A COLLECTION OF BABYLONIAN TABLETS

discovered at Khorsabad, near Mosul.

Mostly belonging to the reign of SARGON I, King of Agade, who, according to the latest authorities, lived about B.C. 3750.

The inscriptions, in archaic Babylonian characters, are records of the sale of houses, land, corn, etc., marriage contracts, deeds and commercial documents, magical and astrological calculations, lists of Priests and Palaces, etc., throwing much light on Babylonian chronology and the development of law and civilization.
