PREFACE.

It has not been without something of heartache that I have, at the request of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, and of my co-executors, occupied myself during the leisure hours of many months past in preparing this Catalogue. It was in Messrs. Sotheby's Rooms, thirty-four years ago, that I, then a young and ardent collector, made Truman's acquaintance, and it is in those rooms that, as a collector no longer young, I shall see turned the last page in one of the most valuable and pleasant chapters in my life—my close friendship with Edwin Truman. For to know Truman intimately, as I did, and to compete in friendly rivalry with him, was in itself a liberal education. He was not, as might have been thought by a casual observer, a mere Dry-as-dust collector. His was a mind provisioned with vast stores of knowledge amassed, added to, and completed by his rule of never wasting time nor opportunity. His was no mere dilettante existence, no mere heaping up in his store-house of the results of other men's labours. He was an original thinker and inventor who could point to great practical achievements. He rose to high eminence in his profession, and this he retained to the time of his death at the ripe age of eighty-seven years. He busied himself with the consideration of religious and social questions, on which he wrote with sound sense and fierce conviction. And yet he found time as this, and the other Catalogues show, to make a collection unrivalled in its own line, a collection which to most men would have meant a business, but which was to him merely the pastime of his leisure hours, while upon the making of it he brought to bear an acute and penetrating intellect, a ripe judgment and illimitable stores of curious knowledge.

It is not necessary, indeed it would not be pertinent to this note of introduction, to refer in detail to the spoil which fell to the bow and spear of this mighty hunter of Cruikshankiana. Were I to begin I should weary myself and the reader. Besides, is it not all written down in the following pages? For it has been the express object of my co-executors and myself to take the public to the fullest degree into our confidence. Nothing has been kept back which can in the future affect the market value of any single item in the collection. Where a rarity has been found in unsuspected numbers, the fact has been plainly stated; nothing has been retained for a future sale. Though offers have been made to purchase by private contract important items, such as (to take one example) Reid's Catalogue, interleaved and voluminously annotated by Truman, these offers have been steadily refused in view of the widespread interest with which collectors, not only in England, but on the Continent and in America, have looked forward to this sale in the open market. It has been a cardinal point with the Executors to sell this collection in its entirety, and they believe the public will know how to appreciate their determination.

I sincerely hope that the dispersal of this Collection will stimulate interest in the great Artist whose name is on the title-page. There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and if, as my old friend declared to me would be the case, his spirit is now haunting these familiar scenes, I can imagine that nothing would better gratify him than to see, not only his old friendly enemies, but many a new enthusiast carrying off the prizes by which he laid so much store, and so enlarging the fame of "the man who drew the awful Jew."

Another thing I sincerely hope is that Truman's interleaved Catalogues and voluminous notes, verified by George Cruikshank himself, will fall into the hands of someone who will be able to complete the dream of Truman's life—a second and correct edition of Reid's monumental, though, in the light of later and fuller knowledge, seriously inaccurate work. Truman's busy life, long though it was, was too short for its accomplishment. The completion founded on his notes would be a fitting memorial of his faithful devotion to the memory of George Cruikshank, with whom his name should be permanently connected. As many of those who read these few words will know, he was at pains to show all early work ascribed to George by Reid to the artist himself for verification or repudiation, and the results of these investigations are plainly set forth in Cruikshank's own handwriting on nearly all the items over which any controversy has arisen.

It is impossible here to enlarge on the old collector's enthusiasm and industry in the pursuit of his hobby, on his habit of devoting every Saturday afternoon to driving round to book and print sellers; on his gigantic operations—in one case leading him to the purchase of the complete stock of a deceased publisher rather than be baulked of his desire to possess a part; on which occasion he so overloaded his cab that it broke down under its precious burden on London Bridge; and on his extraordinary knowledge of prints of all sorts, and more especially of Early English portraits. I am glad to know that more on this subject is likely to appear shortly from the pen of Mr. G. S. Layard, whose name has long been connected with Cruikshank literature, and whose enthusiasm on the subject is well known to many of you.

My great regret in presenting this Catalogue to the public is that, being a very busy man, I have been unable to make it more descriptive, but I have stinted neither time nor labour, and I have striven to make it a useful book of reference for the Collector of Cruikshankiana.

H. W. BRUTON.

C.*; and other Tracts published by Hone, with cuts by G. C.; in 1 vol. half calf 8*vo*

 Geo. Cruikshank has written as follows on the broadside with the portrait of Hone: "The body of this figure was etched by my Father with a head of Sir Francis Burdett, which was taken out and this portrait of William Hone put on Sir Francis' shoulders by whom I do not know.—Geo. Cruikshank." Mr. Truman has inserted an interesting note as to this portrait. He states that Cruikshank told him he engraved a plate with "The Blasphemer" beneath it, so that in the event of Hone being convicted it might be sold for the benefit of his wife and children who would have been destitute, but he (G. C.) thought it was never published. Mr. Truman thinks the substituted head is by G. C. who probably had forgotten making the alteration. The broadside is unique.

I to V half calf, entirely uncut, with the Fillingham book-plate, vol. VI, with which is bound up other theatrical publications, cut down* J. Marshall, 1817-22

 This is undoubtedly the finest copy extant of one of the rarest theatrical books. Vol. I and II contain all the plates etched by G. C. for the work, and he has noted on each plate whether etched by his brother or himself. The portrait of Mrs. Davenport, plate I, vol. I, is in two states; on the first, evidently a cancelled plate, G. C. has written "not by any of the Cruikshank Family," on the substituted plates "J. R." before "Cruikshank fect." Plate XVIII, vol. II, "Mr. Jones as Matthew Sharpset," is in two states, the head altered in the second state, and on this plate G. C. has written "with a new head on old shoulders." At page 5, vol. V, is apparently an extra portrait of Elliston. Each vol. has been carefully collated by Mr. Truman, and is stated by him to be perfect.

 An excessively rare work. No portion of the book was in the Stewart or Mackenzie sales, nor does the British Museum possess either volume. Mr. Truman believed this copy to be quite perfect, and that vol. II ended with p. 152. In a note in his Catalogue (p. 273), Captn. Douglas states that "after years of assiduous search" he has succeeded in finding the last part ending with p. 160, eight pages therefore in addition to this copy of the book. All the illustrations are by Geo. Cruikshank, vol. II including two plates not described by Reid, viz. "Napoleon," with etched initials G. C. and "Talleyrand in his Study," a folding plate with the artist's etched signature in full. The title and index are bound up at the end of vol. I, after p. 466. Pailthorpe's facsimiles of nos. 285, 301 and 306, are inserted as extra plates. The Bruton copy, wanting all the letterpress of vol.
