Foreword

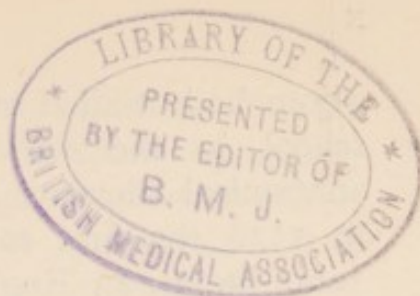

DR INNES SMITH has carried out, in the preparation of this volume, a laborious piece of work, which will be of the greatest value to all English-speaking students of medical history as well as to historians and genealogists in other departments.

During the later half of the seventeenth and earlier half of the eighteenth centuries, Leyden was the chief resort of Englishmen, Irishmen, and Scotsmen who desired to attain eminence in the profession of medicine. Some of these carried through a complete course of medical study at this celebrated University, but most of them attended for a year or two with the object of obtaining the M.D. degree from Leyden, or of rounding off medical knowledge obtained elsewhere and of graduating at some other University, either at home or on the continent.

Dr Innes Smith has taken the Album of Students at Leyden University from 1575 to 1875 as the basis of his investigations. After selecting those students who were engaged in medical study, he has traced them through the other Universities scattered over Holland, France, Italy and the home countries at which they graduated, and he has followed them into later life and discovered many important and interesting facts in regard to them which have not already been matters of general knowledge.

In cases where elaborate biographies of celebrated graduates are otherwise available, Dr Innes Smith has given references to these sources of full information, but the volume contains a great wealth of new facts that he has for the first time published as a result of his exhaustive investigation into the records of foreign Universities and other sources of biographical and bibliographical information that are ordinarily inaccessible. In this lies the great value of his research, which will undoubtedly be found indispensable by students of medical history both in Britain and in America.

JOHN D. COMRIE.

Introduction

This compilation of English-speaking students of medicine at Leyden University was begun as an amusement during an illness. After recovery it gradually extended till it became a serious research.

In 1574 the city of Leyden withstood one of the most famous sieges in history, and, as a reward, William the Silent offered the Burghers a University or freedom from taxes for ten years. The citizens chose the University. Before this time Louvain was the only city in the Low Countries to possess a University. Founded in 1426 Louvain University has, to the present day, always been strictly reserved for Roman Catholics, each student when he matriculated having to sign the "Declaratio Fidei," i.e. of adhesion to the Roman Catholic faith. Since by 1575 the majority of the inhabitants of what is now called Holland, had embraced the doctrines of the Reformers, the University of Leyden had a Protestant foundation. The young University was, however, unique amongst all other Universities of that period, in that students of all religions, including Catholics and Jews, were admitted to matriculation. The result was that large numbers of students from all parts of the world flocked to Leyden to study in its various faculties under some of the most famous professors of the time. In the seventeenth century, when our land was distracted by civil war, many of our people fled to Holland—a considerable number becoming students at Leyden University. There were Royalists and Puritans from England, and Presbyterians and Episcopalians from Scotland, studying together in the Faculties of Theology, Law, Medicine, etc., and forgetting perhaps, for the time being, the religious disputes that exercised their minds at home.

Almost from the beginning the young University became famous as a medical school. The earliest teachers of Medicine at Leyden were Peter Forest and Gerard de Bontius, both of whom had studied at Padua, then the most famous medical school in the world. Forest and Bontius established an anatomical theatre, a physic garden, and a library, and in 1578 the first medical student matriculated. This was John James, an Englishman, already a graduate in Medicine at Cambridge (1578), and in 1581 he graduated M.D. of Leyden, being the second to receive this degree. He became a distinguished physician in London and was attached to the Household of Queen Elizabeth. John James was therefore the first swallow from this country to invade the University of Leyden—an invasion that was to culminate in the Boerhaavian summer of the early eighteenth century.

Leyden University celebrated its tercentenary in 1875, in which year the Album Studiosorum Academiæ Lugduno Bataviæ 1575-1875 was published. This is a large quarto volume containing the names of all the students who had matriculated in the various faculties at Leyden during the 300 years of its existence. Each entry consists of the name of the student, his country of birth, the date of his inscription, his age, and the faculty he has entered for study. The Album gives no information in regard to graduation at Leyden or elsewhere, and is therefore simply a list of matriculated students. In 1882 Edward Peacock extracted from this Album the names of all the English-speaking students, omitting ages and faculties, and published the list (Index Society), with the following title—An Index to the English Speaking Students who have GRADUATED at Leyden University. As will be seen from the following pages, only a minority of medical students who matriculated, also graduated at Leyden. A considerable number never graduated at all and the majority graduated elsewhere. Peacock's list may therefore be blamed for many errors which appear in standard works like the Dictionary of National Biography, Venn's Cambridge Alumni, Foster's Oxford Alumni, etc. The Acta of the University of Leyden still exist and have been published by the Rijks Geschiedkundige Publicatiën, 1916-1924, under the editorial care of Dr P. C. Molhuysen, and from this the names of all those who graduated in Medicine, Law, Theology, etc., can be obtained.

The Album Studiosorum of Leyden University has been taken as the basis of the research. All the names of the English-speaking students inscribed in the Medical Faculty have been extracted, the corruptly spelt surname appearing in brackets. Students who matriculated in other faculties have not been dealt with, except in those cases where it is known from other sources that the students in these faculties had at a later stage taken up the study of medicine. Dr J. E. Kroon, who has written a valuable Dissertation on the Early Medical Graduates of Leyden, has informed me that the student sometimes matriculated in other Faculties such as Law, Theology, or Philosophy, and later became a student of Medicine without being reinscribed in the Album as such. Occasionally he is inscribed as "Medicinæ Doctor," indicating that he was already a graduate in Medicine of some other University, or even of Leyden on some previous occasion. On the other hand it will be noted that sometimes the student is entered in the Album on two or even three occasions. The country of origin is usually clear enough. "Americanus" includes not only New Englanders, but also students from the West Indies which were then flourishing colonies. "Scoto-Hibernus" refers to men from the North of Ireland. Occasionally the county or town of origin is indicated, e.g. Eboracensis (Yorkshireman), Londinensis, etc. The Welsh student appears to have been satisfied to appear as "Anglus," although occasionally "Cambriensis" is added. The ages in the Leyden Album are in the majority of instances approximately correct, but many are obviously wrong, as in the cases where the student is inscribed on two or three occasions, with perhaps one or two years intervening, the age appearing the same in each inscription. Errors in transcribing the ages from the Records are also possible. Genealogists therefore treat the ages in the Leyden Album with caution. The spelling of our names by the Dutch scribe of the day is sometimes heartbreaking, some of the names being corrupt beyond recall and identification therefore impossible. There are also omissions in the Album. This is definitely proved in the cases of those whose names appear in the Acta as having graduated and whose Dissertations exist, but whose names are not to be found in the Album. Professor Van Leersum of Amsterdam has published Boerhaave's MS. list of students for the year 1737 and several of the names in this list are not to be found in the Album. It will also be noted that several who graduated at Utrecht and the other Dutch Universities were not inscribed at Leyden, although it is almost certain that all of these spent some time at Leyden as students.

