MATTHEW Chap. vi. Part of the 19th and 20th Verses.

Lay not up for yourselves Treasures upon Earth---But lay up for yourselves Treasures in Heaven.

HERE is hardly a Doctrine in Religion that is more unfuitable to the general Tafte and Inclination of the World, than this of our Saviour, which I have read to you. Practice and Prejudice bear fo ftrong against it, and the Treasures of the Earth have fuch a prodigious Interest in the Hearts and Affections of Men, that were it not for the Authority and Wifdom of its Author (who never fpake any thing in vain), one might be difcouraged from attempting to explain and enforce a Precept, where there is fo little Hopes of being heard with any Attention or Regard---or, if perhaps Cuftom and Curiofity will afford us an Hearing, yet, when that is over, fo is all good Effect of it, and Men fettle again into the fame wrong Notions, which they brought with them; and it is thought by fome, an Anfwer fufficient to all that can be faid in Discouragement of an avaricious Temper, from the Inftructions of the Gofpel----That fuch Doctrine is not fuited to the prefent State of Things----That it is old-fashion'd and out of Date ---- That Times are much changed, fince it was uttered, and Christians are now in a Condition not of denying themselves the good Things of Life, but of accumulating and enjoying as much of them as they can---As if the Authority and Wifdom of our Saviour's Precepts were to be answered by Ridicule, and as if he had uttered what he had not thoroughly weighed and confidered, and his Words, which were to laft when Heaven and Earth were pass'd away, were fuited only to the Observance of Men in that Time and Age in which he lived --- Whereas every thing he spake, was, from the largest Comprehension of Mind, and by the Authority of GOD himself, from having feen the Hearts, and confidered all the Ways of Men; and therefore his Doctrine is to last for ever, untouch'd by Time, and unalter'd by Cuftom.

And, with Regard to the particular Precepts of the Text, though Riches are become the principal Objects of our Defires and Attainments, and are called in the Phrafe of Commendation, the Life of Trade and Ingenuity---the Vigor of the Laws---the Bulwark of the State---the Supports of Learning and Philofophy---the Ornaments of Civil Civil Life --- the Bleffings of Heaven, and the only things which keep this bufy World in Motion ---Notwithstanding this, and admitting the Panegyrick in some sense to be true, our Saviour's Words, if rightly understood, as grounded on Matters of Fact and affecting Individuals, will contain very just, and prudent, and good Advice to us; for they were not intended to kill the Spirit of Industry, to confound Society, to introduce a wild uncultivated Life, or to create an Indolence and Infenfibility in Men, as to the Profperities, and Comforts, and Ornaments of human Nature--- The Reason of Things, the Methods of Providence, the Order of the World, the Scriptures themfelves, are against this four and furly Stoicism; but then they prescribe to us a Temper and Moderation in the Acquirement and Ufe of Riches; and nothing can be more kind and friendly to us, than our Saviour's Doctrine, that we take care, that they do not engrofs our Hearts. and Affections, or carry us to commit Actions, which are inconfistent with the Religion and Hopes of Christians, Lay not up for yourselves Treasures upon Earth ; i.e. be not so intent upon these perishing Things, as to neglect and forget those of infinitely greater Moment, but let your principal Care and your most hearty Endeavours, attend and provide for Eternity---Lay up for yourselves Treasures in Heaven. This B 2 is is our Saviour's Advice; and I will observe to you, the Prudence, and Wisdom, and Goodness of it to us.

First, From the Nature of those Things, an inordinate Defire of which he discourages and forbids.

Secondly, From the vaft Importance of that future Happines, which he instructs us to make our main Care, and to give our principal Attention to, lay not up for yourselves Treasures upon Earth, &c.

