- The Disappearing gun mounting was invented by Capt. A. Moncrieff, and used an ingenious form of counterweight, later it was replaced by the hydro-pneumatic system.
- This collection, mostly manuscript or duplicated copies of letters, and a number of printed reports, records the whole negotiations between Moncrieff and the Government Departments. It gives a clear picture of the difficulties experienced with recoil of guns both fixed and mobile of all sizes.

The Society for Army Historical Research was founded in 1921 with the object of gathering and making known, as well as aiding research into the records of Army Regimental history, military antiquities, uniforms, dress and equipment, old military customs and traditions and the evolution of the art of war. It gives particular attention to pictures, prints, colours, medals and relics as a means of throwing light on written records.
The Journal, which is published quarterly, has been enabled to bring before the Members of the Society historical facts connected with military history, customs and traditions of bygone days of inestimable value, many of them little known but nevertheless of overwhelming interest and importance to many branches of our nation's forces.

- 1160 Tartaglia (N.) NOVA SCIENTIA DE NICOLO TARTAGLIA, large woodcut on title, many diagrams in the text, sm. 4to, boards, Venice, 1550 £40
The Second edition of the earliest printed work on ballistics.
"A question asked him as to what elevation should be given to artillery in order to obtain the greatest range first induced him to write on the science of gunnery; but, becoming convinced that it was wrong to study to improve an art intended for the destruction of human beings, he ceased his investigations and burnt all his papers. However, in 1537, on the rumour spreading that Solomon II of Turkey was preparing for an attack on Christendom, he hastily re-wrote and published them, some in lectures and some through the press, the latter under the title of 'Nuova Scientia'. This work aroused great interest. In estimating the value of his writings so far as concerns gunnery, it must be borne in mind that Leonardo da Vinci's notes on that subject were in MS., and therefore unknown, save to perhaps two or three persons. Tartaglia's researches were thus, at that time, with reason termed a 'new science' and questions concerning them came to him from all sides. With the aid of the memoranda he had made of these questions, and of his answers to them he wrote the 'Quesite', which was published in 1546."—Cockle Military Bibliography.

Mr. Lawson, well known for his studies of military subjects and "battle-pieces", has undertaken the task of writing the first full account of British Military uniform, and this History will become the standard work on the subject. All branches of the Army—horse, foot, artillery, supply, regulars and volunteers—are dealt with; exact details of dress and equipment and their development from reign to reign are given in both the very attractive drawings and in the descriptive text.
Volumes are available separately: Vol. I £2 5s. Vol. II £2 10s. Vol. III £2 5s.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE

BREMNER'S PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUM OF TYPES OF THE INDIAN ARMY

We are pleased to announce that a complete reprint of this fine series is to be published.

There are 60 large photographic plates in all, each with a number of figures of uniform.

The most important source of information on the uniform of the period, only a few copies were issued, the illustrations being original photographs. Due to its publication in India, many copies of the original edition have been affected by climate and other causes, and we do not know of a set being offered for sale for many years.

Edition will be limited to 400 copies, 68 pp., 12 × 10 inches, bound in cloth gilt.

£5 5s

We can record orders for this book now.
