- 108 Australasia. Histoire des Sevarambes, Peuples qui habitent une Partie du troisième Continent, communément appelé la Terre Australe, Contenant une Relation du Gouvernement, des Mœurs, de la Religion, et du Language de cette Nation, inconnue jusques à present aux Peuples de l'Europe, curious plates, 2 vols in 1, 12mo, calf. Amsterdam, 1716 £2/2/-
There have been many editions of this curious work in English, French and Dutch. It belongs to that class of literature of which More's Utopia is best known and preceded Gulliver's Travels and Robinson Crusoe. Scott says that the spurious third volume of Gulliver was largely a translation from this work. Although a philosophic fiction, it very properly claims a place in Australasian collections.
Barbier gives DENIS VAIRASSE D'ALAI EN LANGUEDOC as the author.

Samuel Pepys.

Painted by Savill, 1662.

This painting, which has never before been reproduced, has been attributed to Sir George Kneller and was so described when exhibited by its possessor in the First Special Exhibition of National Portraits on loan to the South Kensington Museum, 1866. But it is identified by several references in the Diary, where it states that he first sat 27 Nov., 1661, and the various sittings are mentioned until 22 Feb., 1661/2: "Came Mr. Savill with the pictures and we hung them up in our dining-room. It comes now to appear very handsome with all my pictures." [This refers also to the painting of Mrs. Pepys by the same painter.] Apparently (16 Jan.) he paid or "bid him £6 for the two pictures, and 36s for the two frames." The portrait can be identified by the lute which rests on the table. "6 Jan., 1661/2, I sent my lute to the Paynter's, and there I staid with him all the morning to see him paint the neck of my lute in my picture." The Dictionary of National Biography records this portrait as by Kneller.

Of Savill the painter nothing is known except that he painted the portraits of Pepys and his wife and also a miniature of Pepys. But Pepys records that he lived in Cheapside.

An Exact coloured facsimile of the original (11 by 9 ins.), framed in hand carved antique gilt frame similar to the original.

£4/10/0

Unframed copies can be had, price on application.
