Goods or Chattels of such Person or Persons so "offending can at the Time of such Conviction
 "be found, then, and in such Case, it shall and "may be lawful to and for the Lord-Mayor, or "Justices of the Peace before whom such Per"son or Persons shall be convicted, as aforesaid,
 "to commit such Offender or Offenders to the "House of Correction, there to be kept to hard "Labour, for any Time not exceeding the Space
 "of three Months, or until such pecuniary Pe"nalty or Penalties shall be paid.
 "Provided nevertheless, That it shall and may "be lawful to and for such Lord-Mayor, or "Justices of the Peace, from Time to Time,
 "(where they see Cause) to mitigate, compound,
 "or lessen any of the said Forfeitures or Penalties,
 "as he or they in their Discretion shall think fit,
 "(so as such Mitigation do not extend to remit
 "above one Moiety of the Penalty or Penalties "inflicted and directed to be levied by this "Act) and every such Mitigation shall be a "sufficient Discharge to the Person offending "respectively, for so much of the said Penalty or "Forfeiture as shall be so lessened, mitigated, or "remitted.
 "Provided also, That if any Person or Persons "shall find him, her, or themselves aggrieved,
 "or remain unsatisfied in the Judgment of the “ said Lord-Mayor or Justices, then such Person “ or Persons shall and may, by Virtue of this “ Act, complain or appeal to the Justices of the “ Peace at the next Quarter-Sessions to be held “ for the said City of London; who are hereby “ empowered and required to summon and exa“ mine Witnesses upon Oath, and finally to “ hear and determine the same; and, in case of “ Conviction, to issue a Warrant or Warrants for “ levying and compelling, by such Means as “ aforesaid, the Payment of the said Penalties “ and Forfeitures.

“ And it is hereby further enacted, by the Au“ thority aforesaid, That all the Penalties to be “ levied by Virtue of this Act shall be paid and “ applied in Manner following; that is to say, “ one Moiety thereof to the Person or Persons “ who shall inform and prosecute for the same,
 “ and the other Moiety to the Alderman of the “ Ward where such Offence shall be committed, “ to be by him paid and applied for and towards “ defraying the Charges and Expences of the “ nightly Watch and Beadles, and other Charges “ incident thereto, within such Ward.

“ Provided always, and be it further enacted, “ That in case there should be any Deficiency in “ any one Year's Rate or Assessment so to be “ made as aforesaid, in any of the Wards within “ the said City or Liberties thereof, either by “ Houses, Shops, Warehouses, Buildings, or “ other Tenements, being empty, or by the In“ solvency or Removal of any of the Inhabitants, “ Tenants, Occupiers, or otherwise, for which “ or upon whom such Rates and Assessments are “ respectively charged or chargeable by this Act, “ so that the Wages and Allowances to Watch“ men and Beadles, and other incident Charges, “ cannot be fully satisfied, paid, and discharged “ in that Year; then, and in such Case, the De“ ficiency so happening in the said Ward, shall “ be paid out of the next succeeding Year's Rate “ and Assessment; and if there shall happen to be “ any surplus Money collected by such Rates “ and Assessments as aforesaid, in any of the “ said Wards in any one Year, such Surplus “ shall be carried on to the Credit of the Ac“ count of the next Year's Rate and Assessment, “ and shall be applied for such Uses and in such “ Manner as the Rates and Assessments collected “ in such Ward are, by this Act, directed to be “ laid out and applied, and to no other Use or “ Purpose whatsoever.

“ And whereas many Houses in several of the “ Wards of the said City are, by the several “ Landlords or Owners thereof, let out in Lodg“ ings or Tenements to divers Tenants, whereby “ it will be difficult to rate and assess such “ Houses, or to recover such Rates and Assess-

 “ shall refuse to pay the same, then the said Rate “ and Assessment shall be levied by Distress and “ Sale of the Goods of him, her, or them so re“ fusing to pay the same; which Distress and “ Sale shall be made in like Manner as Distresses “ and Sales of the Goods of other Parties neg“ lecting or refusing to pay the Rates and As“ sessments imposed, and directed to be imposed, “ by Virtue of this Act, are directed to be made;
 “ and such Occupier and Occupiers of such Te-

 “ pay such Sum and Sums of Money as shall be “ so rated, imposed, or assessed on the Owner or “ Owners thereof, in Pursuance of this Act, and “ to deduct the same out of the Rent thereof;
 “ and the Landlord, or Owner or Owners thereof, “ are hereby required to allow such Deductions “ and Payments upon Receipt of the Residue of “ their Rents; and every Tenant paying such “ Assessment or Assessments shall be acquitted
 “ and discharged for so much Money as the said “ Assessment or Assessments shall amount unto, “ as if the same had been actually paid to such “ Person or Persons to whom his, her, or their “ Rent should have been due or payable.

“ Provided always, and it is hereby enacted “ and declared, That no Person or Persons who “ shall be rated and assessed, and pay to any Rate “ and Assessment to be made in Pursuance of this “ Act, shall be liable to any Watch or Ward, “ by Virtue of the Statute commonly called “ the Statute of Winchester, made in the thir“ teenth Year of King Edward the First, or any “ other subsequent Statutes relating thereto, but “ shall be, and are hereby discharged of and “ from the same.

“ And whereas by an Act of Parliament made “ and passed in the twenty-second and twenty-“ third Years of the Reign of his late Majesty “ King Charles the Second, intituled, An Act for “ the better paving and cleansing the Streets and “ Sewers in and about the City of London, it is en“ acted, (amongst other Things) That, from “ thenceforth, the sole Power and Authority of “ ordering, designing, and regulating of the “ pitching and paving all the Streets, Lanes, and “ Passages whatsoever, within the said City and “ Liberties, with the Order and Manner thereof, “ should be and remain in the Mayor, Common“ alty, and Citizens of the said City, to be exe-“ Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Coun“ cil assembled, should be appointed, or by any “ seven or more of them, being all Members of “ the said Court; and it is also thereby further “ enacted, That, for the better enabling the said “ Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, to per“ form the Works by the said Statute appointed “ to be done, and for defraying the Charge “ thereof,

" thereof, it should be lawful for the said Persons
 " so to be authorized, or any seven of them, as " often as Need should be, to impose any rea" sonable Tax or Assessment, as well upon the " Tenants and Occupiers, as also upon the Own" ers of Houses, Shops, or other Tenements or
 " Hereditaments, whereof there should be no
 " present Occupier, to be levied by Distress and " Sale of the Goods of the Parties refusing or " neglecting to pay, as by the said Act more " fully may appear; but, inasmuch as it fre" quently happens, that no Distress can be found " upon Ground, Houses, Shops, or Tenements,
 " that lie vacant or untenanted, whereby the ne" cessary Taxes or Assessments for paving the " Streets, Lanes, or Passages, lying before such " vacant Ground, Houses, Shops, or Tene" ments, cannot be levied, by reason whereof
 " such Part of the said Streets, Lanes, and Pas" sages often remains unpaved, to the great Nu-
 " sance of the Publick; for Remedy whereof, be
 " it enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That,
 " from and after the twenty-fourth Day of June,
 " one thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven,
 " it shall and may be lawful for the said
 " Persons now authorized, or hereafter to be au" thorized, by Virtue of the said Statute as afore" said, or any seven or more of them, to order
 " such Parts of the respective Streets, Lanes,
 " and Passages, as lie before such vacant or un-
 " tenanted Ground, Houses, Shops, or Tene-
 " ments, as often as Need shall be, to be well
 " and sufficiently paved, cleansed, and amended,
 " and to impose such Tax or Assessment on the " Owner or Owners thereof, as shall be neces" sary for the doing the same; all which Taxes " and Assessments shall be paid, for and upon the " Account of such Owner or Owners thereof, by " him, her, or them, who shall from Time to " Time be the next and first Occupier or Occu" piers of such Ground, Houses, Shops, or Tene" ments, after the making or imposing such
 " Tax or Assessment; and in case such Occupier
 " or Occupiers shall refuse to pay the same, then
 " the said Taxes and Assessments shall be levied
 " by Distress and Sale of the Goods and Chattels " of him, her, or them, so refusing to pay the " same: Which Distress and Sale shall be made " in such Manner as Distresses and Sales thereof
 " are directed to be made by the said Statute;
 " and all and every such first Occupier and Oc" cupiers are hereby require and authorized to
 " pay such Sum and Sums of Money as shall be
 " so rated, imposed, or assessed on the Owner or
 " Owners of such Ground, Houses, Shops, or " Tenements, in Pursuance of this Act, and to " deduct the same out of the Rent thereof; and
 " the Landlord or Landlords, or Owner or " Owners thereof, are hereby required to allow " such Deductions and Payments, upon Receipt " of the Residue of their Rents; and every Te" nant paying such Taxes or Assessments, shall " be acquitted and discharged for so much Money
 " as the said Taxes or Assessments shall amount
 " unto, as if the same had been actually paid
 " to such Person or Persons to whom his,
 " her, or their Rent should have been due or " payable.

" And to the End that all and every the Pave-

" ments lying before any vacant or untenanted
 " Ground, House, Shop, or Tenement, in any " of the Streets, Lanes, or Passages, may from " Time to Time be effectually amended, be it
 " further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid,
 " That the Chamberlain of the said City for the " Time being, shall pay all and every the Rates
 " and Assessments which shall be imposed or as" sessed upon the Owner or Owners of such vacant
 " or untenanted Ground, Houses, Shops, or " Tenements, during the Time the same shall " so continue vacant or untenanted, out of the " City Cash; but in case, after such Payment by " the said Chamberlain, any of the said Taxes
 " or Assessments shall be paid or levied by or " upon the Tenant or Tenants thereof who shall " afterwards occupy the same, then, and in every " such Case, the same shall forthwith be repaid
 " into the Chamber of the said City.

" And whereas from the great Increase of " Coaches, Carts, and other Carriages, and their " frequent passing through the Streets, Lanes,
 " and Passages of the said City, it is become ne" cessary, for the Safety and Convenience of all " Persons passing within the said City, that Posts
 " should be set up in many Streets, Lanes, and " other Passages, where now there are none, to " preserve a Foot-Passage; be it therefore further " enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That, from " and after the twenty-fourth Day of June, one " thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven, it " shall and may be lawful for the said Persons
 " authorized, and to be authorized, as aforesaid,
 " or any seven of them, to order, design, and
 " set up Posts, in all or any the Streets, Lanes,
 " and Passages whatsoever, where Need shall be,
 " within the said City and Liberties, to preserve
 " Foot-Passages; which Power shall be exercised " in the same Manner as the Power vested in " them by the said Statute, for the better paving
 " and cleansing the Streets and Sewers in and about
 " the said City; and for enabling them to execute
 " and perform the Works last mentioned and " appointed to be done, it shall also be lawful for " them, or any seven of them, to make such " Taxes and Assessments as shall be reasonable,
 " to be charged and levied in the same Manner
 " as the other Taxes and Assessments may be,
 " and are directed to be charged and levied by " the aforesaid Statute, or by so much of this " present Act as relates to the paving of the " said Streets, and in as full and ample Manner
 " to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever, as if " the same was herein particularly recited.

" And be it further enacted, by the Authority
 " aforesaid, That if any Action or Suit should " be brought or commenced against any Person " or Persons for any Matter or Thing to be " done in Pursuance of this Act, then, and in " such Case, the Action or Suit shall be brought " or commenced within six Months next after
 " the Fact committed, and not afterwards, and " shall be laid and brought in the City of London,
 " and not elsewhere: And the Defendant or De" fendants in such Action or Suit to be brought,
 " shall and may plead the General Issue, and give
 " this Act and the special Matter in Evidence at " any Trial to be had thereupon: And if the " Plaintiff or Plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, " or

"or discontinue his, her, or their Action or Actions, Suit or Suits, or if, upon Demurrer, Judgment should be given against the Plaintiff or Plaintiffs, the Defendant or Defendants shall and may recover treble Costs, and have such Remedy for the same as any Defendant or Defendants hath or have in any other Cases by Law.

"And be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be a publick Act, and be judicially taken Notice of as such, by all Judges, Justices, and other Persons whatsoever, without specially pleading the same."

On the twentieth of October, the Common Council of this City appointed a Committee to deliberate upon putting the aforesaid Act of Parliament in Execution.

A Boy killed by a Mill.

This Year, 1738, is introduced with a melancholy Accident at the House of one Mr. Snowden, a Brewer, at Fleet-Ditch, where, on the seventh of January, a young Lad, of thirteen Years of Age, going up a Ladder, fell backwards under a Mill where the Malt was grinding, and his Body was ripped open by one of the Teeth of the Mill, of which he instantly died. On the fourteenth of the same Month the King's Printing-House in Black-Friars, a very grand Building, and the finest of the Kind in all the World, was burnt down by an accidental Fire, which broke out first in the Kitchen of Mr. Basket, the Master of the said House. The Flames communicated themselves with such Rapidity, that the Family in the Dwelling-House adjacent escaped with the utmost Difficulty. The Printing-Materials, a vast Quantity of Paper, Books in Sheets, Bibles, Common Prayers, Acts of Parliament, &c. which were consumed on this Occasion, amounted to near twenty thousand Pounds Loss. And, on the twenty-fifth, a Fire broke out in Duke's-Place, and destroyed upwards of twenty Houses, the Meeting-House at the Corner of Bury-Street, and damaged several other contiguous Buildings.

King's Printing-House burnt.

Fire at Duke's-Place.

Stocks-Market broke up.

February the fourth, the Workmen began to clear away the Sheds, &c. in Stocks-Market, and to take up the Pavement, in order to lay the Foundation of a Mansion-House for the Lord-Mayor, pursuant to several Resolutions taken by the Common Council of this City.

Merchants Petition against Spanish Depredations.

On Friday, the third of March, a Petition of divers Merchants, Planters, and others, trading to, and interested in the British Plantations in America, on Behalf of themselves and many others, was presented to the House of Commons, and read; setting forth the several Applications that had been made to Parliament against the Spanish Depredations, and complaining, that, notwithstanding his Majesty's most gracious Endeavours, they had not only continued their Depredations ever since the Treaty of Seville, but had last Year carried them to a greater Height than ever; and therefore praying Relief, and to be heard by themselves and Counsel thereupon. This Petition was presented by Mr. Alderman Perry, who opened it in a Speech to this Effect:

"Mr. Speaker,

"I have, Sir, in my Hand a Petition to this House from a very great and useful Body of "Men, I mean, Sir, the Merchants of Great-Britain trading from London to America. As the well-known Justice of this House, Sir, leaves them no room to doubt of their being favourably heard, and receiving what Satisfaction the Representatives of Great-Britain can give; so the dutiful, and, as they think, prudent Steps they have hitherto taken in this Affair, give them Reason to hope, that they shall meet, from the other Parts of the Legislature, with the Indulgence that is their Due, in the Capacity either of loyal Subjects or injured Merchants. Had it, Sir, been possible for them to have proceeded in this Affair in any other Manner than by a Petition, in which the Proof of their Allegations will probably take up a good Part of your Time, they would willingly have spared the House an Application of this Nature. But, Sir, the repeated Losses, which increase with their Patience, the Indignity that is done to his Majesty, whose Honour is wounded through their Sides, and the Injuncts offered to their Country, whose Interest must suffer in Proportion as her Trade decays, calls too loudly for a parliamentary Redress to be stifled by any Consideration.

Alderman Perry's Speech on presenting the Petition.

"The Petition, Sir, sets out with a Truth that I believe is fresh in the Memories of many Gentlemen in this House, which is, that an Application of the same Nature with the present was made ten Years ago to this House of Representatives, holding then their first Session as the seventh Parliament of Great-Britain, and the House came to the following Resolution, viz. That from the Peace concluded at Utrecht, in the twelfth of the late Queen, to this Time, the British Trade and Navigation from the several British Colonies in America has been greatly interrupted by the continual Depredations of the Spaniards, who have seized very valuable Effects, and unjustly taken and made Prizes of great Numbers of British Ships and Vessels in those Parts, to the great Loss and Damage of the Subjects of this Kingdom, and in manifest Violation of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns.

"This Resolution, Sir, produced an Address of the House to his Majesty, to insist on a Reparation: But, notwithstanding his Majesty's most gracious Endeavours, the Spaniards still continued their Depredations, and no Satisfaction was obtained: Whereupon, in the third Session of the said Parliament, a farther Application was made to this House, which produced a Resolution to address his Majesty, That he would be graciously pleased to continue his Endeavours to prevent the Depredations of the Spaniards for the future, to procure full Satisfaction for the Damages already sustained, and to secure to the British Subjects the full and uninterrupted Exercise of their Trade and Navigation to and from the British Colonies in America.

"Some other Steps were also made in this Affair, but of these, Sir, this Petition takes no Notice, because, as the House then came to no Resolution as to the Relief which the Sufferers ought to have, what then passed cannot be said to be the Sense of the House; but, Sir,

"Sir, I believe something fell in our Debate "on that Occasion, which, if Gentlemen are "pleased to recollect, will justify the present Ap"plication.

"The Petition, Sir, proceeds to set forth,
"That the Spaniards paid so little Regard to his "Majesty's most gracious Endeavours, that they "have continued their Depredations almost ever "since the Treaty of Seville, and that their Inso"lencies had since risen to a greater Height than "they ever had done before. I must here, Sir,
"beg Leave to make one Observation, which is,
"that for some Time before the Conclusion of "the Treaty of Seville, there was a Cessation of "their Depredations: From what this Forbear"ance proceeded, or whether we owed it to "some favourite Points which the Crown of Spain
"hoped to gain by that Treaty, is what I shall "not take upon me to determine: But, be that as "it will, the Petition proceeds to set forth, and,
"I believe, the Fact is not to be doubted, That
"the Spaniards have arbitrarily seized several "Ships, with their Effects, belonging to his Ma"jesty's Subjects, on the high Seas, in the "defined Course of their Voyage, to and from "the British Colonies, amounting to a very con"siderable Value; and that the Captains or Mas"ters of some of the said Ships were, according "to the last Advices of the Petitioners, and are,
"as the Petitioners believe, at this Time, con"fined by the Spaniards in the West-Indies; and "the Crews are now inhumanly treated as Slaves
"in Spain; and that that cruel Nation makes it "their Practice to attack and board all British "Ships they meet with in the American Seas, arbi"trarily deeming their Cargoes contraband, or "not; contrary to the Law of Nations, and in "manifest Violation of the Treaties subsisting
"between the two Crowns. The Petition, Sir,
"farther shews, that these unjust and violent "Proceedings of the Spaniards have rendered the "American Trade so unsafe and precarious, that,
"on these Accounts, Insurance is greatly risen;
"and that, unless a speedy and effectual Remedy
"be applied, the American Trade and Naviga"tion, and consequently the Revenue arising to "the Crown therefrom, must be very much di"minished, if not entirely lost. It further re"presents to the House, Sir, that tho' the King "of Spain has, by the Treaty of Seville, and by "a subsequent Declaration, stipulated, that Re"paration should be forthwith made to the un"happy Sufferers, yet there is no Instance of its "having been done: So far from it, that, whilst "the Subjects of Great-Britain have been amused
"with vain and fruitless Hopes of Satisfaction,
"the Spaniards have committed farther Insults
"and Depredations upon them, and still continue
"the same unjust Practices; and that the Cédulas
"or Orders given by the Court of Spain to their "Governors in America, are only calculated (as "the Petitioners, by Experience, have great Rea"son to apprehend) to evade giving Satisfaction
"to the Subjects of Great-Britain; for there has "never been one of these Cédulas complied with,
"nor any Governor recalled nor punished for his "Disobedience, as the Petitioners ever heard.
"And that for any Nation to assume the Power of "detaining or rummaging the British Ships upon

NUMB. XLIX.

"their lawful Voyages in the American Seas, under "Pretence of searching for contraband Goods, is "in effect (as the Petitioners conceive) claiming "and exercising the sole Sovereignty of those "Seas: And that, if the Spaniards be suffered to "act in this injurious Manner, to insult the Per"sons of his Majesty's Subjects, or to plunder
"them of their Property, the Petitioners appre"hend the same will be attended not only with "a great Obstruction to this valuable Branch of "our Commerce and Navigation, but also with "Consequences very fatal to Great-Britain itself.
"And, therefore, as the Measures hitherto pur"sued have proved ineffectual, the Petitioners "pray the House to take the Premises into their "mature Consideration, and provide such timely "and adequate Remedy, for putting an End to "all Insults and Depredations on them and their "Fellow-Subjects; as to the House shall seem
"meet, as well as procure such Relief to the un"happy Sufferers, as the Nature of the Case and "the Justice of their Cause require; and that "they may be heard by themselves and Counsel
"thereupon."

After having thus opened the Petition, he "moved for Leave to bring it up; which being "granted, and the Petition read, he then moved "that it might be referred to the Consideration "of a Committee of the whole House; which be"ing likewise agreed to, he moved for an In"struction to the said Committee, that they do "admit the said Petitioners to be heard, if they "think fit, by themselves and Counsel, before the "said Committee.

This Motion was opposed by the Speaker,
"who observed, that it never was the Method of "that House to admit Parties to be heard by them"selves and Counsel, but only by themselves or "Counsel; which Observation produced several "Altercations. Sir John Barnard replied, That, as "this Petition was founded upon Facts, he should "be sorry to see the Design of it defeated by a "scrupulous Adherence to any Points of Form
"whatever; and that he humbly thought it would "be a Hardship upon the Petitioners, to deny "them a Request of so little Importance as the "present, merely because it interfered with a Mat"ter of Form. However, the Speaker insisting,
"before he put the Question, to take the Sense of "the House with regard to the Terms in which he "was to put it upon the present Motion; Sir Wil"liam Wyndham, in order to mitigate the Rigour of "the Form, rose up, and, amongst other Particu"lars, spoke as follows: "I think the Petitioners "ought to appear at our Bar, not as Counsel, but "as Evidences for themselves. This, Sir, will "effectually answer all the Ends that my ho"nourable Friend proposes, and will preserve
"our Method of Proceeding in its ordinary "Form. If therefore, Sir, the Counsel shall "advance a Fact that requires Proof, or touches "upon a Point that wants Explanation, I think "it is highly just that the Petitioners should be "admitted as Evidences, and be allowed to an"swer such Questions as shall be proposed, either "by Gentlemen or by their Counsel. This, I "conceive, Sir, is but fair, and would inspire our "Merchants with a Confidence in the Justice of "this

"this House, and let the World see, that we are
"resolved to leave no Means untried which may "contribute to give us right Information in an "Affair that so nearly concerns the Properties of "our Fellow-Subjects, and the Dignity of the
"Nation."

Sir Robert Walpole spoke next, to the following Purpose:

Sir Robert
Walpole's
Speech.

"Sir, I must humbly beg Leave to differ in my "Sentiments on this Affair from both the Honourable "Gentlemen. The Judgment, Sir,
"which in my Opinion we should form in this "Case, ought to be grounded on Facts as they "are fairly represented, not as they are artfully
"aggravated. Every Gentleman, Sir, I believe,
"from his bare Reflexion on the Injuries
"our Merchants have received from the Spaniards,
"feels within his own Breast an Indignation
"arise, which there is no Occasion to increase
"by the Power of Eloquence, or the Arts of "a Lawyer. When Gentlemen, Sir, see an "Affair through the Mist that Passion throws
"before their Eyes, it is next to impossible they "should form a just Judgment. I believe there "is scarce any Gentleman here who is not acquainted "with as much Geography, and so much of the History,
"both of Great-Britain and Spain, as may enable him,
"from a plain Representation of Facts, to judge
"whether the Allegations in this Petition be true or "false. Now, Sir, are not the Merchants themselves
"the most proper Hands for giving in such a "Representation? Are they not most immediately "interested in the Facts? Where then is the "Necessity, Sir, of having Counsel to do this?
"Or what occasion, Sir, is there to work upon the "Passions where the Head is to be informed? I believe,
"Sir, every Gentleman will find his Heart as much
"affected by the artless Accounts of the Sufferers
"themselves, as by the studied Rhetorick of the most "eloquent Counsel. However, Sir, I shall not take the "Liberty to make any Motion on this Head, but "entirely submit it to Gentlemen's Consideration."

Robert Willmot, Esq; Alderman and one of the Representatives for London, answered in Substance as follows:

Alderman
Willmot's
Speech.

"Sir, I think the Petitioners ought to have "Liberty to be heard, not only by themselves "and Counsel, but if it were possible that we "could indulge them in other Advantages we "ought to do it. To talk of working upon "Passions—Can any Man's Passions be wound
"up to a greater Height, can any Man's Indignation
"be more raised, than every Free-born Englishman's
"must be when he reads a Letter which I received
"this Morning, and which I have now in my Hand?
"This Letter, Sir, gives an Account that seventy of "our brave Sailors are now in Chains in Spain. Our "Countrymen in Chains! And Slaves to Spaniards!
"Is not this enough, Sir, to fire the coldest? Is not "this enough, Sir, to rouse all the Vengeance of a "national Resentment? And shall we, Sir, sit here
"debating about Words and Forms, while the Sufferings
"of our Countrymen call out loudly for Redress?
"Tho' this had not its desired Effect, yet, on Thursday the sixteenth, the Merchants attended to "make good their Allegations, and their Evidences "were examined by a full House of 450 Members;

"on Tuesday following they did the same, and likewise
"on the next Day, being Wednesday the twenty-second;
"and on the Tuesday following, being the twenty-eighth
"of March, the House having again resolved itself into "the said Committee, and finished the Examination of "Witnesses, and hearing of Counsel, William Pulteney,
"Esq; stood up, and spoke in Substance as follows:

"Mr. Speaker,

"Sir, After the Insults and Injuries, the Cruelties and
"Barbarities, which you have heard so fully proved at "your Bar, I should think myself fully justified, if I began with a "Motion for enquiring into the Causes of the Nation's "having suffered so often and so long, without ever once
"having shewed a proper Resentment; but as some "Gentlemen might perhaps think this would be carrying "the Thing farther than it ought to be carried at present,
"I shall leave those who are to blame, (if there be any "such) to the Reproaches of their own Consciences,
"and proceed to examine the several Sorts of Insults
"and Injuries that have been put upon the Nation;
"because, I am sure, the least we can propose to do
"upon this Occasion, is, to vindicate and establish,
"as far as can be done by any Resolutions of this "House, those Rights and Privileges, which the "Spaniards have, either by their own Rashness or
"our Pusillanimity, been encouraged so frequently, so "manifestly, and so contemptuously to violate."

Mr. Pulteney's
Speech and Motion.

"But before I begin, Sir, I must observe, that this is "not the first Time our Merchants have found themselves
"obliged to apply to this House for Redress: They "have already applied twice to this House, for Relief "against the Depredations and Cruelties committed upon "them by the Spaniards; and, I think, I may now say, "without any Effect. Upon each of their former "Applications they represented to us, how they had "been ravaged and plundered; and as they, at each "Time, fully proved their Allegations, they ought "then to have met with Redress: A full and immediate "Redress ought then to have been peremptorily "insisted on; and, upon its being refused, or "unreasonably delayed, our Ministers ought to have "advised his Majesty to declare War: They certainly "would have done so, if they had not had a greater "Regard for their own Ease and Security, than they "had for the Honour and Interest of the Nation."

"Now, Sir, as several distinct Rights of this "Nation have been incroached on, and are now "contested by the Spaniards; the first I shall "take Notice of is that Right which our Merchants "and Sailors have to sail with their Ships on any "Part of the Seas of America, providing they do not "touch at any Place possessed by the Spaniards,
"with a Design to carry on a Trade or Traffick
"with the Inhabitants. This is a Right, Sir, which "is common to us with all other Nations; and, therefore,
"by allowing

"allowing ourselves to be disturbed in the En"joyment of such a Right, we not only betray
 "the Rights of our own Subjects, but we betray
 "the Rights of Mankind in general. A Nation
 "may, when not restrained by particular Treaties,
 "forbid Foreigners to sail to, or traffick in, the "Ports, Havens, or Creeks, within their Do"minions, because in these they have an absolute "Property; but no Nation can have such a "Property in the open Seas, as may intitle
 "them to interrupt the Ships of other Nations,
 "in their Passage, to and fro, upon those Seas,
 "about their lawful Business. A Man's Ship is "his House, and it is by the Law of Nations a "Trespass to enter into it against his Will, unless
 "he that enters has some Dominion or Juris"diction over him. Accordingly, the Spaniards
 "have, ever since they first got any Possessions in "America, made it unlawful for the Ships of "foreign Nations to sail to any of the Ports or "Havens, or other Places possessed by the Sub"jects of the King of Spain, in that Part of the "World, in order to carry on any Trade or "Traffick with the Inhabitants; but they never "could have, by the Law of Nations, nor have "they ever, 'till of late Years, pretended to any "Dominion or Jurisdiction over the open Seas of "America, nor to any Right or Title to enter "into and search the Ships of foreign Nations "sailing upon those Seas. They, therefore, can "have no Right to interrupt, much less to "search any British Ship, sailing upon the open
 "Seas of America, unless they have got it
 "by some particular Treaty between the two
 "Crowns.
 "Now, Sir, they are so far from having got "any such Right by any Treaty between the "two Crowns, that by the eighth Article of the "Treaty made in the Year 1670, which has "been confirmed by every Treaty since that "Time, it is stipulated only, — That the "Subjects of the two contracting Parties, re"spectively, shall forbear and abstain from sailing
 "to, and trafficking in, the Ports and Havens,
 "which have Fortifications, Castles, or Ware-
 "houses, or in other Places possessed by the "other Party. — Consequently, the Subjects "of both may lawfully, with regard to one "another, sail to, and traffick in, every Port,
 "Haven, and other Place in America, not pos"sessed by the other; and that both Subjects
 "may do this the more freely and securely,
 "it is, by the fifteenth Article of the same
 "Treaty, expressly stipulated, — That the "Freedom of Navigation ought, by no manner
 "of Means, to be interrupted, when there is no"thing committed contrary to the true Sense and "Meaning of that Treaty. — Which evident"ly shews, that no British Ship ought to be so "much as interrupted in her Navigation by any "Spanish Ship, unless she is actually sailing to or
 "from, and trafficking in, some Place possessed "by the King of Spain. And this will be still "more evident, if we consider the whole of this "fifteenth Article; for, by the first Part of it,
 "'tis declared, — That that Treaty shall no
 "way derogate from any Preheminence, Right,
 "or Signiory, which either the one or the other
 "of the contracting Parties have in the Seas,

"Straights, or fresh Waters of America; and "that they shall have and retain the same, in
 "as full and ample a Manner, as of Right
 "ought to belong to them. — Then follow
 "these Words, — Be it however understood "that the Freedom of Navigation ought, by no
 "manner of Means, to be interrupted, when "there is nothing committed contrary to the "true Sense and Meaning of this Treaty. —
 "From hence we may see, that the last Part of "this Article is by way of Exception to the "first; and that though each Party is to con"tinue to enjoy every Preheminence, Right,
 "and Signiory, he before held, yet neither
 "Party is to make use of any such Prehemi-"nence, Right, or Signiory, so as to interrupt
 "the Freedom of Navigation, when nothing "has been committed contrary to the true Sense
 "and Meaning of the eighth Article, before-
 "mentioned.

"From what I have said, Sir, it is evident,
 "our Subjects have such a Right as I have men"tioned; and therefore my first Motion shall be "to declare, That it is the natural and un"doubted Right of British Subjects, to sail with
 "their Ships on any Part of the Seas of America,
 "to and from any Part of his Majesty's Domi-
 "nions; and that the seizing and confiscating
 "such Ships, — as are not sailing and traffick"ing in the Ports and Havens, which have "Fortifications, Castles, Magazines or Ware-
 "houses, or in other Places possessed by the "Subjects of the King of Spain, — is contrary "to Equity and Justice, and a manifest Viola"tion of the Treaties subsisting between the two
 "Crowns.

"But, Sir, as it would not, perhaps, be "thought fair to desire a Question upon this "Motion, without having previously given you "Notice of all the following Propositions or "Motions, I intend to make upon this Occa"sion, I shall state and explain every one of "them regularly, in the Course I am to make "them, before I desire your Opinion upon the "Proposition I have now made. For this Pur"pose I must acquaint you, that the next Right,
 "which I think ought now to be established by "a Resolution of this House, is that which the "Subjects of Great-Britain have to carry in "their Ships all Sorts of Goods, Merchandize,
 "or Effects, from one Part of his Majesty's "Dominions to any other Part of his Majesty's "Dominions. This Right, Sir, is likewise a "Right which we enjoy in common with all "other Nations; for the Subjects of every State
 "have a Right to carry in their Ships whatever "Goods they please, from one Part of their Do"minions to another, unless the transporting of "such Goods be prohibited by a Law amongst "themselves. In this Case it is ridiculous to "talk of Goods made contraband by the Laws "of any other Nation; because no Nation has a "Right to prohibit the Subjects of any other "independent Nation, to transport any Sort of "Goods from one Part of their own Dominions
 "to another. The Spaniards may as well pre"tend that we shall not transport Gold or Sil"ver, or Logwood, from Bristol to London, as "to say, that we shall not transport any such
 "Com-

“Commodity from Jamaica to London; and “they might as well send their Guarda Costa’s “into the British Channel, to search our Ships in “their Passage from Bristol to London, and to “seize them; if any such Goods should be found “on board, as to send Guarda Costa’s to search “our Ships on their Passage from Jamaica, or “any other of our Dominions in America, to “London, and to seize them, in Case of their “finding any such Goods on board. Indeed, “as Usurpations are Things of a quick Growth, “and extremely fertile, if we continue in our “present Lethargy but a few Years longer, I “do not know but I may hear, that the Mouth “of the Thames is beset with Spanish Guarda “Costa’s, in order to seize all British Ships, “sailing in or out, that shall be found to have “on board what they may please to call contra“band Goods: Nay, I do not know but this “might have happened already, if it had not “been for our Neighbours the Dutch, who, I “believe, draw most of our Spanish Gold and “Silver away from us; and therefore would not “tamely allow a Trade, even of ours, to be “interrupted, by which they are so great “Gainers.

“Contraband, Sir, is a foreign Term, which “signifies the same with what we call prohi“bited; and as any Nation, not restrained by “particular Treaties, may make a Law for “prohibiting the Importation or Exportation “of any particular Sort of Goods they please, “into or from their own Dominions, the Goods “so prohibited are, by the Spaniards and some “other Foreigners, called contraband Goods.
 “Of these, Foreigners who trade with them are “obliged to take Notice; and may be punish“ed, if they transgress the Laws of the Coun“try with which they Trade: But Foreigners “who have no Design to carry on any Trade “in that Country, nor to touch at any of its “Ports, have no Occasion to take the least “Notice of what Goods are made contraband “in that Country; nor can they be punished, “though they sail in the open Seas, along the “Coasts of that Country, with such Goods on “board; for no Goods are, ipsa natura, contra“band, it is the Law of a particular Country “that makes Goods contraband; and where “the Laws of that Country have no Force,
 “the Goods cannot be supposed to be contra“band.

“Now, Sir, with regard to British Ships, “trading to or from any Port in Old Spain,
 “they may have contraband Goods on board,
 “and may, in a proper Manner, be searched “by any Spanish Officer, properly commissioned “for that Purpose; but with regard to any “British Ship trading to or from any Port in “New Spain, or in any of the Spanish Domini“ons in America, it is ridiculous to say she can “have any particular Sort of contraband Goods “on board; for the very Trade itself is con“traband; and consequently all the Goods on “board, of whatever Kind, must be contraband,
 “and the Ship and Cargo may be seized and made “Prize of: Nay, if she had not one Shil“ling’s Worth of any Sort of Goods on board,
 “the Ship may be seized and made Prize

“of; but in either Case she is not seized for “having contraband Goods on board, but for “having been engaged in an unlawful Trade.

“This, Sir, is the State of the Case with “Respect to contraband Goods; and if we “examine the two fundamental Treaties be“tween Spain and us, I mean the Treaty of “1667, and 1670, we shall find them exactly “agreeable to the Case as I have stated it. In “the Treaty of 1667, which regulates the Trade “between Britain and Spain in general, there is “mention made of contraband Goods; but “every one may see, that wherever there is any “mention made of the Word contraband, it “relates only to the Trade between Britain “and Old Spain; and, with Respect to that “Trade, it is determined by that Treaty, what “Sort of Goods shall be deemed contraband;
 “and a Method is particularly prescribed, which “the Spaniards are obliged to observe, when they “visit British Ships, bound to or from any of “the Ports of Old Spain, in search of contra“band Goods. Whereas in the Treaty of 1670, “which was made only for regulating our mu“tual Affairs in America, the Word contraband “is not so much as once mentioned in the whole “Treaty; and the Reason is very plain; for “where there is no Trade, there can be no such “thing as contraband Goods; and as all Trade “in that Part of the World, between the Sub“jects of the two contracting Parties, was,
 “by that very Treaty, expressly forbid, there“fore it would have been absurd to have “made any Regulations about contraband “Goods.

“I know, Sir, the Spaniards pretend that “those Goods which they ridiculously call con“traband, are Goods which can be had no where “but in their Plantations in America; and that, “therefore, if any such Goods be found on “board any of our Ships in those Seas, it is a “certain Proof that such Ships have been carry“ing on an unlawful Trade on their Coasts in “that Part of the World: But I likewise know, “Sir, that this Fact is false. There are no “Goods that can be found in the Spanish Settle“ments, but what may be found, and may be “purchased, in our own Settlements; even “Spanish Pistoles and Pieces of Eight may be “found in our Settlements, without any of our “Subjects having been engaged in an unlawful “Trade with their Settlements; because, be“sides the lawful Trade now carried on between “our South-Sea Company and their Settlements, “the Spanish Governors themselves often send to “our Settlements for Provisions, and these “Provisions they purchase either with the cur“rent Coin of Spain, or with Goods of the Pro“duce of their Settlements in America; and “these Goods, or this Money, being thus law“fully brought to our Settlements, surely our “Ships may take them on board, and may bring “them to Britain, without having ever been en“gaged in an unlawful Trade with the Spanish “Settlements in America.

“But supposing, Sir, that some Spanish Gold “or Silver, either in Bars, or in Pistoles and “Pieces of Eight, or a Parcel of Goods of the “Growth of the Spanish Settlements in America, “had

“had been originally brought from thence by means of an unlawful Trade; suppose such a Thing could be fully proved, which I think is impossible; yet if those Effects be once landed in any of our Settlements, and there sold to a fair Purchaser, and by him put on board a Ship, in order to be carried to any other Port in the British Dominions, I insist upon it, that the Spaniards have no Right to that Ship, and much less to seize and make Prize of her, or of any Part of her Cargo; for nothing can entitle them to seize and make Prize of a British Ship, but her being actually found sailing to, and trafficking in, the Ports, Havens, or Places possessed by the Subjects of the King of Spain in America. Surely, Sir, an illicit Trade with the Spanish Settlements in America, does not fix such a vitiu reale upon the Goods so brought from thence, that they may be seized or reclaimed by the Spaniards, wherever, and whenever, they can afterwards find them, and that notwithstanding their having been sold to a fair Purchaser in an open Market: This would be allowing the Spaniards a greater Privilege, with Respect to Goods purchased from them at an equitable Price, though by means of an illicit Trade, than is usually allowed to an Owner of stolen Goods by any Law in the World. It is a Privilege which was never granted them by any Nation; and if we should through Fear of a War make them such a Concession, I should expect that they would soon pretend to come and search our Bank, and all our Goldsmiths and other Shops in London, in order to seize and carry off all the Spanish Gold and Silver they found; for if they can, by the Means they have used, obtain one unjust Concession, no Man can tell how far they may afterwards go, or where their Compassion towards us may induce them to Stop.

“Upon this Point, Sir, I have been the more particular, because I think the Spanish Ministers, and our Ministers together, have by their Memorials quite confounded it. By confounding the Treaty of 1667 with that of 1670, the Spanish Ministers have insisted, and ours seem to have admitted, that there may be such a Thing as contraband Goods on board British Ships, sailing in the Seas of America; which I have shewn to be impossible: With Respect to our South-Sea Company's Ships, there may, indeed, for what I know, be contraband Goods on board; but as they are the only British Ships that are allowed to carry on any Traffick in the Spanish Ports of America, they are the only British Ships in those Seas that can be supposed to have any contraband Goods on board; therefore, I am surprized to find, that our Ministers ever allowed the Word contraband to be brought into the Dispute; at least I am surprized, that, upon its being first mentioned, they did not explain the Point much more clearly than I find they have done in any of their Memorials; for this seems to be the principal Point in Dispute between us, and ought therefore to have been explained in the most clear and succinct Manner.

No. 49.

“As this has not, in my Opinion, yet been done, and as it is a Matter of so great Importance, I think, Sir, it ought to be done by this House; and, for this Purpose, the next Proposition I shall make you, shall be to declare, That it is the indisputable Right of the Subjects of Great-Britain, to carry in their Ships all Sorts of Goods, Merchandize, or Effects, from one Part of the British Dominions to any other Part of the British Dominions; and that no Goods, Merchandize, or Effects, being so carried, are, by the Law of Nations, or any Treaty between the two Crowns, to be deemed or taken as contraband Goods; and that the searching of such Ships on the open Seas, under Pretence of finding contraband Goods, is highly injurious to the Trade of this Kingdom, a Violation of the Law of Nations, and an Infraction of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns.

“I must now take Notice, Sir, of the Right which the Subjects of Great-Britain have to Possessions in the Province of Jucatan, and to cut Logwood in the Bay of Campechey. This is a Right peculiar to this Nation: And it is a Right which the Spaniards cannot, with the least shadow of Reason, controvert, because we were in Possession of Lands in that Province, and were in Use to cut Logwood wherever we pleased in that Bay, long before, and at the Time of the Treaty of 1670: And since, by the seventh Article of that Treaty, it is expressly stipulated, — That the King of Great-Britain, his Heirs and Successors, shall have, hold, keep, and always possess, in full Right of Sovereignty, Signiory, Possession, and Propriety, all the Lands, Countries, Islands, Colonies, and other Places, be they what they will, lying and situate in the West-Indies, or in any Part of America, which the said King of Great-Britain and his Subjects now hold and possess; inasmuch that they neither can, nor ought hereafter to be contested or called in Question, upon any Account, or under any Pretence whatsoever; — therefore it must be granted, we have an uncontested Right to possess the same Lands in that Province, and to cut Logwood in that Bay; unless it could be shewn, that we have by some Treaty since that Time given it up. But so far otherwise, that this Treaty, and this very Right, has been confirmed by every Treaty between the two Crowns since that Time; and, by the first Article of the Treaty of Commerce at Utrecht, this Right is not only confirmed, but farther explained, by the Addition of these remarkable Words, — Without Prejudice to any Liberty or Power which the Subjects of Great-Britain enjoyed, either through Right, Sufferance, or Indulgence.

“But, Sir, to put this Matter beyond all Dispute, I must acquaint you, that as soon as the Spaniards began to contest this Right with us, which was very soon after the Treaty of Utrecht, notwithstanding the Words I have mentioned, his late Majesty referred it to the Board of Trade; and that Board, after a strict Enquiry, and full Information, reported, —

7 H

That

" That the said American Treaty did establish a " Right in the Crown of Great-Britain to the " Laguna de Terminos in the Province of Yucatan,
 " and the Parts adjacent; those Places at the " Time of the Treaty, and for some Years be" fore, being actually in the Possession of the " British Subjects.

" From what I have said, Sir, it is plain, that " this Right is still in the Crown of Great-Bri- " tain; and therefore the third Resolution I am
 " to propose shall be, that it may be resolved, " That the Subjects of Great-Britain did hold
 " and possess Lands in the Province of Yucatan
 " in America, antecedent to, and at the Time of,
 " the Treaty of 1670; which Treaty confirmed
 " the Right to each contracting Party, of such " Lands or Places as either did at that Time
 " hold and possess; and that the Subjects of " Great-Britain then had, and have at all Times
 " since claimed a Right of cutting Logwood in " the Bay of Compeche, and enjoyed the same " without Interruption, 'till of late Years;
 " which Right seems further particularly secured
 " to us, by the Manner in which the first Article " of the Treaty of Commerce at Utrecht con" firms the Treaty of 1670, with these remark" able Words, — Without Prejudice to any Liberty
 " or Power which the Subjects of Great-Britain
 " enjoyed, either through Right, Sufferance, or In- " duigence.

" I am now come, Sir, to the last Right
 " which I shall take Notice of upon the present " Occasion, which is that Right our Subjects
 " have to gather Salt in the Island of Tortugas,
 " an uninhabited Island in the West-Indies, which " the Spaniards say belongs to them, but by " what Right I do not know; for they have " neither Fort, Castle, nor Warehouse, upon
 " the Island, nor any other Sign of Possession " that I know of. However, suppose they have " the Property, or rather the Dominion of that " Island, 'tis certain we were in Use, and claim" ed a Right to gather Salt there, before, and at " the Time of the Treaty in 1670; therefore " this Right was confirmed to us by that Treaty,
 " and reconfirmed by the Treaty of Commerce
 " at Utrecht. But this is not all, Sir, with Re" spect to this Right, we have an express, and a " particular Convention between Spain and us
 " to plead in its Favour: By the third Article " of the Treaty of Commerce between Great- " Britain and Spain, concluded at Madrid in the " Year 1715, this Right or Privilege is expressly " confirmed in these Words, — His Catho-" lick Majesty permits the said Subjects (mean" ing British) to gather Salt in the Isle of Tortu-
 " gas, they having enjoyed this Liberty in " the Reign of King Charles II. without Inter-
 " ruption.

" From all these Treaties, and from a Posses" sion almost uninterrupted for above sixty Years,
 " one would have thought, Sir, the Spaniards
 " would never have attempted to disturb us in " the Possession of a Right, so often, so solemnly,
 " so expressly, and so particularly confirmed;
 " but no Words, no Treaties, can defend the " Rights of a Nation, when their Sword seems " to be rusted in its Scabbard. Notwithstanding
 " all these Treaties, the Spaniards, about six " Years since, attacked our Fleet of Merchant-" Ships, that was gathering Salt upon that " Island, fired several Broad-sides upon one of " his Majesty's Ships of War, serving as their " Convoy, took and made Prize four of the " Merchant-Ships, and would have taken a great " many more of them, if it had not been for " the good Conduct and gallant Behaviour of " the Gentleman that commanded the Man of " War, then serving as their Convoy; who, not" withstanding the great Superiority of the " Enemy, kept them in Play, 'till most of our " Merchant-Ships got off, and thereby shewed

 " to the Spaniards, that their Impunity was not
 " owing to the Cowardise of our Sea-Captains,
 " but to the Tameness of our Ministers. As that " Gentleman then shewed that he had Courage " to offend, as well as Conduct to defend, I " hope, if we do come to a Rupture with Spain,
 " he will be one of the first that shall be com" missioned.

" This Outrage, Sir, was not committed by " Stealth, or by Persons not properly commission" ed: It was not committed by common Guards
 " Cebs, who, often, have their Commissions
 " only from the Spanish Governors in America.
 " No, Sir, it was committed openly, avowedly,
 " and by Spanish Men of War, bearing the King
 " of Spain's Commission, and having express " Instructions from his Governors for what they " did.

" These Instructions, Sir, were not to persuade,
 " but to compel, as all Instructions to Ships of " War ought to be; for Fleets or Armies were " never, 'till of late Years, sent out as Orators
 " or Ambassadors; they were never sent out
 " but against those that had been found to be " obstinate; and the obstinate were generally at " last obliged to pay the Charges of fitting them
 " out.

" For my part, Sir, I am surprized, that such " an open and avowed Insult upon the Flag, and " upon the Crown of Great-Britain, was not " pursued with immediate Vengeance: I am " surprized we had the Patience to send to the " Court of Spain to demand Satisfaction and " Reparation; and yet, Sir, I do not find that " we have hitherto received any Satisfaction for " the Affront, nor any Reparation for the Da" mage done. Nay, the Spanish Court seems to " mind it so little, that they have not so much
 " as once mentioned it in their last Memorial.
 " This Affair, I must say, Sir, puts me in mind
 " of the Story of a Gentleman, who, upon re" ceiving a Box on the Ear, asked him that gave
 " it, if he was in jest or in earnest; and upon
 " the other's answering, he was in great earnest,
 " the honest Gentleman replied only, I am glad " you are, Sir, for I do not like such Jest.
 " Whether we have had our Joke upon this Oc" casion, I do not know; but I hope the Nation " will not content itself with returning a Joke
 " for such a serious Blow.

" It is not Restitution, Sir, it is not Repara" tion, that can atone for such an avowed In" sult; nothing can satisfy the Honour of the " British Crown, or of the British Flag, but the " inflicting of a condign Punishment upon those " Captains that committed the Outrage, or upon
 " the

"the Spanish Governor that gave the Instructions.
 "Either the one or the other must be hung up;
 "and, I think, hung in Chains too, upon the "Island where the Outrage and Robbery was "committed, as a Monument of British Re"sentment. If we are negotiating, if we continue "to negotiate, this ought to be insisted on as a "Preliminary, and, if it be not granted as a Pre"liminary, we ought immediately to break off
 "Negotiations, and revenge ourselves upon the "Country that dares to protect such Criminals;
 "for, if we allow such an Affront as this to pass
 "unrevenged, I will take upon me to foretel, that "the Spaniards will perform no Promise they make
 "to us, nor observe any Treaty they conclude.

"However, Sir, I shall be for leaving it en"tirely to his Majesty to determine, what Satis"faction or Reparation ought to be deemed suffi"cient; but as to the Right we have of gather"ing Salt in that Island, I think it ought to be "asserted by a Resolution of this House; there"fore the fourth Proposition I shall make to "you, shall be to resolve, That the attacking
 "a Fleet of British Ships, gathering Salt in the "Island of Tortugas, then under Convoy of one "of his Majesty's Ships of War, by two Men of "War belonging to the King of Spain, firing on "the Convoy, and taking four of the said Ships,
 "was a notorious Infraction of the Convention
 "signed at Madrid, December 14, 1715, and an "high Insult on the Honour due to the Flag of "Great-Britain.

"Having thus, Sir, mentioned and explained
 "the several Rights of this Nation in America,
 "which I take to be of such Consequence, that "they ought to be particularly established and
 "asserted, in the most solemn and the most ex"plicit Manner, by the Resolutions of Parlia"ment; I shall next take Notice, that it not "only appears, that every one of these Rights is "now contested by the Court of Spain; but that "it has been proved at our Bar, that the Subjects "of this Nation have been disturbed and inter"rupted in the Exercise of every one of them,
 "by the Spanish Guarda Costa's in America. The "Spaniards have of late Years not only seized "and confiscated our Merchant-Ships, for carrying "on their lawful Trade in the Island of Tortugas
 "and Bay of Campechey; but they have stoppt,
 "searched, and plundered them; for sailing upon
 "the open Seas of America; and have even seized "and made Prize of them, for transporting some "Sorts of Goods from one Part of his Majesty's "Dominions to another, in manifest Violation of "the known Rights and Privileges of the British
 "Nation.

"These are Rights, Sir, which are all so firmly "established to us by Treaties, they are Rights "which we have been so long in Possession of,
 "that I am surprized how the Spaniards could "find a Pretence for controverting any one of "them; but when I consider the great Superi"ority of our Naval Force, and the great Expence
 "we have been at of late Years in supporting "that Naval Force, and in fitting out almost eve"ry Year formidable Squadrons, I am much sur-"prized to find, that the Spaniards have been so
 "long allowed not only to controvert, but actu"ally to interrupt and disturb us in the Possession and Exercise of those Rights. If they had "rested satisfied with denying that we had any "such Rights, if they had refused to acknow"ledge them in direct and explicit Terms, we "might, for the Sake of Peace, have submitted "to such a Piece of Injustice; but their plunder-

 "ing and making Prize of our Merchant-Ships,
 "for exercising any of those Rights, is an Injury
 "which we cannot in Honour submit to; and "their pretending to stop, search, or seize, un"der any Pretence whatsoever, those British "Ships which they find sailing upon the open
 "Seas, either in America or elsewhere, is an "usurping of a Right or Dominion which is "inconsistent with our Trade, and is therefore
 "what we ought to have opposed with all our "Might, at the very Beginning; for Usurpati"ons of every Kind gather Strength from their "Continuance, and that which was at first a most "unjust and a most violent Usurpation, may at "last become a settled and an uncontrovertible
 "Right.

"I must confess, Sir, that, from our Conduct "of late Years, I am apt to suspect, there are "some amongst us, who think the Matters now
 "in Dispute between Spain and us of so little "Consequence, that no one of them is worth
 "our contending for. If there be any such Gen"tlemen in this House, it would be easy to shew,
 "that they are most egregiously mistaken; it "would be easy to demonstrate, that every one "of the Rights I have mentioned, is of such "Consequence to our Trade (which is the chief
 "Support of our Riches and Power, and the only "Support of our Naval Power) that we ought to "contend for it, as if we were contending pro
 "aris & focis. But I cannot well suppose there "are any such Gentlemen in this House, and "therefore I shall not at present enlarge upon "this Point; because, by our being now in a "Committee, I have a Privilege of speaking
 "again upon the same Subject; and that Privi"lege I shall beg Leave to make use of, if I hear "any Gentleman pretend to insinuate (for I know
 "it will not be directly asserted) that none of the "Rights I have mentioned are worth the care of "a British Parliament.

"For this Reason I say, Sir, I shall not now "insist upon the great Consequence of all or any "of the Matters, which the Spaniards have been
 "of late tamely allowed to dispute with us; and "as I believe no Gentleman will say, but that it "has been fully proved at our Bar, that our "Merchants have been plundered, our Ships un"justly seized and confiscated, and our Seamen
 "cruelly used; therefore, without making an "ungrateful Repetition of the Indignities and In"juries which have been proved at our Bar, I "shall mention to you the fifth Motion I design
 "to make; which is, That, for many Years last
 "past, the Liberty of Navigation in the Ameri- can Seas hath been unjustly disturbed by the "Spaniards, under Pretence of searching for and "finding illicit Trade; the British Ships unlaw"fully seized upon the open Seas, plundered,
 "and confiscated; the Sailors robbed, inhuman"ly tortured, imprisoned, and made Slaves; to "the grievous Loss of the Merchants, the ob"struction

"struction of the Commerce, and the Dishonour
"of the Nation.

"And the last Proposition I shall make to you,
"Sir, upon this Occasion, shall be, That, not"withstanding the repeated Application of Par"liament, the Treaty of Seville, and the Assuran"ces so frequently given to the Merchants, of "procuring Reparation for their Losses and Ill-
"usage; and notwithstanding the Expectation
"of the Nation, of receiving just and ample Sa"tisfaction for the Cruelties exercised on its "Subjects, and the Insults offered to itself; no"thing has, in so many Years, been obtained "from the Court of Spain, effectually to satisfy "the Losses, repair the Injuries, or retrieve the "Honour of the Nation; tho' the said Treaty
"of Seville, so advantageous to Spain, hath "been punctually executed on the Part of Great-"Britain.

"This likewise, Sir, is a Proposition which I "cannot think any Gentleman in this House will "pretend to oppose, at least I cannot suggest to "myself any plausible Reason for opposing it.
"Every Gentleman knows how many Petitions
"have been presented to this House by our plun"dered Merchants and Seamen: For several Years,
"we have seldom been a Session without having
"one or more such Petitions presented to us.
"Upon these Applications we have already twice "addressed the Crown: We have already twice "declared, that we would support the Crown in "any Measures that should seem necessary for "vindicating the Rights and the Honour of the "Nation; so that if our Fellow-Subjects still re"main unsatisfied, if those Ravages and Depre"dations are still continued and multiplied upon "us, if the Honour of the Nation still lies "grovelling in the Dust, the Fault cannot be laid "at our Door. Our Ministers cannot excuse "themselves, as some Ministers have formerly
"been apt to do, by saying, that the Parliament
"refused to support them in those Measures that "were necessary for protecting the Trade, or "vindicating the Honour of the Nation. And,
"indeed, I must say, if Negotiation, if Letters,
"Memorials and Representations, had been "Methods proper or sufficient for obtaining "Redress, it appears, from the Piles of Papers
"that have been laid before us, that our Mi"nisters have not been remiss in endeavouring
"to obtain Satisfaction and Reparation for the "Injuries and Insults we have met with; but, in "my Opinion, they have very much mistaken
"the Methods proper to be made use of upon such "Occasions.

"It is amazing, Sir, to take a View of the "Heaps of Letters, Memorials, and Representa"tions, which we have already before us, relating "to this Affair. They look more like the Papers "belonging to an Hereditary Suit in a Court of "Equity, than like the Papers belonging to a "Negotiation between two sovereign and inde"pendent Nations. In a Suit at Law, or in "Equity, it is the Business of those who carry "on the Suit, to prevent its being speedily
"brought to a Conclusion, because they get so "much by it yearly, and tertily, as long as the "Suit continues, and those annual Profits must "cease as soon as the Suit is at an End; and as "they are paid by the Sheet, without any Re"gard to the Matter, it is their interest to heap

"Process upon Process, and in every Paper to "be as verbose and prolix as their Invention can "suggest. But Negotiators are never paid by "the Sheet, nor ought they to be made to ex"pect their chief Reward 'till after the Nego"tiation is brought to a Conclusion; therefore "it is not their Interest to be verbose, or to "heap Memorial upon Memorial; nor is it "their Interest to spin out a Negotiation. It can"not be imagined, that any Negotiation we "have been lately concerned in, was ever spun
"out for continuing Salaries to the Negotia"tors; nor can it be supposed, that Letters,
"Memorials, or Representations have been
"multiplied or extended, for the sake of adding "to, or increasing the Salaries of those who "were concerned in drawing them up; there"fore I cannot avoid being surprized at the "Multitude and the Length of those Papers,
"which seem to belong to the late Negotiations
"between Spain and us.

"Besides, Sir, in all Negotiations it is gene"rally the Duty of the Negotiators, of one Side
"or other, to bring the Negotiation to a speedy
"Issue; but where a Nation has been injured,
"and is in a Condition to revenge itself, it is "more particularly incumbent upon its Nego"tiators to bring the Negotiation to an imme"diate Issue, of one Kind or other; and, for "that Purpose, to be short and substantial in "every Memorial, Answer, or Reply, they de"liver, and peremptory in every Demand they "make. When the known Rights of a Nation "are invaded, it is ridiculous to enter into a "tedious and metaphysical Discussion of the "Point of Right; and still more ridiculous to "make long Answers to every Quirk that may "be made use of by the adverse Party; for the "Councils of Nations are never to be swayed by "subtle Arguing, nor is it consistent with the "Dignity of Sovereigns to plead their Cause,
"like Barristers pleading the Cause of their "Clients before a Court of Justice.

"When an independent and a powerful Sove"reign has been injured, he that speaks in his "Name, Sir, may explain the Nature of the In"jury that has been done, and ought to wait a "reasonable Time for an Answer: He may "even go the Length of a Reply; but if any
"sophistical Arguments or delusive Evasions
"have been made use of in the Answer given "him, he ought to think it beneath the Cha"racter he bears, to take Notice of them in his "Reply; and the Conclusion of his Reply
"ought always to be a peremptory Demand of "Justice within a Time limited. This is the "utmost Length a Sovereign ought to go, if he
"be at that Time in any tolerable Condition for "doing himself Justice; and if we had made "use of this Method of Negotiation with Spain,
"I am convinced the Insults and Injuries put "upon us by that Nation would have been far "less numerous, and less dishonourable for us,
"than they are at present.

"For this Reason, Sir, if our Negotiations
"must be continued yet a while longer, I hope "they will be put upon a different Footing, and "carried

Irreg.

“ carried on in a different Manner, from what they “ have been; but for my Part, I do not see what “ Security we can expect from any Negotiation or “ Treaty; for though the Treaty of Seville be “ not such a one as it ought to be, and might “ have been, if the Squadrons we were at the “ Expence of fitting out, about that Time, had “ received Orders to compel as well as persuade, “ yet by that Treaty the Crown of Spain engaged “ itself, almost as expressly as it can, I believe “ altogether as expressly as it will, be engaged “ by any Treaty we can now obtain by peace“ able Means, to give Satisfaction for all the “ Depredations that had been committed before “ that Time, and to prevent any such for the “ future. By the very first Article of that “ Treaty, all former Treaties were renewed and “ confirmed; and, by the first separate Article, “ most of the Treaties between the two Crowns “ are particularly mentioned, and again express“ ly confirmed; from whence we may see, that “ the Crown of Spain was engaged by that “ Treaty, as much as it can be by general Words “ in any Treaty, to prevent any Injuries being “ done by the Subjects of Spain to the Subjects “ of Great-Britain. 'Tis true, the Treaty of “ 1670 is not mentioned among the rest in the “ first separate Article of the Treaty of Seville, nor “ is it mentioned in the other famous Treaty, “ made between Spain and us in the year 1721.
 “ Whether this happened by Neglect, or if there “ was any hidden Design in not mentioning that “ Treaty among the rest, I shall not pretend to “ determine; but I cannot think the Spaniards “ will from thence pretend to say, we have pass“ ed from, or given up that Treaty, because I “ do not think it is their Interest to say so; for if “ it could be supposed, that there is no such “ Treaty now subsisting between the two Crowns, “ there is nothing to hinder us from trading “ with their Subjects in New Spain by open “ Force; any Laws or Prohibitions they could “ make against such a Trade would be of very “ little Signification: Even all the Guarda “ Costa's they could send thither, would be far “ from being able to prevent our carrying on “ such a Trade; because we could send sufficient “ Squadrons of Men of War to protect all our “ Merchant-Ships employed in that Trade, with“ out a Breach of any Article either in the “ Treaty of 1721, or in the Treaty of Seville.

“ Then, Sir, with Respect to Depredations “ that had been committed upon our Merchants “ before the Conclusion of that Treaty, we know “ that, by the sixth Article thereof, Commissaries “ were to be appointed to examine and decide “ what concerned the Ships and Effects taken at “ Sea, and also all our Pretensions relating to “ Abuses committed in Commerce, and all other “ Pretensions as well in the Indies as in Europe;
 “ and his Catholic Majesty expressly engaged, “ to cause to be executed punctually and exact“ ly, what should be decided by the said Com“ missaries, within six Months after the making “ of their Report. These Commissaries, this “ Nation has Reason to know, were accordingly “ appointed; but as the Spaniards had never, I “ believe, an Intention to perform this Engage“ ment, they took Care that their Commissaries

No. 49.

“ should never agree to any Report; and upon “ this frivolous Pretence, I suppose, among o“ thers of the same Kind, they have ever since “ refused to make us the least Satisfaction for any “ of the Depredations committed before the Con“ cluding of that Treaty, though it be now a“ bove eight Years since the Treaty was con“ cluded, and above five Years since the Commis“ saries ought to have made their Report, accord“ ing to the eighth Article of the same Treaty.

“ From what I have said, Sir, it will appear,
 “ I think, that we can have no great Expecta“ tions from any future Treaty we can make;
 “ but whatever may be the Success of our pre“ sent Negotiations, whatever we may expect, “ whatever Advantages we may reap from any “ future Treaty, it is certain, we have as yet re“ ceived no Satisfaction or Reparation, notwith“ standing the express Promises made by the “ Treaty of Seville, and notwithstanding that “ Treaty's having been performed by us in the “ most punctual Manner; and therefore I hope “ no Opposition will be made against that Part “ of the Resolution I am to move for. Then, as “ to the Assurances that have been given our “ Merchants, of procuring Reparation for their “ Losses and Ill-usage, they have been so fre“ quent, so express, and are so well known,
 “ that I cannot think I have the least Occasion “ for repeating or explaining them; for which “ Reason, I shall for the present conclude with “ begging that Gentlemen would consider for “ what Purposes we sit here: We assemble in “ this House, in order to receive the Petitions and “ hear the Complaints of our injured Fellow-Sub“ jects; but we are not to receive and hear on“ ly, we are likewise in Duty bound to provide “ a Remedy for the Grievances they justly com“ plain of, and to take the most effectual Mea“ sures for that Purpose. We have twice already “ come to general Resolutions upon this Sub“ ject: We have twice already found, that such “ general Resolutions have produced no Effect; “ therefore it would be unpardonable in us to “ proceed no further upon the present Occasion.
 “ Perhaps some Gentlemen may think, we ought “ now to go much further than I have taken the “ Liberty to propose; but I cannot think any “ Gentleman will oppose our going thus far;
 “ for the least we can do, is to assert those “ National Rights which seem of late to “ have been neglected; because, after such a “ solemn and publick Declaration of our Rights, “ I hope no Minister will hereafter dare to give “ up any of them by Treaty, or to allow them “ to be any longer incroached on and violated, “ under the Pretence of a Negotiation.”

Sir Robert Walpole, willing at all Events, if possible, to prevent a Rupture with Spain, rose up, and spoke many Things by way of Allevia-tion; setting forth the Hazards of a War, and the particular Disadvantages that would accrue from a War with Spain, to the Spanish, Italian, and Turkey Merchants; and then concluded thus:

“ Having thus, Sir, laid my Thoughts before “ you, upon the Matter now under our Consi“ deration, and having given you many Rea“ sons for not approving all the Propositions
 “ the Honourable Gentleman has told us he is a“ bout

Sir Robert
 Walpole's
 Speech and Motion.

"bout to make, I shall now beg Leave to offer
 "an Amendment to his Motion; which is, that "the first Part of his Motion should stand as it is "in these Words,—That it is the natural and un-
 "doubted Right of British Subjects to sail with
 "their Ships on any Part of the Seas of America,
 "to and from any Part of his Majesty's Domi-
 "nions.—So far I entirely agree with him; but,
 "in my Opinion, all that he has proposed to fol"low after these Words ought to be left out;
 "and, instead thereof, I propose that these "Words or Resolutions ought to be inserted,
 "—That the Freedom of Navigation and Com"merce, which the Subjects of Great-Britain
 "have an undoubted Right to by the Law of "Nations, and which is not the least restrain"ed by Virtue of any of the Treaties subsist"ing between the Crowns of Great-Britain and "Spain, has been greatly interrupted by the Spani"ards, under Pretences altogether groundless
 "and unjust. That before and since the Execu"tion of the Treaty of Seville, and the Declara"tion made by the Crown of Spain pursuant "thereunto, for the Satisfaction and Security of "the Commerce of Great-Britain, many unjust
 "Seizures and Captures have been made, and "great Depredations committed by the Spaniards,
 "which have been attended with many Instances "of unheard-of Cruelty and Barbarity. That "the frequent Applications made to the Court
 "of Spain, for procuring Justice and Satis"faction to his Majesty's injured Subjects, for "bringing the Offenders to condign Punishment,
 "and for preventing the like Abuses for the fu"ture, have proved vain and ineffectual; and the "several Orders or Cédulas, granted by the "King of Spain, for Restitution and Reparation "of great Losses sustained, by the unlawful and "unwarrantable Seizures and Captures made by "the Spaniards, have been disobeyed by the "Spanish Governors, or totally evaded and elud"ed. And that these Violences and Depreda"tions have been carried on to the great Loss and "Damage of the Subjects of Great-Britain trading
 "to America, and in direct Violation of the Trea"ties subsisting between the two Crowns."

Mr. Pulteney replied with great Spirit against this Amendment proposed; and observed, that it insinuated, that it was not worth the Care of a British Parliament to establish our Rights and Privileges particularly and distinctly; and in the Course of the Debate makes the following Observations:

speech.

"Sir, it is to our Trade and Navigation we "owe the whole of our Riches, Power, and "Splendor. Before we had any Trade or Navi"gation, this Island was little better than a De"sert; and, if we should allow both to be de"stroyed, it will soon be reduced to its former "Condition. The extensive Trade and Navi"gation we now have, is not so much owing to our "Situation, which has always been the same,
 "as to the great Care we have taken in these "latter Ages, that our Merchants and Seamen
 "should meet with Safety and Respect in all Parts "of the World. Our great King Edward III.
 "shewed such a Regard for our Trade and Na"vigation, that, upon a Complaint from our "Merchants, of their having been plundered by "the Spanish Pirates or Guarda Costa's of those "Days, he immediately fitted out a Fleet, and "went in Person to revenge the Depredations

 "that had been committed upon his Subjects,
 "by which he restored the Freedom of our Com"merce, and added a Naval Triumph to the "many Triumphs he had before obtained at Land.
 "The Protection of Trade and Navigation has "always been one of the chief Concerns of all "great Kings and all wise Nations. Even the "Romans, who could never be said to be a Trade-
 "ing People, shewed a great Regard for it, as "appears from the Reproof Cicero gave them in "his Days, for some Neglect they seem to have "been then guilty of. His Words, Sir, upon "that Occasion, are so applicable to this Nation
 "at present, that I shall beg Leave to repeat
 "them. In advising his Countrymen to support "the Cause of their injured Merchants, among "many other beautiful Expressions, he makes "use of the following: *Majores vestri sepe, mer-
 "catoribus, ac naviculariis injuriosus trallatis,
 "bella gesserunt.—Quare videte, nam dubitandum
 "vobis sit, omni studio ad id bellum intrombere, in
 "quo gloria nominis vestri, salus sociorum, veltigalia
 "maxima, fortune plurimorum civium, cum repub-
 "lica defenduntur.—Videte ne, ut illis pulcherrimum
 "fuit tantam vobis imperii gloriam relinquere, sic
 "vobis turpissimum sit, illud, quod accepistis, tueri
 "et conservare non posse.*

"These are Words, Sir, which no true *Engli-
 "man* will ever forget; and I am sorry to say,
 "that I think there is too much Occasion for en"forcing the Remembrance of them at present.
 "We have been negotiating and treating with "Spain for these twenty Years, about nothing
 "that I know of, unless it was about Reparation
 "or Security for our Merchants; and yet, du"ring that whole Time, they have been plunder"ing and abusing our Merchants, almost with"out Intermission. If a Nation's being subject "to daily Insults and Injuries is not a Circum"stance that ought to make it peremptory in "its Demands, I am sure no Circumstance can.
 "This has been our Case for many Years, and will "be our Case, till Spain be made to acknowledge,
 "in the most express and particular Terms, eve"ry one of those Rights they now pretend to "dispute. Ought not this to make us perempto"ry in our Demands? Ought not it to have "made us peremptory long ago? Sir, if we "had peremptorily insisted upon full Satisfaction
 "and Reparation, for the very first Injury that "was offered us, I may venture to affirm, we "should never have been exposed to a second.
 "Nay, considering the Nature of the Injuries and "Insults that have been put upon us, we ought at "first to have done what has always been, and "still is, I hope, in our Power; we ought to "have taken Satisfaction, without being at any "great Pains to Demand it.

"This, Sir, was what Officer Cromwell did in "a like Case, that happened during his Govern"ment, and in a Case where a more powerful "Nation was concerned than ever Spain could "pretend to. In the Histories of his Time we "are told, that an English Merchant-Ship was "taken in the Chops of the Channel, carried in"to St. Maloes, and there confiscated upon some
 "groundless

"groundless Pretence. As soon as the Master of the Ship, who, we are told, was an honest Quaker, got home, he presented a Petition to the Protector in Council, setting forth his Case, and praying for Redress. Upon hearing the Petition, the Protector told his Council, he would take that Affair upon himself, and ordered the Man to attend him next Morning. He examined him strictly as to all the Circumstances of his Case, and finding by his Answers that he was a plain, honest Man, and that he had been concerned in no unlawful Trade, he asked him, If he could go to Paris with a Letter? The Man answered, he could. Well then, says the Protector, prepare for your Journey, and come to me To-morrow Morning. Next Morning he gave him a Letter to Cardinal Mazarine, and told him he must stay but three Days for an Answer. The Answer I mean, Sir, says he, is the full Value of what you might have made of your Ship and Cargo; and tell the Cardinal, that if it is not paid you in three Days, you have express Orders from me to return home. The honest, blunt Quaker, we may suppose, followed his Instructions to a Tittle; but the Cardinal, according to the Manner of Ministers, began to shuffle; for Ministers we know, Sir, will shuffle, when they are any way pressed; therefore the Quaker returned, as he was bid. As soon as the Protector saw him, he asked, Well, Friend, have you got your Money? And, upon the Man's answering he had not, the Protector told him, Then leave your Direction with my Secretary, and you shall soon hear from me. Upon this Occasion, that great Man did not stay to negotiate, or to explain, by long tedious Memorials, the Reasonableness of his Demand. No, Sir, though there was a French Minister residing here, he did not so much as acquaint him with the Story, but immediately sent a Man of War or two to the Channel, with Orders to seize every French Ship they could meet with. Accordingly, they returned in a few Days with two or three French Prizes, which the Protector ordered to be immediately fold, and out of the Produce he paid the Quaker what he demanded for the Ship and Cargo, which the French had unjustly taken from him: Then he sent for the French Minister, gave him an Account of what had happened, and told him there was a Balance, which, if he pleased, should be paid in to him, to the End that he might deliver it to those of his Countrymen, who were the Owners of the French Ships that had been so taken and fold.

"This, Sir, was Oliver Cromwell's Manner of negotiating, this was the Method he took for obtaining Reparation; and what was the Consequence? It produced no War between the two Nations: No, Sir, it made the French Government terribly afraid of giving him the least Offence; and, while he lived, they took special Care that no Injury should be done to any Subject of Great-Britain. This shews, that Oliver Cromwell had a Genius and a Capacity for Government; and accordingly, however unjustly he acquired it, it is certain "that this Nation was as much respected as broad, and flourished as much at home, under his Government, as it ever did under any Government. But when a Nation has the Misfortune to have a Man set at the Head of her Affairs, who knows nothing of foreign, who knows nothing but the little low Detail of Offices; and who, for his Capacity or Knowledge, ought never to have been advanced above the Degree of a Clerk in the Treasury, or some other of our publick Offices; it is then no Wonder to see that Nation despised and insulted abroad, and dissatisfied, mutinous, and seditious at home.

"I wish, Sir, those who have now the Direction of our Negotiations abroad, would assume, if possible, a little of the Spirit and Courage of Oliver Cromwell."

Several others, pro and con, having taken up much Time, the Question was at last put upon the Amendment offered by Sir Robert Walpole, and carried in the Affirmative; whereupon it was resolved to address his Majesty on the Thursday following (the sixth of April) when his Majesty was pleased to give this most gracious Answer:

"Gentlemen,

"I am sensible of the many and unwarrantable Depredations committed by the Spaniards: And you may be assured, I will make use of the most proper and effectual Means, that are in my Power, to procure Justice and Satisfaction to my injured Subjects, and for the future Security of their Trade and Navigation. I can make no Doubt, but you will support me with Cheerfulness in all such Measures, as, in Pursuance of your Advice, I may be necessitated to take, for the Honour of my Crown and Kingdoms, and the Rights of my People."

The Merchants carried their Petitions also to the Lords House, who took them into Consideration in a Committee of the whole House, the Lord Delaware being Chairman; and after the necessary Examinations, and several learned Speeches, they addressed his Majesty, in the following Terms:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, having taken into our Consideration the many unjust Violences and Depredations committed by the Spaniards, upon the Persons, Ships, and Effects of divers of your Majesty's Subjects in America, have come to the following Resolutions, which we beg Leave, in the humblest Manner, to lay before your Majesty, for your Royal Consideration, viz.

"I. Resolved, That the Subjects of the Crown of Great-Britain have a clear and undoubted Right to navigate in the American Seas, to and from any Part of his Majesty's Dominions; and for carrying on such Trade and Commerce as they are justly intitled unto in America; and also to carry all Sorts of Goods and Merchandizes, or Effects, from one Part of his Majesty's Dominions to any Part thereof; and that no Goods, being so carried, are, by any Treaty subsisting between the Crowns of Great-Britain and Spain, to be deemed or taken

His Majesty's Answer to the Commons Address.

The Lords Address.

"taken as contraband or prohibited Goods; and "that the searching of such Ships on the open
"Seas, under Pretence of their carrying con"traband or prohibited Goods, is a Violation
"and Infraction of the Treaties subsisting be"tween the two Crowns.

"II. Resolved, That it appears to this House,
"that as well before, as since the Execution of "the Treaty of Seville, on the Part of Great-"Britain, divers Ships and Vessels, with their "Cargoes, belonging to British Subjects, have "been violently seized and confiscated by the "Spaniards, upon Pretences altogether unjust
"and groundless; and that many of the Sail"ors on board such Ships have been injuriously
"and barbarously imprisoned and ill-treated;
"and that thereby the Liberty of Navigation and "Commerce belonging to his Majesty's Subjects,
"by the Law of Nations, and by Virtue of "the Treaties subsisting between the Crowns of "Great-Britain and Spain, hath been unwarrant-"ably infringed and interrupted, to the great "Loss and Damage of our Merchants, and in "direct Violation of the said Treaties.

"III. Resolved, That it appears to this "House, that frequent Applications have been "made, on the Part of his Majesty, to the Court "of Spain, in a Manner the most agreeable to "Treaties, and to the Peace and Friendship sub"sisting between the two Crowns, for redref"sing the notorious Abuses and Grievances be"fore-mentioned, and preventing the like for "the future, and for obtaining adequate Satis"faction to his injured Subjects; which, in the "Event, have proved entirely fruitless, and of "no Effect.

"We think it our Duty, on this important
"Occasion, humbly to represent to your Ma"jesty, that we are most sensibly affected with "the many and grievous Injuries and Losses sus"tained by your Majesty's trading Subjects,
"by means of these unwarrantable Depreda"tions and Seizures; and to give your Majesty
"the strongest and most sincere Assurances, that "in Case your friendly and powerful Instances "for procuring Restitution and Reparation to "your injured Subjects, and for the future Secu"rity of their Trade and Navigation, shall fail
"of having their due Effect and Influence on the "Court of Spain, and shall not be able to ob"tain that real Satisfaction and Security which "your Majesty may in Justice expect; we will "zealously and cheerfully concur in all such "Measures as shall become necessary for the "support of your Majesty's Honour, the Pre"servation of our Navigation and Commerce,
"and the common Good of these Kingdoms."

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"My Lords,

"I am sensibly touched with the many Hard"ships and Injuries sustained by my trading "Subjects in America, from the Cruelties and "unjust Depredations of the Spaniards. You "may be assured of my Care to procure Satis"faction and Reparation for the Losses they "have already suffered, and Security for the "Freedom of Navigation for the future; and to "maintain to my People the full Enjoyment of "all the Rights to which they are intitled by "Treaty, and the Law of Nations.

"I doubt not but I shall have your Concur"rence for the support of such Measures as "may be necessary for that Purpose."

About this Time the many miserable Objects and Outrages, occasioned by excessive drinking of Spirituous Liquors in and about this great Metropolis, calling aloud for the Attention of the Civil Magistrate; the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the Justices of the Peace in Westminster and other Places adjacent, came to several vigorous Resolutions for enforcing the Act against Retailing Geneva, &c. in Consequence of which, many were fined in the Penalty of ten Pounds, and such as could not pay were committed to Prison.

Complaint also being made to the Lord-Mayor, that the Poor of the several Parishes in this City (who were kept near Tottenham High-Cross) were not properly taken Care of, his Lordship ordered that they should be brought to Town, and kept within the City, according to Acts made for that Purpose.

On Wednesday the twenty-fourth of May, O. S. between seven and eight in the Morning, her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was happily delivered of a Prince at Norfolk-House, in *St.
James's-Square*, who was immediately Christened by the Name of George, and is now Prince of Wales.

The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited on his Majesty, to congratulate him on this joyful Occasion; and Mr. Baron Thompson the Recorder, in their Names, made their Compliments as follows:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen
of the City of London most humbly intreat
your Majesty's Permission to congratulate your Majesty on the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, and the Birth of a Prince.

"These your Majesty's most faithful and dutiful Subjects have a great Satisfaction on every Opportunity of paying their Personal Duty to your Majesty; and it gives them the highest Joy, when the Occasion proceeds from any Good attending your Royal Family.

"They esteem this Addition to it as a very happy Event, and one of the many good Effects of an Alliance formed by your Majesty's Prudence for strengthening the Protestant Interest, and for the Welfare and Prosperity of this Nation.

"Your Majesty's constant Vigilance in promoting these good Ends claims the most dutiful Acknowledgments from all your Majesty's Subjects: And your late most gracious Assurances of your Majesty's particular Care for the Protection of your trading Subjects, and the Security of their Commerce, demand, in a more especial Manner, the most grateful Return from the Citizens of London. And I have the Honour to assure your Majesty, that you may always depend on their most affectionate Regard to your Royal Person, on their ut-

"Support of your Majesty's Government upon
"all Occasions, and on their hearty Wishes to

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"I take very kindly your Congratulation on "the Birth of a Prince, and look upon it as a "fresh Instance of your Duty and Affection to "me and my Family."

On Thursday the eighth of June, the two Sheriffs waiting on his Majesty, to know when he would be pleased to receive the Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of London; his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Robert Cater, Esq, Alderman, one of them.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

*The Humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen
and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.*

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal
"Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and
"Commons, in Common Council assembled, do
"with Hearts full of Joy approach your Throne,
"and humbly beg Leave to offer our Congra"tulations on the happy Increase of your Royal "Family by the Birth of a Prince, and therein
"the strengthening and establishing the Religious "and Civil Rights of this Country, and the Li"berties of Europe."

"We are so sensible of the many Blessings of "your Majesty's Reign, that, from Interest as "well as Duty, we wish it long and prosperous;
"and when in Course of Time this Prince shall "come to Reign, may he, by the Example of "his Royal Predecessors, have learned to rule a "free but obedient People, and become the "Guardian of those Liberties which by their "Precepts he will have been taught to protect."

"We should be wanting in that Duty we owe "to your Majesty, if we did not take this Op"portunity of testifying our Joy, and assuring
"your Majesty of our Fidelity and Affection."

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"I thank you for your Congratulation on "this Occasion, and for this Mark of your Duty "and Affection to me and my Family. The "City of London may always depend upon my "Favour and Protection."

On Wednesday the twenty-first of June, in the Evening, the Ceremony of publishing the Baptism of the young Prince was performed, and the Office completed, by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Oxford, Rector of St. James's Westminster, in his Royal Highness's Apartment in Norfolk-House in St. James's-Square. The Godfathers were the King of Sweden, represented by the Lord Baltimore, and the Duke of Saxe-Gotha, represented by the Marquis of Caernarvon; the Godmother was the Queen of Prussia, represented by the Lady Charlotte Edwin. The Name of the young Prince pronounced on this Occasion, by the Lord Baltimore, was George William Frederick.

