REPORT.

The issue of the Forty-ninth Annual Report of the National Health Society, which is now submitted to the Members, has, to the regret of the Committee, been delayed by two very grievous losses which the Society has sustained.

Her Royal Highness The Princess Christian, who became President of the Society in 1900, after having for many years previously taken an active interest in its proceedings, passed away on June 9th, 1923. Throughout her association with the Society Her Royal Highness had an inspiring influence on its work, particularly in connection with the Training Classes for Health Visitors and Instructors in Infant Welfare, and by her personal participation in its affairs greatly promoted its objects while endearing herself to every member of the staff by her kind and gracious demeanour.

The office of President, vacated by the death of the Princess Christian, has been accepted, the Committee rejoice to announce, by Her Royal Highness The Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, who has already displayed a lively concern for its continued and extended usefulness.

By the death of Miss Fay Lankester, which occurred on June 15th, 1924, the Society suffered an inexpressible bereavement. Miss Lankester had been Secretary of the Society for fifty years, and it was chiefly owing to her zealous and judicious guidance that it has so efficiently fulfilled its mission and earned the public confidence it now enjoys. She identified herself with the Society, devoted to it her whole life and indefatigable energy, infused into it a stimulating and genial influence, and drew into its service those best qualified to promote its success. Up till the day of her death she was supervising its operations and planning its further development.

The following "appreciation" of Miss Lankester's work was written by Sir James Crichton-Browne, Chairman of the Society, at the time of her death, and will be full of interest to our Members:—

"The daughter of Dr. Lankester, Coroner for Central Middlesex, an energetic social reformer of the mid-Victorian era, and the sister of Sir Edwin Ray Lankester, a zoologist of world-wide fame, Miss Lankester inherited scientific predilections, and early interested herself in the study of hygiene. In 1873, on the invitation of Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, the founder, she became Secretary to the National Health Society, and from the day of her appointment devoted herself wholeheartedly to the Society's work. She became a pioneer in all schemes for the improvement of the sanitary conditions of the country and the betterment of the people. To her initiative was due the organization of 'Homely Talks' on health and of mothers' meetings in town and village, which ultimately led to the system of 'health lectures' as part of the recognized scheme of work undertaken by all education committees throughout the country. It was under Miss Lankester's personal direction that the work of training women, first as health lecturers, and in later years as health visitors and sanitary inspectors, was carried out. And it was entirely due to her appreciation of national difficulties that the system of helping suitable students by means of a loan fund was inaugurated after the war in 1918. She secured for the Priestley Lectures, which she established in memory of her friend and coadjutor, the late Lady Priestley, a series of the most eminent men of science of the day, and so made these lectures landmarks in sanitary progress. She continued her work with undimmed hope and enthusiasm to the very last. An intense human sympathy was the keynote of her character and the secret of the influence she wielded. Her friends are legion and loyal."

Another friend of long standing was lost to us by the death of Sir Frederick Treves. Records of Sir Frederick Treves's help and interest are to be found in the very earliest report of the Society, and though he had ceased to be a Member of the Committee for some time, yet he was always ready with help and advice when called upon.

It will be readily understood that the task before the Committee for the last few months has been no light one, but it was felt from the beginning that every effort must be made to carry on the work with unabated energy and zeal as a fitting memorial to Miss Lankester, and an appeal is now made to every member to help in this by the continuance of subscriptions, &c.

Removal of Office.

The first great question which it has been necessary to face has been that of finding new premises for offices, &c., as the lease of our present premises in Berners Street ends in the autumn of 1925. In this matter the Committee has been most fortunate in securing the help of the Royal Sanitary Institute, whose Council has offered us office accommodation, use of lecture rooms, &c., in their premises at 90, Buckingham Palace Road. The move will take place during the coming summer and due notice of change of address will be sent to all members.

Training for Health Visitors, &c.

This work has been continued with satisfactory results under the Regulations of the Board of Education and Ministry of Health until the present time. But now again we are obliged to revise the scheme of training to meet entirely fresh Regulations drawn up by the Ministry of Health. By these Regulations, which come into force in April, 1925, the Ministry of Health makes it practically necessary for all students to have previously undergone a complete Nursing Training, though provision is made for others in a very much extended Course. Details of the new Course are given below.

TRAINING FOR HEALTH VISITORS AND INFANT WELFARE WORKERS.

(APPROVED BY THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH.)

In compliance with the Regulations of the Ministry of Health provision is made for Two Courses :—

- (i) A Course of six months' (minimum) duration for students who are Trained Nurses and hold the Certificate of the Central Midwives Board.

- (ii) A Course of two years' duration, together with six months' training in Hospital and Certificate of Central Midwives Board. (Students will be accepted between the ages of 18 and 35 years for both courses.)

The Certificate of the C.M.B. may be obtained on completion of the six months' Course if written declaration of such intention is given by student.

The Training includes both Theoretical and Practical Work, and the fee covers all Lectures and Tutorial Classes and fees paid for practical training at Welfare Centres, &c., but does not include Midwifery Training or any Board for Residential Training or Examination Fees.

*Fees.

COURSE I	£10
COURSE II	£25 per annum.

* These fees are intended only for those students in respect of whom grants are payable to the Training Institution by the Ministry of Health according to above regulations. Students not fulfilling these requirements will be charged the above fees in addition to the amount of grant.

Examinations.

The Examination for Health Visitors Certificate will be arranged by a Central Examining Body approved by the Ministry of Health. Students may enter for this Examination immediately on the completion of either Course I or II, but the Certificate will not be granted until the full training has been completed (e.g., in Course I until the Certificate of the C.M.B. has been obtained; Course II until the six months' Hospital Training has been completed, and the Certificate of the C.M.B. obtained).

*SYLLABUS.

Priestley Lecture.

The Lady Priestley Memorial Lecture was held on February 18th, 1924, in the Barnes Hall, Royal Society of Medicine, the subject being "Alcohol—Its Uses and Abuses." Professor W. E. Dixon, M.D., F.R.S., gave a most interesting and instructive lecture to the large and distinguished audience which the Society has learned to expect for these special lectures. Sir James Crichton-Browne presided and was supported by Sir Humphry Rolleston (President of the Royal College of Physicians), Sir Thomas Horder, Bt., Dr. Charles Porter and others.

Homely Talks.

The Society is still prepared to give "Homely Talks" on Health to Mothers' Meetings, Women's Institutes, Girls' Clubs, &c. Under certain conditions these Talks are given free in or near London, and the Secretary is always pleased to help in this matter where possible. Since our last Report, Talks have been given in the following districts:—

Westbourne Grove.
Harrow Road.
Brixton.
Tooting.
Paddington.
Farnham.

Hoxton.
Westminster.
Edmonton.
Eaton Square.
Potter's Bar.
Stevenage.

Literature.

The Society's pamphlets, &c., are now being thoroughly revised, and it is hoped that before long it will be possible to supply members with a complete list of our publications.

Subscriptions and Donations.

The Committee again earnestly beg for new members and subscribers. On every side the actual and necessary working expenses are still very high.
