temper, easy morals, love without its ardours, poverty without its pain, patriotism without its fatigue.
“Béranger was skilled in the art of popular song; he knew how to evolve swiftly his little lyric drama; he knew how to wing his verses with a volant refrain; he could catch the sentiment of the moment and of the multitude, he could be gay with touches of tenderness, and smile through a tear reminiscent of departed youth and pleasure and lisette.
“In the history of politics the songs of Béranger count for much; in the history of literature the poet has a little niche of his own.” (Dowden).

“The eighteenth century, while preserving its form, thought to re-animate it by the provocatives of scenic decoration and more rapid and more convulsive action.

“Prosper Jolyot de Crébillon (1674-1762), a diligent reader of seventeenth-century romances, transported the devices of romance, its horrors, its pathetic incidents, its disguises, its surprises, its discoveries, into the theatre, and substituted a tragedy of violent situations for the tragedy of character. His Rhadamiste et Zénobie (1711), which has an air of Corneillean grandeur and heroism, notwithstanding a plot so complicated that it is difficult to follow, was received with unmeasured enthusiasm. To be atrocious within the rules was to create a new and thrilling sensation." (Dowden).

A charming set in dainty bindings.

"Dancourt had a true power of observation, and a quick instinct for theatrical effect: he exhibits in the 'Chevalier à la Mode,' and the 'Bourgeoises à la Mode,' if not with exact fidelity, at least in telling caricature the struggle of classes in the society around him, wealth, ambitious for rank, rank prepared to sell itself for wealth."—(Dowden).

- 283 DANGEAU (Marquis de). Journal du Marquis de Dangeau publié en entier pour la première fois par MM. Soulié, Dussieux, De Chennevières, Mantz, De Montaiglon, avec les additions inédites du Duc de Saint-Simon publiées par M. Feuillet de Conches.

10 vols., full crushed red morocco gilt, two-line fillet border on sides, inside dentelles, g. e. Paris, Firmin Didot Frères, 1854. £13 13s

A very fine copy.

"Dangeau's Journal is a well informed and exact chronicle extending over the years from 1684-1720. Saint Simon found it 'd'une fadeur à faire vomir'; its servility towards the King and Madame de Maintenon enraged him, 'but it exhibited facts in an orderly sequence. On the basis of Dangeau's literal transcript of occurrences, St. Simon's memoirs came to be written.'"—(Dowden).

“When Delille translated the Georgics he was saluted by Voltaire as the Abbé Virgil. The salons heard him with rapture recite his verses as from the tripod of inspiration. He was the favourite of Marie Antoinette. Aged and blind, he was a third with Homer and Milton. In death they crowned his forehead, and for three days the mourning crowd gazed on all that remained of their great poet.”—(Dowden).

 The Martin Mar-Prelate tracts were written for the most part by John Penry (1559-1593) a puritan. He was aided by John Udall and Job Throckmorton. Penry printed these tracts at his own press, avoiding prosecution by continually moving. The tracts were anti-clerical in nature and gave rise to a series of antagonistic replies. In 1590 the Author of "The Almond for a Parrot" (attributed to Thomas Nash) denounced Penry as the protagonist of this controversial drama. Penry fled to Scotland, but on returning to London in 1593 was arrested and hanged for treason.

"In the plays of Nivelle de la Chaussée (1692-1754) the new type of the bourgeois drama is already formed. The relations of wife and husband, of father and child, form the theme of all his plays. In Mélanide, father and son, unrecognised, are rivals in love; the wife and mother, supposed to be dead, is discovered; the husband returns to her arms, and is reconciled to his son. It is the victory of nature and innate goodness; comic intention and comic power are wholly absent. La Chaussée's morals are those of an optimist; but those modern domestic tragedies, the ethics of which do not err by over-sanguine views of human nature, may trace their ancestry to Mélanide." 1614 ——— Bibliographical Decameron: or, Ten Days' Pleasant Discourse upon Illuminated Manuscripts and Subjects connected with Early Engraving, Typography, and Bibliography.

Large Paper. 3 vols. London, 1817.

Bibliographical, Antiquarian, and Picturesque Tour in France and Germany.

3 vols., extended to 6 vols. Large Paper. London, 1821.

Remarkably fine and most interesting copies, printed on Large Paper, with the series of exquisite engravings published with the works, proofs on India Paper, and most elaborately and tastefully extra-illustrated by the insertion of 1,157 additional portraits and plates, all of them being fine impressions, and many very rare.

Together 9 vols., thick imperial 8vo, bound by CHARLES LEWIS in half dark green morocco extra, top edges gilt.

London, 1817-21. £150

A most desirable collection, commenced in 1826 by Wm. Turner, and continued and completed by F. Darley, who had the whole bound by Charles Lewis. At this early date, it was quite possible to obtain the rarer prints, which have of late years either disappeared or become too costly for extra-illustrating.

Among the portraits (which are all fine) we would specially note:—

DIBDIN (T. F.) With Presentation STURT (John, the Engraver). Mezzotint Inscription. after Faithorne.

Fournier's Manuel contains the most useful information about type and type-founding which could be obtained when Fournier wrote. The specimens of type are the most important part of the book, some of which were lent him by Fournier Aîné, etc., his typographical ornaments are charming little designs, rendered for typographic use just as such things should be.

"The Manual is a work which no student of French typography can afford to be without. The simplicity of the author's style, his naïve pride in his own performances, and its mass of information make a book which will become a favourite with any one who reads it. It is the work not of a scholar, but of an observing, experienced, quick-witted master of his art, who in cultivating that art had cultivated himself."

London, 1910. (Published at £34 13s.)

£15 15s

The manuscript of the German translation of the HORTULUS ANIMAE, decorated with splendid miniatures, which has now been printed in perfect facsimile for the first time, is not only one of the greatest treasures of the Imperial Royal Court Library at Vienna, but is also one of the most beautiful illuminated manuscripts in existence. It has long been highly valued by writers on the history of art, and has repeatedly been the subject of learned studies, and now that the excellence of modern methods of colour-printing has made it possible to reproduce the original most faithfully in all its brilliant splendour of colouring, the publication was undertaken.

In the third volume of his "Bibliographical Tour in France and Germany," Dr. T. F. Dibdin devotes several pages to the description of this lovely manuscript, and gives five illustrations of the miniatures. Of the latter he says: "such a series of sweetly drawn, and highly finished subjects, is hardly anywhere to be seen—and certainly nowhere to be eclipsed."

The whole manuscript is reproduced in facsimile, all the pages that are decorated with miniatures are in colours and the rest in photolithography.

This Bible, consisting of the Old Testament translated from the Hebrew into Castilian, and known as the Bible of the House of Alba, is now published for the first time. The work of translation was undertaken in 1422 at the request of Don Luis Guzman, Lord of Algaba and Grand Master of the Military Order of Calatrava, by the learned Rabbi Moses Arragel of Guadalfajara. For many years the Manuscript was in the keeping of the Inquisition, who in 1620 presented it to that powerful Minister of Philip IV., the Conde Duque de Olivares, as a token of gratitude for the favours they had received from his father, the Spanish Ambassador in Rome. Finally, it came into the possession of the Family of Alba in 1688.