NUMB. L.

On Tuesday the twenty-seventh of June, the Lord-Mayor, about fourteen Aldermen, the Officers of the City, and the Common Council, in a grand Cavalcade consisting of eighty-four Coaches, besides the Lord-Mayor's, waited on their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, at their House in St. James's-Square, with the following Address on the Birth of the young Prince:

"May it please your Royal Highnesses,

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Com"mon-Council men of the City of London,
"most humbly beg Leave to attend your Royal "Highnesses, to express our Joy on the Increase "of your Royal Family by the Birth of a Prince,
"and upon the Recovery of her Royal Highness.
"May your Royal Highnesses become the "happy Parents of a numerous Offspring, to "be a Delight to his Majesty and your Royal "Highnesses, to give Joy to his Majesty's Sub"jects, and strengthen every Part of our Con"stitution."

"We doubt not but, by your Royal Highnesses
"Care, this young Prince will be early taught
"those virtuous Maxims, which alone can make "a Prince and People happy; and that by the "Example of his Majesty, and your Royal High"nesses, he will learn, that the Glory, as well
"as Security of the Throne, must be founded in "the Hearts and Affections of the People."

To which his Royal Highness returned this Answer:

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"I return you my Thanks, and those of the "Princes, for this new Instance of your Duty "to the King, and Affection to me. My Son,
"I hope, may come in Time to deserve the "Gratitude of a free People, which his Majesty
"now enjoys; and it shall be my constant Care
"to instruct him, that true Loyalty can only be "the Result of Liberty."

They all had the Honour to kiss their Royal Highnesses Hands.

On the twenty-fourth of June, Mr. William Wightman, a Protestant Dissenter, being returned, by the Common-Hall, one of the Sheriffs for this City, he refused to serve the said Office, pleading his Disqualification according to the Corporation Act: Whereupon William Westbrook, Esq; was chosen in his Stead.

About five a Clock on the second of August, the City was greatly alarmed at the Sight of two large Birds, which were perched on the Top of St. Paul's Cathedral, one on the Cross, and the other on the Pine-Apple; they were very large, and appeared through a Telescope to be Eagles, though some were of Opinion they were Cormorants. Be this as it will, they sat very quietly till a Man went up to the Gallery and fired a Gun at them, on which they flew away. Various were the Sentiments of the Multitude at this uncommon Sight; and some, who turn every thing to Omens, cried out, See, see, how the Spaniards fly away at the Firing of a Gun, noising else will bring the Dons to Reason. This being observed to have such an Effect to draw so numerous a Multitude of People together, and the Necessities of the State requiring the Fleet to be suddenly manned, the Pres-Gangs placed a live Turkey on the Top of the Monument, which in a short Time drew a prodigious Number of Gazers; by which Means many idle Hands, proper to man his Majesty's Fleet, were presently picked up.

First Pile driven at Westminster-Bridge.

On the thirteenth of September, the first Pile was driven, by a new-invented Machine, for the Foundation of the new Bridge at Westminster, in the Sight of a vast Crowd of People. The Town was about this Time entertained with a most surprising Creature, brought over in the Speaker, from Carolina. It was a Female about four Feet high, shaped in every Part like a Woman, except its Head, which nearly resembled an Ape: She walked upright naturally, sat down to her Food, which was chiefly Greens, and fed herself with her Hands, as a human Creature. She was very fond of a boy on board, and was observed always sorrowful at his Absence; and was the Female of the Creature which the Angolans call Chimpanze, or the Mockman. She was taken in a Wood at Guinea.

Fire at Galley-Key.

On the twenty-fifth of October, in the Afternoon, a Fire broke out in a Warehouse at Galley-Key, near the Custom-House, which burnt with great Violence for some Hours, during which Time a considerable Quantity of valuable Merchandize was consumed. As soon as it was discovered, a Guard was ordered from the Tower, to prevent Rogues from stealing the Goods, &c. And, upon the first Notice, the Lord-Mayor, properly attended, hastened to the same Place, to encourage and animate the Firemen, and to advise and direct as becomes a good Magistrate on such melancholy Occasions.

*License for erecting a Foundling-
Hospital.*

Several eminent and worthy Merchants in the Reign of Queen Anne, having observed the great Neglect of the publick Guardians of the Poor, the Churchwardens, who by the Laws of the Land are enabled to provide for them; and that, through their Inhumanity, the Infant Part of their Charge were too frequently given up to Beggary and Idleness, or suffered to perish by bad Nursing or Want; resolved to promote the Foundation of an Hospital for deserted young Children, after the laudable Example of foreign Nations, in order to raise up a Generation of virtuous and industrious Servants, fit for the most laborious Offices, and the lowest Stations. Yet how good and beneficial soever this Scheme appeared to the Publick, it met with great Opposition from the Over-righteous, who wrongly supposed that such a Receptacle of Foundlings would be an Encouragement of Vice: Which for that Time prevented them from doing any more in this grand Undertaking, than wishing well to the Design, and by their Wills to bequeath some large Benefactions to be paid to such an Hospital, so soon as it should be erected; which was happily effected by Thomas Coram, a Commander of a Ship in the Merchants Service, who about this Time, having gained a perfect Knowledge of the Premises, and pitying the Distresses of those innocent Babes, who were frequently murdered to prevent the Discovery of their inhuman Parents, quitted his Employ, and embarked in the Prosecution of this Foundation.

*Captain
Coram

ling-Hospital.*

His first Step was to obtain a Recommendation of the Design from some Persons of Quality and Distinction at Court; which he solicited with such unwearied Diligence, that, in a short Time, he was furnished with the following Memorial, signed by those Ladies whose Names are therein mentioned:

"Whereas, among the many excellent Designs and Institutions of Charity which this Nation, and especially the City of London, has hitherto encouraged and established, no Expedient has yet been found out for preventing the frequent Murders of poor miserable Infants at their Birth, or for suppressing the inhuman Custom of exposing new-born Infants to perish in the Streets, or the putting out such unhappy Foundlings to wicked and barbarous Nurses, who, undertaking to bring them up for a small and trifling Sum of Money, do often suffer them to starve for Want of due Sustainance or Care, or, if permitted to live, either turn them into the Streets to beg or steal, or hire them out to loose Persons, by whom they are trained up in that infamous Way of Living, and sometimes are blinded or maimed, and distorted in their Limbs, in order to move Pity and Compassion, and thereby become fitter Instruments of Gain to those vile, merciless Wretches.

"For a Beginning to redress so deplorable a Grievance, and to prevent as well the Effusion of so much innocent Blood, as the fatal Consequences of that Idleness, Beggary, or Stealing, in which such poor Foundlings are generally bred up, and to enable them, by an early and effectual Care of their Education, to become useful Members of the Commonwealth; we, whose Names are underwritten, being deeply touched with Compassion for the Sufferings and lamentable Condition of such poor, abandoned, helpless Infants, as well as the enormous Abuses and Mischiefes to which they are exposed; and in order to supply the Government plentifully with useful Hands on many Occasions; and for the better producing good and faithful Servants from amongst the poor and miserable cast-off Children or Foundlings, now a Pest to the Publick, and a chargeable Nuisance within the Bills of Mortality; and for settling a yearly Income for their Maintenance and proper Education, till they come to a fit Age for Service; are desirous to encourage, and willing to contribute towards erecting an Hospital for Infants whom their Parents are not able to maintain, and having no Right to any Parish; which we conceive will not only prevent many horrid Murders, Cruelties, and other Mischiefes, and be greatly beneficial to the Publick, but will also be acceptable to God Almighty, as being the only Remedy of such great Evils, which have been so long neglected, though always complained of; provided due and proper Care be taken for setting on Foot so necessary an Establishment, and a Royal Charter be granted by the King to such Persons as his Majesty shall approve of, who shall be willing to become Benefactors for the erecting and endowing such an Hospital; and for the receiving the voluntary Contributions of charitable and well-

After Mr. Coram had procured this Recommendation, he gained easy Access to the Gentlemen, and was favoured with another Memorial in the same Tenor, signed by a great Number of Noblemen and others of Fortune and Reputation. With these Credentials he at last found Admittance to his present Majesty, who was graciously pleased, on the seventeenth Day of December, 1738, to approve of his Petition, and in Council passed a Licence for nominating Trustees, &c. for erecting an Hospital for Foundlings, and which was afterwards confirmed by his Royal Charter, that bears Date the seventeenth of October following.

London Gazette.

James Buchanan.

On the twentieth of December one James Buchanan, condemned at the late Admiralty-Sessions at the Old-Bailey for the Murder of Mr. Smith, fourth Mate of the Royal Guardian Indiaman, in Canton River in the East-Indies, was carried from Newgate to Execution-Dock in Wapping, to suffer for the same; but, before he had hung five Minutes, a Gang of Sailors cut him down, and carried him off alive in Triumph down the Water. He afterwards escaped to France, as was commonly reported.

Bill of Mortality.

The Christenings this Year, computing from the thirteenth of December, 1737, to the twelfth of December, 1738, within the Bills of Mortality, were, 8212 Males, 7848 Females, in all 16060: The Burials within the same Time and Liberties were, 12750 Males, 13075 Females, in all 25825.

A Scrutiny for Alderman of Cheap Ward.

On the third of January came on the Election of an Alderman for Cheap Ward, on the Demise of Sir Robert Kendal Cater, when Sir Joseph Eyles and Richard Hoare, Esq; were proposed; and the Interest of both these Gentlemen was so equal among the Electors, that, upon calling up the Poll, the Numbers stood thus:

For Sir Joseph Eyles 137, Richard Hoare, Esq; 136.

Sir Joseph Eyles chosen.

A Scrutiny was demanded in Favour of the latter; but, on the twenty-ninth, Sir Joseph was declared Alderman of Cheap Ward by a Majority of nine, having gained eight upon the Scrutiny.

Great Storm.

In the Night, about Two o'Clock, between the third and fourth of this Month, the City and Parts adjacent were greatly surpris'd with a violent Storm of Thunder and Lightning, attended with a furious Wind and Rain, which continued upwards of three Hours, but without doing any considerable Damage.

At the Opening of the Parliament this Year, the City and trading Part of the Nation were greatly alarmed at a ministerial Project to frustrate the good Effects of the Resolutions taken in the last Session, for redressing the Grievances complained of by the Merchants oppressed by the Spanish Depredations. During the Recess of Parliament, a Convention had been contrived and signed between the two Courts of London and Madrid.

The Articles of the Convention between the Crowns of Great-Britain and Spain, concluded at the Pardo, January 14, 1739, N. S.

"I. Whereas the ancient Friendship, so desirable and necessary for the reciprocal Interest of both Nations, and particularly with Regard to their Commerce, cannot be established upon a lasting Foundation, unless Care be taken, not only to adjust and regulate the Pretensions for reciprocal Reparation of the Damages already sustained, but above all to find out Means to prevent the like Causes of Complaint for the future, and to remove absolutely, and for ever, every Thing which might give Occasion thereto; it is agreed to labour immediately, with all imaginable Application, to attain so desirable an End; and for that Purpose there shall be named, on the Part of their Britannick and Catholick Majesties respectively, immediately after the Signing of the present Convention, two Ministers Plenipotentiaries, who shall meet at Madrid within six Weeks, to be reckoned from the Day of the Exchange of the Ratifications, there to confer, and finally regulate the respective Pretensions of the two Crowns, as well with Relation to the Trade and Navigation in America and Europe, and to the Limits of Florida and of Carolina, as concerning other Points, which remain likewise to be adjusted; the whole according to the Treaties of 1667, 1670, 1713, 1715, 1721, 1728, and 1729, including that of the Assiento of Negroes, and the Convention of 1716; and it is also agreed, that the Plenipotentiaries so named shall begin their Conferences six Weeks after the Exchange of the Ratifications, and shall finish them within the Space of eight Months.

Articles of the Convention between Great-Britain and Spain in 1739.

"II. The Regulation of the Limits of Florida and of Carolina, which, according to what has been lately agreed, was to be decided by Commissioners on each Side, shall likewise be committed to the said Plenipotentiaries, to procure a more solid and effectual Agreement; and, during the Time that the Discussion of that Affair shall last, Things shall remain in the afore-said Territories of Florida and of Carolina in the Situation they are in at present, without increasing the Fortifications there, or taking any new Posts; and, for this Purpose, his Britannick Majesty and his Catholick Majesty shall cause the necessary Orders to be dispatched immediately after the Signing of this Convention.

"III. After having duly considered the Demands and Pretensions of the two Crowns, and of their respective Subjects, for Reparation of

"the

" the Damages sustained on each Side, and all " Circumstances which relate to this important " Affair; it is agreed, that his Catholic Majesty
 " shall cause to be paid to his Britannick Majesty
 " the Sum of ninety-five thousand Pounds Ster" ling for a Ballance, which has been admitted as
 " due to the Crown and the Subjects of Great- " Britain, after Deduction made of the Demands " of the Crown and Subjects of Spain; to the End " that the above-mentioned Sum, together with " the Amount of what has been acknowledged
 " on the Part of Great-Britain to be due to Spain
 " on her Demands, may be employed by his Brit-
 " annick Majesty for the Satisfaction, Discharge,
 " and Payment of the Demands of his Subjects
 " upon the Crown of Spain; it being under" stood nevertheless, that it shall not be pretend" ed, that this reciprocal Discharge extends or " relates to the Accounts and Differences which " subsist or are to be settled between the Crown " of Spain and the Company of the Assiento of " Negroes, nor to any particular or private Con" tracts that may subsist between either of the two
 " Crowns, or their Ministers, with the Subjects " of the other, or between the Subjects and Sub" jects of each Nation respectively; with Excep" tion however of all Pretensions of this Class,
 " mentioned in the Plan presented at Seville by " the Commissaries of Great-Britain, and included " in the Account lately made out at London, of " Damages sustained by the Subjects of the said
 " Crown, and especially the three Particulars in" serted in the said Plan, and making but one " Article in the Account, amounting to one " hundred and nineteen thousand five hundred " and twelve Piasters three Reals and three " Quarts of Plate; and the Subjects on each " Side shall be entitled, and shall have Liberty
 " to have Recourse to the Laws, or to take " other proper Measures, for causing the above-
 " said Engagements to be fulfilled, in the same " Manner as if this Convention did not exist.

" IV. The Value of the Ship Woolball, which " was taken and carried to the Port of Campechy
 " in 1732, the Loyal Charles, the Dispatch, the " George, and the Prince William, which were " carried to the Havanna in 1737, and the St.
 " James to Porto Rico in the same Year, having " been included in the Valuation that has been " made of the Demands of the Subjects of Great-
 " Britain, as also several others that were taken " before; if it happens, that, in Consequence of " the Orders that have been dispatched by the " Court of Spain for the Restitution of them,
 " Part, or the Whole of them, have been re" stored, the Sums so received shall be deducted
 " from the ninety-five thousand Pounds Sterling,
 " which is to be paid by the Court of Spain, ac" cording to what is above stipulated: It being
 " however understood, that the Payment of the " ninety-five thousand Pounds Sterling shall not " be, for that Reason, in any Manner delayed;
 " saving that what may have been previously re" ceived shall be restored.

" V. The present Convention shall be ap" proved and ratified by his Britannick Majesty
 " and by his Catholic Majesty; and the Ratifica" tions thereof shall be delivered and exchanged
 " at London within six Weeks, or sooner, if it " can be done, to be reckoned from the Day of " the Signing.

" In Witness whereof, we, the underwritten
 " Ministers Plenipotentiaries of his Britannick
 " Majesty and of his Catholic Majesty, by Virtue " of our full Powers, have signed the pre" sent Convention, and caused the Seal of our " Arms to be affixed thereto. Done at the Pardo,
 " the fourteenth Day of January, 1739.

" Sebastian de la Zúñiga. (L. S.)"

Substance of the two separate Articles.

" I. Whereas it has been agreed, by the first " Article of the Convention, that there shall be " named on the Part of their Britannick and Ca- " tholic Majesties respectively, two Ministers
 " Plenipotentiaries, who shall meet at Madrid
 " within six Weeks, &c. their said Majesties have " named, and do by these Presents name, viz.
 " his Britannick Majesty, Benjamin Keene, Esq;
 " his said Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary to " his Catholic Majesty, and Abraham Castres, Esq;
 " his said Britannick Majesty's Consul-General at " the Court of his Catholic Majesty, his Pleni" potentiaries for that Purpose; and his Catholic
 " Majesty, Don Joseph de la Quintana, his Coun" sellor in the supreme Council of the Indies, and " Don Stephen Joseph de Abaria, Knight of the " Order of Calatrava, Counsellor in the same
 " Council, and Superintendent of the Chamber " of Accounts, who shall be immediately in" structed to begin the Conferences: And whereas " it has been agreed by the third Article of the " Convention, that the Sum of ninety-five thou" sand Pounds Sterling is due, on the Part of " Spain, as a Ballance to the Crown and Subjects " of Great-Britain, after Deduction made of the " Demands of the Crown and Subjects of Spain;
 " his Catholic Majesty shall cause to be paid at " London, within four Months, to be reckoned " from the Day of the Exchange of the Ratifica" tions, or sooner if it be possible, in Money,
 " the above-mentioned Sum, to such Persons as " shall be authorized, on the Part of his Britan-
 " nick Majesty, to receive it.

" II. It is declared, that the Ship called the " Suceff, which was taken on the fourteenth of " April, 1738, as she was coming out from the " Island of Antigua, by a Spanish Guarda Costa,
 " and carried to Porto Rico, is not comprehended
 " in the Convention; and his Catholic Majesty " promises, that the said Ship and its Cargo shall " be forthwith restored, or the just Value thereof,
 " to the lawful Owners; provided that, previous " to the Restitution of the said Ship, the Person " or Persons interested therein do give Security
 " at London, to the Satisfaction of Don Thomas
 " Geraldino, his Catholic Majesty's Minister Ple" nipotentiary, to abide by what shall be decided
 " thereupon by the Ministers Plenipotentiaries
 " of their said Majesties, that have been named,
 " &c. And his Catholic Majesty agrees, as far " as shall depend upon him, that the above-" mentioned Ship shall be referred to the Exami" nation and Decision of the Plenipotentiaries;
 " his Britannick Majesty promises likewise to re" fer, as far as shall depend upon him, to the " Decision

" Decision of the Plenipotentiaries, the Brigantine
 " Santa Theresa, seized in the Port of Dublin in " Ireland, in 1735. And it is declared by these " Presents, that the third Article of the Conven" tion does not extend, nor shall be construed to " extend, to any Ships or Effects that may have " been taken or seized since the tenth of December,
 " 1737, or may be hereafter taken or seized; in " which Cases Justice shall be done according to " the Treaties, as if the aforesaid Convention had " not been made; it being however understood,
 " that this relates only to the Indemnification and " Satisfaction to be made for the Effects seized,
 " or Prizes taken, but that the Decision of the " Cases which may happen, in order to remove " all Pretext for Dispute, is to be referred to the " Plenipotentiaries, to be determined by them
 " according to the Treaties."

It seems, before his Catholic Majesty could be prevailed on to sign this, he insisted on having a Kind of Defiance drawn up, in Form of a Protest, of which the following is a Copy:

King of Spain's Protest on signing it.

" Don Sebastian de la Quadra, Counsellor and " first Secretary of State of his Catholic Majesty,
 " and his first Plenipotentiary for the Convention
 " which is treating with the King of England, by " Order of his Sovereign, and in Consequence of " his repeated Memorials and Conferences that " have passed with Don Benjamin Keene, Minister " Plenipotentiary of his Britannick Majesty, and " having agreed therein, with reciprocal Accord,
 " that the present Declaration shall be made as
 " the essential and precise Means to overcome the " so-much-debated Disputes, and, in order that " the said Convention may be signed, does declare
 " in due Form, that his Catholic Majesty reserves
 " to himself, in its full Force, the Right of being " able to suspend the Assiento of Negroes, and " for dispatching the necessary Orders for the " Execution thereof, in Case the Company does " not subject herself to pay, within a short Time,
 " the sixty-eight thousand Pounds Sterling, which
 " she has confessed is owing on the Duty of Ne" groes, according to the Regulation of fifty-two " Pence per Dollar, or in the Profits of the Ship
 " Caroline; and likewise declares, that, under the " Validity and Force of this Protest, the Signing " of the said Convention may be proceeded on,
 " and in no other Manner. Wherefore, upon this " firm Supposition, and that it may not be eluded " on any Motive or Pretext whatsoever, his " Catholic Majesty hath been induced thereto.

Paris, Jan. 10, 1739.

" Don Sebastian de la Quadra."

Which was no sooner made publick, than a Common Council was summoned to consider of what lawful Methods this City could take to prevent its being approved by the Parliament. Accordingly they met, on the twentieth of February, in the Council-Chamber at Guildhall, to the Number of two hundred Members; and, when the Lord-Mayor put the Question for appointing a Committee for drawing up a Petition against it, the Appearance was so great, that it was thought every Hand was held up for the Petitioning:
 However, when his Lordship came to put the
 No. 50.

Question the other Way, as is usual, he found that there were three Placemen who held up their Hands against petitioning; and Sir John Eyles, formerly a Commissioner for the Sale of Lord Derwentwater's Estate, moved, in the Court of Aldermen, the putting the Negative upon it; which Motion was seconded by Sir Robert Baylis, one of the Commissioners of the Customs; but it being strongly opposed and excellently well spoken to by the Lord-Mayor, Sir John Barnard, Alderman Heatcote, &c. that Court did not divide; so that a Petition was immediately drawn up, approved of, and delivered to both Houses of Parliament on the twenty-third, in these Terms:

" The most humble Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Al" dermen, and Commons of the City of London,
 " in Common Council assembled, to both Houses of
 " Parliament,

" Sheweth,

" That the Citizens of London are too deeply inte" rested in whatever affects the Trade of this Nation,
 " not to express the utmost Anxiety for the Wel" fare of that only Source of our Riches; and it " is with a Concern the Petitioners are unable to " express, that they perceive the Trade to his " Majesty's American Colonies still continues ex" posed to the Insults of the Spaniards, who, under " unwarrantable and injurious Pretences, continue " to stop, search, and make Prize of British
 " Vessels, navigating the American Seas, in mani" fest Violation of the Treaties subsisting between " the two Crowns; and that the Petitioners ap" prehend, that the Trade from these his Ma" jesty's Kingdoms to his American Colonies is of " the utmost Importance, and almost the only
 " profitable Trade this Nation now enjoys unri" valed by others; and, that the Petitioners
 " were induced to hope, from his Majesty's " known Goodness and paternal Care of his Sub" jects, supported by the vigorous Resolutions of " both Houses of Parliament, and the Equipment
 " of a very powerful Fleet, that his Majesty's " trading Subjects in the Seas of America, as well " as in all other Parts of the Ocean, would not " only have received a full Satisfaction for all " their Losses, occasioned by the Spanish Depreda" tions, but also an undoubted Security for their " Navigation and Commerce in Time to come;
 " and that a reasonable and adequate Reparation
 " would likewise have been obtained for the Bar" barities and inhuman Cruelties exercised by that " Nation on the English Seamen, who have had " the Unhappiness of falling into their merciless
 " Hands; and expressing their great Concern and " Surprise to find, by the Convention lately con" cluded between his Majesty and the King of " Spain, that the Spaniards are so far from giving " up their, as the Petitioners apprehend, unjust
 " Pretensions of a Right to visit and search our " Ships in the open Seas of America, that this Pre-" tension of theirs is, amongst others, referred " to the future Regulation and Decision of Ple" nipotentiaries appointed on each Side, whereby " the Petitioners apprehend it is in some Degree
 " admitted; and that the Petitioners conceive
 " they have too much Cause to fear, if the Right
 " pretended to by Spain, of searching British Ships

Petition of Convention

"at Sea, be admitted in any Manner or Degree
 "whatsoever, that the Trade of his Majesty's "Subjects in or to America will become so pre"carious, as to depend in a great Measure upon "the Indulgence and Justice of the Spaniards, of "both which they have given, for some Years "past, such Specimens, as the Petitioners think "this Nation can have no Cause to be satisfied "with; and expressing the Apprehensions of the "Petitioners, that such a precarious Situation as "this must inevitably expose the Trade in and to "the American Seas to continual Interruptions "and Alarms, as well as to frequent Losses; and "that, to these unhappy Causes the Petitioners "apprehend the present low State of the British
 "Colonies in America may, in a great Measure,
 "be attributed; and that, if the cruel Treatment "of the English Sailors, whose hard Fate has "thrown them into the Hands of the Spaniards,
 "should be put up without any Reparation, the "Petitioners apprehend it may be the Means of "detering Seamen from undertaking Voyages to "the Seas of America without an Advance of "Wages, which that Trade, or any other, will "not be able to support; and that the Peti"tioners therefore, having laid before Parliament
 "the high Importance this Trade is of to the "Kingdom in general, and this City in particu"lar, thought it their indispensable Duty to re"present to Parliament, the fatal Consequences "of leaving the Freedom of our Navigation and "Commerce any longer in Suspence and Uncer"tainty; and therefore expressing their Hope,
 "that the Parliament will take it into mature "Deliberation, and do therein as shall seem
 "meet."

Several other Petitions, in the same Tenor, were presented at the same Time from the West- India Merchants of this City, the Merchants Adventurers of Bristol, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Glas- gow, &c. The several Persons that presented these Petitions to the respective Houses of Parliament, in the Names of the Petitioners, recommended them to their Consideration in the strongest Terms and warmest Zeal for the Maintenance of our Rights and Privileges in the American Seas; and particularly moved, that, as the Spaniards pretended an exclusive Right to the Navigation in those Seas, the Petitioners might be heard by their Counsel. This Motion produced a great and long Debate. The ministerial Party, determined, at all Events, to palm the Convention upon the Nation, opposed every Proposition of those who rejected it. They alledged in the Lords House, That there was no Precedent for admitting the Merchants to plead their Cause at their Bar by Counsel; and endeavoured, by insisting vigorously on Form, to deprive the Complainants of the Means of guarding against the artful Evasions which it was apprehended might be prepared to invalidate their just Assertions. To which, in the House of Lords, the Lord Carteret replied:

"My Lords,

"The Case of the Petitioners is of a very "extraordinary Nature; so extraordinary, my "Lords, that I don't believe, if we consider it

"in all the Lights it will admit of, that ever the "like was brought before your Lordships, and,
 "consequently, there can be no Precedent by "which we can determine the present Question.
 "I, my Lords, was, it is true, not very old "when the Precedent brought by the noble Lord
 "happened: But, my Lords, I was not so young "but that I could make some Observations that "have been of Use to me since; and, my Lords,
 "give me Leave to say, that nothing could differ
 "more from the Case of the Merchants at that "Time, than the Case of your Petitioners now.
 "The Merchants were heard against the Treaty "of Commerce, my Lords, not in Consequence "of a Petition to your Lordships. My Lords,
 "you thought fit, when that Treaty was com"municated to you, to send for the Merchants;
 "you examined them, you encouraged them, my "Lords, to declare their Grievances; your "Lordships yourselves were Counsel for them;
 "for, my Lords, you found their Objections so "strong against the Treaty, that it was thrown "out. How does this tally with the Case now "before us? Your Petitioners have been great "Sufferers by the Spaniards, and they see a Peace
 "ready to be concluded, in which they appre"hend, not only their future Interests may be "neglected, but their past Wrongs are not suffi"ciently repaired. My Lords, this makes them "Parties; and it has ever been a Rule with the "Parliament of Great-Britain to hear all Parties
 "by Counsel, when any Thing depends before "either House which they conceive may affect "their Properties. It is true, my Lords, that "the Legislature are the best Judges of the Man"ner in which the general Rights of this Nation
 "are to be secured; but, I believe, we shall not "be very fond of approving any Measure that "may encroach upon private Property. The "Merchants, who were concerned against the "Treaty of Commerce with France, my Lords,
 "had no private Property at Stake; all that was "then to be considered was, how far the Trade
 "of the Nation would be affected by that Treaty;
 "therefore there was no Occasion for Counsel, a "bare Representation of Facts was sufficient for "that Purpose: But, my Lords, that is not suf"ficient now, there are many Claims of our "Merchants to be discussed; we are to hear from "them, or their Counsel, the Grounds of their "Claims; and we are to consider upon what "Foundation our Commissaries proceeded, when "they took upon them to make such large De"ductions from those Claims. My Lords,
 "we don't know what particular Intricacies
 "there may be in such an Enquiry; and there"fore I cannot but think, that it would be "doing a Piece of Hardship to the Petition"ers, if we refused to hear them in any Man"ner that they think can best serve their Pur"poses.

"But, my Lords, besides the Reasons I have "already advanced, to shew that the Case before "us, and the Precedent brought by the noble
 "Lord, are no way parallel, I have another Rea"son for allowing the Petitioners to be heard by "Counsel: I don't doubt, my Lords, of our "having as sensible and as honest Men among "the Petitioners, as there are in any Country;
 "but,

Lord Carteret's
 Answer.

"but, my Lords, give me Leave to say, that "few Ages and few Countries produce such a "Man as he who was the Mouth of our Mer"chants upon that Occasion: My Lords, where
 "he spoke, there was no Occasion for Counsel;
 "he talked, my Lords, like a Statesman, a Law"yer, and a Merchant at once: I do not know,
 "my Lords, if ever we had a greater Man, in "his Way: Therefore, my Lords, unless we "could be sure of there being such another Man
 "among your Petitioners at present, I think we "ought, by all means, to hear them by Counsel,
 "if they should think fit. Perhaps, my Lords,
 "there may be no Occasion for it; perhaps the "Information we may receive from themselves
 "will be sufficient to determine us: But, my "Lords, I think their Case is so hard, and so "very singular, that we ought rather to sug"gest Advantages to them, than deprive them
 "of any Advantages for which they may petition
 "to us."

And, in the House of Commons, Sir John Barnard spoke as follows:

"Mr. Speaker,

"Sir, from the Number of Petitions that are "now ready, or preparing to be presented to us,
 "against our late Convention with Spain, from
 "the Rank and Character of the several Peti"tioners, and from the Allegations set forth in "the Petition that is now before us, we have "great Reason, I think, to conclude, that our "Convention is far from being such a one as it "ought to be. From the great and considerable "Bodies of Merchants that have petitioned, or "are preparing to petition against it, and from "our seeing not so much as one Petition in its "Favour, we must conclude, that the whole "Body of our Merchants think it a most dis-
 "honourable, disadvantageous, and dangerous
 "Treaty. On the other Hand, Sir, we ought "in Charity to believe, that our Ministers who "negotiated this Convention, and our Ministers
 "who advised his Majesty to ratify it, thought "it either a good one, or, at least, the best that "our present Circumstances would permit us to "insist on. Therefore, when this Convention "comes to be examined in this House, we ought "to consider ourselves as Judges in an Affair in "which the whole Body of our Merchants, Plan"ters, and Sailors are Plaintiffs, and our Mi"nisters and Negotiators Defendants; and, in an "Affair of such Importance, an Affair in which "the Parties concerned are of so great Conse"quence, surely it will be allowed, that it be"hoves us not only to have the best Information,
 "both as to Matters of Right and Matters of "Fact, but also to have all the Proofs and Ar"guments that can be brought upon either Side "of the Question, stated and laid before us in "the most methodical, the fullest, and the clearest
 "Light.

"For this Reason, Sir, it is, I think, abso"lutely necessary for us, not only to refer this "Petition to the Committee who are to consider
 "of the Convention, which I am confident no
 "Gentleman will oppose; but I likewise think it "absolutely necessary to allow the Petitioners to "be heard before that Committee, either by "themselves or Counsel, with Regard to this "Convention, which they so heavily, and, I am "afraid, so reasonably complain of; and, if our "Ministers and Negotiators have a mind to "justify their Proceedings, they may move, or "get one to move for them, that Counsel may at "the same Time be heard in Favour of this Child

 "of theirs, which, like other monstrous Births,
 "is in some Danger of being smothered upon its "first Appearance in the World. As I have no "intimate Correspondence with them, nor with "any one of them, I cannot pretend to guess at "what they may, in this Case, resolve on; but,
 "as I have always had a good Correspondence
 "with our Merchants and Planters, I may ven"ture to say, that such of them as are now Sup-
 "plicants at our Bar, will be glad of being ad"mitted to be heard by their Counsel upon this "Occasion; and will be far from grudging any "Expence, that may be necessary for giving us
 "a full and clear View of the important Affair
 "that is soon to come before us: Therefore I "shall conclude what I am to say upon the pre"sent Occasion with a Motion to this Effect;
 "That the Petition now presented to us be re"ferred to the Consideration of the Committee of "the whole House, who are to consider of the "Convention between Great-Britain and Spain,
 "concluded at the Pardo, Jan. 14, 1739, N. S.
 "and the separate Articles belonging thereunto,
 "with the several Ratifications thereof; and "that the Petitioners, if they think fit, be heard
 "upon their Petition, either by themselves or "Counsel, before the said Committee.

"This, Sir, I take to be so reasonable a Pro"position, that I hope no Gentleman will oppose
 "it: However, before I make my Motion, I "shall beg Leave to observe, that in all Trials at "Law, even in criminal Trials, where, by the "common Method of Proceeding, Counsel are "not admitted to be heard, wherever a Point of "Right or Law comes to be disputed, Counsel
 "are always admitted to speak as to such Points, "for the better Information of the Judges; and
 "yet, I hope I may be allowed to presume, that "our Judges, especially of late Years, are as "much Masters of the Laws of their Country as "the several Members of this House can be sup"posed to be of the Law of Nations, and of the "several Rights and Privileges which are founded "upon that Law, or upon the particular Treaties
 "now subsisting between us and Spain. There"fore, when any such Right or Privilege comes "to be disputed before us, there is at least as "great a Necessity for admitting Counsel to be "heard upon such Points for our Information,
 "as there can be for admitting Counsel to be "heard upon any Point of Law for the Informa"tion of our Judges.

"If we attend, Sir, to the Petition now upon "our Table, we shall from thence see, that when "the Convention comes to be taken into Consi"deration, there are several Matters of Right
 "that must be enquired into, and some of them
 "may, perhaps, be disputed even by some Gen"tlemen in this House. We know that the Spa"niards have lately pretended to a Right to visit "and search British Ships, sailing to and from
 "the

Sir John
 Barnard's
 Speech.

“ the British Plantations: This is a Right which, “ I believe, no Gentleman in this House will “ pretend to justify; however, as the Spaniards “ do pretend to justify it, or at least have exercised it, it is a Point of Right, which ought to “ be fully enquired into, before we can judge of “ the Convention. But there is another Point of “ Right or Law that will, I believe, be disputed “ even in this House, and that is, Whether this “ Right of visiting and searching our Ships in the “ open Seas, which the Spaniards lay Claim to, “ is not in some Degree admitted by us, by our “ agreeing to refer this Pretension of theirs to the “ future Regulation of Plenipotentiaries? For “ if there is the least Ground even for the Spaniards “ to alledge, that we have, by such Reference, in any Degree admitted of this Pretension, surely every Gentleman, who has a Regard for the Honour and Happiness of his Country, will condemn a Treaty which gives the Spaniards any Ground to say so. And “ whether they may not from this Treaty have, “ or pretend to have, some Ground for saying so, “ is a Point of Right, which the Petitioners seem “ to apprehend, and which several Gentlemen in “ this House, as well as I, think we have Reason “ to apprehend; though our Apprehensions will “ certainly be said to be groundless, by all those “ who are Favourers of the Convention. But, as “ this is a Point which will and must be judged “ of by Foreigners as well as by us, we ought to “ have it fully argued, before we pass any Judgment upon it.

“ As this Point, in particular, Sir, depends “ upon the Law of Nations, and upon the Constitution that is usually put upon preliminary “ Articles or Conventions, we cannot suppose “ that the Petitioners are capable of giving us “ any Light into this Affair; and therefore, if “ it were but for the Sake of this Point only, “ we ought to allow them to be heard by their “ Counsel upon this Occasion. There may be “ other Points of Right, which ought to be enquired into: I believe there are several others “ which we ought to insist on, as the undoubted “ Rights and Privileges of this Nation; and yet “ the general Reference contained in this Convention may hereafter give Spain a Pretence to “ say, that even we ourselves admitted them to “ be such as were disputable. For this Reason, “ Sir, before we pass any Judgment in an Affair “ of so great Consequence to the Honour, Trade, “ and Navigation of this Kingdom, we ought “ strictly to examine into the Import and Meaning of those Words in the first Article, by which “ it is agreed, That the Plenipotentiaries respectively named by their Britannick and Catholic “ Majesties, shall confer, and finally regulate “ the respective Pretensions of the two Crowns, “ as well with Relation to the Trade and Navigation in America and Europe, and to the Limits “ of Florida and of Carolina, as concerning other “ Points which remain likewise to be adjusted. I “ say, Sir, we ought strictly to examine into the “ Import and Meaning of this unlimited Reference, before we pass any Judgment; and, as “ the Import and Meaning of these Words must “ entirely depend upon the Law of Nations and “ the Nature of preliminary Conventions, we “ cannot expect full Satisfaction, as to this Point, “ from the Petitioners; we can no way expect “ full Satisfaction, but by hearing learned Gentlemen argue upon it, who have made such “ Points their particular Study.

“ I believe, Sir, it will be admitted by every “ Gentleman, both within Doors and without, “ that a definitive Treaty, containing a full and “ express Acknowledgment of all our Rights and “ Privileges, would have been much better than “ this preliminary Convention: Considering the “ vigorous Resolutions of both Houses of Parliament last Session, considering the Spirit which “ at present prevails among all Ranks and Degrees of Men in this Kingdom, and considering “ the great Expence the Nation was put to last “ Summer, I believe it was what most Men expected: Yet notwithstanding, if none of our “ undoubted Rights or Privileges are rendered “ doubtful, or any way invalidated by this preparatory way of Treating, we may excuse our “ Negotiators for agreeing to such Preliminaries “ for the Sake of Peace, provided it appears they “ had good Reason to hope that those Preliminaries would be soon followed by a sincere and “ satisfactory Treaty; but, I hope, Sir, this Nation is not yet brought so low, nor are we so “ fond of Peace, as to give up any of our Rights, “ or agree to any Thing, for present Ease, that “ may lay a Foundation for contesting some of “ our most valuable Rights in Time to come. “ Such an unlucky Situation, I hope, I am convinced, the Nation is not yet reduced to, “ whatever some Gentlemen may be, who, perhaps, consider their own immediate Ease, more “ than they consider either the Honour or the “ Interest of their Country.

“ But suppose, Sir, there were no Matters of “ Law or Right to be explained to us, suppose it “ were no way necessary to have the Law of Nations, or the Nature of preliminary Conventions, explained to us, yet the Facts that are “ to be laid before us upon the present Occasion “ are so numerous, and of such various Kinds, “ that it is not possible to have them methodically and regularly summed up, without the Assistance of Counsel. We must see, that it will “ be necessary for us to examine a great many “ Witnesses, with Regard to those Depredations “ that have been committed by the Spaniards, “ both before and since the Treaty of Seville, with “ Regard to the Importance of our Trade to and “ from our Plantations in America; with Regard “ to the Dangers that Trade may be exposed to, “ if a Search of British Ships, sailing to and from “ the British Plantations, should be tolerated “ upon any Pretext, or under any Restrictions; “ and with Regard to several other Points I could “ mention: Every one of these Witnesses may be “ able to give us an Account of some of the Facts “ he knows; but, from daily Experience, we may “ suppose, that even those Accounts will be but “ lamely and indistinctly given, unless we have “ Counsel at our Bar, who know how to put the “ proper Questions to them; and, when all the “ Witnesses have been examined, we cannot suppose that any of the Petitioners will be able to “ sum up the Evidence, to digest all their Testimonies under their proper Heads, and to make “ such "such Remarks upon each Point of Evidence, as "may be necessary for putting it in the clearest

"and strongest Light; for, when a Subject is "very copious, and a great many Facts of "divers Kinds to be related, it is not possible
"for any Gentleman, not exercised in the Art
"of Speaking, or not accustomed to speak
"before a numerous Assembly, let his Qualifications otherwise be never so great, to "give a regular, distinct, and full Account of "the whole.

"From what I have said, Sir, I think it must "appear, that it will be extremely proper for us "to have the Assistance of Counsel upon this important Occasion. Nay, it is, what, I think,
"those Gentlemen must be fond of who are the "greatest Friends to the Convention; for, if it
"any way deserves those high Encomiums that "have been made upon it by some Gentlemen "without Doors, the more clearly, the more distinctly, and the more fully this whole Affair is "laid before the House, the more we shall be "sensible of the great Honour and Advantage
"the Nation may reap by this preliminary Treaty,
"the more easy will it be for them to answer any "Objection that may be made against it: For "this Reason, I cannot suppose that the Motion
"I am to make will meet with any Opposition,
"and therefore I shall add no more, but conclude "with moving, That the Petitioners may be "heard by themselves or Counsel, as I have "before mentioned."

However, upon a Division, it was carried in both Houses, That the Petitioners should be admitted to be heard by themselves only; and the first of March was appointed in the House of Lords, for taking farther into Consideration the Convention between Great-Britain and Spain: On which Day, the Order of the Day being read, the Debate ran very high between the Advocates for a free Trade in the American Seas, against all Pretensions to an exclusive Right to that Navigation, and the Contrivers and Abettors of the Convention. And, tho' the Merchants proved minutely all their Allegations, and never Men spoke more to the Purpose than several of the noble Lords who espoused the Cause of Liberty, it was at last carried in Favour of the Convention, upon a Division, of seventy-one Contents to fifty-eight Non-contents; and of Proxies, twenty-four Contents to sixteen Non-contents; whereupon the following Address was agreed to, and presented accordingly:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, beg Leave to return your Majesty our most humble Thanks for your gracious Condescension, in laying the Convention between your Majesty and the King of Spain, dated the fourteenth Day of January last, N. S. together with the separate Articles, before this House.

"We think it our indispensable Duty, on this Occasion, to express our just Sense of your Royal Care of the true Interests of your People; and to acknowledge your Majesty's great Prudence, in bringing the Demands of your Subjects for their past Losses, which have been so long depending, to a final Adjustment by the said Convention; and procuring an express Stipulation for a speedy Payment; and in laying a Foundation for accomplishing the great and desirable Ends of obtaining future Security, and preserving the Peace between the two Nations.

"We beg Leave also to declare to your Majesty our Confidence and Reliance on your Royal Wisdom, and steady Attention to the Honour of your Crown, and the Welfare of these Kingdoms; that, in the Treaty to be concluded in Pursuance of this Convention, proper Provisions will be made for Redress of the Grievances so justly complained of; and particularly, that the Freedom of Navigation and Commerce in the American Seas, to which your Majesty's Subjects are entitled by the Law of Nations, and by Virtue of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns, will be so effectually secured, that they may enjoy, unmolested, their undoubted Right of navigating and carrying on Trade and Commerce from one Part of your Majesty's Dominions to any other Part thereof, without being liable to be stopped, visited, or searched, on the open Seas, or to any other Violation or Infraction of the said Treaties; the mutual Observance thereof, and a just Regard to the Privileges belonging to each other, being the only Means of maintaining a good Correspondence and lasting Friendship between the two Nations.

"Permit us at the same Time, in the most dutiful Manner, to express to your Majesty our firm Dependence, that, in the Treaty to be concluded in Pursuance of the said Convention, the utmost Regard will be had to the Rights belonging to your Majesty's Crown and Subjects, in adjusting and settling the Limits of your Majesty's Dominions in America; and to give your Majesty the strongest Assurances, that in case your Majesty's just Expectations shall not be answered, this House will heartily and zealously concur in all such Measures as shall be necessary to vindicate your Majesty's Honour, and to preserve to your Subjects the full Enjoyment of all those Rights to which they are entitled by Treaty and the Law of Nations."

To which his Majesty returned the following most gracious Answer:

"My Lords,

"I thank you for this dutiful Address, and for the grateful Sense you express of my Care of the true Interests of my People. You may depend upon it, that I have the Honour of my Crown, and the Welfare of my Kingdoms, entirely at Heart; and that nothing shall be wanting, on my Part, to secure to my Subjects the full Enjoyment of their Navigation and Commerce, and their other just Rights."

This occasioned the following Protests; which the noble Lords, who subscribed thereto, desired might be entered in the Journals of that House, to convey the Testimony of their Integrity in their Country's Cause, to the latest Posterity.

"Dissentient".

"1. Because we conceive that this Resolution, under the plausible Pretence of a respectful Address to the Throne, carries with it an Approbation of the Convention concluded at the Pardo the fourteenth of January last, which, as we apprehend, may be a most fatal Compliment, if it should induce his Majesty to believe, that this Convention is agreeable to the Sense and Expectation of the Nation.

"2. Because this Resolution hath rather weakened than enforced the Address of last Year, having omitted that Part of the said Address which declares, that no Goods being carried from one Part of his Majesty's Dominions to another, are to be deemed contraband and prohibited Goods; and that the searching of Ships, under Pretence of their carrying contraband, or prohibited Goods, is a Violation and Infraction of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns.

"3. We think the said Resolution doth not sufficiently assert our Right, by saying only, that we shall not be liable to be stopped, searched, or visited upon the open Seas, the Merchants having proved, at the Bar of the House, that Currents and Winds unavoidably drive Ships out of their Course, and that Observations of Land-marks, upon the Spanish Coast, are absolutely necessary for their steering a safe Course through those Seas: We apprehend, that their being obliged to keep a direct Course, without coming near the Spanish Coast, as lately insisted upon by the Spaniards, would render them sole Judges of our Navigation; and their being permitted to visit or search our Ships, within any Limits whatsoever, would render our whole American Trade precarious and impracticable.

"4. Because we see no Reason to believe, that the future Negotiation of the Plenipotentiaries will, in the next eight Months, obtain the Admission of those Rights insisted upon in our former Address, which the Instances and Representations made to the Court of Spain last Year, supported by the Resolution of Parliament, and a powerful Fleet, have not been able as yet to procure.

"5. Because we apprehend the Spaniards do not think themselves bound by this Convention to abstain from their unjust Methods of Proceeding; since it was proved at the Bar of this House, that Captain Vangban, a Commander of a British Ship, having been unjustly taken by a Spanish Man of War, his Ship confiscated, and he imprisoned at Cadiz, was, at the Time of signing the Convention, detained in Prison there, and not released in several Weeks after, notwithstanding the Representation of the British Plenipotentiary at the Court of Spain.

"6. Because we conceive, that the Reparation pretended to be made to our Merchants, by this Convention, for the grievous Losses they have sustained during a Course of many Years, is insufficient; the dark Accounts of this Transaction, laid before us, have not been fully explained, nor any satisfactory Reasons given us why their Demands, stated in an Account signed June the 14, 1738, by Mr. Stort, one of the Commissaries, at 343,227*l.* should be so greatly reduced.

"7. Because, as we apprehend, we are to allow 60,000*l.* to the King of Spain, chiefly on Account of the Ships taken near Sicily in the Year 1718; though it hath appeared to the House, from the Instructions given to the Commissaries after the Treaty of Seville, signed by his Majesty, now lying before us, that the Articles of the Treaty concluded at Madrid in 1721, upon which that Claim of the Spaniards is founded, had been fully executed on the Part of the Crown of Great-Britain.

"8. Because the referring the Limits of Florida and Carolina to the Plenipotentiaries, seems to call in Question our Right to Possessions, which we have so long uninterruptedly enjoyed, seven Eighth-Parts or Shares of which the Nation, at a considerable Expence, hath, not long since, purchased of the Proprietors under the two original Grants of King Charles II. A certain District whereof, called Georgia, in Honour to his present Majesty, hath been erected into a new Colony, and granted to Trustees for laudable Purposes; for the Establishment and Improvement of which, considerable Sums have been granted by the Publick: And moreover, it being stipulated by the present Convention, that no Fortification there shall be increased, during the Term of eight Months, we apprehend, that the Regiment lately raised for the Defence of that Colony, and also the Engineers and Stores, which, at a considerable Increase of the Publick Expence, have been sent thither, will not only remain useless, but, if a Peace should not be procured within that Period, will, at the End of it, be exposed, together with the Colonies, to the Violence and Irruption of the Spaniards.

"9. Because we apprehend the British Minister's Acceptance of the Declaration signed by M. de la Quadra, January 10, 1738-9, laid to be agreed with reciprocal Accord, hath allowed his Catholic Majesty to reserve to himself, in its full Force, the Right of being able to suspend the Assiento of Negroes, in Case the South-Sea Company doth not subject herself to pay, within a short Time, the Sum of 68,000*l.* pretended to be owing on the Duties of Negroes, and Profits of the Ship Carolina; though that Sum was never otherwise acknowledged to be due, than as Part of a Plan of Accommodation, wherein a much larger Sum was admitted to be due to the said Company, where- by we apprehend the King of Spain may think that great Company is put out of the Protection of his Majesty as to this Point, and left to his own Mercy and Equity; whereas if the Convention, as it now stands, had been signed without the Acceptance of the Declaration, the King of Spain would have had no Pretence, as we conceive, to suspend the Assiento; and therefore we apprehend, that the said Declaration will be looked upon as a De-
feafance

"feafance of the faid Treaty, as far as it relates to the South-Sea Company, which appears to us a difhonourable Collufion, hurtful to publick Credit.

"10. Becaufe we do not find any Satisfaction has been obtained, by the Convention, for the frequent Cruelties and Barbarities exercifed on the Britifh Sailors, nor for the many Infults offered to the Britifh Flag; which we are apprehenfive may be thought an Infenfibility of the Sufferings of a Body of Men, highly ufeful to the Trade, and neceffary to the Defence of thefe Kingdoms, and a great Neglect of the Honour of the Nation."

Convention confidered in the Houfe of Commons.

Parliamentary Debates Vol. xviii. p. 85.

Fazakerley's Refolution.

Scandalous Lift of the Common-Councilmen.

On the fixth of March, the Houfe of Commons refolved itfelf into a Committee of the whole Houfe, to take the Convention into their Confideration: In which Sir Robert Walpole and his Adherents carried their Point, to agree to their Motion of addreffing his Majefty with Thanks for procuring the faid Convention; there being, upon a Divifion, 262 Contents againft 235 Non-contents; Abfentees 61. My Author obferves, that among the 262 there were 234 Placemen, whose Employments amounted to the annual Value of 212,956 l. 13 s. 4 d.

When this Refolution of the Committee was reported to the Houfe, and a Motion made for agreeing thereto, the Debate was refumed; Mr. Pulteney, Sir William Wyndham, and others, infifted upon its being a bad Meafure; and Counfellor Fazakerley was fo truly of that Opinion, that he concluded his Speech with this Declaration: "I can't agree to this Adrefs, upon a ftrong Conviction that it will be the moft fatal Meafure this Houfe ever entered into; and, if the Right Honourable Gentleman (Sir Robert Walpole) is determined to carry it by a Majority, I fhall never again fpeak in this Houfe." However, the Queftion being put, the Motion was agreed to, by 244 Yea's againft 214 No's.

The Miniftry during thefe Debates highly refenting the Oppofition made by the Common Council of the City of London, it was contrived, by way of Sneer, to take off the Weight of their Application in Matters of a National Concern, to leffen them in the Esteem of the Members of both Houfes, by representing them as an insignificant or contemptible Body of Tradefmen and Mechanicks, who could not be expected to be well informed of, nor reafon concerning Matters of State: For this End printed Lifts of the Common-Councilmen of this City, with the Addition of their feveral Trades or Companies, were difperfed in the Avenues of both Houfes of Parliament, and fent by the Poft to moft Parts of the Nation, with the following Lines printed in the Front of the Lift: So every Carpenter and Work-mafter, that laboureth Night and Day, and they that cut and grave Seals, and are diligent to make great Variety, and give themfelves to counterfeit Imagery, and watch to finifh a Work; all thefe truft to their Hands, and every one is wife in his Work; without thefe cannot a City be inhabited; and they fhall not dwell where they will, nor go up and down; they fhall not be fought for in publick Council. Eccluf. xxxviii. 27, 31, 32, 33.

On the other Side, nothing was omitted by the Citizens to fhew their Abhorrence of the Minifter's Collufion with the Court of Spain; and, being thoroughly convinced that Sir George Champion, Knt. who was the Alderman next the Chair, had yielded to the Influence of the Prime Minifter in that Cafe, and, as Member for Aylefbury, had voted for the Convention, they, on the twenty-ninth of September, the Day of Election, rejected him from the high Office of Lord-Mayor, as you'll read below; and tho' before that Time he had been in the greateft Esteem in the City, his Fellow-Citizens ever after held him in Contempt.

The Night which intervened between the tenth and eleventh of September, was greatly agitated by a violent Storm of Thunder and Lightening, accompanied with exceffive Rain: The Flaſhes of Lightening were as quick, and at the fame Time as ftrong, as perhaps were ever known in this Part of the World; tho' the Thunder was not fo violent: It began at feven in the Evening, and continued 'till twelve at Night. Among other Incidents during this Storm, I remember it was the Deſtruction of a large Aviary of Sparrows, which had for many Years neſted themfelves in a Grove of high Trees adjoining to the South End of Mile-End Turnpike: On which Occaſion the Ground was next Morning covered with Heaps of thefe little dead Birds. The Wind continued exceeding high all next Day, which did confiderable Damage to the Shipping, &c.

On the twenty-second, the Statue of King Edward VI. in Brafs, and left by Charles Jey, Eſq; deceased, late Treafurer, was fixed on a Marble Pedestal in the middle Square of St. Thomas's Hofpital in Southwark.

The Election of a Lord-Mayor coming on upon the twenty-ninth, a greater Number of Liverymen appeared that Day at Guildhall than was ever known on the like Occaſion; and between one and two o'Clock the Right Honourable Micajah Perry, Eſq; Lord-Mayor, opened the Court, when Sir William Thompson, Knt. Recorder of the City, in a Speech to the Common-Hall, told the Citizens, "That it was their undoubted Right to return to the Court of Aldermen two fit and able Perfons of that Court, who had ferved the Office of Sheriff, out of whom they were to chufe one of them to be Lord-Mayor for the Year enfuing; and that he would not take upon him to dictate to them in their prefent Choice, well knowing their Prudence would direct them to act in the beft

"best Manner for the Good, Peace, and Welfare of this great City."

The two senior Aldermen, next below Sir George Champion, were Sir John Salter, Knt. and Sir Robert Godscall, Knt. and the Liverymen did not intend, on this Occasion, to depart any farther from the late Method of Rotation, than to set aside Sir George. Accordingly, upon holding up of Hands, the Sheriffs declared Sir John Salter, and Sir Robert Godscall, duly returned to the Court of Aldermen.

But, notwithstanding the vast Majority of Hands, a Poll was demanded for Sir George Champion against Sir Robert Godscall; and, on the other Side, for Sir John Salter and Sir Robert Godscall against Sir George Champion, which began at Four the same Afternoon, but continued not a Quarter of an Hour, before it was flung up by Sir George and his Friends. Then the Sheriffs adjourned the Court of Huitings to Monday Morning, eleven o'Clock.

Accordingly, on that Day, they held a Court by Adjournment, and declared the Numbers upon the Poll to be as follows:

For Sir John Salter, Knt. and Alderman	95
Sir Robert Godscall, Knt. and Alderman	90
Sir George Champion, Knt. and Alderman	21

And, for Want of a sufficient Number of Aldermen to make a Court, the Common-Hall was further adjourned to the next Day.

But, before they were adjourned, Mr. Glover, an eminent Hamburg Merchant, addressed himself to the Sheriffs to the following Effect:

"Mr. Alderman Heathcote and Sir John Lequefne,

"The Worthy Liverymen of this City, here assembled before you, have now set aside, in all Probability, irrevocably and perpetually set aside, one Candidate from the honourable and powerful Office of Lord-Mayor of this great Metropolis. The Reasons of this Proceeding, must, to every impartial Citizen, appear obvious and incontestable, being founded on that just Indignation which it becomes every true Englishman at this Time to entertain, at the many Disgraces, Barbarities and Insults, which have been suffered to fall upon his Country, from a Nation esteemed in all preceding Times as the Object of our Contempt, and whose Insolence we have as often reduced and humbled, as we have exerted our Power. But still this Proceeding, begun and pursued with so much Spirit, conducted with so much Discretion and Decency, where the Peace and good Order of this great City have been consulted with as much Caution, as the principal Purpose itself has been supported with Resolution and Vigour; I say, this very Proceeding may still be liable to the Censure of Abruptness and Inconsistency, if the same Motives which have influenced our Conduct in the Election of our Mayor, do not now create the same Unanimity to pay our most grateful Acknowledgments to our four worthy Representatives in Parliament, for their steady and faithful Adherence to all our Rights, for their vigorous Support of our Trade in particular, and of the Honour of this Kingdom in general, by their Opposition in the House of "Commons to the late Convention with Spain. Our Instructions should likewise accompany our Thanks, that the Tenour of our Conduct may appear to be consistent and uniform throughout. For this Purpose, I have received this Paper from several Gentlemen of the highest Consideration and Character in this City, who know, that it was at their particular and most earnest Entreaty, that I have taken upon me to make the following Motion, though from the Propriety of the Thing itself I hope I should otherwise stand excused: I therefore humbly move, that this Paper may be read; and if, as I doubt not, it obtains the Approbation of this Assembly, that you, Gentlemen, our worthy Sheriffs, may be desired to present Copies of it to the Right Honourable Micajah Perry, Esq; Lord-Mayor, to Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Alderman, to Sir John Barnard, Knt. and Alderman, and to Robert Willmot, Esq; Alderman, our four Representatives in Parliament."

To the Right Honourable Micajah Perry, Esq; Lord-Mayor, Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Alderman, Sir John Barnard, Knt. Alderman, and Robert Willmot, Esq; Alderman,

Representatives of the City of London in this present Parliament,

"We, the Liverymen of the City of London, in Common-Hall assembled, in order to exert our undoubted Right of electing two proper Persons to be returned to the Court of Aldermen for the Mayoralty of this great City for the Year ensuing, should be wanting both to you and ourselves, if, whilst we are shewing a just Resentment by setting aside one Person, whose Conduct we disapprove, and whom we judge unworthy of that high and honourable Office, we did not take the same Opportunity of returning you our sincere and hearty Thanks for your general Conduct in Parliament; and in a more particular Manner for your late Endeavours to preserve us from the ruinous Consequences we then too justly apprehended from the Convention with Spain.

"And tho' neither your Endeavours at that Time, nor the Interposition of this City, had the desired Effect, every Man in this Nation must be now fully convinced of the Dishonour, as well as Danger, of that fatal Treaty.

"We are now made deeply sensible of the unhappy State of this Kingdom, from the imminent Mischiefs which seem to threaten us from abroad; and it is with great Grief we observe our excellent Constitution declining in some Instances at home: But when the true Spirit and Vigour of a British Parliament shall exert itself, we promise ourselves, that, with the Divine Assistance, we shall be equally preserved from the Dangers of both.

"In a free and uncorrupted Assembly of our Representatives consists not only the Dignity, but even the Character and very Essence of a Parliament. It is of the highest Importance, that those, whom we intrust with an unrestrained Power of making all Laws affecting our Trade,

"Trade, Properties, Liberties and Lives, should be uninfluenced by any lucrative Considerations; and yet, notwithstanding several good Laws have been made to secure the Independency of the House of Commons, how insecure must that great Blessing be, from the Number of Placemen who have already got Footing there, and who may be augmented hereafter by many more!

"It is therefore, as we apprehend, absolutely necessary, that some new and more effectual Provision should be made to reduce and limit their Number; and we require and insist, that you would use your utmost Endeavours to promote a Bill for that salutary Purpose, in Conjunction with such Patriots as may be willing to join with you, and assist you in this great and necessary Work.

"As the Nation has on many Occasions found the happy Effects of applying to their respective Representatives, and giving them proper Instructions in Cases of great Consequence; as in particular with Regard to the late pernicious Excise Scheme, which was calculated for the Destruction of the Liberties of this Nation, which vile Attempt was by these Means defeated; so we are unwilling to entertain the least Doubt of meeting with the same Success upon this Occasion: And as this is a Point on which the very Being of Parliaments, and the Prosperity of this Kingdom so absolutely depends, we once more earnestly require you to make it a previous Step to the passing of any Money-Bill whatsoever."

The Motion for reading this Paper, &c. being seconded by William Benn, Esq; High Sheriff of Hertfordshire, and approved of by the Hall, it was accordingly read by Mr. Sheriff Heathcote, and received with the loudest Acclamations; and Copies of it were presented by the Sheriffs to the four City Members, according to the Request of the Common-Hall.

Mr. Sheriff Heathcote delivered his Opinion, in a very pathetick Manner, with Regard to the Negative Voice of the Court of Aldermen; and assured the Common-Hall that he would enlarge on that Subject the following Day.

The Citizens expressed the greatest Pleasure at the candid and just Behaviour of the Sheriffs on this Occasion, and returned them their Thanks, and likewise to Mr. Glover for his Motion.

The Speech to the Liverymen concerning the Court of Aldermen's Negative, was to the following Effect:

"Gentlemen,

"You have now asserted your Right in choosing a Lord-Mayor, and vindicated the Honour of the City with Zeal, and governed your Zeal with Temper: But it will be impossible for you to act with that decisive Weight which you otherwise might have, without endeavouring to preserve, I had almost said to retrieve, your Independency. I don't mean your Independency in your private Characters; most of you, I dare answer for it, are above all Dependency; but your Independency as to your Common Council, a constituent Part of the Legislative

NUMB. LI.

"Body of this City. Consider, Gentlemen, that it is in the Power of a Majority of the Court of Aldermen, to put a Stop to the most vigorous Efforts of your publick Virtue. It is in the Power to prevent your setting that Example to the Nation which may one Day animate it with a proper Spirit. Not all the Convictions of common Sense, nor the universal Voice of Mankind, nor the apparent and approaching Ruin of Liberty can avail you to procure Justice from Parliament, should a corrupted Majority prevail in putting a Negative upon your presenting your just Complaints and Remonstrances. Thus, Gentlemen, you are in a worse Situation than any Body of Men in this Nation; you may, if such a Majority prevails, be deprived of what the Laws of Nations, the Constitution of this Kingdom, and immemorial Practice, declare as the undoubted Right of all Subjects. This Situation, Gentlemen, is the more intolerable, when we consider with how great a Power the Laws in being have vested a Minister. It is in his Power to tempt Men with whatever Ambition can expect, or Avarice desire; therefore, unless you can pronounce Men void of human Passions and Affections, you cannot say that you are independent. The Integrity of the present Ministry, and the Purity of the present Court of Aldermen, are no Security. A corrupted and corrupting Ministry may succeed the present; among the Court of Aldermen, Men may be hereafter found, whose Connexion with, and immediate Dependance upon such a Ministry are visible to all the World. If a Ministry, by Places, Posts and Pensions, can bring over but fourteen Aldermen to their Side, give me Leave, Gentlemen, to ask you, what Means you can find to throw out a future Excise, or to shew your Opposition to a future Convention? It is a fatal Compliment that most Communities have made to good Magistrates, when they have invested them with Powers unknown to the original Form of their Government. They don't consider that, while they are strengthening the Hands of good Magistrates, they are perhaps forging the Fetters which they and their Posterity are to wear. Therefore, Gentlemen, unless you have a positive and an evident Certainty, that the Court of Aldermen never can be corrupted by a Ministry, you ought to do your utmost Endeavours, you ought to exert your utmost Vigour, to procure a Repeal of that Clause. The Liberties of your Community, the Liberties of your Country, yourselves and your Posterity require it from you. All other Efforts of your publick Spirit, without this, are in vain. In vain you labour to procure a Limitation of the Number of Placemen in Parliament, unless you, at the same Time, labour this Point; for, supposing the most disinterested Parliament that ever was to be now sitting, supposing that an Affair of the utmost Consequence to your Trade and Liberties to be depending before them, let me ask you, Gentlemen, how it is possible, if the Majority of the Court of Aldermen are in the Interests of your Enemies, for the Parli-

"ment

"ment to be instructed in the Sense of your "Community? They can put a Negative upon "your petitioning in your incorporate Capacity,
 "and it is next to impossible for you to petition
 "in a regular Manner in your private Capa"cities. Consider what the Effect must have "been, had some Gentlemen in a late memora"ble Event succeeded in what they endeavoured "to effectuate. You will easily guess that I "mean the Convention. Had the Majority of "the Court of Aldermen been prevailed upon to "have given a Negative to your presenting your "Petition, how must the Parliament and the "Nation have known the Sense of the City of "London? Might not then the Representatives "of the Nation, if they had unanimously and "absolutely approved of the Convention, have "justified their Conduct, by saying, that the "Acquiescence of the City of London was their "Motive? You were more concerned in its "Consequences than all the Nation besides, and "had you objected nothing to it, might it not "have been fairly presumed, that it was for the "Interest of the Nation? How would the rest "of the Kingdom have behaved in such an E"vent? Might they not have reasonably thought,
 "that the City of London were much better
 "Judges of the commercial Interests of the "Nation than they were, and that it must be a "good Measure because you did not oppose it?"

"Give me Leave, Gentlemen, to set the "Consequences of this Power vested in the "Court of Aldermen in a still stronger Light.
 "I shall suppose, that under a future Ministry a "Bill is brought into Parliament, depriving the "Liverymen of London of their Right to nomi"nate two Aldermen for Lord-Mayor, and that "they shall be nominated by the Crown. Pray,
 "Gentlemen, even in this Case, what Method
 "could you fall upon to oppose this Step, but "that of petitioning against it? But if the same "Influence that procured the Measure to be set "on Foot, should procure a Majority in the "Court of Aldermen to put a Negative upon "your petitioning against it, what Redress
 "could you have, or how prevent the Blow?
 "Are you tamely to give up your Rights? Or "are you to assert them in a Manner that is "contrary to Law and disrespectful to your Su"periors? The Consequences that must follow
 "from this are too plain and too shocking for "me to suggest them.

"But, Gentlemen, it is very possible for you "to reconcile your Duty with your Interest; the "more dutiful your Manner of petitioning or "soliciting Redress is, it must be the more fo-
 "lud, and more lasting. It is impossible for you "to procure any Advantages, if these Advan"tages are solicited in a Manner that is incon"sistent with the Duty you owe to your lawful "Superiors. The sober, the wise Part of Man"kind will desert a Cause carried on in such a "Manner; and, when Prudence and Moderation
 "in Conduct are wanting, the Spirit from which "you act must soon flag, and your Redress be "with the more Difficulty obtained. Give me "Leave therefore, Gentlemen, to put you in "Mind of what was observed by Tacitus, one "of the greatest Politicians, as well as one of "the greatest Friends to the Liberties of the "People that ever lived: He observes, that, in "the Event of all Contentions betwixt the Go"vernment and the People, if these Contentions

 "proceed to Tumults, the Government, if it "gets the better, always acquires a new Accession
 "of Power.

"From what I have said, I believe it is very "plain, that your Liberties as Englishmen entirely "depend on one single Fact, which is, that no
 "Minister shall ever find the Means to corrupt "fourteen of the Court of Aldermen into his "Interests. I have only one or two Particulars "more to trouble you with on this Head. To "give any Body of Men whatsoever, who are "not a supreme Legislature, a Negative upon
 "the People, is contrary to every Maxim of "good Government; because the People may "then become the Slaves of those, who are "themselves but a subordinate Power. Thus "every End of Government may be perverted,
 "and the People left to the melancholy Re"flexion of their not having had it in their "Power to make one Struggle. But this Ab"surdity is vastly heightened, when we consider "that, tho' the Government of the City of "London is a popular Government, the only "Negative that is lodged in any Branch of that "Government is upon the People. Thus the "Tribunitial Power, which in Old Rome was so "useful towards preserving the Liberty of the "People, is reversed; for, amongst them, the "Negative was upon the Government; amongst "you, it is upon the People. But there is one "Circumstance still more absurd than all the "rest, which is, that this Negative is lodged "in a Body of Men, who, by their Office, are
 "cloathed with a Perpetuity of Power; so that,
 "if Corruption should obtain amongst them,
 "you have no Chance to work yourselves clear
 "of it but by their Death. As an Alderman,
 "I am now endeavouring indeed to abridge my "own Power; but the Dangers which the fu"ture Abuse of this Power may subject us to,
 "appear to me so terrible, that I should deserve
 "to be considered as the meanest of Mankind,
 "if I could, but for a Moment, put any Privi"leges of my own in Competition with what I "believe to be of such immediate Consequence
 "to the publick Liberty." — He then con"cluded with the following Prayer:

"May the great God of Heaven, who has "often so wonderfully and miraculously preserved
 "this Nation, still continue his Blessing and "Preservation of us; that, under the illustrious "House of Hanover, the Laws, Liberties and "Trade of all his Majesty's British Dominions
 "may continue, and be preserved 'till Time shall "be no more." To which the whole Hall re"turned a hearty and loud Amen.

On Tuesday, the Common-Hall were again assembled, pursuant to their Adjournment; and, about two o'Clock, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen ascended the Husting, and declared Sir John Salter, Knt. Alderman, Lord-Mayor of the City of London for the Year ensuing. Which was approved of by the Citizens with the loudest Acclamations, it being one of the most numerous Assemblies that ever was seen on the like Occasion.

The following Question was moved to be put to the Common-Hall by Mr. Hill, who was seconded by another Liveryman, and by the general Voice of the Hall:

"Gentlemen,

Mr. Hill's Motion.

"Do you consent earnestly to entreat your Lord-Mayor to call a Common Council with all convenient Speed, in order to consider of a most dutiful and loyal Address to his Majesty, on the present State of the Kingdom?"

The Lord-Mayor did not think fit to put the Question; but, on the general Request of the Hall to have it put, he assured them he would call a Common Council, for the Purpose mentioned in the Question, on any Day themselves should appoint. A Day was accordingly appointed, but before it came the Gentlemen thought fit to drop the Affair.

Then the Lord-Mayor was going to adjourn the Court; but, before that could be done, Mr. Sheriff Heatcote addressed himself to his Lordship, in Words to this Effect:

"My Lord,

Mr. Heatcote's Motion.

"I crave your Lordship's Patience a little longer, it is a Matter in which the Rights and Liberties of my Fellow-Citizens are deeply concerned, and I have a Right to speak, and must speak; and, I hope, these are sufficient Reasons for my taking up, at this Juncture, a few Moments of your Lordship's Time.

"I move, my Lord, That our four worthy Representatives be desired by the Common-Hall to endeavour, in the next Session of Parliament, the Repeal of a Clause of an Act, intitled, An Act for the better regulating Elections in the City of London, &c."

Mr. Sheriff then read the Question, in Form as follows: "Whereas, by a Clause in an Act of the eleventh Year of King George I, for regulating Elections within the City of London, &c. it is enacted, That no Act, Order, or Ordinance, whatsoever, shall be made, or passed in the Common Council of the said City, without the Assent of the Mayor and Aldermen present at such Common Council, or the major Part of them: Do you, good Men of the Livery, now require and instruct the Right Honourable Micajah Perry, Esq; Lord-Mayor, Humphrey Parsons, Esq; and Alderman, Sir John Barnard, Knt. and Alderman, and Robert Willmot, Esq; and Alderman, your four worthy Representatives, to use their most strenuous Endeavours for repealing the said Clause?" And then said, "My Lord, I desire that the Question may be put by the Common Crier, or Common Serjeant."

Which Motion was seconded by the general Voice of the Common-Hall, who loudly called out for the Question. Upon which, the Right Honourable Micajah Perry, Esq; Lord-Mayor, arose from his Seat; and, coming forward upon the Hustings, spoke to the Citizens, in Words to this Effect:

"Gentlemen,

Lord-Mayor's Speech.

"This Thing is quite new to me, nor can you expect me to be ready to give you my Reasons why I will not have the Question put; only, that I do not remember a Precedent of this Nature; and I beg, Gentlemen, that this Affair may be deferred to a more convenient Opportunity."

His Lordship also complained to Mr. Sheriff of Disrespect, in thus bringing Questions before that Assembly, without previously acquainting him therewith; which Mr. Sheriff handsomely cleared himself of, and then begged of his Lordship to fix the Time, and to declare it then to the Citizens, when the Question should be put, and to adjourn the Court over to that Day.

His Lordship did not seem willing to do this, and so there ensued a Silence for about half an Hour, only the Hall frequently called out for the Question. At length, his Lordship came forwards to the Citizens, and made a Speech to this Effect:

"Gentlemen,

"I have called to my Assistance your Common Serjeant, and other Officers, and have made Enquiry of them, whether there is a Precedent for this present Method of Procedure, and they all agree, that there is no such like Instance of putting Questions here in the Common-Hall.

"Gentlemen, I have heard your Desire, and let me beg of you to drop the Question; and I assure you, upon my Honour, that I will take Care, that your Request shall be considered, in a short Time, and in a more proper Place.

"Gentlemen, You have intrusted me with your Rights and Privileges, you have advanced me to the greatest Honour and Dignity in this City you can confer on me, and I flatter myself I have behaved to the general Satisfaction of you, my Fellow-Citizens. I have always studied your Interest, and the Good of this City has ever been at my Heart. And I will not be wanting to serve you in any Thing that shall be thought conducive to the Good of this City. The only Thing I desire is, that, as the Time approaches when I must deliver up that high Trust you have intrusted me with, I may convey to my Successor, the Constitution of this City in the same Manner I received it from my worthy Predecessor."

Upon the Conclusion of his Lordship's Speech, the Liverymen seemed to be somewhat satisfied, and did not now, as before, so generally call out for the Question. And Alderman Heatcote addressed himself to the Common-Hall, in a Speech to this Effect:

"Gentlemen,

"I have the Honour to be personally acquainted with his Lordship, and to be a Member of that Honourable House in which his Lordship is one of your Representatives; and I do solemnly affirm, that his Lordship has always in that House strenuously asserted the Rights and Liberties of this City in particular, and of this Kingdom in general; and I am certain, that there never was one Person, in whom you have intrusted your Liberties, in the Quality of your Representative and Mayor, that more deserves your Esteem, and the Continuance of it, than his Lordship.

"Gentlemen,

Complaint.

Another Speech.

Mr. Heatcote's Speech.

"Gentlemen, His Lordship has now given us his Word, that he will shortly take our Request into Consideration, and no one here present can, with Justice, in the least question the Honour and Veracity of his Lordship. And, Gentlemen, in my Opinion, I see no Difference, if we obtain the End proposed, whether it is done by a Question, at this Time, or through the future Endeavours of his Lordship. His Lordship now plainly sees, that the Subject of the Motion I have made is your Desire, and though he cannot grant the Question, his Lordship is no Enemy to the Thing itself: But suppose his Lordship should take no Measures towards obtaining our Desire, (though I will pawn my Honour his Lordship will, as he has said it) we shall this Time Twelvemonth have an Opportunity of putting the Question. And therefore, Gentlemen, upon the Whole, we may safely at this Time drop the Question, nay, we ought, we are in Duty bound to grant his Lordship's Request, when no great Inconveniency can, by deferring it to his Lordship's Consideration, accrue therefrom.

"And now I will make one Observation upon what his Lordship has said. His Lordship thinks this Motion novel, and says it is unprecedented. Suppose so, I believe it is to his Lordship; but, because it is novel, does it therefore follow that it is not just, or because it is unprecedented, therefore it is unreasonable or unseasonable? No, though it may be unprecedented, it is reasonable; and it is just, though new to his Lordship.

"Gentlemen, I beg Leave to give you my Reasons why I have made this Motion, and thereby justify my Conduct herein before his Lordship, and you, my Fellow-Citizens.

"The first is, That by the Repeal of the Negative Power of the Court of Aldermen upon the Proceedings of your Common Council, may be prevented the Ruin and Destruction of this City; lest, when it is too late, we may strive in vain, or the old English Proverb be verified in us, When the Steed is stole, we stout the Stable-Door.

"Another Reason is, Because it renders your Common Council in a manner useless. I will give an Instance of it: Upon signing the Convention, your Common Council voted a Petition to be presented to the Parliament, and another to the King, on the State of the Nation: Which the Court of Aldermen, by Virtue of the Power lodged in them by an Act of Parliament, put their Negative upon; by which Means those Proceedings of your Common Council, which would have been an Honour to the city, and opened the Eyes of the People, are thereby lost to the Publick.

"My third and last Reason that has induced me to make this Motion, is, That there may arise in this Nation a wicked Ministry, who may corrupt, I do not say now, but in future Time, by Pensions and Places, fourteen of the twenty-six Aldermen: I say, when this is the Case, whatever shall be proposed by your Common Council for the Good of this City, and shall happen to be contrary to the Interests "of such wicked Ministry, fourteen of your Aldermen are impowered to put a Negative upon the Proceeding. So that it may come to pass, if this Power be not restrained, that nothing will be transacted in the City but what must be agreeable to the Court.

"These are my Reasons, which I offer to justify myself, and which I submit to the Judgment of his Lordship, and all my Fellow-Citizens."

All which was approved of by the repeated Acclamations of the Citizens. And, when Silence was obtained, the Common Crier, by Order of the Lord-Mayor, dismissed the Hall.

The Conventionists not being able to quiet the Clamours of the Nation, which now more than ever addressed the House for a vigorous War with Spain, his Majesty resolved to comply with their earnest Request; and accordingly, on the twenty-second of October, the Officers of Arms, with the Serjeants at Arms and Trumpeters, mounted their Horses in the Stable-Yard, St. James's, and proceeding thence to the Palace Gate, Garter Principal King of Arms read his Majesty's Declaration of War, and Norroy King of Arms proclaimed it aloud; which being done, a Procession was made to Charing-Cross, as follows: A Party of Horse-Guards or Grenadiers to clear the Way. Beadles of Westminster bareheaded, with Staves, two and two. Constables of Westminster in like Manner. High Constable of Westminster with his Staff. The Officers of the High Bailiff of Westminster on Horseback, with white Wands. Clerk of the High Bailiff of Westminster. High Bailiff of Westminster, and on his Right-Hand the Deputy Steward. Knight Marshal's Men. Knight Marshal. Drums. Drum-Major. Trumpets. Serjeant Trumpeter in his Collar, bearing his Mace. Pursuivants, Bluemantle, Rouge-dragon, Portcullis. Richmond Herald. Windsor Herald. York Herald, between two Serjeants at Arms. Somerset Herald, between two Serjeants at Arms. Norroy King of Arms, between two Serjeants at Arms. Garter King of Arms, between two Serjeants at Arms. A Party or Troop of Horse-Guards commanded by Colonel Barton. At Charing-Cross Norroy King of Arms read the Declaration, and Somerset Herald proclaimed it aloud. In this Method the Procession was made to Temple-Bar, where the Officers of the City of Westminster retired; and within the Gate, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Deputy-Recorder, and Sheriffs in Scarlet attended; and Bluemantle Pursuivant having presented to his Lordship the Earl Marshal's Warrant, the City Procession followed the Troops commanded by Colonel Barton. At the End of Chancery-Lane, Somerset Herald read the Declaration, and York Herald proclaimed it aloud. At the End of Wood-Street, where the Cross formerly stood, York Herald read the Declaration, and Windsor Herald proclaimed it aloud. And lastly, at the Royal-Exchange, Windsor Herald read the Declaration, and Richmond Herald proclaimed it aloud. The Spectators, almost innumerable, expressed their great Satisfaction by loud Acclamations of Joy at each Place.

On the twenty-fifth, the chief Corner-Stone of the Riot of Weavers.

On Monday, the fifth of November, a great Number of Journeymen Weavers assembled in Spital-Square, near Shoreditch, before the House of an eminent Master Weaver, and endeavoured to destroy the said House, upon a Report of his endeavouring to bring the rest of the Master Weavers into a Combination, for the Journeymen to wind their Silk in gratis with their Work.
A Party of Guards from the Tower was sent for,
and the Proclamation read against Riots, &c.
but they not dispersing within the limited Time, great Numbers of them were taken Prisoners, some of whom afterwards escaped; but ten of them, being strongly guarded, were carried before the Justices Harwood, Peck, and Fowke, who committed them to Newgate, but most of them were soon bailed out. Several Soldiers that went to suppress this Riot were dangerously wounded, by Bricks and Tiles thrown on them from the Tops of Houses.

Charter
for the Foundling-Hospital
granted.

This Month also is distinguished by the Royal Favour of a Charter for establishing the Foundling-Hospital, which was granted on the seventeenth; and on the twentieth, the Nobility and Gentry, appointed therein to be Governors and Guardians of the said Hospital, held their first Meeting at Somerset-House; when, previous to the reading of the Charter, Tho. Coram, Esq; the Petitioner for the Charter, addressed his Grace the Duke of Bedford, the President, in the following Manner, viz.

Captain
Coram's
Speech.

"My Lord Duke of Bedford,
"It is with inexpressible Pleasure I now present
"your Grace, at the Head of this Noble and "Honourable Corporation, with his Majesty's "Royal Charter for establishing an Hospital for "exposed Children, free of all Expence, through
No. 51.

"through the Assistance of some compassionate
"great Ladies, and other good Persons.

"I can, my Lord, sincerely aver, that no"thing would have induced me to embark in a "Design so full of Difficulties and Discourage-"ments, but a Zeal for the Service of his Ma"jesty, in preserving the Lives of great Num"bers of his innocent Subjects.

"The long and melancholy Experience of this "Nation, has too demonstrably shewn with what "Barbarity tender Infants have been exposed "and destroyed, for Want of proper Means of "preventing the Disgrace, and succouring the "Necessities of their Parents.

"The Charter will disclose the extensive Na"ture and End of this Charity, in much strong"er Terms than I can possibly describe them;
"so that I have only to thank your Grace, and "many other Noble Personages, for all that fa"vourable Protection which hath given Life and "Spirit to my Endeavours.

"My Lord, although my declining Years will "not permit me to hope for seeing the full Ac"complishment of my Wishes; yet I can now
"rest satisfied, and it is what I esteem an ample
"Reward of more than seventeen Years expen-
"five Labour, and steady Application, that I "see your Grace at the Head of this charitable "Trust, assisted by so many Noble and Ho"nourable Governors.