And, first, I fay, and I hope to prove it, That there is the utmost Wisdom and Kindnefs in our Saviour's Advice to us, becaufe Riches in themfelves, and confider'd as affecting Individuals, are not of that Importance to us, which we imagine --- Sure I am, they are far from being effential to human Happiness; or, properly speaking, of themselves, the Materials of it----They are, indeed, things of great and fplendid Expectation; and, while we have them not, we fancy that every thing that is happy, goes along with them --- But, alas ! Poffeffion is a very different thing from Expectation, and the Rich ones would own this Truth, if they had Ingenuity enough to fpeak their Minds upon the Experiment----Riches, like all other human things, pall in the Poffession, and when once a Man has gratified gratified his vain Defires, and accumulated great Store of Wealth, he finds, to his Cost and Regret, that he can enjoy no more of it, than is fufficient to the few natural Wants of an human Creature, and all, beyond that, either lofes its Relifh or becomes troublesome and dangerous to its Owner. And this is the Reafon, that People, in the most affluent Circumstances, are often so contemptible to others, and foirkfome and uneafy to themfelves, having obtained more Wealth than they can use with Decency and Credit, and purfued wrong Measures to Happiness: These are they who, in their own Examples, prove the Truth of the wife Man's Obfervation, " That there are Men, to " whom God hath given Riches and Wealth, fo " that they want nothing for their Souls of all " that they defire, yet GOD giveth them not " Power to eat thereof, to relifh and enjoy it ---" This is Vanity, and it is an evil Difeafe"---It is a Difease, but a Disease in the Understanding, and proves the Justness of the Philosopher's Observation; that many Men, by growing rich, don't cure, but only change their Uneafineffes; for the Fault was not, as they imagined, in their Circumstances, but their Understandings. It does not only betray a want of Religion and true Philofophy, but weak and childish Ignorance, not to fee, that the Happiness of the Man is the Temper of his Mind, a vertuous and contented Spirit, arifing arifing from an innocent Confcience and a constant Tenour of good Works; and our Saviour and his Apostles, by all the Contempt which they have thrown upon Riches, have only preached this unquestionable Doctrine, that the Happiness of human Life does not depend entirely upon the things without us. Seneca declaimed at his Eafe, and it had come better from his Mouth, if he had been as poor as Epictetus; but it was not one of the Rants of Stoicifm, when he observes, " That the poor Man (not speaking in Extreams) " is oftner and more fincerely chearful, than the " rich one, having a good Heart, and no Dif-" quiet and Reproaches from within; whereas " either the Chearfulness of the other is affected, " or elfe he is directly fad and melancholy, which " fets the heavier upon him too ;" Quia interdum non licet esse palam miserum, sed inter ærumnas cor ipsum exedentes, necesse est agere felicem. ----Becaufe, in fome Circumstances, he is forced to deny himfelf the common Relief of the difcontented Complaint; and with Troubles upon his Mind, which strike to the very Heart of him, must perfonate an easy and happy Character. Another Reflection, which is not the worfe, or less true for being common, is, that Riches, take them at their best, are Things of most uncertain Duration. Now, if we would act, I don't fay like Christians, but like Men, in the Calculation OTHING. of of our Happiness, we should always make Provision, that it be as certain and durable as possible. In the Matter of our Wealth, I am fure this is a main Article, and infinitely follicitous we are to give our Eflates all possible Security to ourfelves and our Posterity --- But the Mischief is, all our Diligence upon this Point is confeffedly vain and foolifh; for it is inconfistent with the Nature of the Things themfelves, and the common, Courfe of the World, that Riches should be of any long Duration --- They may be taken from us by Violence, by Subtlety, or, if not fo, in the common Change and Viciflitude of Affairs, they will make themfelves Wings and fly away, for it is abfolutely impossible to confine that, which, by its Nature and Use, is of a fluctuating and uncertain Continuance : The rich Man's Wealth (the Moralist observes) is his strong City, and as an high Wall in his own Conceit --- But his Conceit is a very foolish one, for he sets his Eyes and his Heart upon that which is not----upon that which is not and cannot be of any long Duration; for one of these Things must happen in a little Time: Either he will leave his Riches, or they will leave him; fo that nothing can more mifbecome a Man, or be of more Danger to the Welfare of a Christian, of an immortal Soul, and born for Eternity, than to fpend all his Care and Pains, and Time in heaping up Riches (not fo much for himfelf, as those whom whom he leaves behind him) when they are fo incompetent to our Happinefs----For, in truth, though a Man has never fo much of them, he cannot properly be faid to poffefs them; for he must leave them to the Care and Fidelity of others-----He cannot have them always in his Hands, nor always in his Sight; and this Confideration still encreases their Uncertainty, because, in spite of all our Care, Fraud, or Force, or Time, in many Refpects, will steal them from us-----And this is a Reafon, which our Saviour himfelf lays a Strefs upon ---- Lay not up for your felves Treasures upon Earth, where the Rust and Moth doth corrupt the perishable Things, and Thieves break through and steal, those that are not fo. One Way indeed there is of disappointing even Time and Chance, of fecuring to ourfelves the Poffeffion of our Estates, and making them properly our own, and that is, by doing Good with them, by distributing to the Necessities of others, being rich towards God, and as our Saviour here expresses it, Laying up for ourfelves Treasures in Heaven. Confidering therefore the Nature of the things themselves, the fluctuating Course of the World, and the Changes, that Power, and Fraud, and Time is continually making in it, nothing can be wifer than Solomon's Instruction, Labour not to be rich, cease from thine own Wisdom, thy worldly and short-fighted Wifdom : And nothing more proper per and emphatical, than the reason, which he gives for it; For why wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? upon that which is of fo uncertain and changing a Nature, that you can hardly name the Time in which it may be faid to continue or endure at all --- How mean and improper an Object therefore for the great and capacious Soul of Man, whom Gop defigned for Immortality, and made him an Image of his own Eternity !

