Kenyon*), and an A. L. s. $1\frac{1}{2}$ pp. 8vo, by G. F. Watts, green morocco, back and sides tooled in gold
* * A MOST IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING COLLECTION: the two MSS. by Robert Browning (written on both sides of a sheet) are of two of his well-known Cavalier Ballads "Marching Along" and "Give a Rouse," both differ from the printed versions and are probably early drafts. Mrs. Browning's MS. is a copy of one of her husband's poems "A Face," and has at the end the following note by Robert Browning:
I wrote the above poem for the Album of Mrs. Coventry Patmore (the

First Angel of his House), and this copy was made from the rough draught (sic) by E. B. B. Robert Browning, March 27, 1874.

The most interesting of the letters are those from Mrs. Browning, which range from 1836 to 1859, and are addressed to Talfourd, R. H. Horne, Mrs. Jameson, Cornelius Mathews, of New York, Miss Fanny Haworth, etc. Writing to Mathews on April 28, 1843, she says of her future husband:

I do assure you I never saw him in my life—do not know him even by correspondence—and yet, . . . I am very sensitive to the thousand and one stripes with which the assembly of critics doth expound its vocation over him. . . . The truth is—and the world should know the truth—it is easier to find a more faultless writer than a poet of equal genius. Don't let us fall into the category of the sons of Noah. Noah was once drunk, indeed, but once he built the ark, etc.

The two other letters to Mathews, and a long letter to Horne, are full of interesting talk about contemporary poets, and the writer's own work. The letter to Talfourd thanks him for sending her a copy of his tragedy "Ion" (which was lot 1131 of the Browning sale, May, 1913), the four letters to Mrs. Jameson, all dating from 1858-9, contain interesting references to the Browning's friends in Rome and Florence, and show her passionate sympathy for the cause of Italian freedom, none of these five letters are included in Mrs. Browning's published letters. In a long early letter to Mr. Kenyon (also unpublished), Mrs. Browning speaks of her two poems, "The Seraphim," and "Prometheus." Robert Browning's letters include one to Lucas, about contributing to "Once a Week," dated Jan. 17, 1860. In later letters he refers to several of his poems by name, e.g. "Hervé Riel" and "Home Thoughts from Abroad" (as to which, curiously enough, he makes a mistake, for the poem he means is "Home Thoughts from the Sea"). In the same letter, which is addressed to his uncle, Reuben Browning, he alludes to his son's first portrait of him, painted in 1874, as "the best (as far as likeness is concerned) that was ever taken of me." Other interesting letters are addressed to Lord Leighton and to Mrs. Jameson, the latter of which concludes with a eulogy of Correggio:

At which of the Colnaghi's can one see the Correggio you spoke of one evening at Carlyle's? I am just now hungry for his pictures, and mean whenever I am sore at heart to go and get well before the great cupola at ——— but why not versify, since that, or something like it, is my trade?

Could I, heart-broken, reach his place of birth

And stand before his Pictures—could I chuse

But own at once "the sovereign'st thing on earth

Is Parma-city for an inward bruise?"

Venice, Nov. 18th, 1816.

Dear Hay,—This city is a mystery which I mean to unravel at leisure, for it is my intention to remain at Venice during the winter. I have got some very good apartments in the house of a mercante whose donna teaches me the Venetian dialect, so sweet and naive in the mouth of a woman. The Italian has nothing of the whimsicalities of the French language. My reading is confined to Goldoni, whose turn of mind I like. A Plautus, a Terence and a Molière are said to have formed his whole library, but the world and mankind, and womankind too, were his chief study. From that inexhaustible mine his keen & experienced penetration readily embellished his compositions with characters ever real, with all the light gradations which passions throw on every character, & with very striking situations yet as natural, with those which are perpetually springing up amidst the world, but, not being taken notice of, expire in the birth. It is of this kind of wit that Pascal says, "the more wit one has, the more originals one finds among men, whereas your common people discern no difference between men." Goldoni is fertile, simple and various as nature itself. When tired of studying Italian in type I learn it by way of divertisement through the medium of the lips and eyes of Venetian women who, as in the time of Paul Veronese, are still the handsomest and finest shaped of the petticoated tribe in Italy. By the Mass! they are sublime. I am speaking of the middle class, those of the highest orders are generally as ugly as Virtue herself. Living under the patronage of St. Mark, I go out frequently & am in very good contentment. I do as the Venetians do, nay, I do more, for I take daily exercise on horseback. Besides Nero's horses, now hoisted up over the front of St. Marks, my own are the only quadrupeds in this place. Was it disdain or aversion to horses, that the Venetians, who are but indifferent horsemen, did not pitch on a better place for these animals? If you find England very dull, of which I have no doubt whatsoever, pack up your valise, and cross the Alps. You may be sure of being welcome.