"Under such powerful Influences and Di"rections, I am confident of the final Success of "my Endeavours; and that the Publick will "one Day reap the happy and lasting Fruits of "your Grace's and this Corporation's Measures;
"and, as long as my Life and poor Abilities en"dure, I shall not abate of my zealous Wishes,
"and most active Services for the Good and "Prosperity of this truly Noble and Honourable "Corporation.

"I am, May it please your Grace,

"Your Grace's and the Corporation's

Most obedient Servant.

Thomas Coram.

After the Charter was read, Dr. Mead, in the most pathetick Manner, set forth the great Necessity of such an Hospital, and the vast Advantages that must accrue to the Nation by this useful Establishment.

The Court then, pursuant to their Charter, proceeded to the Election of a Secretary, when Mr. Herman Verelst was chosen; and a Committee of fifty of their own Members to carry on the Affairs of the Corporation.

I shall conclude this Year with the Mention of another good Foundation, a Mathematical School, which was erected at Michaelsmas 1739, in the Grey-Coat Hospital, in the Parish of St.
Margaret, Westminster, for training up Boys in the Art of Navigation, so as to fit them for the Service of their Country.

Mathematical School founded.

In the Year 1740, on the twenty-third of January, a Disturbance happened at Drury-Lane Playhouse, occasioned by two of the principal Dancers not being there to dance at the End of the Entertainment; whereupon several Gentlemen in the Boxes and Pit pulled up the Seats and Flooring of the same, tore down the Hangings, broke down the Riot in Drury-Lane

Playhouse.

Partitions, and all the Glasses and Sconces; the King's Arms over the middle Front-Box was pulled down and broke to Pieces; they also destroyed the Harpsicord, Bass Viol, and other Instruments in the Orchestra: the Curtain they cut to Pieces with their Swords, forced their Way into the lesser Green-Room, where they broke the Glasses, &c. and also destroying every Thing they could well get asunder.

Great Frost.

As intense a Frost as perhaps was ever known in these Parts began on Christmas-Day, and continued through this Month. A few Days after it began the Wind was very high, which did considerable Damage. The Thames was froze over, so that Multitudes of People walked across it above Bridge, and a great many Booths were erected upon it. The Damage below Bridge to the Shipping was very great: Several Ships loaded with Corn, and others with Coals, were sunk by the Ice; many lay on Anchors, which made Holes in them; some on their Sides, foul of others; several Lighters and Boats under the Ice; and, on the whole, whoever looked on the River Thames, might behold a Scene of greater Damage than had been known there in the Memory of Man, there scarce ever having been more Ships in the River at one Time than now. The Damage between the Medway and London-Bridge, before the Middle of the Month, was at a moderate Computation thought to be above one hundred thousand Pounds, besides the Number of Persons who lost their Lives. Many Persons both by Land and Water were froze to Death. The Necessities of the Poor were very great, occasioned chiefly by the excessive Price of Coals, and their not being able to Work at their several Occupations. And it must be said, to the Honour of the Nation, that Charity remarkably shewed itself on this Occasion. A great Number of all Ranks gave particular and large Benefactions, and considerable Collections were made in the several Parishes, for the Relief of the Neceffitous in this severe and rigorous Season.

There were remarkable Accounts of the Severity and Intensity of the Frost, not only from Scotland and Ireland, but from Germany, Holland, France, &c. By Letters from the North of Ireland, we were assured, that the great Fresh-Water Lake, called Lough Neagh, was entirely frozen over, and the Ice so very hard, that several Persons walked directly across the Lough from Montjoy-Castle, and other Places in the County of Tyrone, to the Market of Antrim, which is upwards of twenty Miles. But several Persons in crossing these Lakes, by the Ice breaking, fell in and were drowned.

From Vienna, Dresden, and Dantzick, we were advised, that the cold Weather there was severer than it was in 1709; and that many People of the Suburbs of Vienna had perished with it: From Stockholm, Poland, and Lithuania, that it had forced the Bears and Wolves out of the Woods to seek for Prey in the open Country, whereby many Persons lost their Lives: And from Brussels, that all the Rivers were frozen up, and particularly the Scheld as far as Antwerp; and that several Persons had been found dead of the excessive Cold, and many Trees been split with it.

The following Extract of Letter from an English Gentleman at Leyden in Holland, dated the first of January, is too extraordinary to be omitted:

"Books being now laid aside, our chief Study
"and Care is how to thaw our Eatables and "Drinkables, as Water, Milk, Beer, &c. My "Wine is tolerably strong, yet the whole freezes
"into a solid Mass; Bread cannot be cut without "being first set by the Fire near an Hour; in "the same Manner we serve our Butter, and also "our Oranges, which are otherwise as hard as "Stones: Boiling, strong Punch, put into a "Bowl, presents us with Ice in eight Minutes:
"My Barber coming Yesterday to shave me, put
"a little hot Water into his Basin below Stairs,
"and in the Time he was coming up to my "Chamber it began to freeze: Warm Urine
"from a Man's Body freezes in six Minutes;
"Spittle directly, as it falls to the Ground. But,
"what is yet more remarkable, a Gentleman of "my Acquaintance having a Bottle of Water "from a Pump that was not frozen, going di"rectly to pour some into a Glass, it was imme"diately Ice; but, what is more surprising, part "of the Stream from the Bottle to the Glass
"froze, and stood up in the Tumbler like an "Icicle; the like certainly was never known in "these Climates. Three Persons were found
"frozen dead in one House Yesterday Morning,
"and some others are since dead."

London Magazine, 1740.

This Frost was rather more severe than that in 1715; and after having continued, with some short Intermittions, near eight Weeks, began then to abate, and continued slowly to abate to the End of the Month, it still remaining considerably cold, with pretty smart Frosts almost every Night. However, by about the twentieth, the Thames, to the great Joy of every Body, was again open above Bridge, and Boats plyed as usual, &c. 'Tis said, the Damage done to London-Bridge, and the Houses thereon, by the Frost, amounted to three thousand Pound repairing.

Both Houses of Parliament having addressed his Majesty on the Success of Admiral Vernon, who, with six Ships only, had entered the Port, and taken the Town of Porto-Bello, and demolished and levelled all the Forts and Castles belonging thereto; it was moved in a Common Council, held at Guildhall, on the twenty-fifth of March, 1740, and after six Hours Debate, agreed to present the Admiral with the Freedom of this City, to be delivered to him in a Gold Box, and to congratulate his Majesty as follows:

Porto-Bello taken.

Admiral Vernon presented with his Freedom.

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal
"Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Com"mons of the City of London, in Common Coun"cil assembled, beg Leave to congratulate your "Majesty on the glorious Success of your Ma"jesty's Fleet in the West-Indies, under the Com"mand of Vice-Admiral Vernon; who with six "Men of War only, and the Assistance of about "two hundred Land Forces from Jamaica, entered
"the Port, and took the Town of Porto-Bello, "demolishing and levelling all the Forts and "Castles thereto belonging, destroying or bring"ing

City del. arch.

"ing away all their Guns and Ordnance with "which they were defended; at the same Time
"treating the Inhabitants with the utmost Hu"manity; opening their Harbour, and reclaim"ing from Captivity your Majesty's Subjects in "the Service of the South-Sea Company, un-
"justly detained at Panama.

"The Execution of this important Service "with so small a Force, and with so much In"trepidity, must greatly redound to the Reputa"tion of your Majesty's Arms, and strike a "Terror into the Enemy, who will now by Ex"perience be convinced (whatever mistaken No"tions they may have formed from this Nation's "long Forbearance) that the Maritime Pow"er of Great-Britain, being at length exert"ed, is able effectually to vindicate the Glory
"of your Majesty's Crown, revenge the Inju"ries of your People, and retrieve the Honour
"of the British Flag.

"This auspicious Beginning of the War must "give your Majesty's faithful Subjects the most "reasonable Expectation of obtaining such fu"ture Successes, by your Majesty's wife Appli"cation of your Forces in the further Prosecu"tion of the same vigorous Measures, as may "put your Majesty in Possession of a real and ef"fectual Security for the Navigation and Trade
"of your People.

"We think it in a particular Manner incum"bent upon us, as Representatives of the great"est Trading Body of the Nation, to assure
"your Majesty that we will cheerfully contribute, "to the utmost of our Abilities, in Support of "a War so necessary for the Protection of our "long-injured Trade, and entered into at the "unanimous Desire of your Majesty's Subjects."

The King's Answer.

"I thank you for your Congratulation: You "have no Reason to doubt, but that in all my "Measures, as I have hitherto had, so I shall "continue to have, a due Regard to the Honour
"and Interest of my Crown and Kingdoms, and "to the Safety and Protection of all my Sub"jects."

This Address was presented to his Majesty by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, on the twenty-seventh of the same Month.

On the eighth of May, in the Evening, were solemnized the Espousals of the Princess Mary, with the Prince of Hesse, by the Archbishop of Canterbury; her Brother William, Duke of Cumberland, being that Prince's Proxy. And on the tenth, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen waited on his Majesty with their Compliments on that Event: When John Strange, Esq; their Recorder, made the following Speech to his Majesty:

"May it please your excellent Majesty,

City Address to the King.

"To permit the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen
"of your great City to approach your Majesty,
"with their humble and sincere Congratulations
"upon the Espousals of her Royal Highness the "Princess Mary, with his most Serene Highness
"Prince Frederick of Hesse. This happy Event
"your loyal Subjects consider as a farther In"stance of your Majesty's steady Attention to "the Honour and Interest of your Crown and

"Kingdoms, and of your Care and Regard for "the Protestant Cause.

"The Subjects of Great-Britain can never suf"ficiently adore the Divine Providence, for "those numerous Pledges of their future Secu"rity which your Majesty and these Nations "are so happily blessed with, and which, to all "human Appearance, promise a lasting Conti"nuance of your Royal House: But such, Sir,
"is to them the Importance of still adding "Strength to this Security, that they would ill
"deserve the Blessings they enjoy, if they did "not upon this and every such Occasion testify,
"with the utmost Gratitude, their unfeigned
"and most dutiful Rejoicings. And what, Sir,
"is it that Great-Britain may not promise herself
"from the glorious Prospect that is now before "her? Your Majesty's Arms so remarkably "successful in vindicating the Rights of Great-"Britain; and your Royal Progeny going forth
"the brightest Examples of a Mind formed by "Religion and Virtue, and of an Education re"ceived upon the true Principles of Liberty.

"This, great Sir, is undoubtedly owing to "the illustrious Pattern your Majesty and your "late Royal Consort set before them; and may "God grant, that your Royal House may for"ever supply the great Protestant Families of "Europe with such invaluable Blessings, as are "now secured to his most Serene Highness the "Prince of Hesse."

To which his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer:

"I return you Thanks for your dutiful Con"gratulations upon the Espousals of my Daugh"ter with the Prince of Hesse. You may always "depend upon my Favour and Protection."

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

They afterwards waited upon the Princess Mary, when the Recorder made the following Speech to her Royal Highness:

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of his Ma"jesty's great City beg Leave to express the "Joy they feel upon your Royal Highness's
"Espousals with his most Serene Highness Prince
"Frederick of Hesse: This Alliance, so wisely cal"culated for the further Security of the Protest"ant Interest, cannot fail to excite in his Majesty's "faithful Subjects, the humblest Acknowledge"ments to the Divine Providence, and the most "grateful Sense of his Majesty's Goodness.

"Your Royal Highness is now going to meet "a Prince of a most illustrious House, whose "Ancestors have worn both the Imperial and
"and Royal Diadem, and who, to all this, can "add the Lustre of the highest personal Accom"plishments; a Prince, who must and will own,
"that it is to Great-Britain he is indebted for his "future Felicity, and who is now impatiently
"waiting to receive that greatest of earthly Blef"sings, a Consort emulating the Virtues of her "Royal Parents.

"Permit these, Madam, to express their firm
"Assurance, that in the Midst of all your Great"ness,

To the Princess.

"ness, your Royal Highness will never forget
"this the Land of your Nativity: And though "Great-Britain is thus by Degrees deprived of "her Daughters, yet it will be her Consolation
"to see them so deservedly placed at the Head of "the most considerable Protestant Families in "Europe.

"We most earnestly implore the Giver of all "good Gifts to bless your Royal Highness with "a numerous Offspring, and his most Serene
"Highness and them with the long Enjoyment "of so inestimable a Treasure, as his Majesty
"has now bestowed upon them."

To which her Royal Highness gave the following Answer:

"I am very thankful to you for your Congratulations upon this Occasion. You may be assured of my sincerest Wishes for the Welfare and Protection of the City of London."

They had likewise the Honour to kiss her Royal Highness's Hand.

A Motion having been made in the last Session of Parliament for a Place-Bill, the Court of Common Council met at Guildhall on the eighteenth of June this Year, and agreed to return the Thanks of that Court to the four worthy Representatives of this City in the following Manner:

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, return you our Thanks for your faithful and diligent Attendance in Parliament, particularly while the Place-Bill was depending last Sessions; and being solicitous that the Rights and Liberties which this Nation has hitherto enjoyed, should be continued to latest Posterity, and considering that those Blessings can alone be secured by the Independence of Parliament, do most earnestly require of you to renew your endeavours in procuring a proper Bill for reducing and limiting the Number of Placemen in the House of Commons.

"As we apprehend that our Expectations last Sessions were in a great Measure disappointed through the Absence of a few Members from Parliament, we cannot but entertain the strongest Hopes of Success the next Year; not doubting but those Gentlemen, being at length convinced that a diligent Attendance in the House of Commons is of the utmost Consequence to the Nation, will not hazard a second Loss of this salutary Law, so immediately necessary to preserve the Freedom of our Constitution, to restore Unanimity among the People, and establish that Confidence in his Majesty's Measures as may effectually enable him, at this important Juncture, to assert the Honour of his Crown and Kingdom."

The Time for electing a new Lord-Mayor approaching, the Liverymen, at a previous Meeting, assembled at Vintners-Hall on the twenty-fifth, to consider of two proper Persons to be returned on Michaelmas-Day at Guildhall to the Court of Aldermen, for their Choice of one to be Lord-Mayor of this City: When Mr. Glover, being in the Chair, addressed himself to the Assembly in the following Manner:

"Gentlemen,

"When a Number of reputable and worthy Men are assembled to deliberate on any important Affair, and, in course, prefer to the Honour of presiding among them, some one of their Body; for him to expatiate in Derogation of himself, and fatigue his Auditors with a tedious Preface of his own Unworthiness, is, in my Opinion, a trivial Misapplication of Time, is paying an ill Compliment to those who have just made him the Object of their Approbation, and is, at best, but an ostentatious Affectation of Humility. You may judge then, Gentlemen, I shall be exceeding brief about myself; but, since I find myself in the Chair by your express Commands, shall immediately proceed to return you my Acknowledgments, and to assure you, that I esteem the Honour you have conferred upon me to be the greater as coming from an Assembly of Men, who, I am confident, are not met with any interested or Party View, but with the sincerest Intention to promote, jointly and separately, the publick Advantage.

"The same Motives, Gentlemen, which induced you to set aside a certain Alderman, last Year, from the Mayoralty of this City, I take for granted, are universally understood among you to be the Occasion of your meeting this Day. The Merits of this Affair have been sufficiently canvassed in all Conversations, and in every publick Paper; nor can I suppose any Gentleman present to be so uninformed, as not to perceive how material it is to this great Metropolis, for the Defence of its Rights and Privileges, for the Preservation of its Peace and Tranquility, and for the Support of its Reputation and Dignity, that no Person whatever should be vested with the supreme Magistracy, who is not agreeable to the Majority of its Citizens. Happy is it for this City, that the same Spirit, and the same Unanimity subsist among us; but give me Leave to observe, that the bare Removal of a Gentleman, you disapproved, from the Chair of London, however necessary or important in itself, was, by far, the least Benefit which your resolute and prudent Conduct, last Year, produced to the Publick. Let us but remember, with Calmness and Impartiality, how severely, and how long the Publick had suffered by the unfociable Temper of Party, which, by raising imaginary Distinctions between honest Men of different Denominations, had long kept them at a cold and reserved Distance from each other, for Want only of Opportunities to communicate their Sentiments together, and to discover that the general Good was equally intended by both; for Integrity and Sincerity must be the same in all; and, however the Possessors of those Qualities may differ about Words and Names, to advance the Welfare of Society must be the natural Pursuit of every upright and disinterested Man. Whatever, therefore, by spreading such a general Alarm, induces every Party to throw aside this reserved Behaviour, and, for their common Security, to join Counsel, and act in concert, must be considered as a fortunate Event to the Publick.

"Such

Mr. Glover's Speech to the Livery at Vintners-Hall.

The Common-Councilmen's Thanks to their Representatives.

"Such was the Necessity we lay under, last Year, of uniting in Opposition to a certain Alderman, which not only invested an unexceptionable Gentleman with the supreme Magistracy, but occasioned a much more extensive Advantage to this City, and, by the Example, to the Kingdom in general; I mean, by convincing all Parties, from this single Experiment, that as Union was necessary for our Preservation, so the Way to it was short and obvious. To evince the Truth of this, let us only recollect, with what Decency our Opposition was supported throughout, free from that Rancour and Fury, from that personal Abuse and publick Tumult, which are the constant Attendants of meer Party-Zeal. For myself, I most solemnly declare, I was swayed by no private Resentment, no personal Dislike to the Gentleman we opposed; it was a publick Conduct alone which influenced me, and I am satisfied I speak the Sentiments of most, if not of all, here present: And as that fatal Behaviour, which so justly excited the universal Indignation of London, ought never to be erased from Remembrance; so I trust we shall never desist from renewing the same Opposition, Year after Year; that we shall always dread the Censure of Levity and Disunion, which else will Brand us for ever; that we shall continually represent to our Thoughts the Dishonour which will fall upon this City, and the Discouragement we shall give to the whole Kingdom, which frames its Conduct so much on the Example of its Metropolis, if, at any Time whatever, we should remit of that manly and persevering Zeal, which has drawn us together this Day, and which, I hope, will occasion an uninterrupted annual Meeting, to consider of two proper Persons to be returned by a Common-Hall to the Court of Aldermen, for their Choice of one to be Lord-Mayor of this City."

Mr. Glover having ended, the Livery proceeded to the Consideration of the Affair before them, and resolved to support the Nomination of Sir Robert Godschall and George Heathcote, Esq; in the Common-Hall on Michaelmas-Day, they being the two senior Aldermen (except Sir George Champion) below the Chair.

On Michaelmas-Day these two Gentlemen were accordingly returned to the Court of Aldermen; upon which Sir Robert Godschall addressed himself to the Livery, and returned them Thanks for the Honour they did him, expressing his Concern that his Brethren of the Court of Aldermen had, without any Reason assigned, denied him the Favour intended him by his Fellow-Citizens; and, as he was not conscious of any Demerit in himself, he hoped they would justify their Conduct to the World. After which Alderman Heathcote declared his grateful Sense of the Honour done him, but desired his Fellow-Citizens would excuse his serving them in that Capacity for the ensuing Year, on Account of his ill State of Health, and the fatiguing, though honourable Office, which he had so lately undergone, [viz, that of Sheriff] especially as his Brethren had not made the least Objection to the worthy Alderman his Senior, either in Point of Honour, Ability, or Integrity. After which a Motion was made by William Benn, Esq; and seconded by Mr. Charles Hitch, That the Thanks of this Hall be given to George Heathcote, Esq; for supporting the Liberties of his Fellow-Citizens, in declining the Office of Lord-Mayor for the ensuing Year. And the Question being thereon put, the same was carried by the unanimous Voice of the Common-Hall.

The following Gentlemen were present in the Court of Aldermen:

Sir John Eyles, Bart.	John Barber, Esq;
Sir Robert Baylis, Kt.	Sir J. Barnard, Kt.
Sir Will. Billers, Kt.	Sir R. Godschall, Kt.
Sir J. Williams, Kt.	Geo. Heathcote, Esq;
Sir J. Thompson, Kt.	Daniel Lambert, Esq;
Sir Harc. Master, Kt.	Sir J. Lequesne, Kt.
Sir G. Champion, Kt.	Henry Marshall, Esq;
Sir Will. Rous, Kt.	Richard Hoare, Esq;
Sir Jos. Hankey, Kt.
William Baker, Esq;
George Arnold, Esq;

Of which the eleven were for George Heathcote, Esq; and the eight for Sir Robert Godschall.

Absent, Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Sir Edward Bellamy, Kt. Micajah Perry, Esq; Richard Levett, Esq; Robert Willmot, Esq; Robert Wesley, Esq;

This occasioned great Debates and Heart-burnings in the City, and several Courts at Guildhall. On the seventh of October, the Court of Aldermen entered into great Debates on the subject, without coming to any Determination. On the tenth, was held a Court of Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, when, upon a Debate concerning the Lord-Mayor for the Year ensuing, and after several Arguments, the Question was put, That Mr. Alderman Heathcote be Compelled to serve the Office of Lord-Mayor for the Year ensuing, which was strongly opposed; and another Question proposed, That he should be Excused from serving the Office for the Year ensuing; which latter Question, upon Debate, was rejected, and the former almost unanimously put, and carried almost unanimously in the Negative. Then another Question was put, That he be excused without any Fine, &c. which was carried likewise almost unanimously. This Negative Question was put to prevent a Negative in the Court of Aldermen.

Another Common-Hall was summoned to meet on the fourteenth; but, previous thereto, the Liverymen assembled again at Vintners-Hall, to consider of two Persons proper to be nominated: When Mr. Glover, being again in the Chair, opened the Assembly as follows.

"Gentlemen,

"Last Thursday was Fortnight you were assembled in this Place, to consider of two proper Persons to be returned at the next Common-Hall to the Court of Aldermen, for the Choice of one to be Lord-Mayor of this City for the Year ensuing. I had that Day the Honour to be in the Chair, when you concurred unanimously to nominate Sir Robert Godschall, Knight and Alderman, and George Heathcote, Esq; Alderman, to that high and important Office. That you should, this Year, be obliged to assemble once more upon the same Occasion, was an Event as remote from

Sir George Champion rejected a second Time.

Sir Robert
Godschall rejected by the Court of Aldermen.

George
Heathcote, Esq; declines being Lord-
Mayor.

" my Expectations, as the Procedure, which " hath laid this Necessity upon you, was surprize-
 " ing and alarming; a Procedure, which hath " brought into the Lists of Contention, eleven " Gentlemen of the Court of Aldermen, against " the whole Livery of London! How unequal
 " this Conflict must prove, depends upon your " prudent Perseverance; to strengthen which,
 " let us examine the principal Argument alledged
 " in these Gentlemens Justification, that not only
 " we may confirm the Wavering, but the most " Resolute among us may redouble their Vigour,
 " by the Confidence which springs from an equi" table Cause.

" In the Election of a Mayor, the Common-
 " Hall of London, and Court of Aldermen,
 " have each an undoubted Right; one to return
 " any two Aldermen they please, who have served " the Office of Sheriff; the other, to chuse which" ever of the two they prefer. However, it has " been generally a Custom for the Common-Hall
 " to compliment with the Return the two Gentle" men next the Chair, and for the Court of Al" dermen to elect the senior of the two. When" ever, therefore, a Custom, almost constantly " practised, is varied from, it must be under" stood to be a severe Censure on the Person so " passed by. A Gentleman last Year, suffered
 " this publick Mark of your Displeasure: Let
 " the impartial World be Judge, and it will de" termine that Conduct of the Common-Hall to " have been brave, and worthy of Englishmen,
 " to have been a wise and equitable Exertion of " their legal Right. So much Regard, notwith" standing, was still paid to the general Usage,
 " that, after rejecting the exceptionable Person,
 " the two next in Rotation were unanimously re" turned, without the least Bias to Party. As " the Court of Aldermen, this Year, have been " pleased to pass the same Censure upon Sir Robert " Godscall, you had Reason to expect they " should have produced, against his publick Be" haviour, an Accusation, that might have borne
 " some Proportion to the Charge of Misconduct,
 " which rendered the Gentleman, last Year set a" side, the Object of your just Resentment. In " this Case, the Court of Aldermen had made a " prudent and justifiable Use of that Right,
 " with which they are legally invested: But " when we are told, that they will exercise their " Power, for no better a Reason than because " you exerted yours, whether properly or improp" erly, being no Way regarded, they then use " their Power in an arbitrary Manner, and the " more inexcusably, as it is employed in Re" venge of an Action which will for ever be ap" plauded and admired. Such a Behaviour cer" tainly deserves to be esteemed an Invasion of " your Privileges, not, indeed, by the Exertion
 " of any illegal Power against you, but by the ar" bitrary Use of a legal Right, in order to dis" courage you from the free Exercise of yours " for the future. Their Reasoning, hitherto, is " so inconclusive, that, in my Opinion, it is " highly incumbent on these Gentlemen, to urge
 " some more cogent and convincing Arguments
 " to satisfy their Fellow-Citizens, who may, o" therwise, suspect that this Operation was con" certed with some Enemy of the City, with an " express Design of sowing Dissensions among us,

 " and to weaken that happy Disposition to Union,
 " which begins to Triumph over the Spirit of " Party. If this was really the Design, how " strongly does it evince the Necessity of that " Unanimity I had insisted on at your last general " Meeting, and how evidently must it prove to " all the Importance of discarding the antient
 " Animosities of Party! If we have Enemies
 " who study to divide us, common Prudence
 " should, surely, instruct us to strengthen the " Ties of Concord for our mutual Security.
 " What a glorious Example has been set before " us by that deserving Magistrate, that sincere " Friend to Liberty, that known and approved " Supporter of our Rights and Privileges, Mr.
 " Alderman Heatbroke! If actuated by any per" sonal Consideration, if dazzled with the Splendor
 " and Dignity of sustaining the supreme Magistra-
 " cy, in the most numerous, the most opulent,
 " and the most distinguished Community of the " Universe, if deluded by the seeming Prefer" ence bestowed upon him in the Election, he " had fallen into the Snare, and accepted the Of" fice, that Moment had all Confidence vanished
 " from among us, the accursed Spirit of Discord
 " and Faction had again revived, a Separation
 " had ensued, and the cold and reserved Distance " of Party, had, perhaps, been for ever main" tained, to obstruct the very Attempt at any " future Re-union. Fines and Disfranchisement
 " were threatened; but how little was that Gen" tleman known to those who could thus flatter
 " themselves, that the severest Penalties would " deter him from inviolably observing the Obligations of private Honour, and of his Duty
 " to this great Metropolis!

" Thus far, Gentlemen, I have taken upon " me to examine the late publick Proceeding of " the eleven Aldermen. Any farther, or more " particular Disquisition, which might lead to " the least personal Reflexion, I avoid, not only
 " as unbecoming the Impartiality of the Chair,
 " but because, I hope, there are some of these " Gentlemen who may have been influenced in " this ill-judged Affair, by some Misrepresenta" tion, or some Misapprehension, and who may,
 " at length, be convinced, how imprudent it is,
 " at this Juncture especially, to inhance the Un" easiness and Impatience, which naturally fill " the Minds of Men on the present uncertain " Situation of our publick Affairs. I hope they " will reflect, that an Attempt, at any Time,
 " to raise Distractions, and disunite their Fellow-" Citizens, is highly improper in those, who,
 " by their Duty and Office as Magistrates, are " bound to promote Concord and Union in that " Society in which they preside."

When Mr. Glover had finished, the Livery resolved on the Nomination of Mr. Alderman Parsons, who had already been Lord-Mayor, and Sir Robert Godscall, at the Election of a Lord-Mayor of this City, for the ensuing Year, in the Room of George Heatbroke, Esq; who honourably refused to take Place of Sir Robert Godscall, his Senior, and had been discharged by the Common Council from serving the said Office.
 The Persons put in Nomination were, all the Aldermen below the Chair, who had served the Office

*Alderman
Parsons chose Lord-Mayor a second Time.*

Office of Sheriff, and, upon the Motion of Mr. Benn, Mr. Calvert, and others, Humphrey Parsons, Esq; when Sir Robert Godschall, Knt. and Humphrey Parsons, Esq; were (almost unanimously) returned by the Common-Hall to the Court of Aldermen, there being but three Hands held up for Sir George Champion. The Aldermen, after a Debate which lasted near three Hours, were pleased to put by Sir Robert Godschall again, and returned Humphrey Parsons, Esq; The Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor being indisposed, Sir John Eyles, Bart. the Senior Alderman, took the Chair.

The following Aldermen were present, viz.

Sir John Eyles , Bart.	* H. Parsons , Esq;
Sir Robert Baylis	John Barber , Esq;
Sir William Billers	Sir John Barnard
Sir John Williams	Sir R. Godschall
Sir John Thompson	Geo. Heatbete , Esq;
* Sir Edw. Bellamy	Sir John Lequesne
Sir Harcourt Master	* R. Willmot , Esq;
Sir George Champion	Daniel Lambert , Esq;
Sir William Rous	* Rob. Westley , Esq;
Sir Joseph Hankey	Henry Marshall , Esq;
William Baker , Esq;	Richard Hoare , Esq;
George Arnold , Esq;

Of whom the twelve were for Humphrey Parsons, Esq; and the eleven for Sir Robert Godschall.

Those marked * were not present on Michaelmas-Day.

It is absolutely necessary to return two Persons to the Court of Aldermen for their Choice of one, which was the Occasion of nominating Humphrey Parsons, Esq; he being senior Alderman above the Chair, except Sir John Eyles, Bart. Postmaster-General, and Sir Robert Baylis, Knt. Commissioner of the Customs.

An Address on his Majesty's return from Hanover.

On Thursday the sixteenth, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of this City, waited on his Majesty, to congratulate him on his safe Return from Hanover; when Sir John Strange, the Recorder, made their Compliments in a Speech. To which his Majesty returned the following most gracious Answer:

"I take very kindly this Mark of your Affection to me and my Government: The Zeal which you express for the Support of this just and necessary War is very acceptable to me. My Endeavours shall never be wanting to carry it on with Vigour; and I doubt not, but, by the Blessing of God, and the Support of my People, they will be attended with Success."

On Wednesday the twenty-second, was held, at the Request of the Rt. Hon. Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Lord-Mayor Elect, a Court of Common Council at Guildhall; when he acquainted the Court, that, if it was their Desire, he was willing to accept that Office for the ensuing Year, let the Expence be what it would; which Declaration was received by the Court with unanimous Applause, and thereupon the following Motion was made: "That the Thanks of this Court be given to Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Lord-Mayor Elect, for accepting a second Time the laborious and expensive Office of the Mayoralty, and thereby in some Measure restoring the Peace and Tranquillity of this City, which has been greatly disturbed by a late extraordinary and uncommon Proceeding;" which Question, after long Debates, was agreed to by a very great Majority: But an Amendment being proposed by some of the Aldermen present, and Sir John Eyles and Sir Robert Baylis insisting that the Opinion of the Aldermen should be separately taken thereon, and several of the Court of Aldermen insisting upon a Negative, a long Debate ensued, in which their Power of putting a Negative on the Question was disputed with great Warmth; but, they still insisting upon that Power, Sir John Barnard, the Lord-Mayor Elect, and the rest of the worthy Aldermen who voted for Sir Robert Godschall, as also a very great Majority of the Common Council, withdrew from Court, protesting, That the Aldermen had no Right to vote separately, or put a Negative in the Forming of a Question. After which the Aldermen and about twenty of the Common-Councilmen that remained in Court returned Thanks to the Right Hon. Sir John Salter, Knt. Lord-Mayor, for his wise and impartial Conduct in his Mayoralty; and also to the Lord-Mayor Elect, for his accepting the Office a second Time.

No Negative allowed in putting a Question.

"To the Worthy Liverymen of the City of London.

"Gentlemen,

"I beg Leave to return you my most humble and hearty Thanks, for the remarkable Affection with which you did me the Honour to support your Nomination of me to be your chief Magistrate for the Year ensuing.

Sir Robert Godschall's Speech.

"As this distinguishing Mark of your Regard to me most justly commands, so I assure you it shall most certainly meet the sincerest Returns of Gratitude on my Part, whensoever I can be so happy as to have any Opportunity of testifying the high Sense I have of your Goodness to me.

"I have been, 'tis true, deprived of the great Office, for which you designed me, by a Majority of one Vote, amongst my Brethren the Aldermen; but the repeated Honour of so unanimous a Choice of my Fellow-Citizens, conferred on me in two very numerous Common-Halls, sufficiently recompenses me for that Slight; and, as the Honour you have done me cannot be taken from me by any Persons whatever, I shall always prize it infinitely beyond the Splendor of any Post, how eminent soever it may be.

"It must be, I think, no small Satisfaction to your worthy Body, to perceive that this (I hope unmerited) Severity, with which I have been so remarkably distinguished, has induced several of those worthy Gentlemen who have already filled the Chair of this City with the greatest Dignity and Applause, generously to resolve to go through that high but expensive and laborious Office again, when they shall be called upon by you, rather than not shew their Disapprobation of this unusual Opposition to your repeated Choice.

"I hope that nothing which has happened in this Affair will in any Manner disunite the City, and thereby lessen the Weight it receives from Unanimity; and I sincerely wish, that no Citizen of London may hence forward be distinguished by any Thing, but his unalterable Zeal and steady Attachment to the Welfare of his Country, and the Preservation of the

"the Rights and Liberties of this great Capital.

"I am,

Gentlemen,

College-Hill, Your most obliged, and
Oct. 22, 1740. Devoted humble Servant,

Robert Godscall.

And on Wednesday the twenty-ninth, the Right Hon. Humphrey Parsons, Esq; the new Lord-Mayor of London, was with the usual Solemnity sworn into that high and honourable Office at Westminster, for the Year ensuing. This was the second Time of his Lordship's serving in that important Post, he having executed the Office of Lord-Mayor in the Year 1731. What was remarkable in the Procession was, that his Lordship's Coach was drawn by six Horses.

London Infirmary in Goodmans-fields.

The London Infirmary, now called the London Hospital, which was first set on Foot and carried on in a little House adjoining to upper Moorfields, by Mr. John Harrison, a young Surgeon, and others, was this Year, on the third of November, removed and opened in a more commodious Situation in Prescot-Street, Goodmans-fields: Of whose Advantage to the Publick, and great Success, we shall be particular in its proper Place.

It is remarkable, that in the last Year, there were condemned to die forty-four, and ordered for Transportation two hundred and fifty-two: And in the present Year, there were also forty-four condemned to die, and two hundred and fifty-one ordered for Transportation.

A Hurricane.

On the first of November, at Night, there was a most dreadful Hurricane, which continued from between five and six a Clock to ten or eleven, and did a great deal of Mischief, as well on the River, as in and near London. At six, a Stack of Chimnies belonging to the Rev. Mr. Dormer, who kept a Boarding-School at Kensington, fell down upon the House, and by their great Weight made their Way quite into the Cellar: Mr. Dormer was in the Room next under the Garret, and a Son of Sir Richard Mill, Bart. with him; Mrs. Dormer was in the Room under them, and another Son of Sir Richard's with her, being just come down from his Brother, and they were all covered with the Ruins: Mr. Dormer and his Wife were both killed, but the two young Gentlemen were taken out alive, but very much bruised. The rest of the Boarders were happily at another Part of the House. About eight, one of the Spires of Westminster-Abbey was blown down: As was also great Part of Hyde-Park Wall, between Kensington and Hyde-Park Corner. About ten, Part of the House of Mr. Prince, of Hollis-Street, Cavendish-Square, was blown down, and the Master and Servants escaped with the utmost Hazard of their Lives. At the Coach and Horses Alehouse in Brook-Street, Graveyard-Square, a Stack of Chimnies fell into a Room, where seven Men were drinking, and killed one Thomas Gaull on the Spot, and bruised some of the rest. At the Royal-Exchange a Brick Chimney was in a very surprising Manner parted, and turned almost round, where it hung by an Iron Hold-fast till Sunday in the Afternoon, when some Workmen were employed to take it down. In the Blue-Coat-Hospital two Stacks of Chimnies fell on the Roof of one of the Wards, broke through, and alarmed them very much, but did no other Damage. A great many other Chimnies were blown down, the Tiling stript off the Houses in most Places, and in short a greater Desolation had not been known for many Years. But the Damage on the Water was much more considerable: For we had most melancholy Accounts from Lynn, Tar-mouth, and several other Places, that many Ships and Vessels were lost, and others very much damaged; that some were without Masts, some without Anchors, and some without Men, and several dead Bodies were drove ashore. A Passage-Boat going from Sheerness to Chatham was lost, and seventeen or eighteen People drowned. Capt. John Paddie, who had made a brave Defence against a Spanish Privateer, unfortunately lost his Ship, the Prince of Orange, in Margate Road; of which, among the rest, he gave the following Particulars:—"At ten we drove ashore on a Ledge of Rocks called the Naylins, where we lay till twelve on Sunday Noon, when Merchant Brooks got two Boats carted from to Windward of the Wreck. The Ship had not been Half an Hour on Shore, before the Stern, Cabin, and Round-house, broke in Pieces. We then got to the Fore-Castle, and by Morning all was gone abast the Windlafs. Thus twenty-three of us continued, the Sea making a free Passage over us fourteen Hours. Five perished with Cold before got off, and I could not have survived an Hour longer. I lost the Use of my Limbs, and write this in Bed, where, by having hot Cloths applied to me, I am much recovered. I have not saved any Thing. The Height of the Gale was at North, and the People here say they never knew so violent a Gale."

Amidst the Damages sustained by the Violence of this Storm, 'twas a Consolation to hear, that the Fleet under Sir Chaloner Ogle in a great Measure escaped its Fury; and that very little of it was felt to the Westward, our Letters from Phymouth, Dartmouth, Falmouth, &c. making no Mention of any Losses sustained thereby.

On Tuesday the eleventh, a Court of Common Council was held at Guildhall, when a Motion was made, and the Question put, That the Court of Aldermen have the Power of putting a Negative upon the Framing of a Question, which passed in the Negative; and the same passed in the Negative in the Court of Aldermen, by a Majority of ten to four. After which a Motion was made, That the Court of Aldermen have not the Power of putting a Negative upon the Framing of a Question, which passed in the Affirmative; and the same passed in the Affirmative in the Court of Aldermen, by a Majority of eleven to four.

Question concerning the Negative upon framing a Question, passed in the Negative.

And Wednesday the twelfth, being the brave Admiral Vernon's Birth-day, was distinguished in a very extraordinary Manner, by Ringing of Bells, and publick Dining in many Places, &c. and in the Evening, the greatest Rejoicings, Bonfires, and Illuminations in London, that had been known for many Years. Don Blas (Governor of Puerto-Bello) was burnt in many Places; and at Chancery-Lane End was a Pageant, where was depicted Admiral Vernon, and a Spaniard on his Knees offering him his Sword; a view of Puerto-Bello, and the Ships and war-like like Implements; over the Admiral's Head was wrote, Venit, vidit, vicit; and under him, Vernus semper vivet. The Day was celebrated also in most of the chief Places of the Kingdom, as also in Ireland; as was likewise the first Instant, in the Borough of Southwark and other Places; there being then some Uncertainty, whether that or the twelfth was the Anniversary of that great Man. The twenty-second also, being the Day he took Perio-Bello, was celebrated with great Rejoicings.

William Dewell.

One William Dewell, condemned at the last Sessions at the Old Bailey, for a Rape and Murder committed on a poor Woman, in a Barn at Adon, being hanged at Tyburn on the twenty-fourth, his Body was delivered to the Surgeons at the Place of Execution; and, by their Order, carried to their Hall; but after he was stripped and laid on the Board, and one of the Servants washing him, to be cut up, he perceived Life in him, and found his Breath came quicker and quicker; on which a Surgeon bled him, and took several Ounces of Blood from him, and in about two Hours he came so much to himself as to sit up in a Chair, groaned very much, and seemed in very great Agitation, but could not speak. He was kept at Surgeons-Hall till twelve o'Clock at Night, the Sheriff's Officers (who were sent for on this extraordinary Occasion) attending; he was then conveyed to Newgate, to remain there till he was proved to be the very identical Person ordered for Execution the twenty-fourth Instant; the next Day he was in good Health in Newgate, eat his Victuals heartily, and asked for his Mother.

He was afterwards ordered by his Majesty to be transported for Life.

On Wednesday, the nineteenth of November, the Livery met at Vintners-Hall, pursuant to an Advertisement, to consider of proper Persons to represent the City in the ensuing Parliament. Mr. Deputy Naso being in the Chair, Sir John Barnard was first nominated; but, it being urged that he declined the Office, and a Letter from him to the Assembly being read, in which he desired to be excused all farther Attendance in Parliament, on Account of his ill State of Health, which rendered him unequal to the Fatigues of that Post; it was moved, That a Deputation from the Hall might wait on him, to request his Acquiescence in their Nomination, who were also to bring back his final Resolutions.

But the sending this Deputation was opposed by Mr. Glover, who was for nominating him without any such Application. His Speech on that Occasion was as follows:

"Gentlemen,

Mr. Glover's Speech on the Occasion.

"I have been honoured on former Occasions with your Favour and Attention. As the Service of Sir John Barnard in Parliament is of the highest Consequence to this City, and, I may say, to the whole Kingdom, I hope you will indulge me now; it is possible I may take up some Part of your Time; I flatter myself, that the Importance of the Subject will excuse me, and that I shall not fail of your wonted Favour this Day.

"Gentlemen, when I reflect on the unequalled Abilities which we have experienced in Sir John NUMB. LII.

"Barnard, thro' a Series of so many Years; when I reflect on his consummate Sagacity, on his unshaken Resolution, Fortitude, and Integrity; when I consider those excellent Qualities, adorned and supported by the most masculine and persuasive Eloquence; when I consider him as the Patron of Trade, as the universal Friend of his Country, as the Ornament of this City, which elects him; and an Honour to that great Assembly where he excels as a Senator, I never can give my Consent, that any Deputation at all should be sent from us to intreat his faithful Service; but that the first Question should be insisted on; and that, notwithstanding all the Excuses he has ever made before, or that are contained in his Letter to the Livery this Day, he should be now put in Nomination as a Candidate to serve us again in Parliament.

"By this Means, we give him all the Time between this Day and the Election for Deliberation in his own Breast, for the Persuasion of his Friends, and the Solicitation of this great City, to make him at length sensible of his own Weight and Importance to the Publick; for, should it be deprived of his farther Assistance, the Loss would be lamented from the Land's-End to the North of Scotland.

"But to force him again upon this Duty, contrary to his Inclination, may, possibly, appear disrespectful and ungrateful towards one who has already served you so long and so well. Indulge me, Gentlemen; I shall endeavour to prove, that no Law whatever, either of Reason, of Society, or of the Land, can oblige you to admit of his Excuses, or give him the Right of retiring from the Publick, especially in the present Conjuncture. And, first, I appeal to that sacred, that unwritten Law, residing nowhere but in the Breast of good and honest Men, and to them more obligatory than any written Laws, with all their Train of Punishments to enforce their Authority; I mean the sacred, the unwritten Law of Virtue, which produces to Society those numberless Advantages for which no written Law can provide: It is this which disposes Men to every Action of Generosity and Benevolence in private Life, which informs them of their several Duties to Parents, Children, Friends, Fellow-Citizens, Strangers, and all that stand in need of our Aid and Support: It is this sacred and unwritten Law, which so frequently, in former Ages, especially in every free Country, gave Birth to the many glorious Acts of publick Virtue, inducing the Brave and Worthy to suffer Fines, Pains, and Imprisonment, to undergo the Loss of their Fortunes and Lives, for their Country: It is to this Tribunal I now cite Sir John Barnard, which is no more than bringing that distinguished Patriot to be judged by his own uncorrupt and virtuous Heart, by his own wife and discerning Mind; and, surely, he must discover, that, as so many worthy Men have been known to sacrifice their All for the Publick, and as there are Emergencies which render it a reasonable Conduct to devote both Life and Fortune to the general Welfare, surely then he must discover, that a bare Apprehension of Fatigue, or of any mental or bo-

"dily Infirmity, which may happen hereafter, is "an Excuse which can never justify so able and "useful a Senator in abandoning his Country, at "a Time when his Aid and Counsel are so neces"sary to its Defence and Support.

"Permit me, Gentlemen, to consider next the "Nature of Sir John Barnard's Excuses. He has "declared, that he finds his Memory begins to "fail. Great Men are frequently disposed to "suspect their own Abilities, and, undoubtedly,
 "may feel their Faculties yielding upon the first "Approach of old Age; when, at the same "Time, the Alteration is altogether impercepti"ble to every one besides. You may judge for "yourselves, Gentlemen, in the present Case;
 "you are continual Witnesses to some Instances
 "or other of Sir John Barnard's superior Abilities.
 "Allowing for all the Waste of Time in the ex"quisite Frame of his Mind, will you ever be "persuaded to believe, that, at the Conclusion of "seven Years more, he will not still be left a "most able and useful Counsellor to the Pub"lick? Time may abate his Vigour, his Quick"ness of Apprehension, his Vivacity, his Fire
 "may subside; but will he not still retain Soli-"dity of Thought? Will not his Judgment be "rather improved by so much additional Expe"rience? And will not that which surpasses every "other Excellence, remain in him for ever, un"impaired by Time? I mean the Integrity of "his Heart. The Fatigue, the constant Atten"dance in Parliament, you yourselves may alle"viate, by electing three such proper Compani"ons with him, as may take upon themselves
 "the laborious Part, and leave him all the Lei"sure and Repose his Health may require. Nor "will you expect from a Gentleman forced into "your Service, any Thing beyond his Health
 "and Strength; and the same Reason will al"ways furnish him with an Excuse to consult his "own Ease, and to throw upon others the con"stant Employment and Attendance which so "eminently fall to their Share, who have the "Honour of representing this great Metropolis
 "in Parliament.

"I shall now undertake to prove, that, to force
 "into this Service any Gentleman you please,
 "whom you esteem best qualified, is a Procedure
 "altogether agreeable to the Course of the Law.
 "The Law, Gentlemen, in return for that Pro"tection and Security it affords to Individuals in "their Lives and Properties, exacts from them
 "certain Duties and Services; these it claims as "Debts, without conferring the least Reward; I "mean, all the burthenome and expensive Of"fices, from the Lieutenancy of a County, down "to a Constable of the meanest Parish. A com"pulsory Power is, accordingly, lodged in vari"ous Hands: The Law vests the King with a "Power to oblige every Gentleman to serve as "Sheriff in his County, the Sheriff to force up"on Juries whomsoever he judges proper; and,
 "were it material to make any further Examina"tion into these Kinds of publick Duties, we "should find, that the most inferior Parish, as "well as the more considerable Corporations, are "intrusted by Law with the same compulsory "Power over their several Members. If, there"fore, you are impowered to force into the most

"trifling Offices, the several Individuals of So"ciety, can you doubt of a Right to put up in "Nomination, for the most important of your "publick Employments, the best qualified Per"son among you, notwithstanding his Refusal?
 "Can he, who in his Turn has been liable to "be chosen Scavenger in his Ward, have any "Right to avoid serving his Country in Parlia"ment, possessed as he is, with every Qualifica"tion requisite to excel in that great Employ"ment? Or can any be persuaded, that to no"minate him, at least, for that important Ser"vice, is inconsistent with that Law, which o"bliges the best among you to undergo the most "trifling, as well as the most troublesome Duties,
 "for the Publick?

"And give me Leave to ask you, Gentle"men, who by your Residence in the Metropolis,
 "by your Wealth and Commerce, have a Con"nexion and Intercourse with the whole King"dom, what will you answer to your Friends,
 "and Correspondents, when they demand of you,
 "Why was Sir John Barnard omitted in the List
 "of Candidates for London? Why is the Nation "deprived of his Service? Do you imagine they "will be satisfied when you tell them, He ex"cused himself? Will not they reply, Who o"bligated you to admit of his Excuses? Had you "not a Right to nominate him? Are you to "prefer the Repose of a single Man to the gene"ral Advantage? Give up to Retirement, a "Man so capable to serve the Publick? What "Answer can you make to these Reproaches of a "whole People? How weak, how light will "you appear in their Eyes, how ignorant of your "own Interest, how negligent of the Publick?
 "Your Weight will be lost, the Example of this "great Metropolis, by which the whole Nation
 "were accustomed to regulate their Conduct,
 "will be regarded no more: Ridicule and Re-"proaches will attend you, as having injured the "Publick in so signal a Manner; for, give me
 "Leave to tell you, a Member like Sir John Barnard cannot be locally concerned; you "have, indeed, the Merit of having found him,
 "and sent him to Parliament; but the whole
 "Kingdom besides is interested in him, as well as "you; and rest assured, that he will be demand"ed at your Hands. The Merchants of London "will demand him as the Guardian of Trade; the "Nation will demand him as the universal "Friend of his Country; and the Legislature will "demand him as one of their best and ablest "Counsellors. I have but one Thing more to "urge, it is a Distress which you are not aware "of, but will inevitably fall upon you, and I "speak it from my own Knowledge; if you suf"fer Sir John Barnard to leave your Service, the "Publick will not only be deprived of him, but of "many others, who already plead this fatal Exam"ple for their retiring too; and if those who have "distinguished themselves in supporting the "Rights and Privileges delivered down from "our Ancestors for these seven hundred Years,
 "and who labour under an heavier Weight of "Age and Infirmities than Sir John Barnard,
 "should, likewise, abandon the publick Cause,
 "who would remain to defend your Liberties?
 "Or, when they justified themselves by his Ex"ample, will they not find themselves in the same "situation?"

"ample, to whom could you impute your Distress but to yourselves, who suffered so fatal an Example to take Place?"

On this Speech it was resolved to nominate Sir John Barnard, notwithstanding his Excuses, for one of the Candidates at the next Election, and to join with him Mr. Alderman Parsons, Sir Robert Goddard, and Mr. Alderman Heathcote.

Motion in the House of Commons for paving and repairing the Streets.

The Streets of this great Metropolis being thought much impaired for want of paving in many Places, and by the Neglect of those whose Duty it was to cleanse the Streets; the Lord Tyrconnel, on the twenty-seventh of January, moved, "for Leave to bring in a Bill for the better paving and cleansing the Streets within the City of Westminster, and the Liberties thereof, and for preventing Nuisances therein." Upon which Occasion his Lordship spoke as follows:

"Mr. Speaker,

"Sir, tho' the Grievance which I am about to lay before the House, is not of the most formidable or dangerous Kind, yet as it is such as grows every Day greater, and such as every Day endangers the Lives of thousands, I hope it will not be thought useless or improper, to propose it to the Consideration of this Assembly, to offer my Thoughts on the Methods by which it may be most easily removed, and to endeavour to incite others to the same Considerations. It is impossible, Sir, to come to this Assembly, or to return from it, without Observations on the present Condition of the Streets of Westminster; Observations forced upon every Man, however inattentive, or however ingrossed by Reflexions of a different Kind. The warmest zeal for publick Happiness, the most anxious Vigilance against general Dangers, must, I believe, sometimes give way to Objects immediate, though of less Importance; nor will the most publick-spirited Members deny, that they have often been in the Streets alarmed with Obstructions, or shocked with Nuisances.

"The Filth, Sir, of some Parts of the Town, and the Inequality and Ruggedness of others, cannot but in the Eyes of Foreigners disgrace our Nation, and incline them to imagine us a People, not only without Delicacy, but without Government, a Herd of Barbarians, or a Colony of Hottentots. The most disgusting Part of the Character given by Travellers, of the most Savage Nations, is their Neglect of Cleanliness, of which, perhaps, no Part of the World affords more Proofs than the Streets of London; a City famous for Wealth, Commerce, and Plenty, and for every other Kind of Civility and Politeness; but which abounds with such Heaps of Filth, as a Savage would look on with Amazement. If that be allowed, which is generally believed, that Putrefaction and Stench are the Cause of pestilential Distempers, the Removal of this Grievance may be pressed from Motives of far greater Weight than those of Delicacy and Pleasure; and I might solicit the timely Care of this Assembly, for the Preservation of innumerable Multitudes; and intreat those who are watching "against slight Misfortunes, to unite their Endeavours with mine, to avert the greatest and most dreadful Calamities.

"Not to dwell, Sir, upon Dangers, which may perhaps be thought only imaginary, I hope that it will be at least considered, how much the present Neglect of the Pavement is detrimental to every Carriage, whether of Trade, or Pleasure, or Convenience; and that those who have allowed so much of their Attention to Petitions relating to the Roads of the Kingdom, the Repair of some of which is almost every Session thought of Importance sufficient to produce Debates in this House, will not think the Streets of the Capital alone unworthy of their Regard. That the present Neglect of Cleansing and Paving the Streets, is such as ought not to be borne; that the Passenger is every where either surprised and endangered by unexpected Chafins, or offended and obstructed by Mountains of Filth, is well known to every one, that has passed a single Day in this great City; and, that this great Grievance is without Remedy, is a sufficient Proof that no Magistrate has, at present, Power to remove it; for every Man's private Regard to his own Ease and Safety would incite him to exert his Authority on this Occasion. I humbly propose, therefore, that a Bill may be brought into the House, to enable his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the Liberties of Westminster, to inspect the publick Ways of this City, and punish the Neglect of Cleansing and Paving them; or that a new Officer be appointed, and vested with full Authority for the same Purpose."

In which that honourable Gentleman was opposed by Mr. Sandys; and, the Question being put, it passed in the Negative, 142 against 109.

Rejected.

At this Time there was depending in the House of Commons, a Bill for the Encouragement and Increase of Seamen, and for the better and speedier Manning of his Majesty's Fleet, which had met with great Opposition in the Committee, and had thereby undergone many Alterations and Amendments; yet it appeared to the London Merchants and Traders, &c. in so bad a Light, that tho' the Committee had rejected all the Clauses that were of dangerous Consequence to the Liberties of the Subject, yet upon the said Day, before the Report was made, the following Petition was presented by Sir John Barnard, who introduced it with a short Speech, to this Effect:

London Merchants petition against the Bill for the Increase of Seamen.

"Mr. Speaker,

"Sir, this Petition I am directed to lay before this House, by many of the principal Merchants of that great City which I have the Honour to represent; Men too wise to be terrified with imaginary Dangers, and too honest to endeavour the Obstruction of any Measures that may probably advance the publick Good, merely because they do not concur with their private Interest; Men, whose Knowledge and Capacity enable them to judge rightly, and whose acknowledged Integrity and Spirit set them above the Suspicion of concealing their Sentiments.

Sir John Barnard's Speech on presenting it.

"I there-

"I therefore present this Petition in the Name of the Merchants of London, in full Confidence that it will be found to deserve the Regard of this Assembly, tho' I am equally with the other Members a Stranger to what it contains; for it is my Opinion, that a Representative is to lay before the House the Sentiments of his Constituents, whether they agree with his own or not, and that therefore it would have been superfluous to examine the Petition, which, though I might not wholly have approved it, I had no Right to alter."

The Petition was read, and is as follows.

The humble Petition of the Merchants and Traders of the City of London,

Sheweth,

Copy of the Petition.

"That your Petitioners are informed a Bill is depending in this Honourable House, for the Encouragement and Increase of Seamen, and for the better and speedier Manning his Majesty's Fleet, in which are Clauses, that, should the Bill pass into a Law, your Petitioners apprehend will be highly detrimental to the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, by discouraging Persons from entering into, or being bred to the Sea-Service, and intirely prevent the better and speedier Manning of his Majesty's Fleet, by giving the Seamen of Great-Britain, and of all other his Majesty's Dominions, a Dislike of serving on board the Royal Navy.

"That your Petitioners conceive nothing can be of so bad Consequence to the Welfare and Defence of this Nation, as the treating so useful and valuable a Body of Men, who are its natural Strength and Security, like Criminals of the highest Nature, and so differently from all other his Majesty's Subjects; and, at the same Time are persuaded, that the only effectual and speedy Method of procuring, for the Service of his Majesty's Fleet, a proportionable Number of the Sailors in this Kingdom, is to distinguish that Body of Men by Bounties and Encouragements, both present and future, and by abolishing all Methods of Severity and ill Usage, particularly that Practice whereby they are deprived, after long and hazardous Voyages, of enjoying, for a short Space of Time, the Comforts of their Families, and equal Liberty with other their Fellow-Subjects in their native Country.

"That your Petitioners believe it will not be difficult to have such Methods pointed out, as will tend to supply the present Necessities, and at the same Time effectually promote the Increase of Seamen, when this Honourable House shall think fit to inquire into a Matter of such high Importance to the Naval Power, Trade, and Riches of this Kingdom.

"That your Petitioners are convinced this Bill will not only be ineffectual to answer the Ends proposed by it, but will be destructive of the Liberties of all his Majesty's Subjects; as it impowers any Parish-Officer, accompanied with an unlimited Number of Persons, at any Hour, by Day or by Night, to force open the Dwelling-houses, Warehouses, or other Places, provided for the Security and Defence of their Lives and Fortunes, contrary to the undoubted Liberties of this People of Great-Britain, and the Laws of the Land.

"In Consideration, therefore, of the Premises, and of the particular Prejudices, Hardships, and Dangers, which must inevitably attend your Petitioners, and all others the Merchants and Traders of this Kingdom, should this Bill pass into a Law, your Petitioners most humbly pray this Honourable House, that they may be heard by their Counsel against the said Clauses in the said Bill."

This Petition was ordered to lie upon the Table.

The Debates continued very warmly, on both Sides; and other Petitions were presented in the same Tenor. But at last the Bill was carried, by 253 against 79.

On the third of Jan. the Princess of Wales being safely delivered of a Daughter on the thirtieth of last Month, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London waited on his Majesty at St. James's, to congratulate him on the Birth of a Princess; when Sir John Strange, their Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech:

Most Gracious Sovereign,

"The safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, and the Birth of another Princess, are Events of so much Consequence to these Kingdoms, that the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of your City of London have most humbly desired your Majesty's Permission to tender their dutiful Congratulations on this joyful Occasion.

"It is no small Part of our Happiness, that whilst other Kingdoms and States most anxiously perceive great and noble Families, in whom they are interested, drawing towards a Period, we of this Nation have the Pleasure to behold many Descendants from your Royal Person; the best Security (under the Blessing of God) for the long Enjoyment of our Religion and Liberties.

"Happy are the People whose Prayers for their Prince are then most ardent, when the Sense of their own Felicity affects them most. Such, Sir, are those we offer for your sacred Person; formed, we confess, with a View to our own Interest, but at the same Time ennobled by a true Principle of Gratitude."

To which his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for this Address, and the Regard you express for me and my Family."

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

The Princess of Wales being well recovered from Child-bed, the Prince signified his Readiness to receive the City Compliments on that Occasion. Accordingly, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London waited on their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales; when Sir John Strange, Knt. their Recorder, made their Compliment as follows:

Copy Addressed to the King on the Birth of a Princess.

To the Prince of Wales.Address to the Prince of Wales.

" May it please your Royal Highness,
 " The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly present themselves before you, to congratulate your Royal Highness upon the safe Delivery of your illustrious Consort, and the Birth of another Princess: They consider every Addition to his Majesty's Family, as an Increase of their own Happiness, and as a further Security that the Scepter shall not depart from his Royal House; an Event we are all so highly concerned to guard against.

" It is with infinite Pleasure the Nation beholds your Royal Highness possessed of a most amiable Princess, mutually happy in each other, and both exhibiting that beautiful Example of conjugal and parental Affection, for which your Royal Highnesses are most justly admired: The happy Influence this has, and must continue to have, naturally excites our Gratitude, and, joined to numberless other high Qualifications, leaves no Room to doubt, but that your Royal Highnesses were particularly designed by Providence, to continue to us the many Blessings of his Majesty's Reign.

" No Part of the City of London can at any Time approach your Royal Highness, without acknowledging the great Honour they receive by your condescending to continue a Member of their Body, and shewing your kind Regard to them on all Occasions: The best Return they can make is to assure your Royal Highness, with the utmost Sincerity, that nothing shall exceed the Fervency of their Wishes for your Welfare and Prosperity, nor their steady Adherence to the Interest of his Majesty, and every Branch of his illustrious House."

To the Princess of Wales.To the Princess.

" May it please your Royal Highness,
 " The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London most humbly address themselves to your Royal Highness, with their sincere Congratulations upon your safe Delivery of another Princess, and the Re-establishment of your Health. These they contemplate as national Blessings, in which Light also they have never failed to consider his Royal Highness's Marriage into your illustrious House; a Marriage which then promised, and hath since given the highest Pleasure and Satisfaction to his Majesty's Subjects, and will be always remembered by them with the utmost Gratitude.

" Your known Tendernefs, Affection and Care for the Royal Consort you are blessed with, and for those inestimable Pledges of our future Security, which the Goodness of God to us has already bestowed upon you, will forever excite our most dutiful Acknowledgments, and our earnest Prayers for an Increase of these and all other Blessings to your Royal Highness, and that you may long live in Health and Prosperity, to see the happy Effects of your Influence and Example."

To which the Prince made this Answer:

No. 52.

My Lord and Gentlemen,The Prince's Answer.

" I return you my Thanks, and those of the Princess, for this new Instance of your Duty to the King, and Regard to us. My Children will, I hope, deserve one Day that Love you now express for them, and it shall be my constant Care to instill such Sentiments into them as are agreeable to the Liberties and Interests of their Country. The City may depend upon it, that I shall never forget the repeated Marks I have had of their Affection, and that they shall always have my good Wishes for their Welfare, and for the Increase of their Trade, and Prosperity."

After which they all had the Honour to kiss their Royal Highnesses Hands.

The Wardens and Court of Assistants of the Worshipful Company of Sadlers soon after waited on their Royal Highnesses, on the same Occasion, when their Clerk addressed their Royal Highnesses as follows:

Address from the Sadler's Company.

" The Company of Sadlers (honoured with your Royal Highnesses Permission to congratulate you on the happy Increase of your Family) most humbly approach your Royal Highnesses, to testify their Joy at the long Continuance of your Royal Race, to bless Posterity with the Government of this Nation. As the great Honour conferred by your Royal Highness on this Company will be had in everlasting Remembrance, so they sincerely wish that the Imperial Crown of these Kingdoms may never depart from your Royal House, till Time shall be no more."

His Royal Highness's Answer was to the following Effect:

Gentlemen,

" I return you my Thanks, and those of the Princess, for this fresh Instance of your Kindness; and the Company may be fully persuaded they shall always have my good Wishes."

They all had the Honour to kiss their Royal Highnesses Hands, and were afterwards regaled with Wine, &c.

On the tenth of February, 1741, at the Court of Common Council, a Motion was made, that a Petition from the City of London be presented to the House of Commons, for some effectual Laws to prevent the pernicious and destructive Practice of running Wool to foreign Parts; which Motion was unanimously agreed to, and a Committee (consisting entirely of Merchants) was appointed to prepare the said Petition: And on the twelfth the said Petition was laid before the Court of Common Council, and approved; and in the Afternoon the two Sheriffs attended the Honourable House of Commons with the same.

City Petition against running of Wool.

On Saturday the twenty-first of March, about seven in the Evening, died, in the 65th Year of his Age, the Right Honourable Hampercy Parsons, Esq; Lord-Mayor of London, and Member of Parliament for the said City, Alderman of Portoken Ward, and President of the Hospitals of Bridewell and Bethlehem. No Lord-Mayor had died in his Mayoralty after Sir John Shorter, who died in 1688; and it was remarkable, that Sir John Eyles (Grandfather of the then Sir John) who had not served the Office of Sheriff, and was no Freeman of London, served the remaining Part of the Year: And on Sunday the twenty-second, a Court of Aldermen was held at Guildhall: Present,

Death of Alderman Parsons Lord-Mayor.

Sir John Eyles,	Sir John Barnard,
Sir Robert Baylis,	Sir Robert Godscall,
Sir John Williams,	Alderman Heatcote,
Sir John Salter,	Alderman Lambert,
Sir Harcourt Master,	Alderman Westley,
Alderman Baker,	Alderman Hoare,
Alderman Arnold.	Alderman Benn,
	Alderman Ladbroke.

When the Question was put, whether Precepts should be issued for a new Election, which was carried accordingly, else Sir John Eyles, as Father of the City, had acted as Lord-Mayor for the Remainder of the Year.

On Monday the twenty-third, a Court of Hustings was held at Guildhall, by Virtue of a Precept from the Locum Tenens and Court of Aldermen, for the Election of a Lord-Mayor for the Remainder of the Year; when, upon putting up all the Aldermen below the Chair, who had served the Office of Sheriff, and Sir John Barnard, upon a Motion made by Mr. Deputy Smith, and seconded by Mr. Siffon, Sir Robert Godscall and Sir John Barnard were almost unanimously returned to the Court of Aldermen, who elected Sir John Barnard; but Sir John, in a most genteel Manner, desired to be excused for the present, which was granted; (and by an Act of Common Council, as he had already served the Office, he could not be obliged to serve it again.) They then proceeded to a new Election, and returned Sir Robert Godscall and Daniel Lambert, Esq; with the general Voice of the Hall; but a Poll was immediately demanded, by two Persons, for Sir George Champion against Alderman Lambert; which, however, they soon after thought proper to decline, and the two former were returned to the Court, who chose Alderman Lambert, by a Majority of thirteen to ten, viz.

Alderman
Lambert chosen Lord-
Mayor.

Sir John Eyles,	Sir John Barnard,
Sir Robert Baylis,	Sir Robert Godscall,
Sir William Billers,	Alderman Heatcote,
Sir John Williams,	Alderman Willmot,
Sir John Thompson,	Alderman Lambert,
Sir Harcourt Master,	Alderman Westley,
Alderman Perry,	Alderman Marshall,
Sir George Champion	Alderman Hoare,
Sir John Salter,	Alderman Benn,
Sir Joseph Hankey,	Alderman Ladbroke.
Sir William Rous,
Alderman Baker,
Alderman Arnold.

Upon this Occasion, Sir Robert Godscall, in a Speech from the Hustings, returned the Common Hall his sincere Thanks for the Dignity intended him, tho' denied him by a Majority of his Brethren in the Court of Aldermen, and with Pleasure observed, that the Good-will of his Fellow-Citizens was a more solid Satisfaction, than the highest Honours that could be conferred upon him.

As soon as Alderman Lambert was chosen, the Common Serjeant was dispatched to the Lord-Chancellor, to acquaint him therewith, and to know when his Lordship would be waited on, who appointed nine o'Clock at Night; at which Time Alderman Lambert, properly attended, went up, and was accepted with the usual Ceremonies.

The new Lord-Mayor went in great State to the Tower, attended by the twelve Companies, &c. where, on a Booth erected for that Purpose without the Gate, he was sworn in by the Right Honourable the Lord Cornwallis, Constable of the Tower, according to an antient Custom, when the Barons of the Exchequer are out of Town: Sir Thomas Bloodworth was the last Lord-Mayor that had been sworn on Tower-Hill, which was in the Year of the great Plague, 1665, in King Charles II's Time, when the Courts of Law were held at Oxford, and none of the Judges were in Town.

Sworn in on Tower-Hill.

The Election of an Alderman for Broad-Street Ward having been declared void, the Numbers for Charles Ewer, Esq; and Mr. Eggleston being equal on the Clofe of the Scrutiny, which had been demanded by the former on the twenty-first of March last, the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor held a Wardmote at Drapers-Hall for a new Election; when Charles Ewer, Esq; was put in Nomination, and, no Poll being demanded, he was declared duly elected. But the next Day a Petition was presented by Mr. Eggleston to the Court of Aldermen, setting forth his Right to the said Election; the Consideration of which was deferred: And the Day following a Rule was made in the Court of King's-Bench, to shew Cause why a Mandamus should not be granted to swear in Mr. Eggleston Alderman of Broad-Street Ward.

Scrutiny demanded for Alderman of Broad-street
Ward.

On April the twenty-eighth, at a Court of Aldermen at Guildhall (Sir John Barnard being in the Chair, in the Room of the Lord-Mayor, who was indisposed) the Affair of the Election of an Alderman for Broad-Street Ward was again brought on, and, after some Time spent in debating, both Parties agreed, that the Return to the Mandamus brought by each Party should be, that they were not duly elected; so that the Determination of the Election must be tried in the Court of King's-Bench. At the same Time Alderman Willmot desired Leave to resign his Gown.

The Election declared void.

On Tuesday the twelfth of May, the Poll ended at Guildhall for Members of Parliament for the City of London, when the Vintners-Hall Lift carried it by a great Majority, the Numbers standing thus, viz.

For the Right Honourable Daniel Lambert, Esq;
Lord-Mayor	3217
Sir John Barnard (who was in both Lifts)	3769
Sir Robert Godscall	3143
Alderman Heatcote	3322
Admiral Vernon	1175
Sir Edward Bellamy	1315
Alderman Perry	1710

Whereupon the Sheriffs, the next Day, declared the first four Gentlemen duly elected. On which Occasion the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor,

Sir

Sir Robert Godschall, and Alderman Heathcote, (Sir John Barnard being absent) severally addressed themselves to the Liverymen, thanked them for the great Honour conferred upon them, assured them of their Resolutions to oppose all pernicious Schemes to the utmost of their Power, to make the Interest of their Country the Standard of their Actions, and to have a particular Regard to the Promotion of Trade and Commerce, in which they and their Fellow-Citizens were so largely concerned: After which the following Paper of Instructions was delivered to them, viz.

To the Right Honourable Daniel Lambert, Esq; Lord-Mayor, Sir John Barnard, Knt. Sir Robert Godschall, Knt. and George Heathcote, Esq; Aldermen.

Instructions
to the City
Representatives.

"We, the Citizens of London, who have cheerfully elected you to serve us in Parliament, and thereby committed your Trust to the Safety, Liberty, Property, and Privileges of ourselves and Posterities, think it our Duty, as it is our undoubted Right, to acquaint you with what we desire and expect from you, in Discharge of the great Confidence we repose in you, and what we take to be your Duty, as our Representatives.

"1. As standing Armies have ever been esteemed burdensome to the Subject, and dangerous to Liberty; and as the most sacred and valuable Privileges of Englishmen have lately suffered the most outrageous Insult and Violence at a neighbouring Election; where, after the most unwarrantable and illegal Return of two Representatives for the ensuing Parliament, the Military Force was employed to protect and support the returning Officer, to the manifest Violation of Justice, and in open Defiance of a Law, which expressly commands, That no Man by Force of Arms, shall disturb the Freedom of Elections; we most earnestly recommend, that, by a constant and vigorous Opposition to all standing Armies in Times of Peace, you would preserve this Nation from a Calamity which has already been fatal to the Liberties of every Kingdom round us, and which we at this Day are beginning to feel.

"2. When we call to Remembrance the iniquitous Project of extending the Laws of Exchequer, over the greatest Part of the Traders of this Kingdom, we require and insist that you would strenuously oppose any such Attempts for the future; and also promote the entire Repeal, or, at least, Mitigation, of those Laws, in Behalf of Numbers who are already subjected to their Severity.

"3. When we reflect on the Danger of entrusting Power too long in the same Hands; when we consider how often, in former Times, the Liberty of this Country has been sacrificed and sold, by long-continued Parliaments; and that a frequent Recourse to their Constituents, the People, is a certain and necessary Check to bad Measures, and worse Intentions; we require you to prosecute, in the most vigorous Manner, a Repeal of the Septennial Act, and to restore the salutary Form of Triennial Parliaments, as the principal Means "of securing the Rights and supporting the Dignity of a free Nation.

"4. But as nothing can effectually secure the Freedom of our happy Constitution, except an uncorrupt and independent Representative of the People, we insist on your utmost Endeavours to procure a proper Bill for reducing and limiting the Number of Placemen in the House of Commons, especially as so many Gentlemen in a Situation of manifest Dependence were known to have Seats in the last Parliament.

"5. As at this Juncture we are engaged in a just and necessary War, and consequently large Supplies will be requisite for the publick Service, we make no Doubt but you will cheerfully and effectually enable his Most Gracious Majesty to vindicate the Wrongs of your Country, and chastise an insolent Enemy; but at the same Time, we desire that, in granting all such Aids and Supplies, you will constantly observe the antient Practice of Parliaments, nor deviate from the genuine Form of the Constitution; that you will make a strict Examination into every Account of the national Expence; and that you will firmly withhold your Approbation of any Convention, or Treaty of Peace, which shall not put his Majesty in Possession of some Country or Place of sufficient Strength and Importance to restrain his Enemies from all future Insults, and continue to latest Posterity a Monument of his victorious Arms.

"And lastly, As to what more particularly concerns ourselves, we do expect from and require you, that you do persist, with unwearied Diligence, until you shall prevail, that such Bills pass into Laws as shall restrain the exorbitant Powers that are pretended to reside in the Court of Aldermen of this City, to the manifest Diminution, if not to the total Destruction of those Privileges and Rights which were formerly inherent in the Citizens of London; particularly that you endeavour to get a Repeal or Explanation of that Law which has been interpreted to extend, even to the Formation of every Question that can be proposed in the Common Council of this City, by which the Citizens of London may be, and, as we apprehend, will be prevented from applying to the King or Legislature, in their corporate Capacity, how much soever their Case may require the Royal Protection or Parliamentary Cognizance.

The Electors for the City of Westminster greatly and justly resenting the illegal marching of a Body of Soldiers near to the Place of Polling, at their late Election of Parliament-Men, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, on the seventeenth of June, delivered the following Presentment to the Court of Kings-Bench at Westminster:

"Middlesex. We, the Grand Jury of and for the Body of the County of Middlesex, do apprehend, that among the many Enormities and Offences committed against the Publick, none deserves our Observation and Censure more than those which tend to the Subversion of the antient Rights of the People to a free Election

"of

"of their Representatives in Parliament; in whom they repose their undoubted Share in the Government, as well as constitute them Guardians of their Liberties and Properties. For we cannot but apprehend, that whenever the People shall lose their Right of Election, or, which is the same Thing, the Freedom of Election, and be obliged to chuse their Representatives under the Awe, Dread, or Influence of any other Power, there must be an End of Parliaments, or at least the People's Interest and Share therein.

"Wherefore, being sworn to enquire for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of this County, we upon our Oaths present, that on Friday the eighth Day of May last, while the Election for Members of Parliament for the City and Liberty of Westminster was depending, and before the Declaration thereof was made, a Body of Foot-Guards or Soldiers, to the Number of fifty and upwards, headed by Officers, did, in the Afternoon, in a military Manner, march up near the Place of Polling; which Practice may be of the most dangerous Consequence to the Liberties of the People, as contrary to Law, and a Restraint on the Freedom of Elections:

"We therefore, being affected and alarmed with a due Sense and Dread of so daring a Violence and Insult on our Freedom and Liberties, and the dangerous Consequence of Military Power exercised in Civil Affairs, do recommend it to this honourable Court, to give such Order and Direction for preventing and discouraging the like heinous Offence for the future, as they shall judge most proper and convenient."

And at the same Time they presented the increasing Nuisance of common Beggars.

*Middlesex

"Middle. We, the Grand Jury of the County of Middlesex, sworn to enquire for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of this County, have, with Concern, observed of late unusual Swarms of sturdy and clamorous Beggars, as well as many frightful Objects, exposed in the Streets, which is an Evil in itself very grievous, and productive of many others; and, notwithstanding a very strong Presentment to the same Effect was made by a former Grand Jury in the Year 1728, to this honourable Court, yet we find the Evil rather encreasing upon us than in the least remedied; and, as we have effectual Laws in Being, to prevent begging in the Streets, we cannot but apprehend that this Nuisance, at once so burdensome and disgraceful, must be entirely owing to a Neglect of the proper Officers, in not putting those Laws in Execution:

"Therefore, we hope this honourable Court will take so manifest and great a Grievance into their serious Consideration, and will apply, without Delay, the proper Remedies, that we may not be thus troubled with the Poor, at the same Time that we are every Day more and more loaded with Taxes to provide for them; that his Majesty's Subjects may have the Passage of the Streets, as in former

"happy Times, free and undisturbed; and be able to transact that little Business, which the Decay of Trade has reduced us to, without Molestation."

It having been found, upon the great Increase of the Inhabitants of this City, that it was necessary for the better Government thereof, and the more easy bringing Delinquents to Justice, to increase the Number of Justices of Peace, his Majesty granted the following Charter:

"George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so-forth. To all to whom these Presents shall come Greeting: Whereas our Royal Predecessor, King Charles the First, late King of England, by his Letters Patent under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date at Westminster, the eighteenth Day of October, in the fourteenth Year of his Reign, did give and grant unto the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, and their Successors, amongst other Things, that the then Mayor and Recorder of the said City, and the Mayor and Recorder of the said City for the Time being; and as well those Aldermen who before that Time had sustained and borne, as those Aldermen who thereafter should have sustained and borne, the Charge and Office of Mayoralty of the said City, although they should cease from the Mayoralty or should be dismissed there-from, so long as they should remain Aldermen there; and the three senior Aldermen of the said City, for the Time being, who should have been longest in the Office of Aldermanship, and had not before sustained and borne the Charge and Office of Mayoralty of that City for ever, should be all and every of them a Justice and Justices, to preserve and keep the Peace of the said King, his Heirs and Successors, within the said City of London and Liberties of the same, and appointed the said Lord-Mayor and Recorder, for the Time being, to be of the Quorum. And whereas our Royal Predecessors, King William and Queen Mary, by certain other Letters Patent, under their Great Seal of England, bearing Date, at Westminster, the eight-and-twentieth Day of July, in the fourth Year of their Reign, reciting the said former Letters Patent of King Charles the First; and reciting also, that the said Mayor and Aldermen, by their humble Petition, had represented to their Majesties, that the Number of Justices of the Peace constituted within the said City, by the said Letters Patent of King Charles the First, were so few, that, by reason thereof, it frequently happened that Justice could not be administered within the said City with so much Expedition, so commodiously, and in such a Manner as might be most expedient for their said late Majesties Service, and the Utility of their Subjects; their said late Majesties, therefore, by their said recited Letters Patent, did grant to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, and their Successors, that six other Aldermen of the said City for the Time being, who then were, or for the future should be next in the Office of Aldermanship

"manship to the three senior Aldermen mentioned and constituted Justices of the Peace in the said first-mentioned Charter, and who then had borne, and thereafter should have borne the Office of Sheriff of the said City, besides and beyond the three senior Aldermen, as aforesaid, should for ever, thereafter, be Justices of the Peace, within the said City of London and Liberties thereof; and these six Aldermen, with the Mayor and Recorder, for the Time being, as well as those Aldermen who had borne the Office of Mayoralty, and the aforesaid three senior Aldermen, or any four of them, whereof the said Mayor or Recorder for the Time being to be one, are, by the said last-recited Letters Patents constituted Justices of the Peace for the said City and Liberties, with the same Powers as are granted to the Justices of the Peace of any County of this Kingdom, as by the said several recited Letters Patent, (amongst divers other Matters and Things therein contained, Relation being thereto respectively had) may more fully and at large appear: And whereas the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the said City of London have, by their Petition, humbly represented unto Us, that, since the granting the said last-mentioned Letters Patent, the Duties of the Justices of the Peace, within the said City and Liberties, are, by many Acts of Parliament, very much increased, so that the Petitioners, who are constituted Justices by the said Charter, have, for the more speedy and effectual Execution of Justice, agreed amongst themselves, to sit daily by Turns, in the Guildhall of the said City, for the publick Administration of Justice; and that the Petitioners most humbly conceive it will be for the publick Utility of all our Subjects, within the said City and Liberties, and that Justice may still be more commodiously and expeditiously administered, if the present Number of Justices of the Peace, within the said City of London and Liberties thereof, was increased: And the Petitioners further represent, that the Lord-Mayor and Recorder being the only Justices of the Quorum, if by Sickness, or other unavoidable Accident, it should happen that neither may be able to attend the Session, great Inconveniencies may arise; the Petitioners, therefore, have humbly besought Us to grant to our good Subjects, the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City, that, for the future, the Mayor, Recorder, and all the Aldermen of the said City, for the Time being, may be Justices of the Peace for the said City of London and Liberties thereof; and that all those Aldermen for the Time being, who shall have borne and sustained the Office of Mayoralty of the said City, may be of the Quorum, as well as the Mayor and Recorder: We, being willing to gratify the Petitioners in their Request: Know ye therefore, that We, of our special Grace, certain Knowledge and meer Motion, have given, granted, and by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, do give, and grant, to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, and their Successors, that the Mayor, Recorder, and all the Aldermen of the said

"City of London, for the Time being, and every of them, be for ever hereafter a Justice and Justices of the Peace, of Us, our Heirs and Successors, within the said City of London and Liberties thereof: And we do, by these Presents, for Us, our Heirs and Successors, constitute, make, and ordain the Mayor, Recorder, and all the Aldermen of the said City of London, for the Time being, and every of them, or any four of them, (of whom the Mayor and Recorder, or any one of the Aldermen who have sustained the Office of Mayoralty, for the Time being, We will shall be always one) Justices of Us, our Heirs and Successors, within the said City of London and Liberties thereof, to keep, and cause to be kept all and singular Statutes and Ordinances, in all their Articles made, and to be made, for the Preservation of the Peace of Us, our Heirs and Successors, and for the peaceable ruling and governing the People of Us, our Heirs and Successors, as well within the said City as the Liberties thereof, according to the Form and Effect of the same; and to correct and punish, in the Manner prescribed by those Statutes and Ordinances, all such Persons who shall be found offending, within the said City and Liberties thereof, against the Form and Effect of the same Statutes and Ordinances, or any, or either of them; and to demand such sufficient Security for the Peace, or good Behaviour towards Us, our Heirs and Successors, and all the Subjects of Us, our Heirs and Successors, of all such Persons who shall send Threatnings to any Subject, or Subjects, of Us, our Heirs or Successors, concerning their Bodies, or the Burning their Houses; and if they shall refuse to find such Security, then to cause them to be safely kept in our Goal of Newgate, or in any other Prison of Us, our Heirs and Successors, in our said City of London, until they shall have found such Security; and to do and perform all and singular other Matters and Things, which any Justices or Keepers of the Peace, of Us, our Heirs and Successors, within any County of that Part of our Kingdom of Great-Britain, called England, may, can, or ought to do, and perform, by Virtue of any Statutes and Ordinances of this Part of our Kingdom of Great-Britain, called England, or by Virtue of any Commission of Us, our Heirs and Successors to preserve the Peace in any such County. In Witness whereof We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent.