Another Confideration, which may ferve to cure or moderate our fondness for an Excess of Wealth, arifes from the Difficulties and Dangers which attend it; I mean, Dangers to our Innocence and Vertue, which affect us much more ferioufly than those which touch our Lives, and that, whether we confider the getting or the enjoying of a great Estate : For in the getting an Estate in every Profession, the Temptations and Opportunities of Injustice are so near us, stand fo thick about us, and folicit us fo ftrongly, and by fuch various Ways, that it is next to a Miracle, if our Vertue escapes unhurt in fuch a dangerous Conflict; especially, if we live in the Dregs of a corrupted Age, where Profuseness and Covetoufnefs are predominant Vices, and Examples are always ready to justify the most unlawful ways of Gain --- It is exceeding difficult to avoid the greatest and most infamous Practices of In-

Injustice, Oppression, Fraud, Deceit, Extortion, Uncharitableness; for Virtue is feldom a Match for Avarice---but it is harder still to retain an unpolluted Confcience, if we are let into all the Secrets and Mysteries of Iniquity; for in the prefent Situation of Things, and as the World is now conducted, there are a thousand Ways of Fraud, which the Vulgar are not acquainted with; and Men of Dexterity are arrived at fuch a Perfection in the Arts of Falshood and Injustice, have fo many fecret and invisible Methods of Deceit, and can carry on and execute the most gainful Projects in fuch a dark and unobferved Train of Business, that in the Eyes of ordinary Obfervers (though God fees and fets a Mark upon their Steps) they shall pass for Men of great Integrity; whilft, at the Bottom, they thrive and profper by the fouleft and most infamous Practices, by circumventing the innocent, and imposing upon and pillaging the ignorant and unwary---And what, I would ask, can be more difficult, than for a Man, who is let into thefe dangerous Secrets, to preferve his Innocence, when he can gain fo much by the Lofs of it, and with fuch little Hazard to his Reputation? But, to wave this, and confider the more ordinary and old-fashioned Ways of Trade and Business, it is prodigious difficult to be ftrongly bent upon raifing an Estate, and not to exceed the Bounds of In-

Innocence to accomplish it --- Or, if we are not notorioufly guilty in that Refpect, but keep clear, it may be, of the great and atrocious Sins, yet it is next to impossible, but the Defire of encreasing our Circumstances, will engross too much of our Time and Affections, and call us off from that, which is our greatest and most valuable Concern, the Love of God, and the Interests of another Life--- Upon which Account, our Saviour (who knew what was in Man) has endeavoured to guard against Covetousness, for this very Reason, because, where our Treasure is, there will our Hearts be alfo.

