DESCRIPTIVE NOTE

This Manual is composed of eleven volumes of about 400 pages each. It contains brief bibliographical descriptions of 3,287 important Spanish works on all subjects. Each description is accompanied by a facsimile reproduction, generally of its title-page. The order followed is alphabetical, by names of authors.

‘As nearly all the illustrations consist of title-pages, the value of this Manual to booksellers as well as to bibliographers is inestimable: the facsimile conveys an instantaneous and accurate impression which no elaborate text can do’.—
From a lengthy review in The Times Literary Supplement.

THE CHAINED LIBRARY

A SURVEY OF FOUR CENTURIES IN THE EVOLUTION OF THE ENGLISH LIBRARY

BY

BURNETT HILLMAN STREETER

FELLOW OF THE QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD ; CANON OF HEREFORD ; FELLOW OF THE BRITISH ACADEMY

LONDON : MACMILLAN & CO. LIMITED

LIBRARY DESIGN IN ENGLAND was for more than 400 years dominated by the custom of chaining books. A chained book cannot be read unless there is some kind of desk or table on which to rest it within the length of the chain; that decided the structure of the bookcase. Again, since a chained book cannot be moved to the window, the window must be near the book; that determined the plan of the building. The fact that books were chained conditioned the structure and development of the historic English libraries down to the eighteenth century; even where, as at Cambridge after 1626, chaining began to be disused. At Oxford, the last College to abandon chaining was Magdalen, in 1799.

The development here studied is analogous to that evolution of structure which the biologist loves to trace. The individual library can be properly understood only if it is seen in organic relation to a long process of growth envisaged as a whole. The scope of the subject may be indicated by a list of the libraries discussed, with illustrations, in this book—of which all but the four marked with asterisks were once, or are still, chained.

A brief account, without illustrations, is also given of chained books at Winchester Cathedral, Chirbury, Guildford Grammar School, and Denchworth; and of the library at Enkhuizen, in Holland.

Canon Streeter's studies in this field began in connection with a restoration of the Chained Library at Hereford Cathedral, in the course of which dramatic discoveries were made, within the Cathedral itself, of missing parts of the original fittings. Lured on by the fascination of discovery, he continued his explorations in libraries elsewhere. Mr. Norman Ault then joined in the chase, and is mainly responsible for discoveries at Cambridge and Lincoln, which are of far-reaching importance for the understanding of library evolution in England. In the result it was found practicable to do on paper, for most of the libraries discussed, what had been done in concrete fact at Hereford—to restore them (at least in part) to their original form.

the scale. The height from floor to top of cornice is 6 ft. 6½ in., the width (excluding the overlap of the almary cornice) is 6 ft. 4½ in. The depth of the almary front to back is 1 ft. 6½ in. The legs which support the front edge of the desk stand out 11½ in. over all from the almary. The rods are looped at the end, and are fixed to the sides of the almary by staples passing through these loops. The diagram illustrates the way in which the rods from each end rest, at the middle, in slots in the central upright, and are held there by a locked hasp, 3½ in. long by 2½ in. wide. A curious feature is the keyhole, which is pierced through the hasp to give access to the lock. The chains are in the same style as at Hereford, with the swivel in the middle.

The narrow shelf at the top was, I think, designed for a heavily bound two-volume edition of Foxe's "Book of Martyrs" given by James Leaver, which is too high to stand upright on the shelves.

A brief description of the libraries at Gorton and Turton, as they were in 1856, is to be found in a publication by the Chetham Society—Humphrey Chetham's Church Libraries. From this it appears that at that date the Gorton press was provided with "a

With numerous reproductions in colour and monochrome.

Royal 8vo, cloth.

Cambridge, Printed for the Author, 1930.

£3 3s

This Memoir, by Stanley Morison, represents the first endeavour to provide a consecutive account of John Bell's many enterprises, and an estimate of his contribution to type-design, printing technique and publishing method. There are many reproductions in photogravure, collotype, and wood-engraving. Announcements of Bell's publications, his trade-cards, prospectuses, and devices are given in facsimile. Etc., etc.

Bell's type-specimens here first reproduced from the unique originals, lately found by the author of this Memoir, are shown in type and collotype facsimile. Their discovery compels a revision of current ideas of the typographical history of the last quarter of the XVIIIth century. . . .

An appendix discusses details of the design of Bell's title-pages, books and bindings, describes his relations with John Walter's Logographic Press, the Caslons and the Frys . . . and deals with the short "s," the development of Newspaper make-up, and the employment of Bell's type for news-composition. The spread of Bell's types, and methods of display, in the printing of England and America completes the appendix.

The Memoir is printed in the types of John Bell recast from the original punches for this purpose, by Messrs. Stephenson and Blake, of Sheffield.

THE MOST FAMOUS BOOK IN THE WORLD.

- 53 BIBLIA LATINA. An exact facsimile of "The Gutenberg Bible."
Gothic letter, double columns of 42 lines. With initial letters illuminated in gold and colours.
2 vols., wooden boards covered stamped vellum.
Mainz, Johann Gutenberg (about 1455). £95
Hain 3031. B.M. Cat. Incun., Vol. I., p. 17. Pellechet 2265. Proctor 46. Seymour de Ricci, Catalogue raisonné des premières impressions de Mayence, No. 34, pp. 25-36.
The last complete paper copy of this, the world's most famous book, sold at public auction fetched £21,000.
The earliest printed Bible, and, almost, if not, the earliest piece of European type-printing; it is generally, though not conclusively, ascribed to Gutenberg. Many English bibliographers regard it as more probably the work of Gutenberg's former partner, Johann Fust, and Fust's son-in-law, Peter Schoeffer.
The Bible is known variously as the Gutenberg Bible, from its supposed printer; the 42-line Bible, to distinguish it from the later 36-line Bible, also ascribed to Gutenberg; and, the Mazarin Bible, from the first recognised copy having been discovered in the library of Cardinal Mazarin.

There are no means of definitely fixing a date for the printing of this Bible, the copy in the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris, has, however, a manuscript note in which Henricus Cremer, Vicar of St. Stephen's at Mainz, states that he finished rubricating and binding it on 24th August, 1456. Copies must naturally have been on sale for some time before this date. The still earlier date of 1453 is written on leaf 324b of a copy in the Buchgewerbe museum at Leipzig; it is however doubtful whether this refers to the date of printing.

- 54 BIBLIOFILIA. Recull d'estudis, observacions, comentaris y notícies sobre llibres en general y sobre qüestions de llengua y literatura Catalanes en particular. Publicat per R. Miquel y Planas.

With hundreds of reproductions (many in colours) from early woodcuts, fine old bindings, etc., etc.

The Complete Set. 2 vols., 4to, half morocco. Barcelona, 1911-1920. £5 5s

This is a handsome publication, profusely illustrated, and consisting of a comprehensive and scholarly study of the language and literature of Catalonia written in the Catalan language, and edited by an eminent Catalan bibliophile.

The subjects are dealt with in attractive and concise chapters, from which the reader may extract the maximum of information from the earliest to the most up-to-date Catalan literature, characteristic typography of the various periods, the various schools of poetry and other literary media, information on manuscripts, woodcuts, bindings, modern book illustration, institutions connected with Catalan literature, Catalan littérateurs, and the bibliography of the greatest Catalan authors.

There is a refreshing absence of pedantry in this highly informative text, and it is enriched by some hundreds of woodcuts and modern illustrations from books, facsimiles of manuscripts, full-page reproductions of handsome bindings in sepia and in colour, portraits, printers' devices, watermarks, type specimens, etc., as well as liberal extracts from rare texts.

There are over three hundred pages in each volume, double columns, and valuable indices.

"At the time of completing Part V. (Venice) of this Catalogue, it was hoped that all the remaining Italian incunabula would be completed in one further part. As, however, the index to the entire Italian group which is essential to the scheme would have swelled out this part to an even greater bulk than that containing 'Venice,' a further sub-division has been decided upon, and the Part now issued deals only with those towns into which printing was introduced during the important years 1470 and 1471, the difficult case of Genoa being excluded. Work on the remainder is already far advanced and the completion of 'Italy' well within sight.

"It should be noted that the Hebrew books printed at Ferrara and Naples have not been included in this part, as Hebrew incunabula are being reserved for separate treatment as a single unit."

The importance and artistic merit of English printing between 1790 and 1820 has never until now been adequately recognized. Indeed, the first contribution of any importance to the study of this period was Mr. Marrot's paper on William Bulmer in the fifth number of the Fleurion. It is now, however, felt that the time is ripe for a more extended survey, and Mr. Marrot has completed a monograph on the achievement of this period in the persons of its two most notable exponents, William Bulmer and Thomas Bensley.

The sub-title of Mr. Marrot's work sufficiently indicates one of the most interesting aspects of a period which begins in direct association with the eighteenth century and ends, so to speak, with its feet almost in the modern manner as we know it.

Biographical details are given, followed by a consideration of the types from which the two men derive so much of their interest. Due stress is laid on their common origin, and on the suggestive parallelism which they present. A step-by-step consideration of such achievement follows, and the text concludes with a critical estimate and comparison.

The book is fully illustrated, and reference lists are included.

- 156 CLAUDIN (A.). De Ricci. Documents sur la typographie et la gravure en France au quinzième et au seizième siècles réunis par A. Claudin, publiés et commentés par Seymour de Ricci.
Large 4to, in original portfolio. London, Maggs Brothers, 1926. £6 6s
An invaluable collection of seven hundred facsimile reproductions of titles, colophons, and specimen pages (mainly of illustrated books) from the French presses of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, collected by the late A. Claudin, the well known historian of French printing, with introduction and bibliographical letterpress, by Seymour de Ricci.
It will prove a most useful companion to Claudin's great book on the Paris and Lyons presses. The provincial French printers, so little known to bibliographers, are very fully represented, such as Limoges, Poitiers, Toulouse, etc.
A great many of the reproductions are from unique books in small French libraries, and would be unobtainable in any other form.
It is also a valuable contribution to the history of engraving.
No library, no museum, no collector of incunabula, can afford to be without it.

Principal contents:—Type faces; a new Sans-Serif type; the Stencil process; on printing wood engravings; music punches; a catalogue raisonné.
In the contemporary renaissance of English printing the work of The Curwen Press holds a position of recognized importance. This MISCELLANY epitomizes in its pages much of the best that has been seen in modern book design. It presents a comprehensive display of all Type Faces, Initial Letters, Borders and Ornaments acquired by The Curwen Press since the issue of its Type Specimen Book in 1928, including Harold Curwen's new Sans-serif type and the Curwen Edition Music Punches.
Book-decoration is recorded by many-coloured reproductions, by the stencil process, as well as by work in monochrome and colour, printed direct from the wood.

- 205 DIESCH (C.). Bibliographie der germanistischen Zeitschriften. 8vo, wrappers. Leipzig, 1927. £3

There may hardly be any student devoted to some branch or other of Germanic philology and literature who has not experienced some difficulty in making sure of the periodical literature concerning his subject. In future Diesch's bibliography will reduce such labours to a minimum. The work gives an exact conspectus of all periodical publications dealing with Germanic philology and literature and issued in Germany or abroad from 1650 to 1925. The material brought together amounts to about 5,000 items, the general arrangement of which is by subjects, while within each special section the chronological order is employed. Each entry states the mode and time of publication, and records one library in which a complete set of the periodical in question is to be found. The book will thus be of great practical value not only for the student, but also for the librarian and bookseller. With this work in hand every librarian will be able to check the respective periodical series under his charge. In short, the bibliography of Diesch claims to be the indispensable work of reference to the student and bibliographer alike.

Second Edition. Reprint.
1135 pp., 4to. Half leather. Leipzig, 1931. £5 10s
This well-known work by the Benedictine Gams (1816-1892) contains the names and dates of all the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church from the beginnings of Christianity to the year 1885. The arrangement is by countries and towns. Since its appearance in 1873 (Supplement 1889) up to the present day, "Gams" has continued to be one of the most indispensable handbooks in the whole field of historical science, being of equal importance for political and ecclesiastical history, political economy, history of art and civilisation, genealogy and diplomatics. The approximative date of any document giving place and bishop's name is easily ascertained with the help of this book, which, in many puzzling cases, has proved to be the last refuge resorted to by the diplomatist and antiquarian.
The first edition, limited to a comparatively few copies only, was soon exhausted, most of the copies being purchased by libraries. This is the first reprint to be published.

With 44 plates (of which 28 are coloured).
4to, half morocco. Leipzig, 1925. £7 10s
The object of this work is to provide :—
1. A bibliography of illustrated patho-anatomical works that have been published in this country and abroad from the 15th to the 20th century (1450—1925).

There are about 700 books recorded. Each item includes besides a short notice on the author a detailed bibliographical description of the book under consideration as well as a critical survey of its illustrations, dealing with the objects reproduced, their size, technique of reproduction and the names of the painter, engraver or lithographer.

2. A history of the art of medical illustration. By following the chronological arrangement of the book, the reader will be able to trace the development of illustrative technique in medical works, the most characteristic specimens of which are selected and reproduced with a care that does full justice to the fine quality of the originals. The index of painters and designers, engravers and lithographers contains many names hitherto unknown in the history of art.

3. A valuable contribution to the history of medicine, throwing a new flood of light on one of its most important branches, viz., pathological anatomy, the material of which is brought together and arranged in a very clear way. The book will also furnish much fresh biographical information.

4. A practical guide for the medical practitioner and the university lecturer. With the help of this book and especially by means of its detailed registers it is possible to review in a very short time the whole range of illustrative literature on nearly all kinds of diseases. The plates will prove of great value to lecturers in demonstrating their objects to a large audience.

5. A work of reference to the dealer in medical books, supplying him with much hitherto unobtainable information necessary for an exact collation and evaluation of illustrated medical works. There can be no doubt that the book under notice will establish itself as the standard work on the subject for many years to come.

Folio, half morocco. Leipzig, 1923.

A truly magnificent work, beautifully printed, and now the Standard Work on Portuguese and Spanish Incunabula from 1475 to 1500.

In view of the great rarity Spanish incunabula may as a rule boast of, the present fundamental publication is no doubt of the utmost importance to both bibliographers and connoisseurs of early typography. The work not only discusses in a clear and comprehensive way the whole amount of Spanish typographical production ranging from 1475 to 1500, but gives also many new and valuable suggestions as to a methodical and systematic investigation of incunabula in general. Based on the type-system created by the author himself, the whole of the material dealt with is divided into 9 genealogical sections, comprising biographies and achievements of all Spanish fifteenth century printers.

Besides the families of Vizlant, Flander, Rosenbach and Botel there are treated as a separate entity the printers of Spanish nationality as well as German, French and Italian printers. The large number of beautiful and representative illustrations reproduced in black and white and for the most part in the size of the originals, give a most valuable survey of the types, initial letters, title-pages, printer's marks and woodcut illustrations to be found in Spanish incunabula.

In the present book the foremost German authority on fifteenth century printing gives the results of many years of investigation in a clear and concise form. This work does not claim to be a general history of the beginning of printing, nor does it contain any biographies of the printers or systematical data about their work, but it provides the student and collector with all that is worth knowing about the nature and characteristic features of incunabula. The book will shortly be translated and printed for the Grolier Club of New York.

Small folio, half buckram. London, 1931.

£5 5s

Since the middle of the eighteenth century no book has been produced giving an adequate account of our native pen-men or making any collective representation of their work, and it is to fill this gap that Mr. Ambrose Heal has compiled this record of the work of over 450 writing-masters. In doing so he has recorded the development of the English hand from the break-away from the monastic scriptoria down to the domination of the commercial hand of the nineteenth century.

In an introductory essay Mr. Stanley Morison sketches the history of English handwriting and analyses the development which the reader can himself follow in the reproductions of specimen-pages from copy-books. The main part of the book is divided into two sections: first, biographies of the writing-masters; secondly, a bibliographical description of their copy-books.

This work, issued in a limited edition, should appeal to the collector of fine printing and the student of typography and calligraphy.

Part II. ITALIAN INCUNABULA. 100 genuine specimen leaves, chosen and described by Konrad Haebler, Munich, 1927. In two buckram portfolios. Price £35.

Part III. WEST-EUROPEAN INCUNABULA. 60 original leaves from the Presses of the Netherlands, France, Spain, Portugal, and Great Britain, chosen and described by Konrad Haebler, including a genuine CAXTON Leaf and also a WYNKYN DE WORDE, Munich, 1928. In one buckram portfolio. Price £35.

Or the complete set, in 5 buckram portfolios. Munich, 1927-8.

The Collector of Incunabula and the Student of Typography will find in this collection, the only one of its kind, ample material for comparing the æsthetic, as well as the historical, values of the earliest European presses. In his interesting and concise English text, Konrad Haebler, probably the most expert authority on the subject of Incunabula, gives a clear bibliographical outline of the works from which his Original Leaves were taken, and adds interesting and all-important details on the influence of the various printers one on the other; mentioning similar "cuts of types" used in different presses.

In Part I, 110 Original German Incunabula Leaves were chosen from some of the most beautiful and epoch-making books issued by the famous presses of Augsburg, Bamberg, Basle, Blaubeuren, Cologne, Esslingen, Freiburg, Hagenau, Heidelberg, Mainz, Meissen, Memmingen, Nuremberg, Passau, Reutlingen, Speier, Strassburg, Tuebingen, Ulm and Wuerzburg.

In Part II, the 110 Original Leaves are specimens from some of the world-known Italian Incunabula issued by the famous presses in Bologna, Brescia, Cremona, Ferrara, Florence, Milan, Mantova, Naples, Padova, Parma, Pavia, Reggio d'Emilio, Rome, Treviso, Venice, Verona and Vicenza.

In Part III, the shortest but not the least interesting of the series, because of the extreme rarity of some of its specimens, includes 60 Original Incunabula Leaves (one being a beautiful genuine Caxton), taken from some of the rarest and most famous books printed in Netherlands: (Antwerp, Delft, Deventer, Louvain, Utrecht and Zwolle); France: (Lyons, Paris, Rouen, Poitiers, Toulouse and Vienne); Spain and Portugal: (Burgos, Lisbon, Seville, Toledo and Valencia); London and Westminster.

Each original Leaf is nicely mounted, with an explanatory label. Only 100 copies were issued of the English Edition, and but one or two sets remain.

It is most interesting to note that Haebler's Collection of Incunabula Leaves, though of an important chronological and historical interest, is even more an attempt at illustrating the Progress, Art and Perfection, attained and surpassed, of the First Printers, than to form what might be called a specimen-album of famous books issued during the fifteenth century.

£85

Medina, Vol. VI., No. 7707, devotes seven pages to this work. Sabin, No. 40050. See Wagner, The Spanish South-West, p. 285.

Very fine copy of the first edition, which is now excessively rare, of the first American Bibliography which was ever printed. Most copies want the engraved frontispiece, which is in our copy.

This work is extremely important for American bibliographers, and is generally cited under the name of Pinelo, which was a surname adopted by Antonio de Leon named "The Chronicler of the Indies."

The author was born in Peru, and educated at Lima. He wrote many important works, which for the most part only exist in manuscript.

"The circumstances of the early life of Antonio de Leon Pinelo are still obscure. Available sources offer very little definite information; but it is inferred from statements in his 'Life of Santo Toribio' that his childhood and youth were passed in Lima, and that with his younger brothers, Juan and Diego, he studied at the University of San Marcos. Having completed his studies at the University, he went to Spain; there his talents in learning were recognised, and he was appointed relator of the Council of the Indies." — (Dr. Moses, "Spanish Colonial Literature in South America").

the first to contain a catalogue of books on America. The additions, by Don Andres Gonzalez de Barcia (who modestly refrains from mentioning his own name in connection with the work) are so considerable as almost to constitute a new work; Leon Pinelo's original work consisting of one quarto volume containing 200 pages, and this "second edition" by Barcia, comprising three folio volumes of closely printed matter, containing about 1,300 pages.

The second volume deals with America.

BOOKSELLERS AT SARAGOSSA IN 1573.

- 370 LIBRO de las Ordinaciones de la Cofadria del Officio de los Libreros fundada en la Iglesia del Señor Santiago de la presente Ciudad de Zaragoza, so invocacio y patrocinio del Bien aventurado y Gloriosso Doctor de la Iglesia San Geronimo. Año MDLXXIII.

Seventeenth century Spanish manuscript on 28 leaves of vellum, with two coloured woodcuts mounted on vellum.

Bound in small 4to, contemporary binding of gilt morocco on wooden boards, g.e. Saragossa, 1679.

£105

This interesting manuscript contains the text of the Ordinances of the "Brotherhood of Booksellers" founded in the Church of Santiago, Saragossa, under the patronage of St. Jerome. Twenty-four leaves of the book are written in large red and black Gothic script, and the remaining leaves are in ordinary manuscript, the ordinances as transcribed from the original register being certified correct, and signed, by Francisco Antonio Español, the chief public notary of the city of Saragossa.

The Brotherhood or Guild, founded in 1573, was for the purpose of preventing fraud in the book trade in Saragossa, and membership was only possible after certain examinations had been satisfactory passed; although the sons of deceased "Brothers" might acquire an hereditary membership on payment of a subscription, without further examination.

One of 400 copies.

The prevailing interest in all "Firsts" is partly responsible for the monograph Some Noteworthy Firsts in Europe during the Fifteenth Century, which has been compiled by E. Miriam Lone. It embodies in concise form the answers to numerous enquiries respecting the most notable "Firsts" of the Fifteenth Century. Accompanied with 31 facsimile illustrations, it presents in orderly form essential information regarding these monuments of early printing not readily accessible elsewhere, arranged under the following chapter headings:

Chapter I. Countries and their Languages.

Chapter II. Types: Gothic, Roman, Greek, Hebrew, etc.

Chapter III. Colophons, Dates, and Titles.

Chapter IV. Collations: Registers, Signatures, Paginations, etc.

Chapter V. Illustrations: Wood and Metal cuts.

Chapter VI. Medicine, Law, Arts and Sciences.

Chapter VII. Various Firsts arranged chronologically.

