 My Dr. Uncle,—After having spent two winters in Edinburgh, I now prepare to go to France the tenth of next February. I have seen all that this country can Exhibit in the medical way, and therefore intend to visit Paris, where the great Mr. Farhein Petit and Duhammel du Monson, instruct their pupils in all the branches of medicine, they speak French, and consequently I shall have much the advantage of most of my countrymen, as I am perfectly acquainted with that Language, and few who leave Ireland are so.....I shall spend the Spring and Summer in Paris, and the beginning of next winter go to Leyden, the Great Albinus is still alive there, and 'twill be proper to go there, tho' only to have it said that we have studied in so famous an University, as I shall not have another opportunity of receiving money from your Bounty, till my return to Ireland, so I have drawn for the last sum that I hope I shall ever trouble you for, 'tis twenty pounds; now Dr. Sr. let me here acknowledge the humility of the Station in which you found me, let me tell how I was dispised by most and hatefull to myself. Poverty, hopeless poverty, was my lot, and melancholly was beginning to make me her own.

- 205 WALPOLE (Horace) A. L. s. 3 pp. 4to, dated from Strawberry Hill, June 19, 1774, addressed to Sir W. Hamilton, A VERY INTERESTING LETTER

For fear of troubling you, dear Sir, with two letters instead of one, I waited for the arrival of the Shields before I thanked you for them, but it put my gratitude to pain, for I did not receive them till the day before yesterday. Now they are come, it will, which is very selfish, double my gratitude, for they are fine and most charming, nay almost too good taste not to put my gothic house to shame . . . I am going to hang them by the beautiful armour of Francis 1st, and they will certainly make me dream of another Castle of Otranto . . . The Duke of Devonshire is married; Lord Stanley and Lady Betty Hamilton are to be in July. Some wedlocks are breaking too, Lord Valentia has preferred Dr. Elliott's pretty wife to his own plain one; but I do not find that there was much preference on her side, but rather on the Doctor's, for he has selected Lord Valentia from several other Lords and Gentlemen who have been equally kind to the Fair One . . . Pray tell Lady Hamilton I heard a new Instrument yesterday, which transported me, tho' I have not the most musical ears in the world, &c.

- 206 WALPOLE (Horace) Three A. L. s. 4 pp. 4to, dated respectively from Paris, March 6, 1766; Strawberry Hill, Sept. 26, 1774; Arlington Street, Jan. 2, 1775, addressed to John Crauford, bound in 1 vol. red morocco extra. The first begins:

You cannot conceive, my Dear Sir, how happy I was to receive your letters, not so much for my sake, as for Madame du Deffand's. I do not mean merely from the pleasure your letter gave her, but because it wipes off the reproaches she has undergone on your account, &c.

The second:

You tell me to write to you, and I am certainly disposed to do anything I can to amuse you; but that is not so easy a matter, for two very good reasons, you are not the most amuseable of men, and I have nothing to amuse you with, for you are like electricity, you attract and repel at once, &c.

The third:

I was not surprised but rather the more grateful because I was not surprised at your kind letter. I am totally recovered excepting my right hand; I walk without a stick, nay am told as well as ever I did, which could never be a compliment to me in any part of my life, &c.