And then, for the enjoying Riches when we have got them ---- That is usually thought the eafieft Matter in the World, and, if the covetous Man can but raife an Estate, he thinks it impoffible but his Posterity must be wife enough to ufe and enjoy it --- Whereas it really requires much better Parts to spend an Estate, than to get one---I mean to fpend it usefully, and honourably, and wifely --- It requires an understanding Heart, and a well-pois'd Judgment to become a great Estate --- For to be made the Prey of Fools, and Parasites, to squander it away in Madness, Gaming, and Intemperance, to be intoxicated with Pride, and, as I may fay, perpetually drunk with Senfuality, no Man will fay, there is any thing commendable and creditable in this---C 2 nothing YOUE nothing is more infamous, more giddy and irrational, and more contrary to the wife and fober Deportment of a Christian life---It is an admirable Figure, it must be own'd, that the rich Man makes in the Gofpel, and he has left behind him an excellent Character for Imitation, when all that is commemorated of him is, That he lived luxurioufly and uncharitably, died, as it may feem, untimely, and had an expensive Funeral---a most pitiful and worthless Character, and yet it fuits more Men than we are aware of. How imprudently do we act, and against all Experience, in imagining we make our Children happy, by leaving them very rich. Alas! if you have made no other Provision for their Happiness, and have not fown the Seeds of Virtue in their Minds, cultivated their Understandings, and broke their Paffions to the Commands of Reafon; in giving them Riches, you have only put Inftruments of Mifchief into the Hands of Madmen; and your Friends will live to fee it, when you are dead and gone, that all your Care and Pains, your Trouble and Solicitude, your laborious Days and watchful Nights, the Forfeiture of your good Name, and Loss of all your Virtue, have only ferv'd to minister to the foolifh and riotous Exceffes of a thoughtlefs and wicked, and ungrateful Child, who ridicules and infults your Memory, squanders away your Substance, and makes your Industry, and even your your Tenderness and Affection for him, the Jeft of his loofe Companions. Solomon has told us, That after having been at great Pains and Coft in contriving, and purchasing, and settling every Thing, that could contribute to the Support of his Throne, and to the Ornament of human Life ---He fet himfelf down to confider to what Purpofe all this Expence and Labour? and he was fo far from being pleafed and fatisfied in the Reflection, that he tells us, in a Strain of Indignation, That he hated all his Labour, which he had taken under the Sun, because he should leave it to the Man that should be after him, and who knoweth, whether he shall be a wife Man or a Fool (intimating perhaps the unpromifing Genius of Rehoboam)? yet shall be have Rule over all my Labour, wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewn myself wife under the Sun---This is alfo Vanity.

The plain Truth is, if Children are good, the Providence of GoD, and their own Virtue and Industry will make them happy---If they are bad, or disposed to be fo, Riches will confirm them in their Vices, and supply the Calls of them----Many a virtuous and good Youth has been spoiled by a great Fortune, but never made unhappy by the Want of one. So that this, again, confirms our Saviour's Advice, and recommends the Good-

Goodness and Wildom of it, because Riches, both on Account of acquiring and enjoying them, are Matters of fuch dangerous Temptation. The Moralist has more than once repeated it for our Observation, That he that hasteth to be rich, shall not be innocent. And Tacitus, I remember, the Roman Historian, of approv'd Judgment and uncommon Penetration, speaking of the native Poverty of the German People, who knew not the Use of Gold and Silver, fays, Argentum & Aurum propitii an irati dii negaverint, dubito. He questions whether that fort of Ignorance was not rather owing to the Bleffing than the Difpleafure of Providence. The Apostle St. Paul, admonishes us, That they that will be rich, fall into Temptation and a Snare, and into many foolifs and burtful Lufts, which drown Men in Perdition and Destruction : For the Love of Money is the Root of all Evil, which, while some coveted after, they have erred from the Truth, and pierced themselves through with many Sorrows.

