* * * THIS SET IS QUITE COMPLETE, and is uniformly bound in old Dutch calf, with stamped sides, with the exception of the volume of Usuardus, which is uncut. Complete copies of this invaluable and most important work are of excessive rarity, as during the French revolution, the whole stock of the book in the printer's warehouses was destroyed, and nearly the whole impressions of vol. 5 and 6 for October, being then just completed, shared the same fate. Hence arises the very great difficulty of completing sets.

  A Presentation Copy from Walter Savage Landor of a very scarce edition, sought after, and remarkable on account of its having afforded one of the pretexts for the condemnation of Servetus, with what injustice, as he has given very little of his own in it, and as the notorious passage respecting Palestine, which was subsequently laid to his charge as a crime, already exists in the edition of Argent. 1522, on the third map of Africa.

This copy is perfect, which is seldom the case.

- * * For writing this Book, and Sunday no Sabbath, Dr. P. was deprived of all his livings, dignities, and preferments, disabled from ever holding any place or dignity in church or commonwealth, and prohibited from ever coming within the verge of the king's court, and the books were ordered to be burnt by the common hangman. I am afraid this act of abominable tyranny must mainly be attributed to Abp. Williams, who revenged himself thus for the manner in which Dr. P. had foiled him in the controversy, &c.

the original autograph MS. as re-written and published, with the cancelled verses, lines, &c. so marked out that they are still readable, in 2 vol. russia Keswick, Oct. 29th, 1804, small 8vo

* * The late Poet Laureate, in the Preface to vol. 10 of his Poetical Works, says, "Little had been done in revising this Poem till the first year of my abode at Keswick: there, in the latter end of 1803, it was resumed, and twelve months were diligently employed in reconstructing it. The alterations were more material than those which had been made in Joan of Arc, and much more extensive: in its original form the Poem consisted of fifteen books, containing six thousand lines; it was now divided into two parts, and enlarged in the proportion of a full third. Shorter divisions than the usual one of books or cantos were found more convenient; the six books, therefore, which the first part comprised, were distributed in seventeen sections, and the other nine in twenty-seven. These changes in the form of the work were neither capriciously made, nor for the sake of novelty. The story consisted of two parts, almost as distinct as the Iliad and Odyssey, and the subdivisions were, in a like manner, indicated by the subject. The alterations in the conduct of the piece occasioned its increase in length."

* * That the learned Antonio, notwithstanding his careful inquiries and his travels, could never see this book, which was strictly prohibited by the Inquisition, is not so strong a proof of its rarity as the testimony afforded by the learned Librarian of Brussels, la Serena Santander, in two passages of the catalogue of his books printed in 1803: at page 18 of vol. 1, speaking of the Bible by Cypriano de Valera, he says,—“Il avait publie en 1597 sa traduction Espagnole des institutions de J. Calvin ouvrage qu'ont peut compter comme LE PLUS RARE QUI EXISTE EN FAIT DE TRADUCTIONS CASTELLANES:” again, at page 244, he thus expresses himself,—“Peu des livres existent dans la republiques des lettres, d'une rareté égale à celui-ci.”

* * According to Nic. Antonio, there is an earlier edition of this poem, Toledo, 1599. He, however, had never seen the book, and erroneously supposed it to have been a prose romance; “profanum poema prosaicum.” The author, after he had written it, entered the Cistercian Order, and perhaps never completed the story. There is nothing in it which can be pointed out as excellent, yet when I came to the end, I wished for a second part. R. S., March 10, 1814.

* * * "This book, of which perhaps a duplicate is nowhere to be found, was given me by Mr. Murray: it contains the fullest account which has yet been published of the old Vice-royalty of Peru, province by province. The information was obtained from the respective Corregidores, and printed for many successive years in the Lima Almanack, from whence some curioso cut out the whole collection, and formed them into this most valuable volume: even the Catalogue of Viceroys contains some facts which I have not seen elsewhere.

"There are a few physical Essays at the end, printed in the same Almanack: some curious notices are to be found in them.
