- IX. To prevent inaccuracy in the delivery, and inconvenience in the settlement of the purchases, no lot can on any account be removed during the time of sale.
- X. FIRST DAY'S SALE

The Property of John Stackhouse Pendarves, Esq.,

Pendarves, Camborne, Cornwall

THE LIBRARY at Pendarves has come together by inheritance, in the process of years, from a variety of sources. A portion of it, for example, belonged to John Stackhouse (1742-1819), the botanist, who inherited the Pendarves estates in 1763 and whose son, Mr. E. W. Stackhouse (afterwards Pendarves), great-uncle of the present owner's father, placed his bookplate in a number of volumes. But the most interesting feature of the collection, so far as past ownership is concerned, lies in the discovery of a section, hitherto unrecorded, of the well-known library of Narcissus Luttrell (1657-1732), annalist and bibliographer.

It has been generally believed (cf. D.N.B., xii, 301 ; De Ricci, English Collectors, 29, 30), that Luttrell's library passed in its entirety to his great-nephew Edward Wynne, whose grandfather, Owen Wynne, had married Dorothy Luttrell, sister of Narcissus (see lots 135, 141). Edward Wynne died childless in 1784 and his books were sold by Leigh & Sotheby on March 6, 1786. They included a quantity of rare tracts, ballads, broadsides and early English poetry, some of which has now reached the British Museum, while other portions passed through the Farmer, Bindley, Heber and Britwell Collections and are now dispersed.

It is clear, however, that a part of Luttrell's library remained intact in the hands of Luttrell Wynne, Edward Wynne's younger brother, who survived him for thirty years. On his death in 1814 Luttrell Wynne left his property by will to Mr. E. W. Stackhouse (mentioned above), grandson of his mother's sister Susanna Brydges.

The number of books in this sale bearing certain evidences of ownership by Narcissus Luttrell is 132. Nearly half of these bear his characteristic signature and date of acquisition :—

Nar. Luttrell:
His Book
1682.

In the other and larger half is stamped a complicated monogram containing all the letters of his name :—

NSL
1695.

Two books contain both signature and monogram ; and a few have a plain stamp

NL

on the binding.

The notes of price, mentioned and illustrated by Mr. De Ricci (op. cit., p. 30) as a common feature of Luttrell's books, hardly occur in those catalogued here.

An analysis of the dates accompanying the note or stamp of ownership throws interesting light on his career as a collector. He began to put his name in his books in 1675 at the age of eighteen. He seems to have acquired books less often after 1682 (or to have been less careful to write in them). The 14 dated 1681 include a series of 7 books in uniform bindings. He acquired his stamp in 1692 and in the following year went through his library stamping books without his signature (but including 2 which already had his note of ownership, one 1685, one 1688). He seems to have gone through the library again in 1695 and 1707. In 1710, at the age of fifty-three, he gave up collecting books (or at any rate stamping them) and of the last twenty-two years of his life these books give no record. There are many rare early English books in the collection, bearing no owner's mark, which may have been Luttrell's; but this is a matter of conjecture.

It is perhaps not altogether without interest that the sale of this library should be resumed and completed by SOTHEBY'S after an interval of just over one hundred and fifty years.

- 162 PLATO (PSEUDO-) AXIOCHUS. A MOST EXCELLENT DIALOGUE, WRITTEN IN GREEKE BY PLATO THE PHYLOSOPHER: concerning the shortnesse and vncertainty of this life, with the contrary ends of the good and wicked. Translated out of Greeke by Edw. Spenser. Heereto is annexed a sweet speech or Oration, Spoken at the Tryumphe at White-hall before her Maiestie, by the Page to the right noble Earle of Oxenforde, FIRST EDITION, (¶, A-D, in fours, C 4 blank), wants A 1 (? blank or with signature only), piece torn from D 3 removing a few words, unbound 4to (6 $\frac{7}{10}$ in. by 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.) At London, Printed for Cuthbert Burbie, and are to be sold at the middle shop in the Poultry, vnder S. Mildreds Church. Anno. 1592