And our Saviour has fet the Matter in a very ftrong and affecting Light indeed, when he tells us, That it is eafter for a Camel to go through the Eye of a Needle, than for a rich Man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven---What can more emphatically express the dangerous Temptation, or be more importantly urged to awaken the Care and quicken the Diligence of the Rich ones, than

than to be told by our Saviour himfelf, who is the Judge, and the great Difpofer of Life and Death, that it is next to an Impoffibility, that they fhould be faved?

Another Argument to the Discouragement of an avaricious Temper is, That Riches, to a Man already poffefs'd of as much as is fufficient to the Neceffities and reasonable Accommodations of Life, come in as troublesome Superfluities ; for, to fuch an one, they bring nothing that I can think of, which he might not enjoy as well, and better without them in his prefent Station. It is justly observed by a great French Philosopher, "That Riches are wrongfully called and ac-" counted Goods, for they neither make any one " good, nor reform the wicked, and are com-" mon both to good and wicked : They will nei-" ther mend a Man's Mind, nor reform his Vices, " nor improve his Understanding" --- If they make any Alteration there, it will probably be for the worfe--- It will probably be to dull and ftupify his Understanding, to animate and excite his vicious Paffions, and to spoil his Mind by Pride and Uncharitablenefs. They will not cure his Difeafes, nor eafe him of his Pains --- They will rather multiply and aggravate them both, at leaft they will administer the Occasions of them in the Plenty and Luxury of his Table, if he has not the Virtue and Refolution to withstand the Temptation

Temptation---One Thing indeed they will do, if they cannot fecure him againft Sicknefs, they will beget him a great deal of Ceremony and Attendance in it, fo that he fhall hardly be able to reft for the infinite Solicitude of his numerous Friends, i. e. he will be fick with more Ceremony, but lefs Quiet and Tranquillity, than his meaner Neighbours.

His Riches will not lengthen his Days, nor add to the Chearfulness and Comfort of them --- But if he has not a good Guard upon himfelf, they will make them fhorter than God defigned them; and for the Air and Chearfulness of an innocent and fearless Mind, they will give him the Disquiet, the Thoughtfulness, the Fear, the Danger of a guilty one : They will not increase the Number of his Friends, or make him more beloved by his Relations, or more effeemed by other People----If he does not use them well, they will make him more fear'd than lov'd, more envied and hated than efteemed --- They will enlarge his Flatterers, but contract the Number of his Friends; and, instead of an affectionate Correspondence, will create mutual Jealoufies and Sufpicions between himfelf and his Relations; fo that, as the rich Man may manage it, with all the imaginable Advantages for Happinefs, he shall, as it were, stand alone upon the Earth, hated by and hating all about him, without Efteem, without Friendthip, ship, without natural Affection. Riches have fuch a general Ascendant over Men, that one is liable to be fufpected of Infincerity, and acting a Part to fay any thing to difcredit them; but, I think, I have fpoken but the Truth of Things, and that nothing has been faid to Excess : For, I cannot see, that Riches of themselves, exclusive of a generous and religious Use of them for the Good of others, do advance our Happiness one Jot; for, if a moderate Fortune, with a contented Mind, and a virtuous Life, will procure us neceffary and comfortable Subfiftence --- If it leaves us Time and Opportunity to improve and better our Minds---If it puts us into the most likely Way to habituate ourfelves to Temperance --- to preferve Health and lengthen Life--- If it allows and fupports us in modeft and innocent Amusement, and sweetens our Enjoyments---If it renders us easy and chearful in our Conversation, creates us fincere Friends, loving and kind Relations, and makes us valued and effeemed by other People--- I fay, if all this is most usually and most naturally procur'd by a low Fortune, with a moderate and virtuous Mind, and Riches rather break in upon and difturb this Tranquillity, than establish and increase it, then is it a Precept exactly fuited to the Wifdom and Kindnefs, and compassionate Care of our Blessed Saviour for us, to enjoin us, not to lay up for ourselves D TreaTreafures upon Earth; for they are of themselves of fo little Importance to the Happiness of particular people, that, when all Accounts are cast up, it will appear plainly upon the Balance, that there is no Good in them, but for a Man to rerejoice and do good in his Life.