The Leyden student paid a fee on matriculation and was then inscribed as a Member of the University, becoming entitled to certain academic privileges, inter alia, his wine and beer were supplied to him tax free! With the exception of one or two occasions in the seventeenth century when for special reasons the University of Leyden granted the degree of M.B., it may be definitely stated that the Dutch Universities granted only one degree in Medicine, viz., "Medicinæ Doctor." To obtain this he had, on entry, to pass an examination conducted by the Rector Magnificus. When he applied for his degree he was "Medicinæ Candidatus" and had to defend a Thesis in the presence of the Præses and the other professors. This was usually done in public, and after promotion the successful graduate had to contribute to the entertainment of the professors and his fellow-students. Prior to 1600 the Thesis was in MS. and several of these are to be found in the library at Leyden. After 1600 the Theses were printed and many of them are to be found in the British Museum and the various University and Medical Libraries. The title-page shows the name, the country of birth, the date, and the legend "pro gradu Doctoratus" which distinguishes the graduation Thesis from the "Thesis exercitii gratia." This latter Thesis was defended during the period of study for "exercise or practice," and not for graduation. Sometimes the "Thesis exercitii gratia" was published, and occasionally it has been erroneously accepted as evidence that the student had graduated at Leyden. On the second page of a Thesis there is often a dedication to some patron, teacher, friend, or relative of the graduate, and these are often of the greatest interest to the genealogist. At the end of many of the Theses are "Carmina" in praise of the new-fledged graduate, and like the dedications consist usually of the most fulsome flattery. They are composed by fellow-students and are usually in Latin, rarely in English or Greek. On the title-page "Leyden" appears as "Lugduni Batavorum" to distinguish it from Lugduni (Lyons). The earlier Theses are of the greatest rarity, some being Elzevirs, and seldom appearing nowadays at book sales. The library at Leyden possesses a complete run of Dissertations from 1655 onwards, their collection from before this date having been destroyed by a serious fire in the seventeenth century. Many of the earlier ones are to be found in the British Museum, the Bodleian, etc. A few have not been traced, and although the Acta give the dates of promotion, there is no mention of the titles of the early Dissertations. I have to thank the Senate of the University of Leyden for permission to examine the Records and Dissertations, and also, and specially, Dr J. E. Kroon for his great help in the search.

As only a minority of the English-speaking students of medicine had graduated at Leyden, the records of graduation of the majority had to be sought for elsewhere. Several other Universities were founded in Holland later than Leyden. Franeker University was founded in 1585 and the archives still exist at Leeuwarden, in Friesland, under the care of Dr Waller Zeper. A considerable number of Englishmen and Scotsmen went there for the study of law, and a few were inscribed as medical students. Most of the latter had already been to Leyden and had come to Franeker to graduate there. Dr Zeper, to whom my best thanks are due, hopes that some day the matriculation list and Acta of this old University which was suppressed in 1815, will be published.

The University of Groningen, situated in the far north-east of Holland, was founded in 1614 and still flourishes. Only a few of our people went there for study or promotion, and these had already been inscribed at Leyden. The "Matrikel" of this University has been published.

In 1640 the University of Utrecht was founded. The matriculation list was published in 1886, but, as in the case of the Leyden Album, it contains no records of promotions. The Acta, however, still exist, and through the kindness of Dr Hulshof I was enabled to examine the old records for the names of the English and Scots who had graduated at Utrecht, most of whom had already been inscribed at Leyden. The library at Utrecht possesses a complete series of the Dissertations from 1700 onwards. Many of the earlier Theses are to be found in our own libraries. A few have not been traced.

The University of Harderwyck was founded in 1647 and was suppressed in 1815. Many Leyden students graduated here, including Boerhaave himself. In the matriculation list which has been published, all the medical students are inscribed "Med. Cand.," which is indicative of the fact that they had gone to Harderwyck to receive the degree of M.D. The archives still exist at Arnheim, and through the kindness of the archiviste I am able to give the "Examen et Tentamen" of each candidate. Few of the Harderwyck Dissertations appear to have been published, and as all the medical students were laureated the day after inscription, it would appear that this University was never a teaching University, but simply a degree-granting body.

At Nimijen (Novio Majus) a University was founded in 1650 and suppressed in 1662. Possibly some of our people went there for promotion, but no records exist. The Lincoln Cathedral Library possesses a printed "Elenchus" or syllabus of Lectures, including Medicine, of this University. This must be of great rarity as the Archiviste of Nimijen was unaware that such a notice existed.

Even after the examination of the Dutch records there still remained a large number of Leyden students who had graduated elsewhere. The records of the University of Louvain are to be found in the State Archives, Rue du Musée, Brussels. They consist of lists of students who had matriculated. Nothing exists with regard to promotions, and, as already stated, all Louvain students were Roman Catholics. The great majority of the English-speaking students at Louvain during the Leyden period were "Hiberni."

It is well known that in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries large numbers of physicians graduated M.D. at the University of Rheims, which was founded in 1588 and suppressed at the time of the Revolution. Dr Pol Gosset of Rheims, who has made a special study of the Medical side of this University, has a paper in La Nouvelle Revue de Champagne et de Brie for July 1929 in which he gives details of the regulations and fees for obtaining the degree of M.D. of Rheims. It was never granted in absentia, and each candidate had to defend a Thesis, and sometimes even two Theses with a period intervening. Dr Gosset's researches would appear to discount as exaggerations, some of the statements which appear in contemporary English medical literature, e.g. that the possession of the degree of M.D. Rheims by a British doctor was "concealed by the owner, like the commission of a crime"!! and that at the ceremony of laureation the promoter pronounced the mystic words—Accipimus aurum, dimittimus asinum!! The original records are lost, but Dr Raussin, the last Dean of the Faculty of Medicine of Rheims, as a labour of love, compiled an alphabetical list of all those who had been promoted at Rheims. This MS. list is in the Bibliothèque de la Ville of Rheims, and I am indebted to Mons. H. Lorient for permission to examine the list. Many of our British names are corrupt, but I was able to extract from the list a large number of Angli, Scoti, and Hiberni, and many of these are in the Leyden Album. In most cases the student appears to have left Leyden for Rheims, and after promotion there, he probably passed on to Paris for further study. In some cases the student had apparently gone to Paris first, and after graduating at Rheims, had gone on to Leyden. This would explain those cases where the student had been promoted at Rheims prior to being inscribed at Leyden. The Hiberni at Rheims exceed the Angli and Scoti in the ratio of about four to one, and only a few of the Hiberni appear in the Leyden Album. In the City Library at Rheims there is also a MS. list of the "étrangers" who graduated between 1680 and 1700, each of whom signed the list. Amongst the autographs is that of Archibald Pitcairne of which the Reimsois are very proud. There is a short blank amongst British names after 1685 (Revocation of Edict of Nantes).

A search amongst the archives of other French Universities, many of which were suppressed at the time of the Revolution, did not yield a great deal in regard to students from Leyden. Paris and Montpellier had excellent schools of medicine, but their records are incomplete. The majority of the English-speaking students at Montpellier in the eighteenth century were Irish. Most of the other Universities in France were apparently degree-granting bodies, and teaching, when it existed, was probably a side line. A considerable number of our people went to Angers in Anjou for study and promotion, but the archives were lost in the Revolution. In the Bibliothèque de la Ville of Caen in Normandy I found an old MS. list of promotions at the University of Caen. It is incomplete and the calligraphy in parts was beyond me, but I was able to decipher a few British and Irish names, some of which are in the Leyden Album. Amongst those who are not in the Leyden Album I found the names of Andrew Balfour (M.D. Caen, Sept. 20, 1661), Thomas Campion the poet (M.D. Caen, Feb. 10, 1605), and David Echlin (M.D. Caen, April 26, 1613). David Echlin is described in the record as from St Andrews and already M.B. Montpellier, April 22, 1606. He became Physician to Queen Henrietta Maria in 1637. After the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, only Irish names appear in the Caen records. At Orange in Vaucluse—a few miles north of Avignon—there existed an old University with a Faculty of Medicine, whose students were recruited from Huguenot families. I found the old records, which are incomplete, in the Mairie of Orange. Many of the medical students appear to have studied at Montpellier and proceeded to Orange for promotion. Some received the degree “aggrégé,” i.e. ad eundem. William Gray, M.D. Montpellier, 1610, a native of Montrose and brother of Gilbert Gray, Principal of Marischal College, Aberdeen, acted as promoter of the graduands at Orange from 1614 to 1644. The autographs of the graduates are a feature of the records. William Johnston, who graduated M.D. Orange, Nov. 20, 1622, became the first Professor of Mathematics at Marischal College, Aberdeen. He was a brother of Arthur the poet. I also found the name of Hans Sloane who graduated at Orange, July 27, 1683.

