Total number of Patients admitted since the establishment of the Hospital in 1802, 40,669.

Once more the Committee of the London Fever Hospital come before the Public with an account of their work never before equalled in amount. The number of patients admitted into the hospital, during 1864, was 3610. This number was no less than 911 in excess of the largest number of patients admitted in any previous year since the foundation of the hospital. The increased usefulness of the hospital will best be appreciated from the fact, that the number of patients admitted in the last three years (1862-64) has been 8419, or considerably more than one-fourth of the entire number received during the previous sixty years, (1802-1861.)

The female patients admitted during the year exceeded the males by 116.

The number of admissions was large in every month of the year. In January it was 343 ; in June it fell to 236 ; but in December it rose to the unprecedented number of 352—a number almost equalling the admissions for the entire year 1860. It was no uncommon occurrence for twenty patients to be admitted on one day ; on September 3rd, the number was 27 ; and within six days, the number was no less than 103. (August 29 to September 3.)

The daily average number of patients in the hospital for the entire year, was 185, the highest in any former year being 137. The lowest average for any one month was 162 in July ; the highest was 214 in November. The smallest number of patients in hospital at one time was 147 on the 18th of July ; the largest was 237 on the 9th of December. In no previous year has the number of patients in hospital, on one day, exceeded 218.

Of the 3610 patients admitted during the past year, 3175 were suffering from fever in the strict sense of the term, while in 435 the febrile symptoms were the result of local disease. Of the cases of true fever, there were of—

Typhus fever, or the fever which is propagated and perhaps generated by over-crowding and destitution, is the disease upon the prevalence of which the variations in the number of admissions into the Fever Hospital mainly depends. The small number of admissions into the hospital in the years 1858-61, and the unprecedented numbers in the three last years, have been due to the almost complete absence of typhus in the former case, and to its great prevalence in the latter. In the year 1858, the number of patients admitted with typhus was only 15, and during seven months only one case was observed; but in the years 1862, 1863, and 1864, the typhus admissions numbered 1827, 1319, and 2497. The epidemic of typhus, which commenced in December, 1861, raged throughout 1864. The monthly typhus admissions, which in January, 1864, were 239, never fell below 160, and in December rose to 270. The epidemic is still confined to the poorest class of the population. A very large portion of the typhus patients admitted, during last year, had been out of employment and in a very destitute state for a long time prior to their attack. The localities of the metropolis, whence the typhus patients were derived, were the poorest and most densely crowded. Thus of the 36 districts into which London is divided, Lambeth furnished 268; St. George's, Southwark, 183; Bermondsey, 170; St. Pancras, 137; Chelsea, 137; St. George's-in-the-East, 131; Rotherhithe, 129; Strand, 116; St. Margaret's Westminster, 114; City, 109; Shoreditch, 91; Bethnal Green, 88; St. Saviour's, 78; St. Martin's, 69; Clerkenwell, 69; Holborn, 66; Marylebone, 55; and Greenwich, 64. On the other hand, Paddington, Belgravia, and Hampstead did not furnish one case, although examples of other forms of fever were derived from these parishes. At the same time, the experience of the Fever Hospital shows that the epidemic is now more generally distributed throughout the metropolis, than during the years 1862 and 1863. There was no evidence that any of the patients had imported the fever into London. Of the 2498 cases, only 111 were natives of Ireland; most of the 111 patients born in Ireland had resided for many years in London, and none were ill before their arrival. At the commencement of the epidemic there was a great preponderance of male over female typhus patients, but in 1864 there was a slight preponderance of females, (87).

No instance of relapsing fever has been observed at the hospital since 1854.

Enteric fever, or the fever whose origin and propagation have been traced to bad drainage, has constituted no part of the present epidemic. It differs from typhus and relapsing fever in being in London an endemic, rather than an epidemic, disease. Accordingly, the number of cases admitted into the Fever Hospital vary but little from year to year. During the sixteen years preceding 1864, the annual number of admissions never exceeded 234, and except in the year 1860, was never less than 137, the average for the sixteen years being 176. In 1864, the number of enteric cases was 252, or 18 in excess of the largest number admitted before in one year. During the past year enteric fever has been unusually prevalent throughout England in places never reached by typhus, and the circumstance has been attributed to the unusual heat and dryness of the summer and autumn. The converse was observed in the year 1860, which was remarkable for its cold and rainy summer and autumn, and that was the year in which the number of enteric cases admitted into the Fever Hospital fell to 94, or to scarcely more than one-half of the average of the last seventeen years. In 1864, the male patients affected with enteric fever were 26 in excess of the females. As in all former years, so in 1864, the largest number of enteric patients was admitted in autumn. The number in August was more than eight times the number in January; during the first four months of the year only 43 cases (17 per cent.) were admitted, but during the four months, from August to November inclusive, the number of admissions was 159, (or 63 per cent). No fewer than 30 of the enteric cases were brought from Greenwich.

