A SHORT HISTORY OF
LANGDALE'S DISTILLERY

LANGDALE'S DISTILLERY was established on Holborn Hill in the year 1745, and made such rapid strides that in a few years it had become one of the principal businesses of the metropolis. Thirty-five years later in 1780, grave riots broke out all over the City of London, being known as "The Lord Gordon Riots," and one of the most dramatic episodes of this troublesome period was the burning and total destruction of Langdale's Distillery in which many lives were lost, and the vast buildings and the contents valued at over £100,000 were burnt to the ground. These riots led by Cosmo George, Duke of Gordon, and followed by a mob of 100,000 people, were the outcome of inflammatory speeches made by Protestant leaders against the Roman Catholics, and the intolerance of both parties brought about one of the most disgraceful episodes that have happened in the City of London. The mob on the King's Birthday, surged over the bridges and quickly set fire to The Bridewell and Fleet Prisons, the prisoners escaping and joining in the orgy of riot and pillage. All suspected of having Papist views were attacked and their premises destroyed ; and among these was the unfortunate proprietor of Langdale's Distillery. The Annual Register of 1780, gives a vivid description of the destruction and sacking of the distiller's property, the mob fighting in the streets to obtain the potent Spirits of Wine used in the manufacture of Essences. Inflamed by the spirit, the mob went from excess to excess, and destroyed an enormous amount of valuable property before they were finally dispersed. The leader of this unfortunate expedition died from fever in Newgate Jail in 1793, after wandering about an outcast. Charles Dickens was so impressed with the destruction of the Distillery that he gives a graphic account of it in "Barnaby Rudge."

Nearly two centuries after the episodes narrated above, Langdale's Distillery still stands pre-eminent in the manufacture of Flavourings and Medicinal Essences. By dint of hard work and faithful attention to detail, the name of Langdale has been made synonymous with Quality, and the products of the Distillery are sent far and wide to every quarter of the Globe. It is impossible in this small brochure to give a more detailed description of these unfortunate times, but we trust that the short account given may have proved interesting.

IT is now universally acknowledged that INFLUENZA is a dread disease that is communicated from one person to another by air-borne microbes. This is demonstrated by the manner in which it pursues its dread path through an entire household. It attacks old and young without fear or favour, and owing to the neglect to take quite simple precautions, it yearly develops into a serious epidemic. This scourge first appeared in 1892 and immediately it was taken in hand by the Medical profession with a view to checking its ravages. It was left to Mon. Chamberland of the Pasteur Institute of Paris to discover, after innumerable experiments, that the moment the fumes of Highly Concentrated Essence of Cinnamon came in contact with microbes in a test tube they were immediately destroyed. Acting on this, the proprietors of Langdale's Distillery with their vast experience of Extracting Essences in their highest concentration, evolved what is now universally known as :—

LANGDALE'S CONCENTRATED MEDICINAL ESSENCE OF CINNAMON.

Distilled from the finest Cinnamon Bark, "Laurus Cinnamomum," freshly imported from Ceylon, all other varieties though cheaper, being useless for Medicinal purposes. An extremely concentrated essence has been produced, evaporated in vacuo in order to procure this high standard of concentration.

From these small beginnings Langdale's Cinnamon preparations have become the household remedy for Influenza, Chills, Colds and Catarrh, to a million of homes throughout the Globe. Dozens of imitations have appeared from time to time, but Langdale's maintains its pre-eminent position—due to the fact that the Proprietors have maintained the high standard of the Distillery's products instead of entering into costly advertising campaigns which must naturally be at the cost of the product.

How to Prevent Catching Cold.

An Absolute Scientific Fact !

Half a teaspoonful of LANGDALE'S Concentrated Medicinal ESSENCE OF CINNAMON in a cup of warm milk upon retiring at night strengthens and stimulates the system and renders the organs of the body less liable to the attack of chills, damp, cold winds, sudden changes of temperature, etc.

TO CURE A COLD.

GENERAL SYMPTOMS.—Cold shivers, headache, a tired languid feeling, slight feverishness, extremities cold, copious discharge from eyes and nose, and hoarseness.

If possible stay in an even temperature; administer half a teaspoonful of LANGDALE'S Concentrated Medicinal ESSENCE OF CINNAMON every three or four hours in a teacupful of milk as warm as the patient can take it; rub the chest and back well with Camphorated Oil. A severe cold and its consequent serious ailments will often be prevented if the above simple directions are carried out.

ESSENCE OF CINNAMON

THE Aromatic and Stimulating properties of Cinnamon have long been known and held in high esteem by the leading Medical authorities. Our forefathers used it freely during the terrible epidemics that scourged our land in the early and middle centuries; nearly every monastery had its stock of CINNAMON WATER stored ready for use. The Monks by whom it was dispensed frequently gave it in cases of Low Fever, Scarlet Fever, Dysentery, Cholera, Typhoid Fever, and other contagious diseases. & It was not, however, till recently that it was discovered in the laboratory of M. PASTEUR, the eminent Chemist and Specialist of Paris, to have the power of absolutely destroying all DISEASE GERMS, and to

KILL the MICROBE or Disease Germ of Influenza

Read the following

From the "Daily News" of Jan. 8th, 1892

“ There would pretty certainly be a Cinnamon boom if the experiment made with that spice by M. Chamberland in M. Pasteur’s laboratory were generally known. Our ancestors, it appears, hit upon the best preservative from the infectious microbe when they used to drink mulled wines and other beverages in which strong doses of Cinnamon were infused. M. Chamberland now says that NO LIVING DISEASE GERM CAN RESIST for more than a few hours the antiseptic power of ESSENCE OF CINNAMON. He looks upon it as not less effective in destroying microbes than corrosive sublimate. Even its scent kills them, and it does no harm to human beings. A decoction of Cinnamon is often good to drink in localities where typhoid fever or cholera is rife.”

THESE have been scientifically prepared so as to contain one dose of Langdale's Cinnamon to each tablet, and may be taken with absolute safety by children from five years upwards. It is strongly recommended by the proprietors, however, that owing to the great strength of these tablets, they should be broken into small pieces instead of the whole tablet being allowed to dissolve in the mouth. Immediately the first symptoms of a cold appear, take one tablet every four hours; this will prevent the cold spreading and check it at its inception.

For those visiting infected areas where Influenza and Colds are rampant, it is strongly advisable to take one of these tablets to nullify the risk of infection. This is largely practised by Doctors, Clergymen, Missionaries, Visitors, Nurses, etc. This dread disease is so contagious that during recent years it has assumed the proportions of an epidemic. The proprietors of Langdale's Cinnamon preparations, however, have thousands of testimonials from every part of the globe testifying to the efficacy of their preparations in its prevention and cure.

EMPLOYERS OF LABOUR.

During the prevalence of an Epidemic which now occurs every year, Offices and Factories throughout the country are seriously inconvenienced by the large proportion of their employees who fall victims to Influenza and are away from their work for periods varying from one to three weeks.

This heavy handicap can be avoided at a much smaller cost by insisting on a daily dose of LANGDALE'S CINNAMON being taken by the staff. Hundreds of large factories, schools and institutions have supplies directly the Epidemic appears, and have testified their appreciation.

N.B.—The 12/- size is specially packed for this purpose, holding 200 doses.