About eleven in the Morning on the eighth of September, the Wind due South, there was a prodigious Hurricane, which did considerable Damage on the River Thames, and many Trees were torn up by the Roots, &c. It extended almost over the whole Island. To this we shall add an Extract of a private Letter from St. Ives in Huntingdonshire, sent by a Gentleman who was on the Road thither the Day that this Hurricane happened: "As we were going between Mayor, Recorder and all the Aldermen made Justices of the Peace.

A great Storm of Wind.

"Stevenage

"Stevenage and Baldock, the Wind rose very suddenly, and blew very hard for a few Minutes: But we saw no Effects of the Tempest till we came to Biggleswade, where it threw down several Houses, Malt-houses, Barns and Trees. At Huntingdon we heard that several Windmills were overthrown, and in one of them the Miller was killed. But I never saw such Desolation in my Life, as there is here at St. Ives: Abundance of Houses are stripped, some thrown down, and the fine Spire of the Steeple fell, and demolished great Part of the Roof of the Church. The Sheets of Lead were rolled up, and carried with such Force, as to beat down Part of a House at a considerable Distance. But what is most remarkable, a little Boy, who ran into the Church-Porch, and staid till it was almost full of Stones, endeavouring to get out at a Window in the Side of it, was taken up by the Wind and carried a great Way, by which Means his Life was preserved. The Steeple of a Church about a Mile from hence was also thrown down. At Biggleswade, they told us the Storm lasted not above twenty Minutes."

His Majesty being returned from his German Dominions, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen (on the twenty-second of October) waited on his Majesty, to congratulate him on his safe Return; when Sir John Strange, the Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"Your Majesty's safe Return to Great-Britain being a Matter of universal Joy to every Part of it, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of your capital City have humbly desired this Opportunity of laying themselves at your Majesty's Feet, with their sincere and most dutiful Congratulations upon so happy an Event; the bare Possibility of Danger to such a Prince, must naturally suggest many anxious Thoughts to our Minds; the Day, therefore, which restored your Majesty to this Nation, in Health and Security, must ever be remembered with Thankfulness and Joy.

"The Sword is now drawn in so many Parts of Europe and America, that we are sensible your Majesty's Labours must be exceeding great, in attending to all the different Occurrences occasioned thereby. It is from this unwearied Application, and from the Readiness of your faithful Subjects to assist your Majesty in asserting the Rights of Great-Britain, that we promise ourselves a happy Issue of the present Troubles, and the Establishment of our Trade and Commerce upon a solid and lasting Foundation.

"Permit us, Sir, upon this our first Opportunity, to return your Majesty our humble Thanks for the Charter we have lately received, whereby the Number of Justices of the Peace in the City of London is increased; this, as it was asked and granted with a View only to the Furtherance of Justice, we beg Leave to assure your Majesty shall accordingly be applied.

"May God long preserve your Majesty, and accomplish all your Designs for the Good of your People."

To which his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for this Mark of your Duty and Affection. You may be assured of my constant and firm Resolution to assert and maintain, in the most effectual Manner, the Rights of Great-Britain; and to carry on, with Vigour, those just and necessary Measures, which have been so unanimously supported, till the Trade and Commerce of these Kingdoms shall be established upon a firm and lasting Foundation."

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

The great Cause between Charles Ewer, Esq; and Charles Eggleston, Esq; was determined on the fifth of November, before the Lord Chief Justice Lee, in the Court of King's-Bench, in Favour of the former; and he was accordingly sworn in Alderman of Broad-Street Ward, at a Court of Aldermen, on the seventeenth.

The City and Places adjacent were at this Time visited by an epidemic Fever, which carried off great Numbers for several Months together, perhaps occasioned by the uncommon hot Summer. Hence the immediate Cause of this Fever was said to be a Coagulation of the Blood, or a Stagnation thereof in the Capillary Arteries. In the Cure of it the Physicians were very cautious in prescribing Blisters and Opiates; and only ordered Bleeding at the Beginning: The most successful Remedy was thirty Grains of the Powder of the American Snake-Rattle-Snake-Root, given to the Patient in warm Milk every six Hours, till the Symptoms were greatly abated. In the Interim the Patient was directed to drink Tea made of Sage and Thyme, of each equal Parts, and always given warm.

This Distemper spread over the whole Nation, and was felt also in Ireland; and a judicious Author, besides the Cause assigned above, writes, "The present Fever, at its first Appearance, seldom fixed itself on any but the poor People, and especially on such as lived in large Towns, Work-Houses, or Prisons: Country People and Farmers seemed for the most Part exempt from it; tho' we observed it frequently in Villages near Market-Towns, but then they were such as are supplied with Bread by the Bakers of those Towns.

"In order to inquire into the Cause of this destructive Fever, it may not be improper to consider, first, that epidemic Diseases seem to owe their Rise, either to the Air, infectious Matter transmitted from the Body of one Person to another, or to the Unwholesomeness of Aliment.

"That this epidemic Disease does not proceed from any Intemperate or Effluvia in the Air, appears, first, from its having been confined to the ordinary People; and, secondly, from the Farmers and others who live in the Country having been exempt from it. The epidemic Fevers in the Years 1727, 28, and 29, generally attributed to an ill Constitution, Account thereof by Mr. John Alcock.

"tution of the Air, were first observed to begin
"among the Country People, and to be some "Time advancing to large Towns, which, per"haps, were screened, or longer defended from "Infection, by the numerous Exhalations from "Fires, Manufactures, &c.

"From several Circumstances, it seems im"probable that it should arise from the Com"munication of infectious Matter, from the "Body of one Person to another; and, there"fore, we are led to suspect it must arise from "the Unwholesomeness of the Diet, that the "People afflicted with it have lived upon.

"In the late Scarcity and Dearness of Provi"sions, 'tis very well known (especially in these "Parts of the Kingdom) that the Millers and "Bakers bought, and consumed vast Quantities "of Horse-Beans, Pease, coarse unsound Barley,
"&c. This Mixture, or even Horse-Bean
"Flour alone, made a large Part of the Com"position of the ordinary Bread, which at that "Time was almost the only Food of poor "People. This Method of adulterating Bread,
"if I may so call it, has been continued ever "since, in the finer as well as coarser Sorts;
"and hence, perhaps, one may assign some Rea"son for the Instances we have of late seen,
"of this Fever among People who eat the bet"ter Sorts of Bread.

"At one Time of the last Summer, the "Produce of the Gardens, particularly Cab"bage, was very foul, and more remarkably "infested with a Worm or Insect, than has "been observed for several Years past: But as "this Fever was subsisting before, and has con"tinued since, we therefore cannot attribute the "Cause to that, by Reason People who did eat
"little or none of it, have yet been invaded
"by it.

"A few Years ago there was a great Morta"lity among the Horses, which was supposed to "be occasioned by a peculiar Worm or Insect "that the Horse-Bean was that Season very re"markably infested with.

"Beans are constantly observed to be very "heating and unwholesome to Horses, if given
"in considerable Quantities, and to produce the "Farcy, &c. unless the Horses are very much "exercised, or worked hard. 'Tis true, we "cannot always determine the Effects Things "will have on the human Body, from what "we observe them to have on Brute Animals:
"But yet, I think, an Instance like the forego"ing, might induce us to examine whether "Horse-Bean Flour be not very unwholesome to "make so large a Part of human Food.

"The terrible Nature of the present Fever,
"it must be confessed, evades every Method of "Treatment that the Physicians in these Parts
"could contrive: The Medicines to which the "usual inflammatory, intermittent, or nervous
"Fever yield, here seldom effect much.

"Were I at Leisure to lay before the Pub"lick an History of the numerous Cases that "have fallen under my own Observation, I do "not at all question but this untractable Fever
"would evidently appear to be owing to the "Cause I have above hinted at; and if what I "have said should have any Weight in it, I "hope the Health and Lives of our Fellow-"Creatures, will excite the Gentlemen of the "Faculty of Physick, and other able and wor"thy Men, to solicit the legislative Power to "prohibit the Use of these pernicious Substances

"in the making of Bread; it being greatly to "be feared, the Lives of many Thousands of "his Majesty's Subjects have hereby been de"stroyed."

The City of Westminster having chosen the ho"nourable Lord Viscount Perceval and Charles of the two worthy Representatives were publicly returned, as follows:

"Gentlemen,

"We could have no Excuse, after the "great Honour we have received from
"you, by your disinterested and unanimous
"Choice of us, to be the Guardians of your "Liberties in Parliament at this critical Con-

"tunity to express our Gratitude: We there"fore now return our humble Thanks; but "must leave it to Time to prove, by our pub"lick Conduct, how deeply and sincerely we "are affected by this Obligation. In the mean "while, you may rest assured, that there shall "be nothing wanting in our Power, to shew
"ourselves deserving of that Confidence you "have reposed in us: And that we value and "esteem the Favour you have conferred upon "us, beyond the greatest of those Temptations
"which have corrupted, diverted, and deluded
"so great a Number from the Duty of that im"portant Station, in which we have been so ge"nerously placed by you.

"Gentlemen, we are with great Truth,

"Your most faithful, obliged,

"the

"the more immediate Sense and Disposition of his People in general.

"And though your Regard for the Publick, and known Zeal for the present Royal Family, (under whom alone this Nation can be free and happy) leave us no Room to doubt but that you will diligently attend your Duty in Parliament; yet we crave Leave most earnestly to recommend it to you, especially at this Time, when the Posture of Affairs makes your Counsel and Assistance so necessary.

"We cannot but lament that the War with Spain (a War in itself just and necessary, entered into by the repeated Advice of both Houses of Parliament) should have been carried on, during the whole Course of it, with so little Vigour and Success: We therefore seriously recommend it to you to examine the Conduct of it, and to make strict Inquiry into the Cause, why, after such Profusion of publick Treasure, the Kingdom has received so little Reparation for the Injuries and Insults it has so long sustained.

"As we are truly sensible of the Benefit we have received from the Justice of Parliament, in having the great Privilege restored to us, of being represented by Members of our own choosing, so we cannot but earnestly entreat you to be assiduous in doing the same Justice to all other Petitioners, who may have been deprived of their most valuable Birthright, by the Iniquity of their Returning Officers, and zealously to promote such Bills as may be thought necessary for securing the Rights of Electors, and the Independency of the Elected, and in particular for the restoring Triennial Parliaments.

"The Experience of former Times evinces, how dangerous it is to the Constitution to have the Parliament filled with Numbers of Placemen, who may be too often at the arbitrary Beck of any Minister; and it is from the Freedom of our Representatives that we can alone hope to be extricated from the Labyrinth of Misfortunes, in which we apprehend we are at present involved.

"We earnestly recommend to you to oppose the keeping up of standing Armies in Time of Peace, as being burdensome to the Subject, and dangerous to our Liberties, the ill Effects of which we have so lately felt.

"We also recommend to you to oppose any Attempt that shall at any Time be made for extending the Laws of Excise, and to support any Bill or Bills that may be brought in for the more effectual preventing the Exportation of Wool to any foreign Country."

A great Change in the Ministry happening about this Time, by the Removal of Sir Robert Walpole, the City of London, in Common Council assembled, made the following Representation to their Representatives in Parliament, on the tenth of February:

"The Representation of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commoners of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, to the Right Honourable Sir Robert Godschall, Knt. Lord-Mayor,

"Sir John Barnard, Knt. Mr. Alderman Lambert, and Mr. Alderman Heathcote, their Representatives in Parliament.

"This Court doth take this publick Occasion to acknowledge their grateful Sense of your vigilant and faithful Conduct in Parliament, which hath already contributed to the Production of many good Effects.

"As they have now Reason to hope for a Change of Measures as well as of Men, they desire you will strenuously promote all those salutary Laws, as are or shall be proposed in the House of Commons, such as the Place-Bill, a Pension-Bill, and the Repeal of the Septennial Act, in order to restore the ancient Freedom of our Constitution, and secure it against all future Attempts, either of open or secret Corruption, or of any undue Influence whatsoever.

"And more particularly they recommend, that you will persist, with unwearied Diligence, to make the earliest and strictest Inquiry into the Causes of all past Mismanagements, and exert your utmost Endeavours to prevent the like for the future.

"And they further expect, that you will extend such Inquiry to all Persons, who, in their respective Employments, have contributed to the complicated Evils, which have so long oppressed and dishonoured this Nation.

"And they congratulate themselves and the whole Kingdom, that, from the Virtue and Spirit of the present Parliament, every odious Name of Distinction will soon be lost among us, and that from this happy Period they may date the intire Abolition of Parties, of which the most pernicious Use has hitherto been made, to the imminent Danger of our Liberties.

"For now they may reasonably expect, that those who wish the real and solid Support of his Majesty and his Royal Family, and are qualified by their Virtues and Abilities, may have it in their Power to serve both their King and Country; and that no Distinction will remain, but of those who are Friends or Enemies to the Constitution, of those who would maintain the Freedom and Independency of Parliament, and of those who would subject it to corrupt and ministerial Influence."

In which they were followed by the City and Liberty of Westminster, who also made the following Representation to their Representatives in the great Council of the Nation, on the seventeenth of the same Month:

"The Representation of the City and Liberty of Westminster, to the Right Honourable the Lord Viscount Perceval, and Charles Edwin, Esq;

"We, the Burgesses and Inhabitants of the City and Liberty of Westminster, cannot avoid taking the first Opportunity of paying our most grateful Acknowledgments for your faithful Behaviour during this short, but important Period of Parliament; and tho' we have no Reason to doubt your steady Perseverance, yet we cannot think it altogether improper

Instructions to the Representatives of the City of London.

By the City of Westminster.

"proper to acquaint you with our Sentiments on the present Crisis of Affairs;—a Crisis which we apprehend must determine the Fate of us and our Posterity, and render this Kingdom, either a Glory or Scoff among the Nations.

"We have beheld, with the deepest Concern, such Measures pursued for many Years past, as have manifestly tended to disgrace the Name, betray the Interests, ruin the Trade, weaken the Liberties, and depress the Courage of the British Nation. It is now with the most sensible Pleasure we behold the agreeable Prospect of being delivered from the fatal Effects of such Measures, by the Virtue of a truly British Parliament, and the Removal of those Persons who, supported by the Influence of Corruption (that Canker of our Constitution) have too long wanted in the Abuse of Power, and mocked the Calamities of an almost despairing People.

"But as the melancholy Experience of past Times evinces, that the Removal of the Person of a Minister from the Helm, is insufficient for securing the Interests and Liberties of a People, while his Creatures, his Maxims, and his Views, are entailed upon the Government; we therefore hope you will most strenuously oppose them, and endeavour to procure us such a constitutional Security, as may prevent this Kingdom from suffering by the like Errors or Iniquities for the future.

"As the strictest Enquiry only can satisfy, so nothing but the most rigorous Justice ought to avenge an injured People; it is therefore we earnestly intreat you to make a diligent Scrutiny into the Authors of those Grievances we have so long groaned under, and not suffer Impunity to be the Lot of the Oppressor:—Justice is a Duty you owe to Posterity, as Examples are most likely to prevent future Evils:—Should the Disturber of the Publick be permitted the Enjoyment of private Tranquillity, or his Influence remain in those Councils from which his Person is removed, we conceive that such an Event at this Juncture must give a fatal Encouragement, or rather Sanction, to a wanton and wicked Exercise of Power in all succeeding Ministers:—Lenity to such a one would be Cruelty to the Nation; and the calling to a severe Account the Instruments of pernicious Measures, however unavailing to procure us Reparation for what is past, may have the happy Effect of henceforth preventing the like Violations of the Constitution, the like Profusion of publick Treasure at home, and the like Prostitution of the publick Faith and Honour abroad.

"We zealously recommend to your Endeavours the extirpating those Party Distinctions, which, tho' their Foundation have long ceased to exist, were yet so industriously fomented among us, in order to serve the mischievous Purposes of a ministerial Tyranny, and in Opposition to the real and permanent Interests of the present Royal Family. The common Interest, it is hoped, has now united all Parties and Persuasions, and every Man will be regarded only as he prefers the Welfare and

"Liberties of his Country to any private Dependence or venal Consideration whatever."

On the twentieth of January, 1742, the Merchants and Traders of the City of London, apprehending themselves and the whole trading Part of the Nation aggrieved by the bad Conduct of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, presented a Petition to both Houses of Parliament; in which they set forth, "That the Petitioners, with the utmost Concern, have found themselves under the Necessity of representing to the House, that the Navigation and Commerce of these Kingdoms have been continually exposed to the growing Insolence of the Spanish Privateers, from the Commencement of this just and necessary War; that during its whole Progress and Continuance, notwithstanding the repeated Applications of the suffering Merchants for Protection and Redress, their Losses and Misfortunes have considerably increased of late, to the impoverishing of many of his Majesty's Subjects, the great Detriment of Trade in general, the Diminution of his Majesty's Revenue, and the Dishonour of the Nation; that upwards of three hundred Ships and Vessels have been taken, (the greatest Part of them in or near the British Channel and Soundings) and carried into St. Sebastian, and other adjacent Ports; by which Numbers of his Majesty's most useful Subjects have been reduced to Want and Imprisonment, or, compelled by inhuman Treatment, and despairing of a Cartel for the Exchange of Prisoners, have insisted in the Service of Spain; that the Petitioners apprehend, that most of these Misfortunes might have been prevented, considering the Weakness of our Enemy at Sea, had a few of his Majesty's Ships of War been properly stationed, and the Commanders kept strictly to their Duty; a Neglect, which appears the more surprising, as there was a Precedent of an Act of Parliament in 1707, expressly made for those Purposes, intitled, An Act for the better securing the Trade of this Kingdom, by Cruizers and Convoys; that by Means of this Neglect, and the many valuable Prizes the Spaniards have made, they have been encouraged and enabled to fit out such Numbers of Privateers from St. Sebastian and Bilbao, exclusive of other Ports, as to render the Navigation to and from these Kingdoms every Day more and more dangerous; and that the present great and unexpected Power of the Enemy in the Mediterranean, gives the Petitioners Reason to apprehend, that their Trade is become extremely precarious in those Parts; that there have been various Neglects and Delays in the Appointment and sending out of Convoys; and that out of those few, which have been granted, some of the Commanders have paid so little Regard to the Ships under their Care, that they have deserted them at Sea, and left them as a Prey to the Enemy: And praying Leave further to represent, that the Navigation to and from several of his Majesty's Colonies has often been exposed to the Enemy; and that many Ships have been taken in the American Seas by their Privateers, principally

Petition of the Merchants, &c. against the Admiralty.

"owing, as the Petitioners presume, to a Want "of a sufficient Number of Ships, or of proper "Care in some of his Majesty's Commanders,
 "stationed in those Parts; that many Ships have "been brought into Danger, by the arbitrary "impressing of their ablest Hands out of the "homeward-bound Ships, before they had made
 "the Land, or arrived to a Place of Safety, and "out of the outward-bound Ships in the Pro"secution of their Voyages: And praying Leave "to assure the House, that they do not com"plain of such Captures as are the unavoidable
 "Consequence of a War, but of such only as "have been occasioned by a Want of due Care "for the Protection of Trade, which has, du"ring the whole War, laboured under an ap"parent Neglect and Disregard; nor shall they "ever be induced, either by their past Misfor"tunes, or future Apprehensions, so far to "forget their Duty to his Majesty and the "Legislature, as once to repine or murmur at "the present War with Spain, which his Ma"jesty and these Kingdoms are so necessarily "engaged in; and upon the vigorous Prosecu"tion of which the Interest of the British Trade
 "and the Freedom of Navigation so evidently "depend: And praying the House to take the "Premises into their Consideration, that such "Provision may be made for the future Protec"tion of the Trade and Navigation of these "Kingdoms, as the House shall think fit; and "that the Petitioners may be heard by them"selves or Counsel thereupon"

Mr.
Glover's Speech and Arguments to enforce
the same.

This Petition was presented by Mr. Glover, who, in opening the Subject-Matter of the Petition, set forth, That the Merchants finding themselves neglected by those, from whom they had Reason to hope for Countenance and Redress, and deprived of that Care and Protection, which is due from the Publick and its Officers to every Individual, more especially in Times of War and Danger, were under a Necessity of appealing to Parliament for Relief.

He then proceeded to explain the Nature and Order of the Evidence he had to produce, in Support of the several Facts alledged in the Petition.

After the Examination of the Witnesses, and reading several Papers and Letters, he summed up the whole Evidence.

He made his Acknowledgments to the Committee for their Indulgence and Attention, repeated his first Proposition, that the Merchants had been deprived of all Care and Protection, which he attributed to one uniform and continued Design.

Upon the Head of Captures, he proved, that the Neglect of Trade in the present War, far surpassed the same Misconduct which was the Subject of Complaint in the last.

He then expatiated on the Inhumanity of suffering many Thousands of British Sailors to lie exposed to Want and Misery in the Dungeons of Spain, notwithstanding the Willingness of the Enemy to promote a regular Exchange of Prisoners; a Neglect on the Side of England so unprecedented, so repugnant to the Practice of Nations, as nothing could probably account for it, but an inflexible Resolution of bringing upon Trade every imaginable Difficulty from every Quarter; and this he imputed to an express Design of promoting, in every Shape, that known, that original and favourite Plan of making the Merchants uneasy with the War.

He then made several Observations on the Lists of Cruizers, and other Papers laid before the House by the Admiralty; wherein, among many other Particulars, he took Notice, that pressing Vessels, and all Sir John Norris's Squadron of first and second Rate Men of War, were set down, without Shame, as Cruizers against Privateers; and further shewed, that the strongest Evidence of Neglect was contained in those Papers.

Upon the Head of Convoys he shewed, that by detaining for twelve Months the Fleet bound to Portugal, for Want of Protections and Convoys, the Admiralty had given the French an Opportunity of introducing their Woollen Manufacture into the Portugal Market, and had greatly injured that most valuable Branch of the British Trade in many other Instances, notwithstanding the timely Notices and Warnings they had received from the Merchants residing both at Lisbon and London.

He then touched upon the flagrant Neglect of Trade in North America, and dwelt upon an inhuman Instance of arbitrary impressing in South Carolina, where a Man was murdered, the Law violated, the Civil Magistrate set at open Defiance, and the Murderers acquitted, by a Mock Trial in a Court Martial.

He then proceeded to set forth the Indifference, the Disregard, and Insolence, which the Admiralty had shewn the Merchants upon several most reasonable Applications, and explained the cruel and malignant Meaning of an Answer given to them, It is your own War, and you must take it for your Pains; which, he said, originally issued from a certain Quarter, where it was first determined, that Trade should be deprived of Protection, and every Hardship heaped upon the Merchant, 'till he should be brought to acknowledge his Error, and repent of the War.

He then concluded in the following Words: "To whom then could we appeal for Relief, but to you, the Redressors of Grievances, and Guardians of the Publick? Could we have Recourse to those, who had treated our Misfortunes with Indifference and Scorn, and who had openly declared themselves to be a Board of Execution only, and not of Order? Upon your Protection, the British Trade throws itself this Day; the Sailor, the Merchant, the Manufacturer are all soliciting your Justice, imploring your powerful Interposition to shield them from the Malice of their Enemies at home, and from the Artifice of their foreign Rivals, who are watching to take Advantage of our unredressed Misfortunes: Thousands of his Majesty's most useful Subjects, with equal Anxiety and Submission, are humbly and earnestly intreating, that you will not suffer them to sink utterly in Ruin, nor gratify the pernicious Views of those who envy them abroad, and of those who hate

"hate them at home; that you will take "their Cause into your Consideration, that you "will provide for their future Security by a "Law, that you will humble and punish their "Oppressors, that you will restore Discipline,
"infuse new Spirit and Vigour into the Admi"nistration of the Navy, and by your Wisdom "and Justice render the very Thought of in"juring the British Trade again a Terror to all "succeeding Times. But the Ways and Means "of accomplishing these great Ends are, with "all Humility, submitted to the Wisdom of this
"House."

City's Petition.

Petitions of the same Nature and Purport, and containing several other Grounds of Complaint, were presented from almost all our chief Cities and Sea-Ports; and on the twenty-sixth, the Sheriffs of London went up to Parliament, with the Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commoners of this City; which set forth, "That at a Time when a feeble Enemy "holds our Naval Power in Derision, and the "Conduct and Distribution of our Ships of "War are the subject of universal Censure, to "remain unconcerned and silent, would ill be"come the representative Body of this great "Metropolis, which so sensibly shares in every "publick Misfortune; that the Petitioners "therefore beg Leave humbly to represent to "the House, that it is with the utmost Grief they "have seen the Navigation and Commerce of "these Kingdoms so constantly interrupted, on our "own Coasts, and almost in Sight of our late "powerful Naval Armaments, by the Privateers
"of Spain, to the Ruin of our Trade, the "enriching of the Enemy, and the Disgrace of "the British Name; that the Losses hereby "sustained, the Manner in which Applications "for Redress have been often evaded, and other "numerous Instances of Negligence and Disre"gard of the commerical Interest of these "Kingdoms, (whilst a neighbouring Nation is "every Day converting these Errors to their "own Advantage) have given the Petitioners
"the most dreadful Apprehensions, lest our "Trade, the Foundation of our Wealth and "Power, and which has formerly enabled "us to maintain the Liberties of Europe,
"should be transferred into the Hands of our
"potent and dangerous Rival; that the Peti"tioners cannot but observe with Concern, that "those Ships of War, which they might reason"ably have expected would have been em"ployed in protecting our Trade, have not "contributed either thereto, or to the Interest
"or Honour of this Nation; and that the Peti"tioners have seen a powerful and well-provided
"Fleet remaining inactive in our own Ports, or "more ingloriously putting to Sea, without the "Appearance of any Enterprize in View, or "even the Possibility of meeting an Enemy wor"thy of its Attention, whilst our trading Ves"sels have been daily exposed in the British
"Channel and Soundings to the Privateers of a "Place so inconsiderable as St. Sebastian; and "that, notwithstanding these various Subjects of "Complaint, the Petitioners beg the House to "believe, that they do not hereby intend to "signify the least Desire of a Peace with Spain,
"until his Majesty shall, by a vigorous Prose"cution of the War, have obtained from the "Enemy an ample Acknowledgment of his "Peoples just Rights, and the Possession of such "a Pledge, as may effectually secure the Free"dom of Navigation to our latest Posterity;

"and therefore intreating the House to take the "calamitous State of Trade, occasioned by the "Grievances complained of, into their Consid"eration; and that the House would be pleased "to make such a Provision, for the future Secu"rity of the Navigation and Commerce of these
"Kingdoms, as they shall think fit."

These Petitions were severally referred to the Consideration of a Committee of the whole House.

In Pursuance of which, it was ordered, that the Lord-Mayor of London and Sir John Barnard should prepare and bring in a Bill for protecting and securing the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom in Times of War; after which it was ordered, that the first and second Resolutions of the House, (relating to the Number of Cruizers, and the Journals of their Commanders) should be humbly laid before his Majesty, by such Members of the House as were of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy-Council.

Bill ordered to be prepared.

On the second of March, the Merchants and Citizens made great Rejoicings, on Account of the gracious Reception their Petitions had met with in Parliament, and for the vigorous Resolutions taken for the better Protection of their Trade and Commerce for the future.

Great Rejoicings
thereupon.

The next Day the Center Arch of the New Bride at Westminster was finished.

Sir Robert Godscall, Lord-Mayor of this City, died of a violent Fever on the twenty-sixth of June; and was succeeded in the Chair by George Heathcote, Esq; who in the Year 1740 generously declined that Honour in Favour of Sir Robert Godscall, as you may read above; after he was chosen, he addressed himself to the Liverymen to the following Purpose: "That he was, with "them truly sensible of the great Loss the City
"sustained by the Death of his worthy Prede"cessor: That he lay under great Obligations "to his Fellow-Citizens, for their past as well as "present Favour, in conferring that high Honour
"upon him; and, in Discharge of that great "Trust, should endeavour to merit the Continu"ance of their Esteem, by acquitting himself "with Reputation, in preserving the Peace and "Welfare of this great Metropolis; whose "Rights and Liberties, with Extension of Trade "and Commerce, were always his Study, and "from which no Honours could ever alienate his "Heart."

Death of Sir Robert
Godscall,
Lord-
Mayor.

Election of George
Heath-
cote, Esq;

The same Day, viz. Monday, June the twenty-eighth, his Lordship was presented to the Lord-Chancellor, and afterwards sworn in at Guildhall:
And the next Day, his Lordship, in the City Barge, attended by that of the Salters Company, went to Westminster, and was sworn in before the Barons of the Exchequer.

We had the following Character in the Papers of Sir Robert Godscall, the late Lord-Mayor:
At all Times his Integrity remained unshaken, his Heart Proof against any Corruption, and his Abilities exceeded by nothing but his Integrity and Courage. His Conduct so endeared him to his

his Fellow-Citizens, that, in Regard to his great Qualifications, they elected him one of their Representatives in Parliament; and for a further Approbation of his Merit, and a Demonstration of their own Gratitude, they, by their united, by their often repeated Voices, conferred upon him the highest Honour they could give, the chief Magistracy of this City; which Trusts he discharged with the greatest Uprightness, and shewed his distinguishing Judgment, by preferring Honesty before Profit, by rightly discerning Truth from Falshood. In short, his true Characteristics were those of a most tender and affectionate Husband, a kind and generous Master, a sincere Friend, and a true Lover of his Country.

Foundation
of the Foundling-

Sir Robert was succeeded, as Member of Parliament, by William Calvert, Esq, Alderman of Portoken-Ward; who was chosen on the thirteenth of July, without Opposition.

The Foundation-Stone of the Hospital for the Maintenance and Education of exposed and deserted young Children, was laid in Lamb's Conduit-Fields, on the sixteenth of September, by John Milner, Esq; the Vice-President; wherein was placed, between two Plates of milled Lead, a Copper-plate, engraved with the following Inscription: The Foundation of this Hospital for the Relief of exposed and deserted young Children, was laid the sixteenth of September, 16 George II. 1742.

Poll for Sheriff.

This Year several Citizens having paid the Fine to be excused serving the Office of Sheriff, to which they were nominated by the Lord-Mayor, for the Approbation of the Common-Hall, and Stamp Brookbank having refused to serve that Office, as being a Dissenter, and Alexander Master having sworn off, Alderman Hankey was put in Nomination with Alderman Benn, and declared to have the Majority of Hands at the Common-Hall, on the twentieth of this Month: But, upon a Poll demanded in Favour of the latter, which ended on the twenty-seventh, the Votes stood thus:

For Alderman Benn 1925
Alderman Hankey 1371

Majority for Alderman Benn 554
And, the next Day, he and Charles Eggleton, Esq, were sworn in at Guildhall.

On the twenty-first of October, at a Court of Common Council, the following Instructions were drawn up and approved of, and ordered to be presented to the City Representatives in Parliament:

HEATHCOTE, MAYOR.

A Common Council holden in the Chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, on Thursday the twenty-first Day of October, and in the sixteenth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c.

The Representation of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, to the Right Hon. George Heathcote, Esq, Lord-Mayor, Sir John Barnard, Knight and Alderman, Mr. Ald. Lambert, and Mr. Ald. Calvert, their Representatives in Parlia- ment.

"In the present unhappy Conjecture, when the domestick Enemies of these Kingdoms are flattering themselves, that, by the late astonishing Example of unpunished Treachery and Corruption, the Nation must be driven to Despair, and abandon all Thoughts of any future Efforts for the Support and Security of the publick Liberty; We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, think it our indispensable Duty to declare, in this most solemn Manner, that as we were fully sensible how advantageously this Nation has hitherto been distinguished, by its Freedom, from the rest of Mankind, we will not, by Supineness, resign our Claim to so invaluable a Blessing; but that we will still persevere, with the same uniform and unshaken Resolution, against the Malice of our undisguised Enemies, and the Falshood of our pretended Friends, whose shameful Union and Confederacy against their Country, at the same Time that they serve to increase our Apprehensions, shall redouble our Attention and Zeal for the Defence and Preservation of all our Constitutional Rights: We therefore address ourselves to you, our worthy Representatives in Parliament, and, with the most grateful Acknowledgments of your former meritorious Conduct, take this Occasion of laying our Sentiments before you.

"We cannot but lament, that Means have been used to defeat our Hopes of a speedy and effectual Reformation; we had long seen the great Concerns of the Kingdom all perverted to the single Purpose of maintaining Power in one Hand: With this pernicious Design our Wealth has been exhausted, our Trade neglected, our Honour prostituted, and the Independency of Parliament invaded. At length, after a continued Struggle of twenty Years, when we had Reason to expect, that the happy Period of our Deliverance was at Hand, that each Offender would have received the Chastisement due to his Crimes, and such Regulations have been established, as would have secured us from the like Enormities in Time to come, how great was our Surprize, to find that some of those, who under a Mask of Integrity, and by dissembling a Zeal for their Country, had long acquired the largest Share of its Confidence, should, without the least Hesitation, or seeming Remorse, greedily embrace the first Occasion to disgrace all their former Conduct; and, in Defiance of the most solemn Protestations, openly conspire, with the known Enemies of the Publick, to defraud the Nation of that Justice and Security, which they themselves had so often and so peremptorily declared was indispensibly necessary to its Preservation and Support."

"Amidst these melancholy Considerations we have the Satisfaction to find, that the general Censure and Indignation have so immediately pursued these Betrayers of their Trust, that few have been misled by their Pretences; and that they succeeded in the publick Hatred (those they have screened) though they have not, as yet, succeeded to their Power. And we may reasonably expect a more fortunate Issue in the approaching Sessions, since many of those Crimes,

"Crimes, which have so long excited the just
"Repentment of the Publick, are now incon"testably evinced to all Mankind, notwithstand"ing the various Artifices put in Practice to "conceal and protect them: For it cannot now
"be a Doubt that our Troops, under the ex"tremest Distress in an unhealthy Climate, were "defrauded, by collusive Contracts, of their just "Pay; that the Power of an Administration
"hath been applied to corrupting of Returning "Officers, the purchasing of Votes, and the Sub"version of Charters; and that immense Sums of "that publick Treasure, which was appropriated
"to the Support of the Civil Government, have "been partly secreted, and partly diverted to
"Purposes injurious to the Dignity of the Crown,
"and destructive of our happy Constitution.

"We therefore most earnestly entreat, that,
"at this important Crisis, you will not suffer
"yourselves to be amused with distant Objects,
"which of late have been so specially dressed up
"with all the Arts of Fallacy and Delusion; but,
"whatever Plea may be offered in Behalf of our "Safety abroad, be persuaded that Security at "home is the first Point which merits your Con"sideration; that the gratifying the reasonable "Desires of the People, who ask no more than "Justice, and the Re-establishment of the British "Constitution, can alone give Weight and Suc"cess to his Majesty's Councils and Measures,
"can alone recover the lost Confidence of our "antient Allies, and strike Terror into our most "powerful Enemies. We therefore apply to you
"now, with all the urgent Sollicitations of Men
"fully convinced that their All is at Stake, the "Rights and Privileges of ourselves and Poste"rity, with every valuable Advantage purchased "for us by the Blood of our Ancestors, con-
"juring you to postpone every other Consider"ation, particularly the Supplies for the current "Service of the ensuing Year, till you have re"newed the Secret Committee of Enquiry; pro"cured an effectual Bill to reduce and limit the "Number of Placemen in the House of Com"mons; restored the Frequency of Elections,
"and restrained the Abuse of Power in Return"ing Officers. Yet, after these salutary Pro"visions, when you shall think fit to grant the "Supplies, at the same Time have some Regard "to their Application. A Nation burdened with "Taxes, oppressed with Debts, and almost ex"hausted by one lavish Administration, can but "ill undergo a fresh Profusion of its Treasure in "the Parade of numerous Land Armies, and the "Hire of foreign Forces, without the Appear"ance of any Service in the Behalf of his Ma"jesty's British Dominions.

"These Points alone can give Safety to the "Kingdom, and appease the general Discontents;
"and the vigorous Prosecution of them, in Con"currence with all true Friends of the Publick, "(independent of Party, or of any other in-"vidious Distinction whatsoever) will insure to "yourselves the lasting Favour and Affection of "this great Metropolis."

Afterwards the Common Council returned
Thanks to the Right Hon. George Heatcote, Esq; Lord-Mayor, for holding frequent Common Councils, &c. and his Readiness upon all Occasions to act for the Good of his Country, and of this great trading City in particular. His Lordship made an elegant Speech, thanking them for the great Honour they had done him in chusing him one of their Representatives, and assured them that nothing should be wanting on his Part. Mr. Alderman Calvert likewise made a very handsome Speech.

And on Friday the twenty-ninth, the Right
Hon. Robert Willmot, Esq; the new Lord-Mayor of London, was with the usual Solemnity sworn into that high and honourable Office at Westminster, for the Year ensuing. It was remarkable, that notwithstanding the common Notion that a Lord-Mayor must be free of one of the twelve Companies, his Lordship broke through that Custom, upon the Advice of Council that there was no Law for it. His Lordship was of the Coopers Company, and would have been translated to the Clothworkers, which is one of the twelve; but his Admission being carried but by a small Majority, and they having at the same Time refused him the Use of their Hall, he was resolved to give them no farther Trouble: And this gave Occasion to the present Alteration, which perhaps the twelve Companies may repent. It seems, all that is necessary is, that the Lord-Mayor for the Time being should be free of one of the twelve Companies, in order to be President of the Irish Committee.

The City of Westminster made also the like Representation to their Representatives in this Form:

"To the Right Hon. the Lord Viscount Perceval,
"and Charles Edwin, Esq;

"We, the Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the "City and Liberty of Westminster, think it incum"bent on us, at this Crisis, to offer our Sentiments
"to you, our Representatives in Parliament, who,
"we most gratefully acknowledge, have hitherto
"answered our Expectations in that great Trust:
"Nor does this Application flow from any mista"ken Notion of our own Importance, or from the "least Disgust of your Virtue and Abilities; but "that the supreme Councils and Legislature of this "Kingdom may be justly informed of what we "conceive to be the Voice of the People, to "which, whenever Government perverts the End "of its Institution, the last Appeal must lie.

"We acknowledge his Majesty's Goodness in "removing, without Application of Parliament,
"a Minister from that Post he had so long wick"edly abused and disgraced; and expect it will "now be your earnest Endeavour to oppose every "Confederacy that may be formed either to "screen the Offender or perpetuate the Offence:
"Nor is this meant further than to encourage the "just Spirit which ought to animate an injured
"and almost ruined People, without exceeding
"those Bounds, which Duty to our Sovereign,
"Reverence to the Constitution, and the Dig"nity of Government prescribe.

"As the Punishment of one Man can never "compensate the Injuries of a whole Nation, so
"the Justice we demand does not proceed from "an Impotency of Revenge, but from a deep "Conviction that such a Precedent of Impunity
"will expose us to the Scourge of any future Mi-

"ple, may renew the same Abuse of Power ;
 "and thus this Country be reduced to the melancholy Alternative of having Recourse either
 "to the Violence of popular Contention, or "groan under the Yoke of oppressive Government.

"As publick Utility is alone the Object of "Pursuit, we shall not presume to censure any "Characters, but such as by their Conduct can "admit of no Excuse, with a due Reserve to "those of whom we are yet willing to entertain
 "a favourable Opinion ; and as their Errors are,
 "we hope, not irretrievable, have yet an Opportunity of becoming an Ornament, instead of a "Disgrace to a British Administration.

"We have long experienced, that a lucrative "Influence over the representative Body of "this Nation has been of most fatal Consequence to the Liberties of the Subject, and "destructive of that Independence which is the "very Soul of our Constitution ; therefore we "insist that you join in such Measures as are necessary to obtain an effectual Limitation of "Placemen in Parliament, without any View of "cramping the necessary Operations of Government, but as we conceive the Disinterestedness of "the Representatives is the best Security for "the Freedom of the People.

"As the restoring Frequency of Parliaments
 "was perhaps one of the most valuable Acquisitions obtained for the Subject, by the present
 "happy Establishment, it is with the deepest "Concern we lament the Loss of that invaluable "Privilege, and for the Recovery of which we "conjure you to exert your utmost Zeal ; since,
 "without this Barrier, we conceive this Nation
 "may one Day have the Misfortune to suffer
 "more under that Succession, which was raised "to protect and preserve its Liberties, than from "either the secret or avowed, the fraudulent or "violent Invasions of the most arbitrary and designing Monarchs.

"We hope you will not suffer any foreign Affairs to divert your Attention from our domestic Interests ; nor the Pretence of restoring "the Balance of Power abroad, betray you into "a Loss of that Equilibrium of our Constitution
 "at home, on which alone the mutual Advantage both of the Crown and People depends.
 "The Glory of the most successful War, will,
 "we apprehend, be too dearly purchased at the "Expence of our Liberties, and therefore we "intreat, that the Security of the Subject may "be made the Consideration of granting any "Supplies whatever : Nor does this proceed
 "from any Inclination to stop the vigorous Prosecution of a War, so far as it relates to the "Interests and Honour of his Majesty's British "Dominions, but from long Experience, that "any Application for Redress of Grievances are "but ill relished when once the Necessities of "Government are supplied.

"We are sensible that Obedience is the Price
 "of Protection, and therefore, in our Attempt "to vindicate the Privilege of the People, at the "same Time pay the utmost Regard to the Prerogative of the Crown ; and, as we cheerfully
 "submit to a legal Subjection, we expect you "will always endeavour to defend us from any "Anti-Constitutional Servitude."

Representations and Instructions of the like Nature were presented by the Counties of Worcester and Hereford, the Borough of Southwark, the Cities of Edinburgh, Litchfield, Hereford, &c. most of them referring to and recommending the Representation and Instructions of the City of London. That from Edinburgh proceeds thus :

"The City of London, that eminent Bulwark
 "and Protectress of the Liberty and Freedom of "the Trade and Commerce of the Kingdom,
 "and of the Dignity and Honour of the Crown,
 "have represented their Sentiments of the present
 "deplorable and ruinous Condition to which the "Nation is reduced, and of the Means to retrieve it, with a Dignity becoming that vast "Metropolis, with Reasons and Motives so cogent and powerful as must animate any Person but a Slave, and with such Spirit and "Energy as must affect the most Insensible and "Stupid.

"As we, your Constituents, wish to vie with "our Sister City in nothing more than her Zeal
 "for the Honour of the Crown and the Welfare "of the Kingdom ; and as our Sentiments, with "Respect to both, are entirely the same, and "cannot be better expressed than they are by her "Representation to her Members, (a Copy of "which we herewith deliver to you) we therefore adopt the same, and make it our sincere
 "Request, that it may be the Rule of your "Conduct in the approaching Session of Parliament."

Soon after, one of the publick Journals, intitled Common Sense, gave us the following Remarks on the London Representation :

"The late warm and just Representations of "the Cities of London, &c. to their Members,
 "setting forth the present State of our publick
 "Affairs, and the deplorable Situation we are "now in, occasioned by the most iniquitous Administration of the late Corruptor, have at the "same Time astonished and raised the Indignation of every true Briton. Mankind did believe before, but now no Doubt remains ; all "People are convinced, they now know certainly, that all the Misfortunes we have laboured
 "under for many Years past, are wholly owing "to the Power and Wealth with which one Man "has been invested, and by which he has been "enabled to call himself and his Accomplices a "Majority. Nor were these Representations "gained as Addresses have been formerly, by an "artful Minister, who has endeavour'd to "give the Sense and Opinion of the People to "his Master in his Favour, and by that Means
 "to misguide him ; no, they are what they appear to be, the general Sense of the People,
 "communicated to their Representatives in this "solemn and publick Manner, perfectly voluntary and free from any Manner of Influence,
 "Management or Direction whatsoever ; and,
 "no Doubt of it, the glorious Example of this "Metropolis, the Source, the Fountain-Head of "all our Wealth and Trade, will have, it has "had already, its proper Influence both within "and without Doors.

"What a generous Sentiment ! what a Spirit
 "of Freedom ! such as would have become the "Mouths

Of the City of Edinburgh

Remarks on the London
 Instructions.

"Mouths of the Citizens of Rome, when on the like Occasions the Foundations of their mighty Empire were sapping by Corruption; such as became the Mouth of Cato:

"—Let it not perish in our Hands—

"A Day, an Hour of virtuous Liberty

"Is worth a whole Eternity in Bondage.

"This glorious Representation will remain a Memorial, of the heroick Spirit of Liberty and Justice in the City of London, till Time shall be no more: It is already become the Standard of Truth, and the rest of the Nation refer to it, in their Instructions, as to an unerring Oracle. I know not what the Person particularly marked out in this Piece may think, but if he can feel, if he has any Sensation, it must make his Blood shudder in his Veins, to hear himself proclaimed thus by the whole Nation, the Corruptor General. It must give him an Ague Fit, not to be cured by his usual Grand Specificks, the Balsam of Peru, or the Jesuits Bark."

Sir John Strange.

On the fourth of December, Sir John Strange, Knt. by Letter to the Lord-Mayor, resigned the Office of Recorder of London; having some Time before laid down the Post of Solicitor-General to his Majesty. And on the twentieth came on, before the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Justice Willes, in the Court of Common-Pleas at Guildhall, a Cause wherein the Company of Weavers, London, were Plaintiffs, and Mr. Thomas Handyside, Defendant, who refused to be of the Livery of the Company, not being free of the City; but, on Proof of the Charter and By-Laws, it appeared, the Defendant being a Member of the Company, was eligible to the Livery, though not free of the City, and therefore a Verdict was found for the Company.

Thomas Rounce executed.

On the nineteenth of January, 1743, Thomas Rounce, condemned for High Treason, in fighting against his King and Country on board a Spanish Privateer, was carried from Newgate, on a Hurdle drawn by four Horses adorned with Ribbands, to Execution-Doek. One of the Sheriffs Officers carried a Silver Oar before him. Jack Ketch rode upon the Hurdle, dressed in a white Frock, with a Knife and Steel by his Side, and a drawn Scymetar in his Hand. After he had hung about fifteen Minutes, the Executioner cut him down, ript up his belly, and threw his Heart and Bowels into a Fire prepared for that Purpose. He was then quartered, and his Quarters put into a Coffin, and delivered to his Friends. This was the only Execution of the Kind, and for such a Crime, from the Year 1708, in the Time of Q. Anne's War.

Meeting of Parliament in the Strand.

On the fifteenth of March, there was a numerous Meeting of the Members of the House Commons at the Fountain Tavern in the Strand, among whom were the Right Hon. the Earl of Granard, Lord Vis. Viner, Edm. Waller, Phil. Warburton, Rich. Williams, Esqrs; who unanimously and solemnly engaged themselves, and likewise promised to use their utmost Interest with their absent Friends, to meet at the House on the first Day of the next Sessions of Parliament, and to give a constant and due Attendance there, in order to secure our happy Constitution and the Independency of Parliament, and to promote the true Interest of his Majesty's British Dominions.

One Anthony Wrights bringing an Action against William Ayres, the Lessee of the Toll on London-Bridge; who by his Plea insisted on a prescriptive Right to receive two Pence for the Passage of each Cart laden with Goods and Merchandize, amounting to the Weight of one Ton or upwards, passing over the Bridge; after the learned Arguments of Counsel on both Sides, in respect to Matters of Law, it appearing by the Evidence that the Usage had been to take a Penny only for a Cart with two Horses, although laden with a Ton or upwards, a Verdict was given for the Plaintiff against the Lessee.

Wright against Ayres.

On the fourteenth of November, her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was safely delivered of a Prince at Leicester-House, who was baptized by the Name of William Henry: And on the nineteenth, the Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen and Common Council, of the City of London, waited on his Majesty at St. James's with the following Address:

A Prince born.

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, most humbly approach your Throne with Hearts full of the sincerest Wishes for the Honour and Prosperity of your sacred Person and Government; and beg Leave to offer our most hearty Congratulations upon

City Address on that Occasion.

"your

"your safe Return to these your British Dominions.

"Permit us, Royal Sir, at the same Time to express our Joy, that your happy Arrival hath been blessed with the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales of a Prince: An auspicious Omen and further Pledge of our future Happiness, by the Increase of your Royal Progeny, to defend our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and protect our Trade and Commerce; always confiding, that a Race of Princes, descended from your Majesty, will be ever mindful to preserve these Blessings to our latest Posterity.

"We further beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty upon the Marriage of your Royal Daughter, the Princess Louisa, to the Prince Royal of Denmark; by which Alliance we have Reason to hope, that the Protestant Interest in Europe will be more firmly united.

"We shall ever think it our indispensable Duty to pray, That the Hearts and Affections of your loyal Subjects may be the just and grateful Reward of your Paternal Care and Protection; that your Majesty's Reign may be long and glorious over a free, dutiful, and united People; and that the Scepter of these Realms may always remain in your Royal Family."

To which his Majesty returned the following most gracious Answer.

"I thank you for this Address, and for the Expressions of your Duty and Affection to me and my Family. The City of London may always depend upon my Favour and Protection."

And on the fifteenth following, the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, waited on their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and made their Compliments as follow:

"May it please your Royal Highnesses,

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen of the City of London, humbly beg Leave to present our most hearty Congratulations, upon the safe Delivery and happy Recovery of Madam, your Royal Highness, and the Increase of your illustrious Family, by the Birth of another Prince; an Event, which must greatly contribute to our Happiness, as it strengthens our present Constitution, and yields a further Prospect of its Continuance in the Protestant Succession of his Majesty's Royal Line.

"We cannot sufficiently express our Joy when we reflect on the many eminent Virtues, which, we promise ourselves, will be transmitted from your Royal Highnesses to your Posterity; formed with the same generous and benevolent Dispositions, for which you are so universally admired; and instructed by the same great Examples to pay a dutiful Obedience to his Majesty, and a tender Regard for the Liberties of his Subjects.

"Permit us likewise, Sir, to make use of this Opportunity, to return you our particular Thanks for the repeated Declarations of your Attachment to the Interests and Welfare of our City, of which you have so graciously condescended to become a Member; and, with Minds truly sensible of the high Honour of "your Princely Patronage and Protection, we offer up our constant Prayers, that your Royal Highness may enjoy all Happiness and Prosperity; and that your Descendants may successfully continue the Blessings derived from you to the latest Posterity."

To which his Royal Highness was pleased to return the following Answer:

"My Lord and Gentlemen,

"I return you mine and the Princess's Thanks for this Instance of your Duty to the King, and of your Regard to us. My Children will, I hope, deserve the Affection you now shew towards them; and I'll endeavour to inculcate early those Sentiments into them, as are agreeable to the Laws and Liberties of the Country they have the Happiness to be born in. This City may always depend on my hearty Wishes for her Trade and Welfare."

On the fourth of January, 1744, the following Address of the Protestant Dissenting Ministers in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, was presented to the King by the Rev. Obadiah Hughes, D. D. attended by several of his Brethren:

"May it please your Majesty,

"We humbly beg leave to congratulate your Majesty upon the happy Concurrence of many favourable Providences, which have lately attended your Royal Person and Family; in whose Prosperity we are greatly Interested, and feel a most sensible Pleasure.

"Your Majesty's safe Return to these your British Dominions rejoiced the Hearts of all your good Subjects. This Joy was much increased, by reflecting on the extreme Dangers, to which, in Defence of the Liberties of Europe, you generously exposed your Life in the Fields of Dettingen, and acquired immortal Honour; where, under the influence of Heaven, and animated by your Presence and Valour, the confederate Army gained an Important Victory over the common Enemy.

"This, with the Recovery of the Duke from the honourable Wound he received in the Battle, the Marriage of the Princess Louisa with the Prince Royal of Denmark, and the Birth of another Son to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, is such a Series of Events, as greatly encourages our Hopes, that the Goodness of God will perpetuate the Blessings, which we persuade ourselves his Providence designed in placing your Majesty's Family upon the Throne of these Kingdoms, under which we have enjoyed so many Years of Peace and Prosperity.

"We gladly embrace this Opportunity, to assure your Majesty, that we are deeply sensible of our Share in the publick Happiness under your auspicious Government; and that we shall, from Principles both of Gratitude and of Conscience, continue our Endeavours to impress the Minds of those to whom we minister, with such Sentiments, as tend to confirm them in Loyalty and Affection to so excellent a Prince.

"Nor shall we cease to offer up our most fervent Prayers to the King of Kings, that Wisdom from above may always direct your Majesty's

senting Ministers.*

*To the
Wales.*

"jefty's Counfels, and fuch further Succels attend your Arms, as may produce that lafting Security of the Liberties of Europe, and thofe Bleffings to thefe Kingdoms, which your Majesty has in View: That your Majesty's moft precious Life may continue to be the fpecial Care of the Almighty, who covered your Head in the Day of Battle: That after a long and prosperous Reign, you may inherit a Crown of Immortality in the World to come: And that there never may be wanting a Succellor in your Royal Line, who, after your Majesty's great Example, fhall be the Guardian of the Liberties of thefe Kingdoms, till Time fhall be no more."

To which his Majesty was pleafed to return this moft gracious Anfwer:

"I Thank you for this dutiful Addrefs; you may depend upon the Continuance of my Protection."

State Lottery.

The State Lottery, which had been drawing at Guildhall, was finifhed on the fifth of January, 1744; when No. 11,053, which came up a Prize of one hundred Pound, was alfo, as being the laft drawn Ticket, declared to be entitled to one thoufand Pound more. But 'tis remarkable, that after the Wheels were carried from Guildhall to Whitehall, and there opened, a Ticket, Number 72,148, was found in the Wheel A; and being the next drawn Ticket after all the Prizes were drawn, was declared as entitled to the thoufand Pounds, as the laft drawn Ticket. Which Affair made a great deal of Noife.

French Invasion intended.

On the eighteenth of February, his Majesty having acquainted his Parliament and the Lord-Mayor of London, that he had received undoubted Intelligence of the Pretender's eldeft Son's Arrival in France, and that his Invasion of this Kingdom was intended to be fupported by the Power of France: The Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of this City prefented the following Addrefs:

City Address.

"Moft gracious Sovereign,
"We, your Majesty's moft dutiful and loyal Subjects; the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council affembled, having heard, that Attempts are forming by the common Diftributors of the Peace and Tranquility of Europe, in Favour of a Popifh Pretender, to interrupt that Happinefs we thankfully enjoy under your Majesty's Government, humbly beg Leave to take this earlieft Opportunity, to exprefs our greateft Concern for, and Abhorrence of this Indignity intended againft your Majesty and thefe Kingdoms.

"We have no Reason to doubt, but that; by the Bleffing of God on your Majesty's Arms, our Enemies will be difappointed in their Expectations. As your Majesty's Subjects muft be too fenfible of the Bleffings of Liberty, Property, and the free Exercife of their Religion, which they enjoy under your moft auspicious Reign, to exchange them for a certain arbitrary and tyrannical Government; fo the Loyalty and Unanimity of your faithful Subjects, will greatly tend to difcourage thefe desperate Endeavours to deftroy and fubvert our excellent Conftitution. We therefore beg

No. 53.

"Leave moft humbly to affure your Majesty, of our firm and fincereft Attachment to your facred Perfon and Government, and our prefent happy Eftablifhment in Church and State; and that no Endeavours of ours fhall, even at the Hazard of our Lives and Fortunes, be wanting to frustrate thefe Attempts, to the Prejudice of both, and to fecure the Laws and Liberties of this Country, and the Proteftant Succeffion in your Majesty's moft illuftrious Houfe, to lateft Generations."

His Majesty's moft Gracious Anfwer.

"I take very kindly this feafonable Mark of your Duty and Affection to me. The City of London may always depend upon my Protection and Favour: And I have the firmeft Confidence, that you will exert your Authority upon this Occafion for the Security of the City, and the Prefervation of the publick Peace, and for the Support of my Government."

They were received very graciously, and all had the Honour to kifs his Majesty's Hand: And his Majesty was pleafed to confer the Honour of Knighthood on the Right Hon. Robert Weftley, Efq; Lord-Mayor, Mr. Serjeant Simon Uftin, Recorder, Mr. Alderman Daniel Lambert, Mr. Alderman Robert Willmott, Mr. Sheriff Robert Ladbroke, and Mr. Sheriff William Calvert.

Addreffes were likewife prefented, on this Occafion, from the Lieutenancy of London, the City of Westminfter, Bristol, Rockefter, Leicefter, Poole, the Univerfity of Cambridge, and other Parts of the Kingdom; and particularly the following from the Quakers of London:

To George the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c.

The humble Addrefs of his Proteftant Subjects, the People called Quakers.

"May it please the King,

"We, thy faithful and peaceable Subjects, being deeply concerned for the Safety and Prefervation of thy Royal Perfon, Family and Government, beg Leave to approach thy Throne, to declare our Abhorrence and Deteflation of all Plots and Conspiracies, for the Subverfion of our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and the introducing Popery and Arbitrary Power; and of all Attempts whatsoever to difturb the Repofe and Tranquility of thefe thy Kingdoms; and to affure thee, that we are determined; by the Affiftance of Almighty God, in our refpective Stations, ftedfaftly to continue thy loyal Subjects, and, agreeable to our known Principles, to contribute all in our Power for the Prefervation of the publick Peace.

Quakers Address.

"Duty and Affection oblige us to exprefs our grateful Acknowledgments for thofe ineffimable Bleffings, our Religious and Civil Liberties, which we enjoy under thy mild and gracious Administration.

"May the Almighty be pleafed to direct thy Councils by his Wifdom, and make thee, O King, the happy Inftrument to calm and compofe the prefent Differences of Europe, and the glorious Means of re-eftablifhing Peace and Tranquility: May his Divine Providence, who hath preferved thee in imminent Dangers, protect thee againft all thine Enemies, make thy

"Reign over us long and prosperous, and continue a Succession of thy Royal Offspring, the Blessings of a free and happy People, to late Posterity.

"Signed, in Behalf of the said People,
"London, the ninth Day of the first "Month, called March, 1743.

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"I thank you for this very dutiful and loyal Address: and you may rely upon my constant Protection."

Merchants' Address.

The Merchants of the City of London waited on his Majesty with the following Address:

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Merchants of your City of London, having observed, by your Majesty's most gracious Message to your Parliament, that Designs are carrying on by your Majesty's Enemies, in Favour of a Popish Pretender, to disturb the Peace and Quiet of these your Majesty's Kingdoms, think it our indispensable Duty, not to omit this Opportunity of expressing our just Repentment and Indignation at so rash an Attempt.

"We have too lively a Sense of the Happiness we enjoy in our Religion and Liberties under your Majesty's mild and auspicious Reign, and of the flourishing Condition of our Trade and Commerce, even in the midst of War, under your paternal Care and Vigilance, not to give your Majesty the strongest Assurance of our highest Gratitude for such invaluable Blessings; nor can we doubt, but by the Blessing of God upon your Majesty's Arms, and the unanimous Support of your faithful Subjects, the Attempts of your Enemies will recoil upon themselves, and end in their own Confusion.

"We therefore humbly beg Leave to declare to your Majesty our unshaken Resolution, that we will, on this critical Conjunction, exert our utmost Endeavours for the Support of publick Credit, and at all Times hazard our Lives and Fortunes, in Defence of your Majesty's sacred Person and Government, and for the Security of the protestant Succession in your Royal Family." To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer :

" I thank you very heartily for this dutiful and affectionate Address. This seasonable Mark of Zeal and Attachment to my Person and Government, from so considerable a Body of my trading Subjects, cannot but be most agreeable to me, and must, at this Time, greatly

" conduce to support the publick Credit, which I shall always use my utmost Endeavours to preserve and maintain."

The following Address, of the Protestant Dissenting Ministers in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, was presented to his Majesty by the Reverend John Giffie, D. D. attended by several of his Brethren :

" Most gracious Sovereign,

" We humbly beg Leave, on this important Occasion, to renew the solemn Assurance we lately gave your Majesty, of our unalterable Attachment to your sacred Person and Government.

" It is no great Surprize to us, that an insolent and perfidious Nation, in Revenge for the Repulse they have met with from your Majesty's Arms abroad, should form the Design of invading you at home, in Favour of an outlawed Popish Pretender: But that any of those, who live under your Majesty's just and mild Government, should be so insatuated and abandoned as to give them any Encouragement, raises our Indignation and Astonishment.

" Your Majesty's known Wisdom and Valour; the noble Ardour and Firmness of both your Houses of Parliament; the cheerful Concurrence of your faithful Subjects of all Ranks and Orders, in declaring their inviolable Fidelity to your Majesty; the tried Courage of your Forces, and your Majesty's seasonable Call on your People to Fasting and Prayer, as they justly encourage our Hope of your long prosperous Reign, so they may well damp all Expectations of Success in the most inveterate and sanguine of your Enemies.

" Our Detestation of Popery, and of that Arbitrary Power which would naturally attend it, were it ever to be introduced among us; and our Apprehensions of Danger from both are not at all abated, by any such pretended Coalition of Parties, as has left among us no Enemies to your Majesty and our happy Constitution: We therefore think it our Duty and Interest, to do our utmost (even at the Hazard of our All in this World) for the Safety of your Royal Person and Government, with which our Civil and Religious Rights are inseparably connected.

" And we crave Leave to assure your Majesty, that while we endeavour to cultivate such Sentiments in those under our Care, and to warm their Breasts with Zeal for your Majesty, and Affection to your illustrious Family; we will not fail to offer up our most ardent Prayers to God, that he would direct your Majesty's Councils, prosper your Arms and direct the Designs of all your Enemies, in so remarkable a Manner, as may convince the whole World, that your sacred Person, your Royal Family, and our dear Country, are the Objects of the special Favour and constant Protection of Divine Providence."

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer:

" I thank you for this Address, and for this fresh Mark of your Duty and Affection to my Person

"Person and Government. You may always depend upon the Continuance of my Protection."

The Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of London, and the Clergy of the City of London, waited on his Majesty with the following Address:

London
Clergy's
Address.

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Bishop of London, and the Clergy of the City of London, assembled at Sion College, humbly beg Leave to express our hearty and unanimous Abhorrence of the Attempt that is carrying on, to invade your Kingdoms, and advance a Popish Pretender to your Throne; and to assure your Majesty, that we have the justest Sense of this great Indignity offered to your Majesty and your Royal Family, and of the terrible Consequences, to Church and State, which would unavoidably attend the Success of such a bold and desperate Undertaking. Under these Impressions, and from a true Sense of the Duty we owe to your Majesty, we shall not fail, in our several Stations, to enforce upon the People committed to our Care, the Obligations they are under, in Point of Conscience, to preserve an inviolable Fidelity to your Majesty, our rightful and lawful Sovereign. At the same Time, we will endeavour to keep up in their Minds a due Sense of the Blessings they enjoy under your Majesty's mild and auspicious Government, and to possess them with a just Abhorrence of Popery, as the great Corruption of Christianity; and with a firm Belief and Persuasion, that as a Popish Prince on the Throne is utterly inconsistent with the Religion, Laws and Liberties of these Kingdoms, the only Means this Nation has, under God, of securing those invaluable blessings to themselves, and their Posterity, is the Protestant Succession as established in your Royal Family, and a vigorous Opposition to all Attempts against it, whether at home or abroad."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"This publick Testimony of Duty and Loyalty, from the Bishop and Clergy of my capital City, and especially at such a Juncture, is very acceptable to me. You may always depend upon my Favour and Protection; and upon my firm Resolution to support and maintain the Church of England, as by Law established."

Proclamation
against Papists.

And on the same Day, a Proclamation was published for putting the Laws in Execution against Papists and Nonjurors, and for commanding all Papists, and reputed Papists, to depart from the Cities of London and Westminster, and from within ten Miles of the same; and for confining Papists, and reputed Papists, to their Habitations, (not to remove from thence above five Miles) and for putting in Execution the Laws against Riots and Rioters. This Proclamation was occasioned by the undoubted Intelligence of the Arrival of the Pretender's eldest Son in France, and that Preparations were making at Dunkirk, for an Invasion of this Kingdom, in Concert with disaffected Persons here.

The Duke of Newcastle, his Majesty's principal Secretary of State, on the twenty-first of March, sent for the Lord-Mayor, Sheriffs, and Representatives of London, and acquainted them that an express was arrived from Mr. Thompson, at Paris, with an Account, that he was sent for by M. Amelot to Versailles, who acquainted him, that Things were come to such a Pass that a Declaration of War must soon ensue on their Part. And the next Day Sir William Calvert and Sir Robert Ladbrooke, by Order of his Grace, acquainted the Merchants and Traders therewith.

On Saturday, the thirty-first of March, his Majesty's Declaration of War against France was proclaimed, in Manner following, according to the usual Custom on such Occasions. At ten o'Clock the Officers at Arms, with the Serjeant at Arms, and Trumpeters, mounted their Horses in the Stable-Yard, St. James's, and proceeding thence to the Palace-Gate, Garter, Principal King at Arms, read the Declaration, and Norroy, King at Arms, proclaimed it aloud; which being done, a Procession was made to Charing-Cross, in the following Manner: Guards to clear the Way. Constables and Beadles of Westminster, two and two, bare-headed, with Staves. High Constable of Westminster, with his Staff. Officers of the High Bailiff of Westminster on Horseback, with white Wands. Clerk of the High Bailiff of Westminster. High Bailiff of Westminster; on his Right Hand the Deputy Steward. The first Troop of Horse Grenadier-Guards. Knight Marshal's Men, two and two. King's Trumpets. Serjeant Trumpeter, bearing his Mace. Pursuivants and Heralds, two and two. Norroy, King at Arms, having on each Side a Serjeant at Arms, with Maces. Garter, Principal King at Arms, between two Serjeants at Arms. first Troop of Horse-Guards, preceded by Lord Delawar, Colonel, John Bratbwaite, Esq; first Lieutenant-Colonel, and Lord Carpenter, second Lieutenant-Colonel. Being come to Charing-Cross, a second Proclamation was there made. In this Method the Procession was continued to Temple-Bar, where the Officers of the City of Westminster retired; and within the Gate, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, in Scarlet, attended; and Blue Mantle Pursuivant presented to his Lordship the Earl Marshal's Warrant. After which the City Procession followed the above-mentioned Guards. And, at Chancery-Lane End, a third Proclamation was made. The March was then continued to the Place where the Cross formerly stood in Cheshamside, where the Proclamation was made a fourth Time. From thence they proceeded in like Manner to the Royal-Exchange, where the Declaration was proclaimed the fifth and last Time, in 'Change Time; and was as follows:

War with France proclaimed.

His Majesty's Declaration of War against the French King.

"GEORGE R.

"The Troubles which broke out in Germany, on Account of the Succession of the late Emperor Charles the sixth, having been begun, and carried on, by the Instigation, Assistance, and Support of the French King, with a View to

Declaration of War against the French.

"overturn

“ overturn the Balance of Power in Europe, and “ to extend the dangerous Influence of that “ Crown, in direct Violation of the solemn Gua“ ranty of the Pragmatick Sanction, given by “ him in the Year one thousand seven hundred “ and thirty-eight, in Consideration of the Ces“ sion of Lorraine; and We having, on Our “ Part, executed Our Engagements for maintain“ ing the Pragmatick Sanction, with that good “ Faith which is inseparable from Us; and “ having opposed the Attempts made against the “ Queen of Hungary; We are not surpris’d, “ that Our Conduct, in this Respect, should “ have drawn upon Us the Resentment of the “ French King, who has found his ambitious “ Views, in a great Measure disappointed by the “ Assistance We have furnished to Our Ally, un“ justly attacked by him; or that he should al“ ledge it, as a principal Reason for declaring “ War against Us.

“ From the Time that We found Ourselves “ oblig’d, for the Maintenance of the just “ Rights of Our Subjects, to enter into a War “ with Spain, instead of observing a strict Neu“ trality, which we might have promised Our“ selves on the Part of the French King, from “ whom we were even bound by Treaty to have “ demand’d Assistance; he has given Encourage“ ment and Support to our Enemies, by con-“ niving at his Subjects acting as Privateers un“ der Spanish Commissions, both in Europe and “ America; and by sending, in the Year one thou“ sand seven hundred and forty, a strong Squadron “ into the American Seas, in order to prevent Us “ from prosecuting the just War, which We were “ carrying on against Spain, in those Parts; and “ We have the most authentick Proof, that an “ Order was given to the Commander of the French “ Squadron, not only to act in a hostile Manner “ against Our Ships, either jointly with the “ Spaniards or separately; but even to concert “ Measures with Our Enemies, for attacking one “ of Our principal Dominions in America; a “ Duplicate of that Order, dated the seventh “ of October, one thousand seven hundred and “ forty, having fallen into the Hands of the “ Commander in Chief of our Squadron in the “ West-Indies. This injurious Proceeding was “ greatly aggravated by the French Minister’s, at “ Our Court, having declared, on Occasion of “ sending the said Squadron, that the French “ King was very far from having any Design, or “ Intention, of breaking with Us.

“ The same offensive Conduct was continued, “ on the Part of the French King, towards Us, “ by his Squadron in the Mediterranean, in the “ Year one thousand seven hundred and forty-“ one, joining with, and protecting the Ships of “ Our Enemies, in Sight of Our Fleet, which “ was preparing to attack them.

“ These unwarrantable Proceedings; the no“ torious Breach of Treaties, by repairing the “ Fortifications, and erecting new Works at “ Dunkirk; the open Hostilities lately committed “ against Our Fleet in the Mediterranean; the “ Affront and Indignity offer’d to Us, by the “ Reception of the Son of the Pretender to Our “ Crown, in the French Dominions; the Em“ barkation actually made at Dunkirk, of a con“ siderable Body of Troops, notoriously design“ ed for an Invasion of this Kingdom, in Fa“ vour of the Pretender to our Crown; and the “ sending a Squadron of French Ships of War “ into the Channel, to support the said Embark“ ation and Invasion; will be lasting Monu“ ments of the little Regard had by the French “ Court, for the most solemn Engagements, “ when the Observance of them is inconsistent “ with Interest, Ambition, or Resentment.

“ We cannot omit taking Notice of the un“ just Insinuations contained in the French King’s “ Declaration of War against Us, with Respect “ to the Convention made at Hanover, in October, “ one thousand seven hundred and forty-one.
 “ That Convention, regarding Our Electorate “ only, had no Relation to Our Conduct as “ King of Great-Britain: The Allegation con“ cerning it, are groundless and injurious: Our “ Proceedings in that Respect, having been per“ fectly consistent with that good Faith which “ We have always made the Rule of Our Actions.

“ It is unnecessary to mention the Objections “ to the Behaviour of Our Ministers in foreign “ Courts; since it is notorious, that the princi“ pal View, and Object, of the Negotiations of “ the French Ministers in the several Courts of “ Europe, have been, either to stir up intestine “ Commotions in the Countries where they re“ sided, or to create Differences, and Misunder“ standings, between them and their respective “ Allies.

“ The Charge of Piracy, Cruelty, and Bar“ barity against our Ships of War, is equally “ unjust and unbecoming; and We have all such “ Proceedings so much in Abhorrence, that, if “ any Practices of that Nature had been made “ appear to Us, We should have taken ef“ fectual Care to put a Stop to them, and to “ have punished the Offenders in the severest “ Manner.

“ We being therefore indispensably oblig’d to “ take up Arms, and entirely relying on the “ Help of Almighty God, who knows the Up“ rightness of Our Intentions, have thought fit “ to declare, and do hereby declare War against “ the French King; and We will, in Pursuance of “ such Declaration, vigorously prosecute the same “ by Sea and Land; being assur’d of the ready “ Concurrence, and Assistance, of all Our loving “ Subjects, in so just a Cause: And we do here“ by will, and require, Our Generals and Com“ manders of Our Forces, Our Commissioners “ for executing the Office of High Admiral of “ Great-Britain, Our Lieutenants of Our several “ Counties, Governors of Our Forts and Gar“ risons, and all other Officers under them, by “ Sea and Land, to do, and execute, all acts “ of Hostility, in the Prosecution of this War a“ gainst the said French King, his Vassals, and “ Subjects, and to oppose their Attempts; wil“ ling, and requiring, all Our Subjects to take “ Notice of the same, whom We henceforth for“ bid to hold any Correspondence or Commu“ nication with the Subjects of the French King:
 “ And We do hereby command Our own Sub“ jects, and advertise all other Persons of what “ Nation soever, not to transport or carry any “ Soldiers, Arms, Powder, Ammunition, or

“ other

"other contraband Goods, to any of the Territories, Lands, Plantations, or Countries of the said French King; declaring, that whatsoever Ship or Vessel shall be met withal, transporting or carrying any Soldiers, Arms, Powder, Ammunition, or other contraband Goods, to any of the Territories, Lands, Plantations, or Countries of the said French King, the same being taken, shall be condemned as good and lawful Prize. And whereas there are remaining in Our Kingdom divers of the Subjects of the French King, We do hereby declare Our Royal Intention to be, that all the French Subjects, who shall demean themselves dutifully towards Us, shall be safe in their Persons and Estates.

"Given at Our Court at St. James's, the twentieth Day of March, 1744, in the seventh Year of Our Reign.

"GOD save the KING."

*Refuse of
attempted.*

On Saturday, the twenty-eighth of April, near twenty desperate Thieves and Gamblers assembled themselves before St. Martin's Roundhouse, about Eleven o'Clock in the Morning, in order to rescue some notorious Offenders that were in it, and appeared with Cutlasses, Bludgeons, and Pistols, and, thro' the Windows of the said Roundhouse, gave in Arms to the Prisoners that were in it, and then began a formidable Attack both within and without; which gave so great an Alarm, that a Party of Horse-Grenadiers and Foot-Guards were sent for, and four of the Villains were taken and brought before Sir Thomas de Veil, and, after an Examination of near five Hours, were committed to Newgate.

About the same Time this Crew of infamous Gamblers, Vagabonds, and Whores increasing, thro' a too great Neglect of those who should have executed the Laws, the Grand Jury of Middlesex found it necessary, for preserving the Peace, and securing the Property of their Fellow-Subjects, to make the following Presentment:

Middlesex, } We the Grand Jury, sworn to enquire to wit. } for our Sovereign Lord the King, and the Body of this County, have observed, from most of the Presentments or Returns delivered to us by the Constables of this County, that they have been, as we apprehend and fear, very remiss in their Duty, by returning their several Districts and Divisions to be quiet and in good Order, or to that Effect.

*Presentment by the Middlesex Jury of Gaming-
Houses, &c.*

"Whereas the Contrary does most manifestly appear, in many Instances, as well from the Accounts or Advertisements we read in the daily Papers, printed and dispersed within this County, (inviting and seducing not only the Inhabitants, but all other Persons, to several Places kept apart for the Encouragement of Luxury, Extravagance, and Idleness, and, we fear, other wicked illegal Purposes, which, by such Means, go on with Impunity, to the Destruction of many Families) as otherwise, to the great Dishonour of the Kingdom in general, and this County in particular, especially at a Time when we are engaged in an expensive War, and so much overburdened with Taxes of all Sorts, both Parliamentary and Parochial, that it is as much as a prudent Man can do, without "a Taste to extravagant and illegal Pleasures, to support himself and Family according to his Degree and Station in Life, under the most regular Oeconomy: And unless some Stop be, by Authority much superior to ours, soon put to extravagant Luxury, we fear the Progress thereof, in this County, will soon prove of such an evil Tendency, as, by its Example, may in Time lead to the Ruin and Destruction not only of this County in particular, but of this once happy and flourishing Nation in general.

"These Considerations moved us (encouraged by the Charge given us by an honourable Judge of this Court at our first Meeting) to seek for Redress, and for that End to present,

"And we do accordingly hereby present, as Places riotous, of great Extravagance, Luxury, Idleness, and ill Fame, the several Houses, Places, and Persons following, within this County, to wit,

"1. The Lady Mordington, and her Gaming-House, in or near Covent-Garden, within this County.

"2. The Lady Cottle, and her Gaming-House, in or near Covent-Garden, within this County.

"3. The Proprietors of the Avenues leading to and from the several Playhouses in Covent-Garden and Drury-Lane, in this County, for not preventing wicked, loose, and disorderly Persons, from loitering at the Front of their several Houses on Play-Nights; by which Neglect, and the riotous Behaviour of such disorderly Persons, many of his Majesty's good Subjects are often in Danger of losing their Lives, or receiving some other bodily Harm, and are frequently robbed of their Watches and Money to the great Discredit of Civil Government.

"4. The Proprietors of the House and Diversions, called Sadler's Wells, adjoining to the New-River-Head, in or near Islington, late one Forcer's, now pretended to be opened and carried on by John Warren, within this County, where there is frequently a Resort of great Numbers of loose, disorderly, idle People.

"5. The Proprietors of a Place, called New Wells in Goodman's-Fields, at the Bottom of Lemon-Street, within this County, where are daily Meetings of disorderly, idle People.

"6. The Proprietors of a Place, called the New Wells near London Spaw, Clerkenwell, within this County, where great Numbers of disorderly People meet. And,

"7. The Proprietors of a Place, called Hal-lam's new Theatre at May-Fair, within this County, where there are usually great Meetings of evil and disorderly idle Persons.

"And we humbly desire, for the Good of his Majesty and his Subjects, that this Court will, according to their usual Justice, and the Concern for the publick Welfare of this County in particular, and the Nation in general, in order to prevent the said growing Evils from getting farther to a Head, give Directions that proper Care be taken that these, and all such disorderly Places within this County, be by their own, or some other needful Authority which they can best devise, prosecuted and suppressed according to Law, which will compleatly answer the Directions given to us on that Head, by

"one

"one of the learned Judges from this Bench, at our first Meeting; and thereby give Encouragement to future Grand Juries to enquire the more strictly into Abuses in general within this County, and to inform this Court thereof, and be a Terror to all such-like Transgressors of our Laws, when they find that Regard is paid to the Complaints and Informations of Grand Juries laid before this Court, and the Offenders prosecuted and punished in Consequence thereof, conformably to the Laws of this Land. Sir Roger Newdigate, John Crew, Thomas Pryse, Samuel Child, Thomas Sergison, Walter Pryse, Edward Buckley, John Nicolls, Lancelot Charles Lake, John Merrick, Charles Giffin, J. Chambers Dorrel, Thomas Clarke, Robert Vincent, Andrew Drummond, William Mead, Nathaniel Noell, Merry Telfmaker, William Parrot, John Harrison, Charles Pole, Eliab Briton, Robert Leeson, Esqrs. Richard Saul, Joseph Cooper, Edward Davis, Richard Tall, Gentlemen."

Fire at Cold-Harbour.

On the eleventh of June, about One o'Clock in the Morning, a Fire broke out in a Malt-Warehouse in Cold-Harbour Lane, belonging to Sir William Calvert and Company, Brewers, adjoining to the Brewhouse, which burnt with great Fury above two Hours, and consumed that with three others, in which were four thousand Quarters of Malt, besides a large Quantity of Hops, &c. and very much damaged the Brewhouse. The Dwelling-House was preserved, as were likewise several Granaries and Storehouses. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was present, and gave Encouragement to the Firemen and others; as was likewise the Lord-Mayor, and several other Persons of Distinction. His Royal Highness afterwards sent an hundred Guineas to be distributed among the Firemen, Engineers, &c. with a handsome Present to Sir William's Servants.

Combination of Journey-men Taylors.

A very extraordinary Combination having been entered into, by great Numbers of Journey-men Taylors and Staymakers (to the Number of fifteen thousand) to advance their Wages above what is limited by Act of Parliament, on the eighteenth of September, the Lords of his Majesty's most honourable Privy-Council wrote a Letter to his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, Custos Rotulorum of the County of Middlesex, requiring his Grace to recommend, in the strongest Manner, to the Justices of the said County, to carry into immediate Execution the late Act of Parliament for regulating the Journey-men Taylors within the weekly Bills of Mortality; and also to revoke the Licences granted to such Publicans as have been concerned in encouraging their unlawful Combinations and Confederacies. A Letter of the same Import was sent to the Lord-Mayor of London, &c. And, on the twenty-sixth, the Justices of the Peace for Westminster met, and the Duke of Newcastle's Letter, in Relation to the Journey-men Taylors, was read in open Court, and a Resolution was taken, That if any Journey-man should refuse to work for the Wages settled by Act of Parliament, he should be committed to hard Labour for two Months; and the Master that paid more than the Act allowed, should forfeit five Pounds.

How suppressed.

An Information having been given to the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen by the City Marshals, that they had been disappointed in their Endeavours to bring some audacious Robbers to Justice, by their running out of the City Liberty into the County, the Court gave Orders to Mr. Jones, Deputy-Marshal, immediately to wait on Sir Thomas De Veil, and desire the Assistance of the Peace-Officers of Middlesex; which Sir Thomas complied with, and said, that Directions should be given to their Officers to act at all Times in Conjunction with those of the City. As Mr. Jones was returning, he happened to see one Billingsly, a notorious Rogue, and endeavoured to seize him; but twelve Villains, armed with Cutlasses, and two with Pistols, came up, crying, We know what you have been about, but defy all Power; and directly attacked Mr. Thomas, a Constable, giving him several Wounds, and fired their Pistols at Mr. Jones, who received a slight Wound in the Forehead, but, firing a Pocket-Blunderbuss amongst them, loaded with Duck-Shot, wounded several, and at last they dispersed.

Influence of Street-Robbers.

The Gang who committed these Robberies were so insolent, that they went to the Houses of Peace-Officers, made them beg Pardon for endeavouring to do their Duty, and promise not to molest them. Some, whose Lives they threatened, were obliged to lie in Bridewell for their Safety, they having wounded a Headborough in St. John's-Street in above forty Places.

On the thirteenth of October, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London waited on his Majesty at Kensington, with the following Address:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London, having taken into Consideration the many Disorders and Robberies which have been committed within these few Weeks last past, in the Streets of your loyal Metropolis, beg Leave to approach your Throne, and humbly to represent to your most sacred Majesty, City Address thereupon.

"That divers Confederacies of great Numbers of evil-disposed Persons, armed with Bludgeons, Pistols, Cutlasses, and other dangerous Weapons, infest not only the private Lanes and Passages, but likewise the publick Streets and Places of usual Concourse, and commit most daring Outrages upon the Persons of your Majesty's good Subjects, whose Affairs oblige them to pass thro' the Streets, by terrifying, robbing, and wounding them; and these Facts are frequently perpetrated at such Times as were heretofore deemed Hours of Security.

