MAN-MIDWIFERY

ANALYSED:

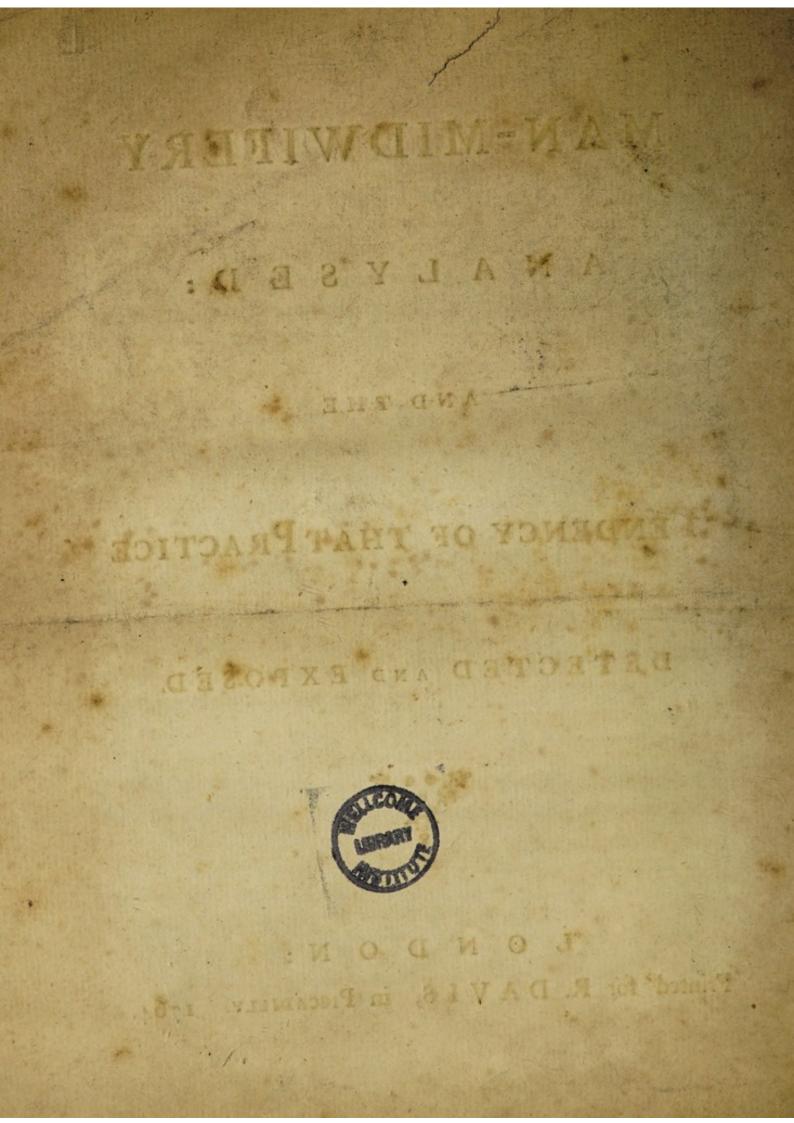

AND THE

TENDENCY OF THAT PRACTICE

DETECTED AND EXPOSED.

LONDON: Printed for R. DAVIS, in PICCADILLY. 1764.

A L E T T E R Addreffed to all Men in general, AND

To all Married Men in particular.

I Lately published, at the request of some prudent, fensible married women, a Letter, addressed to a young lady on her marriage, relative to the indecent and destructive practices of Men Midwives, and have the fatisfaction to hear the design of that letter is generally approved of by men of sense, and women of modesty.

The matter is of the utmost importance; and I flatter myself there are few women into whose hands the letter may fall, who will not feriously weigh the arguments therein advanced on a subject for interesting, and so effential to their happines.

POST DI VE

But

But finding myself under many restraints in point of decency, in an address to a young lady, and well knowing how neceffary it is, that all men, as well as women, fhould unite in discountenancing this indecent and unneceffary practice, I now address myself to all men in general, and to all married men in particular. It is not that I want to indulge my fancy in impure thoughts or expressions, though I must in this epistle make use of both; but let it be remembered, that my motive is thereby to put a ftop to impure acts, immodeft actions, and the indelicate, unchaste, and unneceffary transactions of Men Midwives, fuch as they avowedly and publicly profess, and fuch that every man of fense, decency, sentiment and spirit, must and will difapprove, or be totally indifferent as to his wife's conduct, or his own honour.