Believe me, ever yours very truly,—BYRON.

Saturday, August 2, 11 o'clock, a.m.

My dear Sir,—I received your letter and the proof an hour ago. Mr. Donaldson, an American gentleman, who has been visiting us, leaves at noon. He is kind enough to take charge of this note, and in that way you will have my answer earlier than by any other conveyance. I will not occupy your time with the account of the various hindrances and sudden interruptions which have interrupted my visit to Edinburgh on Tuesday and Wed. last. As things now stand, it strikes me that I could in no way have the remaining MS. (equal to about 3½ or 4 printed pp. of the Instructor), together with the corrected proof, put into your hands soon enough to be available for the press on this day. On Sunday it would be of no use. On Monday, therefore, not later than half-past 10 in the forenoon, I will have all, MS. and proof, lodged with you.

Ever yours,

THOMAS DE QUINCEY.

Dear Sir,—After apologizing to you for having knocked at your door at so strange an hour as eleven, I beg to tell you shortly what my business with you is. I have a colt at Newmarket at Prince's stables, where, I understand, your horses stand, got by Highflyer out of Hope, who is one of the prettiest horses I ever saw, and whom Prince reports to be a remarkably good Goer. He is to run on Monday next in a Sweepstakes of 100 p.p. with eight others, most of which, except the two fine colts of the D. of Bedford, are said to be out of the question. Now I, who am but too apt to put off everything, have put off nearly till the last moment offering him to sale, though it is very much my wish, for more reasons than one, that no horse in my possession should run at Newmarket, or indeed anywhere. In these circumstances it would really be a favour to me if you would buy my colt upon reasonable terms. I gave 150 gs. for him to Tattersall when just foaled, and he certainly ought not to be worth less for having been kept three years, and having grown up to be a healthy and promising horse; but as the times are so bad for selling, I will value him, exclusive of his engagement, only at 120 gs.; etc.

a frontispiece, head-piece, initial letter and tail-piece, engraved by Müller and Grignon, after Bently, brown morocco, arms of Sir William Augustus Fraser stamped in corners of the sides, g. e. by Riviere folio. Printed for R. Dodsley, in Pall-mall, 1753

- * * Bound with this, on a leaf before the title, is the AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPT of Gray's Pindaric Ode "The Progress of Poesy," written at Cambridge in 1754, and first published in 1757. On the fly-leaf is the following MS. note :

This (to me) most precious relic I bought of Mr. Thorpe, the Bookseller, in January, 1850. It is Gray's own copy. It contains his magnificent ode, "Awake, Æolian lyre, awake," in his beautiful autograph ; also an additional verse (an exquisite one !) to his Elegy. Among the many treasures in my library few I regard with more affection than this.

GEORGE DANIEL.—Canonbury Square. Jan'y, 1850.

The additional verse to the Elegy was originally inserted just before the epitaph contained in the last three verses. It was afterwards omitted, Mason says, because it formed too long a parenthesis, but Mr. Gosse, in his edition of Gray's poems, says that it can hardly be regarded as cancelled : it describes "the stone beneath yon aged thorn," where the "Youth, to fortune and to fame unknown," was buried :

There scatter'd oft (the earliest of the year)
By Hands unseen are show'rs of vi'lets found,
The Redbreast loves to bill* and warble there,
And little footsteps lightly print the ground.

* Build : in Mr. Gosse's edition of the Poems, 1884.

Inserted to face the title-page is an engraving, a portrait of the poet (proof before all letters), with the following in Horace Walpole's autograph : "Mr. Gray, from the picture at Strawberryhill, the plate of which Mr. Gray destroyed. Eckardt pinx." Book-plate of Sir W. A. Fraser, who also owned the auto. MS. of Gray's Elegy, which he left to Eton College.

Awake, Arcturion, awake,
 To give to nature all thy trembling things;
 In Arcturion's luminous spring
 Thine own into those many purple lakes;
 In laughing flowers, that round them flow,
 'Till life and fragrance so true flow
 In the red stream of music made along
 Thy majesties smooth, and strong
 In verdant robes, and come when ever
 In verdant robes the ship is seen
 In long, impatient, see it grow:
 In rocks, and ridges grows rebellion to the rear.