It will appeal to students and collectors of Incunabula no less than to mediaeval scholars and historians interested in the spread of knowledge resulting from the development of the printed book. That the first book in Germany was a theological tract, the first books in Italy Latin classics, and the first produced for the English one that we must call an historical romance, cannot be regarded as merely insignificant. Nor are the differences in types and the appearance of the page unimportant, for these also help to illustrate the national characteristics.

The work gives for the first time a complete survey of Portuguese book decoration, woodcuts, and typography in the sixteenth century, and as such will prove to be an indispensable bibliography for every Public Library, while, at the same time, owing to the richness of the illustrative material reproduced, it will necessarily find a place in every Museum of Fine Arts, and in every Print Department.

All the principal printers of Portugal of the sixteenth century are well represented besides some characteristic examples of fifteenth-century work. The period in which the books fall is 1489-1600 inclusive. The collection is rich in unique items which are fully described for the first time. The descriptions are ample and full of information both historical and literary; the collations are full, and indices (of printers, towns, authors, and titles) will be added.

- 433 MOLISON (Stanley). Moyllus Alphabet. A newly discovered treatise on Classic Letter Design, printed at Parma by Damianus Moyllus, circa 1480. Reproduced in facsimile with an introduction by Stanley Morison.
8vo, half board. Paris, 1927. £2 2s
One of 360 copies.
Hitherto the work of Fanti (1514) was considered to be the first printed book on the subject of the Roman alphabet. But the one and only copy of the original Moyllus Alphabet, now in the collection of Sig. T. de Marinis, was printed in 1483 by Damianus Moyllus at Parma and is therefore the earliest printed book on the subject.
It is probable that this beautiful incunabulum was used by Leonardo da Vinci when studying printing, which is, as it were, the connecting mechanism or vehicle between the mind of the author and that of the reader.
The most meticulous care has been given to the production of a faithful facsimile. The descriptive Italian text, in English translation, is preceded by a scholarly introduction—containing some delightful anecdotes—by Mr. Stanley Morison.
- 434 MORISON (Stanley). Caractères de l'écriture. Etude historique.
With 39 illustrations.
4to, boards. Paris, 1927. 10s 6d
One of 500 copies only. This work is the French translation of an essay which appeared originally in an early issue of the Fleurion. In its pages the evolution of cancelleresca is traced from the fifteenth down to the eighteenth century.
The number of the Fleurion in which the original article appeared has long been out of print, and the present issue of the essay, which has been revised and augmented by the addition of further interesting matter, is the only form in which it is available.

A MAGNIFICENT WORK.

435 MORISON (Stanley). German Incunabula in the British Museum.

With 152 facsimile plates, in red and black, of fine books in Gothic letter from presses of fifteenth century Germany, German-Switzerland and Austria-Hungary.

Folio, cloth. London, 1928.

£12 12s

One of 398 copies only, with English text.

The author's previous works on ancient and modern printing in the Roman letter are written from what is a comparatively fresh point of view—that of the collector interested rather in the beauty than in the archaeology of books.

His studies therefore have drawn attention to many printers whose merits had not hitherto been recognised by those collectors whose appreciation of books is based upon historical considerations.

There are many books, rare, and thus valuable enough as examples of this or that printer's development, or as exhibiting various bibliographical or typographical minutiae, but which are neither composed in a satisfactory type nor agreeably set on the page.

And although an undeniable interest, not to say fascination, attaches to nearly every member of that class of books known as incunabula, i.e. books published during the fifteenth century, it cannot be gainsaid that very many of the productions of this period are more conspicuous for their archaeological than for their aesthetic interest.

A volume of first-class facsimiles selected in accordance with a high typographical standard has not previously been available, therefore collectors and amateurs of books of the fifteenth century will be grateful for Mr. Morison's volume.

Limiting himself to the consideration of the German books printed in that century, the author has selected from the uniquely rich and representative British Museum collection, one hundred and fifty-two of the best examples of Gothic composition.

These plates exhibit only the finest specimens of that classic Black Letter, unrivalled in its stateliness, with which printing made its début and which was so soon to fall into decline; but there is also included a fine series of examples of transitional Gothic founts.

Thus, in addition to pages from the books of Fust and Schoeffer, Koberger, Gunther Zainer and Ratdolt, there is reproduced a number of the less familiar pages by Michael Wenssler of Basel, Hoeltzel of Nuremberg, Schonsperger of Augsburg, Johann Zainer of Ulm, Kollicker of Basel, and others.

No fewer than half the plates are in two colours, and while the volume deals only with typography not a few of the pages embody examples of contemporary woodcut illustration.

The facsimiles, many of which bear decorative initials, are reproduced in the exact size and with the exact margins of the originals. A descriptive catalogue precedes the plates.

The volume therefore presents a typographical pageant of unrivalled splendour, and cannot fail to be of considerable interest to artists and typographers, as well as to collectors, amateurs and others.

- 436 MORISON (Stanley). Ichabod Dawks, and his News-Letter. With an account of the Dawks Family of booksellers and stationers, 1635-1731.

Illustrated in collotype.

Folio. Cambridge, 1931.

£1 1s

This work is of importance to those interested in the history of English journalism and printing.

Besides giving many new particulars of the career of Thomas Dawks I and Thomas Dawks II, this volume chronicles the career in printing of Ichabod Dawks, his establishment as a newspaper-man and the issue of Dawks's News-letter in 1686. The latter was composed in a new cursive type cut for the exclusive use of the News-Letter and is now for the first time recovered and identified.

- 437 MUMEY (Nolie). A Study of Rare Books. With special references to colophons, press devices, and title-pages of interest to the bibliophile and the student of literature.

Barcelona (London, Maggs Bros.), 1923-27.

£12 5s

An interesting and exhaustive Bibliography of Spanish and Latin-American works, since the invention of printing until the present day, with the market value of each work.

This work aims at facilitating the researches of the Bibliophile, the Librarian and the professional Bookseller, and is the essence of sixteen years of patient study and experience, presented concisely in a simple and eminently useful manner. The author claims that it is an inventory of Hispanic-American Literature. "For example, the catalogues of Salva and Ticknor, the library of Gallardo, and the best-known works of this kind, only give an account of the works which they possess or have seen; but no publication exists in which we can see, arranged in chronological order, all the editions of our most celebrated writers."

We are the sole agents for the above Bibliography for Great Britain, the British Empire, and the U.S.A.

THE FIRST MONOGRAPH ON WILLIAM PICKERING.

- 486 [PICKERING (William).] William Pickering publisher. An Essay and a Bibliography by Geoffrey Keynes, F.R.C.S., with facsimiles of title-pages.

4to, cloth. London, 1924.

£2 2s

Edition limited to 350 copies.

The fame of William Pickering (1796-1856) as a designer and producer of books has long been known to a small circle of collectors, but the extent of his influence on the history of the book trade in England, has not been fully appreciated. The above monograph by Mr. Geoffrey Keynes, F.R.C.S., provides material for a fairer judgment. In an introductory essay the author traces the main events in Pickering's life, and gives a connected account of his activities as a publisher and bookseller. The essay is supplemented by a hand list describing Pickering's chief publications of literary or typographical interest. Lastly, his skill as a book designer is displayed in reproductions of thirty of his most effective title-pages.

Salva, No. 2491. Palau's Manual, Vol. VI., p. 316.
An extremely interesting bibliography of Spanish rabbinical literature; the first volume containing copious notes, and biographical accounts of the Spanish rabbinical writers from the earliest times to the author's own day.
The second volume deals with Christian Spanish writers up to the end of the thirteenth century.
The work is valuable for its references to codices and unpublished books and poems.
The author was a Spanish Christian rabbinic scholar (1739 to circa 1795), who was probably of Jewish descent. As librarian to the King of Spain, he had access to the rich store of literary treasures at the Escorial, and dedicated his work—which he describes, in the dedication to the King of Spain, as "a Rabbinical Bibliography which the nation lacked."

4to, cloth. Manchester, 1931.

£1 1s

The collection dealt with is of considerable importance, by reason of the extreme rarity of a number of the works which find a place in it.

It describes 154 items. Of these 132 formed part of the famous Althorp Library, acquired by Mrs. Rylands in 1892, which was built up by the second Earl Spencer in the first half of last century. The remaining 22 have been acquired by purchase from time to time as the opportunity has occurred.

Of the books printed by William Caxton the collection numbers 62. Of these, if we include the "Blanchardyn and Eglantine," of which only a single leaf in the British Museum and another in Melbourne are otherwise known, six are known only from the copies described, and of three others only one other copy has survived.

Of books printed by Caxton's successor, Wynkyn de Worde, there are 36, of which six are only known from the Rylands copy. Of the productions of the press of Richard Pynson there are 22 examples, of which eight are the only copies recorded. Of the Oxford press there are 12 items, while William de Machlinia and the unidentified schoolmaster printer of St. Albans are also well represented.

- 547 SCHNEIDER (G.). Handbuch der Bibliographie.
Fourth Edition.
8vo, cloth. Leipzig, 1930. £1 2s

This fourth edition presents the work for the first time in a new and enlarged form. The introductory part of the theory of bibliography has been reduced to a chapter of 35 pages dealing with the "History of Bibliography," while the bibliographical records have been increased by 218 pages, making a total of 496 pages containing some 5,000 items. Bibliographies on special subjects are for the present still excluded, except where they replace or supplement general indices. The majority of the additions is made up of bibliographical works published since 1923, but there are also many works of older date, which it has seemed desirable to put on record. With regard to this the author owes much to suggestions made by reviewers and the informations given by colleagues in almost all countries, Russia, the Balkans, and the U.S.A. inclusive. The result is a book which in point of completeness and practical value sets a standard not easily to be surpassed. Needless to say, that owing to this new publication all the three preceding editions are out-of-date.

The general get-up of the book has also been improved. The size is the same as that of the earlier editions, but the paper is now free from wood-pulp. The book is printed in Roman type.

Contents:—Preface. I. History of bibliography. II. Bibliographies of bibliographies. III. General international bibliographies. IV. Lists of bibliophilic literature. V. Lists of incunables. VI. Lists of good and bad books. VII. General catalogues. VIII. Periodicals of general literature. IX. General encyclopaedias. X. General national bibliographies. XI. Bibliography of periodical publications. XII. Bibliography of papers published by societies. XIII. Lists of publications issued by academies and schools. XIV. Bibliography of official and private publications. XV. Bibliography of the disguised literature. XVI. Biographies. Additions and corrections. Index of titles. Index of subjects.

The aim of the present publication is to present the whole of fifteenth century book illustrations reproduced in black and white in the full size of the originals.

The general arrangement is by countries, and the volumes contain the presses of the several towns in chronological order of their coming into existence, beginning with the Bamberg press of Albrecht Pfister, who was the first fifteenth century printer to use illustrations in his books. The whole series will be concluded by two index volumes of which one will register the entire fifteenth century book production from the iconographical point of view.

In the reproduction of the illustrations greatest care has been taken to secure the best uncoloured originals. From the ninth volume onwards the work is printed on the same paper as is used for the Complete Catalogue of all known incunabula.

The plates of each volume are preceded by an introductory text arranged on the same strictly chronological system as the illustrations themselves. A short notice regarding the printer is followed by a chronological list of his illustrated productions with a precise iconographic description of the woodcuts, giving the number of the leaves on which they are to be found and quoting the passages of the corresponding text. Thereto is added a tabulated register of the books described giving year, title, size, number of leaves and woodcuts, the respective number of the Hain and Copinger catalogues, and the name of the libraries possessing the book in question. Owing to its arrangement by printers and its purely iconographic standpoint the text alone of the present publication will be a very valuable complement to the Complete Catalogue of all known incunabula.

Apart from its intrinsic value for the investigation of fifteenth century printing, this publication may also claim to become one of the most comprehensive pictorial encyclopaedias ever published on a special branch of the fine arts. The work will therefore be indispensable to the library of any museum, print-department or private collection. No one dealing with mediaeval art can afford to be without it. Moreover, in view of the great variety of subjects illustrated in fifteenth century books, the forthcoming publication will prove a real mine of information for all branches of human science, such as history of literature and civilisation in general, medicine, pharmacology, botany, zoology, astrology, geography, heraldry, costume, etc.

Vol. I: Der Pfaffe Amis Von Dem Stricker (An illustrated incunable from the press of Johann Prüss, Strassburg, 1483). Facsimile reprint with an introductory text by Karl Heliand.

48 collotype plates including 13 coloured woodcuts and numerous initial letters.

Large 8vo, half vellum. Munich, 1911.

£1 15s

The "Pfaffe Amis," a collection of farces compiled early in the 13th century by one "von dem Stricker," ranks among the most popular poems of the Middle Ages. This knavish clergyman, who makes a fool of many a nobleman, may justly be considered the predecessor of the world-famed Till Eulenspiegel. In spite of the great popularity drolleries of this kind enjoyed among the lower classes in mediaeval times, the booklet was but once printed in the fifteenth century, and besides the two copies preserved in the Bavarian State Library there is no other copy known to exist.

Vol. II: Gedruckte Schützenbriefe des 15. Jahrhunderts (Printed fifteenth century broadsides concerning German shooting-matches). A collection of facsimile reprints edited by E. Freys.

35 plates.

Folio, half vellum. Munich, 1912.

£2 10s

The custom of sending out official letters of invitation to shooting-matches to be held in German towns is a very old one and goes back to the last half of the 14th century. The present publication gives in excellent reproduction and in full size of the originals some printed fifteenth century broadsides relating to such popular meetings. Each piece contains besides other interesting details the exact order which was to be observed in the course of the rifle-match in question. In view of the utmost rarity fifteenth century broadsides may boast of, the documents here reproduced will be of the greatest interest not only for the student of German civilisation and language at the close of the Middle Ages, but also as a collection of most valuable specimens of early German typography. All the pieces dealt with are very well preserved, so that the mediaeval text may be read without any difficulty.

Volume I ("Incunables"), 4to, boards, cloth back.

London (Maggs Bros.), 1927.

£4 4s

Edition limited to 250 numbered copies only.

Volume II. of this work, richly illustrated, comprising the books on the same subject printed after the year 1500 and before the year 1601, is in the press.

This anthology of the Thirst of Man among all nations and in all times is a work of considerable interest and value to all students of social history, folk-lore and civilization.

The author is not content to give a list of books which deal with viticulture, the art of wine-making, and drinking customs: he also gives much information of great bibliographical value, as well as some most interesting data about the authors and the contents of their books.

But Mr. Simon goes much farther: he has included in this first volume, which deals entirely with Incunabula, a great number of rare books, mostly from his own collection, which nobody would have expected to find in such an anthology, books such as Gutenberg's Bible, the works of Homer and Horace, Chaucer and Gower, Lucan and Juvenal, Ovid and Pliny, Seneca and Cicero, Livy, Virgil and others. And from all such books the author has distilled the wine they contained. He explains what wines were the Yayin, Schechar, Tirosh, Ahsis, Khemer, Khomets, Messech, Shevahrim, of the Bible and what were the wines of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, the Candye, Claret, Claree, Grenache, Hippocras, Hydromel, Lepé, Malvoisie, Must, Oxymel, Piements, Romaney, Ribolle and Vernage.

This first volume is illustrated with 60 facsimile reproductions of front pages, woodcuts and other examples of early typographic art, all from books in the author's collection.

There are three very useful indexes which will be greatly appreciated by Collectors, Librarians and Booksellers; an alphabetical index of authors' names, a chronological index of dates of publication, and an index of the various Presses.

Volume I. will be followed shortly by Volume II. (richly illustrated) from contemporary woodcuts, comprising the books on the same subject printed after the year 1500 and before the year 1601.

- 610 [
- TORY
- (Geoffroy).] Champ Fleury, translated into English and anno-

- tated by George B. Ives. With 130 illustrations.

Royal 8vo, half bound.

New York (privately printed for the Grolier Club), 1927.

£50

It is doubtful whether any other publication of the Grolier Club has been more carefully planned or more beautifully produced than this.

The translation and preparation of the text have been done by George B. Ives, the well-known editor and translator of Montaigne's Essays and of Bernard's Life of Tory. The book has been designed, and seen through the press of William Edwin Rudge, by Bruce Rogers.

The volume is a tall quarto (8½ x 12½ inches) of 230 pages, printed from the Centaur type designed by Mr. Rogers. The edition consists of three hundred and ninety copies on American woven rag paper. It is bound in half parchment, lettered in gold, the sides covered with a paper in a diaper pattern of alternating fleurs-de-lys and thistles, designed for the book by Mr. Rogers. The general arrangement of the type pages follows that of the original edition of 1529, but no attempt has been made to reproduce Tory's typography exactly. Tory's marginal notations have been replaced in this edition by short explanatory notes by Mr. Ives, who has also contributed sixteen pages of commentary, which are printed at the end of the volume. Tory's own "Tables" at the beginning of the book serve as an Index, the entries having been translated and numbered to accord with the pagination of the present edition.

In a memorandum about the illustrations and diagrams, of which there are one hundred and thirty, Mr. Rogers says:—"Instead of copying mechanically the imperfections due to over-inking and bad printing, which in the first edition must have caused Tory many a sigh of dissatisfaction, I have tried to reproduce the originals more accurately by re-drawing them over photographic enlargements. The results, while not strictly facsimiles, more nearly approximate the original designs as they were meant to appear, and as many of them did appear in the better-printed edition of 1549."

- 663 ADLER (Elkan Nathan). Catalogue of Hebrew Manuscripts in the Collection of E. N. Alder. With facsimiles, included in 105 illustrations.

8vo, cloth. Cambridge, 1921.

£3 3s

This remarkable collection contains over 4,200 Hebrew MSS., the earliest of which are dated 640 and 832; there are volumes of dated fragments for every century thereafter, the eleventh and twelfth being the most bulky. There is an autograph Response of Maimonides, some chapters of the Hebrew Ecclesiasticus, Gaonica, Saadyana, and historical matter of the first importance.

Most of the items were collected in the course of travels in Egypt, Palestine (including Jerusalem and Damascus), Corfu, Morocco, Algeria, Persia, Central Asia, Turkey, the Balkans, Spain, Portugal, Russia, and North and South America, from the year 1888; whilst some of the manuscripts were inherited from the collector's father and brother, two of Britain's Chief Rabbis.

Among the literary curiosities, connected with Anglo-Jewish history, are a document between Richemus de Gobert and John de Aldefelde (Oldfield) about the Monastery of St. Mary and the Holy Angels—which was unearthed, along with numerous other fragments, in the Geniza, "that famous lumber-room of the ancient Synagogue of Old Cairo"; Manuscripts written by the Da Costa Athias, who founded the Hebrew Collection at the British Museum; Hebrew Odes and Elegies for English Monarchs and Princes, etc.

The facsimiles given in the Catalogue will be of use to other collectors and students, fragments of important lost works, such as the Saadya, being given in order to assist others in their identification, as the treasures of the Geniza are scattered among many great libraries, especially in Cambridge, Oxford, and the British Museum. It should be mentioned that some of the MSS., although written in Hebrew characters are not in the Hebrew language, but in Greek, Persian, German, etc. There are three indices: Subjects, Names, and a Geographical Index.

The significance of the Islamic book in its many aspects, calligraphy, miniatures, illumination, ornamentation, binding and so forth has long ago been established. It must be recognised nevertheless that publications dealing with this subject have been either general works on Islamic art, or else when they have dealt with the Islamic book the authors have been compelled to omit the early period before the thirteenth century on account of the small amount of material at their disposal. This difficulty was marked particularly in the case of Islamic illumination because the earliest known miniatures can rarely be dated earlier than the thirteenth century.

Examples of illumination of an earlier period have been brought to light only comparatively recently by discoveries of papyri in Egypt. It has been the special endeavour of Professor A. Grobmann in the University of Prague, as it were, to rediscover them here and to bring them together in a definite synthesis.

Part I. of the present publication embraces therefore the early period from the twelfth to thirteenth century and deals with miniatures, pen-drawings, book-ornamentation, single leaf prints and bindings. Sir Thomas W. Arnold has dealt with the later period from the thirteenth to the eighteenth century.

The first part, divided into three chapters, provides the basis necessary for the appreciation of the evolution of the art of book decoration and bookbinding. The second part, forming seven chapters, constitutes a history of book-illumination beginning with the remnants of Persian painting through the Mogul and Timurid period up to the work of Bihzad and his school and to Rizah Abbasi and the decay of Persian painting.

The last three chapters deal with Islamic painting in India and Turkey as well as with the craft of book-making in recent times.

"The Islamic Book" therefore constitutes the first exhaustive work on the art of the Islamic book throughout twelve centuries and it gives the subject the historic background from which the craft emanated. The wealth of documentary sources, a great part of which is published here for the first time, adds enormously to the value of the text which is supported by a magnificent set of plates of which many are also published for the first time. The very greatest care has been bestowed upon the reproductions and ten plates are printed in colour to convey the splendour of the originals.

Every library and museum, every collector and every student of Islamic painting and illumination and of the art of the book in general, will find this book a necessary asset. It will hardly be possible to find another book which deals so exhaustively with the subject and in a manner so readily intelligible. The plates make this work even more indispensable as they bring together valuable and scattered material of which an appreciable portion is published for the first time in this limited and numbered edition.

- 674 [AUSTRIA.] Beschreibendes Verzeichnis der Illuminierten Handschriften in Oesterreich. (A descriptive catalogue of the illuminated manuscripts preserved in Austria).

Edited by F. Wickhoff, continued by M. Dvorák and H. J. Hermann.

With numerous plates and illustrations.

Folio, cloth. Leipzig, 1905-1930.

This work is intended to give, in a series of folio volumes, the detailed description of the whole of illuminated manuscripts preserved in Austria. Besides bibliographical data, much stress is laid on the analysis and appreciation of the codices from the artistic and historical points of view. In the majority of cases the manuscripts have been ascertained as to date and place of origin. The large amount of reproductions—the 13 volumes hitherto published contain 1720 text illustrations and 309 plates—make this publication a standard work on the art of mediaeval book painting. Indeed, there is hardly any style or school which is not abundantly illustrated in the work, and this fact is not to be wondered at when we consider the mass of beautifully executed manuscripts the public and monastic libraries of the once Austrian Empire can boast of. The present publication will thus be a material help for anybody who has, by way of comparison, to determine the style, date, and origin of manuscripts, or who deals with the palaeography and book ornamentation in general. The clear arrangement of the matter together with copious indices make the work particularly easy for consultation.