There is evidence that some of our people went to the University of Valence in Drome, but on inquiry there I found that none of the archives exist. At Cahors in Cher there existed a University up to 1728. The records are at Toulouse, and through the kindness of Dr Bergounioux I obtained the names of a considerable number of Irish who promoted at Cahors. Amongst these is the name of Nial O'Glacan who graduated at Cahors in July 1625 (vide D.N.B.). In most of the French Universities it was the custom to grant three degrees in Medicine: Bachelor, Licentiat, and Doctor. A period of only one or two days usually elapsed between each degree. The Revocation of the Edict of Nantes apparently affected the number of British students studying medicine in France.

The "Matrikel" of the University of Basel has not been published. Through the kindness of Professor Dr Gustav Binz I was enabled to examine the Records of this old University. There was an excellent medical school here at the period when Bauhinus and Felix Platter were teaching, and a number of Englishmen and Scotsmen were inscribed as medical students, some of whom proceeded M.D. Basel. A few of these had been to Leyden.

Many of the German Universities have published their "Matrikels" and it is surprising how few of our people are inscribed therein. The political condition of Germany in the seventeenth century probably accounted for this. German Universities seem to have divided themselves into two classes—those like Marburg which were anti-Catholic—and those like Ingolstadt and Würzburg which were definitely anti-Protestant. At Helmstadt, during Duncan Liddell's period as professor, a number of Scots, chiefly from Aberdeen, were inscribed or promoted there.

During the Leyden period all the Italian Universities, with the exception of Padua, were practically closed to British students. At Pisa the Dukes of Etruria had jurisdiction, and although Finch, Forbes, and the two Macullos held teaching posts there, I could find no evidence that Englishmen were inscribed as students at Pisa in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. On the other hand, Padua had attracted students from this country from the earliest times. After the Reformation the Popes excluded all non-Catholics from the Italian Universities. Padua, however, which was part of the Venetian Republic, circumvented the Papal jurisdiction by instituting a separate University for non-Catholics. The records for this period still exist and the inscriptions have been published by Horatio Brown and Andrich. The stemmata of many English and Scottish students are still to be found in the grand hall and vestibules of the University of Padua. The records of promotions at Padua also exist and I have to thank Cav. F. Ageno for permission to examine these. A striking feature in this list of promotions for non-Catholics is the number of Jews who graduated at Padua during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Professor Morpurgo of Padua published a list of British promotions in the Transactions of the History of Medicine Section of the Royal Society of Medicine (1927). There are errors and omissions in this list, but it is remarkably correct for a foreigner who presumably would be unfamiliar with our names. Many Leyden students were inscribed and laureated at Padua which usually granted the double degree of Doctor of Medicine and Philosophy when the graduand was not already a graduate in Arts of his home University.

Considerable numbers of Oxford and Cambridge students of Medicine went to Leyden for further study, many graduating in Medicine at their respective Universities on their return to England. A glance at Munk's Roll shows that large numbers of the Fellows and Licentiates of the Royal College of Physicians of London, including several Presidents of the College, had been students at Leyden. The majority of the early Fellows of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh were old Leyden students, and the founders of the Faculty of Medicine at Edinburgh University in 1726 were all pupils of Boerhaave. In the eighteenth century, even after the Medical Faculty in Edinburgh had been well established, we find considerable numbers of Edinburgh students crossing the seas to Leyden to round off their studies, or even to promote there. This explains the very large number of eighteenth century Leyden Dissertations in the possession of Edinburgh University. These have been included by Mr Nicolson in his latest catalogue of the Edinburgh University Library. On the titles of these Dissertations the students proudly state that they are members of various Edinburgh Societies including the Royal Medical Society of Edinburgh (founded in 1734 and the oldest English-speaking Medical Society in the world). Many of the early Glasgow physicians were Leyden men—also the early physicians of Ireland who were connected with Trinity College Dublin, and the Colleges of Physicians of Dublin and Ireland.

Many students of medicine at Leyden never graduated at all. Some of these were dilettanti who took the study of medicine as part of the education of a gentleman. There is also evidence that surgeons crossed the seas to Holland to obtain better instruction in their calling, and even before the Edinburgh surgeons were freed from the barber connection (1718-1722) we find some of their number inscribed as students of medicine at Leyden.

The influence of Leyden as a medical school was immense, and reached its climax during the period when Boerhaave was teaching at the bedside. His students carried his message to the whole world. Gerhard van Swieten, a Catholic and one of his favourite pupils, published Boerhaave's Aphorisms with Commentaries, and becoming physician to the Empress Maria Theresa he refounded the Faculty of Medicine at Vienna in 1749, and as already stated the Faculty of Medicine at Edinburgh was founded by pupils of Boerhaave in 1726. Both faculties were planned on the Leyden model and became in their turn Meccas of medical education.

In the production of books Leyden was a great centre. Adjoining the old University was the press of Abraham Elzevir who was appointed official printer to the University. From this press (and from Amsterdam) there emanated splendid editions of medical and other literature, the type of which was unsurpassed for beauty and elegance. The rise of medicine in Holland was also synchronous with the wonderful development in the Dutch school of Art. Rembrandt himself, the greatest of Dutch painters, was born at Leyden, and just as Italian Art is associated with Saints and Madonnas, so Dutch painting reflects the manners and tastes of a people interested in anatomy, the sick room, the physician, the surgeon, the alchemist, and the quack.

The quaint old city of Leyden on the "old Rhine" still possesses the atmosphere and charm of a great seat of learning. No longer the cosmopolitan "Academia" that she was in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, she yet contrives to flourish and keep in the van of scientific and cultural progress. A magnificent new Hospital, with laboratories and institutes attached, has sprung up in the new Boerhaave quarter. And has she not in recent years produced three Nobel prizemen? By the world generally, however, she is gratefully remembered as the first University to grant that freedom of conscience in religion which was so long in coming to the Universities of other lands.

Adair, Robertus. Hybernus, June 30, 1742, æt. 26. Med.

The well-known army surgeon born circa 1716 and apprenticed to a Dublin surgeon. Having had an "affaire" with his principal's wife he left Dublin for London and entered the Army as surgeon. He became Surgeon to the Staff in Flanders, March 20, 1742. He is the hero of the well-known song "Robin Adair," which was written by his future wife the Lady Caroline Keppell, daughter of the second Earl of Albemarle. Blair, Jacobus. Scotus, Nov. 3, 1722, æt. 22. Med.

Blair, Jacobus. Scotus, Nov. 6, 1723, æt. 25. Med.

M.D. ? Univ. Both entries probably refer to the same man in spite of the different ages. He practised in Dundee, and Dr Buist considers that he was son of Dr John Blair of Dundee (infra), and was born 1702. He witnessed a baptism in Dundee in 1729. Probably died circa 1730, as his younger brother Alexander inherited Balmyle. (Dr R. C. Buist).

Blair, Joannes. Scotus, Oct. 22, 1696, æt. 28. Med.