The cases registered under the head of simple continued fever or febricula were 110 in number.

The number of cases of scarlet fever was greater than in any former year. It amounted to 284, (106 males and 178 females).

Eighteen cases of measles and 14 of small-pox were admitted. Thirteen of the small-pox patients were at once transferred to the Small-Pox Hospital; the remaining one was too prostrate to bear the additional journey and died within four hours of admission.

The patients, whose diseases were not true fever, were mainly suffering from pneumonia or pleurisy (123 cases), bronchitis (46), phthisis (14), acute tuberculosis (4), tubercular meningitis (11), rheumatism (10), pyæmia (6), erysipelas (13), Bright's disease (6), quinsy (8), dyspepsia (25); while in 25 the sole complaint appeared to be debility consequent on poor living.

In most of the cases of true fever the characteristic eruptions were noticed upon the skin. That of typhus was present in 2442 out of 2497 cases (97·8 per cent.); that of enteric fever in 235 out of 252 cases (93·25 per cent.); and that of scarlet fever in 275 out of 284 cases (97 per cent.) In many of the cases where the eruption was not discovered, it had probably existed before the patient's admission. Of the cases of typhus, 623 were complicated with pulmonary diseases; 110, with diarrhoea; 38, with erysipelas; 36, with parotid swellings; 24, with albuminuria; 20, with convulsions; 25, with pregnancy, of which 17 aborted; 13, with bed-sores; 14, with gangrene of the feet or of other parts, exclusive of bed-sores; 13, with phthisis; 7, with jaundice; and 8 with œdema glottidis; in three of the last cases life was saved by laryngotomy. Of the enteric cases, 54 were complicated with pulmonary diseases; 15, with hæmorrhage from the bowels (of which 10 were fatal); 10, with peritonitis (of which 9 were fatal); 4, with erysipelas; 2, with phlebitis; 1, with glossitis; and 1, with necrosis of jaw; while in 15 there was a relapse of all the symptoms with fresh eruption. Of the scarlatina patients, 41 had the disease in the most malignant form; and in many of the remainder it was complicated with albuminuria, glandular swellings, convulsions (5), rheumatism (10), pericarditis (4), pyæmia (3), dropsy (6, all on admission), jaundice (2), diarrhœa (2), and œdema glottidis (1). In the last-mentioned case life was saved by laryngotomy.

Of the total number of patients, 215 were domestic servants, or policemen, for whom an admission fee was paid; 71 were admitted free, and 3324 by parish orders. Of the typhus patients, most were admitted by parish orders, and the proportion paid for did not amount to 2 per cent. of the entire number; many of the paying cases were medical men or nurses, or had contracted the disease in other hospitals. Of the cases of enteric fever, 16·6 per cent. were paid for; and of the cases of scarlet fever, as many as 29·2 per cent.

Of the total number of patients in the hospital, 3555 were under treatment until the termination of their illness, and of this number 646 died, or the rate of mortality was 18·17 per cent. This mortality is somewhat in excess of that observed in 1863, but is less than that of most previous years. Of the fatal cases, moreover, two were dead before reaching the hospital, 57 were moribund on admission, death occurring within twenty-four hours, and 64 others died within forty-eight hours of admission. Deducting these 123 cases, the mortality among the patients, fairly under treatment, was only 15·24 per cent.

Of 2814 cases of typhus, enteric fever, and febricula, ordinarily included under the common designation of "continued fever," 485 or 17·2 per cent. died. Deducting one case dead before reaching the hospital, 41 moribund on admission, or dying within twenty-four hours, and 51 others fatal within forty-eight hours, the mortality was 14·4 per cent.