The illustrations in the text represent as a rule initial letters, decorative pages with passages of the text, and miniatures. Of the latter the most important and beautiful specimens are reproduced on the plates in original size and colouring.

Out of the large number of manuscript depositaries existing in Steiermark only two are treated in this volume: Admont and Vorau.

The Benedictine convent of Admont was founded in 1074 and its library contains nowadays 96,500 volumes, 1,100 of which are manuscripts. The library of the Augustine canons at Vorau is also rich in manuscripts, part of which go back to the tenth century.

In the present volume Paul Buberl describes 221 different manuscripts. One hundred and seventy-seven are of Austrian, respectively German origin, 29 came from Italy, 13 from France, and two are Arabic manuscripts. Chronologically, two manuscripts belong to the tenth century, five to the eleventh, 123 to the twelfth, 26 to the thirteenth, 36 to the fourteenth, 23 to the fifteenth, and six to the sixteenth respectively seventeenth century, the bulk of the manuscripts thus covering the Romanesque and Gothic periods.

The text is remarkable for exhibiting some new results which will be of general importance for our knowledge of manuscripts: Here we find for the first time extensive descriptions of the miniatures contained in the three celebrated Admont codices, the great Bible, the Paduan missal, and the antiphonary of Wyschehrad. Furthermore there have been traced groups of illuminators or miniature schools which hitherto were little known or had entirely escaped attention, such as the school of Admont illuminators of the twelfth century, the school of Vorau and Salzburg in the thirteenth century, and the Vorau school of the fifteenth century.

Volume V: Die Illuminierten Handschriften der Rossiana in Wien-Lainz
[now in the Vatican Library.]

Described by H. Tietze.

XV, 208 pages with 187 illustrations in the text and 12 collotype plates. 1911. £6

The Bibliotheca Rossiana takes its name from its founder, the Italian Count Gian Francesco de Rossi (d. 1854), who was one of the most distinguished bibliophiles of the 19th century. Count Rossi's library contained about 2,500 incunabula and 1,203 manuscripts, the greater part of the latter having once been in possession of the Cardinal Capranica (1400 to 1458). No wonder that most of the manuscripts described in the volume are of Italian provenance. There are in all 338 Italian illuminated manuscripts that pass in review, in addition to 34 German, 39 French, nine Flemish, four oriental, two byzantine and one English manuscript. As to time of execution, 11 manuscripts date from the eleventh century, eight from the twelfth, 23 from the thirteenth, 91 from the fourteenth, 234 from the fifteenth, 28 from the sixteenth, and 13 from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The majority of the miniatures are executed in the style of the early Italian Renaissance art.

Many manuscripts are of outstanding importance. We meet with a missal executed in the 11th century at Tegernsee and closely related in style to the famous Cracow evangeliary of Henry IV. There are Ulrich Schreier's prayer-book of the year 1458, a Franciscan missal of 1469 adorned with an early portrait of Matthias Corvinus, a 13th century commentary of the Psalter of middle French origin, and an interesting Sarum missal of the first quarter of the 15th century. Among the numerous French and Flemish livres d'heures we note the most remarkable prayer-book from Bourges, executed about 1480 and nearly akin to the Munich prayer-book of Jaques Coeur. Needless to say that Italian miniature art is represented in all its various degrees of development, the most magnificent achievements being an Upper Italian Bible of the year 1100, a thirteenth century Bible showing traces of

Byzantine influence, and some Hebrew manuscripts of the same period. Numerous are also the Quattrocento codices showing typical specimens of the style of artists such as Attavante, Gherardo, Giraldo, Boccardino, and Bordone. A Hebrew manuscript from Mantua, executed in 1436, exhibits Pisanello's workmanship. About the middle of the 15th century the humanistic manuscript makes its appearance, one of the finest works of this kind being a musical codex, executed in 1460 in the eastern region of Upper Italy.

After the death of its owner the Rossiana collection passed into the possession of the Jesuit library at Rome. In 1877 it came to Vienna, and from thence, in 1895, to the Lainz library. Of late, the majority of the Italian manuscripts have been transferred to the Vatican library. For this reason the present volume, giving the description for Rossi's collection in its entirety, will prove of particular value.

Volume VI. Die Illuinierten Handschriften in Dalmatien.

Described by H. Folnesics.

VIII, 175 pages with 150 illustrations in the text and 4 plates in collotype and heliogravure. 1916. £4

This volume contains manuscripts preserved in 12 cities of the once Austrian province of Dalmatia: Arbe, Archangelsk, Campora, Castelnuovo, Cattaro, Lesina, Paludi, Ragusa (State Archives, Dominican and Franciscan convent), Sebenico, Spalato (cathedral and Franciscan convent), Thau, and Zara.

In all 78 manuscripts are described, of which 6 are of the eleventh century, 3 of the twelfth, 12 of the thirteenth, 21 of the fourteenth, 23 of the fifteenth, 6 of the sixteenth, and 7 of the seventeenth century, the majority of the miniatures thus belonging to the Gothic period.

The origin of the manuscripts has not always been determined with certainty. Most of them have been introduced from Italy. Up to the thirteenth century Dalmatian art was strongly influenced by that of South Italy, in the fourteenth century the Bolognese school was prevalent, while, a century later, the influence of Venetian art made itself felt. Besides, traces of Slavonic art are permanently to be observed.

Some of the manuscripts described are of particular interest for the history of bookbinding. There are nine codices (12th to 15th century), the covers of which are mounted with wrought silver plates. Front and back covers of five bindings, representing Christ and some Saints, are reproduced.

Volume VII: Die Illuinierten Handschriften im Osterreichischen Küstenlande in Istrien und in der Stadt Triest.

Described by H. Folnesics.

This volume is a complement to Vol. VI. and contains the manuscripts preserved in 13 cities of the former Austrian provinces: Aquileja, Buie, Capodistria, Dignano, Duino, Gorizia, Grado, Grignana, Ossero, Parenzo, Pirano, Verbanico, and Trieste.

Out of the 78 manuscripts described one each is of the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth and eighteenth century; 13 belong to the thirteenth or fourteenth century, 14 to the fourteenth, and 41 to the fifteenth century. Four manuscripts were executed in the sixteenth, 2 in the seventeenth century.

The most ancient manuscripts are closely connected with Aquileja as the most remarkable centre of early Christian civilization. Later on these manuscripts were transferred to Udine and Cividale. Owing to the geographical limitation of the work only the codices that came to Gorizia, are described. Trieste is represented by a highly interesting codex of statutes of the year 1350. Among the fifteenth century antiphonaries and choir books stands out a magnificent manuscript of the castle of Duino which was destroyed during the war. The Bibliotheca Civica of Trieste possesses a series of important Florentine manuscripts associated with the name of Pope Pius II (Aeneas Sylvius). In Ossero and Cherso there is a group of slavonic codices, written in glagolitic characters.

Volume VIII: Die Illuinierten Handschriften der Nationalbibliothek in Wien.

First Part: Die frühmittelalterlichen Handschriften des Abendlandes (European manuscripts of the early Middle Ages). Described by H. J. Hermann.

XII, 240 pages with 416 illustrations in the text and 36 plates (2 in colour). 1923. £7

This volume forms the first part of a new series which is intended to cover the description of the whole of the manuscript treasures preserved in the National Library of Vienna. As it is well known, the Viennese State Library is extraordinarily rich in beautifully illuminated manuscript work, rivalling in this respect even the Vaticana at Rome and the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris. The outstanding feature of the library is a great number of magnificent codices executed from the 13th to the 16th century, yet early mediaeval art is likewise represented by monuments of great importance, such as the Viennese Genesis and the Dioscorides codex. There are furthermore some remarkable twelfth century manuscripts from the schools of Salzburg and Mondsee.

The editing of this enormous material has been entrusted to Professor H. J. Hermann, Director of the Kunsthistorisches Museum at Vienna.

The present first part describes three copies made from late antique manuscripts, an early Christian codex, 5 manuscripts of the pre-carolingian period (2 each of Italian and Merovingian, 1 of South English origin), 57 carolingian manuscripts (8 West-Frankish, 2 Upper-Italian and 47 German, chiefly from the South-West of Germany and Salzburg), and 14 manuscripts of the tenth century, amongst which are 8 of German and 6 of Italian workmanship. In all there are 80 illuminated manuscripts that pass in review. Of these 9 are executed prior to the year 800 (pre-carolingian period), 57 date from the end of the eighth and of the ninth century, 14 belong to the tenth century. All miniatures show traces of byzantine influence.

As to place of origin, 14 manuscripts have come from Italy, 10 from France, 1 from England, and 55 from Germany.

The volume is particularly rich in illustrations both in the text and on plates (collotype or heliogravure). Reproduced in colour collotype is the portrait of the evangelist Matthew from the Gutbrecht evangeliary (South English, about 770), and the crucifixion from Otfried von Weissenburg's celebrated evangeliary of 868. The monochrome plates represent amongst others the calendar pictures of the Chronographus (A.D. 354), medical illustrations of the sixth century including numerous text illustrations relating to pharmacy and botany, and decorative pages of the Eusebius canon (6th century). The finest miniature work of the Gutbrecht Psalter is reproduced on 12 plates, and of the Psalterium Aureum of Charlemagne two pages are given in heliogravure. There are furthermore 4 decorative pages of a ninth century sacramentary of northern French origin, 2 others of a St. Gall sacramentary of the same period, portraits of the evangelist St. Matthew, of Johannes Chrysostomus and of St. Hieronymus, miniatures of the months and astronomical configurations taken from Carolingian manuscripts, and a fine initial page from the Epistles of St. Paul, executed in all probability in St. Gall at the beginning of the tenth century.

Second Part: Die deutschen romanischen Handschriften (German manuscripts of the Romanesque period). Described by H. J. Hermann.

VIII, 467 pages with 236 illustrations in the text and 44 plates (one in colour). 1926. £9

This second part of the illuminated manuscripts preserved in the National Library of Vienna describes 27 German manuscripts of the eleventh century, 27 German, 133 Austrian and 1 Bohemian manuscript of the twelfth century, 7 manuscripts executed in Carniola about the same time, and 14 German and 53 Austrian manuscripts of the first half of the 13th century. Of the 68 German manuscripts a good deal come from the region of Augsburg, Basle, Bamberg, Regensburg, Weltenburg, Frankenthal, Reichenau, Mainz, Bonn, and Strassburg. The Bohemian manuscript was executed at Hradisch near Olmütz, and the 6 Carniolian codices in the monastery of Sittich. Of the 133 Austrian manuscripts of the 12th century 33 are of Salzburg origin, 14 come from Mondsee, 12 from Lower Austria (Abbey of Göttweig, St. Pölten, Heiligenkreuz), and 73 from various regions of the Austrian Republic. As regards the location of the thirteenth century manuscripts, we find besides the above named places the Cistercian abbey of Reun as birth-place of some manuscripts.

The colour plate reproduces a Reichenau miniature of 1025 representing St. Ulric between the abbots of Reichenau and Augsburg. The monochrome plates give amongst others a canon picture from a Mondsee missal of 1070, a portrait of Pliny from a St. Blasius manuscript, constellations from a Bavarian codex executed in the abbey of Prüfening near Regensburg about the year 1190, and representations from the life of Christ contained in a Siegburg Psalterium of 1184. The Liutold evangeliary from Mondsee, one of the most important achievements of Austrian miniature art of the twelfth century, is reproduced by 16 full-page illustrations. We find furthermore plates reproducing pen-drawings from a German paraphrase of the Book of Genesis, of a world-map and a wind-table of the thirteenth century, and, at least, some most interesting specimen pages taken from Reuner's "Pattern book," a manuscript of Styrian workmanship (13th century).

Many initial letters and specimens of the script are reproduced in the text illustrations so that the volume affords also much important material for the palaeography of the Romanesque period.

Third Part: Die romanischen Handschriften des Abendlandes mit Ausnahme der deutschen Handschriften (European manuscripts of the Romanesque period with the exception of the German manuscripts). Described by H. J. Hermann.

The present third part contains the description of 90 non-German manuscripts of the Romanesque period preserved in the National Library of Vienna. Of these 7 belong to the eleventh, 48 to the twelfth, 32 to the thirteenth, and 3 to the fourteenth century. Thirty-two manuscripts are of French origin, 15 are English, 41 Italian, one thirteenth century manuscript was probably executed in Iceland, another in Spain. Of the French manuscripts one dates from the eleventh century, and so do six Italian manuscripts, the rest being of a later date.

The two plates represent a canon page from the Expositio by Zacharias Chrysopolitanus (France, 13th century), and the initial letter B of an English twelfth century Psalter.

Fourth Part: Die byzantinischen Handschriften (The Byzantine manuscripts).

To appear in 1932.

Fifth Part: Die italienischen Handschriften des Duecento und Trecento (The Italian manuscripts of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries). Described by H. J. Hermann.

I: Till the middle of the 14th century.

VI, 112 pages. With 44 collotype plates (2 in colour). 1928. £5

The fifth part will be sub-divided into three sections and will cover the Italian manuscripts of the Duecento and Trecento so far as they are preserved in the National Library of Vienna. The present first section reaches up to the middle of the fourteenth century and contains the description of 70 manuscripts, of which 15 date from the thirteenth, 55 from the first half of the fourteenth century. Seven manuscripts have been executed in Lower Italy, 63 in Upper Italy; Venice is represented by 9, Bologna by 40 manuscripts.

In this volume the entire illustrative material has been arranged on plates. There are 44 plates with 85 illustrations showing decorative and historiated initials, 13 miniatures, 13 allegorical and other representations in pen drawing, drawings of surgical instruments, and three charts by Petrus Vesconte de Janua. These latter have been executed in Venice about the year 1318 and represent the Black Sea, the Adriatic, and an astronomical-chronological configuration.

Reproduced in colour collotype are an initial letter I taken from a Latin Bible of Bolognese workmanship (about 1300) and the Arbor affinitatis contained in a Bolognese manuscript of the Decretals (about 1340).

II: Upper Italian manuscripts of the second half of the XIVth century.

IV, 118 pages. With 51 collotype plates of which 2 are in colour. 1929. £5 15s

This second part of the Italian Duecento and Trecento manuscripts contains the description of 47 codices, which have all been executed in Upper Italy between the years 1350 and 1400. Twenty-eight of these manuscripts have been written at Bologna, 12 in the eastern regions of Upper Italy, and 7 in the western ones.

The 51 collotype plates contain 82 illustrations: 42 miniatures, 17 opening pages, of which six each are decorated with miniatures or historiated initials, 4 initials, 15 historiated initials, 3 pen-drawings, and 1 decorative border-piece. Eight illustrations are taken from a Bolognese "Decretum Gratiani," and 16 from a French codex containing the "Roman de Troie" by Benoit de Sainte-More. This latter manuscript was written about 1355 at or near Bologna and illuminated by a remarkable Italian miniaturist.

The two colour collotype plates reproduce the Madonna with Angels, an excellent miniature to be found in Pope Clement's V. Decretals (Bologna, ca 1360) and the Arbor Affinitatis of the Decretals by Boniface VIII., a manuscript illuminated about 1355 by the well-known Niccolò di Giacomo da Bologna.

III: Neapolitan and Tuscan manuscripts of the second half of the XIVth century.

IV, 134 pages. With 50 collotype plates (2 in colour).
1930.

£6 10s

This is the concluding volume of the Italian Dugento and Trecento manuscripts and comprehends the description of three Neapolitan and one Tuscan codex. The first work is a Liber Precum illuminated by excellent artists after a French model for Queen Jane I. of Naples (between 1346 and 1362). Then comes a Biblia Sacra, containing 184 miniatures, also executed by a master of the Sieno-Neapolitan school. The third Neapolitan manuscript is a Chronica de gestis Hungarorum, written in 1358 at the court of King Lewis of Hungary and illuminated by an Italian artist. The Tuscan manuscript contains a Latin history of the monastic orders and was executed about 1400 in a Benedictine monastery. This volume contains the general indices to Vol. 1—3, including a very detailed iconographic register.

Sixth Part: Die Handschriften und Inkunabeln der ital. Renaissance.

Vienna." It reproduces in excellent facsimile pages of script and ornamentation taken from codices particularly characteristic of the development of palaeography.

The first portfolio begins with 14 fragments from the "De Trinitate" by Hilarius Pictaviensis and one page of the treatise "Contra Arianos," both being papyrus manuscripts of the middle of the sixth century.

Then follow 10 pages of Charlemagne's "Psalterium Aureum," one of the earliest examples of the perfect Caroline minuscule, written in gold letters on vellum and richly adorned with initials and other ornaments.

This manuscript is thought to have been executed by the calligrapher Dagulf at the court school of Aix-la-Chapelle between the years 783 and 795. It is one of the most splendid achievements of the early Carolingian book art and contains 161 leaves in octavo size.

The second portfolio shows on the first 12 plates some specimens taken from a mixed manuscript of the Italian monastery of Bobbio (Cod. 16). This codex contains on 159 leaves the text of three different works, of which two are for the most part described.

These works belong to the patristic and grammatical literature, their text being taken from classic writers, the Bible and apocryphal writings. The reproduction is so clear that even the effaced script is very well legible.

The second manuscript of this portfolio is the Liber Sacramentorum of Pope Gregory the Great, a fragment of 8 vellum leaves written in gold letters (Carolingian minuscule). This manuscript was probably written in the convent of Bobbio and finished about 860 in the monastery of St.-Vaast near Arras at the instance of Charles the Bald.

The text is surrounded by border-pieces ornamented in the Irish-Anglo-Saxon style, and the same is the case with the initial letters. The manuscript denotes the high degree of perfection book illumination in Northern France had reached about the middle of the ninth century.

THE FAMOUS ILLUMINATED BIBLE OF THE HOUSE OF ALBA.

- 681 BIBLIA (antiguo Testamento) traducida del Hebreo al Castellano por Rabi Mose Arragel de Guadalfajara (1422-1433?) y publicada por el Duque de Berwick y Alba.

With 290 coloured illustrations, 29 initial letters of the Books, with borders, and five full-page illustrations, all reproduced in gold and colours.

2 vols., folio, leather, bound in the Hispano-Moresque style, being a faithful reproduction of the binding of the Toledan Missal shown in the Biblioteca Nacional. Madrid, Privately printed, 1920. £34

This Bible, consisting of the Old Testament translated from the Hebrew into Spanish, and known as the Bible of the House of Alba, is now published for the first time. The work of translation was undertaken in 1422 at the request of Don Luis Guzman, Lord of Agaba and Grand Master of the Military Order of Calatrava, by the learned Rabbi Moses Arragel of Guadalfajara. For many years the Manuscript was in the keeping of the Inquisition, who in 1620 presented it to that powerful Minister of Philip IV., the Conde Duque de Olivares, as a token of gratitude for the favours they had received from his father, the Spanish Ambassador in Rome. Finally, it came into the possession of the Family of Alba in 1688.

We are the sole agents for the sale of the Duke of Alba's Bible (outside Spain).

- 727 DOMINGUEZ BORDONA (J.). Spanish Illumination.
With 160 collotype plates of illuminated miniatures.
2 vols., folio, half leather. Paris, 1930. £9 9s

No branch of art-history stands in greater need of a good general treatise than Spanish Illumination. Hitherto the only works on the subject have been detailed monographs, often excellent in their way, and brief chapters in the more comprehensive works of reference. No student is better qualified than Dr. J. Dominguez Bordona to trace the history of illumination in mediaeval Spain.

He was the author of the Catalogue of the Exhibition of Painted Manuscripts which had so great a success at Madrid in 1924 (No. 726 of this catalogue), and he has earned a reputation in the learned world by his excellent work on Italian miniatures in Spanish libraries.

Illuminated Spanish manuscripts of notable artistic quality are neither numerous nor well known, and the origin of the most ancient of all—the Ashburnham Pentateuch—is still problematical.

To the Mozarabic period belongs the Bibles of La Cava, Toledo and Leon, and the series of manuscripts of the Commentary of Beatus on the Apocalypse (Xth and XIth centuries), of which the most remarkable are those in Madrid and Paris and in the Pierpont Morgan Collection.

Romanesque miniature in Catalonia is represented by the Bible of Ripoll in the Vatican and the Bible of Roda (the so-called Noailles Bible) in Paris.

In the XIIth century French influence begins to appear: in the Avila Bible, for example, and in several manuscripts of Beatus, in Madrid, London (the Silos MS.), at Turin, at Manchester, and finally in the Libro de los Testamentos in the Cathedral of Oviedo. In the XIIIth century French influence persists and we begin to find manuscripts executed for the kings of Castile.

A hundred years later the Castilian school is in full flower and develops parallel to the local Catalan school; this is the period of the Cronica Troyana and of the Codice de la Coronacion—both at the Escorial—and of the splendid Pontificale of the Biblioteca Colombina at Seville. Superb manuscripts of the XVth century are to be found in the collections of the great Spanish noble houses; the most celebrated of these is doubtless the Alba Bible. About this time Italian influence becomes a considerable factor in the decoration of manuscripts.

The volumes by J. Dominguez Bordona with their admirable reproductions form the latest addition to the Pantheon series, where they take their place beside the already famous works of Professor A. Goldschmidt on Carolingian and Ottonian miniatures.

who had the good fortune to discover one of the leaves, until then unknown, of the famous Book of Hours painted in the fifteenth century by Jean Foucquet for Maître Etienne Chevalier, of which the majority of pages, formerly purchased by the Duc d'Aumale, are the admiration of the visitors to the Condé Museum at Chantilly."

The leaf which has now been recovered represents Saint Michael conquering the devil, and is the subject of an extremely interesting essay by the well-known miniature expert, Comte Paul Durrieu. In this book he gives an outline of the history of fifteenth-century miniature painting in general and of the life and work of Foucquet in particular.