Oh! Lover of the willing soul,
 What of sweet and solemn breathing air,
 Reheating shelt! the enter came,
 In frantic passions hear the soft control.
 In Thracian hills the Lord of War,
 Has caught the fang of his car,
 And drops his bloody lance at thy command.
 Perching on the swept red land
 Of Iona, thy magic like the feather's darts
 With ruffled plumes, and flapping wings
 Punched in dark clouds of chambered
 The terror of his head, and lightning of his eye.

When the voice, the dance, thy

 Thy fluted velvet-green
 The very crown'd Lons are seen
 In Colchian's day
 In native sports, and blue-eyed Pleasures,
 Making light in frolic measures;
 Low, pouring, and retreating,
 How in circling hoops they meet:
 In back notes in cadence beating
 Glance their many-breasting feet.
 How nothing shows their secret approach declare:
 Where or she turns the flames her own pay,
 With arms outstretched, that float upon the air,
 In shining state she wears her dress white;
 Her warm cheek, and rising bloom, more
 The bloom of young Dawn, & purple light of Love.

 Disease, and sorrow's weeping hair,
 And Death, and refuge from the storms of Fate!

 And justify the laws of Fate.
 Say, how he gives in vain the heavenly man?
 Night, and all her mists and
 Her Specters van, and Birds of Sorrow,
 He gives to range the weary ship:
 Till man the eastern cliffs afar
 Argives march they spy, & shattering shafts of war

2. 2.

In chains beyond the solar road,
 When shaggy forms & vice-built mountains roam,
 The man has broken the twilight-gloom
 To cheer the shivering nation's rest alone.
 And oft, beneath the Parnassian
 Of Chelios broadleaf forests laid,
 The night to hear the savage youth repeat
 In love numbers wildly sweet
 Their father-constructed Chords, & dashing Lows,
 Her back, where is the golden room,
 Her porch, and narrow theme,
 The unconquerable mind, & freedom's holy flame.

2. 3.

Wine, that runs in Delphi's cup,
 Lobs, that crown the Lyran deep,
 Butter, that cool Siphon flows,
 Or where Mander's amber waves
 In laughing Labrath's crop.
 How to your banquet Lobs's languish,
 Make, but to the voice of Argos?
 When each its poetic Mountain
 Inspiration breath's word:
 Long shade and shadow Mountain
 Marmar's web a colour read:
 But the red ~~Red~~ wine in Lons' will Lons
 Left their Paraphs for the Lation plains.
 While they scorn the pomp of Great-Power,
 And covet due, that waits in her claims.
 When Lation had her left spirit lost,
 They sought, the Lition, but they no-minded were

When water off (the earliest of the year)
 By birds issue, in show of life like found
 The Redbreast loves to sit at water there
 And little birds lightly print the ground

- 80 JOHNSON (DR. S.) Four A. L. s. 4 pp. 4to (mended), to John Levett, one of Johnson's earliest friends in Lichfield, with interesting MS. notes by Dr. Birkbeck Hill :

Sir,—I have been hindered from writing to you by an imagination that it was necessary to write more than I had time for, but recollecting that Business may be dispatched much more expeditiously by conversation, I beg to be informed when I can wait on you with most convenience to yourself. I believe I shall find means of accommodating the affair so as to give you valuable satisfaction. You forgot to send me word what interest is due, which I mention that you may examine, for though Mr. Aston has a receipt for interest which I got him to pay to your Father, I cannot conveniently wait on him about it,

I am, Sir, your most humble servant

Sam: Johnson.

Golden Anchor, Holborn, Sat. Morning (c. 1749).

7th March, 1752.

Sir,—I am extremely obliged to you for the long credit and kind forbearance which I have received from you. I have sold a property principally to satisfy you, and in consequence of that sale can now give you a Draught of one hundred pounds upon a bookseller of credit, payable on the first of May, and realizable in the meantime. . . .

This letter was written when Johnson was in great trouble, his wife was dying, and lived only three weeks longer.

26th July, 1762.

Sir,—I am extremely ashamed after what I wrote last to you with so much confidence to have disappointed you, but I am really no otherwise than unfortunate in the affair. I then told you that I had sold a property, which was exactly true, but I have not yet received a third part of the money which I expected from it, a circumstance that, after what I had written, shocked me so much that I could not bear to see you, as I expected to receive the rest every day, and was willing to spare us both so disagreeable an interview. . . .