 ONE OF THE ONLY TWO COPIES KNOWN AND THE ONLY COPY CONTAINING THE "SWEET SPEECH" of the Earl of Oxford's page. Until five years ago the translation of the Axiochus was regarded as a lost work of Spenser's, but in 1931 a copy came to light inlaid to folio size and bound with a copy of the 1679 edition of Spenser's Works. This came into the possession of Professor Padelford, of the University of Washington, who edited it and printed it in facsimile (Baltimore, John Hopkins Press, 1934). In his preface he gives an account of earlier references (Catalogus Bibliothecae Harlianae, 1744; John Upton in his edition of The Faery Queen, 1758, who promised to print it in his third volume, but died before doing so; a list of "Ancient Translations" in Steevens's Shakespeare, 1773; a list of books printed in Scotland in Herbert's Ames, 1785-90; and H. J. Todd in his Preface to Spenser's Works, 1805, "I should have added . . . the translation of Axiochus attributed to him, if my endeavours to obtain it had been attended with success"), and explains how Burbie's mistake of "Edward" for "Edmund" arose. His copy however wanted the last four leaves containing the speech of the Earl of Oxford's page, for which this copy is at present the only source.

There seems no reason to doubt that this speech is also Spenser's work. In the first place, it is difficult to suggest any other reason for its inclusion; it is not put in to fill up space, as it occupies a separate sheet, following a blank leaf. In the second, it very prominently displays those characteristics which Professor Padelford notes as distinguishing Spenser's translation of the Axiochus—"alliteration, antithesis, and balanced phrasing" and "passages which fall into rhythmical patterns, notably the iambic five-stress verse". As instances of the latter may be quoted:

"This Tree fayre Knight is called the Tree of the Sunne, whose nature is alwaies to stand alone not suffering a companion"

"The dayes he spent in vertuous delights"

"To lyve or die for the defence thereof"

"Whose life should end before his loyaltie"

"But this he will avouch at all assayes"

The Earl of Oxford was one of Spenser's patrons and a sonnet at the beginning of the Faery Queen is addressed to him. The Pageant at which the speech was delivered may have been that on 22 Jan., 1581, when Oxford is known to have won the prize.

 Though the portion of the original cover, which has been preserved, is a good deal rubbed, it is extremely interesting. It is decorated with three impressions each of two small panels, both approximately 60 mm. by 40 mm.; one bears branches and foliage and the inscription "ave maria", the other shows the Virgin standing and holding the Infant Christ; an ecclesiastic kneels before them in prayer, and behind them is the name of the owner of the panel, "Woter Vanduffle" inscribed vertically. This man, Woter (Walter) van Duffle, who is undoubtedly the ecclesiastic shown on the panel, has recently been identified by Mr. Prosper Verheyden as a canon of Antwerp who lived in the 13th Century (see his article, La reliure en Brabant, in Le Livre, L'Estampe, L'Edition en Brabant, Gembloux, 1935, pp. 143-4). This is therefore the oldest panel stamp known to exist, and this binding is the one available example of it. The only other binding on which it is used covers an incunable printed at Strasburg in 1473 which is now in the library of Corpus Christi College, Oxford (see Duff Catalogue ut cit and his Westminster and London Printers, Cambridge, 1906, p. 112). It is certain that the van Duffle panel was in England in the 15th Century, as the Oxford binding is also decorated with small tools representing a crane attacking a quadruped, and two dragons with interlacing necks, which were used by "the Indulgence binder", who was working at London, circa 1477-82 (see Hobson, Bindings in Cambridge Libraries, p. 26 and Pl. IX, and English Binding before 1500, p. 20, Pl. 45).

English heraldic treatises of such early date are very uncommon, and this one contains much of interest.

- 412 PERCY (HENRY, Ninth Earl of Northumberland, 1564-1632. "THE WIZARD EARL") ADVICE TO HIS SON (1595-1609), MANUSCRIPT ON PAPER, written in a cursive book hand, 55 ll., 17th Century sheepskin binding (upper cover loose)

(11½ in. by 7½ in.) circa 1625

-  The second portion of this treatise is headed "An : 1609" and the information in the opening sentence that it was "written 14 yeares after the former" dates the first portion as composed in 1595. The second portion was written by the "Wizard Earl" while a prisoner in the Tower (1606-1621).