Jean Foucquet was a native of Tours and was "painter and illuminator" to Louis XI. His most celebrated work was the "Book of Hours," in which the miniatures constitute a series of pure chefs d'œuvre, to which we of to-day render the homage of our admiration.

We believe that Etienne Chevalier's Livre d'Heures remained in his family until the death of his last descendant in the male line, Nicolas Chevalier, Baron de Crissé, who died in 1630. The erudite Gaignères, who died in 1715, recognised it as the original book.

But a day came towards the dawn of the eighteenth century when the volume fell into the hands of a vandal. He divided up the book, detached each page which was ornamented with miniatures, and threw away the remainder of the book, which may have been destroyed, but whose existence is, at any rate, entirely unknown.

In order to make these miniatures appear as independent paintings, the vandal carefully covered some of the words of the text which appeared on the same page as the miniature with ornamental borders cut from other miniatures of a much later period, the eighteenth century.

The author of this book then traces the manner in which the other leaves of the Livre d'Heures were slowly recovered from various countries in Europe. The book has been published by the Société Française for private circulation amongst the members.

Illustrated with 200 plates of illuminated miniatures in collotype.

2 vols., royal 4to, half leather.

Vol. I. is entitled "Carolingian Illumination."

Vol. II. is entitled "Ottonian Illumination."

There are few departments of early mediaeval painting to which so much systematic research has been devoted of late as to early German illumination. Research has progressed to-day to such an extent that a synthesis has now become not only possible but necessary.

In the work announced herewith Adolph Goldschmidt, one of the greatest scholars of early mediaeval art, whose name is inextricably bound up with the history of illumination, presents the synthesis so ardently awaited by all connoisseurs.

His work embraces the period from the inception of the Carolingian period to the beginning of the florescence of the Romanesque style. The author has accordingly divided his material into two separate and self-contained volumes, Carolingian and Ottonian Illumination, containing together 200 full page plates. Each volume is preceded by an introductory text whose pages, packed with matter, show the essential facts concerning the origin and grouping of these works of art and unfold their development as well as providing precious information about the creative efforts of this period.

Detailed information about the individual manuscripts, their date and place of execution, the patrons for whom they were made, bibliographies, etc. have been gathered together in a special catalogue.

The principle of selection was to exclude all those specimens which are of secondary importance in the evolution of the styles of the period and to represent the decisive and artistically significant groups by as many examples as possible.

This method alone enables the reader to perceive the similarity of the various elements which form a group. For instance, the Ada group, the most important and the finest of all the Carolingian schools which has hitherto only been reproduced in occasional and antiquated reproductions, is here represented by all the great manuscripts on 24 plates. Similarly the work of the Echternach illuminators of the 10th and 11th centuries are here reproduced for the first time.

When it is considered that such a synthesis of early German illumination has never yet been attempted on so large a scale, that the text is not merely a summary of previous research, but offers in many instances the record of new contributions by the author, it may be claimed that this publication is the great authoritative work on these early mediaeval illuminated manuscripts.

It offers the amateur an opportunity of enjoying for the first time and acquainting himself with these treasures and it provides the scholar with an indispensable instrument for his study.

With a complete bibliography of the illustrated Haggadah, edited by Bruno Italiener, in collaboration with A. Freimann, A. L. Mayer, and A. Schmidt.

Volume of text: Large 8vo, VII, 296 pages, with 16 monochrome plates, half leather.

Volume of plates: Folio (25 by 35 cm.), full facsimile reproduction of the 116 pages of the manuscript on as many plates in colour colotype, half leather. Edition strictly limited to 350 numbered copies.

2 vols. Leipzig, 1927-1928.

Besides the Bible and the prayer-book no religious work has enjoyed among Jews so great a popularity as the Pessach-Haggadah. The book has come down to us in a large series of manuscripts dating from the eighth century onwards, yet it was not until the thirteenth century that illustrations were added to the text. The subjects represented were first of all historical events which occurred at the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, in remembrance of which day the Pessach Feast was celebrated. In this illustrative work a Spanish group of manuscripts adhered closely to the tradition of the Bible, beginning with the representation of Adam, while the German group took its illustration chiefly from the ritual of the Haggadah.

The Pessach-Haggadah Codex Orientalis 8, preserved in the Landesbibliothek at Darmstadt, has the merit of being the most ancient and valuable of all Haggadah manuscripts of German provenance. August L. Mayer qualifies it the noblest achievement among the whole of the early northern Haggadoth, and from a general point of view the most conspicuous of all. The miniature work contained in this Haggadah is of such an exquisite taste both as regards design and colouring that this codex may justly claim to hold a prominent place among the best monuments of German book painting in the fifteenth century.

The manuscript consists of 58 leaves of vellum. It contains the well-known text of the Haggadah, written in a monumental square script of great regularity, which makes it an easy reading. A Hebrew commentary, written in cursive letters, surrounds the text. The opening words of the sections are given in large letters, and on two pages a number of lines containing benedictory formulae, are picked out in gold. The scribe (sofer) has put his name at the end: Israel ben R. Meir of Heidelberg. To judge from the character of the writing the manuscript dates from the first half of the fourteenth century. The illustrative work is of a later date. August L. Mayer speaks of three different artists, who in all probability belonged to the Upper Rhenish school, and of whom the first did not set about work before 1410.

The codex is adorned with 15 full-page miniatures and 11 illuminated initial letters. Both the full-page pictures and the initial work refer exclusively to the Pessach feast, there being only a loose connection between them and the text. Illustrations of ritual scenes are given within curious tower-like buildings of several stories, each surmounted by a pointed arch, the whole composition thus enabling quite a number of different scenes and persons to be represented on a single page. All the miniature paintings are executed with an extreme minuteness of detail, each small scene being a masterpiece of itself. Distinguished by an extraordinary richness of motives and a fine characterization of the figures, these splendid pages are the best imaginable illustrations of the Pessach feast. Needless to say that the miniatures contain also a large mass of information as to mediaeval civilisation, its costume, manners and customs. In addition, there are some full-page illuminations of a more ornamental character: Marginal border-pieces and decorative initials, made up of scrolls and flowers, and enlivened with human figures and animals. Zoomorphic design plays an important part in the decoration: along with the grotesque animals of the late Gothic period we find realistic representations of the thistle-finch and the redbreast, and other details taken from life. The initial letters themselves are painted in gold and colours and adorned with scrolls, leaves or meander-like ribbons, the whole being set against a ground of a variety of colours and patterns. A particularly fine feature in the decoration are some black bands with scroll work and border-lines in gold, running along the margin. At the end of the manuscript are two full-page miniatures representing the Hunting of Stags and the Well of Youth, the last being the most ancient miniature of this curious and interesting scene.

Considering the richness of decorative design it is no overstatement to say that the Darmstadt Pessach-Haggadah is among the finest Hebrew manuscripts in existence. To convey an adequate idea of the beauty of the work the present facsimile edition gives the whole of the 116 pages faithfully reproduced in original size and colouring by the collotype process. All resources of the modern technique of reproduction have been brought into play to make this edition a full success. Any features usually betraying facsimile work have been carefully removed. Both pages are printed, there are no blank margins, no blank leaves, no accompanying text. The result is a fidelity of reproduction which makes it difficult for the unexperienced eye to distinguish this new Haggadah from the celebrated original manuscript of the fourteenth century. There are only 350 copies printed which, as it has been the case with all facsimile-reproductions on a similar grand style, may soon be locked up in public and private collections.

A separate volume of text in octavo size sets forth the present state of our knowledge about the Haggadah and includes a complete bibliography of the work, enumerating 106 manuscripts of which 20 are fully described.

Scholars of great repute have united in the redaction of this book. Aron Freiman deals with the palaeography of the manuscript, while August L. Mayer gives an appreciation from the art historical point of view. Adolf Schmidt, Director of the Darmstadt Landesbibliothek, gives an interesting account of how the manuscript passed into the possession of the Cologne collector Baron Hüpsch, and from thence, in 1805, into the Darmstadt library. An extensive study of the rite as exhibited in the manuscript is given by Rabbi Bruno Italiener who, in addition, contributes a detailed description of the twenty illustrated Haggadoth known. There are 12 Haggadoth manuscripts executed in Germany, three each of Italian and Spanish, and one each of levantine and French origin, which thus are passed in review. The same scholar provides us furthermore, and that in collaboration with Aron Freimann, with a list of 86 Pessach-Haggadoth which could be ascertained as being in possession of public collections. Of them 18 manuscripts are located in England, 9 each in America, Germany and Italy, 6 in Austria, 4 in Hungary, and the remainder in Russia, Holland, France and Czechoslovakia; 24 are quoted from catalogues.

The volume of text is accompanied by 16 monochrome plates reproducing the most beautiful and interesting pages of illustrated Haggadoth preserved in Cincinnati, London, Nimes, Berlin, Breslau, Darmstadt, Frankfurt, and Munich.

 The Landgrafenpsalter of the Stuttgart Landesbibliothek is among the most outstanding achievements German mediaeval miniature art may justly boast of. This manuscript was executed about the year 1215, in all probability in a Thuringian monastery, and was destined for the use of Landgrave Hermann of Thuringia, whose name is closely associated with the singers on the Wartburg and with Saint Elizabeth, his daughter-in-law. Besides the text taken from the Latin Psalter, the codex contains quite a number of delicately painted initial letters, a calendar with the twelve apostles, ten full-page miniatures taken from the New Testament, and the litany adorned with the medallion busts of some prominent princes and princesses. All these miniatures, which in point of style are characteristic of the transition German art underwent between the Romanesque and Gothic period, are faithfully reproduced in coloured collotype in the size of the original.

In the year 613 the Irish missionary Gallus settled down in the region of the present city of St. Gall. A century later (720) a monk named Othmar founded there a monastery, and still another century elapsed before Abbot Gozbert (816—837) endowed it with 400 codices, thus laying the corner-stone for its celebrated library. Under the abbotship of Solomon of Constance (890—920) the monastery passed through the most brilliant period of its existence.

The convent library of St. Gall is one of the most ancient and interesting of its kind. The number of manuscripts nowadays in possession of the library amounts to 1793, amongst which are 16 illuminated manuscripts of the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries.

In the present work Adolf Merton deals with 154 illuminated manuscripts of the St. Gall school. Fifty-two belong to the ninth, 64 to the tenth, and 38 to the eleventh century, the whole thus representing in a continuous succession all illuminated manuscripts that have come down to us from the best time of St. Gall miniature painting. As to place of origin, about 70 manuscripts were executed in St. Gall itself, 42 in Reichenau, 8 in Mayence, 11 in South-Germany, 4 in St. Blasien, 3 each in Augsburg, Fulda, and in the Middle Rhenish region, 2 each in Cologne and Constance, and one each in Treves, Echternach, Metz, Reims, Corbie. For the most part these codices are evangelistaries, sacramentaries, psalters and lectionaries.

This extensive material, of which 205 illustrations are given on 104 collotype plates, is brought together from 57 libraries. Among them we note the following foreign libraries: in England, London, Cambridge, and Oxford; in France, Paris, Chantilly, Mühlhausen; in Italy, Florence, Milan, Bologna, Brescia, Cividale, Rome; in Austria, Göttweig, St. Paul, Vienna; furthermore Brussels, Utrecht, and Moscow.

In the history of book-painting St. Gall takes an important place on account of its being the birth-place of German miniature art in the proper sense of the word. For a long time the convent was the continental centre of the Irish school of miniature painting, and as such it possessed and brought forward a series of magnificent codices executed in the Irish style which in its turn may be traced back to oriental patterns. It was in the course of the ninth century that the Carolingian and Irish style amalgamated. The important change thus brought about is best illustrated by the Folchart-Psalter and the Psalterium Aureum, which may be regarded as the best achievements of the St. Gall school. Another magnificent manuscript is the 9th century evangelistary from Einsiedeln, of which also a reproduction is given.

The text of Merton's book falls into 5 sections: The initial ornamentation from 800 to 840, from 840 to 872, and from 872 and 920 respectively, the pen drawings from the ninth to the eleventh century, and the miniatures of the eleventh century. A concluding chapter treats of the position held by the St. Gall school in Alemannic art.

With an introduction by Arthur Christensen.
The University Library of Copenhagen has for a number of years been well aware of the duties incumbent on it with regard to the publication of a facsimile edition of the invaluable Old Iranian Codices in its possession, brought home by the Danish scholars Rasmus Rask and N. L. Westergaard. During recent years the Library has been gratified by receiving an ever increasing number of requests from foreign Iranists for the loan of these manuscripts, with a view to the publication of texts or for similar purposes. But the lending of the originals, especially of the earliest and scientifically most valuable codices, was not practicable, their fragile condition rendering it risky to expose them to transportation. Hence the Library has hitherto only been able to meet any wishes for the use of them in a very unsatisfactory way, generally by photographing pages or sections of the manuscript required.
This made it all the more necessary that the most valuable manuscripts should be published in facsimile, and at the 16th International Congress of Orientalists at Athens in 1912, one of the librarians, Mr. J. Eyser, Keeper of Oriental Printed Books and Manuscripts, submitted the question of such an edition in the sections for Comparative Philology and Indo-Iranian Philology. A unanimous resolution was then passed in both sections to the effect that "it would be of great scientific importance to arrange for the publication of complete and exact facsimiles of the valuable Avesta and Pahlavi manuscripts preserved in the University Library at Copenhagen." At one time it was thought that the means necessary for this undertaking should be procured by international assistance. In the meanwhile the Great War broke out and critical times followed, and the plan of the facsimile edition had to be temporarily abandoned. There has been no lack of attempts to realise it since, but it is only now that the first instalment, comprising K20 and K20b, can be issued. It is to be hoped that it will be possible to continue the series.

The University Library is greatly indebted to Dr. Arthur Christensen, Professor of Iranian Philology in the University of Copenhagen, for kindly undertaking the task of editing the series and writing an introduction to each volume.

Imperial 4to, cloth. London, 1931. £6 6s

The Persian Exhibition at Burlington House has brought to light a mass of new material, some of it of the finest quality. The present volume will fully illustrate this new material from manuscripts and miniatures lent by the Persian Government, the Egyptian Government, and other collections abroad, not hitherto reproduced.

Not only is there new material, but the comparative study of the treasures brought together at the Exhibition has resulted in a more exact knowledge of the work of some of the eminent masters. These results will be embodied in the introductory text.

The book will also be a full record of the Exhibition.

An outstanding event in the world of art in the last few years has been the impressive development of interest in the art of Persia. The complete opening of Persia to archaeological enterprise, the formation of Societies and Institutes for Persian studies in various countries, the continued publication of technical studies, the organisation of International Congresses and Exhibitions on a great scale, of which the Royal Academy Exhibition was the most notable, prove that the importance of Persian art has been widely recognised and that the full appreciation and appropriation of the contributions of Persian culture to civilisation is one of the most important and interesting tasks before the cultivated world to-day.

The Survey of Persian Art has been planned to meet this need and to provide a sound basis for future studies. From the outset three aims have been steadfastly in view: first, that the Survey should provide a systematic and comprehensive review, covering the entire field of Persian art from the earliest beginnings to the present, including a discussion of the formative factors, the principles governing its evolution, and its constitutive influences in the arts of other peoples; second, that the work should represent the latest views of the world's most eminent scholars in this field; and, finally, that it should in every way be a superb example of the bookmaker's art.

These ideals have been resolutely maintained. The Survey will contain a summary by more than fifty specialists from ten countries of all the work so far done. It will include a full announcement of the latest discoveries and researches, translations of many of the most important inscriptions, and a provocative statement of problems still to be settled. The recent dramatic discovery of an interesting archaic art in Luristan will be fully discussed for the first time; thanks to the special privileges accorded by His Majesty the Shah, many excellent photographs of interiors of hitherto inaccessible mosques of greatest value for the history of architecture will be published, and the Survey will also include the initial publication of much other new material of decisive importance.

The work will also serve in many ways as a monumental record of the International Exhibition of Persian Art at the Royal Academy. Six hundred of the outstanding objects of the Exhibition will be reproduced, and important problems raised by the assemblage of so many objects from such scattered sources will be amply explored. The proceedings of the Second International Congress on Persian Art, which meets concurrently with the Exhibition, will also be adequately reported.

A unity and integrity of treatment has been secured, a common method and general point of view faithfully maintained, and even a certain consistency of style achieved, most desirable but quite unusual in works of composite authorship.

- The Medieval Books of Merton College.*

Royal 8vo, cloth. London, 1931.

This survey is more than a catalogue of the existing medieval books in Merton College Library. All existing manuscripts are duly noted and described, but the book's main purpose is to trace in the College records the history of the various collections of books possessed by the College from its foundation to the Reformation. The majority of these books did not belong to the College Library, though they were owned by the College. They formed a kind of circulating library and were distributed among the Fellows. Professor Powicke shows what books were available at different periods, how they were kept and what rules were made about using them. The survey is a novel one, and adds much valuable detail to our knowledge of medieval conditions of study at Oxford.

- Das Evangelistar des Speyerer Domes.*

With 40 plates of illuminated miniatures (20 in colours).

Folio, cloth. Leipzig, 1930.

The Speyer evangelistary is one of the most outstanding German monuments representative of the period of transition from the Romanesque to the Gothic style. Registered under the signature "Codex Bruchsalensis I," this magnificent manuscript constitutes since 1803 the greatest treasure the Karlsruhe Landesbibliothek may boast of.

It is to the collaboration of two distinguished scholars that we owe the present work, published in a form worthy of its subject. According to Karl Preisendanz the manuscript was executed, probably in 1198, by order of the custos of Worms cathedral, one Konrad von Tanne, who made it a present to the Speyer cathedral, where he was bishop from 1233 to 1236. Here the book used to be carried about in procession on church festivals, "while the people rose bare-headed from their seats and kings took off their crowns." Thus the evangelistary remained in the possession of the cathedral up to the year 1792, when revolution and the stirring events of war compelled it to change hands several times. In 1798, we find it at Bruchsal, then the residence of the Prince Bishop of Speyer; five years later, at the time of the secularisation, it passed into the possession of the Karlsruhe library.

The names of both the scribe and the illuminator are unknown to us. The character of the script points to two or three scribes belonging to two different early Gothic scriptoria, and recalling to some extent the style, in which the Eusebius-Rufinus-manuscript at Treves has been written.

The supposition of the manuscript having been executed at Treves is still strengthened by the study Mr. Homburger has made of the miniatures. Also here two groups are clearly to be distinguished and several artists must have been engaged in the work. Byzantine influence is most strongly felt in the miniatures by the "Master of the Passion," and in the first part of the manuscript in general. In the initial work the same variations of style are apparent.

The present publication reproduces on 40 collotype plates the binding, the whole of the miniatures and initials contained in the manuscript, as well as some specimens of the script. The seventeen full-page miniatures are rendered in careful facsimile by the colour collotype process and in the exact size of the originals. They represent the Majestas Domini, Christ enthroned, the four Evangelists, and scenes of the life of Christ from the Annunciation to the Descent of the Holy Spirit. In addition, there are three coloured collotype plates representing pages of the script with the initials I, M, and MI respectively, surrounded by flowing scrollwork and animated by figures and zoomorphic design. Other pages of similar ornamentation are reproduced in monochrome collotype. The small initials are arranged on nine plates.

The binding, among the most magnificent pieces ever produced by the mediaeval goldsmith's art. The oak board is 4 centimeters thick and is covered with a silver plate, which itself is mounted with a number of rectangular niello silver plaques set with semi-precious stones and enamelled work. The gilt silver figure of Christ appears within a rectangle sunk in the centre of the cover.

The vellum manuscript of Claudius Ptolemy's Geography, of which this is a complete reproduction and but slightly reduced in size, dates from the middle of the fifteenth century. Each page, about two hundred and fifty in number, has been separately photographed and has been most carefully hand colored as in the original by one of the most skilful miniaturists of Florence.

A Ptolemy manuscript dating from his century, the 2d A.D., is not known to exist. It was in the renaissance period, or the day of great geographical discoveries, that a very special interest in his geography was awakened, and the best manuscript 62 collotype plates.

4to, half vellum. Trier, 1901.

£2 10s

The first part of the present codex, containing no less than 19 large miniatures and historiated initials in the Carolingian style, was executed at the instance of Archbishop Egbert of Treves about 975 by the priest Ruodprecht in the convent of Reichenau. In the same region must have been written also the All Saints Litany which forms the second part of the manuscript. Later on, in the reign of King Henry IV, the codex was presented to the Russian Grand-Duchess Gertrud on occasion of a diplomatic mission of the Provost Burchard of Treves to the Russian court. Here, in the second half of the 11th century, the codex was enriched with the prayers of the Grand-Duchess Gertrud to her son Peter and with some beautiful miniatures in the russo-byzantine manner. Thence the codex found its way into the Swabian convent of Zwiefalten, where a calendarium and a necrologium were added. In this definite form the book passed into the possession of St. Elizabeth who gave it as a present to the Patriarch of Aquileia in 1229. Since that date this jewel of mediaeval miniature art has been preserved in the little town of Cividale in Friuli till our day. The present publication is the first to make the manuscript accessible to a wider public.

- 826 SAUNDERS (O. E.). English Illumination.

With 129 magnificent full-page plates.

2 vol., small folio, half green morocco.

Paris, 1928.

£8 8s

Miss Elfrida Saunders has written the first exhaustive history of English illumination. Hitherto books on this subject were confined to the study of isolated sections in this fascinating field. The author of these two volumes presents a complete review of English book illumination. She begins with the Celtic, Anglo-Saxon and Roman periods and then devotes a special section to the Bestiary manuscripts which are so popular in the history of mediaeval art. Much thoughtful consideration is given to the transition from the Roman to the Gothic style and to the Gothic period itself, to which the author has appended a sound appreciation of the Apocalypses. The chapter on the school of East Anglian illumination covers the period up to the end of the Middle Ages.

Illumination may be regarded as a fundamental element in the art of the Middle Ages. The pages of a simple manuscript are often a compendium of the style of an entire epoch and the miniatures and decorations were often the inspirational source of many early frescoes.