Sir,—I am very ill, and unable to wait on you, or meet you, I have been disappointed by two to whom I had applied, and either of whom might have done it without inconvenience. The Gentleman whom I have desired to come with this has offered it on terms which may make a little longer delay, but if you have any one with whom you can have the things necessary it may now be done,

I am, Sir, your humble servant,

Sam: Johnson.

I have sent to you but I had forgot your lodging which you have not mentioned in your notes.

 To Emma B—.
 Emma, eldest of your Name,
 Meekly trusting in her God,
 Mid'st the red hot plough-shares trod,
 And, unscorch'd, preserved her fame.
 By that test if you were tried,
 Ugly flames might be defied;
 Though devouring fire's a glutton,
 Through the trial you might go
 "On the light fantastic toe,"
 Nor for plough-shares care a button!

- * * From the collection of C. Lonsdale (Birchall's successor). A valuable and most important Manuscript. F. Hoefer, the well-known French polygrapher, says of this opera: "La première représentation (donnée au théâtre d'Argentine, le 26 Décembre, 1816), s'achêva au milieu des témoignages d'improbation les moins équivoques. A la seconde représentation, Rossini prétexta une maladie pour se dispenser de tenir le piano. Ce fut caché dans son lit qu'il reçut la bruyante nouvelle que son ouvrage avait été porté aux nues; en même temps les spectateurs vinrent lui manifester leur admiration à la lueur des flambeaux. Cet épisode ne fit qu'accroître le succès de l'œuvre. 'Le Barbier' est de tous les opéras de Rossini le plus populaire en France."

- 134 SCOTT (SIR WALTER) A. L. s. 3 pp. 4to, March 13, 1812, to Messrs. Sanderson and Paterson, Builders, Galashiels. A very interesting letter, giving directions about the building of Abbotsford:

..... You will observe that the regulating line is altered so as to be four foot higher than formerly. Also I intend to move the house a little more to the Westward and incline it somewhat to the South. On Thursday morning, or Friday at furthest, I shall be at Abbotsford with a view of marking out the foundations for good. Your proposal for digging the foundations seems reasonable. There will also be a good deal of levelling. I intend to use the large slate which will render boarding unnecessary & will likewise enable me to hold the roof at somewhat a lower pitch of which I will advise you. There are also some trifling alterations in the plan, the piggery being turned into a coal house, &c. . . .

- 144 SHERIDAN (R. B.) THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL, ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT, with a Note from Sheridan, signed, submitting the same for the approbation of the Lord Chamberlain

* * The MS. comprises about 137 pp. 4to, russia, blind-tooled with the Chetwynd arms on the front and back covers. While in the hands of Fairburn the bookbinder (to whom it was entrusted for binding, in 1834, by Sir George Chetwynd), the MS. narrowly escaped destruction by fire. Some of the pages are slightly scorched at the edges, but they have been repaired and protected. Portraits of Sheridan and Mrs. Abington have been added. The genuineness of the MS. is established by the under-noted letters and extracts, all of which are bound with it:—

- (a) Letter of Sir George Chetwynd, vouching for the identity of the MS.:

Grendan Hall, 10th September, 1834.

This is the identical copy of "The School for Scandal," which was transmitted by a Mr. Sheridan to my Grandfather, William Chetwynd, Esq. then "Examiner of all Entertainments of the Stage" under the Lord Chamberlain, previously to its being performed. After my Grandfather's death on the 6th October, 1778, this, with numerous other MS. Plays, was found at his house in Old Burlington Street, London, by the late Mr. Brookes, of Stafford (Mr. Chetwynd's Solicitor and sole acting Executor), and in September, 1833, Francis Brookes, Esq. of Mass-Pit, near Stafford, his eldest son, presented the MS. to me.

GEORGE CHETWYND.

- (b) Note, from Sheridan, signed, submitting the MS. to the "Examiner of all Entertainments of the Stage":

Sir,—If the following Comedy called "The School for Scandal" meet the Approbation of the Lord Chamberlain, we shall have it performed at The Theatre Royal in Drury Lane May 7th, 1777. R. B. SHERIDAN.