M.D. ? Univ. Son of Rev. John Blair of Kilspindie, Perthshire, who was deposed for contumacy in 1691. He was a Dundee physician and was a Jacobite. He was "out" in the Rebellion of 1715 and was at Sheriffmuir, aiding Lord Panmure (who was a wounded prisoner) to escape. He was at Avignon in 1716, when he was appointed Physician-in-Ordinary to James III., the Pretender. He returned to Dundee in 1722. He acquired the estate of Balmyle in Perthshire. Father of James (supra) and John (infra). Will, 1733 (Dr R. C. Buist).

Blair, Johannes. Scotus, Nov. 6, 1723, æt. 20. Med.

Probably son of Dr John the Jacobite and brother of James (supra). James and John were inscribed on the same date at Leyden. John Blair, surgeon, of Jamaica and Inchyra, Perth, was second son of Alexander of Inchyra, and therefore not the Leyden student.

Blair, Patrick. Scotus, Nov. 7, 1737, æt. 24. Med.

M.D. Edin., July 17, 1738, "de obstructionum origine." Dedicated to Col. Alex. Irvine. His name appears in Boerhaave's lecture list, 1737. He was born 1712. He practised in Cork. He was the author of a Deistical work Thoughts on Nature and Religion by "Michael Servetus," Cork, 1775. In Wadd's Memoirs there is a letter addressed to him from Dr Richard Mead in regard to a local controversy. He died March 24, 1781. He built Blair's Castle, Sundays Well, Cork, and resided there. He is not the Dr Pat Blair of the D.N.B., who graduated M.D. at King's Coll., Aberdeen, 1712. The book-plate which exists belongs to the latter (Peachey).

Medicinæ Doctor.
M.D., Univ. unknown. M.A. Edin., 1648. In Edinburgh list he is described as "Medicus." Both the above entries probably refer to the same man. The age in the second entry is certainly an error.
He had evidently graduated at some other University prior to his return to Leyden in 1660.

Cay, Jabez. Anglus, Aug. 21, 1685, æt. 21. Med.

M.D. et Phil. Padua, July 13, 1688. S. of Robert of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Probably related to Jabez Cay, M.D., who left a MS. on an Epidemic Disease which broke out in Newcastle in 1675. He was at Edinburgh University in 1682, when the Duke of York was High Commissioner. He took part in the usual University custom of burning the Pope in effigy on Nov. 5, 1682. For this he was banished and went abroad to study Medicine. He returned to practice at Newcastle-on-Tyne and accumulated wealth, purchasing the estate of North Charlton in 1696. He contributed to the Philosoph. Trans. in 1698. Died in 1702.

M.D. Padua, Nov. 7, 1677 (Patrick Camerarius). S. of William. Inscribed at Padua as "Chalmers de Hedderweek-Scoto-Aberdonensis." Hedderweek is evidently corrupt for Fedrett or Fedderat. He was Consiliarius of the Scots Nation at Padua, 1677-78, and his carved stemma may still be seen in the Aula at Padua. M.A. King's Coll., Aberdeen, 1668. S. of William, minister of Skene. Appointed First Professor of Medicine at Marischal College, 1701. He was deprived in 1716. Died about 1727.

Surgeon. S. of Peter, accoucheur to the Queen of James I. and introducer of the midwifery forceps. Peter's daughter married a Cargill, nephew of the Rector of Aberdeen Grammar School and so, according to the late Dr Kellas Johnstone, David and his brother Nathaniel were educated at the Aberdeen Grammar School. David was not at either of the Aberdeen Universities, but went to study Medicine at Leyden. He was appointed surgeon to the ship Royal James of the East Indies Fleet. He died 1618, and left "fifty Jacobus pieces in gold" to Marischal College, Aberdeen. His coat of arms was on the heraldic ceiling in the old Marischal College, as a benefactor. Vide Marischal College records. Aveling in his work on the Chamberlains makes no mention of David.

M.D. Leyden, June 30, 1684, "de cerebro ejusque pathologia in genere." Thesis at R.C.P. Edin. On the title he is described as "Scoto-Moraviensis." It is dedicated to the President and members of the R.C.P., Edinburgh; also to James Drummond, Earl of Perth, High Chancellor and Lord Justice General of Scotland; Rev. Henry Hickman, Pastor of Leyden Church; Joseph Fairnlie, merchant of Rotterdam; and the Senate of Leyden University. From the Acta in Leyden University under date June 23, 1684, it would appear that he was a political refugee from Scotland. On that date Professor Drelincourt reported to the Senate that Cumming had been recommended by the Faculty of Medicine to go forward for his public Disputation for the degree of M.D. Drelincourt also stated that the English Ambassador had made a request that Cumming should not be allowed to go forward for his degree. The Senatus, however, gave it as their decision, that the University had nothing to do with politics, and that the function of a university was in regard to knowledge in the various faculties, and that they neither could nor would renounce their rights. Consequently, if the individual in question was up to the standard in his public Disputation, the degree to which he aspired would be granted. Further, Drelincourt was instructed by the Senate to intimate their decision to the English Ambassador. Cumming went to Ireland at the time of the Revolution. He settled in Dublin and played an important part in the formation of the King's and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland. His name appears on the original patent (1692). He received the Charter and surrendered the old Charter of Charles II. (1667). He became President of the Irish College in 1699. He was M.A. Edin., 1675, and M.D. Dublin, ad eundem 1695. He wrote on inoculation, Dublin, 1722. He died 1724 and was a benefactor of the library of the R.C.P., Edinburgh.

one, "De arcus Apollinaris." He states that he had not seen it, but that it was mentioned in Sibbald's MSS. in the National Library of Scotland, and dated 1653 from Leyden. The librarian, however, informs me that the title is as follows: "ιατρο Δρόμος inauguralis publicus, seu circus Apollinarus, Alphabetice compositus;
in quo curunt theoremata, problemata, paradoxa medica Selectura ex universis veteris et veræ medicinæ fontibus deprompta cum elogiis et icone Authoris." It is dated 1652 Lugduni, i.e. Lyons, and not Lugduni-Batavorum, i.e. Leyden. He was evidently a Montpellier student as he has a Carmen at the end of the Montpellier Dissertation of Charles Drelincourt of Paris (1655).
He has also a poem at the end of the Dissertation of Dr David Bruce who graduated M.D. Valence in 1657. Both these Dissertations are in the British Museum. He was M.A., King's Coll., Aberdeen, 1641, and was for a time tutor to Henry, Duke of Gloucester. He became physician with Montrose's army and later escaped to France. He was appointed Physician in Chemistry, to Louis XIV. He was in England for a short time after the Restoration, but returned to Paris where he died. It is quite certain that he was never at Leyden.

Erskine (Areskinus) Robertus. Scotus. Not inscribed at Leyden. At Utrecht, 1700.