Very few monuments of mediaeval art have been preserved in England because the Puritan spirit of the Reformation caused the ruthless destruction of both frescoes and sculptures. Fortunately many miniatures remain to reveal the influence of English art upon the art of other countries.

The miniatures also show how little English mediaeval art has been appreciated hitherto and how far it is from occupying the high place it merits. These small works of art possess such remarkable delicacy and such great artistic sensibility that they put England in the very front rank among the creative countries of the Middle Ages, and at certain periods England may claim an unchallengeable pre-eminence.

This work on English illumination, illustrated with 129 plates, forms an exhaustive treatise written in the light of the most recent research and may be considered the first standard work on the subject. The quality of the reproductions in collotype can be regarded as perfect. Each plate is preceded by a strong tissue upon which an exact description of each illustration is printed, thus obviating the necessity of referring to the catalogue and facilitating the study of the subject.

To-day such special interest is manifest in miniatures and early printed books that this publication will meet with a ready welcome. Collectors and amateurs of works of art, and the many buyers of incunabula will desire to possess this work which libraries and museums and similar institutions will need as a work of reference.

Folio, cloth. Leipzig, 1924.

£9 9s

The Gero-codex preserved in the Landesbibliothek of Darmstadt takes its name from Archbishop Gero of Cologne to whom it was presented. These Gospels written about the year 970 by Anno in the famous South German convent of Reichenau take the first place among the primitive illuminated German manuscripts of the early Middle Ages. Besides a large number of monochrome illustrations the present publication gives in excellent coloured reproduction the seven full-page miniatures, a specimen of the script, an historiated initial, and a decorative initial of a most beautiful design. Among the subjects represented are the four evangelists, Jesus enthroned within a circular border adorned with the symbols of the evangelists, and two dedicatory paintings, all representative of the byzantino-carolingian style. Adolf Schmidt discusses all the problems connected with the manuscript, dealing amongst others with the technique and contents of the codex, its place of origin, its successive owners and so on. In the reproduction of the 28 plates great care has been taken to retain the true character of the colouring and the fineness of detail which it is so important to preserve.

296 pp., royal 8vo, cloth.

Paris (Maggs Bros.), privately printed, 1927.

£3 3s

The recent edition of Shelley's letters by Mr. Roger Ingpen, in the Julian Shelley, gives no information as to the history of each letter, the collectors past and present in whose hands it has been, the prices it has brought in sales, the places where it has been published.

Mr. Seymour de Ricci's book, uniform in size with the Julian Shelley, is an attempt to fill that lacuna.

With the assistance of many fellow-workers, such as Mr. Ingpen himself and Mr. T. J. Wise, he has traced over six hundred letters, including a number of unpublished pieces, the text of which appears for the first time either here or in the Julian Shelley.

Mr. de Ricci's invaluable contribution to the study of one of England's favourite authors is a handbook no student, collector or librarian can afford to do without.

a drastic revision of accepted views on the subject. It includes descriptions of eleven ancient libraries at Oxford, six at Cambridge, four in or near Manchester, six in scattered Parish Churches and Grammar Schools, as well as of the libraries at Westminster Abbey, the Cathedrals of Durham, Lincoln, Wells, and (with an account of the recent restoration) of Hereford. All but four of these libraries were once chained; the attempt is made—often with the aid of unpublished documentary evidence—to recover their original form where disguised by later alterations. There are over 90 illustrations and plans.

The large number of outstanding illuminated manuscripts known to be executed at Salzburg as well as the existence of so many mural paintings in the territory of that city led to the supposition that the archbishopric must once have been the centre of one of the most important and productive art schools of the Middle Ages.

By systematical investigations made in numerous European libraries Mr. Swarzenski has succeeded in defining the peculiar character of the Salzburg school, while at the same time tracing its gradual development from the first beginnings in early Carolingian time up to the highest degree of excellence attained during the period of the Romanesque style.

Far from being a school of mere local tradition, Salzburg painting was successively affected by Irish, French and Byzantine art tendencies, a fact which endows it with really universal interest in the history of mediaeval art.

The large amount of material embodied both in the text and in the fine illustrations has for the most part never been published before, so that the work may justly claim to throw new light on early mediaeval art relations that have hitherto remained quite unknown.

Apart from its art historical investigations, the volume of text is a valuable contribution to mediaeval liturgy and palaeography.

The present work is the first complete catalogue of the Hebrew manuscripts preserved in the Court Library of Vienna, and contains a number of the most important documents of Jewish literature. The text is from the pen of one of the foremost authorities in the field of Hebrew palaeography. The method adopted in the cataloguing of the manuscripts is a strictly scientific one. The material is arranged according to subjects, and each single item is described as to its exterior and its contents. The clear arrangement of the matter makes this book not only the first modern Hebrew bibliography, but sets a standard of bibliographical work in general. At the same time the book will be a valuable complement to the descriptive catalogue edited by Wickhoff and Hermann, with the only difference that it contains the whole of Hebrew manuscripts of the National Library, including also those which are not illuminated.

The work contains the description of 212 manuscripts and is divided into the following sections: Bible (22 nos.), exposition of the Bible (15 nos.), linguistics (8 nos.), law (38 nos.), geography and history (4 nos.), poetry (31 nos.), polemic writings (3 nos.), cabbala (8 nos.), Karaites (4 nos.), theology and philosophy (34 nos.), medicine (15 nos.), mathematics and natural science (19 nos.), various subjects (11 nos.). Then comes an appendix in which 163 fragments of bindings are described. The volume concludes with indices of authors, scribes, owners, names of towns, titles and anonyma.

The most ancient manuscript dealt with is the "Prophets and Hagiographers," dating from the twelfth century. Nine manuscripts belong to the thirteenth century, 62 to the fourteenth, 64 to the fifteenth, 26 to the sixteenth, 16 to the seventeenth, 19 to the eighteenth, and 15 to the nineteenth century. To judge from the script they are for the most part rabbinic manuscripts. Eighty-five have been executed in Germany, 52 in Spain, 57 in Italy, 6 in the north of Africa, 4 in the Orient, 3 in France, 2 each in Syria and Greece, 1 in Persia. The plates exhibit specimens of the script. Of particular interest is a reproduction from the Cod. Hebr. 16 in which the Hebrew characters are arranged so as to form the figure of an heraldic lion.

40 pages of text and 16 collotype plates, of which 8 are in colour.

In a cloth portfolio. Leipzig, 1928.

The present manuscript with its fifteen full-page miniatures ranks among the most beautiful codices executed in the tenth century in the islet of Reichenau on the lake of Constance. Nowadays this lectionary is regarded as one of the greatest treasures of the Wolfenbüttel library. Of the history of the manuscript not much is known to us beyond the fact that it has been acquired for the library by Duke August the Younger of Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, who lived from 1579 to 1666.

Lectionarium was in the Middle Ages the name of a book containing lections to be read during the divine service. These lections were drawn from the Gospel (Pericopes) and arranged in a chronological order according to the festivals of the ecclesiastical year.

The Wolfenbüttel lectionary contains 109 sections on as many vellum leaves, each measuring 18.5 x 28 cm. The text is written in the Carolingian minuscule. In all probability, three different scribes were engaged in the work. The headings, written in majuscules, indicate the festival day on which the following text was to be read, and the Gospel from which it had been taken.

The chief feature of the miniature work are nine full-page paintings representing the Nativity and the Annunciation to the Shepherds—the Adoration of the Magi—the Women at the Tomb—the Ascension—the Descent of the Holy Spirit—St. John the Evangelist—the Sacrifice of Zacharias—the Liberation of St. Peter—the Death of the Virgin. In addition, there are six large initial letters: I, P, C, P, I, M, splendidly executed on variegated backgrounds and enclosed in architectural design or borders of leaf ornamentation. Of particular interest is the initial I with a man climbing up the jagged contour of the letter.

The text is written by Dr. Otto Lerche, former Director of the Wolfenbüttel Library, and deals with the history and bibliography of the codex, its palaeography, text, and miniatures. This detailed treatise may be considered as an important contribution to the history of mediaeval writing and to our knowledge of manuscript work in general.

Of all the productions of the noble craft of bookbinding the mediaeval carved leather bindings are no doubt among the rarest and most interesting. Most of those bindings display a freshness and individuality in design quite of its own, that are not to be found in the more mechanically executed stamped work of later times. There is only a very small number of such hand-tooled leather bindings that have come to us from the XIVth century: the majority of them belonging to the following period. The present work is the first to supply us with the reproduction of a large number of those rare fourteenth century bindings and many of the examples here illustrated have never been published before. Each illustration is accompanied by a full descriptive text from the pen of M. Bollert, Director of the Landesbibliothek at Dresden. Besides its intrinsic value for the history of mediaeval decorative art, this book will furnish fresh information to collectors as to the right evaluation and identification of similar specimens in their possession.

Besides a large amount of printed oriental books, the Bavarian State Library possesses about 2,000 Islamic manuscripts, from which Gratzl has chosen 34 specimens, distinguished for their fine and interesting bindings. In the first section eight Mograbin bindings of the 14th and 15th centuries are described and reproduced on eight plates, of which the first represents in colour a Koran binding (1305), being one of the earliest Islamitic bindings that can be dated with certainty. Then follow four plates (of which one in colour), representing two Syro-Egyptian bindings of the 14th and 15th century, a juridical codex and a collection of proverbs. Four plates reproduce South Arabian bindings with leather flaps of the 15th and 16th centuries. Nine plates (6 in colour) are dedicated to Persian bindings of the 16th and 19th century. Here we find an exact description of eight gold-stamped leather bindings of the 16th century, three varnished bindings of the sixteenth, and 3 of the nineteenth century. A Javanese leather binding concludes the series of 34 pieces described, most of which have not been published before, and of which nineteen are reproduced, mostly in original size.

A charming essay on Marguerite's bookbindings, with some extremely interesting observations on the Court life of her time. The author quotes some delightful passages from Brantôme's "Eloge de Marguerite de Valois," whose beauty and grace are described as more characteristic of a Goddess from heaven than a princess on earth. To complete the character-sketch the author has also quoted some lines from Marguerite's own Memoirs, which reveal the calm philosophy of her mind.

The frontispiece is a reproduction of the binding of one of the Queen's books, a volume of manuscript verses dedicated to Marguerite, the other illustrations being facsimiles of this manuscript, in the Pierpont Morgan collection.

4to, cloth, t.e.g. London, 1926.

£3 3s

One of 600 copies only printed.

900 HOBSON (G. D.). Maioli, Canevari, and others.

Contents:—

1. A group of bindings decorated with plaquettes.
2. Sixteenth century bindings with architectural decoration.
3. The bindings of Thomas Maioli, with a list of about 90 examples, fully described and classified.
4. Appollonio Filareto and his bindings.
5. The Great Canevari myth: an attempted identification of the true owner of these famous bindings, with a list of over 100 specimens and rules for distinguishing genuine examples from forgeries.

With plates (in colours) almost all of bindings hitherto unpublished.

Royal 8vo, cloth. London, 1926.

£2 2s

In all these essays the author breaks new ground: No. 1 appeared in "The Library," June, 1924, but has since been greatly expanded and largely rewritten in the light of new discoveries. It deals with a group of bindings, most of which belonged to Jean Grolier, and brings new evidence to the controversy whether the bulk of the great collector's bindings were of French or Italian workmanship.

No. 2 discusses two little known groups of sixteenth century bindings, and incidentally brings evidence to show that a remarkable binding in the British Museum, hitherto considered to be a modern forgery, is a genuine example of Renaissance work.

No. 3 is the first detailed and scientific study ever made of the bindings of this mysterious collector. Mr. Hobson has been remarkably successful in tracing the books which composed his library, and the results of his investigations are startling and are likely to modify the whole study of sixteenth century binding.

No. 4 gives an account of an almost forgotten Italian politician who owned some beautiful bindings, now very rare, a list of which is given.

No. 5 proves conclusively that Demetrio Canevari never owned the famous bindings decorated with the medallion of Apollo and Pegasus which for over sixty years have been associated with his name. It suggests who the true owner may have been, discusses when and where they were executed, and relates them to other Italian bindings of the period.

The lists of bindings are a feature of the essays: so far as possible the successive owners of each binding are named, and references given to reproductions where any exist.

Contents:—I. The Early Bindings: before 1300. II. The Gothic Bindings: c. 1450-1500.

Appendices:—(a) Early Irish Bindings and Satchels. (b) List, Classification and Early Ownership of the Romanesque Bindings. (c) A 13th or 14th Century English Binding. (d) A Romanesque Binding in the Bibliothèque de la Ville, Troyes. (e) Stamps in Class M of the Romanesque Bindings. (f) On English Culture of the 12th Century and the Nationality of some Romanesque Bindings. (g) An Attempted Classification of Oxford 15th Century Bindings. (h) English Cut Leatherwork, 1300-1500. (j) Additional 15th Century English Binding, and a List of English "Small-Stamp" Binderries working before 1510. (k) Unbound Books in Mediaeval Libraries. Addenda.

This book is the first to deal systematically with three very interesting groups of mediaeval bindings—the early Celtic bindings and satchels, the Romanesque bindings of the 12th and 13th centuries and the English late-Gothic 15th century bindings.

Something novel is said of all three groups: in the first, a famous little binding at Stonyhurst is claimed for the seventh century, and three bindings at Fulda for the British Isles.

A detailed attempt to classify and localise the second group ends with the conclusion that all the bindings in it come either from northern France or southern England; for the first time, too, since Weale, an effort is made to investigate the iconography of the very interesting stamps found on these books.

Finally, in the third class, we learn of a London leatherworker who decorated book covers, of a binder brought over from Bruges by Caxton, of early binders at Canterbury and Salisbury, of two Cambridge binders using figured stamps, and of several hitherto unrecorded London craftsmen.

Almost all the 58 plates are of bindings hitherto unpublished.

The present publication may be regarded as a counterpart to the well-known works by Gottlieb and Schmidt on the bookbindings preserved in the libraries of Vienna and Darmstadt. Like its predecessors, it contains the finest examples of bookbindings of all times and all countries, exhibiting German bindings as well as those of France, Italy, and the Netherlands, executed by such celebrated artists as Badier, Bozérien, Joh. Fogel, Jacob Krause, Lefebure, Motet, Padeloup, Simier, Thouvenin, etc. As regards former ownership, the material brought together is likewise truly international. Apart from German princes and monasteries, there appear the names of many renowned book-collectors and bibliophiles abroad: Francis II., Henry III. and IV. of France, Grolier, Mahieu, Count Stephen Méjan, Sir William Hamilton, Sir Thomas Phillips, William of Orange, the Marquess of Trivulzio, the Visconti of Milan, and so on. The time covered by these bindings extends from the fifth to the nineteenth century. Ranging from the sumptuous ecclesiastical bindings of the early Middle Ages up to the bindings of the famous Méjan collection of the first half of the nineteenth century, the specimens represented reveal practically the whole development of the art of bookbinding throughout fifteen centuries. The ivory-carver, the goldsmith, the bookbinder will find here magnificent specimens of their craft. Greatest care has been spent on the reproduction of the plates. The smallest details are rendered with the utmost sharpness, and the reproduction of the 26 colour plates preserve the utmost fidelity to the tone of the originals. Owing to the large size of the work each binding could be reproduced without reduction.

Mr. Husung's descriptive text, which precedes the plates, considers each binding from the historical and artistical standpoint and is particularly full of valuable references. Considering the great variety of the subject matter, the text in itself is a very instructive survey on the literature of bookbinding in general as well as of the particular problems connected with it.

This publication by Adolf Schmidt is something of a counterpart to Husung's work on the bookbindings preserved at Berlin. By the request of the Cologne collector, Baron Hupsch, in 1805, many especially Rhenish bindings passed into the Darmstadt library, while a number of Saxon bindings of the time of August the Strong came there as a wedding-gift of a Saxon princess. The library contains many outstanding preciosities in the field of bookbinding: two carved leather bindings of the fourteenth and four of the fifteenth century, painted German bindings of the sixteenth century, a volume bound by the Cambridge bookbinder Godfrey in 1515, five volumes bound by Jakob Krause, one Grolier binding, two bindings by Padeloup, a magnificent gaily-coloured Italian binding of the eighteenth century, and bindings of embroidered satin and silk. All these bindings are represented in a series of magnificent reproductions, beginning with the binding of the Golden Bull of Cologne (1356) and ending with a pink satin binding adorned with a gouache-painting, executed in 1785 at Darmstadt or Frankfurt. In addition, there follow three richly coloured Persian leather bindings of the 16th and 17th centuries. Of the 161 illustrations, 127 reproduce German bindings 17 French, 6 Italian, 4 Dutch, 3 each English and Persian, and one a Spanish binding. As to the German bindings, 20 are of Rhenish origin, 36 came from Saxony, 4 from Württemberg, 3 from Hesse, and 13 were executed in Darmstadt itself. Other bindings could be determined as having been made at Basel, Strassburg, Tübingen, Frankfurt, Nürnberg, Braunschweig, Wittenberg, and in the monasteries of Echternach and Seligenstadt. As regards date of execution, the work contains 3 bindings of the fourteenth century, 19 of the fifteenth, 80 of the sixteenth, 25 of the seventeenth, and 34 of the eighteenth century. Accordingly the bulk of the work refers to bindings of the period of the reformation. Of the 17 French bindings 6 are of the sixteenth, 2 of the seventeenth, and 9 of the eighteenth century, half of the Italian bindings belong to the sixteenth century, of the Dutch bindings one was executed in the sixteenth, and three in the seventeenth century. Two English bindings date from the sixteenth, one from the eighteenth century.

Brooks, Bibliografia di Edizioni Bodoniane, No. 1216.

Brunet gives some details as to the execution of this book. According to him after Bodoni's death Orsi succeeded Bodoni in managing his private press, and he finished this work of Bodoni's at the request of the widow.

This magnificent book offers type specimens of more than two hundred and fifty types, not only Roman, but also Greek, Russian, Oriental, etc., and also a magnificent collection of fleurons. The whole gives a bird's eye view of the wealth of Bodoni's Press, and has never been equalled.

The copy we offer for sale is printed on the finest paper and is in a magnificent contemporary binding.

THE FINEST AND MOST IMPOSING OF BODONI TYPE-SPECIMENS.

- 954 BODONI (G.). Serie di Majuscole e Caretteri Cancellereschi.
 Folio, original wrappers, uncut. 113 leaves. Parma, Bodoni, 1788.
 (SEE ILLUSTRATION OPPOSITE). £45

This "Serie" followed closely the publication of the famous 1788 Manuale, and in his "Vita del Cavaliere Giambattista Bodoni," J. de Lama alludes to it as "another magnificent Manuale of which very few copies were distributed, Bodoni jealously hiding the remaining copies."

It contains 15 alphabets of capitals, in Cancellereschi types, 28 alphab. (capt. let.) of Roman and Cursive Types, on 28 leaves. Whereas Lama only speaks of only 15 alphabets of the same, on 24 leaves.

Then come 9 Greek Alphabets (capital letters), with their corresponding "Corsi," 12 Russian Alphabets, capital letters with corresponding "Corsi" in 12 leaves, 32 descriptions of Italian towns with their French versions, the first in Roman, the second in Cursive types. (This vol. contains 33 of the same). They are followed by 20 leaves of Russian types with their corresponding "Corsi," 2 leaves of Greek types, 1 leaf containing some Rabbinical, Yiddish (very likely the first type specimen in that language), and Etruscan types. Finally 4 leaves of 8 Italian descriptions in Roman types, with their corresponding French version in Cursive types.

This beautiful copy, in splendid condition, is one printed on "white French paper." It's interesting to note that on the receipt of specimens of the Cancellereschi Majuscole types herewith mentioned, Benjamin Franklin wrote to Bodoni that famous complimentary letter of which the Italian typographer was so justly proud.

According to Updike this is "the finest and most imposing of Bodoni's Specimens, and the twenty-eight alphabets of Roman and Italic Capitals are the most magnificent of their kind ever displayed."

The cut of the Russian Capital letters is brilliant, and the impression effective to the last degree.

Updike ends up by saying that "the Splendour of this book depends on pure Typography; there is not one ornament in it."

From BODONI's SERIE DI MAJUSCOLE E CARETTERI CANCELLERESCHI.
Parma, 1788.
See Item No. 954.

Printers and Printers' Specimens—continued.

- 955 BODONI (G.). Rare Specimens of 3 Caretteri Esotici: Arabo, Malabarica, and Siriaco-Latino.

4to, buckram, t.e.g., by Rivière. Parma, Bodoni, 1788. £4 4s

In 1788 the King of Portugal, wishing to send a mission to the Malabar district, entrusted to Bodoni the care of shaping some Arabian, Malabaric, Syriac, and Tibetan Types, for the use of the printing press in Goa. The ones contained in this volume are the Arabian and the Malabaric, and a bible leaf printed in Syriac and Latin. They are very rare. (See Joseph de Lama's Vita del Cavaliere Giambattista Bodoni).

- 956 BODONI (G.). Caratteri Esotici. 25 Proof specimens, believed to be those of some exotic types contained in the 1788 Manuale Tipografico.

8vo, buckram. Parma, Bodoni, 1788. £10 10s

Of those neat and graceful exotic types which won for Bodoni the admiration and the praise of all Europe, the following are herewith contained: "2 Arabi, 1 Siriaco, 1 Brachmanno, 1 Slavonico, 2 Turchi, 1 Illirico, 1 Armeno, 1 Tibetano, 1 Punico, 1 Palmireno, 2 Tedeschi, 1 Persiano, 1 Samaritano, 1 Caldaico, 1 Siro-Estranghelo, 1 Copto, 2 Ebraici, 1 Rabbinico, 1 Finicio, 1 Persiano, and 1 Russiano.

The Russian type-specimen, though evidently intended for the 1788 8vo Manuale, did not, however, appear in it. At least Lama makes no mention whatever of it.

- 957 [BODONI.] Oratio Dominica in CLV. Linguas, versa et Exoticis characteribus plerumque expressa.