- (c) Extract from The Morning Herald, London, Thursday, February 27th, 1834, relative to the fire at Mr. Fairburn's bookbindery
- (d) Extract from The Morning Herald, London, Thursday, March 6th, 1834, announcing the recovery of the MS. from the ruins of Mr. Fairburn's workshop:

"Sheridan's School for Scandal."—The MS. copy of this celebrated comedy, which was supposed to have been entirely destroyed in the late fire at Mr. Fairburn's in Duke Street, Adelphi, on Wednesday evening, is the identical copy which was transmitted by Mr. Sheridan to the late Mr. Chetwynd, Esq. then Deputy Lord Chamberlain, previously to its being performed. It was entrusted by Sir George Chetwynd (grandson of the Gentleman above mentioned) about a fortnight since to Mr. Fairburn to be bound in the most perfectly classical style, and was nearly completed when the fire happened. On removing part of the ruins yesterday the MS. was discovered, and not so much injured as to be quite irrestorable, by inlaying and mounting. Parts of the Comedy are varied. The character of Miss Verjuice (as originally written) is consolidated with that of Lady Sneerwell, and there are many minor alterations which are curious and interesting to the admirers of the drama. Whenever this MS. is restored to its owner we venture to express a hope that he will bequeath it to the British Museum, whose indeed it ought to be.

- (e) Extract from The Gentleman's Magazine, referring, inter alia, to the emendations in the handwriting of Sheridan, which render the MS. especially interesting

These are particularly noteworthy, inasmuch as they embrace the excision of the character and part of Miss Verjuice, and there are many other changes. It will also be noted that this MS. effectually disposes of the legend that Sheridan wrote portions of the School for Scandal while the first performance was actually taking place on the stage, as this is the complete comedy (including the epilogue and prologue) submitted for licence before the play was produced. Other so-called MSS. of the School for Scandal possibly exist that have been taken from the printed text or from some other source, but the evidences cited above demonstrate: (1) That this is the identical MS. sent by Sheridan to the Lord Chamberlain to be licensed; (2) That it is the MS. containing Sheridan's alterations (which he only could have made), particularly the combining of the character part of Miss Verjuice with that of Lady Sneerwell; and (3) That as there is not a fragment of the author's written sketch of the comedy known to exist, this therefore is the nearest to his own presumably "rough and ready" draft, and may be fairly described as original.

- 145 Sheridan (R. B.) Pizarro, a Tragedy, in five acts; as performed at the Theatre Royal in Drury-Lane; Taken from the German Drama of Kotzebue, and adapted to the English Stage by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, full polished calf extra, triple line gold tooled on sides, gilt back and inside borders, g. e. by Riviere 8vo

* * FIRST EDITION, VERY RARE. In addition to the first woodcut title-page on sign. A 1, there are three others, each with the same woodcut. On E1 is "The Tears of the Muses"; on L1 is "Propopoeia. Or Mother Hubberds Tale. Dedicated to the right Honorable the Ladie Compton and Mountegle." These two have imprint and date similar to the first. On T1 is "Mviopotmos. Or The Fate of the Butterflie. Dedicated to the most faire Ladie: the Ladie Carey." The imprint is the same as the others, but the date is 1590. Heber had two copies, one bound in vellum, uncut, the other in morocco, by C. Lewis. The above is possibly the latter, and in that case also from the Roxburghe and Sir M. M. Sykes libraries. The reference in the "Tears of the Muses" to "Our pleasant Willy," considered by early writers to have referred to Shakespeare, is now generally admitted to be a reference to Tarleton the actor. Shakespeare refers to this poem ("The Tears of the Muses") in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Book-plate of Robert Hoe.

This copy contains both title-pages, namely, the general title-page, and the title-page for the second part, which latter is often missing. VERY RARE.

Strophe 1.

With songs & crying & sounds of acclamations,
 Lo, the flame risen, the fire that falls in showers!
 Hark; for the word is out among the nations:
 Look; for the light is up upon the towers:
 O fears, O shames, O many tribulations,
 Yours were all yesterdays, but this day ours.
 Strong were your bonds lashed fast with lamentations,
 With groans & tears built into walls & towers;
 Strong were your works & wonders of high stations,
 Your forts blood-braced, & rampires of your powers;
 Lo now the last of divers desolations,
 The hand of time that gathers ^{hosts} ~~worlds~~ like flowers;
 Time that ^{piles} ~~up~~ ^{pours} ~~up~~ ^{out} ~~generations~~,
 Time, whose will fashions empires & devours.

St. 113.