This manuscript was edited by Mr. G. B. Harrison (1930) and a copy of his edition is sold with it. He writes in his Introduction (p. 46): "I acquired it as an unprinted and unknown work. It is not, however, entirely unknown to scholars, though not easily accessible, for the second part was reprinted with generous expurgation in 1838; the first part (pp. 49-72) is here reproduced for the first time".

On the fly-leaf is written in a late 18th Century hand: "Advice from Edward Lord Vic^t Conway to his son". Probably this copy was made for Edward, first Viscount Conway, or his son. The Conway family were neighbours of the Earl of Northumberland. The Conway Papers were discovered by Horace Walpole, and most of the letters have passed into the British Museum or the Public Record Office. Probably the present manuscript was found at the same time and was then (having no title) assumed to be a relic of the Conway family.

- 419 NELSON (Admiral Lord) Auto. Memorandum, 1 p. 4to, n. d., written with his left hand:
 Rear Ad. Nelson takes the liberty of asking for Mr. Bottom's removal from the Colossus. And to send the Admiral of John Sykes.

- 420 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s. "Nelson and Bronte", 3 pp. 4to, July 26, 1803, to Sir John Acton. He hopes the French will not take possession of the whole Kingdom, but thinks they may desire to garrison Messina out of friendship and introduce any number of troops they please for the conquest of Sicily. He regrets that troops have been taken out of Egypt. "Mr. Elliot will tell you how superior the French Fleet are in point of numbers to mine . . . (I believe my five sail of the Line would take them all if they staid to be captured) but we are not justified in either running unnecessary risks or in holding our enemy too cheap." He gives details of the numbers of the French and his own fleets, etc., and has been expecting the French St. Domingo Fleet, etc., etc.
- 421 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s. "Nelson and Bronte", 2½ pp. 4to, "Amphion", July 30, 1803, to the same. He is concerned about the safety of the King and Queen of Naples. A French 74, two frigates and some merchant ships have arrived at Cadiz from St. Domingo; untoward events prevented his sending a squadron outside the "Straights" as he was ordered, but he was intent on preventing the French fleet in Toulon from putting to sea, and of course visiting Sicily. He has been in possession of Bronte for four years and so far from receiving any rents he has made a debt of 7,000 ounces
- 422 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s., 4 pp. 4to, very fully written, "Victory" off Toulon, to the same, congratulating Acton on his precautions for the protection of Sicily. Nelson takes credit for going far beyond his duty "that cold line", in supporting Acton's wise plans. He has arranged for vessels to bring down the Adriatic messengers from Vienna to Trieste or Venice. He gives details of his ships in the Adriatic independently of those for the protection of Malta and has had many testimonies of approval of his conduct too flattering for him to repeat
- 423 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s., 1½ pp. 4to., "Victory" off Toulon, Octr. 8th, 1803, to the same. Introducing his nephew Captain Sir Willm. Bolton. The French Fleet are embarking troops, eight sail of the Line are ready; he needs to know their "destination and rout", the Health and Zeal of his Fleet never was exceeded and the happiest consequences may be expected from it. Captain Gore is outside the Straights. Nelson himself is inside

- 424 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s., 1½ pp. 4to, "Victory", Octr. 8th, 1804, to the same. Thanks Acton for his hospitable treatment of Dr. Scott. There seem to be certain difficulties about Bronte for the payment of pensions or salaries. If Peace was established he would wish for a certain income to be paid to him and the estate managed by the crown. Sir Thos. Troubridge writes to him in great wrath about his Pension
- 425 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s., 3½ pp. 4to, "Victory", April 26th, 1804. He says the "Kent" and "Acton" may rely on his never leaving Naples Bay without a Ship of the Line. He is not surprised at the hatred of the French towards Acton. He hopes the Russian Emperor will get his troops into Italy, the insult offered his father-in-law cannot if there is any spirit in a young Emperor be overlooked, and he hopes the Austrian Eagle is not yet humbled . . . The "Swift" cutter is taken and carried into Barcelona and dispatches have fallen into the hands of the French, but he hopes Ld. St. Vincent would not trust any dispatches of importance in such a vessel. He regrets the loss of all his stores. The French Fleet are safe in Toulon
- 426 NELSON (Adml. Lord) A. L. s., 1 p. 4to, "Victory" off Malta, Febry. 19th, 1805. He has just arrived off Malta where they have no information of the French Fleet; he is going directly to Toulon. He has been to Coron in the Morea and to Alexandria, and is "miserable at not finding the Enemy"
- 427 JOSEPHINE (Empress) L. s., ½ p. 4to, Mayence, le 3 janvier, 1807. She has received a letter from the Prince de Neufchâtel and learns from Genl. Clarke that Breslau is taken