Folio, half morocco, by Larrivière.

Parma. Bodoni, 1806.

£33

Updike, Printing Types, Vol. II., pp. 168-9: "In 1806 the Oratio Dominica, is another masterly showing of what Bodoni could do in foreign & ancient alphabets." It was printed at the suggestion of Pius VII, who in May, 1805, had passed through Parma on his way from the coronation of Napoleon. It was intended to outdo a like work published by the Imprimerie Nationale at Paris. Bodoni's book was dedicated to Eugène Beauharnais, Viceroy of Naples, to whom he personally presented a copy. In return for this work, Bodoni received a pension and an offer of the direction of the Royal Printing House at Milan."

EARLY CUBAN TYPE SPECIMEN.

- 958 BOLONA (Jose S.). Muestras de los caracteres de letras de la Imprenta de Marina de la propiedad de Don Jose Severino Bolona.

Containing a great variety of printer's type specimens, initial letters, illustrations, vignettes, fleurons, borders and various kinds of ornaments.

4to, half leather.

Habana (Imprenta de la Marina de este Apostado por S.M.), 1836.

£5 5s

Some of the illustrations have been coloured and a few of the vignettes cut out. Not quoted by Updike, Printing Types.

- 959 BREITKOPF (J. G. I.). Exemplum typographiae Sinicae figuris characterum e typis mobilibus compositum.

4to, wrappers. Lipsiae, ex typographeo autoris, 1789.

A DELIGHTFUL SPECIMEN BOOK OF THE CURWEN PRESS.

- 965 [CURWEN PRESS.] A Specimen Book of types & ornaments in use at The Curwen Press, Plaistow, London.

With numerous charming illustrations, some in colours.

4to, cloth, t.e.g. London, Curwen Press, 1928. £6 6s

One of 135 copies. Out of print and scarce.

"This Specimen Book was originally designed for ourselves as a guide to the type faces and typographical ornaments in current use in our own printing-office. As the work proceeded, however, it became so interesting to the compiler, who saw in it something of a conspectus of modern printing tendencies, that we decided to print a few extra copies for friends of the Press. Later, when the pages of vignettes and ornaments were added, forming a unique collection of work by contemporary artists specially drawn for the Curwen Press, and probably unrivalled in any other English printing-office, we were persuaded to go a step farther and to issue a limited edition to the public."

Printers and Printers' Specimens—*continued.*966 [CURWEN PRESS.] The Curwen Press Miscellany.

Imperial 8vo. London, Curwen Press, 1931.

£3 3s

A limited edition on hand-made paper.

Principal contents:—Type Faces. A new Sans-Serif Type. The Stencil Process. On Printing Wood Engravings. Music Punches. A Catalogue Raisonné.

In the contemporary renaissance of English printing the work of the Curwen Press holds a position of recognised importance. This MISCELLANY epitomises in its pages much of the best that has ever been seen in modern book design. It presents a comprehensive display of all Type Faces, Initial Letters, Borders and Ornaments acquired by the Curwen Press since the issue of its Type Specimen Book in 1928, including Harold Curwen's new Sans-serif type and the Curwen Edition Music Punches.

Book-decoration is recorded by many-coloured reproductions, by the stencil process, as well as by work in monochrome and colour, printed direct from the wood.

PRESENTATION COPY IN FRENCH RED MOROCCO TO THE KING AND QUEEN OF SICILY.

968 DUVERGER (E.). Album Typographique de l'Imprimerie Royale.

Containing numerous specimens of types, music, title-pages and maps, some in colours, ornaments in gold, bronze and colours, reproduced after the drawings of Aimé Chenavard.

Folio, French red morocco, richly decorated, with the Royal French Arms on the sides, watered silk doublures and fly leaves.

Paris, Imprimerie Royale, 1830.

£18 18s

This album was printed for and presented to King George I and Queen Caroline of the two Sicilies when they visited the Imprimerie Royale.

Queen Caroline was the sister of Napoleon and the widow of the famous Murat.

969 ENSCHÉDE (J.). Proef van Letteren welke gegooten worden in de Nieuwe Haerlemsche Lettergieterij van J. E.

vignettes, borders, ornamental capitals, etc. Mentioned in Bigmore and Wyman, Vol. I., p. 202.—“ This is a very interesting and fine specimen book of all the characters then in the Enschedé foundry. It contains finely-engraved copperplate portraits of the printer, J. Enschedé; Junius, the propagator of the Koster legend; another of the celebrated type-cutter Fleischman; and one of Koster, all being by C. van Noorde.”

One of the most important type specimen books, as the Enschedé firm (which is still in existence), amalgamated the finest of the punches and matrices produced in the Netherlands from the earliest period.

Udike mentions the book, and reproduces specimens in his “ Printing Types.”

- 970 ENSCHEDÉ EN ZONEN (Joh.). Proeve van Drukletteren.

- 977 FOURNIER (le Jeune). Les Caractères de l'Imprimerie. Large Paper Copy.

8vo, original printed wrappers. Paris, 1769.

£5 5s

Printed on one side of paper only. Title-page and page No. 84 are missing.

- 978 [FOURNIER (le Jeune).] Fournier on typefounding. The text of the Manuel Typographique (1764-1766) translated into English and edited with notes by Harry Carter.

With 16 double-page plates of printing appliances.

8vo, cloth. London, 1930.

£4 4s

One of 260 copies only printed.

When Fournier wrote his Manuel Typographique, typography was—as now—fashionable, and the book was written largely for the uninitiated; the Manuel is therefore somewhat of a popular treatise: there is little or nothing in it that is either beyond the layman's grasp or beneath the expert's notice.

Since the original, which has never been reprinted, is rare and worth as much as £14 14s. a copy, this English edition will find favour with those who would otherwise be unable to possess the work, as well as with those who would rather have the text in English.

The whole of the range of engravings illustrating the tools of the typefounder are faithfully reproduced in this volume by the collotype process.

- 979 FRY (Joseph and Sons). A Specimen of Printing Types, by Joseph Fry & Sons, Letter-Founders, Worship St., Moorfields, London, 1785.

Large broadside (printed on both sides). London, 1785. £4 4s

A large selection of Roman and Italic types, including "Diamond," then "the smallest letter in the world." Also specimens of Hebrew, Samaritan, Black, and Greek; vignettes of King's arms, ships, etc. Not in Bigmore and Wyman.

The following interesting historical note describes the foundry and characters of the celebrated printer and founder Gillé.

"My foundry has been in existence for 60 years, from father to son. It has often given employment to 100 workmen. . . . In 1789 I succeeded my Father, who was type-founder to the King during the last two reigns. . . . In the year 10 I presented my type specimen. . . . It gave the text of a long letter written by Bodoni. In speaks of Franklin and gives the following important information: "In the days of my youth I saw some punches which had been engraved in his very presence by Benjamin Franklin, his son." He gives much interesting information on different printing-presses, inks and paper made in France and other countries.

In the second Notice, Gillé speaks to us of his father the engraver, Louis XV, Fournier, Bodoni, Didot, Léger, Gando, Molé, Vaffland also gives all sorts of valuable information with regard to the type-founders of the Provinces.

Gillé describes at length his work, inventions and the perfection which he attained in the art of alloy, his notes in music, his maps, etc., all documents of importance for the history of printing.

£1 5s

One of 150 copies.

Among the types which enjoy permanent favour in book printing, none has a more interesting or more mysterious history than "Garamond." Certain punches, of undoubted antiquity, have existed for centuries at the French National Printing Office. Owing to their beauty of design and great age, the tradition grew up that these punches were cut by Claude Garamond, perhaps the most famous letter-cutter of all time, to whom François I entrusted the execution of the greek types used by Royal Printers in the sixteenth century. Were this "Garamond" roman of merely historical interest, the problem of its true origin would still be fascinating to scholars, but nowadays it is of general importance owing to the international use of "Garamond" in present day book-printing.

Mr. Paul Beaujon now reveals that "Garamond," in spite of the attributions of historians, was in fact cut by a seventeenth century engraver whose extraordinary talents have never received due appreciation. The definite assignment of this beautiful letter to Jean Jannon of Sedan is made possible by Mr. Beaujon's discovery of a type specimen book, surviving in a unique copy, issued by that printer-founder in the year 1621. This document, of the first importance to amateurs of typography, was first quoted in an article by Mr. Beaujon in The Fleuron, No. V. A full collotype facsimile has now been prepared by the same author, who has added a bibliographic and historical introduction incorporating much new material.

The story of Jannon's life and labours is of unique and pathetic interest, and this essay will, it is hoped, restore to a great master the fame he justly deserves. The facsimile, moreover, has additional value in that Jannon's "Espreuves de Caracteres" was the first type specimen-book issued by any French typefounder. It antedates by nearly a century the fine series of specimen-books which are the glory of French typography and the despair of collectors of fine printing; yet in design and even in press-work it fully equals any later book. So scrupulous a facsimile as this will enable collectors to add to their libraries a document which is no less remarkable for its typographic charm than for its unique historic interest.

32mo, old calf, g.e. [Barcelona], 1777. £18 18s
This little book is dedicated to Charles III. of Spain, the great patron of typography in Spain in the eighteenth century; and is edited by one of the Carmelite Brothers of the Convent of St. Joseph in Barcelona, where the types were manufactured. Updike describes it as a "rare little specimen, interesting for its showing of ancient black-letter types which were employed in early Spanish printing. . . . The roman and italic types in this book are old style of the usual kind, though here and there founts appear which are somewhat calligraphic in appearance. The eleven pages of borders or viñetas are, most of them, Spanish renderings of French designs. The book was evidently printed by some one familiar with Fournier's style of type-setting."

THE GREAT STANDARD WORK ON WATERMARKS.

- 1003 BRIQUET (Ch. M.). Les filigranes. Dictionnaire historique des marques du papier dès leur apparition, vers 1282 jusqu'en 1600.
 With 39 illustrations in the text, and 16,112 facsimiles of watermarks on 1,500 plates. Excellent photographic reprint.
 4 vols., 4to, cloth. Leipzig, 1923. £12 12s

The famous work of Charles Briquet appeared first in 1907. That edition was only printed in a few copies, and was immediately out of print. Since then the book is almost impossible to find, and is still to-day the only reference book of the kind. Very often it is only possible, by means of the watermarks, which are almost completely reproduced here in their entirety, to date old books and localize and date manuscripts or parts of manuscripts. It is also of great importance for historians who have to deal with documents that are uncertain and undated. The text of 836 pages is of great importance for the elucidation of watermarks.

Mr. Briquet's work is preceded by an important introduction dealing with the origin, the technique, and the significance of watermarks as well as with the make of the paper.

The illustrative material of the works consists of 1,484 plates representing 16,112 watermarks reproduced in black and white in their original size. These facsimiles are grouped in 32 sections, alphabetically arranged.

Each of the four volumes is preceded by an explanatory text.

Four indices throw the material open to further investigation. The subject index refers particularly to questions connected with the make of the paper. Next comes an index of paper manufacturers and paper merchants as well as of workmen and apprentices engaged in paper manufacture from the thirteenth to the sixteenth century. A third index records the names of 572 paper manufacturers, the products of which are illustrated in the work. There is also an index of the various denominations of paper specified by their quality, size and provenance.

- 1004 CLERT (Louis). Le papier.
 560 pp. of text and over 400 illustrations.
 2 vols., folio, half vellum. Paris, 1926. £12 12s

Since the publication of Briquet's famous work on water-marks, there has been a rapid increase in the interest in the substance on which all books are printed and its history. Whereas the pioneer work of Mr. Briquet reproduced innumerable water-marks, he was naturally unable to authenticate them. Mr. Le Clert has devoted forty years of labour to the compiling of these two monumental volumes. He gives over four hundred French paper-marks, every one of which is dated and authenticated.

The work falls into three parts.

Part I. has been described by eminent scholars as the best general history of paper making yet written.

Part II. gives the history of some forty mills in the region of Troyes, which was the cradle of this industry in France.

Part III. gives quaint and valuable extracts concerning a thousand paper makers.

It must not be imagined that the interest of part two and three is in any way confined to any one locality. For instance the reader will find the record of the sale to Christopher Plantin of Antwerp, of the paper used for the polyglot Bible. The paper makers recorded in this work left the region of Troyes to establish mills all over Europe and entirely new information is brought to light concerning such important paper makers and printers as, for instance, the Le Bé family.

The work comprises besides over 550 pages of hand-set text in a font specially recast for this edition, over 400 illustrations including maps, plates coloured by hand, armorial bearings, facsimiles of important documents, woodcuts and water-marks of which 57 are reproduced in the sheet of the paper itself.

One of 190 copies numbered and signed. Out of print and scarce.

The Fourth Book from the private press of Dard Hunter.

This is a Bibliography of Papermaking and Watermarking from 1390 to 1800 and is the first compilation of the kind ever undertaken. The title of each book is given in full, with the author, date and size and a comprehensive description of every book and pamphlet. There are more than 20 black and white illustrations; three original photographs on special paper and 26 old title-pages reproduced in facsimile both as to typography and paper. Several of these are in colour and all tipped in the volume.

"The Literature of Papermaking: 1390-1800" is printed upon Dard Hunter watermarked hand-made paper with the type made originally by him for his books. Of this type the following appears in "The Report of the United States National Museum for the year ending June 30th, 1922" (page 11):—

"The important individual gift was that of Dard Hunter. It was a comprehensive exhibit showing the sixteenth century methods of making type. The entire exhibit is the work of Mr. Hunter, who designed and cut the punches, struck the matrices, cast the type in a hand-mould of his own make. Mr. Hunter is now working on a book called "Old Papermaking," which he will print with this same type, on his own paper, so the entire book will be the result of his labours alone. Illustrated accounts of his work and the exhibit in the Graphic Arts building of the Smithsonian Institute have appeared in many publications throughout the world."

WITH 34 ORIGINAL SPECIMENS OF PRIMITIVE PAPERMAKING.

- 1008 HUNTER (Dard). Primitive paper-making. An account of a Mexican sojourn and of a voyage to the Pacific Islands in search of information, implements, and specimens relating to the making and decorating of bark-paper.

use before the advent of paper. It aims to give the bibliophile an insight into the methods used by the old makers of paper, especially after the introduction of printing from movable types, and to interest the etcher, the engraver and the printer, as well as those engaged in the paper and water-marking trades. It is the most comprehensive work that has yet been issued on this particular phase of papermaking.

With 88 full-page illustrations and 16 collotype plates reproducing about 400 script specimens.

8vo, cloth. Leipzig, 1928.

£2 2s

The object of this book is to present the history of writing more from a practical than theoretical point of view. The author, who is in charge of the department of writing at the "Akademie für Buchgewerbe und Graphik" of Leipzig, traces in it the development of written characters from Roman times up to the nineteenth century, elucidating in a clear and comprehensible way the historical relations between the different styles as well as the chief characteristics of each single period. Beyond that, the author endeavours to initiate the reader into the technique of writing and the variety of written characters. The outstanding feature of the book is that the specimens of script are not reproduced by means of mere tracing or photography, yet all of them are rendered after drawings made by the author himself in faithful imitation of the originals. While the illustrations in works hitherto published are nearly all more or less liable to the state of preservation of their originals, the present book gives a careful selection of single characters, ligatures and passages of writing which, in point of clearness, leave nothing to be desired. The accompanying text is written to the same end, and determines each style of writing by emphasising its general characteristics as well as features of particular beauty. The work is based on many years' experience the author has had in this special branch of the graphic arts, an experience enlarged by extensive studies made in several collections in this country and abroad.

The result is a book interesting in more than one way for the history of writing and appealing to the historian, craftsman, and letter-designer alike. The concluding index with its short explanations makes the book also a most valuable work of reference.

- 1028 HEAL (Ambrose). The English Writing-Masters and their Copy-Books, 1570-1800, a Biographical Dictionary and a Bibliography. With an historical introduction on the development of English Handwriting by Stanley Morison.

With 81 collotype plates comprising 23 portraits of the Masters and 88 specimens of their Hands and one photogravure.

Small folio, half buckram. London, 1931.

£5 5s

Since the middle of the eighteenth century no book has been produced giving an adequate account of our native pen-men or making any collective representation of their work, and it is to fill this gap that Mr. Ambrose Heal has compiled this record of the work of over 450 writing-masters. In doing so he has recorded the development of the English hand from the break-away from the monastic scriptoria down to the domination of the commercial hand of the nineteenth century.

In an introductory essay Mr. Stanley Morison sketches the history of English handwriting and analyses the development which the reader can himself follow in the reproductions of specimen-pages from copy-books. The main part of the book is divided into two sections: first, biographies of the writing-masters; secondly, a bibliographical description of their copy-books.

This work, issued in a limited edition, should appeal to the collector of fine printing and the student of typography and calligraphy.

Not mentioned by Serrano y Morales in his Diccionario de Impresores Valencianos. Palau's Manual, Vol. V., p. 9. Cotarelo, No. 625.

The extreme rarity of this book, and the importance of its subject-matter, prompted Antonio de Sancha to print a second edition of it in Madrid in 1777.

The author was a native of Arratia, and was born probably in 1537. He was of aristocratic lineage, and spent his early youth in study. Little is definitely known of his biography, but it is assumed, from his own remarks, that he must have served in the Spanish Army in Italy and Spain. It is almost certain, too, that he was a pupil of Iciar in Saragossa. Madariaga's chief object was to devise a simple means of teaching calligraphy which could be written quickly and with more liberal scope for an individual style. He was, in the words of Cotarelo, "a revolutionary in the art."

- 1031 MORISON (Stanley). The writing book of Eustachio Celebrino of Udine.

Facsimile edition in collotype of Celebrino's Manual of learning to write the Mercantile Hand, preceded by a note on Calligraphy.

One of 125 copies.

We wish to draw attention to the singularly beautifully little book brought out in 1525 by the able craftsman who cut the blocks for the more famous, though not more beautiful books by Arrighi and Tagliente, but who is practically unknown as a calligrapher in his own right. And not without cause: only two copies of his work have come down to us. It is a charming eight page demonstration of the method of learning the mercantile script as used in the counting houses of Lombardy and elsewhere during the first half of the sixteenth century. Complete alphabets are given, specimens of text, an admirable engraving of a scribe's instruments and a title-page device of the writer's hand tracing the name Celebrino. To the facsimile there is prefaced a lengthy introduction in which Mr. Stanley Morison collects a number of references to the scribe and discusses his script.

Gerardus Mercator, whose name is familiar to the expert cartographer and the schoolboy as the author of a projection which has attained universal acceptance, also won fame in his own day as a calligrapher. His merits as a geographer, however, has so overshadowed his other activities that many students of his maps will be interested in a reproduction of his writing book. To amateurs of calligraphy his Theatrum is known by reputation as a practical, beautiful and individual work. Unfortunately its rarity has narrowed Gerard's fame as a scribe. The reproductions are preceded by a bio-bibliographical introduction by M. Denucé and an estimate of Gerard's importance as a calligrapher by Mr. Stanley Morison, who also compares his scripts and his book with those of his predecessors. The influence of his script upon map-making and decoration is also dealt with.

The edition is limited to 150 copies.

- 1033 MORISON (Stanley) and Henry THOMAS. Andrés Brun, Calligrapher of Saragossa. Some account of his life and work.

With facsimile of the surviving text and 48 facsimile plates in colotype of his two writing books 1583 and 1612.

Small folio, cloth. Paris, 1929.

£5 5s

Only 150 copies printed. Incorporating a facsimile of Brun's Arte muy Provechosa para aprender de escribir.

Modern appreciation of beautiful writing has, not without discrimination, shown a preference for Italian work of the XVIth century, though there is little question that the contemporary calligraphers of France and Spain were not behind those of Italy in the standard of their penmanship.

The Spanish calligrapher, Içiar, though he followed Italian principles closely, nevertheless preserved much individuality and with the collaboration of exceedingly able engravers, improved greatly upon his Italian preceptors both in decorative inventiveness and in variety of calligraphic technique and facility. So rich and various are Içiar's plates that it would be pardonable to claim that they are unequalled: such indeed has been given as the considered judgment of collectors and students. That this opinion is exaggerated and based upon insufficient evidence, is borne out by the facsimile now offered.

This Writing Book has remained unknown for more than three hundred years. Mr. Stanley Morison has the good fortune to re-discover the complete copy in the Kunstgewerbe Museum in Berlin, and we believe that the reproduction of Brun's book in exact facsimile is something more than an obligation to offer widespread acquaintance to a fine work of art through the medium of this Press which is so notoriously interested in calligraphy and typography.

The facsimile edition is prefaced with a bibliographical introduction by the well-known authority on Spanish printing, Dr. Henry Thomas, of the British Museum. Mr. Stanley Morison's note on the calligraphy introduces the reader to Brun's magnificent plates.

Most of the plates are printed in black, but no less than nine as well as the sumptuous title-page bordered with remarkably fine arabesques, are printed in scarlet. The writings shown comprise, besides alphabets of handsome majuscules and minuscules in classic, gothic and semi-gothic styles, a set of fine chancery hands and bastardas varied with splendid arabesques, fleurons and entrelacs.

In view of the fact that only one complete copy of the original book is known to exist, its facsimile reproduction is a service of the first importance to scholars of Spanish as well as to those practising calligraphy, typography and illumination.

The author was a calligrapher to the King of Spain, and an economist. His history of the art of writing contains a great deal of information on the most notable system of calligraphy in theory and practice. This is followed by treatises on arithmetic, coinage, grammar, syntax, orthography, and a curious chapter entitled Urbanity and Courtesy of the Christian, which sets forth a rule in twelve "lessons," such as "the cult of the Divine," "respect for parents and elders," "dealings between inferiors and superiors," "on cleanliness," modesty, conversation, amusements; finishing up with the maxim that "Decency consists in conforming to the circumstances of the person, place and time."

with various monographs each dealing with one of the important cathedrals such as those of Chartres, Amiens, Rheims, Bourges and so forth. These publications have established the dates at which the various portions of these buildings were carried out, while the works of Emile Mâle have revealed their profound significance and explained their didactic and symbolic function. Various collections of plates, reproduced either from photographs of the originals or from the plaster casts of the Trocadero Museum have placed valuable and extensive material at the disposal of the student. The lectures delivered by André Michel at the Ecole du Louvre traced the evolution of French sculpture throughout the Middle Ages. These lectures have not, unfortunately, been published except in the form of brief summaries in a few vital chapters of the same author's Histoire générale de l'art.