"That the Officers of Justice have been repulsed in the Performance of their Duty, some of whom have been shot at, some wounded, and others murdered, in endeavouring to discover and apprehend the said Persons; by which Means many are intimidated from duly executing their Offices, and others put in manifest Danger of their Lives.

"These unhappy Circumstances do, as we apprehend, tend greatly to weaken the Hands of the Magistrates, and render the Laws ineffectual.

"It

"It is to us a most alarming Consideration, and Matter of great Grief, that these Crimes should, in so short a Time, have grown to so great a Height; and we beg Leave humbly to assure your Majesty, that we will vigorously, and with the utmost Diligence, apply ourselves to restrain these Violences, and detect the Authors of them.

"Permit us, Sir, to express our Hopes, that a speedy, rigorous, and exemplary Execution of the Laws upon the Persons of Offenders, as they shall fall into the Hands of Justice, may, under your Majesty's princely Wisdom, conduce greatly to the suppressing those enormities, by striking Terror into the Wicked, and preventing others from entering into such evil Courses.

"We thought it our indispensable Duty to lay these Facts, and our Apprehensions upon them, before your Majesty; not doubting but we shall receive effectual Support, and your good Subjects all possible Security, from your Majesty's Authority and fatherly Protection."

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"The Concern you express for the great Disorders mentioned in this Address, and the Assurance you give me of exerting your utmost Endeavours to detect and suppress them, are very agreeable to me, and cannot fail to have a good Effect. Nothing shall be wanting on my Part to put the Laws in Execution, to support the Magistrates, rigorously to punish such heinous Offenders, and to protect the Persons and Properties of my good Subjects; and I will give immediate Orders, that the most effectual Methods be taken for these Purposes."

In Consequence of which Address his Majesty, on the ninth of January following, caused a Proclamation to be published, whereby a Reward of one hundred Pounds (over and above all other Rewards by Acts of Parliament) is ordered to be paid by the Lords of the Treasury, to any Person or Persons who shall discover and apprehend any Person, so as he may be convicted, who, since the first of October last hath committed, or before the first Day of May next shall commit, any Murder, or Robbery, or Assault, with any offensive Weapon or Instrument, with Intent to rob, in any of the Streets of the Cities of London and Westminster; which Reward is ordered to be paid without any further Warrant in that Behalf: And if the Person so discovering and apprehending any such Offender (excepting the Person actually giving a Wound in any such Murder) shall have been an Accomplice in any such Murder, Robbery, or Assault, he is to have his Majesty's most gracious Pardon.

This Year was enacted another Act of Parliament, for making more effectual Provision for enlightening the Streets of this City, setting forth,

"Whereas, to prevent the committing of Murders, Robberies, Burglaries, Felonies, and other Crimes of a heinous Nature in the Night Season, in the Streets, Lanes, Passages, and Courts within the City of London, and the Liberties thereof, an Act of Parliament was made and passed in the ninth Year of the Reign of his present Majesty, for the better enlightening the Streets of the City of London: And whereas the Provisions made by the said Act have been found defective, and insufficient to answer the several Ends and Purposes thereby intended: Wherefore, and to the End the good Purposes intended by the said Act may be carried on, and fully executed, for the Safety and Preservation of the Citizens and Inhabitants of the said City, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, do most humbly beseech your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That such a convenient and sufficient Number of Glass Lamps, of such Sort and Fashion as the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the said City, in Common Council assembled, shall think proper and requisite, shall from Time to Time be erected, fixed, set up, and alighted, in such Parts and Places, within the said City or Liberties thereof, as to the said Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, in Common Council assembled, shall seem meet and expedient.

"And for defraying the yearly Charges of erecting, lighting, supplying, maintaining, and repairing the said Lamps, be it further enacted, That, from the twenty-fourth Day of June, one thousand seven hundred and forty-four, one or more Rate or Rates, Assessment or Assessments, shall twice in every Year (or oftner in every Year, if it shall be thought needful for that Purpose by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council assembled) be made, laid, and assessed in every Ward of the City of London, by the Alderman, Deputy, and Common Council, or the major Part of them, in each respective Ward, of and upon all and every the Person or Persons who do or shall inhabit, hold, occupy, or enjoy any Lands, Houses, Shops, Warehouses, Cellars, Vaults, or other Tenements, or any Part thereof, within the said City of London, or the Liberties thereof, who, by the Laws now in being, are liable to be, and from Time to Time shall be actually rated towards the Relief of the Poor in the respective Parishes within the said City of London, and the Liberties thereof, where such Person or Persons shall respectively live, or be Occupiers, in such competent Sum and Sums of Money as the said Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the said City of London, in Common Council assembled, shall, between the first Day of September and the twentieth of October, yearly and every Year, order and direct, in Pursuance of the Power herein-after invested in them, so as such Assessment or Assessments to be, from Time to Time, made by Virtue or in Pursuance of this Act, do not exceed in the whole the Sum of six Pence in the Pound in any one Year of the yearly Rent of the Houses, Messuages, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments of or belong-

And, in order to ascertain the Rates and Assessments to be raised and levied by Virtue of this Act, be it further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Aldermen of the several Wards within the said City of London, and their respective Deputies and Common-Councilmen for the Time being, to inspect the Books of Assessment of the Land-Tax within their respective Wards in the said City of London, and the Liberties thereof, and to take Copies thereof, if they shall think fit.

And that, in Case of any Complaint relating to Assessments to the Court of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the said City, who are hereby impowered and required to receive such Complaint, and from Time to Time to summon before them and examine Witnesses thereon, on Oath, and with all convenient Speed to hear and determine every such Complaint; and the Matter of any such Complaint shall, on hearing thereof, be adjudged by the said Court to be true, the said Court shall thereupon, from Time to Time, order the Deficiency which shall be occasioned in every such Ward, by such Neglect or Omission as aforesaid, to be rated and assessed in the next Year's Rate or Assessment, as shall be made in every such Ward, over and besides the ordinary Rate or Assessment to be made for or in Respect of such Ward for such the said next Year, in Pursuance of this Act.

It also enacts, That Houses let into Tenements shall pay to the Lamps; that the Assessments shall be levied by Distress and Sale, and allowed the Tenant in his Rent.

And forasmuch as it is reasonable that all publick Buildings (Hospitals excepted) should be rated and assessed in a due Proportion, towards the better Lighting the said City and Liberties thereof, it was further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Alderman of the Ward of Cassle Baynard, with the Advice and Consent of his Deputy and Common-Councilmen, or the major Part of them, at his and their Discretions, to rate and assess the Cathedral Church of St. Paul; and also for the Alderman of each respective Ward where such other publick Buildings respectively do stand and are situate, by and with the Advice and Consent of his Deputy and Common-Councilmen, or the major Part of them, at his and their Discretions; and they are hereby required in like Manner to rate and assess all Parish-Churches, Church-Yards, Chapels, Meeting-Houses, (so as such Rate or Assessment on the said Meeting-Houses do not exceed the Sum of six Pence in the Pound on the annual Value, or on the Rack-Rent thereof, where the same are held at such Rent) Schools, Inns of Court, Halls, Societies, Markets, Warehouses, Vaults, and Cellars, and all other publick Buildings whatsoever, situate, standing, lying, and being within their respective Wards, towards the erecting, lighting, maintaining, and repairing the said Lamps; Regard being by them always had to the Number of Lamps which shall be found necessary for the lighting the same. And that the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and all and every the respective Church-wardens and Chapel-wardens of the several Parish-Churches and Chapels, and the respective head Officers, Masters, Wardens, President, Principal, Treasurer, and Governors of all Meeting-Houses, publick Halls, Inns of Court, Societies, Schools, and the Occupiers or Proprietors of all other publick Buildings and Places, and the Owners or Occupiers of Vaults and Cellars; and the Farmers or Occupiers of all and every the Markets within the City and Liberties thereof, shall, and they respectively are thereby charged with, and required to pay their respective Rates and Assessments, which shall, from Time to Time, be so rated and assessed upon them; and, in Case of Non-payment thereof, every such Rates and Assessments shall and may be recovered from him and them, in the Manner and by the Means hereafter appointed for the Recovery of the Rates and Assessments hereby directed to be made.

Provided, the Dean and Chapter may cause sufficient Lights to be placed round the Fence of St. Paul's Cathedral, and be freed from the Assessment.

And all Persons aggrieved may appeal to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen; which Appeal shall be finally determined in ten Days, without Fee.

It was also enacted, That void Ground, and Places where no Inhabitants can be properly charged, shall be assessed on the Chamberlain; and that the Chamberlain may appeal to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, if he thinks the City aggrieved.

By this Act it was further enacted, That the Collectors shall be chosen on St. Thomas's Day, yearly, by the Wardmote; and, within twenty Days, shall take and subscribe the following Oath, or solemn Affirmation, being one of the People called Quakers, for the true and faithful Execution of the said Office:

I A. B. do swear, That I will, according to the best of my Skill and Knowledge, well and truly perform and execute the Office of a Lamp-Collector within this Ward.

Alderman and Common Council to contract for the Lamps, and their necessary Attendance.

"And that the Alderman in each respective Ward, by and with the Advice and Consent of his Deputy and Common-Councilmen, or the major Part of them, may yearly between the twenty-fourth Day of June, and the twenty-fourth Day of December, contract and agree with any Person or Persons, for the Number of Lamps necessary to be erected in their respective Wards, either on Posts or Irons, as they shall think best to order, and for the lighting, trimming, snuffing, cleansing, supplying, maintaining, and repairing such Number of Lamps upon the best Terms they can, so that no such Contract be made for a greater Number of Lamps in any Ward than shall be directed to be set up by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, in Common Council assembled.

Contracts for one Year only.

"Provided nevertheless, That such Contract be made for the Space of one whole Year, and no longer at one Time, and that all Contracts made for any greater or larger Sum, shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be null and void; and that no Alderman, Deputy, or Common-Councilman, during his Continuance in such Office, or any Person or Persons in Trust for him, them, or any of them, shall be concerned or interested in any Contract or otherwise, for lighting the said City, or any Part thereof, or for providing and fixing any of the said Lamps, Posts, or Irons, or other Materials necessary thereto.

"And it was further enacted, That the Chamberlain shall pay all Sums drawn upon him, in Discharge of Contracts, and enter all Receipts and Payments in a Book, to be inspected by any Citizen without Fee. That a Duplicate of all Assessments shall be left with the Chamberlain. And that the Surplusses arising by this Act, to be applied to paying the Debts remaining on the former Act.

Penalty for wilfully breaking the Lamps.

"It was further enacted, That if any Person or Persons shall wilfully or maliciously break, throw down, or extinguish any Lamp set up to light the Streets, or wilfully damage the Posts, Irons, or other Furniture thereof, every Person so offending therein, and being thereof convicted by the Oath of one or more Witness or Witnesses, before any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the City of London, shall for the first Offence forfeit the Sum of forty Shillings for each Lamp so broken, thrown down, extinguished, or otherwise damaged, and for the second Offence the Sum of fifty Shillings, and for the third Offence the Sum of three Pounds, to be recovered and levied in such Manner as in this Act is mentioned.

The Deficiency of one Year shall be carried over to the next.

"It was further enacted, That in case there shall be any Deficiency in any of the Assessments, so that the Charges of enlightening the said Streets and other Places cannot be fully satisfied, paid, and discharged in that Year, then and in such Case the Deficiency so happening shall be carried to the next succeeding Year's Rate or Rates, and shall be made good thereof; and if, at the Expiration of seven Years, it shall be found that any Surplus shall have arisen from the Money collected by Virtue of this Act, over and above what shall have been issued and applied in Pursuance hereof, such Surplus-Money shall remain in the Chamber of the said City of London, to be applied either in Aid of the Orphans Fund, or in Abatement or Diminution of future Rates and Assessments, or to be otherwise disposed of, to and for the Use and Benefit of the Citizens of London, as they, by any Act of Common Council, shall direct and appoint.

How the Surplus shall be applied, (if any) at the End of seven Years.

"And it was further enacted, That the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, at a Court of Common Council, to be held yearly between the first Day of September and the twentieth Day of October, shall order and direct what Rates and Assessments shall be made on the Inhabitants for the Purposes aforesaid, not exceeding the Rates and Assessments hereby directed to be rated and assessed.

The Mayor &c. at a yearly Meeting, shall order the Assessments.

"And that if any Collector shall neglect or refuse to bring in his Account to the Alderman of the Ward, or his Deputy, as often as demanded, he shall forfeit the Sum of ten Pounds, and the Sum of five Pounds for every twenty Days he shall detain the said Account, to be levied and recovered by such Ways and Means as herein after in this Act are provided.

Penalty on the Collector not accounting with the Alderman when demanded.

"And the Collector is to apply to the Lord-Mayor for Warrants of Distress, if the Assessments are not paid within thirty Days after they become due.

"And it was further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Lord-Mayor for the Time being, or any one or more of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the City of London for the Time being, to hear and determine any of the Offences which are made subject to and punishable by any Penalty directed to be levied by this Act; and such Justice or Justices of the Peace are hereby authorized and required, upon any Informations exhibited, or Complaint made in that Behalf, within ten Days after such Offence committed, to summon the Party or Parties accused, and the Witnesses on either Side, and after Oath, or Affirmation made by any of the Persons called Quakers, of the Commission of any of the Facts above-mentioned, by one or more credible Witness or Witnesses, to issue a Warrant or Warrants for apprehending the Party offending in the said City of London; and upon the Appearance, or Contempt of the Party accused in not appearing, upon the Proof of Notice given, to proceed to the Examination of the Witness or Witnesses, upon Oath or Affirmation as aforesaid (which Oath or Affirmation such Justice or Justices are hereby authorized, impowered, and required to administer) to give such Judgment, Sentence, or Determination as shall be just, and conformable to the Tenor and true Meaning of this Act; and where the Party accused shall be convicted of such Offence, either by View of the said Justice or Justices, or upon such Information as aforesaid, or on Confession of the Party accused, it shall and may be lawful

Thames.*

On the fourteenth of May, 1745, about twelve o'Clock at Noon, a most dreadful Fire happened at a Sail-maker's near St. George's Stairs, Shad-Thames, occasioned by a Man's carelessly leaving a Pot of Tar on the Fire, which boiled over, and instantly set a Workshop in a Flame, which communicated itself to the adjoining Buildings, and from thence (being close to the Thames) to the Berwick, Captain Kemp, a Ship of three hundred Tons, intended to carry Stores to Gibraltar, which was soon burnt down to the Water's-Edge, together with several Lighters; at the same Time it raged on the Shore with such Violence, that in less than three Hours between twenty and thirty Houses were burnt down.

*Alderman
Gibbon resigns his Gown.*

At a Court of Aldermen at Guildhall, on the eighteenth of June, Edward Gibbon, of Putney, Esq; Member of Parliament for Southampton, and Alderman of Vintry Ward, desired Leave of the Court to resign his Gown, on Account of the great Fatigue of the Office, and his constant Residence in the Country; which the Court was pleased to grant. He was chosen Alderman on March the twenty-fourth, 1742-3, on the Decease of Sir William Ross, Knt.

Crispe Gascoigne, Esq; (now Sir Crispe Gascoigne) Citizen and Brewer, was chosen Alderman of Vintry Ward, in the Room of the above-mentioned Gentleman.

Letter from the Secretary of State concerning a Rebellion.

On Thursday the fifth of September, the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor received a Letter, in his Majesty's Name, from the Duke of Newcastle, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, importing, That one of the Pretender's Sons had erected a Standard in Scotland, and that several Persons had assembled together in open Rebellion, &c. recommending, at the same Time, Care and Vigilance to keep every Thing quiet in the City; upon which a Court of Common Council was summoned to meet.

On the fifth of September, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London waited on his Majesty, to congratulate him on his safe Return; when Sir Simon Urling, Knt. the Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech:

"May it please your Majesty,

*Address of the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen
on the King's Return from Hanover.*

"The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London beg Leave, with Hearts full of Duty and Affection, to congratulate your Majesty upon your safe Arrival in Great-Britain: And they most humbly entreat your Royal Permission to embrace this happy Occasion of expressing their Joy upon the taking of Cape Breton by your Majesty's Forces; which they cannot but reflect upon as an Event of the utmost Consequence and Importance; as it opens to your loyal Subjects a most agreeable Prospect of extending their Trade and Commerce, of increasing the Wealth and promoting the Happiness and Prosperity of these Kingdoms. And "I am commanded to assure your Majesty, that they most firmly rely on your Majesty's Goodness, (which they have so long and so happily experienced) that nothing in your Power will be wanting to secure to this Nation the perpetual Enjoyment of this invaluable Acquisition.

"The many and great Blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's mild, just, and prudent Administration, must at all Times, on our Part, excite and demand the highest Expressions of Loyalty and Gratitude; but more especially at this, when we find ourselves alarmed with repeated Insults, and most unjustifiable Attempts against your Crown and Dignity.

"Warmed, Royal Sir, with these just and equitable Principles, these your faithful Subjects esteem it an indispensable Duty to omit no Opportunity of tendering your Majesty the sincerest Assurance of their Affection and Zeal for your Majesty's Person and Government; of their steady and invariable Attachment to our present most happy Establishment in Church and State; and of their unshaken Resolution to support and defend them at the Hazard of their Lives and Fortunes.

"They humbly beg Leave, most gracious Sir, to add their hearty Prayers, that the Divine Providence may guard and protect your sacred Person from all Dangers; and that (notwithstanding the restless and implacable Malice of our Enemies to disturb our Peace) your Majesty's Reign may be long and glorious over a Free, Happy, and Independent People; that the Imperial Diadem of these Realms may sit easy on your Royal Head; and that the Sceptre (as a Blessing to Posterity) may continue, to latest Generations, in your illustrious House."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"I return you my hearty Thanks for this early Mark of your Affection and Loyalty to me and my Government. The open Attempts of the Enemies to the Religion and Liberties of my Kingdoms, will, I doubt not, unite all, who wish well to them, in an hearty and seasonable Zeal for the Preservation of them; and I rely, under God, upon the Affections of my People for the Disappointment of these Designs. The City of London may always depend upon my Protection and Favour, and upon my constant Care for the Security and Extent of their Trade and Commerce. You may be assured nothing could give me greater Satisfaction than the Success of my Arms in the Reduction of Cape Breton."

His Majesty's Answer.

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand; after which his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on the Right Honourable Henry Marshall, Esq; Lord-Mayor, Samuel Pennant, Esq; Sheriff, and John Bosworth, Esq; Chamberlain.

On the seventh of the same Month, a Proclamation was issued for putting the Laws in Execution against Papists and Nonjurors, and for

tion against

commanding all Papists and reputed Papists to depart from the Cities of London and Westminster, and from within ten Miles of the same; and for confining Papists and reputed Papists to their Habitations; and for putting in Execution the Laws against Riots and Rioters, with the following Preamble:

"Whereas the eldest Son of the Pretender hath presumed, in open Violation of our Laws, to land in the North-West of Scotland, and has assembled a considerable Number of traitorous and rebellious Persons in Arms, who have set up a Standard in the Name of the Pretender, and, in an audacious Manner, have resisted and attacked some of our Forces, and are now advancing farther in that Part of the Kingdom of Great-Britain; and there is the greatest Reason to apprehend, that these wicked Attempts have been encouraged and may be supported by a foreign Power, &c."

On the tenth of September, the Right Honourable Sir Henry Marshall, Knt. Lord-Mayor, Sir Robert Baylis, Sir John Thompson, Sir John Barnard, Sir Daniel Lambert, Sir Robert Willmot, Sir William Calvert, Francis Cockayne, Esq; Thomas Winterbottom, Esq; Robert Alsop, Esq; and Crispe Gasseigne, Aldermen, attended by Sir Samuel Pennant, Knt. Sheriff, the Recorder, Common Council, and all the City Officers, went from Guildhall in sixty-nine Coaches to Kensington, and presented the following Address to his Majesty:

"To the King's most Excellent Majesty.

"The humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

"May it please your Majesty,

Address of the Common Council.

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, beg Leave to approach your sacred Person, and with the sincerest Joy to congratulate your Majesty upon your safe and happy Return to these your British Dominions.

"Permit us, most gracious Sovereign, at the same Time, with the warmest Sentiments of Loyalty and Affection to your Majesty, to express our grateful Returns to Heaven for the Blessing upon your Majesty's Arms in the Conquest of the Island and Forts of Cape Breton; a Place of the greatest Consequence to this Nation, as it secures to your Majesty's Subjects a free and uninterrupted Trade in America, and protects them from the Insults of a dangerous and inveterate Enemy. And we entirely rely on your Royal Patronage and Protection, to secure to these Kingdoms the perpetual Enjoyment of this invaluable Acquisition.

"The rash and daring Attempts of the professed Enemies of this Nation, in Favour of a popish and abjured Pretender, have filled the Hearts of us, your loyal Citizens, with the utmost Abhorrence and Detestation. And we beg Leave to give your Majesty the most solemn Assurances, that we will be ready upon all Occasions to sacrifice all that is dear and valuable to us in Defence of your Majesty's Royal Person and Family, and in Support of our happy Constitution both in Church and State."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for the seasonable Assurances you give, in this dutiful Address, of your Attachment and Affection to my Person and Government. The Abhorrence and Detestation which you shew, of the present Attempt of the Enemies of our happy Constitution in Church and State, are extremely agreeable to me. I take very kindly your Congratulations upon the Success of my Arms in the Reduction of Cape Breton. The City of London may always be assured of my utmost Endeavours for the Security and Extent of their Trade and Commerce."

His Majesty's Answer.

They were received very graciously, and all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

The Address of the Lieutenantcy of London had this Paragraph, different from any Thing in the two former:

"We are truly sensible of your Majesty's unwearied Endeavours, to promote the Happiness and true Interest of all your Subjects, and that your Majesty, in the carrying on the War abroad, has aimed only at preserving the Ballance of Power, and procuring to Europe a valuable and lasting Peace: And although a great Superiority in the Numbers of the Enemy, hath prevented that Success to your Majesty's Forces in Flanders, which their Bravery and Resolution, under the Command and Example of his Royal Highness the Duke, deserved, yet the Successes of your Majesty's Arms, particularly in the important Capture of Cape Breton, that Nursery of the Fleet, and Support of the Trade of France, and the many valuable Prizes made by other your Majesty's Subjects, since the Commencement of the War, have left the Enemy, amidst their Conquests, little solid Cause of Triumph."

Of the Lieutenancy.

They were received very graciously, and all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand. And his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Thomas Hankey, Esq; one of the Commissioners.

The next Day the Merchants of London, to the Number of near four hundred, went in about one hundred and forty Coaches from the Royal Exchange to Kensington, with a dutiful and loyal Address to his Majesty, of the same Nature with that from the City of London.

And, as the most effectual Way to support the publick Credit, above eleven hundred eminent Merchants, considerable Traders, and Proprietors of the publick Funds, with the utmost Alacrity (soon after) came to the following Agreement, for supporting the publick Credit, and subscribed their Names to it:

Resolution to maintain publick Credit.

"We, the undersigned Merchants, and others, being sensible how necessary the Preservation of publick Credit is at this Time, do hereby declare, that we will not refuse to receive Bank Notes in Payment of any Sum of Money to be paid

"paid us; and we will use our utmost Endeavours to make all our Payments in the same Manner."

Nor were the Clergy of the established Church, nor the dissenting Ministers, silent on this Occasion.

"The humble Address of the Bishop, Dean and Chapter, and Clergy of the City and Diocese of London."

*Address
of the London
Clergy.*

"May it please your Majesty,"

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Bishop of London, the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and Clergy of the City and Diocese of London, remember, with great Pleasure, the late Zeal and Unanimity of your Majesty's Subjects, in expressing their Repentment and Indignation even at the Preparations that were making by a neighbouring Power, in Favour of a Popish Pretender: And, after such late and publick Testimonies of the Duty and Loyalty of your Subjects, it might well be wondered, not only that the like Preparations should be renewed so soon, but carried further, into an actual Invasion; as if they still flatter themselves with the Hopes of a favourable Reception here: But our Wonder ceases, when we reflect upon the restless Spirit of Popery, which never neglects the least Prospect of enlarging its Borders; and upon the Pleasure which arbitrary Powers naturally take in destroying the Liberties of a free Nation; and the Readiness of People of desperate Fortunes to embark with them in any Enterprize, that gives them the least Hope of bettering their Condition.

"What the Strength is, that they rest upon from foreign Forces and Aids, is best known to themselves; but surely it would be the vainest Imagination that could enter into the Mind of Man, to suppose, that a Nation, who find themselves in secure Possession of their Religion, Laws and Liberties, under your Majesty's most mild, just and auspicious Government, should be disposed to receive a popish Pretender to your Throne; who has from his Infancy been bred and trained up amidst the highest Notions and Maxims of Superstition and Arbitrary Government; and whose Success, which God avert, carries in it such a frightful Scene of Calamities to the Souls, Bodies, and Estates of a Protestant and free People.

"Upon so important an Occasion, we should be greatly wanting to our Duty, if we did not make the most open and publick Profession of our inviolable Fidelity to your Person and Government, and of the firmest Resolution to defend and support both to the utmost of our Power, against this and all other Attempts, from what Quarter soever they come.

"And, for the more effectual preventing and defeating all such wicked Enterprizes,

"we take this Opportunity to assure your Majesty, that we will instill into the People committed to our Care, a just Abhorrence of Popery and the Doctrines of it, and excite them to a serious Reflection upon the Dangers and Difficulties in which these Nations were involved within the Memory of Man, by the illegal and violent Proceedings of a Popish Prince, for the overturning our Religion, and the establishing his own. We will also use our best Endeavours to make them truly sensible of the particular Obligation they are under, at this Time, to exert themselves in their several Stations, to prevent our falling again into the like National Dangers and Distractions. And, that they may be effectually armed against all the Arts and Delusions of the Enemy, it shall be our particular Care to fix and establish them in this great and fundamental Truth, That, under God, there is no Safety for the Religion and Liberties of this Country, but in the Protestant Succession, as settled by Law in your Majesty, and your Royal Family."

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for this seasonable Mark of your Duty and Affection. Your Influence and Example will greatly tend to animate my People with a due Zeal for the Support of my Government, and for the Defence of our most holy Religion. You may be assured of my constant Resolution to protect and maintain the Church of England, as by Law established."

Address of the Dissenting Clergy.

"As the Religious and Civil Liberties, the Happiness and Honour of the Nation, have been always your Majesty's unwearied Care, we cannot but detest and abhor the present unnatural and rebellious Attempt to impose on these Kingdoms a Popish and Abjured Pretender. We trust in God, that so wicked and desperate an Enterprize will issue in the speedy and utter Overthrow of these infatuated Traitors, and the still firmer Establishment of your Majesty's Throne, and the Succession in your illustrious Family, on which, under Divine Providence, the Enjoyment of all that is dear to us depends.

"Nothing, Sir, we are persuaded, within the Power of the Protestant Dissenters, will be wanting

Sir Richard Hoare.

On the thirty-first of October, the Right Honourable Richard Hoare, Esq; Lord-Mayor, the Aldermen, Sheriffs, &c. waited on his Majesty at St. James's, with their congratulatory Address on the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales of a Prince, when his Lordship had the Honour of Knighthood conferred upon him.

City alarmed by the Rebellion.

The Citizens greatly alarmed at the Success of the Rebels in the North, and dreading the fatal Consequences of a Civil War, should they fight their Way to the Neighbourhood of the Metropolis; took all necessary Precautions to maintain their just Rights and Properties against all Invasions and Force. The Militia was more carefully mustered, and commanded upon Duty Night and Day, and the City Gates were guarded to prevent a Surprise: Several Associations were entered into by the most substantial Citizens, and many of the young Gentlemen exchanged their Foppies and Pleasures for Martial Accoutrements, and the Exercise of Arms; and they who could not undergo that Fatigue, liberally contributed of their Fortunes towards the enlisting of Soldiers, and rewarding those who behaved well in the Field: The very Lawyers thought it time to exert their Courage; and, on the twenty-third of November, the Right Honourable the Lord Chancellor, Lord Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, Master of the Rolls, Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and the rest of the Judges, King's Serjeant, Attorney and Solicitor-General, King's Council, Serjeants at Law, Masters of the Bench, and Barristers of the several Inns of Court, being assembled together in Westminster-Hall, in their proper Habits, proceeded from thence with great Solemnity to St. James's, in a Train of near two hundred Coaches, and presented the following humble Address and Association to his Majesty, sitting upon the Throne, attended by his great Officers of State:

"To the King's Most Excellent Majesty,

"The humble Address and Association of the Lord
"Chancellor of Great-Britain, Lord Chief Ju-

"lice of the King's-Bench, Master of the Rolls,
"Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas,
"Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and the "rest of the Judges, King's Serjeant, Attorney "and Solicitor-General, King's Serjeants and "Council, Serjeants at Law, Masters of the "Bench, and Barristers of the several Inns of "Court.

"May it please your Majesty,

"Upon this our first Occasion of Addressing, we beg Leave to approach your sacred Person, with the same warm Sentiments of Duty, Loyalty, Gratitude and Affection to your Majesty, which have been already expressed with so just and universal a Zeal by all Orders and Degrees, who have any Regard for the Religion, Laws, Liberty, Trade and Prosperity of this Kingdom; and who are sensible, that those invaluable Blessings, which we have hitherto enjoyed under your Majesty's auspicious Government, can only be secured to us by the Stability of your Throne, and of the Protestant Succession in your Royal House.

Lawyers Address.

"We concur with the Voice of our Country, declaring an utter Detestation of the present wicked and most ungrateful Rebellion; convinced, that it is calculated to subvert our Religion and Liberties, to destroy our Commerce, and to render us a despicable dependent People. To this we in particular may add, that should this insolent Attempt prevail, it must at once extinguish those Laws, and that Constitution, which are the Glory of our own Country, and the Envy of Nations round us.

"As Protestants therefore who have at Heart the Preservation of our pure Religion, as Britons truly in Love with Liberty, and as Professors of that Law, which you, Sir, have ever made the Rule of your Government, we humbly beg Leave to assure your Majesty, that we will, and we do hereby associate and unite ourselves firmly, in the Defence of your sacred Person and Government, and of the Protestant Succession in your Royal Family. From this Union we will never depart, but will concur in every Measure conducive to the great End of it, at the Hazard of our Lives and Fortunes. For what is Life or Fortune, without the Enjoyment of our Religion and Laws!

"That the Almighty may bless and prosper your Councils; give you Victory over your Enemies, restore Tranquillity to your Realms, establish your Throne on the firmest Foundations, and perpetuate to latest Posterity our present Blessings, by a never failing Succession in your Royal Line, is, and ever must be, the ardent Prayer of,

"Your Majesty's most dutiful

"and loyal Subjects."

The above Address and Association were signed by the Right Honourable the Lord Chancellor, the Speaker of the Honourable House of Commons, the Judges of the several Courts, and by three hundred and sixty-nine Gentlemen of the Law.

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you very heartily for this affectionate Address and Association. The Duty and Zeal you express for my Person and Government, in this critical Conjunction, give me great Satisfaction, and your Influence and Example cannot fail to have a good Effect amongst my People. The Law of the Land has been always considered by me as the sure Foundation of the Prerogative of the Crown and the Liberties of the Subject; and you may depend on my constant Care to preserve that Law, and to protect and encourage the Professors of it."

They had all the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand: And his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Martin Wright, one of the Justices of the King's-Bench — James Reynolds, one of the Barons of the Exchequer; — Thomas Burnet, one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas; — Thomas Dennyson, one of the Justices of the King's-Bench; — Thomas Bootle, Chancellor to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; — Samuel Prime and Thomas Birch, two of his Majesty's Sergeants at Law; — and Richard Lloyd, one of his Majesty's Council.

Some of the Quakers, in Behalf of themselves, and others of their Persuasion, waited on Sir William Yonge, General Ligonier, and other proper Officers, with an Offer, at their Expence, to furnish the Troops employed in his Majesty's Service, in that severe Season of the Year in the North, with Woollen Waistcoats to be worn under their other Cloathing; which was well accepted.

On the third of December, at a Court of Lord-Mayor and Common Council, it was unanimously agreed to subscribe 1000 l. out of the Chamber of London, towards the Relief, Support, and Encouragement of such Soldiers as then were, or should thereafter be employed in his Majesty's Service during the Winter Season, towards the Suppression of the then present unnatural Rebellion. The Company of Stationers, Coopers, Drapers, Goldsmiths, and other Companies, paid several Sums into the Chamber of London, from 100 l. to 500 l. for the same good Purpose. The Lord Chief Justice Lee, the Master of the Rolls, and the Judges, subscribed 1200 l. into the Chamberlain's Office, on the same Account; and other Societies subscribed their respective Sums. In Pursuance of this laudable Scheme, the Committee of the Guildhall Subscription soon after contracted for 12000 Pair of Breeches, 12000 Shirts, 10000 Woollen Caps, 10000 Pair of Woollen Stockings, 1000 Blankets, 12000 Pair of Woollen Gloves, and 9000 Pair of Woollen Spatterdashies, to be immediately provided for the Use of the Army.

On the seventh, a Proclamation was issued, for putting the Laws in Execution against Jesuits and Popish Priests, and strictly charging all Judges, Justices of the Peace, Magistrates, Officers, and other his Majesty's loyal Subjects, to use their utmost Care and Endeavours to discover, apprehend, and bring to Trial all Jesuits and Popish Priests, (except such Popish Priests, not being his Majesty's natural-born Subjects, as by the Law of this Realm are permitted to attend Foreign Ministers) who should be found after the ninth of that Instant, in the Cities of London or Westminster, or the Borough of Southwark, or within ten Miles of the said Cities: And, for the greater Encouragement to the King's loyal Subjects in the discovering, apprehending, and bringing to Justice such Jesuits and Popish Priests, as should be found after the Day above-mentioned within the said Precincts, his Majesty was graciously pleased to promise a Reward of 100 l. to him, her or them, who should discover or apprehend, or cause to be apprehended, any such Jesuit or Popish Priest; which Sum was to be paid immediately upon Conviction of every such Priest; and in Case any Doubt might arise, who or what Person or Persons were entitled to such Reward, and in what Proportion, the same was to be settled by the Certificate of the Judge or Judges who should try such Jesuits or Popish Priests.

And on the eighth, at a Meeting in the Middle-Temple-Hall, an Association was subscribed by several Gentlemen of the Law, who agreed to form themselves into a Regiment, under the Command of the Lord Chief Justice Wilder, for the Defence of the Royal Family, in such Manner as his Majesty should think proper within the Cities of London and Westminster; to be denominated, "The associated Regiment of the Law, for the Defence of the Royal Family, and the Preservation of the Constitution in Church and State." And the next Day the said Lord Chief Justice received his Commission as Colonel of the said Regiment.

At Night several treasonable printed Papers, called the Pretender's Declaration, were dropped on the Parade in St. James's Park, and put under the Doors of Peoples Houses.

Upon the quick Progress of the Rebels Southward, a large Train of Artillery set out from the Tower for Finchley-Common, where a Camp was to be formed.

The Proclamation of the seventh of December greatly alarmed the Roman Catholics; and several Romish Priests, among whom was one James Hamilton, dreading the Consequences, the said Priest wrote as follows to the Venetian Ambassador:

"May it please your Excellency,

"I take the Liberty to inform your Excellency, that Justice de Veil had issued a Warrant against me to take me up, and that last Tuesday the House where I lodge was beset with Constables three or four Hours together; thereupon I sent two Gentlemen to Justice de Veil's House, who produced to him, and gave him to read, your Excellency's Protection; and he answered them, that at present he will have no Regard to your Excellency's Protection. The same Constables were here two or three Times the next Day, and had the Boldness to say to the People where I lodge, that they will take me even out out of your Excellency's House. I have therefore thought it my Duty to acquaint your Excellency with it, and most humbly beg, that you will continue me under your gracious Protection, and honour me with

This produced the following Letter:

A Letter written to his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State by the Ministers of the several Roman Catholick Princes and States residing here.

"My Lord,

Letter to the Secretary of State concerning the Proclamation against Popery.

"We, the under-written, have seen with equal Grief and Surprize, that the Law of Nations has been violated by the Clause of the Proclamation published the 6th of this Month, against Roman Catholick Ecclesiasticks, purporting, that the Foreigners only, in the Services of foreign Ministers, were excepted, and declared exempt from the Penalties pronounced by the said Proclamation.

"The Immunities and Prerogatives reciprocally due to the Ministers of all Courts, do not respect their own Persons only, but extend to those of all their Domesticks also, without Difference as to Number, or Employment, and still less as to their Countries.

"The Proclamation establishes a Distinction of Persons, by restraining the Privileges to those who are Foreigners, whereby this Proclamation equally violates our essential Immunities, and our most valuable Prerogatives. To which must be added, that as there is a Scarcity of foreign Priests in London; and as we did not provide ourselves with any, by Reason of the Custom, established from Time immemorial, of making use of those of this Country; the Distinction, or Execution of the Clause above-mentioned, would end in taking from us, or preventing the Exercise of Religion, which is allowed in all Countries, and is due to the Character, and to the Families of the Representatives of Princes in their own Houses.

"And altho' our Rights be firmly and fully established by the Law of Nations, we have besides the Satisfaction of knowing them to have been acknowledged by the Parliament, in the seventh Year of the glorious Reign of Queen Anne.

"That Act is solemn and celebrated, because, supplying the Defect of former Laws, it tends, as the Queen declares in her Letter to the Czar Peter, to prevent for the future all Offence or Violation of the Privileges, as well of Ambassadors, as of other foreign Ministers.

"The said Act expressly declares, that whosoever should dare to arrest, or sue at Law any of the said Ministers, or of their Servants, without the least Distinction, is guilty of a Violation of the Law of Nations.

"It is to be observed, that as that Act excepts only Tradesmen, and other Merchants, subject to Bankruptcy, who shall enter into the Families of Ambassadors or foreign Ministers, every other Person belonging to them, without Difference as to Nation, Employment, or Number, is to enjoy all their Privileges, and all their Immunities.

"Being therefore confident, that the committing so sensible an Offence against the Law of Nations, is very far from the King's Intentions, and the Prudence of his Ministers, we thought ourselves, at first, obliged to represent to your Excellency, by Word of Mouth, as we did, the above-mentioned Considerations, with our Desire that you would lay them, in a respectful Manner, on our Part, before his Majesty, to the End that he might be pleased to give clear and precise Orders for redressing the said Clause, as being directly contrary to the Immunities and Privileges, which all our Domesticks ought to enjoy, without Exception.

"But at the Time that we were expecting the Redress of the said Clause, and even before we had any Answer from your Excellency, a Domestick of the Envoy from the King of Portugal was violently arrested, and carried to the common Gaol where all Malefactors are confined, and put in Irons, where he is still detained.

"We cannot pass by in Silence the very aggravating Circumstance, that the Certificate, which proved him to belong to the Family of that Minister, having been produced to the Justice of Peace, he protested that such a Certificate did not protect any of the Nationals.

"Another Offence was committed, by the Orders given to arrest a Domestick of the Ambassador of Venice.

"The Justice having seen, and even acknowledged the Certificate of that Ambassador, declared, that at present he could pay no Regard to it. And what is more, the Constable declared besides, (as your Excellency will be pleased to observe by the inclosed Paper) that he would arrest that Domestick in the House of the Ambassador himself.

"All these Insults and Offences oblige us indispensably to demand, that, in Expectation of the Orders of our Sovereigns, the Domestick of the Portugal Envoy be immediately set at Liberty, and that the Magistrates may be directed to acknowledge what appertains to the Immunities and Privileges of the Families of foreign Ministers.

"In Expectation of the said Orders, we cannot abstain from demanding, moreover, that the audacious Behaviour of the said Constable may be severely punished; the Usage of many Ages leaving no Room to doubt, but that the Houses of Ministers ought to be respected in the same Manner as those of the Princes themselves, whom they represent; and it being also notorious, that in the most heinous Cases of State Criminals, no Prince would proceed to that Extremity, without having first demanded back from the Ambassador the Person accused.

"By these Considerations we find ourselves obliged to take another Step, still more indispensable than the former, viz. To prevent all Delay of redressing the Clause above-mentioned, and of giving us Satisfaction upon our Complaints herein set forth, by protesting all of us together, as we do by this
"Me-

"Memorial, and as is proper for the Preservation of our Rights, and of those of our Successors, against the said Clause, as also against every Thing that has followed upon it, or may follow, and against every other Consequence, 'till such Time as we can give an Account to our respective Sovereigns, and receive suitable Orders from them.

"Having Regard, particularly, in the present Situation, to the Intentions of the Princes whom we have the Honour to serve, we renew the Declaration made to your Excellency by Word of Mouth, and of our own Accord, viz. That if any one of our Domesticks were guilty of, or an Accomplice in, any Crime against the Government, we are ready to dismiss him from our Service, and to withdraw the Protection, as well as the Certificate, where-with he should be provided.

"We have the Honour to be with Respect,

"My Lord,

"Your Excellency's most humble,

"And most obedient Servants."

The above Letter, in French, was signed by Monsieur de Wafner, Minister Plenipotentiary of their Imperial Majesties; the Count de Haslang, Minister Plenipotentiary of his Most Serene Highness the Elector of Bavaria; and Monsieur de Champigny, Minister of his Most Serene Highness the Elector of Cologne.

Another Letter of the same Purport, in Italian, was signed by Signor Capello, Ambassador from Venice; Monsieur Gassaldi, Minister of Genoa; and Monsieur Caetano, the Portuguese Secretary.

A third, in the same Language, by the Chevalier Oforio, Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Sardinia; and Monsieur Pucci, charged with the Affairs of his Imperial Majesty for the Great Duchy of Tuscany.

Answer by his Majesty's Secretary of State.

"Whitehall, Jan. 7; 1745-6.

"Gentlemen,

The Secretary of State's Answer.

"I have not failed to acquaint the King with the Contents of the Letter which you honoured me with the 17th of last Month, wherein you complain very bitterly and even protest against what was inserted in the Proclamation published the 17th, with respect to Roman Catholic Priests, being his Majesty's Subjects, who should be in the Service of the foreign Ministers, insisting upon an unlimited Protection in Favour of all those whom you call by the Name of your Domesticks, without Difference as to Number, or Employment, and still less to their Country.

"I am to answer you, by his Majesty's Command, that he is very far from intending to infringe the Privileges and Immunities of Ambassadors, and other foreign Ministers, granted to them by the Law of Nations, and consistent with the Laws of this Country.

"Neither does the King think that they have been violated in the least by the said Proclamation.

"First, As to what concerns the Law of Nations, it is absolutely necessary that the "Privileges which it establishes, should be consistent with the internal Welfare and Security of the Countries where the Ministers reside.

"Now the Number of national Roman Catholic Priests, who swarm more than ever in this Town, was found dangerous to the State, especially at a Time of open Rebellion in Favour of a Pretender of the same Religion. Their secret Plotings against the King's Government, whereof his Majesty has many Indications; their injurious Discourses, nay even their Threats, and the daily Conversions which they make of his Majesty's Protestant Subjects to the Roman Catholic Faith (tho' by those very Conversions they are liable to the Punishment enacted by the Laws against Persons guilty of High Treason:) All those Circumstances together had given so great Uneasiness, that it was absolutely necessary to provide a Remedy against them.

"The Protection, therefore, which his Majesty owes to his own Subjects, would not allow of his any longer suffering Persons of that Kind, irreconcilable Enemies to his Government, to remain in the Heart of his Dominions.

"As to what you alledge, Gentlemen, concerning the free Exercise of your Religion in your own Houses, the King does not dispute it: The Law of Nations authorizes you to claim it.

"If the Question were only about private Chapels for your own Families, served by your Domestick Chaplains duly qualified; no-body would have any Thing to say against it.

"But is that really the Point in Debate? I appeal to your own selves.

"Are not open Chapels maintained, under Colour of publick Protection, with an enormous Number of Priests, out of the Houses of the Ministers, who lend their Names to them? Is it for the Use of the Minister's Family that Mass is therein celebrated from Morning to Night, or rather for the Sake of furnishing his Majesty's converted Subjects with Opportunities of being present at it against Law.

"Is there any Roman Catholic Country where such an Extension of their Privileges is allowed to Protestant Ministers? Is there any such Thing practised at Vienna, at Paris, or at Madrid?

"It is true, that this has been winked at in Times when the Religion of the Country was not openly and forcibly attacked.

"It does not however follow, that a natural Right is given up, because it is not vigorously exercised.

"I come, in the second Place, to the Laws of this Country, which are appealed to by the Roman Catholic Ministers, in their Letter, equally with the Law of Nations, they quoting therein the Act of Parliament of the seventh of Queen Anne; and I shall very readily allow them that it is, as they stile it,—A solemn and celebrated Act, supplying the Defect of former Laws,

" Laws, and tending to prevent for the future
" all Offence or Violation of the Privileges, as " well of Ambassadors, as of other foreign Mi" nisters.

" But it must be considered at the same Time,
" that this Act, as appears by the whole Tenor
" of it, relates solely to Law Suits, and Civil " Arrests upon account of Debts.

" And accordingly it was upon Occasion of " a foreign Ambassador's being detained for " Debts, that it was passed: And it was in that " Point only that it was found necessary, and " intended to supply the Defect of the former " Laws, inasmuch as there were none before in " being upon that Subject.

" Would any one infer from thence, that the " Intention was to authorize foreign Ministers
" to protect State Criminals, Disturbers of the " Peace, or Persons dangerous to Society, or suf" fered by the Government upon any Account
" whatsoever?

" Or can it be thought, that, in supplying the " Defect of the former Laws, it was meant to " abolish the most essential and fundamental ones
" of the Country.

" Amongst these last, there are none held
" in greater Veneration by a Protestant People,
" than those which forbid, under severe Penal" ties, the Celebrations of Mass by national " Priests. Of this Kind there are several Acts " of Parliament still in full Force, passed, re" peated, and even enforced at different Times,
" since the Beginning of the Reign of Queen " Elizabeth. I shall mention one, which does " not allow them to celebrate it even in the " Houses of foreign Ministers. It is the Act of " the eleventh and twelfth of William III. An Act
" not above eight or nine Years prior to that " above-mentioned of Queen Anne: It is therein
" expressly declared, That no Subject of the " King's, whether natural-born or naturalized,
" may celebrate Mass even in the Houses of " foreign Ministers; and that the Names and " Places of Nativity, even of the foreign Priests,
" whom they shall make use of, shall be re" gistered in the Office of the Principal Secretary
" of State.

" But suppose that this Act of Queen Anne
" were as unlimited as it is pretended.—The " Ministers do admit of one Exception to what " they call their Privileges, with Regard to " Tradesmen, and in general to such Persons as " may become Bankrupts: Will they not admit
" of any, when the Question is about the pub" lick Security, and the very Existence of the " Government? The Law of Nations can cer" tainly never be contrary to that, and can con" sequently give no Title to exclaim against a " Remedy, which has been necessarily made use " of to obviate the Dangers justly apprehended
" from the Popish Priests; and especially, if it
" be considered, that the Necessity of applying
" that Remedy was partly owing to the Abuses
" of the Indulgence of past Times by the pro" tested Priests.

" To conclude: The Roman Catholic Ministers
" may rely upon the King's Protection for their " Persons, for their Families, and for the Exer" cise of their Religion in their own Houses,

" according to the Law of Nations, and accord" ing to the Usage of all other Countries, with " Regard to Ministers of a different Religion
" from that which is established in the Country
" where they reside.

" The King does not pretend to subject fo" reign Ministers to his Ordonnances; but he " has a Right to require the Obedience of his " own Subjects to the Laws of their Country.
" He has not the Power to dispense with it, and " we know of no foreign Protection that can do it.

" His Majesty therefore has Reason to expect,
" that, upon this Exposition of the Reasons and " Justice of his Proceeding in this Affair, the " Roman Catholic Ministers will be pleased to " discharge from their Service every Popish " Priest who is a Subject of the King's; and " that they will for the future make use of fo" reign ones only; his Majesty not being able " to persuade himself that any foreign Powers in " Alliance or Friendship with him, as those are,
" whom you, Gentlemen, have the Honour to " represent, would insist, under the Name of " Privilege, upon Things prejudicial in the high" est Degree to the Government of the Country " where you reside on their Part, and contrary " to its antient and fundamental Laws, upon " which the King's Proclamation, which you " complain of, was built.

" As to what remains, if it be true, that an " Officer of Justice did make use of the Expre-" sions, imputed to the Constable, who is men" tioned in your Letter, with Regard to the " House of the Venetian Ambassador, you may " be assured, that his Majesty entirely disap-
" proves them; and that the necessary Inquiries
" shall be made, in order to cause such Satis" faction to be given to his Excellency, as shall " appear to be due."

On the twenty-third of January was held a Court of Common Council at Guildhall, when a Motion was made to petition the Parliament, for Leave to bring in a Bill to take off the Negative Voice of the Court of Aldermen, which was agreed to; and a Committee was appointed accordingly, of six Aldermen and twelve Commoners, to draw up the said Petition.

At the same Time, it was unanimously agreed to present his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland with the Freedom of the City of London in a Gold Box.

The King's Forces having obtained a complete Victory over the Rebels, aided by the French, beyond the Spay, and near Culloden, a small Village in the Highlands of Scotland, the City of London, in its corporate Capacity, addressed his Majesty as follows:

" To the King's most Excellent Majesty.

" The humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen,
" and Commons of the City of London, in Com-
" mon Council assembled,

" Most Gracious Sovereign,

" We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal
" Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and
" Commons of the City of London, in Com-

"glorious Success of your Majesty's Arms;
"which, under the Command of his Royal "Highness the Duke, has defeated the rebellious "Attempts of your deluded Subjects, assisted by "the most inveterate Enemies to the British "Constitution.

"Permit us, Sir, to return our most un-
"feigned Thanks to your Majesty, for the Ap"pointment of his Royal Highness the Duke
"to this important Service; whose Conduct "and Bravery, so early conspicuous, have, by
"the Blessing of the Almighty, produced this "our happy Deliverance; a Glory reserved for "one of your illustrious Family, endowed with "Princely Qualities, which render him amiable
"to those under his Command, and formidable
"to his Enemies.

"As Disgrace and Ruin have fallen on the "Heads of those wicked Persons, who have "been Confederates in this abhorred and de-"tested Rebellion, for the Subversion of our "happy Constitution, and depriving us of all "that is dear and valuable to us; so (we "trust) that by Divine Providence, from their "Disappointment and Destruction, Stability will "redound to your Majesty's Throne, Unity of "Affection to your Royal Person and Family,
"and Glory to your Government over a free and "happy People.

"May a Series of Success attend your Ma"jesty's Arms, until Tranquility be restored to "Europe, and your Subjects firmly established "in the Profession of their just Rights of Trade
"and Navigation.

"Give us Leave to add, that it shall be "always our firm Resolution, as it is our in"dispensable Duty, to oppose every Attempt "of the common Disturbers of the Peace of "Europe, against the Rights of your Crown,
"and that Happiness which we hope this Nation
"will ever enjoy under a Succession of Protestant "Princes of your Majesty's Royal House."

To which his Majesty returned the following most gracious Answer:

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this affectionate Address.
"The Satisfaction you shew in the Success of "my Arms against the Enemies of our happy
"Constitution, and in the Conduct of my Son
"the Duke, is a fresh and most agreeable Mark
"of your Duty to me and Zeal to my Govern-

"Ministers in and about the Cities of London "and Westminster.

"May it please your Majesty,

Ministers.*

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal
"Subjects, beg Leave to approach your Majesty's "Presence, to offer our sincerest and warmest "Congratulations for the happy Suppression of "that impious and unnatural Rebellion, which "hath been excited and carried on by ungrateful
"and perjured Men in Favour of an outlawed,
"abjured, and Popish Pretender.

"How just were our Fears at the unex"pected Progress of this wicked Attempt;
No. 55.

"and to what substantial Miseries must we "have been reduced, had God, for our Sins,
"permitted it finally to prosper! Your Ma"jesty's just and equitable Government, and "in this every dear and valuable Interest be"longing to us as Men, Christians, and Pro"testants, were the sacred Objects immediately "struck at, and the Sacrifices intended to be "made to the Ambition and Perfidy of France,
"the Superstition and Cruelty of the desperate
"and worthless Invader of your Majesty's Do"minions.

"The seasonable and entire Victory with "which God hath blessed your Majesty's "Arms, is attended with so many happy
"Consequences, not only to these Kingdoms,
"but to the Protestant Religion and the Liber"ties of Europe, as will never be forgotten,
"whilst we know how to value the inestimable
"Blessings it hath secured; and well deserves
"all the most grateful and publick Acknow"ledgments to Almighty God, that a People
"doomed to Ruin, and saved by him from De"struction, is capable of returning.

"The Choice of his Royal Highness the "Duke of Cumberland, to be at the Head of "your Majesty's Forces on this important Oc"casion, is the noblest Demonstration of your "Majesty's high Regard for the national Wel"fare, and that in your Royal Breast the pri"vate Affection of a Father is taught to give "Way to the publick Good, and will transmit
"the Remembrance of your Majesty to all fu"ture Ages, under the most honourable Cha"racter that a King can bear, the Friend, the "Father of your People. And how distin"guished is your Majesty's Happiness, that the "freeing these Kingdoms from Outrage, Sedi-
"tion, and Rebellion, was by Providence re"served for this illustrious Royal Youth, early
"treading the Paths of Glory, and formed un"der your great Example, to be a Scourge to "your Majesty's and his Country's Enemies,
"and a general Blessing to these favoured
"Kingdoms.

"That your Majesty may long live, be"loved and honoured by all your Subjects,
"feared and submitted to by all your Ene"mies, and be, under God, continued the "Guardian of Liberty, and the Protector of "true Religion: That all your Majesty's "Blessings may be hereditary, your Honours
"descend to his Royal Highness the Prince of "Wales, and the Succession to your Imperial "Crown never fail in your august Family:
"These, Sir, are our fervent Prayers, and of "all who wish well to themselves, or have any
"just Concern for the Safety and Happiness of "their Posterity."

To which Address his Majesty returned the following most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for your Congratulations on "the Success of my Arms, under the Command "of my Son the Duke against the Rebels. I "I am truly sensible of the Zeal which you have "shewed, upon all Occasions, for the Support of "my Government; and you may depend upon
"the Continuance of my Protection."

The following Address of the People called Quakers, was presented to his Majesty by Mr. Daniel Vandewall:

To George the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c.

The humble Address of the People called Quakers, from their General Assembly in London.

May it please the King,

Quakers
Address.

"We humbly beg Leave to approach thy Royal Presence with united Hearts, to congratulate thee upon the Deliverance of these Kingdoms from the late impending Dangers, with a Joy as sincere as the Occasion is signal. We beheld, with Grief and Detestation, an ungrateful and deluded People combined against their own Happiness, and desperately engaged in open Rebellion against thy Person and Government, wickedly attempting to subvert a free People to the Miseries of a Popish and Arbitrary Power.

"As none among all thy Protestant Subjects exceed us in an Aversion to the Tyranny, Idolatry, and Superstition of the Church of Rome; so none lie under more just Apprehensions of immediate Danger from their destructive Consequences, or have greater Cause to be thankful to the Almighty, for the Interposition of his Providence in our Preservation.

"A Preservation so remarkable makes it our indispensable Duty also to acknowledge the King's paternal Care for the Safety of his People, of which he has given the most assured Pledge, in permitting one of his Royal Officers to expose himself to the greatest Dangers for their Security.

"May we, and all thy faithful Subjects, demonstrate the Sincerity of our Gratitude for this signal Instance of the Divine Favour, by the deepest Humiliation, and by turning every one of us from the Evil of our Ways: And may those who are placed in Authority over us, by the Influence of their own Example, add Vigour to the Laws enacted for the general Suppression of Vice and Immorality; so may we have an assured Ground of Hope and Confidence in God, that he who hath hitherto helped, will never withdraw his Mercies from us.

"We earnestly beseech him, by whom Kings reign, and Princes decree Justice, that his Providence may ever attend thy Royal Person and Family, and make even the Efforts of thine Enemies conducive to the Establishment of thy Throne in perfect Peace, give Success to thy Endeavours for settling the general Tranquillity of Europe on a lasting Foundation, and grant that an uninterrupted Race of Kings of thy Royal Progeny may perpetuate the Blessings of thy Reign to our Posterity.

"Dated in London, the twenty-second of the third Month, called May, 1746."

To which Address his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer:

His Majesty's
Answer.

"I thank you for this Address of Congratulation. The just Concern you have shewn there-

"in for me, and my Family, is very agreeable to me; and you may always depend upon my Protection."

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Merchants, Traders, and others of the City of London. (Presented by Peter Burrell, Esq; attended by a Committee of Merchants.)

Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Merchants, Traders, and others of your City of London, with Hearts warmed with the sincerest Joy, beg Leave to approach your sacred Throne, and, amidst the general Satisfaction of a truly grateful People, to present our particular Congratulations upon the late happy Success of your Majesty's Arms, in the suppressing a most wicked and unnatural Rebellion.

"The fatal Blow thereby attempted to be given to the Trade and publick Credit of this Nation, gave us the greatest Concern; and it is with equal Pleasure we find that Blow averted, and Trade and publick Credit (which has so long flourished under your Majesty's auspicious Government) again restored and secured to us.

"We are highly sensible of the glorious Consequences which will redound to this Kingdom from this great Event; and, when we consider the heroick Part his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland has acted in it, we promise ourselves, that latest Posterity will enjoy the Fruits of this signal Victory, and a lasting Happiness be entailed upon your People, by a long Succession of your Royal Progeny.

"May your Majesty's invaluable Life be long preserved—May your Councils be prospered, to the full Detection of the traitorous Designs of your Enemies, and the Strengthening of our common Security—And may the Crown flourish in your Majesty's Royal House till Time shall be no more."

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

"I thank you for the repeated Marks of your Zeal and Affection for my Person and Government. Your Congratulations on the Success of my Arms, under the Command of my Son the Duke, against the Rebels, are very agreeable to me; and you may be assured, I shall always have at Heart the Welfare and Prosperity of the Trade of my Kingdom."

His Majesty's Answer.

Sir Richard Hoare, having behaved to the great Satisfaction of his Fellow-Citizens, during his Mayoralty in this Year of Troubles, after the Election of a new Lord-Mayor to succeed him, on the twenty-ninth of September, 1746, spoke to the Livery in this Manner:

"Gentlemen,

"I take this Opportunity, before I quit my present Station, to return you my hearty Thanks for having honoured me with so great a Trust, and for your Indulgence to me in the Execution of it; in which I can presume to claim no Merit to myself, any farther than that

Sir Richard Hoare's
Speech.

"my Endeavours have been sincere to discharge
"my Duty in such a Manner, as might best en"title me to your Esteem: Your Welfare, Gen"tlemen, has been my chief Concern; your Ap"probation will be my highest Honour."

At a Court of Common Council, held on Wednesday the eighth of October, it was unanimously resolved, That the Thanks of that Court might be given to the Right Honourable Sir
Richard Hoare, Knt. Lord-Mayor,

For his diligent Attendance to, and faithful Discharge of the Duties belonging to that High Office:

For his steady Attachment to the true Interest of his Country, during a Time of most imminent Danger:

For giving the Common Council frequent Opportunities of meeting together: And,

For supporting, on all Occasions, the Rights and Privileges of his Fellow-Citizens.

Also, at a Court of Lieutenancy, held at Guildhall, on Thursday the twenty-third of October, it was unanimously resolved, That the Thanks of that Court might be given to the Right Honourable Sir Richard Hoare, Knt. Lord-Mayor of the City of London,

For his prudent, impartial, and satisfactory Administration of Justice, in the Government
of it:

For the Zeal and Loyalty his Lordship had shewn to his Majesty, and his Family, by his constant Readiness, on every Emergency, to call that Commission together, by whose Advice and Assistance in the Disposition of the Militia, the Peace and Quiet of the City was preserved, uninterrupted, during the late unnatural Rebellion:

And, in a most particular Manner, for the Honour done that Court by his frequent Attendance to preside in it.

The Rebellion being quelled, great Numbers of those who had espoused the Pretender's Cause were arraigned for High Treason, condemned, and executed; amongst whom were the Earl of Kilmarnock and Lord Balmerino, on Tower-Hill, on the eighteenth of August, 1746; when, about Six in the Morning, a thousand of the Foot-Guards, a Troop of Life-Guards, and one of Horse Grenadier-Guards, marched thro' the City to Tower-Hill. They marched in upon the Hill from Tower-Street, and the Foot threw themselves into the Form of a Battledore, the round Part inclosing the Scaffold in the Center, and the Handle being formed by two Lines, extending to the Tower Gate, with a proper Space between for the Procession to pass. The Horse-Grenadiers and Horse-Guards were drawn up in the Rear of the Foot, with a Space between for the Commanding Officers to traverse the Lines. About Nine, the Sheriffs of London (attended by their Officers and the Executioner) came to view the Place of Execution, as also the House to which the Lords were to be conducted, two Rooms whereof were hung with Black. At Ten o'Clock the Block was fixed upon the Scaffold, and covered with black Cloth, with which also the Scaffold was hung; and some Sacks of Saw-dust were carried up to strew upon it. Soon after, the two Coffins were brought on the Scaffold, covered with black Cloth, with gilt Nails, &c. On the Earl of Kilmarnock's was a Plate with this Inscription, viz. Gulielmus Comes de Kilmarnock, decollatus. 18 Augusti, 1746, Ætatis sue 42. And that for Lord Balmerino had this Inscription on the Plate, viz. Arthurus Dominus de Balmerino, decollatus.

18 Augusti, 1746, Ætatis sue 58. In the mean Time the Sheriffs went to the Tower, and, after knocking at the Gate, were admitted; and the Prisoners, on their giving a Receipt, were delivered to them. Then the Procession appeared in the following Order: 1. The Constables of the Tower Hamlets. 2. The Knight-Marshal's Men and Tiptaves. 3. The Sheriffs Officers. 4. The Prisoners, attended by Mr. Foster, a Baptist Minister, and another Divine, and the two Sheriffs, Mr. Sherriff Blackford walking with the Earl of Kilmarnock, and Mr. Sheriff Cockayne with Lord Balmerino.
5. The Tower Warders. 6. A Guard of Musqueteers. 7. Two Hearses and a Mourning-Coach. When the Procession had passed thro' the Lines into the Area of the Circle, the Passage was closed, and the Horse that were in the Rear of the Foot on the Lines wheeled off, and drew up five deep behind the Foot, on the South Side of the Hill, facing the Scaffold.

The two Lords were conducted to the House above-mentioned, facing the Entrance on the Scaffold, where they continued about an Hour.
Whilst they were there, the Earl of Kilmarnock gave a Paper to the Rev. Mr. Foster, (who attended him from the Time of his Condemnation) and desired him to read it to the Sheriffs, which Mr. Foster accordingly did. Therein the Earl declared his deep Sense of the Greatness of his Crime, and his hearty Sorrow for it.

About Twelve the Earl of Kilmarnock, dressed in Black, walked from the said House to the Scaffold, attended by the Sheriffs, Mr. Foster, the other Divine, and some other Gentlemen.
When he came on the Scaffold he bowed to the People, the black Baize being turned up, that they might have a clear View of the Execution.
He talked with the Sheriffs and Officers attending for about ten Minutes; then having spent some Time in Devotion, he took the Bag from his Hair, and, by the Help of his Gentleman, pulled off his Coat and Neckcloth, and put on a Cap made of a Damask Napkin; after which he spoke to the Executioner, (who was dressed in White) gave him some Money, and saluted his Friends.
His Hair seeming to be in the Way, he put it under his Cap, and kneeled down twice in his Waistcoat, on a black Cushion, to fit his Neck to the Block. Then he stripped himself to his Shirt, had it tucked in from his Neck, kneeled down again, laid down his Head, and raised it again four or five Times. Being told, that his Arms were placed so, that they must be cut when the Blow was given, he desired they would place them properly. He spoke to the Executioner, on seeing him timorous, and desired him not to be afraid, but to do his Duty; for that it was not his Fault, but his own, that had brought himself to that Death, by rebelling against his King and Country. Then he laid down his Head again, and, in about five Minutes, gave the Signal, when the Executioner severed his Head from his Body at one Blow, except a Bit of Flesh, which was cut thro' after his Body fell upon the Scaffold.

fold. The Head was received in a Piece of scarlet Baize, put into the Coffin with the Body, and carried away in a Hearse to the Tower. He behaved with great Decency on the Scaffold, but was weak in Body, having been indisposed for some Days past. He was very penitent, and appeared melancholy at his unhappy Circumstances; notwithstanding, he bore his Death with the Conduct and Resolution of a Man: In short, his Behaviour was so much like the Christian and the Gentleman, that it drew Tears from thousands of the Spectators.

The Executioner was obliged to shift himself, by Reason of the Quantity of Blood that flew over him; and, in the mean Time, the Scaffold was cleaned: Which being done, the Sheriffs went for the Lord Balmorino, who soon came upon the Scaffold, dressed in his Regimentals, which was Blue faced with Red. He at first expressed Surprize at the great Number of People present, to whom he likewise bowed. He behaved with great Resolution, and much seeming Unconcern. He walked round the Scaffold, read the Inscription on his Coffin, said it was right, took the Axe in his Hand and viewed it, then laid his Head on the Block, and said it would fit very well. He then took a Paper out of his Pocket, and read it to the Sheriffs, containing a Sort of Justification of what he had done; he particularly endeavoured to clear himself from being of the Council that proposed the massacring of all the English Prisoners before the Battle of Culloden. He treated the Executioner with much Kindness, gave him Money, shook Hands with him, and forgave him. He enquired for the Warder of the Tower, to whom he gave his Wig, and also some Money. He then pulled off his Coat, and laid it upon the Coffin, and put on a Cap made of Scotch Plaid, saying he would die a Scotchman. He seemed in a Manner wholly undaunted, gave the Executioner Directions how to perform his Office, and, about two Minutes after, pulled off his Waistcoat, tucked down his Shirt, kneeled down, and, laying his Head on the Block, said, O God, preserve my Friends, forgive my Enemies, and be merciful to my Soul; and gave the Executioner the Signal before he was prepared for it. He received three Blows, the first partly on his Shoulders, the second went about two Thirds thro' his Neck, on which the Body fell down, and, being immediately raised, a third Stroke quite severed his Head from his Body, tho', to be sure, the second Blow effectually dispatched him, and we hope the first made him insensible. His Head was taken Care of, as Lord Kilmarnock's had been, and, together with the Body was put into the Coffin, and conveyed in the same Manner to the Tower, where they were both interred in the Evening.

The Number of Spectators at these Executions was incredible; the Hill, the Scaffolding, and the Houses being crowded with People, who in general behaved with great Decency during the whole Solemnity, and very little Damage or Mischief was done, either by Accident or otherwise.

The following was printed in the London Gazette, and other Papers, and is another Instance of the Superiority of the Civil Power to the Military:

B E N N, MAYOR,

London. At a Court of Aldermen, holden on Tuesday, the ninth Day of December, in the twentieth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord GEORGE the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c.

"This Court being informed by Thomas Winterbottom, Esq; Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs of this City, that Thomas Imrie, Thomas Phillips, and Michael Shewell, who have been some Time under Prosecution for riotously assembling themselves, with above twenty other Persons, before his Dwelling-House*, forcibly entering therein, and obstructing him in the Execution of his Office, as one of the Magistrates of this City, were attending to make their Submission for their Offence; but, as he looked upon that Insult to be an Indignity offered to the whole Magistracy of this City, more than to his own Person, he could not accept of any Satisfaction without the Concurrence of this Court; the said Thomas Imrie, Thomas Phillips, and Michael Shewell, were therefore ordered to be called in, and they having at the Bar presented the following Submission, which was read, the Court was pleased to receive the same, and to order it to be printed in the London Gazette, and some other of the publick Papers:

* To press a Man who took Shelter there.

"We, Thomas Imrie, late Lieutenant of his Majesty's Ship the Argyll, Thomas Phillips, Midshipman, and Michael Shewell, Foremast-Man, of his Majesty's Ship the Dorsetshire, do beg Leave, in this publick Manner, to assure the Magistracy of the City of London, that we are most sincerely sorry for having incurred their Displeasure, by insulting Mr. Alderman Winterbottom, one of their worthy Members, in the Execution of his Office. We shall ever preserve for them all the Respect and Honour, which we are sensible is most justly due to them. We acknowledge our Fault, and, in the most humble Manner, ask Pardon of the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, and the Worshipful the Court of Aldermen of the City of London, in general, and of Mr. Alderman Winterbottom in particular. And we do sincerely promise not to offend in like Manner for the future. As Witness our Hands this ninth Day of December, 1746.

Thomas Imrie,

Witness, J. Ford.

Thomas Phillips,

Michael Shewell."

On the twenty-fifth of November, at a Court of Aldermen held at Guildhall, Mr. Alderman Perry resigned his Gown, by an Instrument drawn up for that Purpose, with which the Court was pleased to acquiesce.

Alderman Perry resigns his Alderman's Gown.

Charles Ratcliffe, Esq; Brother to the late Earl of Derwentwater, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill in the Year 1716, being taken in a French Ship bound for Scotland with Fitz-James's Horse, and proved at the King's-Bench Bar to be the identical Person who had been convicted of High Treason, and condemned to die for the Rebellion in 1715, was also beheaded on the eighth of December this Year on Little Tower-Hill, whither two Troops of Life-Guards; and one Troop of Horse-Grenadier Guards, and a Battalion of Foot-Guards, marched about Eight in the Morning. The Horse lined the Way from the Scaffold to Iron-Gate, and the Foot, with some of the Horse, encompassed the Scaffold. About Ten the Block, covered with Black, with a Cushion, and two Sacks of Saw-dust, were brought up, and the Block fixed; and soon after the Coffin of the unhappy Gentleman, covered with black Velvet, and having eight Handles, but no Plate upon it, was placed on the Scaffold.

In the mean Time Mr. Alderman Winterbottom and Mr. Alderman Allop, the two Sheriffs, with their Under-Sheriffs, met at the Mitre Tavern in Fenchurch-Street, and from thence proceeded, the Under-Sheriffs in a Mourning-Coach, and the Sheriffs in their Chariots, to the lower End of the Minories, where they were met by their Officers, who marched before them till they came over-against the Victualling-Office, where they stopped; and then the Under-Sheriffs went down to the East Gate of the Tower, which is next to Iron-Gate; when, getting out of their Coach, they went up to the Gate, and, seeing the Warders thro' the Gate, they demanded Admittance to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Tower; upon which the Gate was opened, and they went in, and in about ten Minutes returned, and went into the Mourning-Coach again, which waited for them; and, in a short Time after, the Prisoner was brought in a Landau out at the East Gate, and then the Procession began as follows: First, the Sheriffs Officers, then the Mourning-Coach in which were the two Under-Sheriffs with their Wands; then the Landau with the Prisoner, and the Officers of the Tower who had him in Custody; the Landau was guarded by a Party of Foot-Guards, with their Bayonets fixed. Thus they proceeded up Little Tower-Hill, till they came to the Victualling-Office, where the Sheriffs waited to receive him, and where the Prisoner got out of the Landau, and was put into a Mourning-Coach, which carried him about an hundred Yards further, to a Booth built on Purpose to repose himself in, and hung with Black, at the Foot of the Stairs of the Scaffold. When he got out of the Landau, seeing some Gentlemen he knew, he paid his Compliments in a very genteel Manner, and smiled; and, coming to the Side of the Mourning-Coach, he asked the Officers who stood to wait, whether he was to go in there? And being answered that he was, he only said, It is well, and stepped in directly. Being come to the Booth, attended with the Sheriffs, he staid there about ten Minutes, which he spent chiefly in his Devotions, speaking but very little to any Body. He then walked up upon the Scaffold with great Calmness, being dressed in a scarlet Coat, with Gold Buttons, the Sleeves faced with black Velvet, scarlet Waistcoat, trimmed with Gold Lace, a scarlet Pair of Breeches, and white Silk Stockings, and his Hat with a white Feather round it. He soon asked for the Executioner, who coming to him, he took a Parcel of Gold out of his Pocket, and gave it him, saying, I am but a poor Man, there's ten Guineas for you; If I had more I would give it you; and I desire you to do your Execution so as to put me to the least Misery

No. 55.

you can. He then kneeled down before the Block; and, putting his Hands together, made a short Prayer, when two of the Warders of the Tower came to him, one of each Side of him; one of them took off his Wig, and the other put a white Cap upon his Head; and then the unhappy Criminal rose upon his Legs, and, with their Assistance, pulled off his Coat and Waistcoat. He then turned about and took his Leave, in a respectful Manner, of the Sheriffs, and then untied the Collar of his Shirt, which was fastened with a black Ribbon, and began to tuck the Collar of his Shirt down, but, not being able to reach far enough behind, he desired the Executioner to do it for him, which he did accordingly. Then, after saying a short Prayer to himself; and crossing himself several Times, he laid his Head down upon the Block, and desired the Executioner to strike far enough, adding these his last Words, When I spread my Hands thus, do you take my Head off. Which Signal he gave in less than half a Minute, when one Stroke of the Ax severed his Head, except a Bit of Skin, which was cut asunder at two or three Chops. The Body then fell down upon the Scaffold; and the Executioner, searching his Pockets, found half a Guinea, a silver Crucifix, and his Beads. Four Undertaker's Men stood ready with a Piece of red Baize to receive the Head as it fell off, and the Body and Head were put into the Coffin, and conveyed in a Hearse to the Nagg's-Head in Gray's-Inn Lane, and soon after interred at St. Giles's in the Fields.

Thus fell this unhappy Man, aged fifty-three, thirty Years, within three Days, after his Escape out of Newgate; Part of which Time he spent with the Pretender in Italy, but the greatest Part in France, where he married the Lady Newburgh, Relict of Levingston Lord Newburgh, a Scots Nobleman, by whom he had a Son, who was some Time Prisoner with him in the Tower, and was thought at first to be the Pretender's younger Son. He was the youngest Brother of James Earl of Derwentwater, who was beheaded in 1716, they both being taken at Preston. They were the Sons of Sir Francis Ratcliffe by the Lady Mary Tudor, natural Daughter to King Charles II. by Mrs. Mary Davis.

Mr. Ratcliffe behaved with much more Decency at his Execution, than at the Bar of the King's-Bench, when the only Trial was, whether he was the same Person who was condemned for the Rebellion in 1715, and made his Escape out of Newgate: For there he behaved himself in an indiscreet Manner, and treated the Justices with Contempt; which, to be sure, did him no Service: But at his Execution he was calm and sedate, and suffered with much Composure and Resignation.

An Hospital was founded this Year by Subscription between London and Islington, for relieving poor People afflicted with the Small-Pox, and for Inoculation. This was the first Foundation of the Kind in Europe, and consisted of three Houses; one in Old-Street, for preparing Patients for Inoculation; another in Frog-Lane, Islington, when the Disease appeared; and the third in the lower Street Islington, for Patients in the natural Way.

A Distemper among the black Cattle having raged for some Time, his Majesty in Council was pleased to make the following Variations and Additions to his last Orders, concerning the distempered Cattle, viz.

Orders concerning distempered Cattle.

1. That no Ox, Bull, Cow, Calf, Steer, or Heifer, whether fat or lean, should pass the Humber or Trent, Northward, from the nineteenth Instant to the twenty-seventh of March next; for which Purpose, the Justices are ordered to cause a strict Watch to be kept on all Bridges, Fords, &c. upon the said Rivers.
2. That where lean Cattle are put out to Pasture, and that not sufficient to supply them, the Owners may remove them to some other, tho' in a different Parish; but a Certificate must be first obtained, that they are in Health, agreeable to his Majesty's Order on the seventh of December last.
3. That the Prohibition laid by his Majesty's aforesaid Order, with Regard to the Removal and Sale of Calves, be taken off from all fatted Calves, provided they are free from any Distemper; Proof whereof must be made, pursuant to the aforesaid Order.
4. That in all Cases where Cattle are stopped, pursuant to the aforesaid Order, during the Examination of the Offenders, the Churchwardens are empowered to put the said Cattle under the Care of a proper Person; and if it appears that the Cattle are such as are prohibited to be removed, and are not infected, then the Cattle shall be drove back the same Way from whence they were brought.
5. That instead of requiring the Oaths of two Constables, &c. to the Value of Cattle shot, and buried, pursuant to his Majesty's “ Order of the twelfth of March last, to entitle the Owners to the Reward, the Oath of one shall be sufficient, where two cannot be had; but the Owner must call a credible Witness, who is to make Oath, as is directed by the said Order to be made by the said Constables, &c. the Credibility of which Witness must be certified by the Churchwardens, &c. of the Parish where he is an Inhabitant.”

And the same was publickly read in all the Markets of London, Westminster, and Southwark.

At this Sessions of Parliament the Bill for naturalizing foreign Protestants being again attempted, the City petitioned the Hon. House of Commons against it, on the fifth of February, with good Effect.

City Petition against naturalizing Foreigners.

On the ninth of April, 1747, Lord Lovat, another Scotch Nobleman concerned in the late Rebellion, was, pursuant to his Sentence by the House of Lords, beheaded on Tower-Hill; of whom, and his Execution, we have recorded the following Account:

From the Time this noble Lord received the Sentence justly due to his Crimes, to Friday the third Instant, when the Warrant for his Execution was notified to him, he remained uncertain as to his Fate, and really seemed indifferent to live or die; for, tho' he was pressed by his Friends to throw himself at his Majesty's Feet and petition for Mercy, he absolutely refused it, saying, he was so old and infirm, that his Life was not worth asking. However, he was by their Intercession prevailed on to petition for a Pardon for his eldest Son, a Prisoner in the Castle of Edinburgh, who had been drawn into the Rebellion by his Advice, or rather forced into it by his imperious Command, as appeared by the Witnesses for the Crown at his Trial. But even in this Petition he refused to express himself in such Terms as he thought abject and mean, or in any Terms which he thought inconsistent with his real Principles.

Behaviour, Execution, and Interment of Simon Lord Fraser of Lovat.

As his Lordship had been brought up in the Protestant Religion, but had afterwards declared himself a Roman Catholick, while he was an Exile in France; and as he had taken the Oaths to the Government, and professed being again a Protestant, ever since his Return to his native Country in the Year 1715, it was uncertain what Religion he would die of, till after he was told of the Warrant being come for his Execution; and in this Interval he wrote a most affectionate Letter to his eldest Son, full of Religious and Christian Admonitions, but not one Word in Favour of the Popish, or any other particular Sect of Christians. But, when the dead Warrant was intimated to him, he then thought fit to throw off the Disguise in which he had appeared for above thirty-one Years last past, and desired that one Mr. Baker, a Romish Priest attending the Sardinian Ambassador, might have Leave to come to him, for that he was and would die a Roman Catholick; so that with Respect to Religion he now certainly became serious and in earnest, because nothing but Conscience could prompt him to make a publick Profession of that Religion, it being one of the greatest Injuries he could do to the Cause he had embraced, and for which he was going to suffer.

How-

However, in every other Respect his Lordship not only continued to appear undaunted, but preserved his jocose, satirical Temper to the very last Moment of his Life. He received the Notice of his Death-Warrant without the least Alteration in his Countenance, thanked the Gentleman who brought it for the Favours he had done him, and drank a Glass of Wine to his Health; after which he sat down with him, entertained cheerfully a Conversation for some Time, and drank Part of a Bottle of Wine. Next Morning being informed of the Report, that an Engine was to be made for his Execution like that called the Maiden, provided many Years ago for beheading State-Criminals in Scotland, he commended the Contrivance, for, says he, as my Neck is very short, the Executioner will be puzzled to find it out with his Axe; and, if such a Machine be made, I suppose it will get the Name of Lord Lovat's Maiden.

On Monday the sixth, the Major of the Tower came to see him, and asked him how he did. Do, says he, waby, Sir, I am doing very well; for I am fitting myself for a Place where hardly any Majors go, and very few Lieutenant-Generals. Next Morning he desired one of the Warders to lay a Pillow upon the Floor at the Feet of the Bed, that he might try if he could properly perform his Part in the Tragedy in which he was next Thursday to be the chief Actor; and after having kneeled down, and placed his Head upon the Foot of the Bed, he rose up and said, By this short Practice, I believe, I shall be able to act my Part well enough.

This Day a most extraordinary Accident was occasioned by the Preparations for his Lordship's Execution. A large Quantity of Powder having been carried to Mr. Trye's Suttling-House under the Tilt-Yard Coffee-House at Whitehall, to be distributed to the Detachment of Soldiers ordered to attend this Lord's Execution on the Thursday following, as they were delivering this Powder to the Serjeants, it was set on Fire, as was said, by the Tobacco-Pipes of some of those smoking in the Room; by which the front Wall of that Room, and of the Coffee-House above it, was blown into the Street, and great Part of the Coffee-Room untiled. Several People in the Suttling-Room were very much hurt, but by good Luck it happened when there was no Company in the Coffee-Room, so that we have not heard of any one's being killed by the Accident.

On Wednesday his Lordship waked about two o'Clock in the Morning, and prayed most devoutly for some Time, after which he went to sleep again, and slept till between Six and Seven, when he called for the Warder to dress him as usual; and, during the remaining Part of the Day, he not only talked pertinently and fedately with some Gentlemen that came to see him, both about his own private Affairs and the publick Affairs of the Nation, but cracked his Jokes merrily with the Warders that attended him, the Barber that shaved him, and almost every one that came near him. After eating a hearty Dinner, he smoked a Pipe, according to Custom, and then sent Orders to the Cook to get some Veal roasted, that it might be ready to mince for his Breakfast in the Morning.