The 1814 edition is the first portion which, in the 1816 edition, forms vol. 1.
- Mr. A. Edward Newton gives an interesting account of this book and its rarity in " The Book-Collecting-Game ", ch. 3, " Knowing what we now know of the composition of the firm of M. J. Godwin and Company in 1816, it is interesting to think that Shelley's money may have financed the translation and publication of the first edition of that famous book ".

 THE DEDICATION COPY, with 3 A. Ls. s. from the author :

(1) To Ida Ashworth Taylor, daughter of Sir Henry and Lady Taylor, containing a draft of the proposed dedication (printed without alteration), 2 pp. 8vo, n. d.

My dear Ida,

Tell me if the enclosed will give pain or offence ; and tell me (I need not say) with surgical frankness, as for showing it to your mother, I leave that in your hands ; what I want is to give her pleasure, if I can ; and you must be the judge of that.

Yours sincerely
R. L. S.

My dear Lady Taylor.

To your name, if I wrote on brass, I could add nothing; it has been already written higher than I could dream to reach, by a strong and a dear hand; and if I now dedicate to your two tales, it is not as the writer who brings you his work, but as the friend who would remind you of his affection.

Robert Louis Stevenson.

(2) To Lady Taylor, before publication of the book "... I feel very sorry to think the book to which I have put your name is no better ... but I am after all a (superior) penny-a-liner; I must do, in the Scotch phrase, as it will do with me; and I cannot always choose what my books are to be ... I have a mild wish that you at least would read no further than the dedication"; with interesting references to Shelley: "... I seem but a Shelley with less oil and no genius", speaks of "such really sickening aberrations as the Emilia Viviani business ... an insubordinate and perfectly abominable schoolgirl ...", 4 pp. 8vo, Skerryvore, Bournemouth, n. d.; A FINE LETTER.

(3) To Lady Taylor, discussing her criticisms of the book "... I do not think it is a wholesome part of me that broods on the evil in the world; but I do not think that I get harm from it; possibly my readers may, which is more serious; but at any account, I do not purpose to write more in this vein. But the odd problem is: what makes a story true?", 2 pp. 4to, n. d.; A FINE LETTER.

 The plates are numbered by Blake, in ink, 1-28; nos. 5 and 6 (doubtless the two "Ecchoing Green" plates) are missing. They are in the following order:

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. The Piper | 16. The Chimney Sweeper |
| 2. Songs of Innocence | 17. The Lamb |
| 3. Introduction | 18. Holy Thursday |

The Buttanshaw watermark, with the date 1802, occurred in the copy of the combined issue sold in these rooms on July 30, 1931 (lot 624). These plates include all those proper to a copy of this date, with the exception of the "Ecchoing Green".

The colouring of this copy is exceptionally fine; the leaves show some signs of use.

From the Library of the well-known collector, Mr. Arthur Champernowne (1767-1819), great-grandfather of the present owner, and doubtless bought by him from Blake.

815 KEATS (JOHN) AUTO. MS. "LAMIA", portion of Part 2, commencing at line 50, consisting of 17 lines on 1 p. 4to. This interesting section comes from a draft that was in the possession of Joseph Severn, who had a reprehensible habit of cutting pieces from his Keats MSS. and giving them to friends; this portion was given to Miss Marshall, May 17th, 1850

The final MS. of "LAMIA" fortunately did not fall into Severn's hands: that, complete, is in the library of an American collector, but Severn had parts, if not the whole, of a draft well worked on by the poet, and it is an interesting section of this that is now being offered for sale. From the excerpt it may be conjectured that the first forty-nine lines of "Lamia", part 2, occupied two pages, for the present section, written on one side of the paper, is numbered by Keats in the top left hand corner "3" and begins with line 50, following immediately upon the twenty-four lines in the Marquess of Crewe's collection, as may be gathered from the Notes in Buxton Forman's Oxford Edition of Keats. This new piece is full of variations from the final text, in fact there is only one line in it that agrees exactly with the printed version, and the last few lines are splendid examples of the poet in the throes of composition.

