FOREWORD

BY

MISS MARGARET BASDEN, M.D., F.R.C.S. (Eng.), F.R.C.O.G.

It made me very happy to be asked to write the foreword to what we may now believe will be the last war-time Report, though lack of space prevents my saying what I would.

It was with somewhat mixed feelings, that when war broke out, I found I was to take up my residence at the Mothers' Hospital; but I soon realized that my lot was truly fortunate.

It gave me the opportunity I could never otherwise have had, of seeing the work of the Hospital, not only from a medical point of view, but intimately and behind the scenes, and of getting to know The Salvation Army at its best. It will be a lasting inspiration to me.

We have gone through difficult times together, and have shared in the adventures common to East London during the war, but perhaps the outstanding memory will be the sense of happiness and security that has prevailed within the Hospital. Once inside its walls, every one seems to feel safe, and even during the time of the worst raids many were the subterfuges employed by the patients, in the hope of avoiding being evacuated to a 'safe area.' Their faces would light up with joy if they heard there was some complication, because this would necessitate their being confined in the Mothers' Hospital.

The accompanying pictures show better than I can put into words the spirit of the Hospital, and why we always have far more applicants for admission than we can ever accommodate—yet how gladly would we accommodate them had we only the money and the beds.

But there are other pictures and memories, too, that I shall carry away with me: The young Ward Sister playing hymns in her very vulnerable ward during a raid, and the patients happily singing. It was not foolhardy, for the shelter was not yet built. The firewatchers, whether Nurses, high-ranking Salvation Army Officers, Hospital Porters, Wardens, all in their turn, standing in the moonlight, or slowly pacing the colonnade, quite unprotected while the bombs were falling. The District Sister, and the look of surprise on her face, that any one should even notice such an ordinary act as her setting off on her bicycle to visit a patient, just as the raid was starting and the guns were going. The Shelter, where one tried (and usually successfully) to sleep, despite the ubiquitous snoring, or again, perhaps specially at five in the morning when all the babies woke and screamed together and all the mothers shouted a welcoming cry. The thrill of relief at being once more safe inside the Hospital after the nightly drive back through fog or darkness, or maybe worse.

All over the world people are praying for the Mothers' Hospital, and an atmosphere of prayer often seems to pervade the place. That, I am sure, is the secret of the calmness and serenity, and also of the gaiety within its walls.

So far the Hospital has been wonderfully protected, and we have not been called on to bear much; but I am sure that whatever happens the same spirit will prevail, for in such an atmosphere it is not difficult to remember, even during the worst that war can bring, that 'death is only an incident, and not a disabling one.'