On Thursday the ninth, being the fatal Day, his Lordship waked about Three in the Morning, and, as he had done the Morning before, prayed in a very devout Manner for some Time. At Five he got up, called for a Glass of Wine and Water as usual, and sat reading in his Chair for two Hours without Spectacles; for, notwithstanding his great Age, he had never made use of any, which was owing, it is supposed, to his sober and regular Way of living; for tho' he often drank a cheerful Glass, yet he very seldom tasted Wine without Water, and never drank to a great Excess. All this Morning he behaved with his usual Gaiety, without once discovering the least Sign of Fear or Uneasiness, as appeared by several Incidents. At Eight he desired his Wig might be sent to the Barber, that he might have Time to comb it out in the genteelst Manner; and having desired the Warder to get him a Purse to put the Gold in which he designed for the Executioner, he added, Let it be a good one, lest the Gentleman should refuse it. Upon the Warder's bringing two to chuse, he did not approve much of either; however, he chose one, and said, Tho' it be none of the best, it is a Purse that no Man would refuse with ten Guineas in it. Between Eight and Nine he called for a Plate of minced Veal, eat heartily, and then having called for some Wine and Water, he drank the Healths of several of his Friends.

A little after Ten this Morning, a most terrible Accident happened on Tower-Hill: One of the largest Scaffolds, on which there was reckoned to be above four hundred People, fell down at once, without giving the least Warning, which furnished a Spectacle more dreadful and melancholy than that which the unhappy Sufferers had come to gaze at. To see such a Number of People falling from a great Height, and tumbling over one another, was most shocking to behold: Then to hear the Shrieks of the Women falling, and the Groans of those already buried under the Ruins, could not but affect the most obdurate Heart; and many who had the good Luck not to be Sharers in the Misfortune, were so shocked with the Sight of this Catastrophe, that they went off directly, without staying to see that which their ridiculous Curiosity had carried them there to see. By this Accident it was reckoned, that about twenty Persons were either killed on the Spot, or died soon after of the Wounds and Bruises they received; and a much greater Number had some of their Limbs broke, or were sorely bruised in some Part of their Body.

As a Detachment of the Guards, consisting of three hundred Horse and one thousand Foot, had, early that Morning, taken Post on Tower-Hill to guard the Execution, under the Command of the Right Hon. the Lord Carpenter, this Accident gave his Lordship an Ocasion to manifest his usual Humanity and Benevolence: He immediately ordered a Body of sixty Men to surround the Place, and employed as many Soldiers as could be spared from the other Post to remove, with the utmost Dispatch, the Scaffolding from off the People, by which many Lives were saved.

This Morning Mr. Alderman Alsop, one of the High Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, (the other being ill) attended by the two Under-Sheriffs and the the proper Officers, with the Executioner, went from the Mitre Tavern in Fenchurch-Street, to the House hired for them on Tower-Hill. At ten o'Clock the Block was fixed on the Scaffold, and his Lordship's Coffin brought, which was covered with black Cloth, adorned with Coronets, &c. and with this Inscription on the Lid, Simon Dominus Frazer de Lovat, decollat. April. 9, 1747, Ætat. sue 80. At eleven o'Clock the High Sheriff, with his Attendants, went to the Tower, where they knocked at the Gate, and demanded the Prisoner; and when it was notified to his Lordship, that the Sheriff was come to demand him, he desired the Company to withdraw a little, till he put up a short Prayer. In a few Minutes he called them in again, and said, Gentlemen, I am ready; and, after having got down one Pair of Stairs, being invited by General Williamson to rest himself a little in his Apartment, his Lordship, upon his Entrance, paid his Respects, in a very polite Manner, to the Ladies, then to the Gentlemen, and talked as freely, and with as little seeming Concern, as if he had been come to an Entertainment. After getting down the other Pair of Stairs, he was put into the Governor's Coach, and carried to the Tower-Gate, where he was delivered to the High Sheriff attending, upon his Receipt.

From the Tower-Gate he was conducted in another Coach to a House, from the upper Rooms of which there was a Passage to the Scaffold, and the Rooms were lined with black Cloth, and hung with Sconces for his Lordship's Reception, which dismal Prospect produced no Alteration in his Lordship's Countenance. After delivering a Paper to the Sheriff, he told him that he might give the Word of Command when he pleased, For, says he, as I have been an Officer in the Army many Years, I have been accustomed and am ready to obey Command; and, after having said a short Prayer on his Knees, and drank a little burnt Brandy with Bitters, he was conducted up to the Scaffold.

As his Lordship was going up the Steps to the Scaffold, he looked round, and, observing such a prodigious Crowd of People upon the Hill, he said, he wondered there should be such a Bustle about taking off an old grey Head, that could not get up three Steps without two Men to support it; and after being upon the Scaffold, and observing one of his Friends very much dejected, he clapped him upon the Shoulder, saying, Chear up thy Heart, Man; I am not afraid, why shouldst thou? Then he gave the Executioner the Purse with ten Guineas in it, recommending to him to act his Part handsomely; For, says he, if you do not, and I am able to rise again, I shall be very angry with you; and, after examining the Axe, and viewing his Coffin, he sat down in the Chair provided for him, and repeated this Line from Horace:

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.

As also this from Ovid:

Nam genus et proaves, et quæ non fecimus ipsi, Vix ea nostra voco.

Then, after saying a short Prayer, and delivering his Cloaths and Things to his Friends, he kneeled down at the Block, telling the Executioner, he would say a short Prayer, and then drop his Handkerchief as a Signal for him to do his Business. Having placed himself too near the Block, the Executioner desired his Lordship to move a little farther back, which he did, and, after having placed his Head and Neck properly upon the Block, in half a Minute he dropped his Handkerchief, and the Executioner, being now, it seems, become expert at his Business, severed the Head from the Body at one Blow, both of which were put into the Coffin and carried in a Hearse back to the Tower.

As his Lordship had desired, and his Friends had obtained Leave, that his Corpse might be carried down to Scotland, to be interred with his Ancestors in the Family Tomb, in the Church of Kirkhill, near his Seat there, Mr. Stephenson, the Undertaker employed, came about four o'Clock, and had the Corpse delivered to him, which he carried to his House near Exeter-Change, where the Head was sewed to the Body, and then the Corpse was put into a leaden Coffin, which was foldered up for the Purpose before-mentioned; but, upon second Thoughts, it was apprehended that the Funeral Procession thro' the greatest Part of Scotland might spread Disaffection, and perhaps raise Sedition in that Country; therefore, the Saturday following, the Secretaries of State sent an Order to Mr. Stephenson, forbidding him to remove the Corpse till farther Orders. On Wednesday a fresh Order was sent him, directing him to convey the Corpse to the Tower of London, to be there interred; and, on Friday the seventeenth Instant, it was carried thither and interred accordingly.

On the first of May, the Foundation-Stone for a Chapel to the Foundling-Hospital, in Lamb's-Conduit Fields, was laid by Theodore Jacobson, Esq; on which was a Plate with the following Inscription:

Chapel of the Foundling-Hospital.

The Foundation of this Chapel was laid the first Day of May, Anno Dom. 1747, and in the twentieth Year of the Reign of his most sacred Majesty George II.

A great Concourse of the Nobility and Ladies of Distinction attended, and were at the Breakfasting given by the Governors; after which a Collection was made, which amounted to upwards of one thousand Pounds.

About this Time a Perpetuity passed the Great Seal, incorporating the Bishop of London, &c. into one Body Politick, for the Relief of poor Clergymens Widows and Children within the Diocese of London, and to hold in mortmain Lands of one thousand five hundred Pounds per Ann. Value.

As there were great Struggles in several Places about the Elections, this happened to be the Case in the City of London, where the Merchants List and the Aldermens List made a great Noise. The Election came on the thirtieth of June, when Sir John Barnard, Sir William Calvert, Slingby Betbell, and Stephen Theodore Janßen, Esqrs. were declared to have the Majority of Hands: But a Poll was demanded in Favour of Sir Daniel Lambert, Sir Robert Ladbroke, and Sir Henry Mayhew; which began on the first Instant, when the last Gentleman declined, and ended on the eighth, when the Numbers stood thus :

Sir John Barnard	3781
Sir William Calvert	3806
Slingsby Betbell, Esq.	3146
Steph. Theodore Janssen, Esq.	3008
Sir Daniel Lambert	2530
Sir Robert Ladbroke	1986

Sir John Barnard being in both Lists, the Contest lay between Sir William Calvert, Slingsby Betbell, and Stephen Theodore Janssen, Esqrs. on the Merchants Interest, and Sir Daniel Lambert and Sir Robert Ladbroke, supported by the Aldermen and Common Council.

High Tide. This Day there was a very extraordinary Spring-Tide, when Teoley-Street, Barnaby-Street, and all that Neighbourhood, were so much overflowed, that the People were carried from one Place to another in Boats.

An Hurricane. On the first of December, and some following Days, there were several violent Hurricanes, which did great Damage both by Land and Water, especially the latter; several Boats were overfet in the River Thames, and many Persons drowned.

Two extraordinary Cases. And, on the seventeenth, two very extraordinary Cases were communicated to the Royal Society; the one of a Woman who spoke articulately, and sung very prettily, after having been deprived of the whole Substance of her Tongue by a Disease: The other of a Child (which was produced) that had been taken out of a Woman after her Death, which had lain within her sixteen Years, during which Time she had four Children, all born alive.

Bill of Mortality. From the tenth of December, 1746, to the fifteenth of December, 1747, there were, within the Bill of Mortality, christened, Males 7737, Females 7205, in all 14942. Buried, Males 12417, Females 13077, in all 25494. Decreased in the Burials this Year 2663.

A.D. 1748 On the twenty-eighth of January was a general Meeting of the Subscribers to the late Guildhall Subscription, for the Relief, Support, and Encouragement of the Soldiers employed in suppressing the late Rebellion; when they agreed to the Recommendations of their Committee, to dispose of the remaining Balance of the Subscription, by allowing one thousand Pounds to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, one thousand Pounds to St. Thomas's Hospital, one thousand Pounds to the Hospital at Bath, and three hundred Pounds to be equally divided between the Infirmaryes of London, Westminster, and Hyde-Park-Corner.

City petition for Continuance of six Pence per Chaldron on Coals. The Court of Common Council, which, on the twenty-second of October last, had agreed to raise two thousand Pounds on the Personal-Estates of the Inhabitants for the Orphans Fund from Midsummer, 1747, to Midsummer, 1748, and passed a Bill for that Purpose on the eighteenth of December, agreed, on the twentieth-sixth Instant, to petition Parliament for a further Continuance of the Duty of six Pence per Chaldron on Coals, in Aid of the said Fund, which was to expire at Michaelmas, 1750. And the said Petition being drawn up, was presented by the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex to the Hon. House of Commons. To which the Parliament assented; and, a Bill being brought in for that Purpose, an Act passed in this Form :

An Act for the further Relief of the Orphans, and other Creditors of the City of London; and for other Purposes therein mentioned.

“Whereas, by an Act passed in the fifth and sixth Years of the Reign of King William and Queen Mary (intituled, An Act for the Relief of the Orphans, and other Creditors of the City of London) it is, amongst other Things, enacted, “That, for and towards raising a perpetual Fund to pay the yearly Interest of four Pounds on every hundred Pounds due to the Orphans, and other Creditors of the City of London, there should be paid on all Sorts of Coal or Culm, which should be imported into the Port of the City of London, or the River of Thames within the Liberty of the said City upon the said River, from and after the twenty-ninth Day of September, which should be in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred, (over and above all other Impositions and Duties) the Sum of six Pence for every Chaldron thereof, and for such Sort of Coals as are sold by the Ton, for every Ton thereof, containing two thousand Weight, the like Sum of six Pence; which Imposition of six Pence was, by the said Act, to continue from the said twenty-ninth Day of September, for and during the Term of fifty Years, and no longer: And whereas it was further enacted by the said Act, That from and after such Time as the aforesaid Imposition of six Pence thereby laid should cease and determine, all and every the Manors, Messuages, Lands, Tenements, Markets, Fairs, and the Duties thereof, and all other the Revenues of and belonging to the said City of London, in Possession or Reversion, should stand and be charged with the full yearly Sum of six thousand Pounds (over and above the yearly Sum of eight thousand Pounds, wherewith they were charged by the said Act) towards the aforesaid perpetual Fund: And whereas, by Means of the great Fall of Rents in the City of London, the Estate of the said City is not sufficient to pay the said yearly Sum of six thousand Pounds, over and above the said yearly Sum of eight thousand Pounds, which the said City now pays, and have a sufficient Residue to answer and defray the Expences necessary for supporting the Government and publick Charges of the said City: And whereas in Case the said Imposition of six Pence per Chaldron or Ton of Coals should cease and determine on the twenty-ninth Day of September, in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and fifty, according to the said Act, the Residue of the Funds appropriated by that Act for the yearly Payment of four Pounds for Interest on every hundred Pounds Principal Money, due to the Orphans and other Creditors of the said City, together with the said additional yearly Sum of six thousand Pounds, would not be sufficient for that Purpose: Therefore, to enable the said City of London to defray the necessary Expences of supporting the Government and publick

The City being thus relieved, a Committee was appointed in the Month of September following, to consider how to discharge the Debt due to the Orphans Fund, and what Savings might be necessary to enable the City to pay the additional Sum of two thousand Pounds per Ann. to the Orphans, to commence at Michaelmas, 1750; which said Committee, on the sixth of November, 1750, reported, That, for raising Money to pay off the Debt, it would be necessary to borrow twenty-five thousand Pounds; which was agreed to by the Court of Common Council on the fifteenth, and referred to the Committee to agree with any Person at a Rate of Interest of three Pounds six Shillings per Cent. and, out of this Sum of twenty-five thousand Pounds borrowed, the Chamberlain, by the same Authority, on the twentieth of June, 1751, was ordered to discharge the Sum of twenty-one thousand seven hundred and thirty-five Pounds seventeen Shillings and nine Pence (due to the Orphans Fund) from the City's Account, and place it to the Credit of the Orphans Fund in Discharge of the same Debt. From this Time, two thousand Pounds per Ann. has been constantly raised by Act of Common Council, continued at Midsummer from Year to Year.

About One o'Clock on Friday Morning, the twenty-fifth of March, a Fire broke out at Mr. Eldridge's, a Peruke-maker, in Exchange-Alley, Cornhill, which proved the most terrible, before it was extinguished, that has been known in the Memory of Man. It was at first said to begin by the Carelessness of a Boy, who let a Candle catch hold of some Wig-Boxes which were in the Shop. But a Report since prevails, which indeed is the most probable, that it began by the Carelessness of a Girl belonging to a Person who kept a Fruit and Oyster-Stall adjoining to Mr. Eldridge's, the Peruke-maker; who, having shut up her Stall, went to hear the Concert at the Swan Tavern, left a Candle burning, and forgot to return to put it out. The Flames in a few Minutes spread themselves three different Ways, and before Twelve consumed, according to the best Computation, near an hundred Houses, about twenty of which fronted Cornhill, and the rest were in Birchin-Lane, Exchange-Alley, George-Yard, and all the Avenues thereabouts, notwithstanding all possible Means were used to stop them, there being upwards of fifty Engines, which were well manned by the Populace, and in general pretty well supplied with Water, but, the Wind being S. S. W. all the Bankers Houses in Lombard-Street, and their Effects, were safe. No publick Office was burnt, except the London Assurance, who had Time to save all their Effects, and suffered only in the Loss of their House.

Garraway's, the Jerusalem, and Jonathan's Coffee-Houses, the Swan Tavern, with the rest of the Houses in Exchange-Alley, were destroyed, except Baker's and Sam's Coffee-Houses, which were greatly damaged. The Flames extended themselves into Cornhill, and burnt down the Houses of Mr. Walpole, Mr. Strahan, Mr. Meadewes, Mr. Brotherton, and Mr. Astley, Booksellers, Mr. Cleave, a Pewterer, Mr. Warner, a Stationer, Tom's and the Rainbow Coffee-Houses, the Fleece and Three Ties Taverns, a Milliner's next the Three Ties, and a Cabinet-maker's the Corner of Birchin-Lane; Mr. Legg's, a Woollen-Draper, the other Corner, a Shoemaker's, with another Woollen-Draper's adjoining; the London Assurance-Office, the Widow Harrison's, Mr. Vaughan's, a Haberdasher, Mr. Sarrazin's, the Corner of St. Michael's-Alley; in the said Alley, Knight's Shoe-Warehouse, the Cock and Lion, a Publick-House, the House of Mr. Gytter, a Peruke-maker, Mr. Oldis, a Sadler; the Jamaica Coffee-House was not consumed, but greatly damaged, as was likewise St. Michael's Church: The Houses in Castle-Court and White-Lion-Court, Birchin-Lane, were all consumed; the George and Vulture Tavern, Elford's Coffee-House, and the House of Mr. Willmet, a Hoſier, in George-Yard, were consumed, and great Damages done to other Houses in the said Yard; the Penſylvania, Carolina, the Sword-Blade and Cole's Coffee-Houses, with Part of Old Tem's, the House of Mr. Shaw, a Shoemaker, Mr. Wilson, a Stationer, and all the others in the said Lane, excepting eight towards Lombard-Street, were likewise consumed.

Mr. Eldridge, his Wife, Children, and Servants were burnt. Mr. Cooke, a Gentleman that lodged in his House, jumped out of the Window, broke his Leg, and died soon after.

The Reader from this will judge, that it is impossible to express the Consternation and Confusion of the Inhabitants, any more than to give a Computation of the Loss, as it was one of the richest Spots of Ground within the City of London. It is allowed, that the Preservation of a great many Persons and Effects, as well as the Stopping of the Flames, was chiefly owing to the Presence, Industry, and happy Directions of the Right Hon. Sir Robert Ladbroke, Knt. Lord-Mayor, Sir Joseph Hankey, Knt. and several other Aldermen; Sir Joseph happening to be up when the Disaster began, went soon after, and, posting himself at the South Gate of the Royal-Exchange, which he ordered to be opened, took particular Care, with some Ward-Officers who came to his Assistance, to see the Goods of every Sufferer, which were brought out of the Houses, securely and properly deposited there; and stood Centry at the Gate for several Hours in Person, to see that no Man was wronged of his Property. The Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor acted as became a wife and vigilant Magistrate, being almost in every Place, and giving Directions with the greatest Judgment and Composure of Mind; and had a Magazine of Powder, well secured and guarded, brought from the Tower, with an Intent to have had some Houses blown up, if no other Method could be found to put a Stop to the Flames. About six o'Clock a Party of the Guards came, who were soon after reinforced by three or four other Parties, who were placed so conveniently as to secure the Goods of the distressed Inhabitants, and to hinder idle People, who only came to see and stop up the Way, from running into too much Danger. The Wind was high at W. S. W. and as all the N. E. Part of the City was in imminent Danger, so great Numbers of Persons moved their Goods, and in their Necessity, some Fellows, who pretended to help them, were detected in carrying off Things for their own Use, and for which they were sent to the Compter. There were several Persons missing, and, as it is very certain there were some People killed, it is to be feared they are among them.

The twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh, the Fire broke out afresh, but was soon extinguished. There has not been so dreadful a Conflagration since the Fire of London. According to the nearest Calculation the Damage is reckoned to be, excluding the Loss of the Houses, near about two hundred thousand Pounds in Effects and Merchandize.

On the twenty-ninth, a Court of Common Council was held at Guildhall, when a Motion was made, That the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen might be empowered to permit as many Non-Freemen in the Building-Business, to be employed in rebuilding the Houses destroyed by the late Fire in Cornhill, as to them should seem necessary; any Law, Custom or Usage, to the contrary notwithstanding: Which, after a short Debate, was resolved in the Affirmative.

A Contribution was set on Foot for the Relief of those Sufferers by the said Fire, who were Objects of Charity, by several Gentlemen, Bankers, &c. the Benefactions to be paid to the Bankers named in the Advertisement; which by the second of April amounted to near 2000 l. and by the eleventh to 3320 l. The Claims given in by the Sufferers to that Time, amounting to 8000 l. the Contributions were continued: And on the nineteenth was a General Meeting of the Contributors, when a Committee was chosen for the Management of the Charity, and Stephen Theodore Janſſen, Esq; one of the City Members, appointed Chairman thereof.

On the thirtieth, about eight at Night, seven Prisoners in Newgate for Smuggling, on the Turnkeys opening the Door of their Apartment, rushed on them with Pistols and Broomsticks, and knocking them down, ran out of the Prison, taking different Ways; but an Alarm being spread, five of them were retaken in the neighbouring Streets, and carried back to Newgate. Thomas Kemp and William Grey got clear off; for the apprehending of either of whom a Reward of fifty Pounds was promised by the Keeper of Newgate, and a hundred Pounds by the Commissioners of the Customs.

At a Common Council held the seventh of April, a Bill passed for repealing all former Acts, Orders, and Ordinances, touching the Nomination and Election of Sheriffs of the City of London, and County of Middlesex, and for regulating and enforcing such Nominations and Elections for the future, in Form following:

L A D B R O O K E, Mayor.

A Common Council holden in the Chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, on Thursday the seventh Day of April, 1748, and in the twenty-first Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Second, King of Great-Britain, &c. before Sir Robert Ladbroke, Knt. Lord-Mayor; Sir Robert Baylis, Knt. Sir John Barnard, Knt. Sir Henry Marshall, Knt. Aldermen; John Stracey, Esq; Recorder; Sir William Calvert, Knt. Francis Cockayne, Esq; Thomas Winterbottom, Esq; Robert Allſop, Esq; Sir William Smith, Knt. William Whitaker, Esq; Aldermen; Crispe Gascoigne, and Edward Davies, Esqrs; Aldermen and Sheriffs of the said City, and the greater Part of the Commons of the same City, in the said Common Council then and there assembled.

An Act of Common Council relating to Sheriffs.

County of Middlesex, and for regulating and enforcing such Nominations and Elections for the future.

Preamble.

"Whereas from Time immemorial there have been, and of Right ought to be, two Sheriffs of this City, which said two Sheriffs, during all the Time aforesaid, have constituted, and of Right ought to constitute, one Sheriff of the County of Middlesex :

"And whereas the Sheriffwick of this City, and the Sheriffwick of the said County of Middlesex have, from Time immemorial, belonged, and do of Right belong, to the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London :

"And whereas the several Acts, Orders and Ordinances heretofore made and passed in this City, touching the Choice of Election of Persons to the Offices of Sheriffalty of this City and County of Middlesex, and for compelling the Persons so chosen, or elected, to accept and serve the said Offices, have hitherto proved ineffectual to answer the several Purposes in and by such Acts, Orders and Ordinances expressed or intended :

Former Acts repealed.

"For Remedy thereof, be it enacted, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, the Right Worshipful the Aldermen, and the Commons of this City in this present Common Council assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That all and every the said Acts, Orders and Ordinances, so far as the same relate to the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall from henceforth be, and the same are hereby repealed, annulled, and made utterly void and of none effect.

Who to elect Sheriffs, and what to be the general Election Day.

"And it is hereby further enacted, That the Right of electing Persons to the said Offices of Sheriffalty shall be, and the same is hereby vested in the Liverymen of the several Companies of this City, to be for that Purpose from Time to Time assembled in the Common-Hall of the Guildhall of this City, and that the general Day of Election of Persons to the said Offices shall be, yearly, the twenty-fourth Day of June, unless the same shall happen to be Sunday; in which Case, the said Election shall be on the Day then next following.

In what Instances Elections to be on other Days.

"Provided always, That whensoever it shall happen, that any Person or Persons elected to the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall in any Instance refuse or neglect to conform to this Act, or shall depart this Life, or be lawfully removed or discharged from the said Offices, or from his or their respective Election thereunto; or that, upon any other Occasion whatsoever, there shall be just Cause to proceed to a new Election; then, and in every such Case, it shall and may be lawful, to and for the Liverymen of the said several Companies of this City, duly assembled as aforesaid, to proceed to, and make such new Election, at such Day and Time as by the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City for the Time being shall be ordered or appointed.

"And it is hereby further ordained, That "every Person who shall hereafter be elected to the said Offices of Sheriffalty upon the said general Election Day, or at any other Time between the said general Election Day and the twenty-second Day of September in the same Year, when there shall be no actual Vacancy in the said Offices, shall take the same upon him on the Vigil of St. Michael the Archangel next following his said Election, and shall hold the same for and during the Space of one whole Year from thence next ensuing; and that every Person who shall be elected to the said Offices on the said twenty-second Day of September, or at any Time between the said twenty-second and twenty-eighth Days of September, or upon a Vacancy happening in the said Offices, or when the Sheriffs of this City and County of Middlesex for the Time being, or either of them, shall hold over, as is herein after mentioned and provided, shall take the said Offices upon him on the seventh Day next after Notice of his said Election, and shall hold the same until the Swearing in of the new Sheriffs upon the Vigil of St. Michael the Archangel next following the Day of his taking the said Offices upon him as aforesaid.

When Persons elected are to take, and how long to hold the Office.

"Provided always, and it is hereby further ordained, That if, upon any future Vigil of St. Michael the Archangel, it shall happen, that neither of the Persons elected to the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall appear in the Guildhall aforesaid, and take the said Offices upon him, then; and in every such Case, both the then Sheriffs shall hold over and continue in the said Offices until some other Persons shall be duly elected and sworn into the same in their Stead; and if upon any such Vigil it shall happen, that only one of the Persons elected to the said Offices, shall so appear and take the said Offices upon him, then, and in every such last mentioned Case, the Junior in Office of the then Sheriffs shall hold over and continue in the said Offices, until some other Person shall be duly elected and sworn into the same in his Stead.

In what Instances to hold over.

"Provided also, and it is further ordained, That from henceforth, at every Assembly for the Election of a Person or Persons to the said Offices of Sheriffalty, every Alderman of this City who shall not have actually served the same, shall according to his Seniority in the said Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and before any Commoner of this City, be publicly put in Nomination for the said Offices; and every Alderman of this City, who shall be elected to the said Offices, shall therein take Place according to his Seniority in the said Court, and have Precedence of every Commoner of this Court.

In what Order the Aldermen to be put up and take Place.

"And that from henceforth for ever, it shall and may be lawful, to and for the Lord-Mayor of this City for the Time being, at such Time or Times as he shall think proper, between the fourteenth Day of April and the fourteenth Day of June in every Year, to nominate, in the said Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City, one or more fit and able Person or Persons (not exceeding the Number of nine Persons in the Whole) being free of this City, to be publicly put in No-

 "the Liverymen of the several Companies of "this City, to be thereafter in the Common-
 "Hall aforesaid assembled for the Election of a "Person or Persons to the said Offices; and the "Person or Persons so nominated by any "Lord-Mayor of this City, shall at every such "Assembly of the said Liverymen, after his
 "and their respective Nominations by the "Lord-Mayor as aforesaid, be publickly put in

"where the said Court of Hustings is usually holden, and then and there, in the Presence of the Lord-Mayor of this City for the Time being, and two of the Aldermen of this City for the Time being, or in Case of the Absence of the Lord-Mayor, then in the Presence of four of the Aldermen of this City for the Time being, take the Oath of Office there usually taken by the Sheriffs of this City and County of Middlesex, then, and in every such Case, such Person shall (if an Alderman of this City, or a Commoner previously nominated by the Lord-Mayor as aforesaid) forfeit and pay to the Uses herein after mentioned, the Sum of six hundred Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain; or, if he shall not then be an Alderman of this City, or a Commoner so nominated by the Lord-Mayor, the Sum of four Hundred Pounds of like lawful Money.

"Provided also, That if any Freeman of this City, who shall be duly elected to the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall not personally appear on the seventh Day next after Notice of his Election, between the Hours of twelve of the Clock at Noon, and three of the Clock in the Afternoon, in the publick Assembly in the Guildhall aforesaid, in the Place where the said Court of Hustings is usually holden, and then and there, in the Presence of the Lord-Mayor and two Aldermen, or in Case of the Absence of the Lord-Mayor, then in the Presence of four Aldermen, take the Oath of Office there usually taken by the Sheriffs of this City and County of Middlesex, then, and in every such Case, such Person shall (if an Alderman of this City, or a Commoner previously nominated by the Lord-Mayor as aforesaid) forfeit and pay to the Uses herein after mentioned, the Sum of six hundred Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain; or, if he shall not then be an Alderman of this City, or a Commoner so previously nominated by the Lord-Mayor, the Sum of four hundred Pounds of like lawful Money."

How the said Penalties to be recovered.

"And it is further ordained, That all Penalties and Sums of Money to be forfeited by Virtue of this Act, or Ordinance, shall be recovered by Action of Debt, to be commenced and prosecuted in the Name of the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, in one of the Courts of Record of the King's Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, within this City, wherein no Essoign or Wager of Law shall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant; and that the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, in all such Actions to be prosecuted by Virtue of this Act, wherein he shall obtain Judgment, by Verdict, Nil dicit, or Confession, or upon Demurrer, shall and may recover his Costs of Suit; and, if a Verdict shall be given for the Defendant, or if the Plaintiff shall be nonsuited, or discontinue his Action after the Defendant shall have appeared, or if upon Demurrer, Judgment shall be given against the Plaintiff, the Defendant or Defendants shall and may recover Costs, and have the like Remedy for the same, as any Defendant or Defendants hath or have in other Cases by Law.

"And it is further ordained, That if it shall happen, that two or more Persons nominated by any Lord-Mayor or Lord-Mayors of this City, for the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall, between the fourteenth Day of April, and the twenty-fourth Day of June in any one Year, pay unto the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, the Sum of four hundred Pounds each, to be exempted and discharged from their said Nomination, and from serving the said Offices according to the Proviso for that Purpose herein before contained, then, and in every such Case, the said Chamberlain for the Time being shall, out of the Monies so paid to him, issue and pay the Sum of one hundred Pounds to each of the two Persons, who, upon the Vigil of St. Michael the Archangel in that Year, or at any other Time thereafter, shall first and next take the said Offices upon them; and if it shall happen that only one Person so nominated by any Lord-Mayor, shall pay the said Sum of four hundred Pounds within the Time, and for the Purpose aforesaid, then, and in every such last mentioned Case, the said Chamberlain for the Time being shall thereout issue and pay the Sum of fifty Pounds to each of the two Persons, who, upon the said Vigil in that Year, or at any other Time thereafter, shall first and next take the said Offices upon them; and that the Residue of all and every the Sums of four hundred Pounds, which shall hereafter be paid to the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, within the Time, and for the Purpose aforesaid, and also all Penalties and Sums of Money to be forfeited and paid by Virtue of, and in Pursuance of this Act, shall go and be applied to the Use of the said Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, subject to such Orders and Resolutions of this Court as have heretofore been made, touching the Monies paid into the Chamber of London as a Fine for not holding the said Offices, and to such further Orders and Resolutions of this Court as shall hereafter be made touching the same.

In what Cases the Sheriffs to have part of the Fines, and how the rest of the Fines and Forfeitures are to be applied.

"Provided always, and it is further ordained, That every Person who hath at any Time heretofore paid to the Chamberlain of this City for the Time being, for the Use of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the same City, any Sum of Money to be exempted or discharged from the said Offices of Sheriffalty, shall be, and is hereby for ever exempted and absolutely discharged from the said Offices of Sheriffalty, unless such Person shall at any Time hereafter take upon him the Office of an Alderman of this City, in which Case he shall be, and is hereby declared to be subject and liable to be elected to the said Offices, such Payment or any thing herein before contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

No Person who has paid upon any former Act, is to be eligible.

"Provided also, and it is further ordained, That no Person who now hath, or hereafter shall have, duly served the said Offices of Sheriffalty

No Person to serve a second Time.

"Sheriffalty of this City and County of Middlesex, according to the true Intent and Meaning of this present Act, or of any former Act of Common Council, shall hereafter be eligible to the said Offices a second Time, any thing herein before contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

Moravian
and.

About this Time, a Society of Episcopal Christians, under the Name of Unitas Fratrum, or the United Brethren of the Moravian and Bohemian Church, finding themselves confounded with, and in some sort likely to be answerable to the Publick for Tenets of a schismatical Sect of English Separatists, headed by John and Charles Wesley, and George Whitfield, young Clergymen of the Church of England; who, under the false Pretence of extraordinary Enlightenings from above, and of teaching a more perfect Way, and in the Highways, Fields, and common Grounds about this Metropolis, pronouncing Damnation to all their Opposers, had given great Disgust to all sober and well-disposed Christians, and particularly to the Clergy of the Established Church, against whom these Novel-Preachers seemed chiefly to level their Discourses; thought it convenient to deliver, by their Deputy, to the several Offices of State, and Civil and Ecclesiastick Polity, the following Declaration:

Declaration of the Moravian Brethren.

"The Brethren of the antient Bohemian Episcopal Church, observing themselves involved in that universal Disease of this Time, that Writers do acquaint the Publick with Things about us entirely unknown to the said Writers themselves; after a Silence of several Years, supported by the happy Correspondence the late Primate of England was in with their Predecessors, whose Grace has been acquainted with all our Principles and Designs, yea, with the least Observations or Emendations in relation to them, which the Nature of a free Church of Christ supposes:

"The foresaid Church now, with all that Modesty and Deference seem to be obliged to, towards all the Persuasions of what kind soever, which preceded her Arrival, and particularly towards the Christians of the National Church, who, besides the reciprocal Laws of Hospitality, claim a kind of respectus parentela, declares by this,

"1. That the Publick is abused by our being confounded with certain Sects, which part of the Clergy now find in their Way.

"2. In order to prove the foregoing, we will willingly submit to any ordinary or extraordinary legal Examination of our Principles, ritual Customs and daily Practice, in that Respect, with the Guardians of our Constitution.

"3. That the Conservation, to the End of the World, of the present happy Constitution of these Realms, in politicis & ecclesiasticis, is the hearty Desire and real Aim in the Prayers of all the Brethren.

"4. That, notwithstanding the natural Con-tempt, an antient Apostolick Church, which, after its Restoration by divine Providence, walked twenty-five Years in the very Face of all Europe, with all the Freedom of a good Conscience, may have against that Commerce of "Pamphlets, which the empirical spiritus novandi establishes, and the customary Impatience or Uneasiness of the Sufferers furnishes: Nevertheless,

"5. By these Advertisement, sincere Offers are made to the Publick, in order that if any Man, of undoubted Sense and Candor, will take the Pains upon himself to fix the Accusations against us in their real Point of View, hitherto unattainable by the Brethren, and perhaps the Publick too, then we will answer to the Expectations of the Publick as free and directly, as may be expected from honest Subjects of the Constitution of these Realms."

"By the KING.

"A Proclamation, declaring the Cessation of Arms, as well by Sea as Land, agreed upon between his Majesty, the Most Christian King, and the States General of the United Provinces, and enjoining the Observance thereof.

"George R.

"Whereas Preliminaries for restoring a general Peace were signed at Aix la Chapelle, on the nineteenth of April last, O. S. by the Ministers of Us, the Most Christian King, and the States General of the United Provinces: And whereas, for the putting an End to the Calamities of War, as soon and as far as may be possible, it hath been agreed between Us, his Most Christian Majesty, and the States General, as follows; that is to say,

Proclamation
for a Cessation of Hostilities.

Gazette.

"That Hostilities should cease at Land, within the Times, and in the Manner in the said Preliminary Articles for that Purpose agreed upon; and at Sea, from the respective Times, and within the respective Places, herein after particularly mentioned.

"And, to prevent all Occasions of Complaints and Disputes, which might arise upon Account of Ships, Merchandizes, and other Effects, which might be taken at Sea, it hath been also mutually agreed, that such Ships, Merchandizes and Effects, as should be taken in the Channel, and in the North Seas, after the space of twelve Days, to be computed from the said nineteenth Day of April last, on which Day the said Preliminaries were signed; and that all Ships, Merchandizes, and Effects, which should be taken after six Weeks from the said nineteenth Day of April, beyond the Channel, the British Seas, and the North Seas, as far as Cape St. Vincent; and for the Space of six Weeks more, beyond the said Cape to the Equinoctial Line, whether in the Ocean or Mediterranean; and for the Space of six Months, from the said nineteenth Day of April, beyond the said Equinoctial Line or Equator, and in all other Places of the World, without any Exception, or other more particular Distinction of Time or Place, should be restored on both Sides.

"And whereas, pursuant to the Agreement, Hostilities have ceased in the Low Countries, in such Manner as was agreed upon by the said Preliminaries:

"We have thought fit, by and with the Advice of our Privy Council, to notify the same to all our loving Subjects; and we do declare,

"That

"That our Royal Will and Pleasure is, and we do hereby strictly charge and command all our Officers, both at Sea and Land, and all other our Subjects whatsoever, to forbear Acts of Hostility, either by Sea or Land, against his Most Christian Majesty, his Vassals, or Subjects, from and after the respective Times above-mentioned, and under the Penalty of incurring our highest Displeasure.

"Given at our Court at St. James's, the fifth Day of May, in the twenty-fifth Year of our Reign, and in the Year 1748.

"God save the King."

A further Proclamation.

"For preventing any Inconvenience to which his Majesty's Subjects may be liable, by misapprehending the Purport or Effect of his Royal Proclamation, dated the fifth of this Instant May, declaring the Cessation of Arms, as well by Sea as Land, agreed upon between his Majesty, the Most Christian King, and the States General of the United Provinces, and enjoying the Observance thereof; and for the Improvement and Security of the Commerce of his loving Subjects during such Cessation of Arms; his Majesty is hereby graciously pleased to declare, that, as soon as Passes can be interchanged, they will be delivered to such of his Subjects as shall desire the same for their Ships, Goods, Merchandizes and Effects, they duly observing the several Acts of Parliament, now in Force, with regard to Trade or Correspondence with France."

On Thursday, the 14th of July, there was the greatest Eclipse of the Sun, that would happen for sixteen Years; (nearly) at the Time of the greatest Obscuration about  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the Sun's Diameter was darkened. The Time of its Beginning at the three Capitals of these Kingdoms did exactly correspond with the following Calculations:

Note, 1. At the middle Moment of the Solar Eclipse, the whole Penumbra did not comprehend within the Compass of the Earth's Discus; the Latitude of the Moon being then greater than the Difference between the Semidiameters of the Disk and Penumbra.

2. Nor could there be any where a total Eclipse: For the Moon's apparent Semidiameter, at that Time, was less than the Sun's; consequently, her Shadow fell short of the Earth.

3. The Duration of the central Eclipse, i. e. the Time that elapsed from the coming on thereof at or near Quebec in Canada, to its going off at Tranquebar, a French Settlement near Fort St. George, in the East-Indies, was 3 Hours, 26 Minutes and 20 Seconds.

4. The Duration of the general Eclipse, i. e. from the Penumbra's first touching the Earth in Latitude 35° 36', and 57° West Longitude from London, about 300 Leagues East of the Island of Bermudas, to its leaving the Earth near upon the Equinoctial, 550° 15' East Longitude from London, about 276 Leagues from the Island Madagafcar, was 3 Hours, 55 Minutes, and 4 Seconds.

5. The Velocity wherewith the Shadow goes over the Disk of the Earth, was about 37<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> Miles in a Minute; but yet, the Velocity whereby it receded from any given Place on the Earth's Surface was but 28 Miles per Minute. For while the Shadow moved from the West to the East, all the Places of the Earth were carried by its Rotation the same Way; and therefore, following the Motion of the Shadow with a slower Pace, they diminished the Velocity whereby it moved from them.

On Thursday the twenty-eighth of July, 1748, there was a visible Eclipse of the Moon, at the Middle of which, nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  of her Diameter was obscur'd; its Duration was 2<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>m</sup> 22<sup>s</sup>. See the following Calculation.

The King being returned from his German Dominions, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited on his Majesty, with the Recorder, who made their Compliments in the following Speech, on the twenty-fifth of November:

"Most Gracious Sovereign,

"The Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London esteem it the highest Honour to be permitted to Approach your Royal Person, and gladly embrace this Opportunity to congratulate your Majesty upon your safe Arrival in Great-Britain, and to express their unfeigned Joy on this happy Occasion.

"These your Majesty's most faithful and dutiful Subjects are truly sensible, from the many Blessings they have enjoyed during the whole Course of your auspicious Reign, that your paternal Care and Goodness are ever watchful for the Interest, and intent upon promoting the Welfare and Prosperity of these Kingdoms.

"To this your paternal Regard and Concern for the Happiness of your People, and to that Sense of true Glory which animates your Royal Breast for the good of Mankind, they most thankfully attribute the Restoration of Peace and Tranquillity to Europe; a Blessing which cannot fail of producing the most beneficial Effects to this your Majesty's Metropolis, so eminently distinguished for its extensive Trade and Commerce.

"Under a due Sense of the highest Obligations for the many signal Instances of your Majesty's peculiar Favour and Protection to the Citizens of London, they beg Leave to render their most grateful Acknowledgments; and to assure your Majesty of their Zeal and Affection to your Royal Person and Family; and that they will, upon all Occasions, exert the utmost of their Abilities for the London Gazette.

"Support of your most gracious Government,
"and to render your Reign, which diffuses so "many Blessings upon your Subjects, easy and
"happy to your Majesty."

To which his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer :

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this Mark of Affection "and Zeal for my Person and Government. It "has been my great Care, in the Re-establish"ment of the publick Peace, to make effectual "Provision for the Security of the Trade and "Commerce of my Subjects; and it gives me
"great Satisfaction to find that it is so agreeable
"to my loyal City of London."

They all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

The Recorder knighted.

After which, his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on John Stracey, Esq, their Recorder.

A Hurricane.

On the second of December, there was one of the greatest Hurricanes of Wind that has been known for several Years, from S. W. by S. which lasted for near eight Hours, during which Time it untiled the Tops of Houses, blew down two, and several Chimneys, Signs, &c. which greatly wounded divers Persons who were passing the Streets, and a Child was killed by the fall of Bricks from a Chimney, as it stood by the Fire. Several Vessels below the Bridge were forced from their Moorings in the River, and did great Damage among the small Craft, and two Men were drowned. Divers Ships were drove on Shore, and great Damage done on the Coast of Kent and Sussex.

Orphan Tax.

On the fifteenth, at a Court of Common Council, Mr. Alderman Gascoigne, from the Committee of City Lands, presented a Bill for raising two thousand Pounds, upon the Personal Estates of the Inhabitants of the City and its Liberty, towards paying the Interests of the Orphan-Debt, pursuant to the Power granted by an Act of King William and Queen Mary, intituled, An Act for the Relief of Orphans, and other Creditors of the City of London; which was received, read three Times, and passed into an Act.

Resolution to prosecute Hawkers, &c.

And on the twenty-second, the Committee at Guildhall, appointed for inquiring into the Laws relating to Hawkers and Pedlars, came to a Resolution to prosecute all Hawkers selling Wares within the City, or Liberties of the same, tho' they should appear to have Licences.

On January the tenth, 1749, the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor read the following Letter, which his Lordship had received from George Heathcote, Esq; Alderman of Walbrook Ward, desiring Leave to lay down his Gown; upon which it was resolved to send a Letter to Mr. Alderman Heathcote, at Bath, giving him the Option to vote for a Recorder, and afterwards to resign his Gown on the Tuesday following.

A Letter from Mr. Alderman Heathcote, at Bath, to the Lord-Mayor of London.

Alderman Heathcote desires Leave to resign.

"My Lord-Mayor,
"The general Corruption of the Age I have the "Misfortune to live in, and the frequent detestable "Instances of Apostasy from every Principle of "Honour, Integrity, and publick Spirit of many "of my Countrymen, both of my own and a "superior Rank, having fully convinced me,

"that the Endeavours of the few determined to "live and die honest Men, are fruitless and
"vain, I have resolved to seek that small Share
"of Happiness, which is to be acquired in this
"venal Country, in Privacy and Retirement,
"where I am sure it is only to be found; and,
"therefore, I am determined to return no more
"to London, unless my own private Concerns call "me thither. I cannot think it in any Respect
"right to hold an Office I shall never attend:
"This obliges me to apply to your Lordship
"and Court of Aldermen for Leave to resign
"my Gown, and beg the Court will accept of "this my Resignation, and that your Lordship
"will be pleased to issue out a Precept for the "Election of some other Person to serve instead "of me for the Ward of Walbrook. I most
"sincerely wish Health and Felicity to my Bre"thren the Aldermen, and the most flourishing
"Commerce, with the full Enjoyments of Li"berty, to the Citizens of London, to whom I "am inexpressibly obliged for the many Ho"nours and Trusts they have reposed in me; all "which I can, with a safe Conscience, say I "have faithfully discharged, without ever have-
"ing once betrayed or deceived.

"George Heathcote."

The following Bite upon the Publick is of so new and so extraordinary a Nature, that it deserves to be recorded, as it shews that a foolish Credulity and ridiculous Curiosity seem to have banished common Sense from the Quality and Gentry of this great Metropolis. Towards the Middle of this Month the following Advertisement appeared in our News-Papers:

The Man in the Bottle, a Bite on the Publick.

"At the New Theatre in the Hay-Market, on Monday next, the sixteenth Instant, to be seen a Person who performs the most surprizing Things following, viz. First, he takes a common Walking-Cane from any of the Spectators, and thereon plays the Musick of every Instrument now in use, and likewise sings to surprizing Perfection. Secondly, he presents you with a common Wine-Bottle, which any of the Spectators may first examine; this Bottle is placed on a Table in the middle of the Stage, and he (without any Equivocation) goes into it in Sight of all the Spectators, and sings in it; during his Stay in the Bottle, any Person may handle it, and see plainly that it does not exceed a common Tavern Bottle.

"Those on the Stage or in the Boxes may come in masked Habits, (if agreeable to them) and the Performer (if desired) will inform them who they are.

This other Advertisement was also published at the same Time, which, one would have thought, was sufficient to prevent the former's having any Effect:

"Lately arrived from Italy.

"Sig. Capitulo Jumpsdo, a surprizing Dwarf, no Taller than a common Tavern Tobacco-Pipe; who can perform many wonderful Equilibres, on the slack or tight Rope: Likewise he'll transform his Body in above ten thousand different Shapes and Postures; and, after he has diverted the Spectators two Hours and a Half, he will open his Mouth wide, and jump down his own Throat. He, being the most wonderfullst Wonder of Wonders as ever the World wondered at, would be willing to join in Performance with that surprizing Musician on Monday next, in the Hay-Market.

"He is to be spoke with at the Black Raven in Golden-Lane every Day, from seven 'till twelve, and from twelve all Day long."

Nevertheless the Contrivance took, and the Playhouse was crouded with Dukes, Dutcheffes, Lords, Ladies, &c. the Consequence of which will appear from the following Paragraph:

On Monday the sixteenth, at Night, the much expected Drama of the Bottle-Conjurer of the New Theatre in the Hay-Market, ended in the Tragi-comical Manner following: Curiosity had drawn together prodigious Numbers. About seven the Theatre being lighted up, but without so much as a single Fiddle to keep the Audience in good Humour, many grew impatient. Immediately followed a Chorus of Cat-calls, heightened by loud Vociferations, and beating with Sticks; when a Fellow came from behind the Curtain, and bowing, said, that if the Performer did not appear, the Money should be returned. At the same Time, a Wag crying out from the Pit, that if the Ladies and Gentlemen would give double Prices, the Conjurer would get into a Pint Bottle, presently a young Gentleman in one of the Boxes seized a lighted Candle, and threw it on the Stage. This served as the Charge for sounding to Battle. Upon this, the greatest Part of the Audience made the best of their Way out of the Theatre; some losing a Cloak, others a Hat, others a Wig, and others Hat, Wig and Swords also. One Party however staid in the House, in order to demolish the Inside, when the Mob breaking in, they tore up the Benches, broke to Pieces the Scenes, pulled down the Boxes, in short dismantled the Theatre entirely, carrying away the Particulars abovementioned into the Street, where they made a mighty Bonfire; the Curtain being hoisted on a Pole, by way of Flag. A large Party of Guards were sent for, but came time enough only to warm themselves round the Fire. We heard of no other Disaster than a young Nobleman's Chin being hurt, occasioned by his Fall into the Pit, with Part of one of the Boxes, which he had forced out with his Foot. 'Tis thought the Conjurer vanished away with the Bank. Many Enemies to a late celebrated Book, concerning the ceasing of Miracles, were greatly disappointed by the Conjurer's Non-appearance in the Bottle; they imagining, that his jumping into it would have been the most convincing Proof possible, that Miracles were not yet ceased.

Several Advertisements were printed afterwards, some serious, others comical, relating to this whimsical Affair; among the rest was the following, which, we hope, may be a Means of curing this Humour for the future:

"This is to inform the Publick,

"That, notwithstanding the great Abuse that has been put upon the Gentry, there is now in Town a Man, who, instead of creeping into a Quart or Pint Bottle, will change himself into a Rattle; which he hopes will please both Young and Old. If this Person meets with Encouragement to this Advertisement, he will then acquaint the Gentry, where and when he performs."

The Reason assigned, in another humorous Advertisement, of the Conjurer's not going into the Quart Bottle, was, that after searching all the Taverns, not one could be found.

On the above Allion in the Hay-Market.

When Conjurers the Quality can bubble,
And get their Gold with very little Trouble,
By putting giddy Lies in publick Papers,—
As jumping in Quart Bottles, — such like Vapours;
And further yet, if we the Matter strain,
Would pipe a Tune upon a Walking-Cane;
Nay, more surprizing Tricks! he'd swear he'd show

Grannums who dy'd a hundred Years ago: —
'Tis whimsical enough, what think, ye, Sirs?
The Quality can ne'er be Conjurers, —
The De'el a Bit; — no, let me speak in brief,
The Audience Fools, the Conjurer's a Thief.

On June the sixteenth, a little after one o'Clock, a terrible Fire broke out at his Majesty's Victualling-Office, at Deptford, occasioned, as was said, by some Sacks being hung up before a Fire to dry, a Spark of which flew on one of them, which soon conveyed its Flames to the rest, and by that Means, in less than Half an Hour, the whole Building was in Flames, as were likewise a great Number of Staves, that were piled up by the Side; and the Wind blew so strong at W. S. W. that two Lighters that lay off the Wharf, laden with dry Stores, such as Biscuits, Pease, &c. were set on Fire, and one of them entirely consumed, by the Flakes of Fire, which flew that Way in prodigious Quantities.

Deptford;

Mr. Adams chosen Recorder.

Next Day, a Court of Aldermen was held at Guildhall, for the Choice of a Recorder, in the Room of Sir John Stracey, Knt. deceased: The Candidates were, Mr. Adams, and Mr. Moreton, who had each of them eleven Votes, when the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor gave his casting Vote in Favour of Mr. Adams, and he was declared duly elected.

The following twenty-two Aldermen were present and voted, viz.

For Mr. Adams,	For Mr. Moreton,
The Lord-Mayor,	Sir John Barnard,
Sir Edward Bellamy,	Sir Daniel Lambert,
Sir John Thompson,	Sir Henry Marfoall,
Sir Robert Ladbroke,	Mr. Ald. Benn,
Sir George Champion,	Sir Samuel Pennant,
Sir Joseph Hankey,	Mr. Ald. Blackford,
Mr. Ald. Baker,	Mr. Ald. Cokayne,
Mr. Ald. Arnold,	Mr. Ald. Alsop,
Mr. Ald. Winterbottom,	Mr. Ald. Gaseigne,
Sir William Smith,	Mr. Ald. Ironside,
Mr. Ald. Whitaker,	Mr. Ald. Rowlinson.

Mr. Alderman Janssen was present, but did not vote.

Addition to his Salary.

And on the twenty-sixth, a Court of Common Council was held at Guildhall, when it was resolved to make an Addition of 80 l. per Ann. to the 120 l. per Ann. the Recorder's settled Salary, tho' sometimes 200 l. more is granted. After which it was agreed to send the following Resolutions to Mr. Heathcote at Bath — Resolved, That the Thanks of this Court be given to George Heathcote, Esq; late Alderman of this City, for his uniform, active and disinterested Conduct, in every Station of publick Trust: — For the many and great Services he has done this Metropolis, as Magistrate and Representative in Parliament: — for his zealous and laudable Endeavours to promote the Trade and Prosperity of his Fellow-Citizens: — For his exemplary publick Spirit and Independance, in making the Preservation of the Laws and Liberties of his Country the constant and invariable Rule of all his Actions.

On Thursday, March the second, at ten o'Clock in the Morning, the Officers of Arms assembled at St. James's Gate, properly appalled, on Horseback, when Proclamation of his Majesty's Declaration of Peace was made, with the usual Solemnity. From thence they marched to Charing-Cross, in the following Order, viz. Guards to clear the Way: Constables and Beadles, two and two, bareheaded, with Staves: The high Constable: The Officers of the High Bailiff of Westminster: The High Bailiff: The Grenadier-Guards: Knights Marshal-Men, two and two: The King's Trumpets: The Searjeant Trumpeter, bearing his Mace: Pursuivants and Herald, two and two: Norroy King at Arms, having on each Side a Serjeant at Arms, with Maces: Garter principal King at Arms: The second Troop of Horse-Guards: At Charing-Cross Peace was proclaimed a second Time. From thence they proceeded to Temple-Bar, where the Officers of Westminster retired. And within the Gate the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, and Sheriffs, performed the usual Ceremony, at the Entrance into the City. Then Proclamation was made a third Time, at the End of Chancery-Lane: Then at the End of Wood-Street in Cheapside, where the Cross formerly stood: And the fifth and last Time at the Royal-Exchange, during Change Time. The Peace was afterwards proclaimed in all the Cities and Market-Towns in Great-Britain and Ireland; and also on board all his Majesty's Ships of War.

And next Day a Proclamation was published, promising a Reward of a hundred Pounds, over and above all other Rewards, to be paid by the Lords of the Treasury, without any other Warrant, upon Conviction of the Offender, to any Person who should discover and apprehend any one that had committed any Murder or Robbery (with open Force and Violence) in the Streets of London or Westminster, or within five Miles round the same, within three Months then last past, or that should be guilty of any within fifteen Months then to come.

On the fifteenth, the Address of the Lord-Mayor, and the rest of the Commissioners of Lieutenancy for the City of London, was presented to his Majesty by the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, attended by a great Number of the said Commissioners; congratulating his Majesty on the present Peace, and his safe and happy Return to his British Dominions.

And on Tuesday the twenty-first, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, waited on his Majesty with the following Address:

"To the King's most Excellent Majesty,
The humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

"Most gracious Sovereign,
We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly beg Leave to express our unfeigned Joy upon her Royal Highness's safe Delivery of a Princess, [Louisa Anne] an Event which we consider as an additional Strength to the present happy Establishment in your Majesty's illustrious Family, and as a further Security for the Enjoyment of our excellent Constitution in Church and State.

"And we beg Leave to embrace this Opportunity to congratulate your Majesty on the Success of your Majesty's unwearied Endeavours in procuring to this Nation the inestimable Blessings of Peace; in the Advantages of which none are more deeply interested than this your Majesty's ancient City, no less eminent for its extensive Commerce, than for its Loyalty to your Majesty's sacred Person and Government. Permit us, Sir, to assure your Majesty, that we will, to the utmost of our Power, endeavour to render your Majesty's Reign easy and happy. And it shall be our constant Prayer, that your Majesty may long rule over a free and obedient People; and that the Blessings we and all

"your Subjects enjoy under your mild and auspicious Government, may be for ever continued to us and our Posterity by your Majesty and your Royal Descendants."

To which Address his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer :

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this dutiful and affectionate Address, and for your Congratulations on the Increase of my Family.

"The Satisfaction you shew, on the Conclusion of the general Peace, is very agreeable to me ; and you may be assured, that I shall always have the greatest Attention to the Trade and Commerce of my Subjects, and to the Interest and Prosperity of my loyal City of London."

On the fifth of April, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Councilmen of the City of London waited on their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales at Leicester-House, to congratulate them on the Birth of a Princess ; when Richard Adams, Esq; their Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech :

City Address to the Prince and Princess of Wales.

"May it please your Royal Highnesses, We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen of the City of London, beg Leave to attend your Royal Highnesses, to express our sincerest Joy on the Increase of his Majesty's Family, by the Birth of a Princess, and on the happy Recovery of your Royal Highnesses.

"May this Princess, formed by his Majesty's and your bright Example, become the Delight of his Majesty and your Royal Highnesses : May she study to imitate the Piety and Virtues of her Royal Progenitors, and long live to experience your Royal Highnesses tender Love and Affection for her."

To which his Royal Highness returned the following Answer :

"My Lord and Gentlemen, I return you my Thanks, and those of the Princess, for this new Instance of your Duty to the King, and Regard to us.

"The Love you have for my Children is the greatest Joy to me : May it increase ; and may they always deserve it, by their constant Adherence to the Laws and Liberties of the Country they have had the Happiness to be born in, and by never forgetting that great Rule, that their Interest must always be the same with that of this brave and free People.

"The City may always depend on my hearty good Wishes for the welfare of their Trade and their Prosperity."

On Thursday, the twenty-seventh, at Night, the grand Fire-works, on Account of the Peace, were play'd off. Between nine and ten the Pavilion on the right Side of the Machine took Fire, and was burnt down ; but, by the great Care of the People employed, it was prevented spreading to the grand Part of the Edifice.

A Description of the Machine for the Fire-works, that were exhibited on the 27th of April.

The Machine was situated in the Green-Park, five hundred Feet from his Majesty's Library, NUMB. LVII.

and represented a magnificent Dorick Temple, from which extended two Wings terminated by Pavilions.

Fire-works on Account of the Peace.

London Magazine.

This Machine was one hundred and fourteen Feet high to the Top of his Majesty's Arms, and four hundred and ten Feet long. It was invented and designed by the Chevalier Servandoni, and all the Framing was performed by Mr. James Morris, Master Carpenter to the Office of Ordnance.

The Ornaments of this Machine were all in Relief, and it was adorned with Frets, Gildings, Lustres, artificial Flowers, Inscriptions, Statues, allegorical Pictures, &c.

The Inscriptions were as follows : On the Pedestal of Peace in the Center, Pax rediit, An. MDCCXLVIII. — Peace restored in the Year 1748. In the Frieze over the Center-Arch, Georgius II. Rex. Which appeared transparent during the whole Performance of the Fire-work.

On the left Side of the Machine, Redintegrata Europa pace, securitate fœderum stabilita, commercio, feliciter restituta, sub auspiciis opt. principis latetur S. P. Q. B. — To give Peace to Europe, to secure the Faith of Treaties, to restore and enlarge commerce, is the auspicious Work of a British King, the Triumph of a British People.

On the right Side of the Machine, Hinc principem bello accingit, libertati devota, fortitudo. Illinc pacificum ostendit, saluti omnium consulens, clementia. — A Prince never disposed to engage in War but from a Fortitude sacred to Liberty. Ever studious of Peace from Clemency, intent on the Publick Good.

On the Attick in the Middle of the back Front, Georgio II. Regi opt. auctori salutis, libertatis vindici, fundatori quietis, patri patriæ. — To the Guardian of our Safety, the Assertor of our Liberty, the Establisher of our Tranquility, the most gracious Sovereign, and Father of his People, George the second.

The Statues which adorned it were twenty-three, viz.

On the first Half-pace of the great Stair-Case on the right-Hand was the Figure of Tame ; on the left Isis, each reclining on an Urn.

In the Center of the Temple, seated on an Altar, was the Goddess of Peace, holding an Olive Branch, and supported on the right by Neptune, and on the Left by Mars. These five were cast in Plaster of Paris.

In the Front were four Statues, viz. Justice, Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence. On the right End, Religion, Constancy, Honour, Clemency. In the Back-front, Faithfulness, Vigilance. On the Attick above the Cornish in the Front, Jupiter, Ceres, Diana, Apollo. In the Back-front, at the Angles, were Mercury, Minerva.

The Pictures in the Front of the Machine were eighteen, each painted double : They at first appeared as Marble Basso Relievos, and after the Fire-work was played off they were removed by Machinery, and discovered Pictures representing the same Subjects in Colours, which were rendered transparent by a great Number of Lampions.

The great Picture over the Cornice in the Center of the Machine was twenty-eight Feet by ten. It represented his Majesty giving Peace to Britannia. The Attendants on Peace were

S H

Plenty,

Plenty, Riches, Felicity, Trade and Commerce. The Attendants on Britannia were Liberty, Agriculture, and the Arts and Sciences.

On the right of this, below the Entablature, was a Picture, fifteen Feet by eight, representing the Return of Neptune: He was riding on the Ocean in a Carr drawn by Sea-Horses: His right Hand held a Trident, and his left supported a Globe: He was conducted by the Genius of Peace, and attended by Tritons, Sea-Nymphs, &c. Companion to this, on the Left of the Central Arch, was the Return of Mars: He was seated on a Carr drawn by three Lions, the Arms of England, and was conducted by Fame, with an Olive Branch, who proclaimed the Peace. The Carr was followed by the Army.

On each Side of these two last Pictures was a Fesoon of Arms and Military Instruments.

On the Left was a Medaillon representing Britannia joining Hands with Spain: The Legend Salus mutua. Exergue, Brit. Hisp. Mutual Benefit. Britain, Spain. Below this was the Figure of Plenty.

The following Pictures were not rendered transparent, viz. The Genii of Peace burning Heaps of Arms on each End of the Machine.

At the right End were two Medaillons, one of Augustus: The other of Antoninus Pius. At the left End, two Medaillons, one of Vespasian: The other of Trajan. Underneath two Genii on each Side a Globe, one sitting with a Book in his Hand, the other standing, holding Parchments with Seals pendant, &c.

Disposition of the Fire-work.

After a grand Overture of warlike Instruments, composed by Mr. Handel, a Signal was given for the Commencement of the Fire-work, which opened by a Royal Salute of one hundred and one Brefs Ordnance, viz. seventy-one six Pounders, twenty twelve Pounders, and ten twenty-four Pounders.

The Salute ended, the Fire-work began to display itself as follows:

I. One hundred and twenty large Honorary Rockets. Ninety-six Rockets in two Flights. Twelve Mortars with Air Balloons. Twelve Caduceus Rockets. Twelve Girandole Rockets. — Fired together: Two regulated Pieces, each consisting of four Mutations, viz. 1. A large fixed Sun. 2. A Star of six Points, and between each Point a Ray. 3. A Star of ten Points. 4. A compound Figure, consisting of Points and Rays. Four large double Wheels moved by four Fires. — Twenty Tourbillons.

II. One hundred and twenty Honorary Rockets. Ninety-six Rockets in two Flights. Fourteen Mortars with Air Balloons. Twelve Caduceus Rockets. Twelve Girandole Rockets. — Fired together: Two regulated Pieces, consisting of vertical Motions communicating to fixed Fires, each having four Mutations, &c. 1. A vertical Sun, which communicated to, 2. A fixed Star of six Points, with six lucid Stars at the interior Points of the great Star. 3. A large vertical Sun moved by double Fires, which communicated to, 4. A beautiful Figure composed of a great Number of Brilliant Stars. Four large double Wheels moved by four Fires. — Twenty Tourbillons.

III. One hundred and twenty Honorary Rockets. One hundred and ninety-two Rockets in four Flights. Four Mortars with Air Balloons. Twelve Mortars with Air Balloons illuminated. Twelve Caduceus Rockets. Twelve Girandole Rockets. — Fired together: Two regulated Pieces, each consisting of a large Brilliant Wheel, whose Center was composed of a steady white Fire; from whence proceeded six Archimedean Screws, that formed as many Cones. Above these were ten Wheels of Frueli, that turned vertically and horizontally, so as to form one vast Globe of Fire, on the Area of which were several small Globes of a very white Fire. Four large quadruple Wheels moved by eight Fires. — Twenty-four Tourbillons.

IV. One hundred and twenty large Honorary Rockets. Ninety-six Rockets in two Flights. Four hundred Rockets in two Flights. Eighteen Mortars with Air Balloons illuminated. Twelve Caduceus Rockets. Twelve Girandole Rockets. — Fired together, three regulated Pieces: That in the Center was a Machine, from whence the Fire issued out, and retired within, twelve times alternately. When without, it formed a Glory: When within, it composed a Star of eight Points, and then changed to a Royal Brilliant Wheel, whose Fire was thirty Feet in Diameter, and was moved by twelve Fires. On each Side of this, was a Cascade of twenty-four Feet high, of three Mutations each, viz. 1. Four Falls of Fire of eight Feet each. 2. A magnificent Jet de Feu of forty Feet high. 3. A Pyramid of thirty Feet high, composed of Wheels with bright Planes in their Center, which terminated by projecting a hundred illuminated Globes from as many Pots de Brins. — One Mortar of nine Cylinders, with one large Air Balloon in each. Six hundred Rockets in two Flights.

V. One hundred and forty large Fountains, which formed all the Outlines of the Machine, and played thirty Feet high; at the same Time the Vases on the Pavillons appeared in Fire. Four hundred Pots de Brins. One hundred and ninety-two Rockets in four flights.

VI. Sixty-eight Pyramids of brilliant Fire, supporting fixed Suns of a red Fire, placed on the principal Lines of the Machine. Eight hundred Pots de Brins. One hundred and ninety-two Rockets in four Flights.

VII. One hundred and thirty Pots d'Aigrettes with two hundred and sixty Gerbes, which fired together and formed semicircular Arcades with Jets rising between. These extended along the principal Lines of the Machine, and terminated with one hundred and thirty Explosions of Serpents, Rains and Stars. One thousand two hundred Pots de Brins. One Mortar of nine Cylinders, with one large Air Balloon out of each. Two hundred and eighty-eight Rockets in six Flights.

VIII. Twenty-four figured Pieces on the Terraces and top of the Machine, viz. Ten Stars of eight Points, with a fixed Sun with curved Rays behind it. These fired together, and afterwards communicated to ten double Wheels.

Four

Four Pieces of a complicated Form, consisting of diagonal Wheels and vertical Globes. Two large quadruple Wheels, moved by six Fires each. Four large double Wheels, moved by four Fires, with Planes of bright Fire in their Center. Four single Wheels, moved by one Fire, with bright Planes as before. One thousand six hundred Pots de Brins. Three hundred and thirty-four Rockets in eight Flights.

IX. Nineteen large Sheets of Fire from the principal Parts of the Machine, composed of Gerbes, and from each arose a large Fountain. Two thousand Pots de Brins. Three hundred and eighty-four Rockets in eight Flights.

X. One hundred vertical Suns, that covered the Front of the Machine. Five thousand Marrons in Battery, which continued firing to the End of the Fire-works. Two thousand eight hundred Pots de Brins. One Mortar and nine Cylinders, with one large Air Balloon out of each. Four hundred and eighty Rockets in ten Flights.

XI. Fired together: The grand Sun on the Top of the Machine, composed of three Circles of Rays, whose Diameter of Fire was seventy Feet. In its Center appeared VIVAT REX in bright Fire, and all its Rays terminated with Reports. On each Side of this, and firing at the same Time, three Circles of Rays; their Diameter of Fire fifty Feet each, and their Rays likewise terminated with Reports. Behind the Statue of Peace a large Glory; a figured Piece, composed of Wheels, within the Apertures on each Side the Temple, with the Cyphers of G. R. before them. Two large Trees of Fire on each Terrace, forty Feet high, which terminated with Reports; and on each Pavillion a Pyramid of Fire, composed of Gerbes forty Feet high. These terminated by Explosions of Stars, Rains, and Serpents from fifty Pots d'Aigrettes.—Five hundred and seventy-six Rockets in twelve Flights. Three thousand two hundred Pots de Brins.

XII. A grand Girandole from the Top of the Machine, consisting of six thousand Rockets, headed with Stars, Rains, and Serpents, which formed one Flight.

XIII. The Machine became illuminated; the allegorical Pictures, which appeared in Basso Relievo, were removed by Machinery, and discovered the same Subjects in transparent Colours, and the Area before the Machine was beautifully illuminated with Variety of Designs. These continued burning a considerable Time.

An Abstract of the Number of Pieces fired on this Occasion.

Sky-Rockets: Honorary four hundred and eighty-two. Caduceus forty-eight. Girandole forty-eight. In Flights ten thousand and seventy-two. Total, from four Ounces to six Pounds Weight, ten thousand six hundred and fifty.

Air Balloons eighty-seven. Tourbillons eighty-eight. Regulated Pieces twenty-one. Figured Pieces thirty. Pots d'Aigrettes one hundred and eighty. Pots de Brins twelve thousand two hundred. Cascades twenty-one. Vertical Suns and Wheels one hundred and thirty-six. Fixed Suns seventy-one. Fountains one hundred and sixty. Grebes two hundred and sixty. Lances three thousand seven hundred. Marrons five thousand.

His Majesty and the Duke of Cumberland, attended by the Dukes of Montague, Richmond, and Bedford, and several others of the Nobility, were at the Library to see the Fire-works, from whence they walked about seven o'Clock into the Machine; after viewing which, his Majesty made a Present of a Purse to the Officers employed in the different Branches. The whole Band of Musick [which began to play soon after six o'Clock] performed at his Majesty's coming and going, and during his Stay in the Machine.

About Eleven the whole Building was illuminated, and continued so till between two and three o'Clock. His Majesty and the Royal Family withdrew about Twelve.

By one of the large Rockets darting straight forward into the Scaffold next the Library, it set Fire to the Cloaths of a young Lady, which would have soon destroyed her, but some Persons present having the Presence of Mind to strip her Cloaths off immediately to her Stays and Petticoat, she escaped with only having her Face, Neck, and Breast a little scorched.

One Curtis, a Painter, fell from the Temple and was killed, as was a Lad by falling from a Tree; and a Man fell into the Pond next to the Fire-works, and was drowned.

On Saturday, the first of July, two Sailors thinking themselves ill used at a House, the Sign of the Crown, near the New Church in the Strand, went out, denouncing Vengeance, and, in a little Time, returned with a great Number of armed Sailors, who entirely demolished all the Goods, cut all the Featherbeds to Pieces, and strewed the Feathers in the Street; demolished all the Wearing-Apparel, and turned the Women they found in the House naked into the Street; they then broke all the Windows, and considerably damaged another House adjoining. A Guard of Soldiers was sent for from the Tilt-Yard; but they came too late to prevent the Destruction of every Thing in the House. The next Night the Rioters returned, and treated two more Houses in the Strand much in the same Manner; and, the Day following, made the same Attempt on a House in the Old-Bailey, but it did not come up to that Height as in the Strand, most of the Goods being removed before the Attack began. A Guard of Officers and sixty Soldiers were ordered to do Duty near Temple-Bar, and at Night a Party of them did Duty in the Old-Bailey, to prevent any more riotous Proceedings. Nine Persons concerned in these Riots were committed to Newgate.

On the eleventh, the Company of Clockmakers of the City of London were heard before the Court of Aldermen, upon their Petition to be admitted on the Livery, when it passed in the Negative. There were present twenty Aldermen, twelve of whom voted against their being admitted, six for it, and two were neuter.

On the twenty-first a great Number of Porpises came up with the Tide, almost to London-Bridge.

In the Night of the twelfth of August, about ten o'Clock, a Fire broke out in the Building next the Dye-house of Mr. Spence, near Battle-Bridge, Southwark, which consumed the same, with the Brew-house of Mess. Cox and Chickley, four Wharfs, Wharfs, Mr. Walter's Cooperage, and about eighty Houses, with almost all the Goods and Furniture contained in them, besides many Houses greatly damaged. There being a Loft full of Straw adjoining to the Place where it began, the Flames instantly communicated themselves to several wooden Houses, which burnt with such Violence as made all Help for some Time ineffectual, the Tide being then at Ebb, and rendered it the most dreadful Sight that can be imagined to People on the Water and the opposite Shore: However, at length, several Engines being brought, it was happily stopped, just as it was spreading itself to some Warehouses filled with Goods to a great Value. Some Coasters that lay along-side the Wharfs had their Rigging burnt.—In this Calamity three Men and one Woman lost their Lives, and one Man had his Leg broke; and, on Sunday Morning, a Man was killed by the Fall of a Stack of Chimnies. Upwards of two thousand Quarters of Malt, besides a large Quantity of Hops, and eight hundred Butts of Beer, were lost by this Accident, the Damage of which was said to be about fifty thousand Pounds.

Accident at Bartholomew-Fair.

On Wednesday the twenty-third, in the Evening, a Gallery in Mr. Phillips's Booth in Bartholomew-Fair fell down, with a great Number of People in it; by which Accident Mr. Stringfellow, a Goldsmith in Aldersgate-Street, and Thomas Hodges, a Journeyman Plasterer in Golden-Lane, were killed; several others were dangerously wounded, two of whom, who had their Limbs broke, were carried to St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

Poultry.

On Sunday the twenty-seventh, about half an Hour after Three in the Morning, a Fire broke out at Mr. Harwood's, in Grocers-Alley, in the Poultry, which burnt that House, and Mr. Medley's adjoining, and three other Houses, and very much damaged the Poultry Compter, a Loft adjoining to the Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor, adjoining to Grocers-Hall, and several other Houses. There were above fifty Persons in the Compter for Debt, &c. who were all set at Liberty for Fear of being burnt; above forty of them afterwards returned. The Felons, nine in Number, escaped at the same Time, and only one was retaken.

On the eighth of September, Thomas Wallis, Esq; lately elected one of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, having sworn off, and Thomas Corbet, Esq; the other Sheriff-elect, having been chosen under the Denomination of Salter, whereas it should have been Grocer, a new Election came on that Day; when Stephen Theodore Janssen, Esq; Alderman and Stationer, and a worthy Representative in Parliament of this City, and Thomas Corbet, Esq; Citizen and Grocer, were chosen by a Majority of Hands; but a Poll was demanded and granted in Favour of William Whitaker, Esq; Alderman and Clothworker, against Mr. Corbet, which began the next Day, and ended on the sixteenth; when Mr. Alderman Whitaker was declared duly elected, the Numbers for him being six hundred and fifty-nine, and for Mr. Corbet one hundred and five.

On the eighteenth of October, his Majesty, upon the Report made of the nineteen Malefactors condemned last Sessions at the Old-Bailey, having been pleased to reprieve Mooney, Donnavan, and Crow-

ford, for Transportation, and to reprieve Wilson (one of the Rioters in the Strand, who was afterwards pardoned) the Night before the Execution, the other fifteen suffered Death that Day at Tyburn. And, as there were some Circumstances memorable in this Execution, it is proper to be a little more particular. About Nine in the Morning the Criminals were put into the Carts. Mr. Sheriff Janssen, holding his white Wand, and on Horseback, attending the Execution, accompanied by his proper Officers. At Holborn-Bar Mr. Sheriff dismissed, very civilly, the Party of Foot-Guards, who otherwise would have marched to Tyburn. The Multitude of Spectators was infinite. Tho' a Rescue had been threatened by many (on Account of Wilson and Penlez, the two ill-fated young Rioters, both of whom were expected to suffer) there yet was not the least Disturbance, except during a Moment at the Gallows, where a vast Body of Sailors, some of whom were armed with Cutlasses, and all with Bludgeons, began to be very clamorous, as the unhappy Sufferers were going to be turned off; which Mr. Sheriff perceiving, he rode up to them, and enquired, in the mildest Terms, the Reason of their Tumult. Being answered, that they only wanted to save the Bodies of their Brethren from the Surgeons, and the Sheriff promising that the latter should not have them, the Sailors thanked the above Magistrate, wished every Blessing to attend him, and assured him that they had no Design to interrupt him in the Execution of his Office. The Criminals seemed all very penitent, and were turned off about Twelve.—It was hoped, that the remarkable Example set by that Magistrate, in executing (agreeable to our Constitution and antient Custom) his Office, without a military Aid, would be productive of the most happy Effects in a Multitude of other Instances, and prevent the Soldiers from being called in to quell every little Disorder.

About this Time a Grant passed the Great Seal, wherein his Majesty was pleased to re-incorporate, singular, all the Freemen of the Art of Butchers of the City of London, and all others who then used or exercised, or should thereafter use and exercise the Art within the said City, the Liberties and Suburbs thereof, or in any Place within two Miles from the said City, by the Name of the Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Art or Mystery of Butchers.

This Month is also memorable for the following Certificate, in which the antient Franchises of the Citizens of London, and their Goods being free from all Toll, &c. thro' the whole Realm of England, is asserted and maintained, at the Request and Suit of Mr. Richard Holland, when it was invaded by some, and given up by others:

In Witness whereof we, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the said City of London, have caused the Great Seal of the Office of the Mayoralty of the said City to be affixed to these Presents.

On the fifth of December a remarkable Cause was heard in the Lord-Mayor's Court, in which
No. 57.

a Club of Journeymen Painters were Plaintiffs, and Mr. Row, a Painter in Lawrence-Lane, Defendant, for employing a Person not free, to work in the City, which lasted several Hours, many Witnesses being examined on both Sides. Upon the Evidence of the most eminent Master Painters in London it appeared, that, from the Want of free Journeymen of the Trade, it was not possible for the Summer Business of the City to be done, without the Assistance of at least an equal Number of Non-Freemen; and that no Freeman was ever refused, or could sometimes be got on any Terms. But the Affair turned on the Force of a By-Law, made by the City in the Reign of Queen Anne, which was very learnedly argued by the Council. The Jury went out at two o'Clock in the Afternoon, and returned twice without agreeing on the Verdict, but were sent out again, and, after staying a long Time, were ordered to be confined to the Room without Fire, Candle, or any Sustenance, by an Officer sworn to observe the same, and to attend them; where they remained till Six the next Morning, when they brought in a Verdict for the Plaintiffs.

At a Court of Common Council held at Guildhall, a Petition of the Masters in the several handicraft Trades, &c. Freeman of this City, praying Liberty to employ Foreigners under certain Restrictions, was taken into Consideration; as was also the Petition of the Journeymen, against the Masters Petition; when, after great Debates, the Petitions were ordered to be printed and distributed to the Members of the Court, and further Consideration to be had at their next Meeting, a Majority appearing in Favour of the Journeymen.

On Thursday, the twenty-eighth of December, the Sun did rise eclipsed to all the Parts of these Kingdoms, London, and those Places that are East thereof, and not greatly differing in Latitude, excepted. Committee to examine the Disputes between the Masters and Journeymen.

ON the eighth of February, 1750, a Committee, consisting of six Aldermen and ten Commoners, appointed to hear and examine the Disputes between the Masters of the several Trades in this City and the Journeymen Freemen, met, for the first Time, in the old Council-Chamber at Guildhall; when it was agreed to appoint the Tuesday following, at nine o'Clock in the Morning, to admit a Committee of thirty Masters to make their Complaints against their Workmen, and to allow the same Number of Journeymen to attend, to hear the same; and, on the eighth, a Committee of Masters appeared before the Committee of Aldermen and Commons at Guildhall, in Support of their Allegations; at the same Time the Journeymen, consisting of the same Number, chosen out of their Body, attended in Support of their Rights and Privileges, and to hear the Objections made against them by their Masters: When, after several Hours spent in hearing each Side, they, by several Adjournments, continued their Examination till the twenty-first of June following, when the Report of the Committee appointed to examine the Petitions of the Masters and Journeymen Freemen was read:

To the Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

Report of the Committee.

"Whereas by an Order of this honourable Court, bearing Date the twenty-fifth Day of January last, it was referred to us, whose Names are hereunto subscribed, (with others) to examine and consider the Allegations of the Petition of the several Persons whose Names are subscribed thereto, Citizens of London, and Liverymen of their respective Companies there under-mentioned, in Behalf of themselves, and the rest of the Citizens of the said City, who occupy or use any Trade, Handicraft, or Mystery, within the same, as Masters, which was read in this Court the fourteenth of December last; also a second Petition of the several Masters, Tradesmen, and Artificers, Freemen of the City of London, whose Names are thereunto subscribed; likewise a Petition of the several Persons, whose Names are thereunto subscribed, Freemen of London, Masters and Journeymen of the several Trades, Handicrafts, and Manufactures, there under-mentioned, as well in Behalf of themselves, as the rest of their Brethren, Citizens and Freemen; and also another Petition of several Persons, whose Names are thereunto subscribed, being Journeymen Masons

"and Freemen of this City, for themselves, and in Behalf of all other free Journeymen of the same Trade, and to report how we find the same, together with our Opinions thereon, to this Court:

"We humbly certify, that, in Pursuance of the said Order, we have had several Meetings for the Purpose aforesaid, and have examined the Allegations of the said several Petitioners, and likewise heard the said Petitioners in Support thereof, and have come to the following Resolutions:

"That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Matters complained of by the several Petitioners require some Regulation.

"That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the present Method of Proceedings in the Mayor's Court against Persons employing Non-Freemen likewise requires some Regulation.

"That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of this City be empowered, from Time to Time, upon Application, any Tuesday, by any Master Freeman, to give Leave to employ any Number of Non-Freemen to work under him within this City and Liberties thereof, and for such Time, and under such Restrictions, as the Court shall think necessary and proper; but in Case there shall be any Tuesday on which the said Court shall not be held, that then the Lord-Mayor for the Time being, upon such Tuesday, shall have the like Power.

"That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That no Freeman of this City shall be liable to the Penalty, which, by an Act of Common Council, made and passed the fourth Day of July, 1712, is inflicted for setting to work any Person being a Foreigner from the Liberties thereof, if, on Trial of the Action to be brought against him for such Penalty, it shall be proved, to the Satisfaction of the Court and Jury who shall try the same, that the Defendant in such Action had, immediately before his setting such Foreigner to work, used his best Endeavours to procure a Journeyman, being a Freeman, to work with him, and could not procure any such Freeman, being a fit and proper Person to be employed by him in his Work; and that the Notice required by the said Act of Common Council shall henceforth be personal Notice, and in Writing.

"And your Committee beg Leave to observe, That, in the Course of their Enquiry how, and in what Manner Prosecutions have been commenced, it does appear, that the necessary Method of Proceeding, pursuant to the By-Laws, is in the Name of the Chamberlain; but that the Chamberlain is so far from being concerned in these Actions, that his Name is made Use of without any Application to him, and that he has no Advantage or Benefit of any Kind whatsoever arising therefrom.

"All which we humbly submit to this honourable Court, the twentieth Day of May, 1750.

And, on the twenty-second of November, was held a Court of Common Council at Guildhall, and, after a Debate of near four Hours upon the Bill for licencing Foreigners to work in the City, and some Alterations made therein, it passed unanimously,

Bill for licencing foreign Journey-
men.

"That, after the first Day of December next, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen might grant a Licence to a free Master, who has used his best Endeavours, and cannot procure a sufficient Number of fit and able free Journeymen to carry on his Business, to employ such a Number of Foreigners, for or during such Time or Times, and under such Restrictions, as to the said Court shall seem fit and necessary.

"That on any Tuesday, on which no Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen shall be holden, the Power above-mentioned, so as the same do not exceed the Space of six Weeks, should be vested in the Lord-Mayor for the Time being.