In the section of the Pantheon Series devoted to French sculpture the aim is to give a selection of the most expressive monuments which are so various and considerable in number as to furnish material for a whole library of photographs. In order to serve the best interests of the scholar and an eclectic public this section has been planned and directed by Monsieur Paul Vitry. Himself the successor of André Michel as keeper of sculpture of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance at the Louvre, he is the author of one of the most complete collections of Documents de sculpture française du Moyen âge and the well-known portfolio dealing with the sculpture of the Cathedral of Rheims. Under his pre-eminent editorship the photographic material published will be accompanied in each case by topographic and iconographic descriptions thus determining the date and significance of each object. This part is preceded by an ample commentary, thus providing each book in the series with its historic and aesthetic evolution of French sculpture such as has never yet been attempted on so magnificent a scale.

The volume which deals with the Romanesque origins and carries the history of French sculpture up to the middle of the twelfth century has been entrusted to Monsieur Paul Deschamps, keeper of the department of sculpture at the Trocadero Museum. This volume is in active preparation.

The origins of Gothic sculpture, covering the period 1150 to about 1220, have been dealt with by Monsieur Marcel Aubert, assistant keeper of the department for sculpture of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance at the Louvre. He is also professor at the Ecole des Chartes and director of the Société française d'archéologie. Beginning with the royal gateway of Chartres and ending up with the doorway of Notre-Dame de Paris, he traces the evolution from Romanesque art to monumental Gothic sculpture.

Monsieur Paul Vitry has himself written the volume which covers the golden age of Gothic art. This period coincides with the reign of Saint Louis, 1225 to 1270. It is the era during which the portals of the Cathedrals of Paris, Chartres, Amiens and Rheims brought forth those incomparable ensembles of magnificent and touching figures which, though severe in style at the beginning, developed by the time of the death of Saint Louis into the greatest masterpieces expressive of the life of the period.

THE FINEST BOOK ON INDIAN SCULPTURE.

1097 BACHHOFER (Ludwig). Early Indian Sculpture.

Containing about 150 pages of text and 306 illustrations on 161 plates in collotype.

2 vols., 4to, half leather. Paris, 1929.

£9 9s

The present publication deals with the history of Indian sculpture from the year 300 B.C. to 200 A.D. It is probably the first attempt at a synthetic study of the subject based upon the results which more than half a century of research have brought to light. This vast material is here subjected to systematic analysis and woven into a harmonious whole which extends the appeal of the subject beyond the specialist to everyone appreciative of the fine arts.

The two volumes contain 161 collotype plates giving many details. A considerable number of the illustrations have never been published before. By the aid of the photographic material the author examines all the relevant questions concerning the nature and evolution of Indian art from the early beginnings under the Maurya dynasty up to the threshold of the Gupta period during which a very important re-orientation of the Indian outlook took place. There is no period in the history of Indian sculpture in which artistic expression was so predominantly confined to the representation of the present life. In form and content there is evidence of a desire, on the part of the sculptors, to be as close as possible to nature, and this manifestation applies to no other period of sculpture in India to anything like the same degree. It follows from the above that the conclusions of the author are significant not only from the point of view of the history of evolution of the Indian mind during this period.

Owing to the fact that in the present publication pre-eminence has been given to the artistic and aesthetic problems—in fact they have been the author's point of departure—an entirely new conception of the characteristics of these five centuries has been arrived at. It must be stressed that this particular period differs essentially from all the later epochs of Indian art. Between the years 300 B.C. and 200 A.D. there are three distinct phases which do not by any means exist haphazard but follow upon one another in accordance with definite and clearly defined principles. There is an early phase full of confusion and contradiction. Upon this era follows the period of efflorescence in which its sculpture is homogeneous and powerful and finally the late phase shows, in form as well as in outlook, a certain luxuriance and extravagance.

Whereas the author has made aesthetic considerations the basis for his study of this period in the first part of his work, he has given predominance to the strictly historical outlook in the second half of the present publication. The chapter concerning Indian sculpture in the North-Western districts is based upon the most recent excavations and offers an attempted solution concerning the origin and evolution of this strange and influential art which is so complex in itself. The widest interest, extending beyond the circles of those concerned with Indian art as specialists to all those concerned with Buddhist art, will be aroused by the section devoted to the representation of Buddha in North-Western and Southern India because this part of the book contains the most surprising results.

The exhibition of British primitive paintings from the eleventh to the sixteenth century held in London in 1923 revealed, even to the expert, a surprising wealth of hitherto unknown material.

It is a curious fact that this interesting subject has found its critic and commentator only now. Tancred Borenius, in collaboration with E. W. Tristram, has for the first time committed to paper the history of English fresco and panel painting, from the earliest Middle Ages. Especially since the revelations made by the exhibition, this publication has been awaited with interest by scholars throughout the world.

The volume, English Mediaeval Painting, is a subject which appeals to a circle far wider than that of the expert and collector. Every Englishman interested in the art of his country will delight in this publication, all the more because the text is written in an easy, flowing manner and the authors have never failed to point out the connection between the art of the period dealt with and the historical events to which they belong.

The present publication does not represent a mere selection of the documents of this period, but provides a penetrating analysis and compilation of all that has come down to us from those days. The authors supply a wealth of valuable material, most of which has never been published before, and show the reader the wide field covered by English painting of this period, its beauty and importance.

The multiple relations between English art and that of such countries as France, Germany, Scandinavia and Spain are established by documentary evidence, and this historical proof is supported by a critical analysis of style.

It will be a special satisfaction to any reader to find evidence in this volume that English art of the Middle Ages played not merely a receptive part, but that in fact England stimulated many efforts abroad. Thus the myth is definitely exploded that England must look for the glory of its artistic traditions merely to its eighteenth century.

Every library, every museum, every collection, and all those interested in mediaeval painting, will undoubtedly wish to possess this volume, since there is no other publication which deals exhaustively with this department of art.

A series of excellent collotype plates illustrates all the mediaeval panel paintings of England which have come down to us, as well as numerous frescoes which since have been unhappily destroyed.

An anastatic reprint of the original scarce First Edition of 1821. The First Edition used to bring £10 on the book market. Cicognara's library is now in the Vatican Library. Cicognara might be termed an Italian Brunet as it describes with exact collations no less than 4,800 illustrated Italian books of the XVI-XVIIIth centuries.

Count Cicognara (1767-1834) was an enthusiastic collector of illustrated books relating to art, archaeology, numismatics, classical authors, and voyages. The catalogue of his library, which in 1824 was incorporated in the Vaticana, may be considered as something like the Italian Brunet. The 4,800 entries contain for the most part notes on the contents, prices, editions, collations, and other particulars that may be of any interest to the collector or bibliographer. There is, indeed, no other work from which better information may be gained about the Italian illustrated books of the XVIth to the XVIIIth century, so highly esteemed in our days.

By common consent Prague is considered as one of the most beautiful cities in Europe. It owes its reputation to its Baroque architecture, to the harmonious disposition of its streets and buildings and to some illusive details which have so far received but scant attention. The text of the present work gives not only a historical survey of the Baroque style which, north of the Alps, reached its greatest perfection in Prague, but it also deals in a penetrating appreciation with the outstanding architects and sculptors of this period.
The illustrations of this work are on a lavish scale and show every aspect of the subject. There are views of palaces, private houses, official buildings and churches, showing the exterior and the interior. A number of plates are devoted to street views and reproduce humble and quaint corners which contribute so potently to constitute the charm of Prague.
Special aeroplane photographs were taken for this book and the authors have not failed to reproduce a number of the wonderful gardens of this city.
The presentation of the book is consistent in style with its subject. There is a double frontispiece coloured by hand, being a reproduction of a colour print of the XVIth century. The illustrations end with a quadruple plate reproducing the famous panorama engraving by Hollar.

The history of Venetian Baroque painting, less familiar than that of the classical period and of the Settecento, is none the less very attractive and has not so far been made the subject of a comprehensive study. Within a few decades three artists of overwhelming creative force had been active in Venice—Titian, Paolo Veronese and Tintoretto—whose work was an almost inexhaustible source of fruitful inspiration. There followed an age of mannerism; and then a revival of artistic energy in Italy made Caravaggio the leader of a new movement in painting, and Borromini the great force in the creation of a new architecture. These two culminating personalities of the Baroque passed their mature years in Rome though sprung from a northern stock which had inspired a resistance to classicism throughout upper Italy from Como to Venice.

Soon Venice itself was the scene of a new artistic ferment: Domenico Fetti from Rome, Johann Lijs from Germany, Bernardo Strozzi from Genoa and many other artists came to study there—Rubens and Velasquez, too, were there for a while—and fell under the spell of Venice, and stayed to work in the city of their choice like the truest of her sons to the end of their lives. The attractions of the new art overcame the initial obstacles which at first threatened its development; and gradually it coalesced with the local tradition which was being modestly maintained by Alessandro Varotari, called Padovanino.

Varotari may be said to belong to the school of Titian on account of his association with his fellow-townsmen Damiano Mazza, who was a pupil of the master himself. Padovanino was a relic of the Cinquecento in the seventeenth century, and an artist who was incapable of sustained creative flights; but his practice and his example turned the attention of his contemporaries to the past and taught them to reverence its achievements.

The most susceptible to the new influence was Girolamo Foralono, whose pupil Gregorio Lazzarini has the distinction of instructing Giambattista Tiepolo. While this tendency towards a new formal clarity became increasingly pronounced, a glorious future was being quietly assured. A host of conspicuous talents arose from the fertile Venetian soil: the Genoese Lanzetti, who sponsored Carl Loth in Munich, Antonio Zanchi from Este, Molinari and many more; while in the inspired art of G. B. Piazzetta the new movement in painting reached its apogee. Along side these names are others hardly less interesting and significant: Sebastiano Mazzoni, who anticipates Sebastiano Ricci, Antonio Carneo, the precursor of Bombelli, whose pupils were Fra Galgario and Nicolo Grassi, and G. B. Pittoni. All find their place in the luminous panorama of Venetian baroque and post-baroque painting that Giuseppe Fiocco here spreads out before us.

Giuseppe Fiocco, who is the Professor of the History of Art in the University of Florence, has an international reputation as a connoisseur of Venetian painting; and this work will appeal alike to lovers and to students of Venetian art, for it is no easy task to bring discipline and clarity into this confused and often misrepresented chapter of Italian art. A wide survey of Venetian eighteenth-century painting, of the last enchanting flower of the seemingly inexhaustible fertility of Venice, of Tiepolo and Guardi, concludes this volume whose value and charm is enhanced by illustrations.

Folio, in portfolio.

Madrid [London, Maggs Bros.], 1928.

£2 10s

This is the first of this interesting series of 100 Goya drawings, the plates being very faithful reproductions of the originals, some of which are in pencil, sanguin, sepia, or pen and ink.

Volume II. is due to appear in 1932.

This official Spanish publication contains a hundred phototypes on linen paper, magnificently reproducing one hundred unpublished drawings by Goya, in the exact size and colours of the original, followed by a critical study signed by F. Boix and F. J. Sanchez Canton, Academicians of Art, and a catalogue of the drawings reproduced.

This is the first volume of a series of five, in a limited edition, which will reveal the treasures of the complete collection of 472 Goya drawings in the possession of the Prado Gallery. In no way does the personality of Goya manifest itself so richly, multifariously and accurately as through the medium of his drawings. The diversity of his subjects and inspiration, and the variety of his methods of expression, make Goya the most original and prolific of Spanish artists, and the father of modern painting, as his pictures amply prove.

Giovanni Battista Tiepolo, the most versatile of the Venetian artists of the XVIIIth century, is a master "par excellence" of form and line. While his frescoes at Parma, Venice, Madrid and elsewhere reveal his work in its perfection of finish, the boldness of his imagination, the overwhelming genius of the master is perhaps even better evidenced by his sketches and drawings, many of which were the preliminary studies for his masterpieces.

Tiepolo's drawings reveal an exquisite quality of workmanship, and permit a clearer revelation of his technical perfection, of the myriad nuances of his sensitive line, than his large frescoes. Occasionally the effectiveness of linear treatment is heightened by deft strokes of the brush to emphasise some plastic accent, some formal subtlety.

The author of this highly representative collection is recognised as the foremost living authority on Venetian art. He has combed the public and private collections in which Tiepolo's works are to be found, and from which the two hundred full page drawings have been selected with great scholarly discrimination.

This publication is unquestionably the most important memorial that has ever been dedicated to the great Venetian master; it excels both in the extent of its documentation and in the range and quality of the collotype plates which are as perfect as modern science can fashion.

The text precedes the plates, each of which is protected by a stout tissue on which an accurate description of its subject is printed.

With 130 illustrations representing selected examples of the contemporary glass-maker's art.

4to, cloth. London, 1931.

£1 10s

"Steel and glass are without doubt the two elements which will characterise the 20th century and will give their name to it." So prophesied Eugène Houtart, at the Universal Exhibition of 1900: and the prophecy is already coming true. The beautiful craft of glass-making has taken a new lease of life. Not only have fresh uses been found for glass, and its applications been greatly increased, but to-day it is also the medium for decorative art of a high order. The collector has as wide and fascinating a terrain to explore in the productions of modern glass-makers, as in old Venetian or Waterford. We may instance the engraved glass of Orrefors, of Lobmeyr and Jablonec, the inimitable finely-wrought crystal of English glass-makers, the whimsical figures of Bimini and Cappelin, the delicate fantasies of Lalique, like "the frozen breath of the Polar night."

"Modern Glass" gives an account of the aims and methods of the master glass-makers of to-day, and the results they have achieved, together with a consideration of those further developments in the use of glass in architecture, lighting and furniture which indicate the advent of the "Glass Age."

The illustrations have been carefully selected as representative examples of the work of the best glass artists of our time, and in themselves constitute a pictorial guide for the collector, manufacturer, and interior decorator, as well as for the many who wish to adorn their homes with well-chosen pieces of modern glass, or to make use of it in its most up-to-date form.

With 160 plates.
2 vols., half leather. Paris, 1928. £9 9s
The last few years have witnessed a remarkable change in the attitude of the archaeological world towards the Romanesque monuments of Spain. Accurate investigation disclosed the fact that they were not only of high artistic quality, but full of originality, and frequently earlier than the corresponding phases of art elsewhere in Europe. That is to say that Spain now proves to have been a leader during the Romanesque period.
In the present book, the attempt has been made to set forth succinctly and simply, a resumé of the latest results with detailed reference to preceding literature. The purpose is to make the new knowledge of Spanish Romanesque sculpture accessible and to illustrate it with plates of such high quality as to make clear its aesthetic importance.
For the first time, the story of pre-Romanesque sculpture in Spain is traced from the sarcophagi of the Roman and early Christian period to the birth of Romanesque sculpture in the second half of the eleventh century. In the text, an effort is made to place Spanish sculpture in its relationship with the allied arts in Spain, and also to show its relationship with the sculpture of other parts of Europe. Emphasis is laid on the existence of pre-Romanesque sculpture throughout Europe as well as Spain, and several new monuments are cited.

The study of French mediaeval painting dates from comparatively recent times, for it was not until the reign of Louis-Philippe that certain investigators turned their attention to this branch of French art. At the beginning of the present century the excellent works of L. Delisle, Haseloff, Durrieu and H. Martin began to introduce a little order into the study of manuscript illumination, while other experts, such as H. Bouchot, H. de Loo, P. Vitry, J. Guiffrey and P. Marcel, devoted their attention more especially to the easel-paintings. Lastly, in 1904, there came the exhibition of French primitives, which marked an important stage in the history of this subject.

Despite the above studies, however, there was still no work which dealt in a comprehensive manner with French Gothic painting in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries and combined a study of the evolution of fresco and easel-painting with that of manuscript illumination, which latter ought not to be treated separately from the other two. M. P. A. Lemoisne has endeavoured to fill this gap with the volume which he has written for the Pantheon Series.

Having made a prolonged study of illuminated manuscripts and played an important part in the promotion of the exhibition of French primitives, the Keeper of the Cabinet des Estampes de la Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, was particularly fitted for such a task. He combines the method of the historian with the precision of the student of documents and this has enabled him not only to deal objectively with the different works and to use prudence in his deductions, but also to add to his vast knowledge of painting precious elements drawn from the study of documents which must be consulted by all who desire to give a complete history of painting in France during the period in question.

M. Lemoisne's book commences with the reign of Philippe le Bel, when the art of the thirteenth century was beginning to feel the first effects of humanism, and closes with the reign of Louis XII which witnessed the final triumph of the Renaissance over Gothic art.

The book thus embraces a large part of the reigns of the first Valois, and its most novel and interesting feature is the reproduction of some of the admirable frescoes to be found in French churches—so little known to the general public—side by side with those of easel-paintings.

M. Lemoisne's volume is the latest addition to the Pantheon series and in order to give the reader an idea of its quality we cannot do better than quote the following extract from an article by Mr. Roger Fry written for the Nation and Athenaeum regarding other volumes of the same series:—"These admirable publications, strike rather a new note in works on art-history. They adhere to a mean between the extremely costly and magnificent works filled with coloured reproductions which have appeared of late and the ordinary art-history illustrated with half-tone blocks. They are quarto volumes, extremely well printed and got up. They are written, as the above list shows, by some of the best authorities on the respective subjects, and in each volume the text is followed by about a hundred full-page collotype reproductions, but without any attempt at colour. Everything therefore has been planned to give the student of art the utmost available material without running into undue expense."

- 1215 RICCI (Corrado). North Italian Painting of the Cinquecento. (Piedmont—Liguria—Lombardy—Emilia).
 With 84 collotype plates.
 Folio, half leather. Paris, 1929. £4 14s 6d

Corrado Ricci's book deals with the turn of the fifteenth and the sixteenth century, which is one of the most fascinating periods in the history of European painting. It was the time when the Gothic tradition was at war with the new liberal spirit of the Renaissance. Classical influences struggled with the mysticism of the Gothic spirit, whole philosophies collapsed and a new world arose from the ruins.

The present book affords an opportunity to watch this spectacle as exemplified in the history of painting. It shows the attachment to tradition, the turmoil and struggle of the movement and its slow penetration towards the new, the "modern" spirit.

Corrado Ricci, curator of antiquities of the kingdom of Italy, has summarised the work of many years in this book. He has "placed" the influence and mutual relations of all the painters concerned and it is thanks to his efforts that to-day many an artist has found the place that was his due.

Leonardo da Vinci stands at the head of the new movement of the Renaissance and his influence dominates the painting of Northern Italy for a whole century. His personality has given rise to important problems, which the author has solved in this publication. Details from Leonardo's best known pictures are reproduced.

The school which followed Leonardo as master exercised a decisive influence in Northern Italy. This influence, the relation between the members of the group to each other, described in detail by the author, give evidence of Leonardo's greatness and of his fascinating personality. Other influences, emanating from other districts, also played their part, notably those which are associated with the princely houses, especially those of the Sforza family of Milan. Among Leonardo's followers there were also those who copied his technique, coarsening his "sfumato" and distorting the famous enigmatic smile. At the same time works of great importance were created by such men as Andrea Solario, Giovanni Antonio Boltraffio, Bernardo Luini and Sodoma, whose work is represented in most of the great galleries.

The evolution of this movement leads to Correggio who, at the end of the century, surpassed his contemporaries as Leonardo has surpassed his own at the beginning. Correggio provides the link to the Baroque style. He created problems which had hitherto been alien to the art of painting. He attacked the problem of light and shade which he loved for their own sake, in an altogether new manner.

From the above it will be seen that the present publication deals with a particularly vital section in the history of Italian art. Corrado Ricci's descriptive powers make the reading of his book a valuable stimulus. His book will be indispensable to all libraries, collectors, museums and to those commercially and professionally concerned with the art of this period.

- 1216 RINALDIS (Aldo de). Neapolitan Painting of the Seicento.
 With 80 collotype plates.
 Folio, half leather. Paris, 1929. £4 14s 6d

It is an interesting fact that both Naples and Genoa, the two great Mediterranean ports, were late in shaking themselves free from the conventional form of art which had once been common to all Italy. The great masters of Florence, Venice and Rome had solved most of the problems which beset their path long before the Neapolitans realised that painting meant something more than the mere repetition of stereotyped figures set in uncomfortable attitudes.

It is perhaps for this reason that the study of Southern Italian art has hitherto been somewhat neglected. It is true that Naples produced no pioneer in the sense that Giotto was a pioneer; but, on the other hand, the history of Neapolitan painting forms, as it were, an important and significant epilogue to the history of painting in other parts of Italy, Raphael, Titian, Michelangelo, Correggio, had already produced their great masterpieces: Giorgio Vasari, the historian, had said that nothing more remained to be done in art.

But from the point of view of the painters of Southern Italy there was much more to be done. The forms of art which had been perfected in the north had to be modified to suit the livelier temperament and warmer climate of the south. They had to be transformed into a vehicle for expressing the joyous things of this world as well as the spiritual things of the world to come. They had to be moulded to portray with startling, almost theatrical realism the vivid hues of death and all the gruesome details of a martyrdom or an assassination. The art of Naples and the surrounding districts was thus in a sense a digest of the art of other regions seen through southern eyes; enlivened on the one hand, by sheer sensuous enjoyment and on the other, sternly repressed by the leaders of the Counter-Reformation; a phase of Italian art growing on Italian soil that was yet under the influence of Arragon and Spain.