M.D. Utrecht, July 17, 1700, "Circa œconomiam corporis humani."
Thesis at B.M. Inscribed at Edin. Univ., 1691 and 1693, but did not graduate. This distinguished physician was sixth son of Sir Charles Erskine, First Baronet of Alva, and nephew of Dr Alex.
Dundas of Edinburgh (vide). He was apprenticed to Hugh Paterson, surgeon of Edinburgh, 1692-97. He went to Paris in 1697 as a student of medicine, passing later on to Holland, where he graduated in medicine. Various accounts of Erskine, taken from continental sources, state that he was at Oxford, but there is no evidence of this. Apparently he returned to London and was on terms of intimacy with Dr George Cheyne and other physicians there, becoming F.R.S. in 1703. He went to Russia in 1704, becoming physician to Prince Mentschikoff. The latter advised Peter the Great to appoint Erskine overseer of the apothecaries. In 1713 he became physician to Peter and in 1714 he was placed over the Medical Chancery and was the first physician in Russia to receive the title of "Archiater." From this time he was on terms of the greatest intimacy with Peter.
He accompanied him in his travels in 1716 through Germany, Holland and France. In Paris he informed the Academy that Peter desired to become a member, and he arranged for Peter to be present at an operation, by Dr Duvernay, on an old soldier for cataract. His success in Russia and his friendship with Peter excited jealousy amongst his rivals and he was accused of being a Jacobite and in correspondence with his relative, the Earl of Mar, who was the chief of the Scots Rebels in 1715. It is possible that his sympathies were with the Pretender, but it has never been proved that he engaged in plots on his behalf. Shortly after his return to Russia his health gave way and he went to Olonez, a Russian Spa, for treatment. He died there Jan. 15, 1719 (N.S.). He had a most pompous funeral at which Peter was present. The body was brought from Olonez to Petersburg. In the church a sermon was preached in Dutch by a Protestant clergyman. A procession was then formed, headed by Peter, the body being carried by the leading physicians and surgeons of Russia, who were all in deep mourning. In the procession Peter and 200 others carried burning torches. When the cortège reached the outskirts of Petersburg, the body was placed on a sledge and taken to the Convent Alexander Newsky where he was buried in the presence of the Emperor. Erskine's tomb lies between that of the Princess Natalia and a Dutch Admiral. There is no doubt that Erskine was a man of considerable culture. Besides a knowledge of the Classics, he spoke French and German fluently. He was the first "Archiater" of Russia, his title dating from 1716. His will still exists, or did exist in Petersburg. He left a library of 4200 volumes and a cabinet of minerals, shells, and medals. The latter was to be sold and the money obtained was to be sent to the "Orphan and Poor Hospitals" of Edinburgh. For further particulars, vide Paul, Letters and Documents relating to Robert Erskine. (Scottish History Society Publications, 1904.)

M.D. Leyden, June 26, 1652, "de arthritide." Thesis at Glasgow Univ. Dedicated to Sir Alex. Wedderburn of Blackness and "D. Jacobo Kadano," Laird of Craigie. The date in the Acta is June 16. Born in Dundee, son of James Glegg, Rector of the Grammar School. Thomas was appointed third Master of St Salvator's Coll., St Andrews. In 1649 he had to demit office under compulsion. In 1661 an Act of Parliament gave him the whole of the dues from the University to which he was entitled from 1649. After his demission he studied medicine. He was on the Patent for the proposed College of Physicians of Scotland (1656). He became a Burgess of Dundee Feb. 7, 1657. He was a poet. He wrote the following Epigram on Sir George Mackenzie ("Bloody Mackenzie") :—

—Pingere vis quâ fronte Cato, titubante Senatu, Asseruit Patriæ jura verenda suæ?
 Pingere vis magnus quo Tullius ore solebat
 Dirigere ætoniti linguam animaque Fori?
 Pingere vis quanta Maro majestate canebat
 Ex quali tetigit pollice Flaccus ebur?
 Pingere Makenzæum, Pictor; namque altera non est
 Quæ referat tantos una Tabella viros.

These lines appear under the portrait of Sir George Mackenzie, engraved by Robert Wood of Edinburgh (1686). They have been translated by Alexander Cunningham, Professor of Philosophy at Edinburgh, as follows :—

Painter, if thou wouldst draw how Cato stood,
 Fix'd in defence of 's Country's Laws and Good :
 If thou wouldst draw Great Tully's Eloquence,
 When he inspired the Bar with Life and Sense?
 If thou wouldst draw Maro's Majestic Lays ;
 Or with what Art and Genius Flaccus plays?
 Painter, Mackenzie draw, none others fit,
 To represent such men, such sense, such WIT.

Goldman (Goldmannus) Petrus. Scotus, Dec. 7, 1609, æt. 22. Med.

M.D. Leyden, July 12, 1610, "de melancholia." Thesis at B.M. Dedicated to his brother William Goldman. In the Acta the date is July 26. Dr Peter Goldman was a native of Dundee and was the first Scotsman to graduate in Medicine at Leyden. His graduation Thesis is the earliest of the Leyden dissertations (pro gradu) of the English-speaking students to be found in this country. He was inscribed at St Salvator's Coll., St Andrews, 1601, and graduated M.A. St Andrews, 1604. He was a poet and in 1617 presented his "Sylva" to King James at Dundee. (Vide Muse's Welcome, p. 107, and Dr R. C. Buist.) Other verses appear in Delitiæ poetarum Scotorum. He died 1628. At the end of the Thesis of John Brouært (vide) there are two Carmina by Peter Goldman:—

Palnam Phœboa se cono in arte putabat
Eripuisse aliis, eripuisse tibi.
Ast hæc si legeret tua lemmata docta, videret
Te eripuisse olis, eripuisse sibi.

ALIUD.

Quite monstrantem plantarum nomina vidit,
Naturam, ingenium, mores, vultumque, coloremque
Inter pulvillos avum trivisse putaret.
At qui cunque legent hæc aurea lemmata, dicent
Ætatem in medicis trivisse autoribus omnem.

P. GOLDMANNUS, SCOTUS, M.D.

Goldsmith, Oliver. Not inscribed in Leyden Album.

There is ample evidence that Goldsmith was a student of Medicine at Leyden, but his name does not appear in the Matriculation list. A fee was payable at the time of entry and this apparently was not forthcoming! His friend Ellis (vide) was inscribed at Leyden Jan. 11, 1754. The inscription of William Oliver Sept. 21, 1753, æt. 22, at Leyden, and the inscription of "Mr Oliver Wm.," Nov. 25, 1755, at Padua, seemed to suggest the possibility of corruption of names, Oliver Goldsmith becoming Oliver Gulielmus, and Oliver Gulielmus becoming Oliver William! The inscription at Padua is in the hand of the student himself, and he adds "Immatriculatus fui in Academia hac, necnon Oxoniensi ex Aula Alban alumnus." I compared the writing with a facsimile of Goldsmith's writing and I found very little resemblance. Both dates were well within the period when the poet was a wanderer in Europe. Goldsmith was certainly never a student at Louvain where he would have had to sign the "Declaratio Fidei," i.e., as Roman Catholic. He was B.A. Dublin, 1750. Dr Percy Kirkpatrick of Dublin has brought together a mass of evidence which makes it practically certain that he received the degree of M.B. Dublin "in absentia," and that he received the ad eundem degree of M.B. from Oxford in 1769. The date of his M.B. Dublin degree is unknown, the Dublin Records being incomplete.

M.D. Marischal Coll., Aberdeen, 1788. This is probably the well-known Aberdeen obstetrician who was born circa 1752 at Milltown, Peterculter, Aberdeenshire. He is said to have studied at Marischal Coll., 1768-72, graduating A.M. in 1772. Studied medicine at Aberdeen Infirmary and Edinburgh, and probably went to Leyden later. Entered the navy as surgeon in 1780, retiring on half-pay in 1785. Took up the study of obstetrics in London and then began practice in Aberdeen the same year. In 1789 published his well-known Treatise on Puerperal Fever, which is dedicated to Denman. This was republished in London, 1795. Became physician to Aberdeen Dispensary. Died 1799, æt. 47, while on naval duty. Another of this name became surgeon in the Army in 1776. He served in the American War. He resided latterly at Charlotte Town, Prince Edward Island, where he died in 1803. He was son of Robert Gordon of Logie and father of Margaret Gordon, Carlyle's "Blumine," who later became Lady Bannerman (Bulloch).

(Vide "Absolutissimæ Humani corporis dissectione," 1650, in the B.M.) M.D. Dublin ad eundem, 1664. The first of the two Leyden inscriptions may or may not refer to Nathaniel Henshaw. Original Fellow of R.S., 1663. His name appears on the Original Charter of Charles II. for the College of Physicians of Dublin (1667). In 1664 he published at Dublin Aero-Chalinos. This is dedicated to the Earl of Ossery, Lord Deputy-General of Ireland. It contains a paragraph "in praise" by John Stearne, M.D. and J.U.D., Prof. of Medicine at T.C., Dublin. He was buried at Kensington, Sept. 13, 1673.