"That no Licence should be granted, by Virtue of this Act, to any Freeman to employ any Foreigner, unless he has one Apprentice at least, or has had one Apprentice within twelve Calendar Months next before his Application for such Licence.

"That no Freeman should be enabled to employ any Foreigner by Virtue of this Licence, until he has registered the Christian and Surnames, and Place of Abode of the said Foreigner, and in what Business he is to be employed, with the Town-Clerk of this City for the Time being, who is to enter the same in a Book to be kept for that Purpose, he being paid two Shillings and six Pence for every Licence so to be registered; which Book any Freeman of this City should have Liberty to inspect, gratis, every Day between twelve o'Clock at Noon and Two in the Afternoon, (Sundays excepted;) and if any Person registered by Virtue of this Licence should leave his Master's Service, or be discharged the same, the Town-Clerk is, upon Application, to insert and enter in the Licence and register another Person's Name, in the Room of the Person discharged, for the remaining Term of the Licence, without any Fee.

"That the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen have a Power to revoke, or call in any Licence, tho' the Time limited therein be not expired."

An Earthquake.

The same Day, between Twelve and One at Noon, the Shock of an Earthquake was felt all over the Cities of London and Westminster, and Parts adjacent, the Chairs shaking in the Houses, and the Pewter rattling on the Shelves. It was felt very sensibly on both Sides the River Thames, from Greenwich almost to Richmond, insomuch that in all the Places the Inhabitants were struck with so great a Panick, that they left their Houses, and ran into the Streets, being apprehensive that the Houses were falling. The Counsellors in the Court of King's-Bench and Chancery in Westminster-Hall, were so alarmed, that they expected the Building would be demolished. At Hampstead, Highgate, and all round, within six Miles of London, it was felt very sensibly, at the two above-mentioned Places more particularly. In London it was felt most by the Inhabitants bordering near the River Thames, but was very perceptible in all Parts; and at Limehouse, Poplar, &c. it was so violent, that some Chimneys were thrown down: Several Boats, and Ships at their Moorings in the River, received a surprising Shock therefrom. In Leadenhall-Street Part of a Chimney was thrown down, as was also a wooden Building in Davis's-Rents, Southwark. In several Parts of London the Pewter fell from the Shelves to the Ground. By a Person who came from Hertford we were assured, that the same was felt very much there; and we were also assured, that it was very sensibly felt at Gravesend.

Another
Earthquake.

And again, on the eighth of March in the Morning, at half an Hour after five o'Clock, the Town was alarmed with another Shock of an Earthquake, which was generally allowed to be more violent, and of a longer Continuance, than that which was felt that Day Month. It was attended with a great rustling Noise as of Wind, and Numbers of People were awaked from their Sleep merely by the Violence of it; tho', thank God, it did no other Mischief than throwing down several Chimneys, and damaging some Houses. The Shock was so great in some Parts, that the People ran from their Houses and Beds almost naked, being in great Consternation at this unusual Visitation. In the high Grounds by Grosvenor-Square, &c. it was said to have been felt more than in other Parts, the Brasses and Pewters of several Kitchens being thrown down, and to some Distance from the Shelves. In St. James's Park, and all the open Places, the Ground moved very perceptibly, and the Noise seemed to break three Times. It was observed, about five o'Clock, that there was a continual, tho' confused Lightning, till within a Minute or two of the Shock being felt, which darted very low, and the Flashes were great and strong. It was reported by a great many People, that there was a small Shock between One and Two the same Morning. The great Shock at first mentioned was felt at Cept-Hall, at Loughton, and in the Skirts of Epping next to London, but not in Epping-Street; likewise at Theobald-Mount and Nettiswell. It was felt also at Chesham, Ware, and Hertford, and very violent at Waltham; also at Bromley, Beckenham, and Croydon, in Kent, at which two last Places it occasioned the Hammers of the Clocks to strike upon the Bells.

Bishop of London's Letter on the Occasion

A most excellent Letter from the Lord Bishop of London to the Clergy and People of London and Westminster, on Account of the late Earthquakes, was published on this Occasion; wherein his Lordship took Notice, that it is every Man's Duty to give Attention to all the Warnings, which God in his Mercy affords to a sinful People, and lamented the general Depravity of the Times, the horrid Oaths and Blasphemies, and the detestable Lewdness and Impiety, Luxury and Love of Pleasure, that prevail among us. "While I was writing this, says he, I cast my Eyes upon a News-Paper of the Day, and counted no less than

"than fifteen Advertisements for Plays, Operas, Musick and Dancing, for Meetings at Gardens, for Cock-fighting, Prize-fighting, &c. Should this Paper go Abroad, what an Idea must it give there of the Manner in which Leut is kept in this Protestant Country?" He in the End earnestly exhorts Parents and Masters of Families to take Care of their Children, and those committed to their Charge: "Reformation, says he, must begin in private Families: On you therefore, Fathers and Mothers, your Country and the Church of God call for Assistance; your Endeavours may go a great Way towards saving us, and this wicked Generation may be spared, for the Hope of seeing the next better." In a Word, let every Man, whatever his Station is, do his Part towards averting the Judgments of God. Let every Man reform himself, and others, as far as his Influence goes. This is our only proper Remedy: For the dissolute Wickedness of the Age is a more dreadful Sign and Prognostication of divine Anger, than even the trembling of the Earth under us."

For which, the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen returned his Lordship their unanimous Thanks, on the twenty-second of the same Month.

The Fear of another.

A crazy Lifeguard-man having taken upon himself to prophesy, that a third Shock of an Earthquake, much more terrible than the two former, would happen on Thursday Morning, being four Weeks after the second, as the second was just four Weeks after the first, it is almost impossible to conceive the Consternation with which many credulous People were seized upon such a silly Prognostication. Great Numbers on that Day, and some Days before, not only retired from their Habitations and Business into the Country themselves, but some even locked up their Houses, and took their whole Families along with them; and others sat up, not without some Terror, till the predicted Time was past, which was to have been between Twelve and One at Night. Nor was this Panick yet over, because some were so ignorant or foolish as to think, that, tho' the Shock did not happen on Thursday, it was still to be feared on Sunday, being the eighth Day of the Month, because the other two happened on the eighth Day of the Month, viz. the eighth of February and the eighth of March. As to the Lifeguard-man, he was sent to the Mad-House, as the properest Place for him, before he could see the Issue of his Prediction.

Alderman
Blackiston
sworn in.

On the twelfth of June, at a Court of Aldermen held at Guildhall, Matthew Blackiston, Esq, was sworn in Alderman of Bishopsgate Ward. There was a Petition presented to the Court, signed by many of the Inhabitants of the said Ward, signifying their Apprehension of his being unqualified; which the Court considered of, and, after Debate, divided; when eleven of the Aldermen were for swearing him, and ten against it. The Votes stood as follow:

Sir William Smith withdrew. Mr. Alderman Chitty did not vote. Sir Joseph Hankey and Mr. Alderman Baker were absent. At the same Time Thomas Chitty, Esq, was sworn in Alderman of Tower Ward.

On the twenty-fifth of June, about Four in the Afternoon, a Man, dressed in a white Waistcoat and a green Apron, fell from the Top of the Monument, and was miserably dashed to Pieces. The Manner of his Falling was this: In the iron Gallery there is a live Eagle to be seen, for which it is customary to pay a Penny; but the Person not being there to shew it, it being inclosed in a wooden Cage, he, in projecting his Body too far over the Rails, to look in at the back Part of the Box, which is open to the iron Work, lost his Hold, fell against the Top of the Pedestal, and from thence against one of the Posts in the Street, whereby the Top of his Skull was laid open, and the other Parts of his Body terribly shattered.

The Princess of Wales being delivered of another Prince, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, waited on their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their congratulatory Address; which was read by Richard Adams, Esq; and was as follows:

Prince
born.

"May it please your Royal Highnesses,

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Councilmen of the City of London, humbly beg Leave to present our most sincere and hearty Congratulations to your Royal Highnesses on the Birth of another Prince, and the happy Recovery of her Royal Highness.

"We cannot at present better shew our Loyalty to the King, than by paying our Duty to your Royal Highnesses, and expressing our united Joy at this Increase of his Majesty's Family.

"We consider every Child of your Royal Highnesses, as an additional Security of the People's Happiness and Freedom; by your Examples they will learn the Practice of every social Virtue, to be earnest and zealous in the Cause of Liberty, and to maintain our religious and civil Rights: May we never want one of your Royal Highnesses Descendants to reign over a free, grateful, and obedient People."

To which his Royal Highness returned the following Answer:

"My Lord, and Gentlemen,

"I return you my Thanks, and those of the Princess, for this very remarkable Instance of Duty to the King, and Regard for us.

His Royal Highness's
Answer.

"The Expectations you express to have of my Children are most agreeable to me: May they always

"always be a Blessing to this Nation, and maintain the Liberty, Wealth, and Power it ought to have.

"The City has always shewn so much Partiality to me, that they may be assured, none of their Fellow-Citizens can be warmer than I am for promoting their Welfare and their Trade."

Hail,
Thunder,
&c.

On the twelfth of July there was a most violent Storm of Lightning, Thunder, Rain, and Hail: In a short Time all the Streets were under Water, and the Hail broke the Sky-lights in a great many Places. The Gardeners Grounds round London received incredible Damage, especially on the Surry Side. There were several other Thunder-Storms this Month, attended by heavy Rains, both at London and in several Parts of the Country, from whence we had various Accounts of Damage done by them.

Robert Solomon broke out of Newgate.

On the twenty-third of August, about two o'Clock in the Morning, Robert Solomon, a Smuggler, who was tried and convicted about two Years before, and detained for a Fine of ten thousand Pounds to the Government; and Robert Clarke, an outlawed Smuggler, not then tried, broke out of Newgate by the following Stratagem, and got clear off: Their Friends had at different Times conveyed to them divers Pieces of Board, with Plates at each End, so contrived as to be put together with Screws, Nuts, and Grooves, so as to form a Plank capable of bearing a thousand Weight; which they laid from their Window in the Press-Yard to the Ridge of a House in Phoenix-Court, from which they descended, by Means of some Sheetting and Blankets, tied together in strong Knots, and fastened to the Building.

Merchants prosecute Thieves.

The Merchants of this City finding themselves greatly injured by a new Sort of Thieves and Robbers, on the River Thames and the several Keys, appointed a Committee out of their own Body to enquire into those Felonies, and to prosecute such as should be taken in the Fact, and also the Receivers; who thought fit to order Prosecutions to be carried on at the Assizes for Kent against five notorious Offenders, committed to the New-Gaol by Justice Hammond, for stealing from Mr. Crowley's Wharf, at Greenwich, no less than five Tons and one thousand two hundred Weight of Iron within three Months only; and against two other Persons of great Substance, committed to the same Gaol, for buying the said Iron, knowing it to be stolen. From the Account of one of the Accomplices, who was admitted an Evidence, it appeared, that they stole seven thousand five hundred Weight of that Iron in one Night only, and that those conscientious Receivers generously gave them but half the Value for it.

of Horse-Guards as far as Temple-Bar, and, leaving them there, proceeded in his State Coach, attended by two others, in which were the Lords of his Bed-Chamber, &c. to Fishmongers-Hall in Thames-Street; where he was received, on his alighting, by Mr. Alderman Bethell, President of the Society of the free British Fishery, Mr. Alderman Janssen, Vice-President, Admiral Vernon, General Ogletborpe, and the rest of the Council of the said Society, and, at the Hall Door, by the Wardens and Court of Assistance of the Fishmongers Company, and by them conducted into the great Parlour, and placed in a Chair prepared for his Reception. Then Lieutenant-General Ogletborpe, after addressing his Royal Highness in a handsome Speech, which was most graciously answered, produced to his Royal Highness the Charter, as Governor of the Society, which he was pleased to order to be read; which was done accordingly, his Royal Highness always standing up bare-headed on the repeating his Majesty's Name. General Ogletborpe then presented it to his Royal Highness, who was pleased to deliver it to the Care of Sir John Bethell, Esq; the President. The Clerk of the Fishmongers Company then addressed his Royal Highness in a short Speech, wherein the Company begged Leave to be permitted at some future Opportunity to wait on his Royal Highness with the Freedom of their Company; which he was pleased to accept.

On the eighth of November the Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, waited on his Majesty, to congratulate him on his safe Return, and the Birth of a Prince; when Richard Adams, Esq; their Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Address:

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common-Council assembled.

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, your Majesty's truly loyal and faithful Subjects, humbly beg Leave, with most respectful Duty, to congratulate your Majesty on your safe Return to your British Dominions, and with Joy to express the Satisfaction we derive from your royal Presence amongst us.

To which his Majesty was pleased to return this most gracious Answer:

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this very affectionate Address. My Care and Attention shall never be wanting for the Support of the Trade and Commerce of my Subjects; and the City of London may always depend upon my Favour and Protection."

Westminster Bridge opened.

On the seventeenth of November, about twelve o'Clock at Night, the new Bridge at Westminster was opened with a Procession by several Gentlemen of that City, the chief Artificers belonging to the Work, and a great Number of Spectators, preceded by Trumpets, Kettle-Drums, &c. with Guns during the Ceremony. The first Stone of this Bridge was laid on Monday, the twenty-ninth of January, 1738-9, so that it had been eleven Years and nine Months building, but would have been finished sooner if one of the Piers had not given Way, and protracted the Time for completing the Work. 'Tis now allowed, by the Judges of Architecture, to be one of the grandest Bridges in the World. All the next Day, being Sunday, Westminster was like a Fair, with People going to view the Bridge, and pass over it. Thirty-two Lamps were fixed up, and twelve Watchmen appointed to do Duty every Night, to prevent Robberies and Irregularities.

Mr. Rossiter chosen Bridge-master.

On Tuesday the twenty-seventh was held a Court of Hustings at Guildhall, for the Election of an Under-Bridgemaister, in the room of Mr. Piddington, deceased. The Election was held by Mr. Sheriff Scott alone, Mr. Alexander being indisposed. The Candidates were, Mr. Rossiter, Haberdasher, Mr. Boxley, Barber, Mr. Thornbery, Grocer, Mr. Barton, Vintner; Mr. Chance, Distiller, Mr. Herbert, Clockmaker, Mr. Hall, Drug-gist, Mr. Illing, Coal-merchant, and Mr. Howard, Embroiderer. Upon holding up of Hands, a Majority, in the Sheriff's Opinion, appeared for Mess. Rossiter, Boxley, Chance, and Barton. Upon which they were severally nominated again, and the Majority fell greatly in Favour of Mess. Rossiter and Boxley, as indeed it had thro' the whole of the Election; but a great Number of the Liverymen being divided in their Opinion which had the Majority, the Friends of Mr. Rossiter desired that those two might be put up again; but this was not complied with, and accordingly Mr. Boxley was declared to have the Majority of Hands; upon which a Poll was demanded in Favour of Mess. Rossiter, Thornbery, Barton, Chance, and Herbert, against Mr. Boxley, who in Return demanded a Poll likewise, which began the next Day, and ended on Saturday at three o'Clock in the Afternoon, when Mr. Boxley declined, finding Mr. Rossiter gained on him in the Poll every Day. And, on Tuesday the fourth, a Court of Hustings was held, when Mr. Rossiter was declared duly elected Under-Bridgemaister. The Numbers polled for the several Candidates were as follow:

Mr. Rossiter	—	1460
Mr. Boxley	—	1141
Mr. Thornbery	—	266
Mr. Barton	—	243
Mr. Chance	—	179
Mr. Herbert	—	44
Total		3353

On the thirtieth in the Morning, it blew very hard, by which a great deal of Damage was done on the River, and several Lives lost. Among the rest, as a Gravesend Tilt-Boat was coming up, she was unhappily run down by a French Trader in Blackwall-Reach, and about twenty Persons perished.

High Wind.

A Distemper, like a violent Cold, attended with a profuse running at the Nose, seized the Horses almost universally this Month, not only in and about Town, but in all Parts of England. They were frequently taken ill on the Road, in the Coaches and Post-Chaises, &c. to the no small Interruption of Travelling, and Inconvenience of Passengers.

Distemper among Horses.

On the twentieth of October a Proclamation was published, promising and declaring, That any Person or Persons, who should discover and apprehend any Offender, who, at any Time since September the twentieth then last past, had committed, or, before the twentieth of December, 1751, should commit any Murder whatsoever, or any Robbery with open Force and Violence, or any Assault with any offensive Weapon or Instrument, with Intent to rob, in any Street, Highway, Road, Passage, Field, or open Place, in the Cities of London or Westminster, or within five Miles round the same, so as such Offender was convicted of the said Offences, or any of them, should receive, for every such Offender so apprehended and convicted, the Sum of one hundred Pounds, over and above the forty Pounds before granted by Act of Parliament, and all other Rewards to which such Person or Persons was intitled. And that, if the Person so discovering and apprehending any such Offender (excepting the Person actually giving a Wound in any such Murder) should have been an Accomplice in such Murder, Robbery, or Assault, he should have his Majesty's most gracious Pardon.

Proclamation, with a Reward, for apprehending Street-Robbers.

On the twenty-first, the Prime-Warden, the Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers, went in their Coaches in Procession, from their Hall in Thames-Street to Leicester-House, to present his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with the Freedom of their Company. The Prime-Warden, introduced by his Grace the Duke of Queensberry, presented his Royal Highness (who was seated, and surrounded by the young Princes and the Lords of his Court) with the said Freedom, in a Gold Box of exquisite Workmanship. At the same Time Mr. Temkyns, Clerk of the abovesaid Company, addressed his Royal Highness in a handsome Speech, as follows:

Prince of Wales accepts the Freedom of the Fishmongers Company.

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"The Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery of Fishmongers of the City of London, beg Leave to return their unfeigned Thanks for this

Mr. Temkyns, the Clerk, speaks.

"this additional Honour of being permitted to wait on your Royal Highness with your Freedom of their Company.

"This Worshipful Company, Sir, is fourth in Precedency of the several Companies of the City of London; but, Sir, inferior to none in Zeal and Affection to his Majesty, your Royal Highness, the Princess, and the whole Royal Family.

"The Fishmongers were incorporated so long ago as in the Reign of King Richard II. and their Charter has been renewed and confirmed in several Reigns since that Time.

"This Company, Sir, is famous for having had near threescore Lord-Mayors of the City of London, besides many of the most considerable Merchants and eminent Citizens, free of it; one of whom, Sir William Walworth, is recorded in History for his Bravery, in the fourth Year of Richard II. when he was the second Time Lord-Mayor of London, for destroying, with his own Hand, the notorious Rebel Watt Tyler, then at the Head of thirty thousand Rebels, and thereby putting an End to a very dangerous Rebellion, of which he was the Promoter and Ringleader.

"But, Sir, these are Honours no longer to be boasted of, when such infinitely greater are conferred by your Royal Highness, in condescending to accept of the Freedom of the Company."

His Royal Highness's most gracious Answer.

"Gentlemen,

His Royal Highness's Answer.

"All Marks of Regard that come from any Branch of the City of London, are very agreeable to me; and your Company will always find me a sincere and hearty Friend."

After the Fishmongers Company were withdrawn, the Prince was pleased to send back for Mr. Alderman Betbell, one of the Wardens of the said Company, and made several kind Enquiries with Regard to the present Transactions of the Society of the free British Fishery, of which his Royal Highness was Governor.

An Abstract of an Act for the better carrying on and regulating the Navigation of the Rivers Thames and Isis, from the City of London westward, to the Town of Cricklade, in the County of Wilts.

Anno vicefimo quarto Georgii Regis.

24 Geo. II.

The Preamble sets forth, "That the Rivers of Thames and Isis have, Time out of Mind, been navigable from London to Bercott, in the County of Oxford, and from thence westward beyond Litchlade, in the County of Gloucester. And that by an Act of 21 Jac. I. (intituled, An Act for making the River of Thames navigable for Barges, Boats, and Lighters, from the Village of Bercott, in the County of Oxford, unto the University and City of Oxford) the said Rivers were made navigable from the Village of Bercott to the City of Oxford: And that divers Abuses had been, and still are, committed by the Owners of the several Towing-Paths, and other Passages on the Banks of the said Rivers, and by the Owners of the Locks, Weirs, Turnpikes, Dams, Floodgates, and other Engines thereon; by Reason whereof, and other Exactions, the Price of Water-Carriage hath of late been very much raised, contrary to the Intent and Provision of divers good Laws made for the Regulation of the said Navigation; it is therefore enacted, That, for preventing all Abuses and Exactions which may lessen the Navigation of the said Rivers, and render the same less useful to the Publick, every Person assessed and paying to the Land-Tax of this or any future Year, in Respect of an Estate in Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, in his or their Possession, or in some Person in Trust for him or them, of the yearly Value of an hundred Pounds, in any or either of the several Counties of Middlesex, Surry, Berks, Bucks, Oxon, Gloucester, and Wilts; and also the Vice-Chancellor, and the Heads of Colleges and Halls in the University of Oxford; and the Mayor or chief Officer, for the Time being, of the Corporation and Borough Towns lying upon the said Rivers, shall be Commissioners for putting this Act in Execution; and every Commissioner before he shall act, except in the administering the Oath following to one another, which two of them are to do, shall take and subscribe the Oath following:

"I A. B. do swear, That I will, without Favour or Affection, truly, faithfully, and impartially execute, perform, and discharge the Office and Duty of a Commissioner, according to the Powers, Authorities, and Directions given and established by an Act of Parliament, intituled, An Act for the better carrying on and regulating the Navigation of the Rivers Thames and Isis, from the City of London westward, to the Town of Cricklade, in the County of Wilts, according to the best of my Skill and Knowledge.

"So help me God."

"And the same shall be kept by the Clerks of the Peace among the Records of the Sessions, for the respective Counties where the same shall be taken and subscribed.

"Seven, or more Commissioners, for the better putting in Execution the Powers hereby given them, shall, for the first Time, meet on the first of July next ensuing, at the Town-Hall in Reading, in the County of Berks; and from thence, by Adjournment, at the Town-Hall in the City of Oxford, on the fifth of August following; and, for the Time to come, shall hold a general Meeting upon the first Tuesday in July in every Year, at the Town-Hall in the City of Oxford; and another on the first Tuesday in September following, in every Year, at the Town-Hall of Reading, for such Time or Number of Days as they shall think convenient; and, at any of the said Meetings, shall adjourn themselves, from Time to Time, to such Place, and so from Place to Place, within the Counties of Middlesex, Surry, Berks, Buckingham, Oxford, Gloucester, and Wilts, and

Commissioners to set the Price of Carriage

"near to the said Rivers, as they shall think proper.

"Seven or more Commissioners, or a Majority of them, at their general Meetings, shall rate the Prices of Carriage by Water of all Sorts of Goods to and from the City of London westward, to the Town of Cricklade, or to or from thence respectively to any other Places upon the said Rivers, or to or from any Places upon the said Rivers, to any other Places thereon; and shall forthwith give publick Notice thereof in Writing, signed by several of them, and publish the same in the London Gazette, of which the Owners of all Vessels navigating the said Rivers are to take Notice, and also of all the Rates which shall from Time to Time be set: And, if any Person shall break, or act contrary to any other Rules or Constitutions, made either for the Benefit of the Proprietors or Owners of Mills, Locks, Lands, or Meadows, near the said Rivers, or otherwise, he shall, for every such Offence, forfeit five Pounds, unless in the Case of Offences on which other Penalties and Forfeitures are herein otherwise inflicted, to be recovered in a summary Way, by Information or Complaint to the Commissioners at any of their Sub-meetings, and to be applied, one Moiety to the Informers, and the other to the Party aggrieved by such Offence, and to be levied by Distress and Sale, in Manner before directed.

"No Commissioner shall sit in Judgment in the Execution of any of the Powers of this Act, where he is any wise interested or concerned.

"If any Person shall think himself aggrieved by any Rules, Constitutions, or Assessments made by the Commissioners, the Judges of Assize, at the Assizes held for the County wherein the Matter of Complaint principally ariseth, or of Nisi Prius, or Sitting of Nisi Prius at Westminster, when the Cause of Complaint shall arise in the County of Middlesex, may, upon Complaint brought within eight Months after making such Rules, &c. confirm, alter, or vacate the same.

"Every Barge-master, or Master of any Boat or Vessel, and Owner thereof, is to make good all Damages that shall be done by his Vessel or Crew, or by Persons ordinarily belonging to or going with such Vessels, either to the Goods laden on Board, or by fishing with Nets, or otherwise, or by shooting with Guns, or taking or destroying any Fish, Fowl, or Game; or to any of the Locks, Lock-Tackle, Weirs, Bucks, Winches, Turnpikes, Dams, Flood-gates, or other Engines; or to any Bridge or Lands, Trees, Meadows, or Grounds on the said Rivers, either with Men or Horses; and may be sued for the same by Action of Trespass, or otherwise; and, if the Trespass or Damage shall appear to have been so done by any Person ordinarily belonging to, or employed in such Barge or Craft, whereof he was Master or Owner, he shall be found guilty, and the Plaintiff shall recover his Damages, with full Costs of Suit.

"If any Barge-man or other Person belonging to any Vessel navigating the said Rivers, shall steal, sell, take, barter, consume, adulterate, or embezzle any Goods, Part of the Freight of such Vessel, and be convicted thereof before a Justice, who shall hear and determine such Complaint in a summary Way, either by Self-Confession, or the Oath of one credible Witness, he shall forfeit forty Shillings for every such Offence to the Informer, to be levied by Distress and Sale by Warrant from the said Justice; and, for Want of Distress or Non-Payment on Demand, he shall be committed to the House of Correction to hard Labour, for any Time not exceeding two Months, and the Informer shall be paid the said Sum of forty Shillings equally by the Treasurers of the two Counties, between which that Part of the River shall run, where the Offence shall be committed, upon producing a Certificate of the Conviction, under the Hand of the Justice before whom the Information shall be laid, and that the Offender had no Goods or Chattles whereon the Penalty could be levied.

"Two Commissioners, upon Complaint on Oath by any Tenants or Occupiers of Meadows, that the Water runs over the Water-mark, and that their Meadows are in Danger of being overflowed, may send a Warrant to the Constable of the same, or neighbouring Parish or Tithing where the Offence shall be committed, empowering him to give Notice of such Complaint to the Tenants or Occupiers of the said Locks, &c. and, on their Refusal, to compel them to open and keep open the same till the Water is sunk below the Water-Mark: And, if the Tenants or Occupiers of such Meadows shall sustain any Damage by the Waters being penned above the Water-Mark set by the Commissioners, or by the Occupiers of the said Locks, &c. neglecting or refusing to draw, after Notice, as aforesaid, three Commissioners, at any of their Sub-meetings within fourteen Days after, upon Proof, on Oath, of the Damage, may order such Satisfaction as they shall think just; and the Party not making Payment thereof within thirty Days after the Order, and Notice given thereof, shall forfeit five Pounds above the Sum so ordered, to be levied by Distress and Sale of his Goods and Chattles by Warrant from three Commissioners.

"Any Commissioner on his own View, or on Complaint to him, may order, by his Warrant, the Owners or Navigators of deep-loaded Vessels, forthwith to remove, by lightening their Vessel or otherwise, as he shall think fit, and to suffer light-loaded Vessels to pass; and, on Non-compliance with such Order, he may levy, by his Warrant, a Penalty not exceeding five Pounds, upon the Goods and Chattles of the Offender, or Tackle belonging to the Barge, as he shall think proper, or adequate to the Damage, to be paid to the Person next immediately sustaining the Damage, occasioned by his Vessel's being stopped.

"If, upon View of three or more Commissioners, or on Complaint on Oath to five of them, at any of their Sub-meetings, it shall appear that any Owner or Occupier of any Lock, &c. or any other Person, hath removed any Water-

"Mark

"Mark appointed by the Commissioners, such Person shall forfeit five Pounds, to be recovered at any of the said Sub-meetings, in a summary Way, by any Person who will complain or inform thereof, and to be levied by Distress and Sale.

"Seven or more Commissioners, at any of their General-meetings, may make an Order, under their Hands and Seals, for the cleansing and ballasting, and removing all Obstruction and Annoyances in the said Rivers; and for defraying the Charges thereof, and of printing and publishing the Orders of the Commissioners, and for making a Recompence to the Clerks of the Peace for transmitting Duplicates thereof, and for paying the Salaries of such Officers as they shall appoint for the inspecting the Execution of this Act; and they may set Rates to be paid by the Owners of every Boat or Vessel passing the Places so cleared, and appoint Receivers thereof, until a sufficient Sum can be raised to defray the Expence; and may empower, by Warrant, such Receivers to levy the Rates by Distress and Sale, and deduct the same, together with all Charges attending, rendering the Overplus to the Owner.

"The Owners of all Vessels of the Burthen of twenty Tons, or upwards, navigating the said Rivers, shall affix their Names and Places of Abode, and the Dimensions and Tonnage of their Vessels, on some conspicuous Place thereof, on Penalty of forfeiting forty Shillings for every Neglect, to any Person who will inform or complain thereof, and convict such Offenders before the Commissioners at any of their Sub-meetings, the same to be levied by Distress and Sale of the Offenders Goods.

"And whereas, for the improving the Navigation of the said Rivers Thames and Isis, it is found expedient to put such Part of the River Kennet, as is between the common Landing-place at Reading, and the Mouth of the said River, under the same Regulation and Management; it is therefore enacted, That the Commissioners appointed by this Act shall be appointed for carrying on and regulating the Navigation of the aforesaid Part of the River Kennet, in like Manner, in all Respects, as the Rivers Thames and Isis.

"This Act shall not extend to take away any Jurisdiction of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, or other Body politick or corporate, or other Person or Persons whatsoever."

A.D. 1751

Constitutional Queries.

The Year 1751 was introduced by a very extraordinary Affair in both Houses of Parliament. This was the Censure past on a certain seditious Paper, called, Constitutional Queries, earnestly recommended to the serious Consideration of every true Briton. Which Paper, either in Writing or Print, had been sent by the Penny-post to most Persons of Rank in Town, and left upon the Table at most Coffee-Houses in Westminster, by Persons unkown; and it seemed to charge some Persons of high Rank with Designs against his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. On the twenty-second of January, the Duke of Marborough communicated this Paper to the House of Lords, and moved for Resolutions against it, and that the Concurrence of the Commons might be desired; which Motions were agreed to, and the Commons accordingly, at a Conference, concurred, Nemine Contradicente, with the two following Resolutions, viz. Resolved,

"1. By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in Parliament assembled, That the said printed Paper, intituled (as above) is a false, malicious, scandalous, infamous, and seditious Libel, containing the most false, audacious, and abominable Calumnies and Indignities upon his Majesty; and the most presumptuous and wicked Insinuations, that our Laws, Liberties, and Properties, and the excellent Constitution of this Kingdom, are in Danger under his Majesty's legal, mild, and gracious Government; with Intent to instil groundless Suspicions and suspicious Jealousies into the Minds of his Majesty's good Subjects, and to alienate their Affections from his Majesty and his Royal Family.

"2. By the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in Parliament assembled, That, in Abhorrence and Detestation of such abominable and seditious Practices, the said printed Paper be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman, in the New Palace-Yard, Westminster, on Friday, January the twenty-fifth, at one of the Clock in the Afternoon; and that the Sheriff of Middlesex do attend at the same Time and Place, and cause the same to be burnt there accordingly."

After which it was resolved in each House, That an Address should be presented to his Majesty, to desire that he would give immediate Orders, that the most effectual Means should be taken for discovering the Author, Printers, and Publishers of a false, malicious, wicked, and seditious Libel, intituled (as above) and for bringing them to condign Punishment. To which Addresses his Majesty's Answer was, That he would give Directions accordingly; but no Person concerned has ever yet been discovered.

On the twenty-fifth, the Sheriffs of Middlesex attended in New Palace-Yard, to see a seditious Paper, intituled, Constitutional Queries, burnt there by the Hands of the common Hangman, pursuant to a Vote of both Houses for that Purpose. And, on the fifth of February, a Proclamation was published, offering the following Rewards for the Discovery of the Author, Printers and Publishers of the Constitutional Queries, &c. to be paid on Conviction, viz. for the Author thereof a thousand Pounds, for each of the Printers two hundred Pounds, and for each of the Publishers fifty Pounds; for the Payment of which said several Rewards, his Majesty gave necessary Orders to the Lords Commissioners of his Treasury.

At the Sessions at Hick's-Hall, one Milton was tried, upon an Indictment founded upon a Statute in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, for exercising the Art and Mystery of a Tin-Plate-worker, not having served a regular Apprenticeship to the same; when, after many learned Arguments by the Counsel on both Sides, the said Milton was acquitted, by Reason the Tin-

Plate-workers were not incorporated till many Years since that Statute.

Refutation concerning spirituous Liquors.

On the eighth of Jan. was held a Court of Common Council at Guildhall, when a Motion was made and passed, That the Town-Clerk should wait on the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Worcester, with the Thanks of that Court for his excellent Sermon against the excessive Use of spirituous Liquors, preached before the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Governors of the several Hospitals of this City, on Easter-Monday; a Copy of which his Lordship had sent to every Member of the said Court.

Another Motion was made, and unanimously agreed to, to petition the Honourable House of Commons, to apply such Remedy, as to their Wisdom should seem most proper, to prevent that pernicious Practice.

Addition of Salary to the Recorder's Office.

A Motion was also made, that two hundred and eighty Pounds per Ann. should be added to one hundred and twenty Pounds, the antient Salary of the Recorder, and paid to Richard Adams, the then Recorder of this City, as long he should continue in the said Office, unless he should thereafter be made a Judge of any of his Majesty's Courts, or accept the Office of Attorney or Solicitor-General; and in that Case the said Grant of two hundred and eighty Pounds was to cease; and the Question being put, it passed unanimously in the Affirmative. The Recorder being then called in, returned his Thanks to the Court for so distinguishing a Mark of their Approbation of his Conduct.

A great Number of Sailors assembled in a tumultuous Manner in Bartolomew-Lane, behind the Royal-Exchange, from a mistaken Notion of an Advertisement inserted in the Papers, in Expectation of receiving fifty Pounds per Man, as Bounty-Money, for the taking our Enemies Ships of War and Privateers, at the Fountain Tavern in Bartolomew-Lane; but being disappointed, they entered the House, seized the supposed Author of the Advertisement, put him in a Coach, and carried him in triumph, guarded by some hundreds of their Fraternity, to the Admiralty-Office; but, it being Asb-Wednesday, there was no Board; they afterwards conducted him to St. James's, where they was refused Admittance; on which they went to Justice Fielding, who told them the Affair was not cognizable before him, as it was transacted in the City, and therefore recommended them to the Lord-Mayor; whither they accordingly went, and his Lordship committed the Man to Newgate, from whence he was soon discharged: But a false Report being spread, that their Money was at Mr. Belchier's in Lombard-Street, they assembled in a tumultuous Manner before the said Gentleman's House, (which obliged several Bankers and Tradesmen to shut up their Shops) and continued in so riotous a Manner, that Alderman Winterbottom was desired to read the Proclamation against Rioters twice, from a Window at the Crown and Anchor in the same Street; during which Time the Lord-Mayor had sent for two Companies of Soldiers, the one from the Tower and the other from the Savoy, to prevent Disturbance. Thomas Smith, one of the Ringleaders, was taken into Custody for insulting the Alderman in his Office, and sent to Newgate, guarded by a File of Musqueteers, who were ordered back to the Royal-Exchange, to continue there 'till twelve o'Clock at Night, and then to be discharged, if there was no Appearance of Disorder.

Sir John Bosworth, who had for several Years been greatly declining in his Health, and rendered almost incapable of attending on the great Duty of his Office, by his Infirmities, surrendered the Chamberlainship of this City, on the sixteenth of April; and it being reported that the late Alderman Heathcote designed to offer himself as a Candidate to succeed him in that Office, that worthy Gentleman, then residing at Bath, published the following Address:

*Sir John
Bosworth's Resignation.*

"To the worthy Citizens and Liverymen of the Honourable City of London.

Gentlemen, Bath, April 25, 1751.

"I am extremely sorry that I find it necessary to trouble you with a publick Declaration, that the Report of my Intention to stand for the Office of Chamberlain is without Foundation.

*Mr.
Heathcote's Declaration.*

"If, by engaging again in publick Life, I could have the least Hopes of serving you, I could make a willing Sacrifice of my private Inclinations to Retirement, to the Duty I owe to you and my Country; but as the Office of Chamberlain calls not upon me in this Respect, I request the many worthy Fellow-Citizens, who have intended me this profitable Honour, to receive my declining it, as a Proof of the Sincerity and Truth of my former Professions, and that I have been perfectly disinterested in all my Endeavours to serve them and my Country. I take this Opportunity to express my grateful Sentiments of this fresh Instance of Regard to me, and to assure you that I am, Gentlemen,

Your most faithful and humble Servant,

George Heathcote."

On Tuesday, April the thirtieth, was held a Court of Hustings at Guildhall for the Election of a Chamberlain for the remaining Part of the Year, in the Room of Sir John Bosworth, Knt. Upon opening the Court, the Recorder made a handsome Speech to the Livery, and read Sir John Bosworth's Letter of Resignation, which was as follows:

Proceedings at the Election of a Chamberlain.

"To the Worthy Liverymen of the City of London.

Gentlemen,

"The Honour you conferred, and have so long continued to me, in the Office of Chamberlain, I once flattered myself would determine with my Life; but I find, after long and frequent Strugglings, that the shortest Residence in this Air, is now attended with so much Danger, and such great Distress, as disables me from discharging my Duty in a Manner suitable to its Importance, and even prevents my publick and personal Attendance on you this Day, which I very earnestly hoped and wished to have given. I am therefore, Gentlemen, in Justice to all my Fellow-Citizens, obliged to Request your Permission to resign

"resign an Office, which I am no longer equal to.

"But tho' this publick Relation, which has so long subsisted between us, will now have its Period; yet the most grateful Sense of your continual Favour and Indulgence, and your kind Acceptance of my imperfect Service, will ever live to my Remembrance, and warm my Heart with the firmest Attachment to your Interests; and I may reasonably hope, by thus withdrawing myself, to be the longer enabled to exert my best Endeavours, on all proper Occasions, for the Honour and Dignity of this antient and august City. I am,

"Gentlemen,

"Your most obliged,

Epist.
30 April, 1751.

"and obedient humble Servant,

"John Bosworth."

After this, the following Candidates were put in Nomination, viz. Mr. Richard Glover, Mr. Deputy Harrison, Mr. Deputy Hodges, Mr. Thomas Meakes, and Mr. Deputy Pycroft; when the Sheriffs declared Mr. Deputy Harrison to have the Majority of Hands; but a Poll was demanded by the Friends of Mr. Deputy Pycroft, Mr. Deputy Hodges, and Mr. Glover; which began the next Morning at Guildhall.

On Wednesday, May the first, the Poll at Guildhall was, for Deputy Harrison 705, Deputy Pycroft 338, Mr. Glover 327, and Deputy Hodges 276: So that Mr. Harrison gained the Majority of Mr. Pycroft 367; of Mr. Glover 378; and of Mr. Hodges 429. Thursday the Poll was, for Deputy Harrison 1246, Mr. Glover 588, Deputy Pycroft 542, Deputy Hodges 474. Friday Morning Mr. Deputy Pycroft and Mr. Deputy Hodges declined the Poll, which turned a little in Favour of Mr. Glover; and at the Close of that Day the Numbers stood thus, for Deputy Harrison 1686, for Mr. Glover 1074. Saturday, for Deputy Harrison 2938, for Mr. Glover 1558; Majority for Mr. Harrison 580. Upon which Mr. Glover signified his Intentions to the Sheriffs on Saturday Evening of his declining the Poll on Monday Morning, and accordingly did so; when the Books were publickly cast up on the Hustings, but the Numbers were not declared 'till the next Morning before the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, and Livery. There being the above Majority for Mr. Harrison, he was declared duly elected Chamberlain of London, and immediately paid his Respects to the Livery in the following Terms:

"Gentlemen,

Chamberlain Harrison's Speech.

"I return you my warmest and most sincere Thanks, for the very high Honour you have done me, in electing me Chamberlain of this great and opulent City.

"So honourable a Preference speaks the more favourable Opinion you are pleased to entertain both of my Integrity and Abilities: The former of these my Heart tells me you cannot be mistaken in, how partially soever you may have judged of the latter. I flatter myself therefore, that by a due Exertion of these Abilities (such as they are) in a diligent and conscientious Discharge of the important Trust reposed in me, I shall be honoured

"with the Continuance of your Favour and Protection.

"Give me Leave, Gentlemen, once more to thank you, and with a Heart overflowing with Gratitude to assure you, that I shall endeavour to Act, both in my publick and private Capacity, as becomes a faithful Servant of the Corporation, and a sincere Friend to every individual Member thereof."

Mr. Glover then addressed the Livery in the following elegant and pathetick Speech.

"Gentlemen,

"After the Trouble which I have had so large a Share in giving you, by my Application for your Favour to succeed Sir John Bosworth in the Office of Chamberlain, this Day so worthily supplied, I should deem myself inexcusable in quitting this Place, before I rendered my Thanks to those in particular who so generously have espoused my Interest; to your new-elected Chamberlain himself, and Numbers of his Friends, whose Expressions and Actions have done me particular Honour, amid the Warmth of their Attachment to him; to the two deserving Magistrates, who have presided among us with Impartiality, Humanity, and Justice; and lastly, to all in general for their Candour, Decency, and Indulgence.

Mr. Glover's Speech.

"Gentlemen, heretofore I have frequently had Occasion of addressing the Livery of London in publick; but at this Time I find myself at an unusual Loss, being under all the Difficulties which a Want of Matter, deserving your Notice, can create: Had I now your Rights and Privileges to vindicate, had I the Cause of your suffering Trade to defend, or were I now called forth to recommend and enforce the parliamentary Service of the most virtuous and illustrious Citizen, my Tongue would be free from Constraint, and, expatiating at large, would endeavour to merit your Attention; which now must be solely confined to so narrow a Subject, as myself. On those Occasions the Importance of the Matter, and my known Zeal to serve you, however ineffectual my Attempts might prove, were always sufficient to secure me the Honour of a kind Reception and unmerited Regard.

"Your Countenance, Gentlemen, first drew me from the Retirement of a studious Life; your repeated Marks of Distinction first pointed me out to that great Body, the Merchants of London, who, pursuing your Example, condescended to entrust me, unequal and unworthy as I was, with the most important Cause; a Cause, where your Interest was as nearly concerned as theirs. In Consequence of that Deference which has ever been paid to the Sentiments and Choice of the Citizens and Traders of London, it was impossible but some faint Lustre must have glanced on one, whom, weak as he was, they were pleased to appoint the Instrument on their Behalf; and if from these Transactions I accidentally acquired the smallest Share of Reputation, it was to you, Gentlemen of the Livery,

"Livery, that my Gratitude ascribes it; and I joyfully embrace this publick Opportunity of declaring, that whatever part of a publick Character I may presume to claim, I owe primarily to you. To this I might add the Favour, the twenty Years Countenance and Patronage of one, whom a supreme Degree of Respect shall prevent me from naming; and tho' under the Temptation of using that Name, as a certain Means of obviating some Misconstructions, I shall however avoid to dwell on the Memory of a Loss so recent, so justly, and so universally lamented. Permit me now to remind you, that when placed by these Means in a Light not altogether unfavourable, no lucrative Reward was then the Object of my Pursuit, nor ever did the Promises or Offers of private Emolument induce me to quit my Independance, or vary the least of my former Professions, which always were, and remain still founded on the Principles of universal Liberty; Principles, which I assume the Glory to have established on your Records; your Sense, Liverymen of London, the Sense of your great Corporation so repeatedly recommended to your Representatives in Parliament, were my Sense, and the principal Boast of all my Compositions, containing Matter imbibed in my earliest Education; to which I have always adhered, by which I still abide, and which I will endeavour to bear down with me to my Grave. And even at that gloomy Period, when deserted by my good Fortune, and under the severest Trials; even then, by the same Consistency of Opinions and Uniformity of Conduct, I still preserved that Part of Reputation, which I originally derived from your Favour, whatever I might pretend to call a publick Character, unshaken and unblemished: Nor once in the Hour of Affliction did I banish from my Thoughts the most sincere and conscientious Intention of acquitting every private Obligation, as soon as my good Fortune should please to return; a distant Appearance of which seemed to invite me, and awakened some flattering Expectations on the rumoured Vacancy of the Chamberlain's Office; but always apprehending the Imputation of Presumption, and that an higher Degree of Delicacy and Caution would be requisite in me than in any other Candidate, I forbore, 'till late, to present myself once more to your Notice, and then for the first Time, abstracted from a publick Consideration, solicited your Favour for my own private Advantage. My Want of Success shall not prevent my cheerfully congratulating this Gentleman on his Election, and you on your Choice of so worthy a Magistrate; and, if I may indulge a Hope of departing this Place with a Share of your Approbation and Esteem, I solemnly from my Heart declare, that I shall not bear away with me the least Trace of Disappointment."

The Number of Liverymen who polled at the former Election of Chamberlain was 6646, and at this last Election 4312.

On the twenty-fourth of July, the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited on his Majesty at Kensington, to congratulate him on the Birth of a Princess; when Richard Adams, Esq; the Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"We, your Majesty's loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London, humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, and the Birth of a Princess. City Address on the Birth of a Princess.

"As we are truly sensible of the Blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's Government, and are convinced that the Security of our Rights and Liberties, in Time to come, depends on the Protestant Succession established in your illustrious House; it is at this Time a peculiar Satisfaction to us, that we have once more the Honour of congratulating your Majesty on the Increase of your Royal Family.

"And, upon this Occasion, permit us, Sir, to render our most dutiful Thanks to your Majesty, for a late signal Instance of your Majesty's paternal Care of your People, in the Provision made by Parliament for the future Tranquillity of this Kingdom: A Provision moving primarily from your Majesty's Goodness, and brought to Perfection by your Majesty's Wisdom. Yet, wise and salutary as it is, we cannot forbear to express our Wishes, that a long Continuance of your Majesty's Life may make it unnecessary.

"Fixed in these Sentiments of Duty and Gratitude, our Prayers shall always be, that your Majesty may long reign over us; and that the Throne may be filled by your Majesty's Descendants even to remotest Ages."

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"I thank you for this fresh Instance of your Zeal and Affection for me and my Family. The City of London may always depend upon the Continuance of my Favour and Protection." His Majesty's Answer.

About two o'Clock on the twenty-seventh of July, the Infides of two Houses in Brewhouse-Yard, Shoe-Lane, fell in; by which Accident seven Persons were killed, and three had their Legs and Arms broke, and were otherwise very much bruised. One was taken out of the Rubbish without having received much Damage.

On the sixteenth of October was issued an Order of Privy Council against the Journeymen Taylors refusing to work for the Wages settled at the Quarter-Sessions in July then last, and committing Outrages, and for putting in Execution the Act of 7 George I. for regulating Journeymen Taylors within the Bills of Mortality, and other Laws against unlawful Combinations of Workmen, Riots, and Tumults; also promising a Reward of fifty Pounds each for the Discovery of Persons sending threatening Letters to Master Taylors; the sending threatening Letters without a Name, or with a fictitious Name, demanding Money, or any other valuable Thing, being by an Act of 9 George I. made Felony without Benefit of Clergy. Order of Council against Journeymen Taylors, &c.

On

*Motion to open the Port of London
for Oats.*

On the twenty-second, was a Hearing before the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, about laying open the Port of London for bringing in foreign Oats, pursuant to a Statute of 1 James II. empowering that Court in April and October to determine the common Prices of middling English Corn, by the Oaths of two substantial Persons of Middlesex and Surry, being neither Merchants, Cornfactors, Mealmen, nor Factors for importing Corn, nor interested in the Corn, and each having a freehold Estate of twenty Pounds, or a leasehold Estate of fifty Pounds per Ann. and by such other Ways as to them should seem fit; and if the same shall appear to be above sixteen Shillings a Quarter, they are to certify the same, with two such Oaths annexed, to the Commissioners of the Customs, to be hung up in the Custom-house. The Persons that made the Application were several Masters of Livery-Stables and Inn-keepers; and their Opponents were the Cornfactors; after a Hearing which lasted two Hours, it was decided for the Cornfactors, five Aldermen being for laying open the Port, and five with the Lord-Mayor, who threw in his casting Vote against it.

Twenty-seven human Skulls dig up.

The Workmen digging up a Terras at Sion House, about ten Feet from the Surface under the Walls, found twenty-seven human Skulls; one of them of a most enormous Size, with the Teeth all found and fast in the Jaws of them all; and seven Barrels of human Bones.

On the twenty-fifth, the Court at Guildhall, after a Hearing of several Hours, allowed the Journeymen Taylors two Shillings and six Pence a Day for the Summer Half-Year, and two Shillings for the Winter Half-Year, and three Half-Pence for Strong Beer, to work from six to seven, which is an Hour less than is prescribed by Act of Parliament.

Antiquarians incorporated.

And on the twenty-sixth, his Majesty granted his Royal Charter for incorporating several of his Majesty's loving Subjects, therein named, by the Name of the Society of Antiquarians of London, by which the Number of Fellows is limited to one hundred and fifty.

*Act of Parliament
22 Geo. II. for regulating the Hat, Silk,
&c. Manufactures.*

The Frauds and Abuses which were daily detected in our Manufactures of Hats, Woollen; Linen, Fustian, Cotton, Iron, Leather, Fur; Hemp, Flax, Mohair, and Silk, having brought the British Goods into Discredit in foreign Markets, and deprived the fair Trader and Manufacturers of great Part of their Gains: And Commerce being otherwise greatly impeded by unlawful Combinations of Journeymen Manufacturers: The High Court of Parliament, upon the humble Petition and Remonstrance of the Masters in these several Branches, enacted,

*Persons employed in the Manufactures herein particularized, being convicted of embezzel-ling, &c.
any of the Materials,*

"That if any Person or Persons whatsoever, who shall be hired or employed to make any Felt or Hat, or to prepare or work up any Woollen, Linen, Fustian, Cotton, Iron, Leather, Fur, Hemp, Flax, Mohair, or Silk Manufactures, or any Manufactures made up of Wool, Fur, Hemp, Flax, Cotton, Mohair, or Silk, or of any of the said Materials mixed one with another, shall, from and after the twenty-fourth Day of June, one thousand seven hundred and forty-nine, purloin, embezel, secrete, sell, pawn, exchange, or

"otherwise unlawfully dispose of any of the Materials, with which he, she, or they shall be respectively entrusted, whether the same, or any Part thereof, be or be not first wrought, made up, manufactured, or converted into merchantable Wares, or shall reel False or Short Yarn, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted, by the Oath or (if the Owner thereof be of the People called Quakers) solemn Affirmation of the Owner of such Goods or Materials; or by the Oath or Affirmation of any other credible Witness or Witnesses, or by the Confession of the Person or Persons charged with such Offence, before any one or more Justice or Justices of the Peace of the County, Riding, Division, City, Liberty, Town, or Place, where such Offence shall be committed, or where the Person or Persons so charged shall reside or inhabit (which Oath or Affirmation the said Justice or Justices is and are hereby empowered and required to administer) it shall and may be lawful to and for the said Justice or Justices, by Warrant under his or their Hand and Seal, or Hands and Seals; to commit the Person or Persons so convicted to the House of Correction, or other publick Prison of such County, Riding, Division, City, Liberty, Town, or Place, there to be kept to hard Labour for the Space of fourteen Days; and also to order the Person or Persons so convicted, to be once publicly whipt at the Market Place, or some other publick Place of the City, Town, or Place, where such Offender or Offenders shall be respectively committed; and in Case of a further Conviction, in Manner before prescribed by this Act, for or upon a second or other subsequent Offence of the same Kind, it shall and may be lawful to and for the Justice or Justices, before whom such Conviction shall be had, to commit the Person or Persons so again offending to the House of Correction, or other publick Prison as aforesaid, there to be kept to hard Labour for any Time not exceeding three Months, nor less than one Month, and also to order the Person or Persons so again offending, to be publicly whipped at the Market Place, or some other publick Place of the City, Town, or Place where such Offender or Offenders shall be respectively committed, twice or oftner, a to such Justice or Justices shall appear reasonable; any Thing in the said Act of the first Year of her said late Majesty's Reign, or in the said in part recited Act of the thirteenth Year of his present Majesty's Reign, to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

*or of reeling False or Short

to be committed,

and to publickly whipped,

Penalty of a further Conviction, or subsequent Offence.

"And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any Person or Persons shall buy, receive, accept, or take, by way of Gift, Pawn, Pledge, Sale, or Exchange, or in any other Manner whatsoever, of or from any Person or Persons, hired or employed to make any Felt or Hat, or to prepare or work up the Woollen, Linen, Fustian, Cotton, Iron, Leather, Fur, Hemp, Flax, Mohair, or Silk Manufactures, or any Manufactures made up of Wool, Fur, Hemp, Flax, Cotton, Mohair, or Silk, or of any of the said Materials

*Persons convicted of buying or receiving any of the Materials from the Workmen, without Con-

Great Storm of Wind.

ON the fifteenth of March, 1752, the City and Places adjacent were attacked by a violent Storm of Wind, by which several Stacks of Chimnies were blown down, and in some Places the Roofs beat in, whereby many People were terribly bruised, and some lost their Lives; great Quantities of Lead were blown off Chelsea-Hospital, the Houses on London-Bridge, &c. the Head of Levi and the Feet of Abraham in the fine Window in Westminster-Abbey were blown out, as were the Windows in many Places; in St. James's-Park, and the Villages about this Metropolis, great Numbers of Trees were demolished. On the River, Ships were drove from their Moorings, Lighters and Boats sunk, and several Lives lost.

Thomas Winterbottom, Esq.

Thomas Winterbottom, Esq; Lord-Mayor of London, departed this Life on the fourth of June, of a violent Fever. And it is worth Observation, that since the first Institution of this Office in the Year 1189, to 1740, which is 551 Years, there died in their Mayoralty only five Lord-Mayors; and from the Year 1740, to 1752, which is but twelve Years, there have died four in that high Office. He was succeeded in the Mayoralty by Robert Alfop, Esq; for the remaining Part of the Year

Robert Alfop, Esq.

Sir Peter Warren chosen Alderman of Billingsgate Ward.

On the eighth, the Honourable Peter Warren, Knight of the Bath, Vice-Admiral of the Red, and Member of Parliament for the City of Westminster, was made free of the Company of Goldsmiths of this City; (having been presented with the Freedom of this City for his singular Service to his Country, in distressing the Enemy by Sea) after which, at a previous Meeting of the Deputy, Common Council, and Electors of the Ward of Billingsgate, he was unanimously put in Nomination for Alderman of the said Ward, in the Room of the late Lord-Mayor: And, on the tenth, he was declared duly elected; tho' the Night before he had, by Letter, in Answer to one from the Deputy and Common Council of the Ward, declined accepting it (as he also had done before) at which Time he sent them two hundred Guineas, half for the Poor of the said Ward, and the rest to be at the Disposal of the Inhabitants.

Declined.

The Letters above-mentioned are as follows:

Billingsgate Ward,

June 9, 1752.

"Honoured Sir,

"You have given us the utmost Concern in telling us, that it is inconsistent with your Duty and other Avocations, to honour us in being our Alderman; ourselves in particular, and the Inhabitants in general, of the whole Ward, are so truly sensible of the Greatness of your Character and true Worth, that Unanimity in your Election would have expressed how highly we thought ourselves honoured by your Acceptance of our Choice; and it is with the greatest Reluctance that this Disappointment should occasion us, so early as To-day, to return you our sincerest Thanks for the great Civilities you have already shewn us, and for the further Assurances you have been pleased to give us of the Honour of your Friendship; on which Reliance we once more beg Leave to renew our Application to you, most earnestly desiring you to reconsider this Matter, hoping some lucky Incident may still induce your Acceptance, that we may have a more joyful Cause for our Expression of the Zeal we have for your high Abilities and distinguished Merit, and to assure you that we shall ever retain the highest Sense of the Obligation you will thereby confer on,

Letter of Common-Councilmen.

"S I R,

"Your most obedient humble Servants."

Signed by the Deputy and Common-Councilmen.

"To the Deputy and Common-Councilmen of the Ward of Billingsgate.

Cavendish-Square,

June 9, 1752.

"Gentlemen,

"I am extremely obliged to my worthy Friends, the Inhabitants of your Ward, for the distinguished Mark of their Favour, and to you for the warm Expressions of Regard contained in your Letter of this Date; but as the Acceptance of a civil Office would interfere with the military one that I have the honour to hold, in which I shall ever be ready to serve my King and Country, I hope I shall stand excused in declining the singular Honour so unanimously and obligingly offered to,

His Answer.

"Gentlemen,

"Your most obedient and most obliged

"humble Servant,

P. Warren.

However, still hoping to engage Sir Peter to accept of the Office, the Deputy and Common Council waited on him at his House in Cavendish-Square, again to request his Acceptance of that Office; when, after receiving them very politely, he was pleased to express his Refusal in the most obliging Manner, as it would be incompatible with the Duty he owed to his King and Country, as a military Officer; at the same Time assuring them, that he would ever retain the most grateful Sense of the Honour their Ward had done him, and should take all Occasions to convince them, how ready and desirous he was to do any Service to his Fellow-Citizens of London: And on the twenty-third, he sent a Message to the Court of Aldermen, desiring to be excused from serving the Office of Alderman, to which he had been elected, and paid his Fine of five hundred Pounds for that Purpose. Which being recorded, William Beckford, Esq; an eminent West-India Merchant, (and then Member of Parliament for Shaftsbury, but at present Member for this City) was unanimously chosen in his Stead.

Poulterers Trial.

A remarkable Cause was tried, upon an Action brought by the Company of Poulterers, against a Poulterer at Kensington, upon Stat. 5 Eliz. for exercising the Trade, not having served seven Years Apprenticeship; and, after a Trial of near three Hours, neither the Court nor Jury could find it at all necessary to be obliged to serve seven Years to learn the Mystery or Skill of plucking a Goose, or skinning a Rabbit; so that the Jury gave a Verdict for the Defendant.

Fire in Lincoln's Inn.

About one o'Clock on the twenty-seventh, in the Morning, a terrible Fire broke out in Lincoln's-Inn New-Square, which in a short Time entirely consumed No. 10 and 11. The Rage of the Flames defeated the Assistance of what little Water could be got, which was extremely scarce. The Gentlemen whose Chambers fell in this dreadful Scene, were, R. Wilbrabam, Esq; the Honourable Edward Harley, Esq; the Honourable Charles Yorke, Esq; E. Hoskyns, Esq; — Cholmley, Esq; Edmund Sawyer, Esq; Master in Chancery, and — Ansell, Esq; all in No. 10. Mr. Yorke and Mr. Hoskyns, who lay up one Pair of Stairs, were both asleep, and escaped in their Breeches and Shirts only, at the most imminent Hazard of their Lives. All the Papers, Books, Plate, Furniture, and wearing Apparel of the above Gentlemen were destroyed, and not one Article saved. The Gentlemen in the next Stair-Cafe (No. 11.) viz. John Sharpe, Esq; Solicitor to the Treasury, Edward Booth, Esq; Mr. Ambler, Mr. Fazakerly, Mr. Fellers, and Mr. Wilmot, had just Time to save most Things of Consequence from the Flames. Mr. Wilbrabam had lately purchased an Estate of great Value, the Title-Deeds to which, besides numberless other Deeds, Mortgages, &c. fell a Sacrifice to the devouring Flames. Mr. Pickering, Clerk to Mr. Wilbrabam, lost upwards of 1100 l. in Money and Bank Notes of his own and other Persons, and Securities for 30,000 l. more; and also all the Title-Deeds to Lord Leigh's Estates.

On Wednesday the twenty-second of July, a Court of Common Council was held at Guildhall, when a Motion was made by Mr. Benjamin Gaf-coyne and Mr. Robert Henshaw, that the Mansion-House of this City should be furnished forthwith for the Reception of a Lord-Mayor; and after some Debates the same was agreed to, and referred to the Committee of the Mansion-House; and they were empowered to draw upon the Chamberlain for any Sum not exceeding four thousand Pounds.

In the last Session of Parliament, the Manufacturers of Hats, and the Master and Journey-men Taylors respectively, presented Petitions for Redress of Grievances. That of the Hat-makers set forth, That of late Years the foreign Trade had much declined, which they attributed, amongst others, to the following Causes, viz. 1. To the many rival Manufactures of late Years set up in foreign Countries. 2. To the very great Rise in the Price of Beaver in this Country, which of late Years has advanced upwards seventy-five Pounds per Cent. owing, as they apprehended, in part to the annual Import of Beaver-Skins being of late Years much decreased, and the Export thereof greatly increased, by means of their having a Drawback on Exportation of more than half the Duty paid on Importation. 3. To the annual Import of Beaver into France by their Canada Company, being much larger than all the Beaver imported here, either from Hudson's-Bay, or from our Plantations. 4. To the French having lately prohibited under severe Penalties the Export of any Beaver. And alledging, that the Price and Quantity of Beaver being thus greatly in favour of the Foreigners, who have also the Advantage of cheaper Labour, they are thereby enabled to vend their Hats in foreign Markets upon lower Terms than the British Manufacturers can do, which threatens the total Loss of the said Trade to the British Subjects; and therefore praying the House to grant them such Relief and Encouragement to the said Manufacture, as the Credit and Importance thereof deserves.

Hat-Makers Petition.

This Petition was referred to a Committee, to examine and state to the House the Matter of Fact contained therein; and Petitions of the same Nature being afterwards presented from the Hat-makers at Chester and Manchester, they were referred to the same Committee, whose Report was made to the House by Mr. Alexander Hume, on February the eleventh; and it was resolved, that the House would on Monday then next, the seventeenth, resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to consider of the said Report; but this Order was adjourned from Time to Time, and at last, on the sixth of March, entirely dropped, as it had been resolved that an End should be put to the Session as soon as possible.

Another Petition from a great Number of Master Taylors and Stay-Makers, within the Bills of Mortality, recited the Act of the seventh Year of his late Majesty, for the regulating Journey-men Taylors; and set forth, That the Petitioners had been always willing to comply with the said Act, but were then, and had been for some Years past, at Times, threatened and terrified, and abused by the Journey-men Taylors, for such their Compliance, in a riotous and tumultuous Manner, and had been obliged at different Times, to apply to his Majesty in Council,

Council, and to the subordinate civil Power, at very great Expence, for Protection and Redress; and particularly the then last Summer, the Petitioners applied to the Quarter Sessions of Middlesex, to ascertain and settle the Wages of their Journeymen; whereupon, after Consideration, and hearing Counsel, an Order was made, to allow the Journeymen two Shillings per Day, during the Winter Half-Year, and two Shillings and six Pence per Day during the Summer Half-Year; with which Order the Journeymen seemed to be satisfied 'till the Michaelmas following, when they rose in great Numbers, and in a riotous Manner demanded two Shillings and six Pence per Day, contrary to the said Order: That upon this, the Journeymen of the City of London, seeing what Advantage their Brethren at Westminster had obtained under the said Order, were encouraged to apply to the general Quarter Sessions in London, held after Michaelmas last, to have their Wages advanced, and the Hours of their work lessened; whereupon the Court ordered their Wages to be settled at two Shillings a Day for three Quarters of the Year, and two Shillings and six Pence for the remaining Quarter, and took off one Hour in every Day from the Time of working: That upon this, the Journeymen of Westminster, observing the Variance between the said Orders, had last Christmas presumed to apply again to the Quarter Sessions for Middlesex, to advance their Wages still higher, and to lessen the Hours of work, which Petition was then depending; that the Petitioners, vexed with their Proceedings, and seeing no End to these Disturbances and Litigations, had found it necessary to resort to the House for Redress; that they had, for many Reasons, found the said Act of Parliament insufficient for their Relief, and that notwithstanding the Aid of that Law, they had not been able to curb the Insolence, or suppress the Riots, of the said Journeymen Taylors, or prevent them from extorting larger Wages than their Labour deserved, to the Disquiet of the publick Peace, and the evil Example of all Journeymen and Labourers in other Branches of Trade and Business; and therefore praying, that the said Act might be amended, that the Wages and Hours of Work might be ascertained, and that some one Court might be appointed, finally to determine any Difference which might arise in both Cities.

Journeymen Petition.

This Petition was referred to a Committee to examine the Matter thereof, and report the same, with their Opinion thereupon, to the House; and the Petition from several Journeymen Taylors and Stay-Makers within the Bill of Mortality, related the above Petition, and represented, that neither they, nor any other Persons with their Privy, Knowledge, or Consent, had threatened, terrified, or abused the Master Taylors or Stay-Makers, in a riotous and tumultuous Manner, nor had acted in any ways as represented by the said Petition; but that these Petitioners hoped to prove, that they were in general honest and industrious Men, who desired to get their Bread in an honest Way; and that they thought it would be a great Oppression upon them, that the Masters should get an exorbitant Profit out of their honest Labour; and, therefore praying, that they might have Leave to be heard by their Counsel before the said Committee; which was granted by the House, and the Committee instructed to admit Counsel at the same Time upon the Petition of the Masters.

The Merchants of London, imagining themselves, and the Trade of the Nation, would in Process of Time be greatly injured by the frequent private Naturalization of foreign Protestants, took the Opportunity of an engrossed Bill sent down from the Lords to the House of Commons, intitled, An Act for Naturalizing John Meyboem, to lay their Objections before the House in a Petition, in Behalf of themselves and all other Merchants of Great-Britain, alledging, That several Foreigners have, of late Years, been induced to come over into England, in order to obtain private Acts of Parliament for their Naturalization, with a View to gain some Advantages to themselves in Point of Trade, and in particular to avoid the Payment of Aliens Duties on the Goods and Merchandizes, which they transport from foreign Parts into this Kingdom; but, having obtained such Acts, returned back to their own Country, where they constantly reside, and consequently bear no Part of the publick Taxes, nor in any Manner contribute towards the Support of the State, or at all answer the Intention of the Legislature; which undoubtedly is, by granting to Foreigners the Privileges and Immunities enjoyed by the natural-born Subjects of this Kingdom, and thereby encouraging such Foreigners to transport themselves and their Estates thither, to increase the Number of People, and advance the Wealth and Strength of the Nation; whereas, there is great Reason to suspect, that these Persons, so naturalized and returning to foreign Countries, out of the Jurisdiction of the Crown of Great-Britain, frequently cover, under their Names, the Goods of Aliens imported into this Kingdom; and, not being answerable to the Process of the Courts of Justice here, are in no Danger of incurring the Penalties, to which the Subjects residing within this Kingdom are liable for such Offences; and therefore, as it is highly conducive to the publick Welfare, that Great-Britain should be furnished with Merchandize by her own Subjects, in the same Manner as her Shipping is secured by the Act of Navigation, and as it is manifestly inconsistent with the View of the Legislature, in granting the Benefit of Naturalization, that Foreigners so naturalized should withdraw themselves out of the Ligeance of the Crown of Great-Britain, praying the House to take the Premises into their Consideration, and to make Provision for preventing this Abuse of the Favour of Parliament, by restraining, for the future, the Benefit of Naturalization to the Time during which Foreigners shall reside within this Realm, in such Manner, and under such Limitations, as to the House should appear fit.

This Petition was signed by a great Number of eminent Merchants, whose Names were read upon the Motion, and carried such a Weight with the House, that after some small Debate it was granted, and the Clause was agreed to by the House of Lords.

King's return from Hanover.

His Majesty having this Year visited his German Dominions, arrived at St. James's on the eighteenth of November; and on the twenty-second, the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, attended by several of the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs and Common Council, went in Procession from Guildhall to St. James's, and waited on his Majesty with a dutiful and loyal Address, to congratulate him on his safe Arrival to his British Dominions, and being introduced by the proper Officers in waiting, Richard Adams, Esq; the Recorder, read the Address, which was as follows:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

City Address.

"Amidst the general Joy of the Nation for your Majesty's safe and happy Return to your British Dominions, be pleased to accept the sincere Congratulations of your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of your City of London, in Common Council assembled.

"Permit us at the same Time, Royal Sir, to repeat the just and grateful Sense we have of your Majesty's paternal Care over your People, and of the many Favours by which your Majesty hath graciously distinguished your City of London.

"May the divine Providence long preserve your Majesty to Reign over these Kingdoms; and may there never be wanting a Succession of Princes in your Royal House, formed by your great Example, to continue the Blessing of civil and religious Freedom to latest Posterity."

To which Address his Majesty returned this most gracious Answer:

His Majesty's Answer.

"I thank you for this very dutiful and affectionate Address. The Support and Improvement of the Trade and Commerce of my People, is so essential to the Welfare and Prosperity of my Kingdoms, that the City of London may always depend upon my particular Attention to it, and upon the Continuance of my Favour and Protection."

They were received very graciously, and all had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand.

After which he conferred the Honour of Knighthood on the Right Honourable Crispe Gascoyne, Esq; Lord-Mayor; Richard Adams, Esq; Recorder; Charles Afghill, and Richard Glynn, Esqrs, Sheriffs; and Thomas Harrison, Esq; Chamberlain.

The Case of Elizabeth
Canning.

The Year 1753, was introduced by one of the most extraordinary Affairs as, perhaps, was ever recorded in History; and which by its Consequences having engaged the Attention of the Publick, and in some Measure interested many in all Stations of Life, not only in this great Metropolis, but in distant Parts, demands a Place in these Annals: And, as I am writing for Futurity, it is my Resolution to avoid all Partiality in the following Narration, and to deliver the Facts as I find them related on both Sides the Question.

One Elizabeth Canning, aged about eighteen Years, and Daughter to a Widow Woman in Aldermanbury-Poftern, and Servant to one Mr. Lyon in Aldermanbury, having been missing from her Service for the Space of twenty-eight Days, came Home to her Mother's House in a deplorable naked and amaciated Condition, and declared, That on Monday the first of January (1753) she went to see her Uncle and Aunt, who lived at Salt-Petre Bank, near Rosemary-Lane; that, having continued with them 'till towards Nine in the Evening, her Uncle and Aunt, it being late, walked a great Part of the Way Home with her; that soon after she parted with them, and came opposite to Betblehem-Gate, in Moorfields, she was seized by two Men, who after robbing her of Half a Guinea in Gold, and three Shillings in Silver, of her Hat, Gown, and Apron, violently dragged her into a Gravel-Walk that leads down to the Gate of Betblehem-Hospital, about the Middle of which one of the Men, after threatening to do for her, gave her a violent Blow with his Fist, on the right Temple, that threw her into a Fit, and intirely deprived her of her Senses. These Fits, she says, she hath been accustomed to; that they were first occasioned by the Fall of a Ceiling on her Head; that they were apt to return upon her whenever she was frightened, and that they sometimes continued for six or seven Hours. That, when she came to herself, she perceived that two Men were hurrying her along in a large Roadway, and that in a little Time after she was recovered, she was able to walk alone; however, they still continued to pull and drag her along: That she was so intimidated by their Usage, that she durst not call out, nor even to speak to them; that in about half an Hour after the Recovery of her Senses, they carried her into a House, where she saw in the Kitchen an old Gipsy Woman and two young Women; that the old Gipsy Woman took hold of her by the Hand, and promised to give her fine Cloaths if she would go their Way, which Expression she understanding to mean the becoming a Prostitute, she utterly refused to comply with; upon which the old Gipsy Woman took a Knife out of a Drawer and cut the Stays off this Elizabeth Canning, and took them away from her, at which Time one of the Men likewise took off her Cap, and then both the Men went away; that soon after they were gone, and about an Hour after she had been in the House, the old Gipsy Woman forced her up an old pair of Stairs, and pushed her into a back Room like a Hay-loft, without any Furniture whatsoever in the same, and there locked her up, threatening that if she made the least Noise or Disturbance, the old Gipsy Woman would come up and cut her Throat, and then fastened the Door on the outside and went away. She said, that when it was Day-light, upon her looking round to see in what dismal Place she was confined, she discovered a large black Jug, with the Neck much broken, filled with Water, and several Pieces of Bread, amounting to about a Quartern Loaf, scattered on the Floor, where was likewise a small Parcel of Hay. In this Room she said she continued from that Time, 'till about Half an Hour after four of the Clock in the Afternoon

Afternoon of Monday the twenty-ninth Day of the same Month of January, being in all twenty-seven Days and upwards, without any other Sustainance than the aforefaid Bread and Water, except one small minced Pye which she had in her Pocket, which she was carrying Home as a Present to her little Brother. She likewise faid, that she had some Part of this Provision remaining on the Friday before she made her Escape, which she did by breaking out at a Window of the Room or Loft in which she was confined, and whence having escaped, she got back to her Friends in London in about six Hours, in a most weak and miserable Condition, being almost starved to Death, and without ever once stopping at any House or Place by the Way. She likewise faid, that during her whole Confinement no Person ever came near her to ask her any Question whatever, nor did she see any belonging to the House more than once, when one of the Women peeped through a Hole in the Door, and that she herself was afraid to call or speak to any one. That she never went to Stool during the whole Time, but only made Water.

Upon the Return of Elizabeth Canning to her Mother's House in the Manner above set forth, and upon the Account which she gave of her unprecedented Sufferings, the visible Marks of which then appeared on her Body, all her Neighbours began to fire with Resentment against the several Actors concerned in so cruel a Scene; and presently some of the most substantial of the Neighbours proposed to raise a Contribution among themselves, in order, if possible, to bring the Villains who had injured this poor Girl to exemplary Justice; as soon, therefore, as she was able to bear the Journey they put her into a Chaise, and taking with them proper Peace-Officers, conveyed the Girl along the Hertford Road, to see if she was able to trace out the House where she had been confined, for she at that Time knew not the Name of the Place, nor could she sufficiently describe the Situation of Well's House, though she had before so exactly described the Inside of it. Possibly, indeed, she might never have been able to have discovered the House at all, had it not been for a very extraordinary Incident, and this was, that through the Chinks, or Crevices of the Boards of the Hay-loft, she saw at a Distance the Hertford Stage-Coach pass by, the Driver of which she knew, though he past not near enough for her to call to him with any Hopes of Success; and by this extraordinary Circumstance she came to know that the House stood on the Hertford Road.

When they arrived at this House, the poor Girl was taken out of the Chaise, and placed on a Table in the Kitchen, where all the Family passed in review before her; she then fixed on the Gipsy Woman, whom she had very particularly described before, and who was, perhaps, the most remarkable Person in the whole World: She charged likewise Virtue Hall, whose Countenance likewise was very easy to be remembered by those who have once seen her.

The whole Family, however, though no more were positively charged by Elizabeth Canning, being put all into a Cart, were conducted before Mr. Tybbemake, a Justice of the Peace for the County of Middlesex, who having first examined Elizabeth Canning alone, but without taking from her any Information in Writing, did afterwards examine all the Parties, and in the End committed the Gipsy Woman and Wells, the former for taking away the Stays from Elizabeth Canning, and the latter for keeping a disorderly House.

At the Sessions at the Old-Bailey, Mary Squires the Gipsy, and Mother Wells, were tried for this Fact, when Elizabeth Canning, gave her Evidence, the Sum of which is before related; which was confirmed by Virtue Hall, one of the young Women present when she was brought into Well's House, whose Evidence was as follows:

Virtue Hall. I know the two Prisoners at the Bar; Wells lived at Enfield-Wash. I went and lived there as a Lodger. Mary Squires lived in the House, and had been there about seven or eight Weeks.

Q. How long before Elizabeth Canning was brought in?

V. Hall. About a Fortnight before, which was on the second of January, about four o'Clock in the Morning, she was brought in there by two Men; John Squires was one of them, he is Son to Mary Squires, the other I don't know any thing of; I never saw him before.

Q. How was she dressed when brought in?

V. Hall. She had no Gown on, or Hat, or Apron.

Q. Who was in the House at the Time?

V. Hall. There was I, and Mary Squires the Prisoner, and her Daughter: The Gipsy Man said, Mother, I have brought you a Girl, do you take her; then she asked Elizabeth Canning whether she would go her Way.

Q. What did she mean by that?

V. Hall. She meant for her to turn Whore; but she would not.

Q. Do you mention this by Way of Explanation, or as Words that she said?

V. Hall. As Words that she said: Then Mary Squires took a Knife out of a Dresser-drawer, in the Kitchen, and ripped the Lace of her Stays, and pulled them off, and hung them on the back of a Chair in the Kitchen, and pushed her up into the Room, and said, D—n you, go up there then, if you please; then the Man, that came in with the Gypsy's Son, took the Cap off Elizabeth Canning's Head, and went out of Doors with it; the Gypsy Man, John Squires, took the Stays off the Chair, and went out with them.

Q. Where was Elizabeth Canning when the two Men took away the Things?

V. Hall. She was then up in the Room.

Q. Had you ever been in that Room?

V. Hall. I had, before she was brought there, several Times.

Q. What was the Name they called it by?

V. Hall. They called it by the Name of the Workshop; there was a great deal of Hay in it; they only put Lumber in it; there was a great many Pieces of Wood, a Tobacco Mould, and this black Jug: About three Hours after the young Woman was put up, Mary Squires filled the Jug with Water and carried it up.

Q. How

Q. How do you know it was three Hours after?

V. Hall. Then it began to be lightish.

Q. Did you hear any Talk between them after she was in the Room?

V. Hall. They took Care I should know but little.

Q. Has Susannah Wells a Husband?

V. Hall. No, she has not. When I went out of the Kitchen I went into the Parlour; Wells said, Virtue Hall, the Gipsy Man came in and told me that his Mother had cut the Stays off the young Woman's Back, and he had got them; and she bid me not to say any Thing, to make a Clack of it, fearing it should be known.

Q. How long was you in that House?

V. Hall. I was there a Quarter of a Year in all, if not more. I was there the whole Time Elizabeth Canning was there, but I never saw her once after she was put up into that Room. I was the first that missed her. I asked the Gipsy Woman once, whether that Girl was gone: She answered, what is that to you? you have no Business with it: But I durst not go to see if she was gone; if I had, very likely they would have served me so.

Q. Did you ever see the other Man after that Night?

V. Hall. No, I never did.

Q. Who lodged in the House, at the Time, besides?

V. Hall. There was one Fortune Natus did.

Q. Did Mary Squires continue in the House long after this?

V. Hall. She did, till we were all taken up, which was, I think, on the Thursday after the young Woman was gone.

Q. What was you in that House?

V. Hall. I went there as a Lodger, but I was obliged to do as they would have me.

Q. from Mary Squires. What Day was it that the young Woman was robbed?

Court. She says on the Morning of the second of January.

M. Squires. I return Thanks for telling me, for I am as innocent as the Child unborn.

Q. from Wells. How long were these People (meaning the Gipsies) at my House in all, from first to last?

V. Hall. They were there six or seven Weeks in all: They had been there about a Fortnight before the young Woman was brought in.

Q. Did you ever see this Cap or Bed-gown before?

V. Hall. Not to my Knowledge.

Thomas Colley. I am Elizabeth Canning's Uncle, and live at Salt-Petre Bank: On the New-Year's-Day she dined and supped at my House, and went away about Nine in the Evening, as near as I can guess. I and my Wife went along with her to Hounsditch, almost to the Blue Ball; there we parted with her, about a Quarter or very near Half an Hour after nine o'Clock.

Upon this Evidence, which agrees with Canning's in a very remarkable Manner, and several corroborating Circumstances sworn by the Gentlemen who went with Canning to Wells's House to apprehend her, the Jury found them both guilty. Squires received Sentence of Death, and

Mrs. Wells was ordered to be branded, and kept Prisoner in Newgate for six Months.

But Sir Crispe Gascoyne, then Lord-Mayor, and, by the Virtue of his Office, supreme Magistrate in that Court, doubting the whole Story, imagining that the Convicts had been prejudged, and thereby deprived of the Mercy of the Law, was dissatisfied with the Verdict, as he himself avows in his Address to the Liverymen of London: "For, says he, besides the Improbability of the Story, many other Things conspired to make make me think a further Enquiry necessary:— Amongst which were, the antecedent Prejudice in Mens Minds, the Outrages of the Mob preventing that solemn and sacred Freedom which should attend upon all Trials, and the contradictory Evidence given upon this: And, as this Trial happened in a Court wherein I had the Honour to preside, I thought it a Duty in me to make that Enquiry."

In Pursuance of this, he directed Mr. Ford to write to the Minister of Abbotsbury, in Dorsetshire, to make an Enquiry into the Story of Squires's being at Abbotsbury, with her Son and Daughter, from the first of January, 1753, to the ninth of that Month, and to send the Characters of Gibbons and Clark, who had sworn to this Fact at the Trial. This Letter, of which he gives a Copy, is dated the twenty-fourth of February, 1753; and next follows a Copy of Mr. Harris, the Minister's, Answer, dated the fifth of March, 1753, which confirms the Fact, and gives the two Witnesses a very good Character.

But Sir Crispe was not, it seems, the only Gentleman upon the Bench who was dissatisfied with the Verdict, or who thought it his Duty to enquire into the Fact of Squires's being at Abbotsbury from the first to the ninth of January; for Justice Gundry, the Judge upon the Trial, had directed his Clerk to write to the Under-Sheriff of Dorsetshire, to enquire into it; whose Answer Sir Crispe gives a Copy of, dated the twenty-eighth of February, 1753; and also of a Certificate inclosed therein from the Church-wardens, Overseers, and several of the substantial Inhabitants of the Parish of Abbotsbury, all averring the Fact that Squires, her Son, and her Daughter, were at Abbotsbury for nine Days the Beginning of January, 1753; after which the said Under-Sheriff sent up an Affidavit, sworn before the Mayor of Dorchester the second of March, 1753, by six of the Inhabitants of Abbotsbury, confirming the said Fact; of which also Sir Crispe gives a Copy, and likewise a Copy of a Certificate from the Church-wardens, Overseer, and three of the Inhabitants of Coombe-Bisset, in Wiltshire, giving a good Character of Thomas Greville of that Town, who had upon the Trial of Squires sworn that she, her Son and Daughter, were at his House on the fourteenth of January, which Certificate is dated the twenty-eighth of February, 1753; and adds, that they believed that the Gipsy Woman was at Coombe at that Time, according to Evidence.