Of 2448 cases of typhus alone, 435 proved fatal, or 17·76 per cent. Among the female patients the mortality was 17·3 per cent.; among the males, 18·25 per cent. Deducting one case dead before reaching the hospital, 38 dying within twenty-four hours, and 50 others dying within forty-eight hours of admission, the mortality was only 14·6 per cent. These results, although somewhat in excess of those for 1863, are considerably below the average of the preceding fifteen years, that typhus has been distinguished from other fevers in the records of the hospital. Of the fatal cases, 218 were complicated with pulmonary diseases; 27, with diarrhœa; 19, with convulsions; 17, with parotid swellings; 14, with erysipelas; and 10, with gangrene of the feet or of other parts of the body, not subjected to pressure. But the circumstance which most influenced the rate of mortality was the age of the patients. The annexed table* of the typhus patients admitted during 1864, shows what a large proportion of them were advanced in years, and also the influence of age on the rate of mortality. Of 473 cases between five and fifteen years only, five died, or one per cent.; but of 267 cases above fifty years 147 died, or 53 per cent.

Of 256 cases of enteric fever, 50 proved fatal, or the mortality was 19.5 per cent. Among the male patients (21.17 per cent.), the mortality was greater than among the females (17.65 per cent.). Deducting three cases fatal within twenty-four hours, and one other case fatal within forty-eight hours of admission, the rate of mortality for both sexes was 18.25 per cent. This mortality has only been exceeded in four of the preceding sixteen years. In eight cases death was due to perforation of the bowel and peritonitis; in eight to hæmorrhage from the bowels, and in 18 to pulmonary diseases.

The mortality from scarlet fever was 16 per cent. (288 cases and 46 deaths). But of the 46 fatal cases, one was dead before reaching the hospital; 6 others died within twenty-four hours; and 1 more within forty-eight hours of admission. Deducting these eight cases, the mortality is reduced to 13·57 per cent. Of the 46 fatal cases, 25 were examples of the most malignant form of the disease; eight were complicated with great swelling of the neck; five with pulmonary diseases; one with diphtheria, &c.

Of 438 cases, which were not examples of true fever, 114 died, or the mortality was 26 per cent. Deducting 10 cases fatal within twenty-four hours, and 12 others fatal within forty-eight hours, the mortality was 22 per cent. The mortality in this class of patients is always high in the Fever Hospital, because it is only when cases of acute local disease assume a severe type that they are liable to be mistaken for "fever," and sent to the hospital. Moreover, of the 114 fatal cases, 30 were above fifty years of age.

Considering the large number of contagious cases under treatment, the instances of fever contracted in the hospital during 1864 were few. Out of 83 attendants on the sick (including laundry-women), either permanently or temporarily engaged during the year, 21 caught typhus, viz.: the assistant resident medical officer, the matron, the engineer who had been attached to the hospital for sixteen years, and who had never before had fever, although his duties brought him daily into the wards, and 18 nurses; and two caught scarlet fever, viz., an assistant resident medical officer, and the dispenser. The committee regret to report the death of the engineer, and of four nurses from typhus, and of an assistant resident medical officer, Mr. Bernard, from scarlet fever. Seven patients contracted typhus, and five, scarlet fever; one of the former and two of the latter died, but in all of the three cases the fatal event was probably independent of the disease contracted in the hospital. Two patients contracted small-pox; both recovered.

The above facts might seem to lend some support to the views of certain sanitary reformers, who maintain that all cases of infectious disease ought to be distributed through the wards of general hospitals, and who have denounced Fever Hospitals and Fever wards as crimes against humanity, and a disgrace to the age in which we live. It is expedient, therefore, to make known the real facts of the case. The objections urged against Fever Hospitals are two, viz. :—1, that the concentration of the poison increases the mortality among the patients themselves; and 2, that the concentration of the poison increases the danger to the attendants. The validity of these objections may be tested by comparing the results of the London Fever Hospital with those of six of the principal general hospitals in the metropolis.

