

Sir, as the plan of the Dispensary for General Inoculation seems to be the only one by which the salutary effects of inoculation can be sufficiently extended to a very numerous and useful class of people, the poor of this metropolis.

Contributors

Smith, Robert.

Publication/Creation

[London], [1778?]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/v8bqhp9t>

License and attribution

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

22
24

S I R,

AS the Plan of the DISPENSARY for GENERAL INOCULATION seems to be the only one by which the salutary effects of Inoculation can be sufficiently extended to a very numerous and useful class of people, the Poor of this Metropolis, the success of the above Institution becomes a matter of public importance.

An objection has however been made to this Institution, by some who stand high in the esteem of the public, and whose opinion of it, therefore, ought to have been delivered with greater caution, lest, in endeavouring to prevent an imaginary evil, they should rashly nip in the bud a national good.

But, as the falsity of the objection alluded to, is clearly shewn in the inclosed Treatise, it has been thought expedient to transmit it to you, that the cause of humanity may not suffer by the assertions of those who seem to have taken but little pains to inform themselves of facts.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

ROBERT SMITH, Sec.

A section of the DISSENTARY OPINION
IN THE MATTER OF THE INOCULATION
The nature of the inoculation can be illustrated by to a very anxious and noble class of people, the the inoculation, the result of the above inoculation a matter of public importance.

An objection has however been made to this inoculation by some who stand high in the esteem of the public, and whose opinion of it therefore, ought to have been with greater caution, but in answering to the objection they should really nip in the bud a

The objection of the objection should to its shown in its original form, it has been thought expedient to transmit it to you, that the ends of humanity may not suffer by the abolition of those who seem to have taken but little pains to inform themselves of facts.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ROBERT SMITH, Esq.