- IX. To prevent inaccuracy in the delivery, and inconvenience in the settlement of the purchases, no lot can on any account be removed during the time of sale.
- X. - 300 DICKENS (C.) THE LIFE OF CHRIST, MANUSCRIPT IN THE HAND OF MAMIE DICKENS, titled: "Copy of The History of Our Saviour Jesus Christ written by Charles Dickens For His Own Children. 1846", 40 ll. [p. 1, title; p. 2, blank; pp. 3-78, text; p. 79, Two Prayers, headed: "Prayers. Written for his own young children, by Charles Dickens"; p. 80, blank], four leaves repaired and one leaf slightly torn, sewn with red silk ribbon, and preserved in the original morocco portfolio, lettered "E. B. L. D." 4to

 EDWARD BULWER LYTTON DICKENS'S COPY. Dickens is said to have had a copy made for each of his sons but the work remained in manuscript until last year. The published edition (which states that the Life was written in 1849, apparently an error) does not include the Two Prayers, present in this copy. Edward Dickens, the "Plorn" of the Letters, was the youngest child and his father's favourite. He went to Australia in 1868 to join his brother, Alfred. About forty years ago, having no children of his own, he gave this manuscript to his sister-in-law, Emma Blanche Brougham, mother of the present owner.

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS AND RELICS OF CHARLES DICKENS

formerly the Property of Anne Brown

LOTS 330 TO 335 SOLD BY ORDER OF THE EXECUTORS OF MISS F. K. ROMER (decd.),
AND LOTS 301 TO 329 BY HER BROTHER, GRAND DAUGHTER AND GRANDSON OF ANNE BROWN.

Anne Brown entered the service of the Dickens family shortly before the visit to America of 1842, on which occasion she accompanied Mrs. Dickens as her maid. After the separation in 1858 she remained with Charles Dickens as housekeeper at Tavistock House and Gad's Hill Place. She is referred to by him in the famous statement concerning the separation as "an attached woman—more a friend to both of us than a servant . . . who was and still is, in Mrs. Dickens' confidence and in mine"

- 305 [DICKENS (C.)?] "PROLOGUE", 34 lines, in rhymed couplets, beginning: "Prologues and Epilogues, in good old days, Were things of course, wherever there were plays", printed in blue on one side of an octavo sheet, slightly torn in folds
no date or imprint

 Apparently a General Prologue to three plays produced by Dickens's Company of Amateurs. It contains references to the "Housekeeper" (probably Douglas Jerrold's 2-act Comedy), the "Windmill" (probably Edward Morton's 1-act Farce), and "Husbands" (which may be "Husband at Sight", J. B. Buckstone's 2-act Farce). If this prologue is by Dickens it seems to be entirely unrecorded. It is similar in form and manner to that written by him for Westland Marston's Play "The Patrician's Daughter".

- 306 [Dickens (C.)?] "Prologue", another copy, slightly torn in folds (1)

The second letter, dated 11 October, 1857 [some months before the formal separation of Charles Dickens and his wife] from Gad's Hill Place gives detailed instructions concerning the re-arrangement of his dressing room at Tavistock House, which he intends to occupy in future as a bedroom.  The letter which Dickens always referred to as the "Violated letter", was written on 25 May, 1858. It concerned his separation from Mrs. Dickens and was given to Arthur Smith to show only to close personal friends. Smith, however, showed it to a great many other people, and even sent a copy of it to New York, where it was published in the "Tribune". The publicity thus given to the affair led Dickens to publish the less detailed statement printed in "Household Words" for 12 June, 1858.

Carlyle, apparently when going through these letters in 1869: in describing a visit to the Grange, she speaks of Carlyle and the Bishop of Oxford arguing extensively:

"We got fond of the whole lot before they left, altho' they are Yankees . . . We staid just the one week Mr. C. had agreed to stay and he was very impatient to be "home to one's work" all the while. The little mouthful of human life did him good however, in spite of the terrific growling he carried on in my room. There was a photographer there taking "Views" and "Interiors" at the easy rate of five guineas a day and as much french cookery and champagne as he could stow into him."

In another letter referring to the papering of some rooms she writes:

I should like Mr. C. not to be troubled about it, till the great affair is just ready to come off! He would worry himself thinking about having to give up the first floor for a day or two (here Carlyle writes in pencil "Kind true Soul, Kindest of Women"). Goes on to mention Charles Dickens.

- 395 THACKERAY (W. M.) A VERY FINE A. L. s. 1 p. 8vo, 36 Onslow Sq., Sunday, March 12, 1852, to Lady Harding, referring to General Wolfe :
- Thanks for the Wolfe Orders. They are I think, very characteristic of the man who drew his sword and swaggered so oddly in Pitt's dining room. I like the Quixotism in his character, wh. helped him perhaps to be a hero, and fancy a sort of gasconading and military strut not in the least unbecoming a good and brave man. But I don't draw the character quite as I fancy it, for I may be utterly in the wrong, and have no right to take liberties with such great names. I am sure Pitt Snr. was a prodigious quack and think he did an immense mischief but who am I to dare say as much, or to fling mud at the tall statue wh. history has chosen to elevate to him? . . .

- 586 [PURCELL (Henry)] An important contemporary Manuscript of compositions by Henry Purcell and other members of the Chapel Royal, from the Library of William Gostling, for whom Purcell wrote "They that go down to the Sea in Ships", and other anthems included in this volume

The contents comprise sixty-four anthems, seventeen by Purcell, twenty-three by Blow, three by Lock, four by Pelham Humphreys, four by William Turner, one by Child, one by Aldrich, three by Tudway, four by Clark, and a few others. Many of them bear dates and notes as to the circumstances in which they were written

 This manuscript is probably the most important authority for the correct text of Purcell's anthems.

Included with the lot are letters from Mr. Barclay Squire and Sir Frederick Bridge, 418 pp. clearly written in score, large folio, in contemporary leather binding, bearing bookplate of William Gostling