During the first six months of 1862, 1107 cases of true typhus were under treatment in the London Fever Hospital, of which 232 died, or the mortality was 20·95 per cent. In the same period, 343 cases of typhus were under treatment in six of the general hospitals in London, mentioned below*; of which number, 80 died, or 23·32 per cent. The 1080 (1107—27) cases admitted into the Fever Hospital, communicated the disease to 27 persons, of whom 8 died. In other words, only one person took the fever for every 40 admitted, and only one died for every 135. But the 272 cases admitted into the six general hospitals communicated the disease to 71 persons, of whom 21 died; or one person caught the fever for every 3·8 cases admitted, and one life was lost for every 12·9 cases admitted. It appears from this, that the objections raised against a Fever Hospital with thorough ventilation, however plausible in theory, are not justified by facts, and that a given number of typhus patients can be treated on the plan of isolation, with equal advantage to themselves, and with far less danger to the attendants and other patients, than in the wards of a general hospital. With perfect ventilation, there need be no more concentration of fever-poison in a fever ward than in a general ward with a sprinkling of fever cases, and in the former case there will be no danger of other patients contracting fever. It may fairly be asked, what would have been the effect if there had been no Fever Hospital in London, and if the 5643 cases of contagious typhus admitted into it during the last three years, had been distributed through the general hospitals, in addition to the few hundreds actually treated in them? It may be mentioned, that since the above comparison was made, typhus fever has spread to an alarming extent in many of the general hospitals of the metropolis, immediately after the admission of two or three cases, and at the present moment the managers of more than one hospital are considering the propriety of excluding contagious fevers altogether.

It was formerly the custom to make no separation between the patients suffering from different diseases admitted into the hospital, but owing to the frequency with which patients contracted other diseases than those for which they were admitted, the plan has been adopted of isolating in separate wards the typhus and scarlatina patients, from the other patients, and from one another. The result has been most satisfactory; instances are now extremely rare of patients contracting either typhus or scarlet fever. It is a remarkable fact that out of 365 patients admitted during 1862, with other diseases than contagious fever, not one contracted fever while in the hospital. The few instances in which typhus or scarlet fever was contracted by the patients during 1864, were mainly due to the great pressure occasionally interfering with the classification of the patients.

For three years, the cases of enteric fever, and the cases which have not been true fever, have been kept together; 644 cases of the former and 1108 of the latter have thus been treated together in the same wards, interspersed among one another. Not one of the patients in these wards has contracted enteric fever. The nurses and attendants throughout the hospital have enjoyed a like immunity. During the last nine years upwards of 1500 cases of enteric fever have been under treatment in the hospital, but only one nurse has suffered from it, and in her case it was doubtful if the attack did not originate out of the hospital. These considerations made it the more extraordinary when four cases of enteric fever originated in the hospital in the spring of the past year, at a time when there were scarcely any patients in the building suffering from this form of fever. Two of the persons attacked were the cook and the porter's child who lived in separate buildings; a third was an assistant medical officer, and a fourth was a patient lying in a ward as distant as possible from that used by the enteric patients. The assistance of the Medical Officer of Health for Islington was called in, and important defects in the drainage of the hospital were discovered which were at once remedied. No case of enteric fever occurred in the hospital after that, notwithstanding the unusually large number of cases admitted during autumn. All the four cases recovered.

The committee are pleased to observe that the arrangements and working of the hospital have been favourably noticed in the report of the hospitals of the United Kingdom, published by the medical officer of the Privy Council. The notice of the London Fever Hospital in this report concludes with the following paragraph :

“In conclusion, we cannot forbear remarking, that the construction
 “and arrangements of this hospital seem to us exceedingly good, that
 “the arrangement of the beds is excellent, and that the ventilation is
 “as nearly as possible perfect. It seems to us too that the plan on “which the convalescent wards are conducted, in virtue of which con“valescents are removed from the infected atmosphere of the acute “wards, and “sorted” so as to guard them as much as possible from “all risk of contagion, is worthy of special notice. We may add also
 “that the records of the hospital are kept on a plan, and with a degree
 “of detail, that render them unusually instructive and interesting.”

The carriage for the conveyance of fever patients, which was provided some years ago, is in frequent requisition. It has been the means, in many instances, of preventing the employment of street-cabs for the conveyance of patients suffering from contagious diseases. It can be sent to any part of London, on communicating with the authorities at the hospital by telegraph or otherwise.