The next Thing I shall urge against a fordid Temper, and in Justification of our Saviour's Precept is, that Riches, when we have got them, are not properly our own --- They belong to the great Lord and Proprietor of the Universe, and are entrusted in our Hands only for the Good of others--- The Rich are the Stewards and Difpenfers of God's Bounty, he expects an Account of the Diftribution, and will feverely punish the Neglect of it --- fo that, that very Confideration upon which only Riches are defirable to a Man of a modeft and humble Mind, and who has a just Senfe of his Frailty, is an Argument why he will not defire them. I know, it is given, as a plaufible Reason by the covetous, when he is presed upon the Point, that he only heaps up Riches to enlarge his Opportunities of doing good --- But, in the Mouth of the covetous, this is a light and unfeemly Answer to a Question of very serious Moment, for all the World difcerns, and he himfelf is confcious that he means nothing lefs---But, fupposing his Intentions never so honest, yet, I say, it is more agreeable to the Modesty and Humility of a Christian, not to be over-forward upon the Point, not to haften to be rich, out of a vain Conceit of our own Virtue and Abilities to use Riches well, but rather to fit down contented, and wait the Iffues of God's Providence, and if he thinks fit to blefs our Industry, and enlarge our Circumstances, it is then Time enough to adjust our Charity. I know this is a Matter, that rich Men are not ufually much concerned about ; but, I am fure, if the Gospel tells us Truth, they have no small Affair upon their Hands, to make a good and christian Use of their great Fortunes---Our Bleffed Saviour intimates, that it was an happy Thing to be rich, but then the Reafon is (a very diftasteful one to the Generality of Men) that it is more bleffed to give than to receive ; the Charity of the Rich is their great Privilege and Advantage. And agreeably to this, St. Paul gives a very folemn Charge to us, That those, who are rich in this World, be sure to do Good, to be rich in good Works, glad to distribute, willing to communicate. And St. James speaks very freely, but affectingly, when he observes the Unmercifulness of wealthy People; Go to now ye rich Men, weep and howl for your Miseries that shall come upon you, your Riches are corrupted, and your Garments moth-eaten, your Gold and Silver is cankered, and the Rust of them shall be a Witness against you. And in the Account which our Sa-D 2 viour viour gives us of the Proceedings at the Day of Judgment, it feems as if Charity and Mercy would be the principal Points of Enquiry : And, for that Reafon, becaufe they are too often defective in their Duty, the Apoftle St. John reprefents the great ones of the Earth, as more affectingly ftruck than others, with the Terrors of the laft Day ; For the Kings of the Earth, and the great Men, and the rich Men, and the chief Captains, and the mighty Men will hide themfelves in the Dens, and in the Rocks of the Mountains, and will fay to the Mountains and Rocks, fall on us, and hide us from the Face of bim that fitteth on the Throne.

It is observed by Strada, giving the feveral Reafons of the Abdication and Retreat of the great Emperor Charles V. that one of them was, that he might fit down and recollect himfelf, Antequam ad Dei Tribunal attraberetur, tantæ humanæ felicitatis reus, before he was summoned to the Tribunal of God, to answer for the wife and good Administration of fuch extraordinary Felicity as was laid to his Account and Charge. Upon this Confideration, doubtlefs, there is a remarkable Mercy and Compaffion in our Saviour's Advice; for no wife Man would defire to enhance his Account at that awful Day, but to have it as clear, and fhort, and honeft as is poffible. It is a prodigious Duty, that is incumbent bent on the Rich, as Stewards, and Dispensers of God's Bounty; for all that they fquander in Vice, and Pride, and Licentiousness, is not fo much thrown away, but treasured up against the Day of Wrath, and Revelation of God's righteous Judgment. And what Shame and Confusion, and Terror must furprize them, when the fordid and unmerciful, or when the careless and luxurious Great Ones shall be call'd to the Bar of Judgment, and Enquiry made into the Ufe and Administration of their Treasures, how much Good they have done by their Charity, and what Part of them they have distributed in promoting the Glory of GoD, and the Good of Men, feeding the Hungry, cloathing the naked, vifiting the Sick, releafing the Prifoner, and doing fuch Offices of Tenderness and Humanity as were due to their Fellow-creatures.