Here are the corresponding lines of the printed text for comparison with the illustration:

" While I am striving how to fill my heart
 With deeper crimson, and a double smart?
 How to entangle, trammel up and snare
 Your sail is mine, and labyrinth you there
 Like the hid scent in an unbudded rose?
 Aye, a sweet kiss—you see your mighty woes.
 My thoughts! Shall I unveil them? Listen then!
 What mortal hath a prize, that other men
 May be confounded and abash'd withal,
 But lets it sometimes pace abroad majestic,
 And triumph, as in thee I should rejoice
 Amid the hoarse alarm of Corinth's voice.
 Let my foes choke, and my friends shout afar,
 While through the thronged streets your bridal car
 Wheels round the dazzling spokes "

- 816 PORTRAIT OF JOHN KEATS, half length facing, seated at a table with an open book before him, his head resting on his right hand, signed and dated "Rome 1832" 10½in. by 8¾in.

 This is a posthumous portrait of the poet, who was a friend of the artist, and was painted for Mr. Moxon, the publisher, for purposes of reproduction.

Dr. G. C. Williamson lists it (as no. 9) and describes it fully in his Catalogue of the Dilke Bequest, 1914, p. 102. It is a copy of the well-known miniature portrait exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1819 and afterwards in the Dilke Collection. Severn painted a number of posthumous portraits of Keats from memory; but Dr. Williamson remarks of the present painting: "as it was a copy of the [miniature] portrait, and not a painting from memory, it may well be included in the group of life portraits". Collections, Edward Moxon, and G. P. Boyce.

Exhibited at Manchester Art Treasures Exhibition, 1857, no. 337.

- 817 KEATS (JOHN) A SUPERB A. L. s., 4 pp. folio (13in. by 8in.), Letter Findlay, August 3rd, [1818], to his brother Thomas Keats, addressed to Well Walk, Hampstead

 This is the last letter Keats is known to have written from Scotland, with the exception of one to Mrs. Wylie the original of which has not been traced, and it is the last he wrote to his brother Tom who died just four months later. It gives a graphic picture of the climb up Ben Nevis, in which he was accompanied by his friend Charles Brown and a guide, and it contains not only the Sonnet written on the top of the mountain but also the dialogue between Mrs. Cameron and Ben Nevis, running to seventy-four lines of humorous verse. Portions of the dialogue are written on the doublings of the fourth page (which also bears his address and several postmarks), and the last sixteen lines are written crosswise on the first page. Then continuing his letter, Keats wrote:

"But what surprises me above all is how this Lady got down again—I felt it horribly. 'Twas the most vile descent—shook me all to pieces—Over leaf you will find a Sonnet I wrote on the top of Ben Nevis. We have just entered Inverness. I have three letters from you and one [from] Fanny—and one from Dilke."

Then, still crosswise, he goes on, on the second page :

" I would set about crossing this all over for you but I will first write to Fanny and Mrs. Wilie. Then I will begin another to you and not before because I think it better you should have this as soon as possible—My Sore throat is not quite well and I intend stopping here a few days."

He gives the Sonnet, and ends up on the same page :

Good bye till tomorrow,
Your most affectionate Brother
John—

Printed in full in the Oxford Press edition of Keats' letters, where it fills five and a half pages.

THIS REMARKABLE LETTER, DISTINCTIVE NO LESS FOR ITS PLAYFUL AND GOOD-HUMOURED TONE THAN FOR ITS EXTRAORDINARY LENGTH, IS PROBABLY THE FINEST WHICH HAS EVER PASSED THROUGH THE SALE ROOMS IN THIS COUNTRY.

In a sunk mount, enclosed in a cloth portfolio by Riviere and accompanied by portraits of John and Thomas Keats.