Believing that one great object of the Fever Hospital is to arrest the progress of contagion, the committee have not hesitated to extend the building to meet the emergencies of the present epidemic. Early in October, 1863, the physicians brought under their notice the great and sudden increase in the prevalence of typhus fever, and the likelihood of its continuing to increase throughout the winter, and urged the expediency of providing extra accommodation. On the 16th of November, 1863, a wooden building for sixty patients was commenced, and was opened about the middle of January, 1864. Objection being made by the parochial authorities to the material of the building, and the necessity for the extra accommodation continuing, measures were at once taken to convert the temporary building into a permanent structure. The result has justified the action of the committee. The new wards have been in almost constant operation throughout the past year; and have accommodated many hundreds of patients, who must otherwise have been turned from the doors. Since they were opened, not one patient has been refused admission from want of room.

The committee are glad to report a great improvement in the nursing of the hospital. They have been under the necessity of extending and improving the accommodation of the nurses, by the erection of two new dormitories. They feel sure that the public will not hesitate to defray the expenses necessary for preserving the health of persons, whose duties are attended by no small risk.

In conclusion, the committee desire to press the claims of the charity upon the attention of the benevolent public. The events of the last three years prove more than ever that a Fever Hospital in the metropolis is an absolute necessity, and that it ought to be kept at all times in a state of complete efficiency whether fever be epidemic or not. Since its foundation in 1802, 40,669 patients have been admitted within its walls. By the prompt removal of these cases, not only has the spread of contagion been arrested, but the sick have been placed in circumstances more favourable to their recovery than at their own homes. The Fever Hospital offers an asylum, not only to the fever-stricken poor, but to servants in private families, and to persons employed in large mercantile establishments, and thus it protects every class of the community from the spread of contagion. It is moreover, the only institution in the metropolis devoted to these objects.

At the present moment, the demands upon the resources of the charity are extremely heavy. The construction of new wards and dormitories has swallowed up a great part of the contributions hitherto received, while the current expenses arising from the large number of patients are greatly increased. The committee have done all in their power to render the hospital a source of public good, and they therefore look to the public to help them in the trying circumstances in which they are placed. What the hospital is most in want of is an increased number of annual subscribers. It will scarcely be credited that the annual subscriptions to an institution, conferring enormous benefits on the public, amount only to £552. and that they were less in 1864 than in 1829, although an annual subscription of one guinea is the sole qualification necessary for becoming a governor. The committee feel confident that the best remedy for the difficulties under which they labour, is to make generally known the great benefits which the hospital confers upon all classes of the community, upon the rich, as well as upon the poor.

CHAS. FINN, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL,
SUPPORTED BY VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS,
LIVERPOOL ROAD, ISLINGTON.

Laws and Regulations.

OBJECTS OF THE INSTITUTION.

1. ALL poor persons (not being parochial paupers) and domestic servants of subscribers, labouring under contagious fever, and residing in the metropolis or its neighbourhood, shall be considered proper objects for this charity, and shall be admitted gratuitously according to the next regulation. Parochial paupers, domestic servants, and non-subscribers, and all inmates of other public charities (except medical hospitals), shall be admitted on the payment of such sum for each patient as the Committee shall from time to time determine.

2. On application for the admission of any patient to the hospital, notice shall be immediately given to the resident medical officer, and the person after inspection may be admitted by an order signed by him, or on a certificate signed by any physician, surgeon, or apothecary, stating the disease to be fever of a contagious nature, or likely to become such. The order or certificate shall entitle the patient to admission, subject to the provisions contained in Rule No. 1, unless the case shall be deemed an improper one by the resident medical officer, or unless the hospital shall be full.

GOVERNORS.

3. All subscribers of one guinea annually, or of ten guineas in one donation, shall be governors of this hospital.

GENERAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF THE COMMITTEE.

4. A general meeting of the governors, of which ten days' previous notice must be given in three morning newspapers, shall be held every year, on the second Friday in February, or as near thereto as may be convenient, for the purpose of approving or rescinding the proceedings of the Committee for the preceding year; for receiving an annual report of the state of the funds; and for electing a president, vice-presidents, treasurer, honorary secretary, and other members of the Committee for the ensuing year. At all meetings connected with the affairs of the hospital, a simple majority of the governors present and voting shall bind the minority; and in case of equality of votes, the chairman shall have an additional vote or casting vote.

5. A special general meeting of the governors may at any time be called, by direction of the president or of the Committee; or on the requisition of any twelve governors, provided the requisition be made in writing to the secretary, and the purpose for which the same is summoned be published in three morning newspapers at least ten days prior to the next meeting; but the proceedings of such special general meeting, though acted upon pro tempore, shall not be deemed final, until confirmed by another general meeting.