As little as moft of us are difpofed to think fo, it is however a moft certain Truth, that to be rich is a very nice and perilous Trial of our Virtue; and he that has the Sincerity and Modefty of a Chriftian, will not only be contented, but even thankful to GoD for a fafer and more humble Station---Or, if it has pleafed GoD to blefs your honeft and well-governed Induftry with Succefs, you will efteem it a Circumftance of great Happinefs to you, that you live in a Place, where fo many Opportunities prefent themfelves of of doing good, and that by the wife and charitable Oeconomy of this rich and populous City, Matters are so prudently conducted, that the Opportunities of gaining Riches are not more in Number, or more obvious to Practice, than those of employing them charitably and religioufly. We are apt, out of a national Self-love, to pride ourfelves upon the Extent of our Trade, and the prodigious Riches of our Capital---It is, perhaps, a pardonable Vanity, and fomething may be faid to excufe it, but that which would truly diffinguish us, and give us a Praise and a Name to all Posterity, would be, that we were not more to be observed for accumulating Riches, than for employing them usefully and wifely: And it were certainly one of the beft Marks we could fhew of our being sensible of Gratitude to God, of our Obligations to Christianity, of Humanity, and Tenderness to our Fellow-creatures, if, upon every Occasion of publick Charity, we prevented the Petitioners, and acted with fuch a ready and difinterested Generofity, that we might feem to have our Saviour's Precepts engraven upon our Hearts, That it is more bleffed to give than to re-In Confidence of your good Dispositions ceive. therefore, of your Gratitude to GOD Almighty (the great Friend and Benefactor to us all) of your Sense of the Obligations of your Religion (which in the Defign and Spirit of it, is Love and Good-

Good-nature) I stand here your Petitioner for something in Assistance to this great and good Design. 253

The Providence of God has made these poor Sufferers dependent upon you for their Support, and Cure, and Confolation ; and, rightly judged, it is not more an Happiness to them that they have fuch a certain and generous Fund of Subfiftence, than it is to you, that, by the Bleffing of GoD, you are made the Managers and Diftributers of it --- Your kind Attendance on this Work of Love, shews your Sensibility of this, and, in some fort, renders our Arguments to Charity fuperfluous---Were there more Occasion to prefs them than there is, I should be more confident of Success in my Application to you, because, I am fure you observe, and observe too with a proper Refentment, that however it may fare with Charity, there never was greater Encouragement given to Luxury and Vice---I need not enter into Particulars of this kind --- The World fees too much of them, and therefore it is the proper Character of the virtuous and generous Man of Quality, and of the frugal and sober Man of Business, to keep up a better Spirit in our Country, and to shew the observing World, by their Example, that Riches are given us by Providence for other and more important Purposes, than Vanity and Senfuality. It is not my Meaning, by difparaging Riches, to raife Charity upon the Ruin of Induftry :