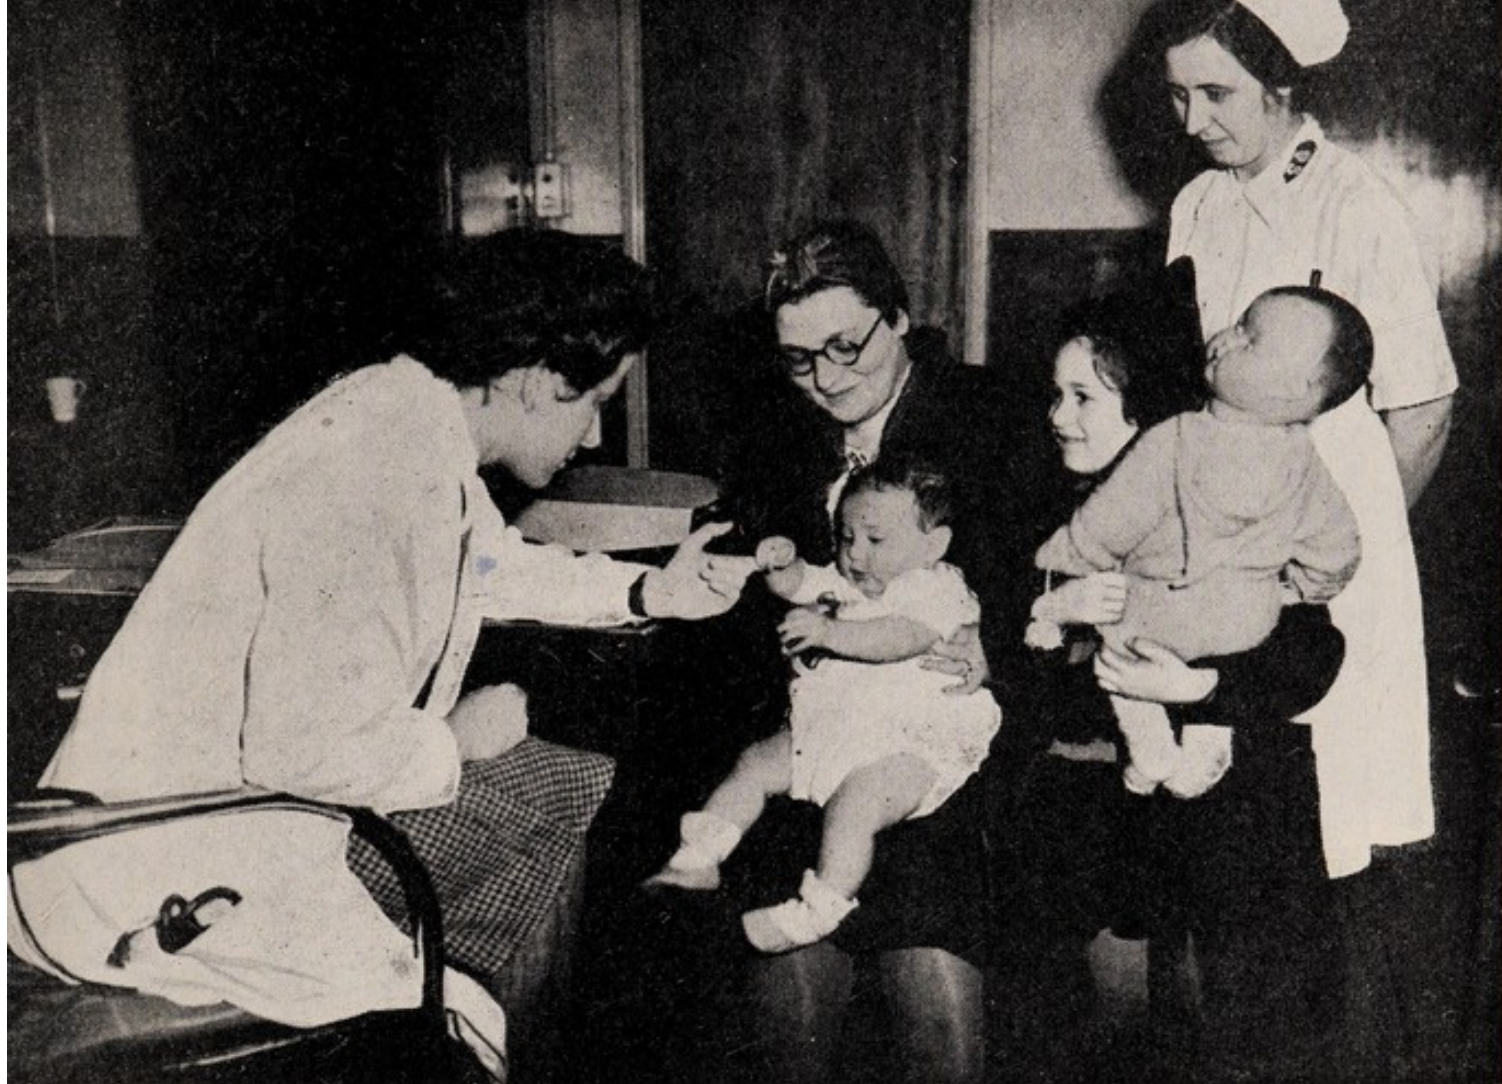

We confidently believe that the best work of the Hospital lies yet ahead, and that it will continue to be a source of help and inspiration in an ever-widening circle.