6. No new rule or law shall be made, nor shall any existing rule or law be repealed or altered, until determined upon at a general meeting by a majority of governors present and voting, and until confirmed at a subsequent general or special meeting.

7. The presence of seven governors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum at general meetings, and without that number no business shall be transacted.

8. At the annual general meeting, a Committee for the management of the Institution shall be elected, consisting of the president, the vice-presidents, the treasurer, honorary secretary, and twenty-four other governors; four of which governors shall not have been members of the preceding Committee. They shall meet on the last Friday, or on such other day of every month as the Committee may appoint; and three members shall be necessary to constitute a meeting, and to transact business. A special meeting of the Committee may be called by the direction of the treasurer, or by any three members of the Committee, on giving at least three days' notice of the same, and specifying the business for which it is called.

9. The Committee shall have authority to appoint sub-committees, whose reports shall be submitted to their consideration; they shall elect all the officers, except the physicians of the hospital and the honorary secretary, who shall be elected by the governors at large; and with the assistance of the medical officers, shall form regulations and by-laws for the internal management of the hospital.

10. The resolutions of one meeting of the Committee shall not be rescinded by another, unless it be specially summoned for that purpose. All accounts, except such small sums as may be comprised under the item of petty cash, shall be submitted to the Committee, at the monthly meetings, after having been duly examined by the secretary, the resident medical officer, and the house-directors; and such accounts, if approved, shall be paid by cheques, payable to order, signed in Committee by the chairman and one other member, or, in case a Committee cannot be formed, by two of the house-directors, and in all cases countersigned by the secretary. All the larger articles of supply, when practicable, shall be furnished by contract made after public tender. No expenditure for repairs of premises or any machinery shall be incurred, without a written order from the Committee or house-directors.

11. The Committee shall yearly publish a report of the state of the hospital.

12. No person being a member of the Committee, shall furnish for profit any goods, provisions, or other articles, for the use of or on account of the hospital, or be concerned in any contract for supplying the same, or be employed for hire, or wages, or profit, in any office or employment under the charity.

TREASURER.

13. The treasurer if present, shall take the chair at all meetings of the Committee, in the absence of the president or vice-presidents. He shall keep an account at the bankers, and all moneys received for the use of the hospital shall be paid to such account; he shall honour all cheques signed, as provided in Rule 10; and the signature of the secretary shall be a sufficient warranty that the cheques purporting to be so signed are properly signed, and shall be an indemnity to the treasurer against risk.

AUDITORS.

14. Three gentlemen shall be appointed annually at the meeting of the Committee in November, who shall audit the accounts of the Institution for the current year, and approve an abstract of all receipts and disbursements to be prepared by the Secretary, and laid before the annual general meeting in February.

MONTHLY DIRECTORS.

15. The Committee shall, at each monthly meeting, appoint three members of their own body as Directors of the hospital, of whom two shall be a quorum, and who shall continue in office until the next monthly meeting of the Committee. The Trustees and the two senior physicians shall be ex officio Directors of the hospital, in addition to three members to be appointed at each monthly meeting, as provided by this rule.

16. They shall, from time to time, cause the beds, clothes, and apparel belonging to the hospital to be examined, and shall report thereon, if necessary to the Committee. They shall inspect the tradesmen's bills, and take care that the provisions, bedding, clothing, furniture, and every article for the use of the hospital, be supplied on the most reasonable terms; they shall order in writing all permanent stores.

17. They shall be authorized in all respects to enforce the observance of the regulations of the hospital; they shall notice and report to the Committee any irregularity or misconduct on the part of the officers, servants, or patients of the charity; and shall at every meeting of the Committee, cause a statement of the house expenditure to be produced for the preceding month. They shall appoint the porters, nurses, and other menial servants of the hospital, and dismiss them for misconduct.

PHYSICIANS.

18. There shall be two physicians, and two assistant-physicians, who shall be Fellows or Members (formerly called Licentiates) of the Royal College of Physicians of London; and also a consulting-surgeon, who shall be a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons.

19. The physicians and assistant-physicians shall be elected by the governors at large; and no governor shall be qualified to vote, unless he shall have become a governor three months before a vacancy is declared.