ftry: That were abfurd, the State of the World will not bear it : Besides, Industry is the best Friend to Charity --- Nor, when we are Mafters of Wealth, does Reason or Christianity forbid the Use of it, or debar the Rich of every innocent, comfortable, or diftinguished Accommodation of Life---Wealth is one of the Bleffings of GoD, in the Language of GoD's Holy Spirit; but then it muft never be forgotten by the wealthy, that the beft Enjoyment, the most Epicurean Use of Riches (I fpeak the Sentiments of every humane and generous Heart) is to do the greatest and most extenfive Good with them. Upon which Confideration the Charity here before you claims your particular Attention --- You know the Nature, you fee the Conduct, and as you have a quick Senfibility of the Sufferings of the unfortunate, I may fay, in the strictest Sense, by seeing them relieved ; you have felt the Good of it by Experience, and I should wrong you grievously to fufpect, that your Munificence can be wanting to it in any Degree, when you are told, by most authentic Accounts, That fince the 3d of November, 1740, it has pleased GOD to bless the Design with such Success, that above + Twenty Thousand distreffed Objects have been relieved by the London Infirmary, and from labouring under the Oppresfion fion of some of the most malignant Diseases, and unhappy Accidents, have been re-instated in their honest and industrious Capacities of Working, whereby the publick again enjoy the Benefit of their Labour, and they and their poor Families are preserved from perishing, and prevented from being a constant Encumbrance to the Community----If this be the Case, look round about you, and either support this noble Plan of Charity, with a Bounty becoming your Wealth, and illustrious Distinction, or find out another, if you can, that more deferves your pious Regard and Encouragement.

And thus much has been faid to recommend to our Practice, the first Part of our Saviour's Instruction, Lay not up, &c. And you fee upon the whole, with what excellent Wifdom, and condefcending Kindnefs, our Bleffed Saviour fuits his Precepts to our real Happinefs---He might, if he had pleafed, flattered our Weaknefs, and adapted his Instructions to our Passions, and to the Guife of the World---I faid, he might have done fo---I recal that Word---He could not---It was inconfiftent with his Nature and his Character---He was Truth and Goodnefs, and therefore could utter nothing but what was fo, nothing but what tended to inform our Minds, to rectify our Manners, and promote our Happinefs---And the Inftruction in the Text, if rightly confidered, is a great In-E ftance ftance of it: For, however it may feem to thofe, who will not, or cannot difcern its Beauty, there is nothing in it extravagant and impracticable, nothing fevere and morofe, nothing vain and affected, but it is the Voice of the beft Philofopher, the beft Friend, the beft and moft faithful Counfellor to Men, which bids them not to lay up for themfelves Treasures upon Earth; but to lay up for themselves Treasures in Heaven. For, certainly, if there be a God, if Christianity be true, if Men have immortal Souls, and Religion is a ferious Thing, the first and principal Enquiry to every wife Man, will be how to fecure an Interest in Heaven.

There is no Comparison, upon the Balance, between the Treasures of the Earth, and the Treasures of Heaven; because all those Circumftances which attend the one, and demonstrate their Vanity and Imperfection, do ferve to recommend and illustrate the Excellency of the other --- For, it is the Excellency of the heavenly Treafure, the Felicity of another Life, that it will affect and dwell in our Minds, the most valuable and noble Parts of us, and which is properly the Seat of real Joy and fubftantial Happinefs---That it will be durable and certain, an Inheritance incorruptible, upon which Time itfelf will make no Impression, neither Moth nor Rust will corrupt it, nor will Thieves break thro' and Real.

steal. When I see you again, fays our Bleffed Saviour to his Disciples, your Hearts will rejoice, and your Joy no Man taketh from you --- It is the Excellency of the heavenly Treasure, that it is acquired by Innocence and Virtue, and enjoyed with pure and unmixed Delight --- That there is nothing in it, that is niggardly and felfish, but every thing perfectly charitable, and kind, and communicative---That it is fo far from injuring the Posseffor, as Riches often do, that it is an Happiness constant and uninterrupted, with this Circumstance of Perfection in it, that it is increafed and doubled to him, by being communicated to others. It is the Excellency of the Treasure, that is above, that it puts us out of all Danger and Temptation, for it is Reward and final Judgment. It is the Excellency of it, that it confists in virtuous Improvement, growing Perfection --- That it wipes away all Tears from our Eyes; for, in the Tabernacle of GOD, there shall be no more Death, neither Sorrow nor Crying, neither shall there be any more Pain, but pure Love, Fulnefs of Joy, immortal Pleafure, heavenly Conversation.