Where is hope, & promise where, in all these things,
 Think of strength with strength, & jar of low thing kings?
 Who of all men, who will show us any good?
 Shall these light things of blind battles give us light?
 Where is pardon? who will bring us in her light,
 That have hardly seen her footprint where she stood?

St. 4.

Who in this that rises red with wounds & splendid,
 All her breast & brow made beautiful with scars,
 Burning brow as naked daylight, undefended,
 In her hands for spurs her splintered prison bars,
 In her eyes the light & fire of long pain ended,
 In her lips a song as of the morning stars?

St. 115.

O towers of thy France,
 O deathless, O my France,
 O many-wounded mother, O redeemed to reign!
 O rarely sweet & bitter
 The brightest brief tears that glitter
 On thine undimmed eyelids, proud of their own pain;

..... Your Intelligence of the Jubilees to be celebrated in Scotland in honour of the Revolution was welcome indeed. It is a favourable Symptom of an Age when Festivals are founded on good Sense and Liberality of Sentiment, and not to perpetuate Superstition and Slavery. Your Countrymen have proved their good sense too in their choice of a Poet: ye Writings breathe the noble generous Spirit congenial to the Institution. Give me leave to say that it is very flattering to me to have the Ode communicated to me—I will not say to be consulted, for of that distinction I am not worthy; I am not a poet; and I am sure cannot improve your Ideas which you have expressed with propriety and clearness, the necessary ingredients of an Address to a populous Meeting, for I doubt our numerous Audiences are not arrived at Olympic taste enough to seize with enthusiasm the eccentric flights of Pindar, etc.

* * THE FIRST EDITION, A LARGE AND PERHAPS UNIQUE COPY. This very tall copy of the first edition, measures $5\frac{3}{4}$ by $3\frac{1}{4}$ in. (a copy sold in 1909 for £1085, measuring $5\frac{1}{2}$ by $3\frac{1}{8}$ in., was supposed to be the tallest copy known). The fore-edge of the title has been so skilfully supplied as to be almost unnoticeable; there is a slight repair at the top of page 85, a small piece is missing from the blank margin of page 111, and some leaves have been soiled by handling, as is usually the case. The volume is ruled in red, and the name of "Francis Foster" has been supplied in manuscript on page 3. It was sold in these rooms, London, 1903, with the following descriptive note: "It is most unusual to find an expensive and elaborate binding of the period on such a book. This, however, is accounted for by this copy undoubtedly being a presentation copy to Mr. Francis Foster. It is ruled throughout in red lines and contains, in Iz. Walton's handwriting, the name of Mr. F. Foster filled in on page 3. The Angler's Song (pages 216-217) has full margins, and page 245 has also a wide blank margin outside the word "Love(s)," a very uncommon state, as these pages are frequently cut into." This is the copy described by William Loring Andrews on page xix of his "Fysshynge with an Angle," where he says: "A fine copy with unusually wide margins. Bound in black morocco elaborately tooled, to judge from the style of decoration, by one of the Mearnes."

1st. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the train was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm, humid air of the South. I had heard that the weather in the North was harsh, but I didn't realize how cold it would be. The wind was biting, and the snow was falling in soft, white flakes. I pulled my coat tighter around me and shivered.

2nd. The second thing I noticed was the silence. In the South, there was always a low hum of activity, the sound of crickets at night, the chirping of birds in the day. Here, it was so quiet. The only sounds I heard were the crunch of snow under my boots and the occasional creak of a wooden door. It felt like I had entered a different world, one where time moved more slowly.

3rd. The third thing I noticed was the architecture. The houses here were different from the ones I was used to. They were smaller, with steeper roofs and more windows. The streets were wider, and the buildings were made of a different material. It all seemed so foreign, yet so familiar at the same time. I had heard that the North was a land of opportunity, and now I was seeing it for myself.

4th. The fourth thing I noticed was the people. The men here wore different clothes, different hats. The women wore long, flowing dresses and high collars. They seemed so different from the people I was used to, yet I could see the same kindness in their eyes. I had heard that the North was a land of freedom, and now I was seeing it for myself.

5th. The fifth thing I noticed was the food. The food here was different from the food I was used to. It was heartier, more substantial. I had heard that the North was a land of plenty, and now I was seeing it for myself. The food was good, but it was also expensive. I had heard that the North was a land of opportunity, and now I was seeing it for myself.

6th. The sixth thing I noticed was the weather. The weather here was different from the weather I was used to. It was colder, drier. I had heard that the North was a land of opportunity, and now I was seeing it for myself.