Hepburn, Georgius. Scotus, March 31, 1648, æt. 22. M.A., Med.

M.D. Leyden, Sept. 21, 1649, "de Phthisi." Thesis is in the Library of the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, Glasgow. On the title he is described as "Lothiano-Scotus." One of this name M.A. Edin., 1645. Another, 1647. He was on the Patent for a proposed College of Physicians of Scotland, 1656 (Sibbald). Of Monkrig, Haddington. Will, 1681 (of Wester Monkrig). There is a M.I. (Latin) in Monteith's Theatre of Mortality, but no date. Monteith's English translation suggests that he died young, but the correct rendering is that he died suddenly. He must have been a man of some eminence in his day, because he is mentioned by George Sinclair, Professor of Natural Philosophy at Glasgow and author of Satan's Invisible World Discovered, and other works. Hepburn registered his Coat of Arms. He married Helen Swinton in 1654 and had two sons, Patrick, his heir, and George. J. A. Duncan in his monograph on the Hepburn family says George "appears" to have died young, but it is quite possible that he is the George Hepburn who graduated at Leyden in 1693 (infra).

Hepburn (Heiborn) Georgius. Scotus, March 26, 1692, æt. 21. Med.

M.D. Leyden, June 19, 1693, "de febris legitima seu exquisita." His thesis is at Leyden. It is dedicated to Sir Patrick Brown of Colston; Sir George Suttie of Balgon; Sir George Brown of Colston; and Sir John Hay of Alderston (his patrons); also to Francis Hay, heir of Sir James Hay, Bart., of Linplum; and Adam Hepburn, heir of David Hepburn of Humbie. At the B.M. there are two theses exercitii gratia (not pro gradu) by this man—(1) "De motu sanguinis per vasa minima," Jan. 17, 1693. This is dedicated to Sir Archibald Stevensone, M.D. (2) "De circulatione sanguinis in animalibus genitis et nongenititis," June 6, 1693. Dedication—"Mathematicorum amantibus." He was a favourite pupil of Pitcairne at Leyden and was promoted by him. He became F.R.C.P. Edin., 1694. At the time when he joined the College of Physicians of Edinburgh there were serious disputes between Pitcairne and other Fellows of the College. Hepburn published Tarugo Unmasked, in defence of his master. For this he was censured and suspended from the privileges of his Fellowship. Nothing more is known of him in any of the Edinburgh Records, and Peel Ritchie concludes that he died soon afterwards and that the M.I. on George Hepburn in Haddington (supra) refers to him. He probably left Edinburgh about 1700 and settled in King's Lynn, of which he became a Freeman in 1708. He became personal physician to Sir Robert Walpole spending much time at Houghton, Sir Robert's seat. He attended Sir Robert in his last illness in 1744 and sent a report of his symptoms to Dr Jurin and the others when Sir Robert went to London for treatment there. This report is signed "G. Hepburn." He died at King's

Lynn in 1759. Hillen in his History of King's Lynn gives the date of his birth as 1669, so that he must have been about ninety at the time of his death. He was a Benefactor to the Library at King's Lynn which possesses his portrait. He was probably son of George (supra) and would be a boy when his father died. (Information from H. J. Rennie, Esq., of King's Lynn.)

Hepburn (Helborn) Patricius. Scotus, Oct. 22, 1647, æt. 20. Philosoph.

M.D. Marischal Coll., Aberdeen, 1764. Born 1714. Second son of Captain Patrick Heron, an officer in Lord Mark Ker's Regiment, stationed at Portsmouth. Studied Medicine and went to W. Indies. He returned after many years to claim the estate of Bargaly in Kirkcudbright. Litigation took place at Edinburgh in 1764 and he was successful. It was during his residence in Edinburgh at this time that he applied for the Aberdeen degree, his application being supported by Dr Innes and Dr Grant of Edinburgh. Andrew was of Scottish parentage, but was born at Lymington in Hampshire. He died at Edinburgh, Sept. 5, 1785, in his 71st year. (Vide "Andrew Heron and his Kinsfolk" by Dr Heron Rogers, also Dumfries and Galloway Antiq. Society, 3rd Series, vol. v.)

Ingenious Friend

All did admire to see

Your parts, your learning, and your modestie

In that "de inflammatione oculi."

Let the admiring crowd to admire go on,

It's short of thy desert, when all they've done,

Doctor of Physic and Philosophie

Deservedly enrolled A.M., M.D.

Each faculty you know; to say how excel

Requires (if possible) those that excel,

Dryden, or Waller, Cowley, Philomel.

Accept my wish, tho' in an homely stile,

Let still success on your endeavours smile

And be the Fam'd physitian of Great Britain's isle

—is the feigned desire of your real friend and humble servant

THOMAS ARMSTRONG.

Maculo, Jacobus. Scotus, Jan. 11, 1602, æt. 28. Med.

M.D., Univ. unknown. Brother of John Maculo (infra). The brothers were inscribed at Basel as medical students in 1598. In 1614, Cosmo II., the ruler of Tuscany invited the two brothers to teach at the University of Pisa, James to teach Medicine and look after the Physic Garden. At this time another Scot—Thomas Dempster—was Professor of Civil Law at Pisa. (Vide D.N.B.) Both brothers apparently practised "Alchemy." After three years they were asked to resign, "having been negligent of their duties and boastful of their Chymiaë." James was a Latin poet and published at Florence in 1617, "Anthophoria, sive pentanthos medicus, etc." He appears also amongst the poets in the "Delitiæ Poetarum Scotorum." (Arthur Johnston, etc.). He returned to Scotland and became Physician to James I. He was dead by 1623.

Maculo or Macolo, Johannes. Scotus. Not in Leyden Album, but appears in Leyden Acta.

M.D. ? Montpellier. In the Acta of Leyden Univ. under date Nov. 20, 1597, he applies for the post of Lecturer on Philosophy (Organum Aristotelis) at Leyden and is appointed. He could only have held the position for a short time, as he and his brother James were inscribed at Basel in 1598 as medical students. In 1600 he was at Montpellier engaged in teaching and probably graduated M.D. there. In the Stammbuch of George Strachan (vide Kellas Johnstone's Albo Amicorum) he contributes a Carmen, dated 1600, "in praise" and signs himself "Joannes Maccollo, Med. Doctor et Philosophiæ Professor in celebri Academia Monspeliensi." Munk describes him as M.D. Franeker, but there is no record of his inscription or promotion in the Franeker Archives. We next find him as Physician to Rudolf, Emperor of Germany. Rudolf died in 1612. John, with his brother James, was then invited to go to Pisa (vide James) to teach "Chymia," i.e., Alchemy. Astruc describes him as "Professor of Chemistry and Physick." In 1616 he published at Florence "Theoriam Chymicam Lues Venereæ, quæ Hermiticæ Medicinæ Elementa pandit." This was dedicated to Julius Caballus, an official in the service of the Grand Duke of Etruria. After three years at Pisa, he and his brother John were asked to resign. He returned to Scotland, becoming Physician to James I. In 1621 he was admitted F.R.C.P. Lond. He died 1622 and was buried at St Margarets, Westminster (M.I.). His age on the inscription is given as 46. He owned for a time the Baronies of Mertoun and Cardiness in Wigtonshire. His "99 Canons or Rules, learnedly describing an excellent method for Practitioners in Physick," was published in 1659. These Canons were originally written in the Scottish dialect, and the editor "W. S." "has taken some trouble to present them in current English." John Maculo was apparently an Alchemist. The Emperor Rudolph had a passion for Alchemy and Astrology. King James was also interested in the Occult Sciences, hence Maculo's appointments in exalted quarters. Munk states that John Maculo was from Edinburgh. In the Edinburgh Catalogue of Graduates James McCullo became M.A. Edin., 1588, and John Makcullo, M.A. Edin., 1592. Both are said to have become "ministers of the Word," and in Scott's Fasti John Makcullo is stated to have become minister of Broughton in 1593, but resigned in 1595 because he "can find na sufficient provision."