20. One of the physicians shall visit the hospital at least once every day, and at such times as they may deem necessary. They shall have the power of dismissing any patient or convalescent, for refractory conduct or disobedience of orders.

ASSISTANT-PHYSICIANS.

21. In case of the illness or necessary absence of either of the physicians, one of the assistant-physicians shall attend regularly in his stead. Such attendances are to be reported to the Committee.

HOSPITAL PUPILS.

22. No medical student shall be permitted to visit the hospital unless in company with one of the physicians, and unless he is regularly entered or registered as a pupil.

RESIDENT MEDICAL OFFICER.

23. The resident medical officer shall reside constantly at the hospital, and shall devote himself entirely to the duties of his office; and previously to his election, he shall be required to produce satisfactory testimonials to the Committee.

24. He shall superintend the patients between the visits of the physicians, and the dispensary shall be exclusively under his control. In the absence of the Committee and house-directors, he shall be recognised as the head of the establishment.

25. Accurate registers of the patients admitted, as well as of the remedies employed for their recovery, shall be kept—which registers shall be the property of the hospital; he shall produce a medical report every month, to be laid before the Committee.

26. When the number of patients shall be great, a medical assistant shall be appointed by the House Directors, subject to the confirmation of the Committee, and he shall receive such remuneration as the Committee shall from time to time determine.

HONORARY SECRETARY.

27. There shall be an honorary secretary, who shall also be a member of the Committee, and chosen annually with them. He shall be at liberty to attend all deputations to public bodies and private persons. He shall communicate with persons concerning the affairs of the hospital during the intervals between the monthly meetings of the Committee, and shall report to the Committee, at their next meeting, all special or important events that shall have occurred within his knowledge during the month. He shall also assist the treasurer in the discharge of his duties when necessary.

SECRETARY AND HOUSE STEWARD.

28. The duties of this officer shall be to reside in the hospital, if required by the Committee, and in the absence of the house-directors to have the management of the domestic affairs of the hospital, under the general superintendence of the resident medical officer. He shall be required to enter into a bond, with sufficient sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his duties. He shall also perform the several duties specified in the by-laws.

MATRON.

29. The duties of the matron shall principally relate to the wards, the kitchen, and the laundry. She shall exercise a strict superintendence over the nurses; shall have the charge of linen, bedding, glass, crockery, and ordinary kitchen and scullery stores, subject to the general supervision of the house-steward; and shall visit every ward of the hospital at least three times in the day. She shall also perform the several duties specified in the by-laws.

COLLECTOR.

30. The duties of this officer shall be—
To call on subscribers and collect all donations and subscriptions of the hospital; to give only authorized printed receipts for the same; to attend all meetings, when required; to keep correct lists, and duplicate lists, of all donations and subscriptions, with the residences of the donors and subscribers made up from day to day ; to pay weekly all moneys he may receive to the bankers ; to deliver weekly to the secretary reports in writing of all moneys received and paid, with the balance at the bankers ; to keep the accounts regularly entered in the collector's cash book ; to deliver a copy of the annual report to each subscriber ; and to give such security, with sureties, for the due and faithful performance of his duties, as may be required.

NURSES.

31. The head-nurse in each ward shall attend principally to the patients ; and to the keeping of the wards clean and quiet.

32. The under-nurses shall be under the direction of the head-nurses, and shall perform the more menial offices of the hospital.

PORTER AND ENGINEER.

33. The porter and the engineer shall be employed as the Committee or directors may think proper. They shall not absent themselves without the permission of the house-directors or resident medical officer.

TRUSTEES.

34. The legal estate in the lands, buildings, and premises of the hospital, shall be vested in three trustees ; new trustees being appointed when vacancies occur, at a general meeting of the governors.

35. All legacies of £100 and upwards, unless otherwise directed by testators, shall be invested for the benefit of the hospital, in the names of the three trustees.

36. No variation in the usual gratuities and fixed salaries shall be made, unless the Committee be specially summoned for the purpose, and unless the proposed addition, or diminution, be confirmed by a subsequent Committee.

BY-LAWS.

37. The by-laws which shall from time to time be made by the Committee shall be open to the inspection of any subscriber, and shall contain, among other things, a full specification of the duties of the resident medical officer, the matron, and other officers of the Institution, with the practices usually adopted for their election ; which specification shall be read over to every individual before his appointment, and referred to on all occasions of doubt.