Signor Aldo de Rinaldis, who has undertaken the task of writing the history of this most interesting phase of Italian art, is a scholar of repute, and holds an important position in the State Department responsible for the preservation of works of art in southern Italy. He is thus in a position to speak with the voice of authority and has already published a series of monographs on most of the principle artists who flourished in Naples. In the present volume he deals with the many and diverse factors which, each in its own way, played a part in shaping the Neapolitan school, and traces the development of art during the half-century that witnessed the triumphs of Battistello Caracciolo, Massimo Stanzione, Bernardo Cavallino, Luca Giordano, Salvator Rosa, and many another artist whose works are numbered among the treasures of our great collections. The history of Italian painting is not complete without a history of its Neapolitan epilogue.

In this book some of the greatest scholars of the present day survey six thousand years of history and four great civilizations that have flourished by the Nile—the Pharaonic, the Alexandrine, the Christian and the Muslim. Egypt has witnessed the coming and going of conquering races, and they have left such a deep impress on its soil that The Valley of the Nile is a true record of the succeeding epochs in the history of mankind; yet an original and native element has survived throughout these superimposed cultures manifesting itself more especially in the craft of weavers and potters. The contribution of Egypt through the ages to world-culture, the unparalleled magnificence and refinement of its sculpture and architecture, the sustained interest of its popular arts and crafts are here illustrated in a superb series of plates. The public and private collections of the whole world have been drawn upon and many objects specially photographed for this work to render their beauty adequately. The text by undisputed authorities in conjunction with the illustrations composes a reference work indispensable to the library of the Egyptologist and Orientalist, a guide for every visitor to Egypt and an inspiration to every lover of art.

In this book are brought together a series of illustrations covering all the varied aspects of Rowlandson's genius; not only his more familiar powers as a broad humourist, but also his wide and keen interest in life and character of every class, his eye for incident, his appreciation of fair forms and country scenes, and, above all, his outstanding ability as a draughtsman. The collection should be invaluable alike to the student of history and manners and to the lover of art.

Fifteenth century woodcuts and metalcuts, dotted prints and impressions in paste are among the earliest productions of the graphic arts. Scattered over museums, libraries and private collections throughout the world these valuable artistic documents of the close of the Middle Age were for the first time brought together in 1891 by Mr. W. L. Schreiber, who in his Manual de l'amateur de la gravure sur bois et sur métal au XVe siècle gave the exact iconographical description of all the specimens then available.

Since that date an immense amount of new material has been brought to light, so that the 1891 Manuel, of which the first volumes were out of print many years ago, must be considered a work both incomplete and out-of-date. The new German Handbuch by the same author, containing the results of all the new investigations and discoveries made during a period of no less than 35 years, carries the number of single prints as described in the 1891 Manuel from 3000 to about 5000. Thus the new publication is universally recognised as the standard work on the subject. The whole range of fifteenth century graphic and typographic art is now covered by four important series of publications which will supplement each other in more than one respect. While the Gesamtkatalog der Wiegendrucke and its pictorial complement Der Bilderschmuck der Frühdrucke (Schramm) will establish themselves as the foremost authorities in the field of fifteenth century typography and book-illustration, Schreiber's new Handbuch and its pictorial complement Einblattdrucke des 15. Jahrhunderts published by Heitz are the unrivalled standard works on single prints of the same period.

In consideration of the fact that fifteenth century book-illustration is dealt with in the above named work by Schramm, the new Handbuch is limited only to the full description of single prints. The method adopted in the general arrangement of the matter and in the description of the individual items is the same as in the first edition. In order to preserve the old numbers of the entries which have become the standard for identification for 35 years throughout international literature, the two thousand items not referred to in the Manuel have been interpolated at their proper place and are marked by letters of the alphabet. The increase in material brought about by the large amount of new additions has caused the work to be divided into 8 volumes, the contents of which are as follows:—

1. Representations drawn from the Old and New Testament, the Gospel apocrypha and biblical legends (No. 1—735 m.); 250 pages.
2. The Holy Trinity, God, Jesus, and the Virgin (No. 736—1173); 185 pages.
3. The Saints (No. 1174—1782); 243 pages.
4. Religious representations both mystic and allegorical, profane subjects (No. 1783—2074); 172 pages.
5. Metalcuts (Dotted prints) religious and profane (No. 2171—2767); 230 pages.
6. Impressions in paste, engravings in intaglio, woodcuts not representing pictures, register of monograms, lists of passepartout-borders and attributes of Saints (No. 2768—2998 and 2048—2170); 160 pages.
7. Woodcuts and metalcuts, their history, varieties, development and iconological foundations; 189 pages.
8. Supplementary matter. Indices; XIV; 190 pages.

Singer's portrait catalogue will be something of a German counterpart to O'Donoghue's Catalogue of Engraved British Portraits. Just as O'Donoghue registers the portraits preserved in the British Museum, so Singer gives a catalogue of portraits to be found in seventeen large German collections. The difference, however, is that O'Donoghue's work is limited to British portraits only, while Singer presents all portraits of the collections dealt with. This feature gives the catalogue its universal interest.

In the first place, the catalogue is based on the extensive collections of portraits preserved in the Departments of Prints at Dresden, Greiz, and Coburg. In addition, fourteen other German collections have been laid under contribution, of which registers were either extant or could easily be drawn up. But for the Hensel and Metternich collections at Breslau and Vienna respectively, all the other collections are public institutions, viz., at Augsburg, Berlin, Halle, Hannover, Heidelberg, Munich, Münster, and Vienna. The work includes the whole of the portraits to be found in the above-named collections, regardless of nationality, social position, or period.

Thus, all European nations are represented, nay all eminent personages in universal history, as far as engraved portraits of them could be ascertained, have found a place in this catalogue. As to the large mass of portraits of saints and persons of ancient history, only those likenesses have been selected which show any approach to genuine representation. In all, the catalogue will contain about 100,000 portraits taken from more than 25,000 persons of either sex. Both persons and portraits are marked by successive numbers, by which they may be quoted.

The persons represented are arranged in alphabetical order. The family name is followed by the Christian names, title, profession and dates. The cataloguing of the portraits themselves is done in three columns—First column: Artists and engravers; second column: Technique employed (only reproducible procedures being included such as drawing, engraving, woodcut, lithography, collotype, photograph, yet not half-tone), size, time of execution, and, eventually, some brief additional notes and references; third column: Location of the copies known.

At the end of each volume there will be indices of the professions of the persons represented and of the artists, the latter containing the original portraitists as well as those who worked after their designs. On the publication of all volumes these two indices will combine into one, forming the concluding volume of the work.

The "Allgemeine Bildnisskatalog" appears in large octavo size on paper free from wood-pulp. Each volume will contain about 3,000 persons on ca. 20 quires (= 320 pages). Two volumes will be published per year, so that the entire work will be ready in 1933.

Vols. I-II have appeared in 1930. They contain the preface, a key to the abbreviations used in the central column and for location of the copies, the descriptions of portraits from Aack to Coligny (persons 1—5,574, portraits 1—16,078), and two indices.

The purchaser of the first volume is obliged to take the whole work.

The author gives an interesting sketch of the history of metalwork, dating from 900 B.C., and the earliest Celtic influence on the iron industry in Spain. He traces the influence of other invading races, such as the Romans, Goths, and Arabs, and describes how art in metalwork was evolved from the purely utilitarian objects that were first fashioned from iron. The illustrations show some interesting early wrought-iron candelabra, grilles, weapons, keys, etc.

It has been claimed that the work announced herewith by Pietro Toesca far excels any attempt of the same kind which has been directed towards the study of the same subject. The author covers one of the most important periods of Florentine Art with a mastery and a clarity which raises his book above the level of a dry treatise into the realm of a penetrating synthesis.

The problems presented by Trecento Painting in Florence are particularly complex and the author disentangles this complexity by lucid analysis. He has avoided the dry scientific dissertation and offers instead a convincing picture in such a way that scholar and student, collector and amateur, will read his work with equal pleasure and benefit. The reputation the author has attained in such works as La pittura e la Miniatura della Lombardia and his contribution to the famous Storia dell'Arte Italiana is here destined to be greatly enhanced.

The central artist with which the book deals is Giotto and his manifold relations and influence upon his century. The origins of his art are investigated and a subjective study based upon the inner nature of this supreme painter's work forms the centre of a book which for the first time shows Giotto against the background of his own age and points out his significance for his succeeding generations.

In accordance with the general principles of the Pantheon Series the present publication is not a monograph in the proper sense of that word, but precisely by analysing a century of Florentine art the real greatness of its outstanding figure, Giotto, is perhaps seen in its proper relief for the first time.

Particular care has been spent upon obtaining the finest possible photographs and reproductions therefrom. The text is printed by the famous Officina Bodoni and a special library binding has been designed to make the presentation of so important a work harmonious with the importance of its contents.

Professor Venturi, who fills the chair of the history of art at Rome University, has devoted many years of study of the works of the great sculptor, Giovanni Pisano. The fruit of his research is now offered to the public and constitutes the first exhaustive treatise on this famous artist, whose work may be regarded as the most perfect expression of Italian sculpture during the latter part of the XIIIth and the beginning of the XIVth century.

The significance of Pisano's creative genius extends beyond the period in which he lived. His work bears comparison with the masterpieces of all times and is hardly inferior to the achievements of Donatello and Michelangelo.

Pisano took up, where his father left it, the work upon the Cathedral and Baptistry at Pisa. He invested the Siennese architecture with a magical life. Much of his sculpture attains to a visionary splendour, awakening in the observer a most profound sense of awe. He lit a torch which shone throughout Tuscany and Umbria, from Pisa, Sienna and Florence along the Tyrrhenean coast, from Lombardy to Calabria and Sicily.

Professor Venturi attached special importance to the inclusion, in this book, of photographs of such details as illustrate in high relief the particular genius of this sculptor. Many of these pictures were taken especially for this publication by the author.

The text and the very large number of plates combine to make this monograph one of the most important contributions to the history of the fine arts to be published in recent years; further, it honours the sculptor with a literary monument worthy of his genius.

Professor Venturi's work must inevitably find a place in every library, museum and collection where more than a pretence is made to keep abreast of modern research and its publication.

With 120 collotype plates.

4to, half leather. Paris, 1930.

£6 6s

The history of fourteenth-century Sieneſe painting is to an exceptional degree the history of the leading personalities of the period. In the present book, therefore, the author is primarily concerned with the influence exerted by the Sieneſe masters throughout Italy and the whole of Europe and only ſecondarily with the minor names and the later ſucceſſors of this rich and highly individual inheritance. For, charming as the work of pupils often is, it counts for little by the ſide of the performances of the masters who created a new pictorial uniſerſe.

By way of introduction the author outlines the achievements of XIIIth century Sienese painting, and demonstrates how even at this early date we can already distinguish every genuine Sienese artistic trait, especially in the work of the first and greatest of them all—Duccio di Boninsegna. His real descendant is Simone Martini, the great master of Sienese Gothic. If he did not pick up all the threads that Duccio had thrown out, his acute sensibility for line and colour was certainly in advance of that of his predecessor. He transformed Duccio's solemnity and his almost classical severity into the beauty of tenderness and grace and animation. Pietro Lorenzetti is more obviously dependant on Duccio than his brother Ambrogio; but both are deeply indebted to him, and especially in as much as he enabled them to become pioneers in the representation of space and landscape. The creative wealth and the spiritual purity and profundity of Ambrogio place him among the very greatest masters and his work at the pinnacle of fourteenth-century Sienese painting. The meagre stature of his followers is to be ascribed not so much to the rapid decline of the political importance of Siena towards the middle of the Trecento as to the unparalleled congestion of masters in so confined an area. Creative power is exhausted after a period of excessive growth, and there now grew up a generation of painters so faithfully devoted to tradition that the development of their own creative personalities was stunted. It is to their credit, however, that the tradition to which they testify is alive.

In this work the author, who is well known for his elaborate researches upon Duccio and Giotto, gives us the result of his long and comprehensive investigations. The resulting publication is no mere summary of previous studies reported in detail elsewhere, but a purely original exposition of a great and important theme, illustrated, moreover, by a selection of carefully chosen reproductions of notable works, a great number of which have never before been published.

NOTE.—In conjunction with the above work we would remind the reader of the companion volume by Pietro Toesca on Florentine Painting of the Trecento (No. 1240 of this catalogue).

- 1259 [BROTHERTON LIBRARY.] A Catalogue of the Ancient Manuscripts and Early Printed Books in the Brotherton Library, compiled by John Alexander Symington, Librarian. With an Introduction by George Parker Winship of Harvard College Library.

4to, cloth. Leeds, Printed for Private Circulation, 1931. £2 10s

Maggs Bros. have been appointed sole agents for the sale of this work.

This volume is the first of a series of Catalogues of the Library which the late Lord Brotherton designed to be a National Library for North-Eastern England.

In this first volume, Mr. Symington has described the principal Manuscripts and Early Printed Books in the Library, including Classical and Illuminated Manuscripts and Historical Deeds and Documents dating from the XIth to the XVth century, together with a selection of specimens of Early Printing, dating from the Gutenberg Bible c. 1450 to the early XVIth century, and including works remarkable either for beauty of type or illustration, or interesting because of the author or subject. The descriptions and bibliographical notes are detailed and lengthy, and the work should prove to be of great utility.

The Catalogue is profusely illustrated with 176 Facsimiles of Illuminated Manuscripts and Historical Documents, Title-pages and Printing Types, showing Colophons, Devices and Woodcuts.

One of the chief features of this work is a very useful check-list of the Incunabula in the Brotherton Library, amounting to over 600 specimens, including some of the most important books of the 15th century, and the original leaves issued with Schreiber's "Woodcuts from Books of the 15th Century," Haebler's "German Incunabula," "Der Italienische Wiegendruck," and "West-European Incunabula," which are here indexed for the first time. An Index of Printers is also included.

Cervantes's works, the editions of them in their original text or in translation, the imitations of them at home and abroad, their influence, the facts of the life of Cervantes, and the criticism to which his works have been subjected, all these things have entered into the constitution of a host of books and articles. As a record of these books and articles this Bibliography is published, in the hope that it will be useful to both scholars and the general reader.

Il n'y a pas dans l'art français de gloire plus pure que celle de Corot. La plus tendre soumission à la nature, l'œil le plus sensible à l'harmonie des formes, une vie de travail acharné nous a valu une suite ininterrompue de chef-d'œuvres sans tache.

Tout a été dit sur la valeur éminente de ses peintures. Mais sans doute l'Exposition d'estampes et de dessins présentée à la Bibliothèque Nationale durant les mois de Janvier et Février 1931, aura-t-elle révélé à plus d'un visiteur quelques aspects plus secrets de son génie.

Corot occupe parmi les peintres-graveurs une place exceptionnelle. Des cent planches sorties de ses mains, il n'y en a pas une qui n'ait le charme d'une confidence ou la ferveur d'une effusion. Ce que l'on n'avait peut-être pas assez dit c'est que la fraîcheur de l'impression y est servie par le métier le plus probe et le plus fort.

Quand Corot a abordé la gravure, il avait derrière lui trente années de dessins exécutés avec une conscience et une précision incroyables. Son trait était devenu d'une concision, d'une audace et d'une liberté magistrales. Il n'y avait pas d'artiste mieux préparé à prendre en mains la pointe des graveurs.

Il en fit la preuve d'emblée quand il pratiqua, la premier, la technique si curieuse et trop oubliée des "clichés-verre." Le procédé, à peine modifié par la suite, consistait à graver à la pointe une couche opaque de collodion étalée sur une plaque de verre. On produisait ainsi par le dessin un véritable "négatif" dont il pouvait être tiré des épreuves sur papier sensible, exactement comme dans le cas d'un cliché photographique. La couleur choisie pour le support et puis certains virages, amoureusement étudiés et recherchés, ajoutaient aux résultats de gravure la plus étonnante saveur de rendu.

Les épreuves anciennes, tirées avec dévotion, sont d'une délicatesse admirable dans les teintes et nulle part peut-être le trait de Corot ne se montre aussi expressif.

Comme elle l'avait fait en de semblables occasions, la Réunion des Bibliothèques Nationales a décidé de perpétuer le souvenir de l'admirable Exposition de 1931 en publiant un album de vingt planches choisies parmi les eaux-fortes les plus frémissantes de l'artiste, le plus harmonieuses de ses lithographies, les plus précieux de ses "clichés-verre."

On a insisté dans le choix des "clichés-verre"—qui ont causé l'émerveillement des visiteurs de l'Exposition—en raison, non seulement de la qualité de leur expression, mais aussi de l'originalité de leur facture.

Les épreuves qui ont servi à la reproduction sont d'une rareté sans prix et d'une parfaite beauté, elles font l'orgueil du Cabinet des Estampes.

The wide-spread interest that attaches to the early productions of the Iberian press, is in no small part due to their illustrations. Students of art and lovers of books are equally attracted by the marked individuality of artistic expression that holds a place quite of its own in the history of European engraving. Though Iberian incunabula have been treated bibliographically with the greatest possible fullness in Haebler's well-known publications, the iconography of the subject has never yet met with an equally comprehensive study.

Martin Kurz provides for the first time a complete and systematically arranged catalogue of all known engravings produced in the Iberian Peninsula during the fifteenth century. It records not only the whole of book-illustrations, but gives also a full review of single engravings both on copper and wood.

Accordingly the book is divided into two main sections: Prints and book illustrations.

Of Iberian single prints the author has been able to put on record seven copper-engravings and two woodcuts, all of Spanish origin. They are given a very detailed description, inasmuch as each of them has survived in one copy only. The earliest engraving is a Catalan portrait of Don Carlos de Viana (about 1462-63). Of three other prints the names of the artists could be ascertained: Francesc Domènec and Francesc Descós.

The main body of the work is occupied by the description of book illustrations. Here the author passes in review 372 books and broadsides, including also such incunables as are remarkable for their historiated initials, border-pieces, and printers' marks.

The description of these illustrations contains bibliographical notes about the work itself: author, short-title, language, place of printing, printer, date, size, works of reference, facsimile reproductions, and the original title or the beginning of the text. Then follows an enumeration of the illustrations, each item containing the running number, indication of leaf, signature, technique, subject represented, inscription, size, reproductions, and, finally, location and condition of copies known.

At end is a detailed iconographic index arranged by the technique employed and the subject matter. This is followed by lists of artists, printers and publishers, places of printing, owners, table of concordance, bibliographical works, and, at last, of such impressions as have been excluded as pseudo-incunabula.

The work is the result of six years of careful study. The difficulty of bringing together the mostly unpublished iconographic materials may be best realised by the fact that out of 372 illustrated books and broadsides no less than 169 have come down to us in single copies which are scattered all over the world. In locating these copies, the author records 189 owners, of whom 64 are resident in Spain, 11 in Portugal, 26 in the U.S.A., 25 in Germany, 16 in England and 11 in France.

As it stands, the work with its immense mass of detail, makes claim to finality. It throws open a wide and fascinating field of research which will engage the attention not only of the student of history and art, but also of the collector and every lover of fine old books.

Or the complete set, in 5 portfolios. Munich, 1827-8. £105

The Collector of Incunabula and the Student of Typography will find in this collection, the only one of its kind, ample material for comparing the æsthetic, as well as the historical, values of the earliest European presses. In his interesting and concise English text, Konrad Haebler, probably the most expert authority on the subject of Incunabula, gives a clear bibliographical outline of the works from which his Original Leaves were taken, and adds interesting and all-important details on the influence of the various printers one on the other; mentioning similar "cuts of types" used in different presses.

In Part I., 110 Original German Incunabula Leaves were chosen from some of the most beautiful and epoch-making books issued by the famous presses of Augsburg, Bamberg, Basle, Blaubeuren, Cologne, Esslingen, Freiburg, Hagenau, Heidelberg, Mainz, Meissen, Memmingen, Nuremberg, Passau, Reutlingen, Speier, Strassburg, Tuebingen, Ulm, and Wuerzburg.

In Part II., the 110 Original Leaves are specimens from some of the world-known Italian Incunabula issued by the famous presses in Bologna, Brescia, Cremona, Ferrara, Florence, Milan, Mantova, Naples, Padova, Parma, Pavia, Reggio d'Emilio, Rome, Treviso, Venice, Verona, and Vicenza.

In Part III., the shortest but not the least interesting of the series, because of the extreme rarity of some of its specimens, includes 60 Original Incunabula Leaves (one being a beautiful genuine Caxton), taken from some of the rarest and most famous books printed in Netherlands (Antwerp, Delft, Deventer, Louvain, Utrecht and Zwolle); France (Lyons, Paris, Rouen, Poitiers, Toulouse, and Vienne); Spain and Portugal (Burgos, Lisbon, Seville, Toledo, and Valencia); London and Westminster.

Each original Leaf is nicely mounted, with an explanatory label. Only 100 copies were put out of the English edition, and but one or two sets remain.

It is most interesting to note that Haebler's Collection of Incunabula Leaves, though of an important chronological and historical interest, is even more an attempt at illustrating the Progress, Art and Perfection, attained and unsurpassed, of the First Printers, than to form what might be called a specimen-album of famous books issued during the fifteenth century.

With 152 facsimile plates, in red and black, of fine books in Gothic letter from presses of fifteenth century Germany, German-Switzerland and Austria-Hungary.

Folio. London, 1928.

£12 12s

The author's previous works on printing in the roman letter are written from a fresh point of view—that of the collector interested rather in the beauty than in the archaeology of books. His studies therefore have drawn attention to many printers whose merits had not hitherto been recognised by those collectors whose appreciation of books is based upon historical considerations. Although an undeniable fascination attaches to every member of that class of books known as incunabula, i.e. books published during the fifteenth century, it cannot be gainsaid that many of the productions of this period are more conspicuous for their archaeological than for their aesthetic interest. A volume of first-class facsimiles selected in accordance with a high typographical standard is now available, and collectors of books of the fifteenth century will be grateful for Mr. Morison's new volume. Limiting himself to the consideration of the German books printed in that country, the author has selected from the uniquely rich and representative British Museum collection, one hundred and fifty-two of the best examples of Gothic composition. These plates exhibit only the finest specimens of that classic Black Letter, unrivalled in its stateliness, with which printing made its début and which was so soon to fall into decline. No fewer than half the plates are in two colours, and while the volume deals only with typography not a few of the pages embody examples of woodcut illustration.