His name appears on the Glasgow list of Darien Subscribers, 1696. He succeeded to the Barony of Eccles on the death of his brother George, in 1702, and died June 24, 1724, æt. 60. He was buried at Penpont, Dumfries. It will be noted from the above dedication that Sir Andrew Balfour was President of the R.C.P. of Edinburgh in 1690. The College Records for this period are incomplete. (This is not the Chas. Maitland who wrote on inoculation. He was at Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1699, and became a London Surgeon. He went to Constantinople as Surgeon to the British Embassy, where he inoculated Lady Mary Montague. He died a bachelor at Aberdeen, Feb. 9, 1748, æt. 70, leaving £7000.)

D. Phil. Leyden, Nov. 26, 1599. D. Juris, May 19, 1604. Lecturer on Natural Philosophy (Organum Aristotelis) at Leyden. Inscribed at Helmstadt Univ. as Medical Student Aug. 20, 1588, and again on Jan. 1, 1589. I find him again at Wittenberg where he was inscribed "gratis" July 10, 1591. In 1592 he was teaching at the Latin School at Middelburg in Holland. The Middelburg Records describe him as John Murdison, a "Savant" from Scotland. In 1595 he was teaching Philosophy at the Middelburg School. There is a thesis at the British Museum of Charles Francisci dated from Leyden, 1597, and dedicated to John Murdison, Rector of the Middelburg School. The Archiviste of Middelburg informs me that he left soon after and returned to Scotland for a vacation. He returned, however, to Holland and entered at Leyden Univ., graduating as above and then enters on the study of Law. According to the Acta he was appointed to teach Aristotle on Dec. 11, 1603, but he must have held the position of Professor of Natural Philosophy before this, as he was Præses and Professor when Richard Bland (Eboracensis) defended his Philosophical Thesis on June 2, 1601. The date of his birth is given as 1568 and he died 1605. (Vide Leyden Album Studiosorum.)

M.D. Gottingen, 1779, "de hepatide maxima Indiæ Orientalis." Thesis at B.M. and Manchester. Dedicated to his uncle Thomas Murray, Esq., and to General Sir Hector Monro, K.C.B. From the Acta of Leyden University under date Aug. 17, 1776, it appears that Andrew had gone to Germany for the vacation. He ran short of money and decided to walk back to Holland on foot. On the main road near Cologne he was stopped by two Prussian officers and as he had no safe conduct, they mistook him for a tramp and conscripted him for the Prussian Army. He was sent to Hammon en route for Berlin. He got in touch with the Burgomaster who wrote to the Senate at Leyden inquiring if the young Scotsman was telling the truth in claiming to be a medical student at Leyden. In a few days he was released and returned to Leyden.

Murray, Georgius. Scotus, Sept. 10, 1677, æt. 20. Med.

M.D., Univ. unknown. Born Aug. 16, 1659, he was ninth child and fourth son of Sir William Murray, 1st Bart. of Ochertyre. His name appears on list of Darien subscribers, 1696. He died in London, May 16, 1701, s.p., æt. 42. (Information from Mr Pat Keith Murray, W.S., of Edinburgh.) In Dunblane Testaments his Will was proved Aug. 14, 1707 (? 1701) and he is described as of Strowan and Monzievaird.

Murray (Muraij) Georgius. Anglus, Dec. 3, 1699, æt. 33. Med.

In the Acta under date Feb. 15, 1700, it is stated that he was in prison at Rotterdam for an English debt. He had written a letter to the Senate asking them to get him out of jail. The Senate declined because the term of imprisonment had been inflicted before he became a Member of the University, and also because he had fled his own country.

On the title he is described as V.D.M., i.e., Minister of the Gospel. Dedicated to John, Marquis of Athol, Earl of Tullibardine, etc., Head of the Family of Murray, and to Lord John Murray, his eldest son (Secretary for Scotland). M.D. St Andrews, Nov. 30, 1710, ad eundem. In St Andrews Records it is stated that he was in practice in Perth, and that he showed his Leyden Diploma. M.A. St Andrews, 1677. Ordained 1687 to Scone Parish Church. In 1689 he was deprived for "refusing to pray for King William and Mary, and for blessing Claverhouse in his undertaking for the late King": also for sending his brother to join Claverhouse with the words "God's curse and my curse fall upon you if you leave the Viscount until you return victorious." On Aug. 24, 1694, "purposing to go furth the Kingdom" he granted a "factory" to his brother William, and his brother-in-law Mungo Campbell of Kinloch. He was inscribed at Leyden for the second time in the November following. He was fourth son of Patrick Murray, seventh Laird of Ochertyre and Arbenie, and was born in 1662. He practised in Perth. He and Sir Patrick Murray of Ochertyre became Burgesses of Glasgow on the same date, Jan. 20, 1707. John Murray, M.D., appears on the list of Darien subscribers as agent, 1696. Will, 1750 (St Andrews Testaments). Scott in his Fasti says he died in 1707 at Edinburgh in the Trinity Hospital. This is an error. (Information from Mr Patrick Keith Murray, W.S., of Edinburgh.)

Pitcairne, Archibaldus. Not inscribed in the Leyden Album.

M.D. Rheims, Aug. 13, 1680 (Edinburgensis). The Edinburgh Physician who became Professor of Physic at Leyden, April 25, 1692. Amongst his pupils were Richard Mead and Herman Boerhaave. The following extracts are taken from the Acta of Leyden University:—

- August 21, 1691.*—The curators of the University decide to inquire if Archibald Pitcairne would be willing to become Professor of Medicine in succession to Schacht who had died.
- October 18, 1691.*—A letter is read from Bishop Burnet stating that Pitcairne possesses all the qualifications required for a Professorship of Medicine.
- November 28, 1691.*—A letter is read from James Dalrymple of Stairs, President of the Court of Session in Scotland (and a Leyden student) to Professor Trigland of Leyden, stating that Pitcairne would accept a "call" to Leyden. The Curators forthwith appoint Pitcairne Professor of Practice of Physic at a salary of 1000 gueldres.
- January 24, 1692.*—A letter from Pitcairne is read stating that he accepts the appointment of Professor of Physic, and that he will be in Leyden in March or April.
- April 26, 1692.*—Pitcairne delivers his Inaugural Lecture and the Curators grant him an Honorarium of 400 gueldres over and above his ordinary salary of 1000 gueldres.
- May 3, 1692.*—The Curators give Pitcairne 770 gueldres towards the cost of his removal to Leyden.
- June 18, 1692.*—Professor Drelincourt and Professor Pitcairne propose that the former gives the Lectures on Practice of Physic, and the latter on the Institutes of Medicine for the first year, changing over each alternate year. The Curators, however, decide that Drelincourt is to teach the "Institutes" and Pitcairne the "Practice of Physic." The Curators give them permission to deliver other lectures privately as they like.
- September 12, 1692.*—Pitcairne is appointed Treasurer of the Faculty in place of Anthony Nuck deceased.
- February 8, 1694.*—The following letter from Pitcairne dated Edinburgh Dec. 29, 1693, was read :—I really thought that after I came here, relieved of my duties for a short time, I should be returning to Holland. I therefore did not write to you. Since the opportunity of returning to Holland is now denied to me, owing to an unexpected obstacle (there is no use saying anything about my enemies in Leyden since they were not in any respect equal to my friends there) I have no wish to allow the University through my fault to be without a better Professor than I am. I had thoughts of returning to thank the University and all my friends there, but in the meantime can hardly regard myself as continuing to hold the Chair till I am able to come. Accordingly I humbly request the Curators to choose another Professor in my place. I acknowledge and shall always acknowledge my great indebtedness to them in every respect.