These Proofs being laid before Canning's Friends, they doubted if the Convict was the same Person; therefore, to prove the Identity, he directed Mr. Ford to write again to Mr. Harris, and ings thereupon.

and desire him to send to London two Men whose Characters he would certify.

He then gives a very circumstantial Account of Virtue Hall's Recantation, and makes it appear from her Behaviour, &c. that she had been threatened and frightened into what she had sworn before Justice Fielding, and at the Trial of Wells and Squires, in order to save herself from being prosecuted as an Accessary to the Felony.

After which he gives us the Informations sworn to before him, on the twelfth and thirteenth of March, by Fortune Natus and his Wife, Ezra Whiffing, Elizabeth Long, and Mary Larney, who were all examined separately, in the Presence of Canning's Friends; and he then tells us, that the two Men sent from Abbotsbury being arrived, with proper Testimonials from Mr. Harris, they were sent to Newgate, and knew Squires as soon as they saw her, and, upon their Return, they were separately and publicly examined. He gives us a Copy of each of their Informations upon Oath, in which they agree, and fully confirm the Fact, that this very Convict was the Person who, with her Son and Daughter, was at Abbotsbury from the first to the ninth of January, 1753.

To these he adds a long Information, sworn before him on the twenty-third of March, 1753, by Gawen Nash, John Hague, and Edward Aldridge, which gives an Account of Canning's Behaviour when first examined before Alderman Chitty, and at Enfield, when Wells, Squires, &c. were apprehended; and concludes thus: "And, lastly, all these Informants say, that altho' they had embarked in this Affair at their own Expence, as Friends to publick Justice, and out of Tendernefs to a poor Girl whom they believed was injured, yet, from the Satisfaction they received at the said Mrs. Wells's, from the Appearance of Things not at all answering the Description that had been given, they concluded, that the Story of the said Elizabeth Canning was impossible to be true, that they themselves had been imposed upon, and therefore they desisted to assist in the Prosecution."

He also adds the Information of Andrew Wake, an Exciseman, employed at Abbotsbury the Beginning of January, who had been sent for by the Commissioners of Excise, saw Squires in Newgate, and swore positively to her having been at Abbotsbury, with her Son and Daughter, the Beginning of that Month, and to several other Particulars that had been mentioned by the other Witnesses from that Town.

And Sir Crispe concludes this Part with some Proofs, that had in Effect been furnished him by Canning's Friends; for one of them had wrote to Mr. Cooper, of Salisbury, to enquire into the Character of Greville, at Coombe, and if any others pretended to have seen Squires there, as Greville had sworn. Mr. Cooper accordingly went to Coombe, being but three Miles distant, where he found that Greville had a very good Character, and also found no less than seven other Persons who all declared, that they had seen a Gipsy Woman there on Sunday the fourteenth of January, which, by the Description they gave of her, appeared to be Squires. These Testimonies Mr.

NUMB. LIX.

Cooper sent to Sir Crispe Gascoyne, and, at the same Time, sent a Duplicate of them to Canning's Friends at London, as he declares in a second Letter to Sir Crispe, by which he sent the Testimonies of four other Persons to the like Purpose.

The whole of this Evidence, Sir Crispe says, he thought it his Duty to lay before his Majesty, together with a Memorial, of which he gives a Copy; and, as Canning's Friends had likewise presented some fresh Evidence against Squires, his Majesty, on the tenth of April, when the Report of the Convicts under Sentence of Death was made, thought fit to respite the Execution of Squires, and to refer the Evidence on both Sides to his Attorney and Solicitor-General: Who, after due Consideration, reported, that the Weight of Evidence was in the Convict's Favour. On which a free Pardon was granted to the Gipsy, Mary Squires.

Then Sir Crispe preferred an Indictment against Canning for Perjury, and the like was preferred on her Part against the Abbotsbury Witnesses. Both Bills were found: The Abbotsbury Men appeared and were acquitted, no Evidence coming against them. But Canning, who was admitted to Bail, and delay'd appearing to the Indictment against her in order to take her Trial, till her Outlawry was on the Point of taking Place, after a Trial, which began on the twenty-ninth of April, and continued at the Old-Baily, by Adjournment, on the first, third, fourth, sixth, and seventh of May, was convicted of Perjury. And, in order to give the Reader the best Account of this Trial, which has made so great a Noise in the World, I shall first state the Facts contested, or of which the Witnesses on the two Sides gave a contradictory or inconsistent Account; and then the Facts proved by the Prisoner for confirming the Truth of her Story.

As to the contested Facts, they were, 1. The Alibi of Squires, or her being in another Place at the Time the Robbery was sworn to have been committed by her. 2. The false or inconsistent Account Canning had given of the Room in which she was kept Prisoner, and of the Bed-Gown she said she had found there. 3. That Canning was not confined in that Room she said she was; and, 4. The Condition she was in at her Return.

And as to the Facts proved by the Prisoner, they were, 1. Her dining at her Uncles the first of January, 1753. 2. Her Mother's Concern for her Absence. 3. Her having been seen upon the Road, both as she was carried to Enfield and as she returned. 4. The Confession of Squires and Wells while in Prison; and, 5. Her own Character.

The Witnesses were examined apart, and the Gipsy, her Son and Daughter, placed at the Bar, that the Witnesses might see them.

As to the first contested Fact, one Witness swore, she believed the Gipsy, her Son and Daughter, lay at her House at South-Parret, in Dorsetshire, on the twenty-ninth of December, 1752; and another swore, that the Gipsy and her Son were at her House at Vineyard's-Gap, on Saturday before new Christmas, 1752*. Then George Squires, the Gipsy's Son, being called, deposed, that he, his Mother, and Sister Lucy, were at South-Parrot on the twenty-ninth of December, 1752; that they went to Litton the next Day, and, on the thirty-first, to Abbotsbury; where they staid until the ninth of January, and on that Day they went to Portesham, from thence to Ridgeway, and, on the eleventh, to Dorchester; from whence they set out, and walked almost all Night, and got to another Village, and the next Day they lay at Morton in a Barn, and, on the Day after, at Coope; after which he could not recollect where he lay till he came to Basingstoke; then they travelled to Bogshot, where they lay, and after that to Brentford, from thence to the Seven Sisters near Tottenham, and from thence to Mother Wells's, at Enfield-Wash. But, being cross-examined, he gave a very lame Account how he went from Newington to South-Parrot, and named as many Counties he went thro' as Towns, without being able to name a Sign or Inn he lay at. However, to confirm his Evidence as to his Journey from South-Parrot, there were four Persons from Litton deposed, that they saw the old Woman, her Son and Daughter there, at the Time he had mentioned; and eleven from Abbotsbury, to that of their being there from the first of January, 1753, to the ninth of the same; and four to seeing them at Portesham on the ninth and tenth; one at Fordington on the eleventh; one at Chattle on the twelfth; three at Martin on the thirteenth; five at Coope on the fourteenth; one at Basingstoke on the eighteenth; two at Brentford on the twentieth, twenty-first, and twenty-second; two that they were near the Seven Sisters, by Tottenham, on the twenty-third of January, 1753. And, as a farther Confirmation, several of those who went down to Enfield to assist in apprehending them, declared, that at that very Time the Gipsy, her Son and Daughter, insisted upon their being at Abbotsbury on the Beginning of January.

As to this Fact, on the Side of the Prisoner, Canning, the following Witnesses deposed as follows:

Mrs. Howard. That the first Time she could recollect her having seen the Gipsy, her Son, and two Daughters, was, she believed, on the twenty-first of January, 1753, when she saw them standing at Wells's Door.

W. Headland. That on the ninth of January, 1753, he saw the Gipsy telling a young Man his Fortune under Lomas Dean's Brick-Wall, at the Bell, at Enfield, and that he saw her again on the twelfth at Wells's House, when her two Daughters were with her, one of whom was buckling up her Pumps which she had on. But he appeared very ignorant as to reckoning of Time, not being able to tell which Month Christmas was in, but only that it was in Winter.

S. Story. That he had seen the Gipsy several Times in White-Webb's Lane, and that the last Time he saw her was on the twenty-third of December, 1752, when she was sitting within the Door of Wells's House; which Day he particularly remembered, because he was that Night taken ill, and was not out of his House for two Months after.

W. Smith. That on the fourteenth of December, 1752, and for two Nights after, the Gipsy lay in his Cow-house at Enfield, and that she had been about the Country near him for some Time.

Lowworth Dane. That he was sure he saw the Gipsy pass by him as he was filling a Barrow from a Heap of Gravel at his own Door at Enfield, last old Christmas-Day was twelve-month.

S. Arnot, who lives in White-Webb's Lane, Enfield-Chace. That on Monday, the ninth or tenth of December, 1752, the Gipsy asked him after a little Horse she had lost, and told him her Name was Squires; and that he saw her the Sunday following.

His Wife. That she saw the Gipsy, for the first Time, about a Week before new Christmas; that afterwards she saw her in Farmer Smith's Cow-house, when she asked her about a little Horse.

In short, there were no less than twenty more Witnesses examined to this Fact on the Part of the Prisoner, most of whom swore to their having seen the Gipsy at or near Enfield about the End of the Year 1752, or in January 1753, and before the twenty-third of that Month; but several of them contradicted themselves, or one another, and none of them seemed to have been long or much acquainted with the Gipsy.

As to the second contested Fact, the first Witness examined on the Part of the Crown was Mr. Alderman Chitty, who, from his Minutes, gave an Account of Canning's Examination before him, when he issued his Warrant for apprehending Wells, &c. In this Account there is no Mention made of Canning's having then given any Description of the Room she was confined in, or of any Bed-Gown that was in it; but that there was in it about a Quartern Loaf of Bread, in four, five, or six Pieces, and three Quarts, or a little more, of Water; and that there were in the Room an old Stool or two, an old Table, and an old Picture over the Chimney, and two Windows in the Room, one fastened up with Boards, and the other Part ditto and Glafs. That at the latter she made a Hole, by removing a Pane of Glafs, and forcing a Part open, and got out upon a Shed of Boards, or Penthouse, and so slid down, and jumped upon the Side of a Bank on the Back Side of the House, and so got into the Road.

The next was Gawen Nash, Butler to the Goldsmith's Company; who swore, that he was with Canning before Alderman Chitty; that she being there, asked what Sort of Room it was that she was confined in; she answered, that it was a little, square, darkish Room, that there were Boards nailed up at the Window, and that thro' the Cracks she could see the Hertford Stage-Coach, which used to carry her Mistress; that there was an old broken Stool or Chair in the Room, an Iron Grate in the Chimney, and a few old Pictures hung over the Chimney, and that she lay upon the Boards. That he went down with Canning and the rest, on the first of February, to see the Warrant executed, and arrived there a little before her. That he then said to his Companions, that the Room in which they supposed she had been confined did not at all answer her Description, for it was a long, light Room, with near

near half a Load of Hay in it, and a Parcel of Hay made up in the Form of a Bed; also a Nest of Drawers, a Tub with some Pollard in it, and three old dusty Saddles; that there was a Chimney, over which stood an old, dusty Casement, but no Grate, nor the Appearance of any Grate in the Chimney. That he observed the Window out of which she said she had made her Escape, and that there was a Watering-Pond within nine or ten Feet of it. That the other Window never had been boarded up, was large enough for him to get out at, and so low that he shook Hands with his Wife out of it: That the Casement opened and shut extremely easy, and Trees growing so near it that they were almost within his Reach. That Adamson rode back to meet Canning, and returned, waving his Hat, and saying, We are all right, for Bet says there is a little Hay in the Room.

John Hague and Edward Aldridge, who went likewise to Enfield at the same Time, gave much the same Account; and Mr. White, the Marshal's Man, who went down to apprehend Wells, &c. swore, that he saw twelve or fifteen Trusses of Hay in the Room, which he thought had been there a long Time; that he saw a Chest of Drawers, a Barrel of a Gun, and an old Musket in the Room: and that when he looked into it he was suspicious, and thought Canning was mistaken, because it did not agree with the Description she had given. That he looked out at the North Window, and observed the Ground was Clay, and there lay a Heap of human Dung, as high as a Quart Pot, under it, which did not appear to have been trod upon; so that, upon the whole, it did not appear to him, that any Body had got out at that Window, neither could he observe any Penthouse or Shed.

As to the old Bed-Gown which Canning had on when she returned to her Mother, Mr. Deputy Molineaux swore, that he happened to be with the late Lord-Mayor after Squires's Trial, when Canning and Virtue Hall were examined before him; and that, after the Examination was over, Canning took up the Bed-Gown in order to take it away, as it appeared to him; but the Lord-Mayor told her she must not, whereupon she said, it belonged to her Mother. This, he said, surprized him a great deal, as she had said, on Squires's Trial, that she had taken it out of the Grate in the Room where she said she was confined. All this was confirmed by Mr. Read, who happened to be with the Lord-Mayor at the same Time.

Then, as to this whole Fact, on the Part of the Prisoner, E. Lyons, her Master, swore, that Mr. Nash was for some Time so well convinced of the Truth of Canning's Story, that, on the tenth of February, he wrote to him, desiring him to appoint some Person at Enfield to receive Contributions for the unhappy, poor Girl, and wished him Success: Which Letter was produced in Court, and owned by Mr. Nash. And he further said, that he never found any Doubt from Nash, Aldridge, or Hague, till after Squires's Trial.

Canning's Mother swore, that when her Daughter returned, she said she had heard the Name Wills or Wells mentioned in the House where she had been confined, before any Body mentioned such Words to her.

R. Scarrat swore, that the Night Canning returned, she said she had been on the Hertfordshire Road, about eight or ten Miles from London; and, upon his saying he would wager she had been at the House of Mother Wells, she said she had heard the Name Wills or Wells mentioned while she was in Confinement, which was in a longish, darkish Room, and saw a Coachman, whom she knew, go by, thro' a Crack of the Boards in the Window.

Mary Myers swore, that the Night Canning returned, she said she had been confined in a Room where was some Hay, and a Pitcher with about a Gallon of Water, about the Value of a Quarter Loaf, and a Fire-Place; and that when she got out she pulled down two Boards from a Window, and tore her Ear in getting down: And she further swore, that she then saw her Ear very bloody, which appeared fresh, and had dropped on her Shoulder.

John Wintlebury. That the Night she came home she said she had been confined on the Hertfordshire Road, and had heard the Name Wills or Wells mentioned in the House; and described a broken Pitcher, which held about a Gallon of Water, in the Room, and such an one he found when he went into that Room.

J. Adamson. That when he rode back from Enfield to meet Canning, he did not at first tell her there was Hay in the Room; but, after he had spoke to the Coachman to make Haste, he then asked her what Sort of Place it was she was confined in; to which she answered, an odd, or a wild Sort of Place, and that there was some Hay, and something else which she could not remember.

W. Headland, already mentioned; swore, that after Wells and Squires were taken up, he found a Piece of Window-Lead all bloody on the Ground, near the Window the Girl said she got out at, and that he carried it to his Mother, who laid it up, but it was since lost. All this was confirmed by his Mother.

As to the third contested Fact, Fortune Natus and his Wife both swore positively, that they lay in the very Room, and during the whole Time Canning said she had been confined in it; and several Witnesses swore, they knew that they lodged at Wells's; and some, that they lay in that Room.

Sarah Howel, Wells's Daughter, swore, that on the eighth of January, 1753, Edward Allen, Giles Knight, and John Larny, lopped the Trees over-against the Window of the Room where Canning said she was confined; that Virtue Hall and herself were at the Window at that Time, and that she opened the Casement herself, and it opened very easy. And the three Men she named swore, they did lop those Trees on the eighth of January, and talked to her and Virtue Hall, who were looking out at that Window: Also J. Cantrel swore, that he kept a Publick-house near Wells's, that he saw these Men lopping the Trees, and that they flung Clods of Dirt at Hall and Howel, who stood at the Window of that Room.

On the other Side, two Witnesses for the Prisoner deposed, that Natus's Wife owned to them, that that Canning had been at Mother Wells's; and three Witnesses deposed, that both Natus and his Wife were Persons of a very bad Character, and neither to be believed upon their Oath.

As to the fourth contested Fact, Mrs. Meale, the Midwife, swore, she went to see Canning on the second or third of February, and found her in a very weak Condition: That, in order to see whether she had been debauched, she desired to see the Shift she came home in, which her Mother produced, and she observed to the Mother, that there was no Appearance of her having been debauched, but that it was uncommonly clean to be worn so long. That, on a second Visit, the Shift was again shewn to her, and then she saw three Spots of Excrement upon it.

On the other Side, Canning's Mother and another Woman swore to her being in a very weak Condition when she came home; and Mr. Backler, the Apothecary, and Dr. Eaton, the Physician, swore to her continuing in a very weak and dangerous Condition for several Days; to which the Doctor added, that she had not the least Symptom of her having been under a Salivation, but appeared as one almost starved; and that he did not doubt of its being possible for a Person to subsist twenty-eight Days on what she had mentioned.

Now as to the Facts proved by the Prisoner, for confirming the Truth of her Story.

To the first, her Master swore to his giving her Leave to go and dine with her Uncle on New-Year's-Day, 1753; and her Uncle and his Wife swore to her dining there on that Day.

To the second, her Mother swore, that she advertised her Daughter three Times during her Absence; that she consulted a Conjuror in the Old-Bailly about her Return, and that she fell into a Fit upon seeing her return in such a wretched Condition. Another Woman swore to her carrying the Advertisements to the Printer, by the Mother's Direction; and the Mother's Apprentice swore, that his Mistress was under great Concern on her Daughter's being missed, was at Prayer for her Return when she returned, and fell into a Fit as soon as she saw her.

To the third, Robert Beals, who is one that attends the Turnpike at Stamford-Hill, deposed, that at the Beginning of January he was standing by the Gate at near Eleven at Night, he heard a Sobbing and Crying on the Road: It came from towards Newington, and drew nearer and nearer; at last he perceived it was two Men, and a young Person, seemingly by her crying; one said, Come along you Bitch, you are drunk; the other said, How drunk the Bitch is! and made a Sort of a Laugh, but she seemed unwilling to go. By his Light he could see them; one got over the Stile, and the other laid hold of one of her Legs, or both, and lifted them over, so that she came down upright; she hung back, and fell on her Breech on the Step of the Stile, and set out a fresh Cry bitterly, as though she would go no farther: That he went nearer them, expecting she would speak to him; but there being two Men, and he alone, he did not think it safe to interpose: That the one pulled her, and the other jostled her along, and so they took her out of Sight towards Enfield.

Thomas Bennet deposed he lives at Enfield, near the ten Miles Stone, and, on the twenty-ninth of January 1753, between Four and Five in the Afternoon, between Mother Wells's and his own House, he saw a miserable, poor Wretch coming along, without either Gown, Stays, Cap, Hat, or Apron on, only a dirty Thing, like half an Handkerchief, over her Head, and a Piece of something on that reached down just below her Waist, with her Hands lying together before her; she asked him the Way to London.

David Dyer deposed, that about a Quarter of a Mile from Wells's, towards London, at Four in the Afternoon, three Evenings before Wells was taken up, he saw a poor, distressed Creature pass by him out of a common Field; described her Dress much the same as the former Witness had done; and, upon looking at Canning, said that he took her to be the same Person.

Mary Cobb deposed, that she lived at Edmonton, that she met a Person in Duck-Fields, in a poor, distressed Condition, between the six and seven Miles Stones, on the twenty-ninth of January, just at the setting-in of Day-light; described her Dress much the same as the two former Witnesses, and, on looking at Canning, said, she firmly believed it might be her, by the Tip of her Nose, which bore some Resemblance to the Person she met.

To the fourth, John Ward deposed, that, before Squires's Trial, he went to see Wells in Bridewell, and, after some Conversation, said to her, How could you keep the Girl a Fortnight? To which she answered, She was there twenty-eight Days: And that when he asked in what Room, she said, You know the Room well enough. And Richard Jones deposed, that he went along with Ward, and heard the Conversation. And Daniel Stevens deposed, that he saw Squires in New-Prison, where she denied her cutting off the Stays, or robbing the Girl, but owned that Canning was at Mother Wells's about a Fortnight, and that she was there likewise.

And, lastly, as to Canning's Character, Lyons, her Master, Meale, the Midwife, and, in short, every one examined to it, gave her a very good Character; no one made the least Objection to it, tho' several of them had known her from her Infancy.

At the Trial, John Donowell, Carpenter and Surveyor, examined on the Part of the Crown, produced, upon Oath, a Plan of Wells's House, with a Plan, Elevations, and a perspective View of the Room where Canning said she was confined.

After the Charge the Jury withdrew, and were out upwards of two Hours, when they returned, and brought in their Verdict, Guilty of Perjury, but not wilful and corrupt: But, being informed by the Court, that their Verdict must be either Guilty or Not Guilty, they again withdrew, and soon after brought her in Guilty, but recommended her to the Mercy of the Court; after which she was committed to Newgate. There were great Mobs and Riots on some of these Days about the Sessions-house, and Sir Crispe Gascoyne

Gascoyne was greatly insulted and abused; so that the Court of Aldermen offered a Reward for discovering any of the Rioters. On Monday, the thirteenth, Canning was brought from Newgate to the Old-Bailey, in order to receive Sentence; but two of the Jurymen having made Affidavit, that what they had done was contrary to their Consciences, for, tho' they believed her guilty of Perjury, they did not believe her guilty of wilful and corrupt Perjury, the Council for the Prisoner hereupon moved for a new Trial; but the arguing this Point, and on the Motion for Arrest of Judgment, was put off till next Sessions, till which Time the Prisoner was remanded back to Newgate.

Motion for
Trial.

On the thirtieth of May a Motion was made in Arrest of Judgment, and a new Trial of Elizabeth Canning came on to be argued before the Court, five Judges being upon the Bench. Nine of the Jurymen being examined, severally declared they did abide by their Verdict, as being entirely according to their Consciences, and the Foreman asserted the same of a tenth, who would have been present, if not necessarily hindered. The Judges, who sat during the whole Trial, gave their Opinion, that the Verdict was a good one, and perfectly agreeable to the Evidence. In the End, the Court proceeded to pass Judgment upon her, which was, That she should suffer one Month's Imprisonment, and after that be transported for seven Years.

Great Interest was made to obtain a Pardon; but she could obtain no other Favour than a genteel Treatment in Newgate, and to transport herself. Her Friends still persist in being able to prove her Case to be true in all its Circumstances, who, upon a Presumption of her Innocence, have been very liberal in contributing to her Support.

Merchants and Dealers in Linen petition for prohibiting Cambricks,
&c.

On the twenty-third of February there was presented to the House, and read, a Petition of the Merchants and Dealers in Linen of the City of London, whose Names were thereunto subscribed, alledging, That the Act passed in the eighteenth Year of his Majesty's Reign, for prohibiting the Wear and Importation of Cambricks and French Lawns, and further explained and enforced by a subsequent Law, had by long Experience been found ineffectual, to the great Detriment of his Majesty's Revenue, and the Loss of this Branch of Trade to the fair Merchants and Dealers, and putting it into the Hands of Smugglers and unfair Traders; therefore praying the House to do therein as to them should seem meet. This Petition was referred to a Committee of the whole House; and several Accounts relating to the Importation and Exportation of Cambricks being called for, and referred to the said Committee, the House resolved itself into the same on the twenty-third of March, and directed Sir William Calvert, their Chairman, to move for Leave to bring in a Bill, for the more effectual preventing the fraudulent Importation of Cambricks and French Lawns; which he did on the twenty-seventh, when it was granted; and Sir William Yonge, Mr. Alderman Baker, and he, were ordered to prepare and bring in the same; which was the more surprising, as it had from Experience been found to be impossible to prevent the Importation of Cambricks and French Lawns from other Countries, under different Names, and still more impossible to prevent the Confumption. However, a Bill was prepared, as ordered, and presented by Sir William Yonge, on the seventeenth of April; when it was read a first Time, and ordered to be read a second Time. The nineteenth it was read a second Time, and committed to a Committee of the whole House for the Wednesday Se'nnight following. But by this Time the Linen-Drapers having seen the Bill, had taken the Alarm; therefore, on that Day, there was presented to the House, and read, a Petition of the Merchants and Dealers in Linen of the Cities of London and Westminster, and Borough of Southwark, whose Names were thereunto subscribed, on Behalf of themselves, and all other the Merchants and Dealers in Linen within Great-Britain; alledging, That, should the said Bill be passed into a Law, it would lay very great Hardships and Difficulties upon the fair Trader, without restraining the infamous Practice of Smuggling, or the several other illicit Means, by which the Acts for prohibiting the Importation and Wear of Cambricks and French Lawns had been hitherto eluded; therefore praying to be heard by their Counsel against the said Bill: And it was ordered, that they should be heard by themselves or Council upon the Report: After which the House resolved itself into a Committee of the whole House upon the said Bill, as they did also the next Day, when the Report was ordered to be received upon that Day Se'nnight. In the mean Time Petitions, to the same Effect with the last, were presented against the Bill, from the Merchants and Dealers in Linen of Bristol, Reading, Preston, and York; and, when the Report came to be received, on the seventeenth of May, such strong Reasons were given by the Petitioners Counsel and Witnesses against the Bill, that it was recommitted for that Day Month, and so dropped.

Linen
Drapers
Petition.

On the twentieth of March there was presented to the House, and read, a Petition of the Sugar-Refiners, Grocers, and other Dealers in Sugar, in the Cities of London and Westminster, and Borough of Southwark, whose Names were thereunto subscribed, setting forth as follows: viz. "That the Price of Muscovada Sugar is become excessively high, owing to a deficient Importation from our Sugar-Colonies in America, notwithstanding the Assurances given by the Planters in the Year 1739, of a much greater Supply, when the Legislature indulged them the Liberty of sending their Sugars directly to any foreign Port south of Cape Finestre; and that ever since Lady-Day, 1749, the Sugar-Planters have received for their Sugars a much higher Price than what they did for many Years before the Commencement of the late War; and, notwithstanding these Encouragements, instead of increasing their Plantations, and sending home a larger Produce, they have decreased in their Importation ever since the Year 1739, upon an Average, very considerably; and that the Planters are greater

Dealers in Sugar petition to Parliament

"Gainers by a small Importation than a large "one, but the Navigation, the Revenues, the "Petitioners, and the Consumers of Sugar, are "great Sufferers; and that the foreign Markets "are supplied with Sugar from the French at "less than half the Price it is here sold for,
 "exclusive of all Duties paid here; and the "Price of Sugars at the British Sugar-Colonies "is more than double the Price of what it is at "the French Sugar-Colonies; and that the ex"cessive Gain of the British Planters, by a defi"cient Importation (all foreign Sugars being
 "excluded by Duties which amount to a Pro"hibition) may be a Temptation to them to
 "forbear breaking up more Land for Sugar-
 "Plantations, especially in the Island of Ja- "maica, where the Petitioners are informed large "Tracts of Land, fit for that Purpose, do re"main uncultivated; and that the common "People of England are deprived of one of the "Conveniences of Life, by the present high "Price of Sugars, and the Petitioners of the "Benefit of supplying them therewith, and those "who can afford it are obliged to pay double the "Price which the rest of Europe do for the same "Commodity; and that there is no Possibility of "exporting either Muscovada Sugar, or refined,
 "to any Port in Europe, not even to Ireland, the "Prices here being much higher than in any "other Part of the World, for which Reason the "Traders in Ireland have made Use of the Li"berty they have of importing Sugar from "Portugal; and that the very great Disparity of
 "the Price of Sugar here, and in France, Flanders,
 "and Holland, is a strong Temptation to smug"gle Sugar from thence, to the great Injury of "the Government, and of the fair Trader; and
 "the Petitioners are credibly informed, that large "Quantities of refined Sugars are smuggled into "Scotland, and that, in other Parts of the King"dom, French Sugar-Loaves are sold at a much "lower Price than they can be afforded by our "own Refiners; and that the deficient Importa"tion of Sugar is of great Detriment to the Ma"nufacture of refining Sugar, wherein a great "Number of Families, in almost every Part of "the Kingdom, are now concerned, and a great "Number of Hands employed, and which gives "Employment and Maintenance to many other "Manufacturers, and pays considerable Taxes
 "to the Government; for, by the present Scar"city, they are deprived of Sugar to refine (nor "can the common People afford to pay for "refining a Commodity already so dear) to their "great Loss, being obliged to very large Ex-
 "pences, even when they have no Employment,
 "and to the Loss of all those who depend on "their Manufacture, and, by the present immo"derate Price, can have no Hope of exporting "any Part of their Produce, which, when they "were enabled to do, their Labour and Expence
 "was repaid them by Foreigners, and defeats
 "the wise Intentions of the Legislature in grant"ing a Bounty upon the Export of Sugar re"fined in Great-Britain; and that the Inhabitants "and Proprietors of Jamaica, tho' they have "many hundred thousand Acres of Land fit for "Sugar Plantations, which, as they have pub"lickly declared, are sufficient to supply all "Europe with Sugar, and are exempt from the "Tax of four and a half per Cent. to which our "other Sugar-Islands are subject, have, not"withstanding, forbore to cultivate them; but,

 "instead thereof, have practised the Trade of "refining Sugar there, and, in order to encou"rage it, have imposed a Duty of no less than "six Pence per Pound on all refined Sugar im"ported from Great-Britain, to the great Detri"ment of the Navigation and Revenue of this "Kingdom, as well as of the Petitioners; and "that in some of the other British Sugar-Islands
 "Refiners are likewise set up; which Practice is "injurious to the Navigation and Revenue, by "diminishing the Quantity of Muscovada Sugar
 "which would otherwise be imported, and inter"feres with the Manufacture of refining Sugar
 "here; and, therefore, praying the House will "take the Premises into their Consideration, and "make it the Interest of the British Sugar-Colo"nies to produce and send home a large Quan"tity of Sugar to Great-Britain, in order to "become more useful to their Mother Country,
 "its Trade, Navigation, and Revenue, or to "grant any other Relief, as to the House should "seem meet."

As this Petition contained so many important and alarming Facts, it was immediately referred to the Consideration of a Committee of the whole House; and, on the twenty-third, a Petition of much the same Purport was presented from the same Sort of Traders in Bristol, which was referred to the same Committee. Upon this Occasion a great Number of Accounts, relating to the Importation and Exportation of Sugars, were, by Order, laid before the House; and, several Persons having been ordered to attend the Committee, the House resolved itself into the same on the thirteenth of April, as it did likewise the seventeenth, after which the Committee was adjourned from Time to Time, till after the End of the Session, without doing any Thing for the Relief of the Petitioners; but what they seemed to aim at was, that a Law should be made for giving them Leave to import Sugars from any other Place, when that from our Plantations sold above such a Price here in England, on paying, for all Sugars so imported by them, near double the Duty which is paid upon the same Sort of Sugars imported from our own Sugar-Colonies.

The Number and Condition of the Publick-Houses in and about this Metropolis, and other great Cities and Towns, becoming a great Nu-merance, a Motion was made on the fifth of March in the House of Commons, and Leave was given to bring in a Bill for regulating the Number of Alehouses in England, and for the more easy convicting Persons selling Ale and other Liquors without Licence. This Bill enacted, amongst other Things, 1. That, upon granting Licences by Justices to keep an Alehouse, Inn, Victuall-house, or to sell Ale, Beer, and other Liquors by Retail, the Person to whom the same was to be granted should enter into a Recognizance in the Sum of ten Pounds, with two sufficient Sureties, each in the Sum of five Pounds, or one sufficient Surety in the Sum of ten Pounds, under the usual Condition, for Maintenance of good Order and Rule within his House; or, if he should be hindered from attending in Person, thro' Sickness, Infirmary, or any other reasonable Cause, to be allowed by the said Justices, such Licence might be granted upon two sufficient Sureties entering into Recognizance, each in the Penalty of ten Pounds, for the Performance of the said Condition. 2. That no Licence should be granted to any Person not licenced the Year preceding, unless such Person should produce, at the general Meeting of the Justices in September, a Certificate under the Hands of the Parson, Vicar, or Curate, and the major Part of the Churchwardens and Overseers, or else of three or four reputable and substantial Householders and Inhabitants, of his good Fame; and sober Life and Conversation; the producing of which Certificate to be mentioned in the Licence, otherwise the same to be void. 3. That if a licenced Person should die or remove, the Person succeeding might keep on such Alehouse during the Residue of the Term of the Licence, on Condition that, within thirty Days after such Death or Removal, he should obtain a Certificate as aforesaid, to be signed by some neighbouring Justice, in order to its being produced at the next general Meeting in September; and that if such Certificate should not be obtained within the said thirty Days, then immediately from and after the Expiration thereof, such Licence should be void: And that no Licence should entitle a Person to keep an Alehouse in any other Place than that in which it was first kept by Virtue of such Licence. 4. That no Licence should be granted but at a general Meeting of the Justices, acting in the Division wherein the Person to be licenced dwelt, to be held on the first of September yearly, or within twenty Days after; and every such Licence to be made for one Year only, to commence on the twenty-ninth of September: And that the Day and Place for granting such Licences should be appointed by Warrant of two or more Justices, ten Days at least before such Meeting, directed to the High-Constable of the Division, requiring him to order the respective Petty-Constables, to give Notice to the several Alehouse and Innkeepers within their Constablewicks, of the Day and Place of such Meeting. And, 5. It was provided, that this Act should not alter the Times of granting Licences for keeping of common Inns or Alehouses, or oblige Persons not licenced the Year preceding to produce Certificates in any City or Town corporate.

All for naturalizing Jews.

On the sixteenth of April a Bill, which had been passed without any great Opposition in the House of Lords, intituled, An Act to permit Persons professing the Jewish Religion to be naturalized by Parliament; and for other Purposes therein mentioned, was sent down to the Commons, where it was the next Day read a first Time, and ordered to be read a second Time. The nineteenth it was ordered to be printed; and, on the seventh of May, it was read a second Time, and a Motion made for its being committed; and, tho' there are no Clergymen in the House of Commons, yet upon this Motion a long Debate ensued, in which the principal Speakers were William Northey, Esq; Sir Edmund Ilham, Sir Jobu Barnard, Charles Cholmondeley, Esq; and Nicholas Fazakerley, Esq; against committing the Bill;

and the Lord Dupplin, Robert Nugent, Esq; the Lord Barrington, and Henry Pelham, Esq; for committing it; and the Question being at last put, and carried in the Affirmative, it was resolved, that the Bill should be committed to a Committee of the whole House, and that the House would resolve itself into the said Committee on Tuesday, the fifteenth of May, when the Bill was again strenuously opposed; but it passed thro' the Committee, and the Report was agreed to without any Amendment. The next Day it was ordered to be read a third Time, on Tuesday, the twenty-second; and previous thereto, viz. on the twenty-first, there was presented to the House, and read, a Petition of the several Merchants and Traders in the City of London, whose Names were thereunto subscribed, alledging, that the Petitioners were of Opinion, that the passing of this Bill into a Law, might encourage Persons of Wealth and Substance to remove with their Effects from foreign Parts into this Kingdom, and increase the Commerce and Credit of this Nation, and therefore praying that the Bill might pass into a Law; and, that the House might see what Sort of Men the Petitioners were; several of their Names were, upon Motion, read to the House. But as Merchants and Traders, as well as all other Sorts of Men, are often of different Opinions, there was the same Day presented, by the Sheriffs of London, a Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the said City, in Common Council assembled; which Petition being read, expressed the Apprehensions of the Petitioners; that, should the said Bill be passed into a Law, the same would tend greatly to the Dishonour of the Christian Religion, endanger our excellent Constitution, and be highly prejudicial to the Interest and Trade of the Kingdom in general, and the said City in particular, and therefore praying that it might not be passed into a Law. Both which Petitions were ordered to lie on the Table until the Bill should be read a third Time: And next Day, after reading the Order for this Purpose, a Petition was presented to the House, and read, of the subscribing Merchants and Traders of the City of London, in Behalf of themselves and all other Merchants and Traders of Great-Britain, alledging their being apprehensive, that the said Bill, if passed into a Law, would in its Consequences greatly affect our Trade and Commerce with foreign Nations, and particularly with Spain and Portugal, and would also be attended with many other very bad Effects to the Kingdom; and therefore praying that they might have Leave, by themselves or Counsel, to offer their Reasons against passing the same into a Law. Which Petition was ordered to lie on the Table until the Bill should be read a third Time, and that the Petitioners might then be heard by themselves against the said Bill, if they thought fit. Immediately after which, there was presented to the House, and read, a Petition of the several Merchants, Traders, and Manufacturers, Shipwrights, and Commanders of Ships, whose Names were thereunto subscribed, in Behalf of themselves, and many other Persons concerned in Shipping, and in the Woollen and other Manufactures of this Kingdom, alledging, that the Petitioners were of Opinion, that the passing this Bill into a Law might encourage many Persons of Wealth and Substance to remove with their Effects from foreign Parts into this Kingdom; the greatest Part of which, agreeable to the Experience of former Times, would be employed by them in foreign Trade and Commerce, and in the increasing the Shipping, and encouraging the Exportation of the Woollen and other Manufactures of this Kingdom, of which the Persons who profess the Jewish Religion had, for many Years last past, exported great Quantities; and therefore praying, that the said Bill might pass into a Law. This Petition was likewise ordered to lie upon the Table until the Bill should be read a third Time; which it immediately was, after some of the last Petitioners against it had been called in, and their Petition being again read, they were heard, and they examined several Witnesses in Support of their Petition; after which they being withdrawn, and the Bill opened by Mr. Speaker, a Motion was made, that the Bill do pass. Upon this there ensued another long Debate; and a Motion being made, that the Debate should be adjourned until that Day Month, the Question was put thereupon, and carried in the Negative: Whereupon the Question for the Bill's passing was put, and carried in the Affirmative; and Mr. Hume was ordered to carry the Bill to the Lords, and acquaint them, that the House had agreed to the same without any Amendment.

Bill passed by the Commons.

Substance of the Act to permit Persons professing the Jewish Religion to be naturalized by Parliament, &c.

Substance of the Act.

The Preamble recites the Act of the seventh of James I. which requires every Person who shall apply to be naturalized by Act of Parliament, being of the Age of eighteen, or upwards, to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper within one Month before the Bill for such Naturalization be exhibited; whereby many Persons of considerable Substance, professing the Jewish Religion, are prevented from being naturalized by Bill to be exhibited in Parliament for that Purpose: And the Act of the thirteenth of his present Majesty, whereby Persons professing the Jewish Religion, who have resided, or shall reside for seven Years or more, in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, are naturalized upon their complying with the Terms therein mentioned, without their receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: "It is therefore enacted, that Persons professing the Jewish Religion may, upon Application for that Purpose, be naturalized by Parliament without receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the said Act of the seventh of James I. or any other Law, Statute, &c. to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

"Provided also, That no Person shall hereafter be naturalized in Pursuance of this Act, unless in the Bill to be exhibited for that Purpose there be a Clause inserted, declaring, that such Person shall be liable to the Disabilities expressed in the Act made in the first Year of his late Majesty King George I. intitled, An Act to explain an Act made in the twelfth

"Year of King William III. intitled, An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better securing the Rights and Liberties of the Subject.

"Provided also, That no Person shall be naturalized by Virtue of any Act to be made or passed in Pursuance of this Act, who shall not, for three Years or upwards, before the Time of the exhibiting the Bill for that Purpose, have resided in his Majesty's Dominions of Great-Britain or Ireland, without being absent out of the same for a longer Space than three Months at any one Time during the said three Years.

"Provided also, That no Person shall be naturalized by Virtue of any Act to be made or passed in Pursuance of this Act, unless Proof shall be made by two credible Witnesses, that such Person professeth the Jewish Religion, and hath for three Years past professed the same.

"And it is further enacted, That, from and after the first of June, 1753, every Person professing the Jewish Religion shall be disabled, and is hereby made incapable to purchase, either in his or her own Name, or in the Name of any other Person or Persons, to his or her Use, or in Trust for him or her, or to inherit or take by Descent, Devise, or Limitation, in Possession, Reversion, or Remainder, any Advowson or Right of Patronage, or Presentation, or other Right or Interest whatsoever, of, in, or to any Benefice, Prebend, or other Ecclesiastical Living, or Promotion, School, Hospital, or Donative whatsoever; and all and singular Estates, Terms, and other Interests whatsoever, of, in, or to any Benefice, Prebend, or other Ecclesiastical Living, &c. which, from and after the said first of June, shall be made, suffered, or done, to or for the Use or Behoof of any such Person or Persons, or upon any Trust or Confidence, mediately or immediately, to or for the Benefit or Behoof of any such Person or Persons, shall be utterly void and of none Effect."

The Debates on this Bill were extremely warm on both Sides. They for the Bill strenuously maintained, that the Nation would thereby acquire considerable Increase of Riches and Trade. They in the Opposition answered all their Arguments, with great Clearness and Judgment; but none more effectually than the honourable Father of this City, and its Representative in Parliament, who is said to have spoken to this Effect:

"I am sorry I should find myself under a Necessity to speak against those I have long lived and conversed with, and for many of whom I have a particular Esteem; but, whilst I have the Honour of a Seat in this House, no personal Friendships or Connections shall induce me to keep Silence, when I see any Thing brought into this House, which I think will be not only injurious but dishonourable to my Country. If this Bill had been general, if it had been a Bill to open a Way for the Naturalization of all Mahometans and Pagans, as well as Jews, I should more readily have agreed

*Sir John Barnard's
Speech.*

“ agreed to it, because it would not have brought “ such a Reflection upon us as Christians. Such “ a general Bill, like the late Bill for a general “ Naturalization of all foreign Protestant, might “ have been deemed to proceed, as that Bill did, “ from some mistaken Maxim in Politicks; but “ to give a particular Invitation to the Jews, “ really seems as if we contemned, and were “ resolved to abandon, the Religion we now “ profess. The Jews are, and always have been,
 “ the most professed Enemies to Christianity,
 “ and the greatest Revilers of Christ himself:
 “ They are the Offspring of those that crucified “ our Saviour, and to this Day labour under “ the Curse pronounced against them upon that “ Account. I know, that, as a Christian, I am “ obliged to love my Enemy; but, whilst he “ continues to be so, no Precept of Christianity “ enjoins me to take him under my Roof, much “ less to put him in a Way of making himself “ Master both of me and my Roof; and how “ some Gentlemen imagine, that the Possession “ of a Land Estate should have an Influence “ upon a Man's religious Principles, I cannot “ comprehend. If any Jew should be so loose “ as to all Principles of Religion, as to abjure “ the Religion of his Ancestors for the Sake of “ being in the Fashion, or for the Sake of ac“ quiring any Honour or Preferment, surely “ his Desire of possessing a Land Estate will “ be an additional Motive for this declaring “ himself Christian, when he finds he cannot “ otherwise acquire such a Possession.

“ But if Jews should come to be possessed of “ a great Share of the Land Estates of this “ Kingdom, how are we sure Christianity will “ continue to be the fashionable Religion, or “ that the Profession of it will continue neces“ sary for qualifying a Man for any Honour or “ Preferment. To me it really seems at present “ to be the Fashion for a Man to declare himself “ of no Religion; and, if our fashionable Gen“ tlemen should at last fix upon any particular “ Religion, the Jewish may, perhaps, stand as “ good a Chance as any other; for Fashion, we “ know, depends upon nothing but Whim; and “ if the Jews should become our chief Land“ holders, they will, probably, be the Leaders “ of our Whim. As Landholders they will have “ the chusing of most of the Members of this “ House, and may themselves be chosen; and “ then to intitle themselves to Posts and Prefer“ ments, they have nothing to do but to join “ with the other Dissenters in getting the Test “ Act, and all the other Laws for securing our “ established Church, repealed. Whatever some “ Gentlemen may think, if we consider their “ Numbers, and the vast Estates they have ac“ quired in this Kingdom within the last fifty or “ sixty Years, this will appear to be no chime“ rical Apprehension; and their having thus a “ View to get Possession of the whole Strength “ and Power of this Nation, will rather confirm “ them in their Obstinacy than induce them to “ turn Christians, because they will look upon “ it as a preparatory Step made by Providence, “ which is to be followed by their expected “ Messiah. But in this View they will certainly “ be some Way or other disappointed, as they

No. 59.

“ are never to have any fixed Habitation until “ after they have acknowledged Christ to be the “ Messiah; and when they do this, they are to “ be restored to their native Land: Therefore “ such are very much mistaken as suppose, that “ our giving them a fixed Habitation in this “ Country before their Conversion, can any way “ tend towards a Completion of the Christian “ Prophecy relating to them.

“ I shall now consider the Advantages hoped “ for from this Bill, but must begin with some “ general Observations in Relation to the Jews:
 “ And, in the first Place, I must observe, that “ it is a very great Mistake to suppose, that “ the Jews ever did, or ever can set up Trade “ in any Country; for the Origin of Trade in “ all Countries is Manufacture, but none of the “ Jews, even of the poorest Sort, are ever bred “ to be Manufacturers or Mechanicks, or indeed “ to any laborious Employment, therefore they “ can never be the Beginners of Trade in any “ Country. It was not they that began the “ Dutch Trade, after the Establishment of that “ Commonwealth, but it was the Persecution “ and Oppression of the Spanish Government “ which drove the Manufacturers and Mecha“ nicks from all the other Provinces of the Ne“ therlands; nor was it the Expulsion of the Jews “ which ruined the Trade of Spain and Portugal, “ but the Emigration of the Inhabitants; for “ such Multitudes of their People went to Ame“ rica, that there was not enough left for carry“ ing on any Sort of Manufacture sufficient for “ their home Consumption. No Instance can be “ given of the Jews having been the Beginners “ of Trade in any Country, but many Instances “ to the contrary. In Poland there have been “ Multitudes of Jews for many Ages, yet no “ Man will say that Poland is a trading Country.
 “ In this Country, tho' they were settled here “ from the Time of the Conquest to the eight“ teenth of Edward the First, near two hundred “ and thirty Years, yet they never set up any “ Trade, but dealt chiefly in Usury, which “ indeed was most excessive, for we have among “ our Records some Regulations, prohibiting “ them to take above two Pence per Pound per “ Week. The Truth is, in those Countries “ where there is little or no Trade, they deal “ mostly in Usury, or in collecting the Taxes;
 “ and, where a Trade has been already established, “ some indeed of the richer Sort may engage in “ foreign Commerce, but the poorer Sort deal “ only as Brokers, Pedlars, or Hawkers, as “ we may now see from daily Experience.

“ But, tho' the Jews cannot be the first Be“ ginners of Trade in any Country, yet, after “ it is begun, they may contribute to its In“ crease; for as they either cannot, or will not “ purchase, or take Lands to farm in any Coun“ try, they have no Way of employing their “ Money but in Trade or Usury; and as they “ are dispersed over the whole World, and keep “ a Correspondence with one another, they know “ where all Sorts of Manufactures may be sold “ to the best Advantage; therefore, by lending “ their Money to the native Manufacturers, “ they may enable them to extend their Manu“ facture, and, by their foreign Correspondence,

8 Q

“ they

“ they may increase the Exportation. For this “ Reason, in the Infancy of the Trade of any “ Country, it is right to encourage the Jews to “ come and settle amongst them, as the Manu“ facturers have not then Money of their own “ sufficient for carrying their Manufacture to “ any great Extent, and as the native Merchants “ have not a foreign Correspondence settled, “ perhaps, in those Countries where some of “ their Manufactures may be sold to the best “ Advantage. But, in a Country where Trade “ and Commerce have been fully and long “ established, where the Manufacturers have “ Money sufficient of their own, or of their “ Friends, to carry their Manufactures to the “ utmost Extent, and where the native Mer“ chants have a Correspondence settled in every “ foreign Country where it is possible to carry “ on any Commerce, and consequently must “ know where every Sort of Manufacture may “ be sold to the best Advantage: In such a “ Country, I say, it is Madness, if not worse, “ to put Jews, or any other Foreigners, upon an “ equal Footing with Natives; because it only “ enables the former to take the Bread, or “ a Part of the Bread, out of the Mouths of “ the latter, without increasing in the least the “ national Trade or Commerce; for no Jew, “ no more than a Native, will export more of “ your Manufacture than he can sell to Ad“ vantage; and so much your own native Mer“ chants will always export, if there were not “ a Jew in the Kingdom, nor does an English “ Merchant ever desire a greater Profit than “ will satisfy a Jew, or any other foreign Mer“ chant; for, in such a Multitude of Merchants “ as we now have of our own to all Parts of “ the World where the Trade is open, it is cer“ tain that they will undersell one another, till “ they bring the Market down to what can be “ deemed nothing but a living Profit.

“ Let us take, for Example, the Kingdom of “ Portugal: Does any Man think that we do not “ now export as many of our Manufactures thi“ ther as can possibly find a Vent there, or that “ our Portugal Merchants and their Factors there, “ who are so numerous, and so independent of “ one another, do not sell those Goods as cheap “ as they can be sold? Suppose then that we “ export yearly thither to the Value of a Million “ Sterling, and that this is the utmost that can “ be exported; if we should naturalize all the “ Jews in the World, they could not add to “ that Exportation, they could only come in for “ a Share of it; and, suppose that Share to be “ two hundred thousand Pounds Worth of Goods “ yearly, is it not evident, that in this Case
 “ one Fifth of our English Portuguese Merchants “ must give up the Trade, or all of them to“ gether must trade for one Fifth less than they “ used to do? This therefore could be of no “ Advantage to our Trade or to our Manu“ factures; it would only transfer the Profit upon
 “ two hundred thousand Pounds Worth of Goods “ yearly from our native English Merchants to “ our naturalized Jews; and this I must look “ on as a Loss to the Nation, because I think “ we are as yet a Christian Nation. The Estate “ got by an Englishman we are sure will remain

“ here; but a Jew, tho’ naturalized, may be “ here To-day and gone To-morrow: When he “ has got an Estate here, he may go and live “ upon it in a Climate which he thinks more “ agreeable to his Constitution.

“ This Example may be applied to every “ Country in the World, as well as to that of “ Portugal, for there is no Country where we “ have not now Houses and Factories established;
 “ and therefore it is, I think, a Demonstration, “ that the Bill now before us can be of no Ad“ vantage to our Trade or Manufactures, but “ must be of Disadvantage to the Nation in every “ Branch of our foreign Trade. And now with “ Regard to our domestick: The Jews, it is “ true, have as yet contented themselves with “ Hawking and Peddling; very few of them “ have become Shopkeepers, because it would “ subject them to Taxes and Parish-Rates. But, “ suppose they should begin to engage in this “ Branch of Business, could it be of any Advan“ tage to our Trade or to our Manufacturers?
 “ Have we not already as many English Shop“ keepers of all Kinds as can be supported by the “ Consumption? Does not the most petty Shop“ keeper know, that what maketh rich is a small “ Profit and a quick Return? Consequently, “ must not every one of them sell his Goods as “ cheap as he can possibly afford? Therefore “ we cannot suppose that Jew Shopkeepers would “ sell cheaper than our English now do, but they “ might, perhaps, cheat oftener; and, if Jew “ Shopkeepers should increase, the Christian must “ diminish in Number; so that, if in this Way
 “ the Bill now before us should have any Effect, “ it would only be a transferring of a Share “ of the Profit upon our home Consumption, “ from our native Christians to our naturalized “ Jews.

“ But, both in our foreign and domestick “ Trade, the transferring of a Part of the Profits “ from the Christian to the Jew, is not the only “ bad Consequence we have to fear from this “ Bill: Sectaries of all Kinds, especially the “ Jews, are more zealous and more diligent in “ recommending one another, and in playing “ into the Hands of one another, than those of “ the established Church. By this Means they “ may in Time render it impossible for any “ Christian to carry on any Trade, either foreign “ or domestick, to Advantage: Jews may be“ come our only Merchants and our only Shop“ keepers. They will probably leave the la“ borious Part of all Manufactures and mecha“ nical Trades to the poor Christian, but they “ will be the paramount Masters, as the Mer“ chants and Shopkeepers in every Country must “ always be. And if our landed Gentlemen should “ find it impossible to provide for their younger “ Sons, by making them Merchants or Shop“ keepers, nor for their Daughters by marrying “ them, with a small Fortune, to a Merchant or “ Shopkeeper, we may judge what would soon “ be the Fate of most of our Landholders; “ they must give such large Fortunes to their “ younger Children, or at least to most of them, “ as might be sufficient for their Support, by “ which Means a new Incumbrance would be “ every Generation be brought upon the Estate,
 “ and

"and that without any Resource. At present
 "a younger Brother often gets by Trade such a "Sum of Money as saves the Estate of his "Family; or the Heir, by marrying the Daugh"ter of a rich Merchant or Shopkeeper, gets "such a Fortune as redeems his Estate from "all former Incumbrances; but if Jews, who "marry only among one another, were our only
 "Merchants and Shopkeepers, both these Re"sources would be cut off; which would every "Year bring so many of our Land Estates to "Market, that I doubt much if they would rise
 "in their Price, until the Jews had got Pos"session of most of them.

"Thus the Bill now before us, instead of "being of Advantage, may probably be fatal to "our present Landholders; and, whatever Esteem
 "some Gentlemen here may have for the Jews, "I doubt much if our English Farmers would "like to have Jews for their Landlords, tho'
 "they could hardly be treated worse than some "of them are at present by their Christian Land"lords. From all which I must conclude, that "there is no Rank of Men in the Kingdom to "whom this Bill, if passed into a Law, can be "of any Advantage; but that, on the contrary,
 "if it takes any Effect, it will be of immediate "Disadvantage to our Merchants, and may at "last be fatal to every Rank of Christians in this "Kingdom. And, as to the Advantage it may "be of to the State, by supplying our Ministers "with Money in Case of a War, or by enabling "them to reduce the Interest payable upon our "publick Funds, in Case of the Continuance of "Peace, I must observe, that, if the Jews can"not get an equal Interest and equal Security
 "any where else, they will let us have their "Money without being naturalized; and if they "can get an higher Interest and equal Security
 "any where else, they will not let us have their "Money, even tho' we should naturalize the "whole Hebrew Nation at once. So that to "compensate all the Dangers and all the Dis"advantages we shall expose ourselves to by the "passing of this Bill, we can expect no one Ad"vantage but that of having a few rich Jews
 "come here to spend their Income from our "Funds, which they now spend abroad; and "even this I think very precarious; for when a "Man grows old, he does not like to leave the "Country in which he has been bred, and, per"haps, born, which is the Reason that I have "seldom seen Bills of Naturalization applied for
 "by rich Foreigners who have got their Fortunes
 "abroad, but by Foreigners who have long lived,
 "and have got Estates, or are in the Way of "getting Estates, in this Country.

"But, tho' I think this good Effect of the "Bill very precarious, I am convinced it will "have a very extensive bad Effect. We may,
 "if we please, call it only a Bill for empowering
 "the Parliament to naturalize, but it will in "Effect be a general Naturalization of the Jews.
 "An old and rich Jew, who has give over "Trade, may not, perhaps, expose himself to "the Fatigue and Danger of changing his Coun"try and Climate; but all the rich Jews, who "are still engaging in Trade, and resolve to "continue it, will come here to be naturalized;

"and, where the Rich come, the Poor must "follow. We shall have Crowds of them coming "over every Day, and, as their Children after"wards born will of Course be natural-born
 "Subjects, if the Doctrine be established, that "all such Jews may purchase and hold Land
 "Estates, I am afraid that a great Part of the "Land in this Kingdom may soon fall into their "Hands, so that from henceforth the Prophecy,
 "at least with Respect to them in this Country,
 "will be defeated; for, whilst our Constitution
 "remains in its present Form, those that are pos"sessed of our Land Estates must necessarily have "a Share in our Government: Tho' they may "not be Members of Parliament, nor Ministers "of State, yet they must have a great Influence "upon those that are; consequently they can

Which Arguments, tho' not sufficient at present to stem the Power of the Projectors of the Bill, yet, when heard and approved of by the Constituents of the House of Commons, they prevailed in the next Session of Parliament: For the Act was repealed on the twenty-sixth Day of November following; to the great Satisfaction of the Nation in general, and to the Citizens of London in particular.

Repealed.

On the seventh of June Dr. Archibald Cameron, convicted of joining with the Pretender in the late Invasion, and suspected of being concerned in an Attempt to renew the Rebellion in Scotland in the Beginning of this Year, was executed at Tyburn.

*Execution and Behaviour of
Dr. Cameron.*

When this Gentleman came to the Place of Execution, he looked on the Officers and Spectators with an undaunted and composed Countenance; and, as soon as he was unloosed from the Sledge, he started up, and, with an heroick Deportment, stepped up into the Cart, by the Help of one of his Executioners; whence, looking round, with Unconcern, on all the awful Apparatus of Death, he smiled; and seeing the Clergyman that attended him coming up the Steps, he came forward to meet him, and endeavoured, with his fettered Hands, to help him up, saying,
 "So—are you come? This is a glorious Day to "me! it is my new Birth-Day; there are more "Witnesses at this Birth than were at my first."
 The Clergyman asked him how he did: he said,
 "Thank God, I am very well, but a little fa"tigated with my Journey; but, blessed be God,
 "I am now come to the End of it."

On

On hearing one of the Gentlemen who presided at the Execution ask the Clergyman, whether he would be long about his Office, Dr. Cameron immediately took the Word, and said, he required but very little Time, for it was but difagreeable being there, and he was as impatient to be gone as they were. The Clergyman then asked the Gentleman who had spoke, whether he was the Sheriff, and on his being answered in the affirmative, he told him Dr. Cameron's Business there would be chiefly with him; that he had something to communicate to him, if he would take the Trouble to come near; which he very readily complied with, and endeavoured to bring his Horse close to the Cart; but, finding the Horse a little unruly, and that he could not hear what the Doctor said, by Reason of the Noise of the Multitude, he beckoned with his Hand for Silence, but to no Purpose; whereupon he very obligingly alighted, and came up the Steps, and with great Civility and Attention listened to the Doctor, who spoke to this Purpose:

"Sir, you see a Fellow-Subject just going to pay his last Debt. I the more chearfully resign my Life, as it is taken from me for doing my Duty according to my Conscience. I freely forgive all my Enemies, and those who are instrumental in taking away my Life. I thank God, I die in Charity with all Mankind.

"As to my Religion, I die a steadfast, tho' unworthy, Member of that Church in which I have always lived, the Church of England; in whose Communion I hope (thro' the Merits of my blessed Saviour) for Forgiveness of my Sins, for which I am heartily sorry.

"The Custom of delivering something in Writing on such Occasions as this I should willingly have complied with, had it not been put out of my Power, being denied the Use of Pen, Ink, and Paper, except in the Presence of some of my Keepers. But what I intend my Country should be informed of with Regard to my dying Sentiments, I have, by the Means of a blunt Pencil, endeavoured to set down on some Slips of Paper, as I came by them, in as legible Characters as I was able;
and these I have left in the Hands of my Wife, charging her, on her Duty to her dying Husband, to transmit, with all convenient Speed, a faithful Transcript of them to you, and I am confident she will honourably discharge the Trust."

He then told the Sheriff he would presume no longer upon his Patience; but the Sheriff, with Looks that bespoke a great deal of Concern, and with much Good-nature, begged he would take as much Time as he pleased, for they would wait till he was ready. The Doctor thanked him. Then, turning to the Clergyman, he said, "I have now done with this World, and am ready to leave it."

He joined heartily in the Commendatory Prayer, &c. then repeated some Ejaculations out of the Psalms; after which he embraced the Clergyman, and took Leave.

As the Clergyman was going down from the Cart, he had like to have missed the Steps;

which the Doctor observing, called out to him with a chearful Tone of Voice, saying, "Take Care how you go. I think you don't know this Way so well as I do."

Sir Crispe Gascoyne having given great Satisfaction to his Fellow-Citizens during his Mayoralty, it was moved in the Court of Common Council, that the Thanks of that Court should be presented to the late Lord-Mayor; which, being read, was, after some Debate, and Alterations made therein, agreed to, and ordered by the Court to be copied by the Town-Clerk, and presented to Sir Crispe Gascoyne, Knt. The following is a Copy of it:

"That the Thanks of this Court be given to the Right Hon. Sir Crispe Gascoyne, Knt. late Lord-Mayor, for his diligent Attendance to, and faithful Discharge of, the Duties of that high Office: For his steady Perseverance in the Cause of Justice, his generous Protection of the Distressed, and his remarkable Humanity:
For the many generous Instances of his Benevolence, and great Regard to his Fellow-Citizens, and for supporting the Dignity of Chief Magistrate with the utmost Splendor and Magnificence: For giving at all Times easy Access to his Person; and for determining, on every Occasion, with the greatest Candour, Ability, and Integrity."

Thanks to Sir Crispe
Gascoyne.

Edward Ironside, Esq; an eminent Banker, was elected Successor to Sir Crispe in the high Office of Lord-Mayor; but, being dangerously ill at the Time, he was obliged to be carried in a Chair to be sworn in at the Exchequer. He died of the Gout in his Stomach a few Weeks after, and was succeeded by Thomas Rawlinson, Esq; who was elected Lord-Mayor on the twenty-eighth of November.

It having been long complained of by the Citizens, obliged to serve divers Offices in this Corporation, That the Oaths of Office were of that Nature and Tenor as could not be taken by conscientious People; wherefore, on the twentieth of December, at a Court of Common Council held at Guildhall, after a Bill was passed for raising two thousand four hundred and forty-three Pounds on the Inhabitants of this City, for the Support of the London Workhouse, the ancient Oaths of Office, to be taken by the Constables, Inquest-Men, and Scavengers, were ordered to be laid aside, and such others prescribed as are in the Power of every conscientious Person to discharge. Then three several Petitions were presented to the Court, in Relation to the Borough Market; the one from the Parishioners of St. Saviour's, against removing it; another from the Parishioners of St. Olave's, recommending Ship-Inn-Yard as a proper Place to remove the present Market to; and a third from other Inhabitants of St. Saviour's Parish, recommending a Plot of waste Ground behind the Greyhound Inn- Yard. The first of these Petitions was ordered to lie on the Table, to be taken into Consideration when the Committee of City Lands should make their Report concerning the Borough Markets; and the two others were referred to the Committee of the City Lands.

reformed.

A Motion

A Motion was made, that the Court should take into Consideration the Utility of a Bridge over the River Thames, between that from Fish-Street-Hill to the Borough and Westminster-Bridge; and, after some Debate, the Question being put, the Lord-Mayor declared the Majority to be for taking the same into Consideration; but the No's being for a Division, a Motion was made, that the Minority should go forth; but the Lord-Mayor, after asking Advice of a worthy Alderman, ordered the Majority to go forth, and appointed two Tellers for, and two against the Question.

A Motion was then made, that a Committee should be appointed to consider of the best Plan, Situation, &c. of such a Bridge; but it was deferred to another Court.

In this Session of Parliament, it being represented, that the Peace-Officers of this City, and in other Parts of the Nation, laboured under great Difficulties by Loss of Time and Expences in the attending upon and conveying Offenders to Goal; for by an Act, 3 Jac. I. an Offender being obliged to bear the Charges of himself and of those who conveyed him to Goal; and if he was unable to do it, a Tax was laid upon the Parish in which he lived; this was found to be a great Discouragement to Parishes to take Offenders; and the Constables and others being often kept out of their Money, and sometimes losing it, it was enacted, for the better securing to Constables, and others, the Expences of conveying Offenders to Goal, &c. That, when Offenders have not Money sufficient to defray the Expences of conveying them to Goal, Justices of the Peace shall grant a Warrant on the Treasurer of the County for the Payment of the Charges of such Conveyance. And the Expence, as well as Loss of Time in attending Courts of Justice, being a Discouragement to the poorer Sort to appear as Witnesses against Offenders, who thereby escape the Punishment due to their Crimes, it was farther enacted, That the Charges of Trouble and Attendance shall be allowed, by Order of the Court, to poor Persons bound to give Evidence against Felons. The Sum of six Pence and no more, is to be paid to the Officer as his Fee for making out the Order on the Treasurer of the County for the Money. But in Middlesex, the Overseers of the Poor of the Parish where the Offender shall be apprehended, are to pay all such Charges.

As for Relief of Constables.

NUMB. LX.

In the Beginning of the Year 1754, there appeared a Scheme for the better Improvement of this City: The Benefits which, the Author shews, would arise from his Scheme are, 1. Reputation. 2. An additional Demand for many Things. 3. An Increase of Manufacturers, &c. 4. An Increase of Commerce, Navigation and Plantations. 5. An Increase of National Revenue. 6. An Increase of Rents of Houses and Lands. 7. A Decrease of the Poor-Rate.

Scheme for improving the City.

For the obtaining these Benefits he proposed a Removal of all Nuisances, Inconveniences and Inelegances, and an Addition of Decorations, in a judicious and masterly Taste.

The Nuisances he particularly mentions are, 1. Nastiness in several Places. 2. Rubbish left in the Streets; and Cellar-doors, Cellar-windows, and Stone-Steps, projecting into the Foot-paths. 3. Broken Pavements. 4. Ruinous Houses. 5. Sheds against Churches, or standing in the Streets. 6. Rebuilt Houses advancing into the Streets. 7. The driving of live Bulls along the Streets. 8. The Multitude of useless Dogs, many of which run mad about the Streets. 9. Beggars and Vagrants. 10. The open Immorality and Impiety of the lower People.

He then mentions several Inconveniences and Inelegances, with Methods for removing them, and proposes several Ornaments; but, says he, beyond all the Regulations and Decorations, hitherto treated of, none can compare with the last that I shall mention, either for the Convenience, Ornament, or substantial Advantage it would be of to the City of London, separately considered.

It is what many Well-wishers to the City (by Way of Retaliation, or rather of Self-preservation) begin to think no less than an absolute Necessity of erecting a new additional Stone-Bridge across the Thames, somewhere within the Liberty of the City. And every Consideration whatever directs us to the only proper Place in the whole City for it, viz. at the Mouth of Fleet-Ditch; which, when arched over for that Purpose, will make a more open, spacious, and commodious Way to and from such new Bridge, than either of the present Bridges can boast of, or indeed than any Part of the City or Suburbs can equal.

I shall, as briefly as is possible, enumerate some of the Benefits of such a Bridge.

1. In Point of Grandeur and Ornament, nothing can equal such a Structure, erected in so advantageous a Situation. It would be near upon, though not quite in, the Mid-way between the other two Bridges; whereby Uniformity would be joined to Beauty and Magnificence. And without detracting from Westminster-Bridge, this may undoubtedly be made to exceed it, as much in Beauty and Ornament, as it would in all the other following Respects.

2. With regard to Convenience and Accommodation, such a Passage cross the River, from the very Center of the great Contiguity, would very much accommodate the greatest Part of the Town; and whenever this comes to be built, it will

will then only be the extreme West and East Ends of the Town, for which the present two Bridges will be more commodious.

Our proposed Bridge will bring Carriages and Passengers, by the Way of Gravel-Lane, in Southwark, directly (and by a shorter Course than from either of the other two Bridges) into and from the very Middle of St. George's-Fields; wherein fine Roads are already made, for a Passage to the Counties south of the Thames; from which Counties, to this Side of the Thames, it would be well situate for the great North-west, Triff and Northern Roads, through spacious Streets, already well supplied with Inns, Livery-Stables, and all other Conveniences.

3. With respect to the peculiar Advantages which such a Bridge would bring to the City of London, separately considered.

It ought here previously to be considered, that at present the City has the justest Grounds for being alarmed at the Schemes already laid, and laying, for new and magnificent Streets, new Inns, Stage-Coaches, Livery-Stables, and Trades of all Kinds, in the Neighbourhood of Westminster-Bridge.

And it is of the last Importance for the City of London seriously to reflect, that when those Schemes, which are now little more than Embryos, shall come to Maturity, it will be too late to hope for bringing back those Advantages into the City, which may now be affected by this proposed Bridge, if very speedily resolved on.

For the central Situation of it would necessarily draw thither most of the heavy Carriages, as well as Travellers, from Westminster-Bridge; which then would have little more left than what it has gained, either from the Ferries above it, or from the Bridges of Fulham and Kingslon; and I may add also, from the many supernumerary Passengers (if I may so term them) going for mere Pleasure over it, who but for that Amusement would not cross the River at all.

Thus, by the happy Situation of our proposed Bridge, one Part of the City of London, and also of the Borough of Southwark, will recover and preserve what Westminster is gradually taking, and will farther continue to take, from another Part of each of them.

It may also well merit the City's Consideration, that, as thereby there would be three Bridges leading to so many fine and much frequented Roads, it must needs happen, sooner or later, that St. George's-Fields will gradually be built up into Streets; which will not only render the whole Contiguity, on that Side of the River, more compact and uniform, but will necessarily increase the Value of the City's Estate in and near those Fields.

Moreover, the proposed Bridge may, and very probably will, hereafter prove an eminent Benefit to both London and Southwark, in a Case that may happen sooner than, perhaps, is generally imagined. For if London-Bridge be, as many think, much decayed, after standing five hundred Years, any great Alteration in it, either from a discovered Defect in any Part of it, or from a Scheme, much mentioned of late, of lessening the Number of its too low and narrow Arches, may require it to be shut up for a considerable Time. On which Supposition, the great Usefulness of our now proposed Bridge will appear obvious to every one.

In every Light therefore it is evident, that the City of London will be greatly benefited by such a Bridge; the Expence whereof (too) I have good Ground to conclude, will be considerably less than was that of Westminster; not only by reason that ours will be about 100 Feet shorter than it, and that some Overights in the other may be well avoided in ours; but likewise, because the Passages wanted (on each Side the River) will be fewer, much shorter, and less chargeable.

This Scheme was so greatly approved of by the Citizens, that, tho' on the twenty-second of February, at a Court of Common Council at Guildhall, a Motion was made, that the Resolution of the twentieth of December, relating to the building of a new Bridge from London to Southwark, should be repealed, upon a Division, ninety-three were for the Question, and ninety-five against it. A Committee was then appointed, to consist of the Aldermen, all the Deputies, and one Commoner out of every Ward, and they were empowered to draw upon the Chamberlain to the amount of one hundred Pounds for any Expences that might arise from Plans, Surveys, &c. for the Purpose above-mentioned, with an Instruction to enquire into the present State of London-Bridge.

And soon afterwards Samuel Decker, of Walton, gave the City his Opinion concerning the Bridge intended to be built from Black-Friers to the opposite Shore; proposing that it shall be built from the End of Fleet-Ditch; that it shall be all of Stone like Westminster-Bridge; or, like his own at Walton, of the best Oak Timber on Stone Piers; that it shall consist of fifteen Arches, the middle Arch to be a hundred Feet wide, the next ninety Feet, and so on with the rest, each gradually decreasing a tenth Part. He adds, that the Expence of building a Bridge like that of Westminster, may be computed at 150,000 l. and like that at Walton, at 60,000 l. and that when the Bridge is built at Fleet-Ditch, the City will have an Opportunity of pulling down London-Bridge, which, on account of the Dangers attending both those who pass over, and those who go under it, he doubts not but they will be hereafter induced to do. The Money to be raised for building the new Bridge, he proposes should not be raised by a Lottery, as Lotteries are too nearly allied to Gaming, but by a publick voluntary Subscription, which he doubts not will be begun by a liberal Contribution from his Majesty, and carried on with Spirit and Success by Noblemen, Gentlemen, and the wealthy Inhabitants of London. He concludes by saying, with a truly publick Spirit, "If this Method of raising the Money by Subscription takes Effect, I will venture to promise, for my Part, to make the City a present of my Advice and Assistance, for building the Bridge in the most commodious and the cheapest Manner, and will be a Contributor towards the Charge of it."

On the twenty-first of March, the Committee of Common Council, lately appointed to consider of a new Bridge over the River Thames, met at Guildhall, and came to a Resolution, first to take into Consideration the State of London-Bridge: And thereupon gave Orders for Accounts of the Revenue, the present State of the Foundation, and the annual Expence of Repairs, (distinguished above and below the Crown) as also the Produce of the Rents of the Houses on the Bridge for ten Years past, to be laid before them.

Surveyor's Report.

In pursuance of which Resolution, Mr. Dance, the City Surveyor, in the Month of July, reported to the said Committee, That the Foundation of the said Bridge was very good. At the said Committee a Motion was made for pulling down the Houses on London-Bridge, whereby it would be broad enough for a commodious Foot-way to be made on each Side, and for four Carriages to go a-breast, and Mr. Dance was ordered to prepare a Plan, and lay the same before the next Committee.

Report of
mittee.

And on the twenty-sixth of September, the following Report of the said Committee was read in a full Court of Common Council: That the Committee are of Opinion, that the only proper Place for building a new Bridge over the Thames, is from the End of Fleet-Ditch to the opposite Shore in the County of Surry.

That Mr. Dance, the Clerk of the City's Works, in pursuance of their Order, prepared and laid before them a Plan, Elevation, and Section of a Stone Bridge, together with his Estimate of the Charge thereof, which amounts to the Sum of 185,950 l. exclusive of a further Expence for the Purchase of such Lands, &c. as may be necessary for making Avenues thereto.

That the Committee humbly offer it as their Opinion, that as the Estates of this City are by no Means in a Condition to perform so great a Work, the said Bridge, whenever erected, should be a national Expence.

That the Committee are humbly of Opinion, that the Houses upon London-Bridge are a publick Nuisance, long felt, and universally censured and complained of, the Passages for Carriages and Foot-Passengers being thereby rendered not only inconvenient, but dangerous to the Citizens of London, and others resorting thereto; and therefore the Committee humbly offer it as their Opinion, that in order to render the said Bridge and the Passages to and from it more safe and commodious, all the Houses from St. Magnus's Church on the East Side, as far as the City-Gate towards the South, and from the Corner of Thames-Street, on the West Side, to the Bear Tavern, inclusive, in the Borough, ought to be taken down. But a Rumour having prevailed, that the Foundations of the said Bridge are in so ruinous a Condition, that any Expence in the Superstructure thereof would be thrown away; the Committee were desirous, in the first Place, to be well satisfied of the true State and Condition both of the Piers and Piles which supported it, and therefore directed Mr. Dance carefully to survey and examine them; and that, according to his Report, the said Foundations are good, and (with the common annual Repairs) likely to stand for Ages.

That Mr. Dance laid before them a Plan and Elevation of the said Bridge, with the Alterations necessary for rendering it more safe, commodious, and ornamental; together with an Estimate of the Charge thereof, which amounts to 30,000 l. and that it is their humble Opinion, that the Execution of the said Plan, by opening a Passage for Coaches and Carriages of the Breadth of thirty-three Feet, besides leaving a Foot-way on each Side of the breadth of six Feet, will answer every Purpose of publick Safety and Convenience.

That Mr. Dance's Plan and Estimate having been prepared upon a Supposition, that the proposed Alteration was to extend to the whole Bridge, and the Committee, in order to reduce the Expence as low as possible, having resolved to carry the said Alteration no farther than absolute Necessity required, they directed Mr. Dance to acquaint them how much of the said Estimate may be abated, in Case the Houses on the East Side of the Bridge, southward of the said Gate, were left standing; and he informed them, in that Case, the Charge would be reduced to 27,800 l.

That, in order to know how far the Estate allotted for the Support of London-Bridge (commonly called the Bridge-House Estate) would be affected by the pulling down so large a Number of Houses, they directed Accounts of the Rents thereof to be laid before them by the proper Officer, by which they found that the neat Rent of the Houses necessary to be taken down, which are out upon Lease, amount to the yearly Sum of 430 l. 17 s. and that of the other Houses, let to Tenants at Will (the Land-Tax to be deducted) to the yearly Sum of 397 l. 9 s. or thereabouts: So that the Loss to the Bridge-House Estate will be about 828 l. 6 s. a Year. That as the two Parishes of St. Magnus and St. Olave, Southwark, will prove considerable Sufferers by being deprived of so great a Number of Houses and Inhabitants, and may therefore equitably claim to have such a Loss made good, they likewise enquired into the Value of the present Assessments of the said Houses and Inhabitants towards the Land-Tax, Poors-Rate, Church-Rate, and Rector's Tythes; and found the same to amount to the yearly Sum of 484 l. 19 s. 10 d. or thereabouts.

That they also directed Mr. Dance to estimate the present subsisting Terms of such of the said Houses as are out upon Lease; as also the Value of such other Houses as must be purchased; and that, by his Calculation, the same amounts to about 8940 l. 11 s. 7 d. But as this Calculation is made upon the Foot of the Fines paid, and Ground-Rents payable by the Lessees, they apprehend some further Satisfaction may reasonably be required by the Tenants, and under Tenants, for what they have laid out in Repairs, or fitting up their respective Premises.

Since which Time there have been several Courts, but nothing has been done in this Affair, more than referring it back to the Committee, with particular Instructions for them to consider and report whether such a Bridge can be carried into Execution without Detriment to the Trade and Navigation of this City.

On Tuesday, April the thirtieth, came on at Guildhall the Election for Representatives of this City in Parliament; when the several Aldermen, together with Mr. Alexander Cruden, Citizen and Stationer (much disordered in Mind, and lately a Patient in a Mad-House, imagining himself to be another Joseph in Egypt, and designed by the Almighty to be advanced to great Dignity and Power in this City and Nation, insited on his being put in Nomination for one of the City Representatives) being separately put in Nomination, the Majority of Hands was declared for Sir John Barnard, Slingsby Bethell, Esq; Sir Richard Glynn, and William Beckford, Esq; but a Poll was demanded on behalf of Sir Robert Ladbroke and Sir William Calvert, which began at Half an Hour after two in the Afternoon, and ended at five for that Day. The Poll continued for six Days after, beginning at nine in the Morning, and ending at four in the Afternoon. It finally ended on Tuesday, May the seventh; immediately after which the Sheriffs cast up the Poll-Books upon the Hustings, and the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor being sent for, the Sheriffs declared in his Presence, that the Election had fallen upon Sir John Barnard, Slingsby Bethell, Esq; Sir Robert Ladbroke and William Beckford, Esq; who were declared duly elected. The Number of Livery that polled at this Election was 5931. The Particulars of this memorable Poll for each Day, together with the Totals of each of the Candidates, are as follows:

The Contest on this Occasion was the greatest that was ever known in the Memory of Man, the whole Body of Dissenters and the Interest of the Ministry uniting to support Sir William Calvert against the Anti-ministerial Livery, whose Dislike of their late Favourite, Sir William, was particularly founded upon his Attachment to the Advocates for naturalizing the Jews.

Election of Sheriffs.

The Time of Election for Sheriffs drawing near, it was resolved to put George Streetfield and Alexander Sheafe, Esqrs; two Protestant Dissenters, in Nomination for that Office; who were accordingly returned by the Common-Hall, on the twenty-fourth Day of June. A Poll was then demanded, and when that was carried on to the Extent of Time, the Books were cast up, and the Sheriffs declared the Numbers to be,

Scrutiny.

Upon which a Scrutiny was demanded in behalf of the Aldermen, by Mr. Benjamin Bond and Mr. Charles Bond, Citizens and Wax-Chandlers, who nominated Mr. Nicholas Crisp, Citizen and Haberdasher, and Mr. Daniel Booth, Citizen and Salter, to be their Scrutineers; and the Sheriffs immediately granting their Request, the Court of Hustings was adjourned to Friday Morning, nine o'Clock.

On the ninth, the Sheriffs received a Letter from the Gentlemen that demanded the Scrutiny at Guildhall, acquainting them, that they would not go on with the same; upon which George Streetfield, Esq; and Alexander Sheafe, Esq; were declared duly elected Sheriffs for the Year ensuing; and the Common-Crier was ordered to acquaint them therewith.

But at the Court of Aldermen on the sixteenth of July, the two Sheriffs-Elect returned the following answer, by their Attornies: That Mr. Streetfield was in the seventy-third Year of his Age, and both of them being Protestant Dissenters, they had not, within one Year before their supposed Election, taken the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the Rites of the Church of England, and therefore dared not take upon them that Office in Defiance of a plain Act of Parliament, 13 Car. II. Stat. 2. Cap. 1. whereby it is enacted, "That no Person or Persons, who should not have, within one Year next before the Election or Choice, taken the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the Rites of the Church of England, should, for ever, after the twenty-fifth of March, 1663, be placed, elected, or chosen in or to any Office or Offices of Magistracy, or Places or Trusts, or other Employments relating to or concerning the Government of any City, Corporation or Borough;" and thereby expose themselves to the Censure of the Law, for usurping an Office, to which, by the above Act, they could not be elected. — Upon which a Common-Hall was ordered for the Choice of two others; one of which, Allan Evans, also a Protestant Dissenter refused to serve the Office of Sheriff, by the same Plea; wherefore on the twenty-sixth of September, the Court of Common Council ordered that Actions should be brought against all those Gentlemen for the Penalties incurred by their Refusal. A Committee of four Aldermen and eight Commoners was chosen to direct the conducting of the said Prosecution; and they were empowered to draw upon the Chamberlain for any Sum necessary to defray the Expence.

Refusal to serve.

Prosecution ordered.

On the seventeenth, at the Opening of the Sessions at the Old-Bailey, a Motion was made, That the Court should contract with another instead of Mr. Stewart, (who was the proper Contractor for the Transportation of Felons) to carry Elizabeth Canning to America; and Mr. Stewart in Court consenting to wave his Contract, the Motion was granted (on a Division) the present Contractor being to transport her to some of his Majesty's Colonies in America, according to her Sentence, under the usual Penalty. And on Saturday Evening she was delivered from Newgate to her Friends, in order to be transported.

Canning's Transportation.

A Cause was tried this Term in the Court of King's-Bench at Guildhall, before the Lord Chief Justice Ryder, upon an Action brought by Mr. Richard Holland, a Leatherfeller in Newgate-Street, against the Collectors of Toll in Smithfield, during the Time of Bartholomew Fair, when Mr. Holland's Witnesses were examined; but no Person appearing on the other Side, a Verdict was given in Favour of Mr. Holland, on fifteen Issues, with Costs of Suit. By this Determination, all Citizens of London are exempted from paying Toll for the future at the said Fair. A Fact worthy of Imitation, where the Liberties and Privileges of the City are attacked; and not only an Honour to Mr. Holland, but an Ornament to the Annals of London.

Mr. Richard Holland's Trial for Exemption of Toll.