With all good wishes I am yours, etc.—ARCHD. PITCAIRNE.

This letter, which was addressed to the Secretary of the Curators, having been read, it was resolved and agreed that as Pitcairne went to Scotland without notice or leave, he is dismissed his Professorship on account of his improper conduct. It was also decided that certain sums to which he was entitled on May 8 and August 8, 1693, were not to be remitted to him, but were to be held back for the present.

March 2, 1694.—The Senatus resolved that the above money which is lying in deposit with Gronovius should be divided amongst the other Professors.

March 16, 1694.—It would appear that Pitcairne owed a sum of money for his locum tenens during his absence in Scotland.

Archibald Pitcairne was one of the promoters of the Foundation of the R.C.P. Edin. in 1681 and is the last name on the Original Patent. He died 1713. He was one of the most celebrated physicians of his time. Vide D.N.B., Peel Ritchie, etc.

Russell, Richardus. Anglus, Oct. 28, 1724, æt. 25. Med.

M.D. Leyden, Dec. 22, 1724, "de epilepsia puerili." Thesis at B.M. He was promoted by Boerhaave. Born at Lewes 1687, and apprenticed to his father, a surgeon-apothecary. He made a secret marriage with the daughter of William Kempe of Malling Deanery. Later, he went to Leyden and graduated there as above. He appears to have had his home at Rotterdam when he was studying at Leyden, because he complains to the Senate that the authorities at Rotterdam wanted to tax his books and furniture. Presumably he had his wife with him. As students at Leyden were free of taxes this was put right by the Senate—vide Acta under date April 10, 1725, when he had already graduated and was apparently still pursuing his studies. On his return to England he practised at Lewes. After the death of his father-in-law he went to live at Malling Deanery which he inherited. In 1750 he published at Oxford his well-known De Tabæ Glandulari. An English translation was published at London in 1752. This was not authentic and Russell in 1753 published his own translation. He was made F.R.S., 1752, and in 1754 he moved to Brighton. He died in London in 1759 when on a visit. He was the real founder of Brighton as a health resort, and his name is perpetuated in several streets of that town. His portrait by Zoffany is in the Art Gallery in Brighton. He was not a Licentiate of the R.C.P. Lond., and Sir Norman Moore in the Dictionary of National Biography confuses him with another Richard Russell, M.D., of Rheims who was not at Leyden. The latter practised at Ware, Middlesex, and was L.R.C.P. Lond., but wrote nothing. (Information from Mr Henry D. Roberts, M.B.E., Director, Art Galleries, Brighton.)

Russel, Guilielmus. Anglus, Sept. 6, 1679, æt. 30. Med.

This is probably William Russel who commenced practice as a physician in 1680, and graduated M.D. Cantab., 1688 (Lit. Reg.). He had been a Baptist minister. In 1691 he published De Calculo Vesicæ. He died 1702. His age in the Leyden Album is probably an error. (Another William Russell, "Chymist" in Ordinary to Charles II., 1684, introduced a medicine containing saltpetre and spirits. This was used by King Charles who gave permission for the preparation to be called the "Royal Tincture." He died circa 1696.) Vide D.N.B.

Scheibell, Georgius Fredericus. Londino-Anglus, Sept. 16, 1715, æt. 24. Med.

There is a Madrigale in Italian at the end of the thesis of Ægidius Glagan, Gedanensis, by G. Fr. Scheibell, Inglese di Londra. At the end of the Utrecht Dissertation of John Henry Senter, Gostariensis Saxo, July 21, 1716, are the following lines in English:—

Your skill, my friend, in Paeon's Art Divine
 Merits a Muse more fit to sing than mine,
 Who in harmonious lines could speak your fame,
 And in immortal verse, immortalise your name!
 My muse long since neglected and forlorn
 On foreign strands, tries faintly to adorn
 This festival, but yet in duty sworn,
 For, here bright virtue shines, and Pallas crowns
 With laurel wreaths his Temples whom she owns
 Long since deserved the present from her hands
 Which common choice this day of her demands:
 May then success attend your generous care
 For mankind's health, may you the blessings share
 Which heaven bestows on well deserving men
 Who having laboured long with studious pain
 To ease mankind of all their growing ills
 At last some secret in their art reveals
 Which they with skilful diligence prepare
 Our crazy constitutions to repair.
 May you long live such blessings to improve
 And long enjoy your friends your country's love.

These, sir, are the Hearty Wishes of your most sincere friend and very humble servant.—G. F. SHEABELL.

Matthæus Prior, A.M.

St John's College, Cambridge.

Prior was at this time Secretary to the English Ambassador at the Hague. Samuel Shaw of Leicestershire at Emmanuel Coll., Cambridge, 1684. Samuel Shaw, M.D., was elected Master of the Free Grammar School at Tamworth, Nov. 23, 1708. Author of several Works on the Latin language—Grammatical Dictionary of the Latin Tongue, 1726; A Short and Plain Syntax, 1727; and A New Grammar, 1730. This last is dedicated to Henry Harpur, son of Sir John Harpur, Bart., of Caulke, Derbyshire. He died in 1730 and was buried at Tamworth on April 24. The school was in high repute in his time and he was elected a Capital Burgess and Bailiff of Tamworth in 1722. (Information from Mr William Morton, Tamworth.) Dr Samuel Shaw's daughter Margaret married Alexander Brodie of Banff, and he was, therefore, great-grandfather of Sir Benjamin Brodie the surgeon. Both families were Jacobites.

Molinetti was eminent as a Dissector and many Carmina in praise of him were written by English students. The following Carmen in English is by William Sydenham and appears in "Absolutissimæ Humani Corporis dissectione A Clarissimo & Excellentissimo D.D. Antonio Molinetto etc.," 1650, Patavii.

Thanks be to fate and time, we triumph may
Over our former errors, and a farewell say
To ignorance; now let that riddle banish'd be
That so distracted all antiquity
For we are taught to know ourselves, and more
To understand the things unheard before.
Then, Reader, if of thy studies thou wouldst make A true compendium, and a short draught take
Of all that is divine, or speaks Philosophy,
Hear then our Molinett's Anatomy.
Yet first consent with me and a decree be made
To ruin presses, and undo the trade
Of Printing: Why should these vast volumes see
A longer welcome, or revived be
From their decaying ashes, when their Authors lie
Wrapped in the Urns of their mortality?
No—we'll no longer be enslaved or tied
To books enveloped with their author's pride:
When these their periods have, their days an end,
Fame—wing thyself and forth a patent send,
Proclaim our WORTHY, heir t' immortal state
Nor make him subject, or to time, or fate.

To His Ingenious and learned friend Mr John Hollier upon his Inaugural Disputation "de vita minium" for Doctor's Degree in Physic:—

Great Marlboro' daily adds new glories to his name
And like Immortal Jove, his foes,
With his Presence and his thunders, awes
But blood and wounds are still the purchase of his Fame.
You, Sir, in Peace serene with such a splendour shine
While furnished with Apollo's skill
You guard us from approaching ill
From numerous plagues dispersed by a Hand divine.
We must (though 'gainst your modesty) admire and ought
T' adore the gifts bestowed by heaven;
Surprising proofs whereof you've given
In this essay with knowledge, since so richly fraught
The monument will stand secure, guarded by Fame
From death and black obscurity
Till the relics of Humanity
Shall mount on high to vast eternity in Flame.