The following ftory is a matter of fact, which happened lately in the Weft of England. A gentleman of the faculty, i. e. a country furgeon, apothecary and man-midwife, being fent for in great hafte to deliver a woman, did, as foon as he arrived, in order I fuppofe to fhew his dexterity, by the means of a Hook, deliver her her inftantly from her pain, and the child from a life, it could fcarcely be faid to have enter'd into, and having fo done, took his fee and his leave; but before he had got two miles off, he was purfued and overtaken by the Hufband, who defired his immediate return, as the pains of his wife were come on again in a more violent manner than ever; but before the hufband and doctor got back, she was delivered of another child, by the help only of that excellent, and never failing female midwife, Goody Nature! This old lady, who had practifed the art of midwifery in every corner of the globe, for many thousand generations, with amazing fuccess, was, about fifty years ago, stifled in France between two feather-beds, by Meffrs. Doctors La Motte and Mauriceau; and no fooner was the good old lady interred, than thefe, and many other male impoftors in that fantaffical country, endeavoured to intrude themfelves on the public as her legitimate fons; nay, to be able by their art, and with the help of hooks, crotchets, fillets, forceps, and sciffars, to surpass the good old lady.

The vivacity, and the love of novelty, peculiar to that nation; the great liberties the two fexes are allowed to take take in that kingdom, promoted the defigns of these men, and prevented a detection of fuch impoftors, till they became fo numerous, and had eftablished fo much intereft, (owing I prefume to their fex) that the old lady, their pretended mother, has there long fince been forgot: That fuch a practice as this should begin in France, be encouraged by the ladies, and permitted by the men, does not much surprise me; because chastity, in that country, is rather an unfashionable part of high breeding and high life; but that Englishmen, tenacious of their own, and their wives honour, should tamely fubmit to a practice fo unneceffary, and fo big with mischief, amazes me beyond conception; and I can account for it only, because a few women of fashion, as they are called, have countenanced it, and their pufillanimous hufbands have been afraid to forbid it. The middling class of people must be in fashion, and ape the quality; decency be kicked down flairs, and modefly put out of countenance, becaufe my Lady Betty Modifh hates an old fumbling woman about her perfon.

The Critical, or Monthly Reviewers, I forget which, were pleafed to obferve, that the author of the Addrefs to a Young Lady on her Marriage, was (though a pretender tender to decency) the most indecent creature himself that ever took a pen in hand. Whether this refentment arose from the sting in the tail of the letter levell'd at these Book Midwives, or from their being chiefly composed of furgeons and men midwives, who murder books for want of infant practice, I must fubmit to the reader's judgment; but they ought to have owned that every indelicate expression in that epistle is extracted almost verbatim from their Friend Dr. Smellie's Treatife on Midwifery, a book written in English, the matter by Smellie, and the language faid to be that of Dr. Smollet.

That men midwives may think foolifhly, and act wantonly, is no more than I can eafily conceive; but that a man midwife fhould fit down and write, and publifh a ferious book, and give therein ferious directions relative to the practice of midwifery, fo contrary to reafon, fo void of judgment, and fo alarming to modefty, is aftonifhing beyond expression ! But to avoid the monthly critic's lafh, I will give a few extracts from one of these learned gentlemen's performances, that the decency of this writer, and the letter writer, may be compared by the judicious reader, as well as the reviewers. Dr. Smellie in his Treatife on Midwifery, page 92, speaking of the parts of generation in women, observes, That the Clitoris, with its Preputium, is found between the Labia on the middle and fore part of the Pubis; and from the lower part of the Clitoris, the Nymphæ rifing, Spread outwards, and downwards, to the Os Externum, forming a kind of sulcus, or furrow, called the Fossa Magna, or Navicularis, for the direction of the Penis in coition, or of the Finger in touching, into the Vagina! By this shrewd observation on the wisdom of Providence, the modest Doctor, in his first chapter, shews plainly that touching is an effential part of the practice of Midwifery; and that, in his opinion, those parts of a woman were formed by nature, not only for the direction of the Penis in coition, but for the direction of the Doctor's finger in touching: The manner of doing which, the Doctor explains thus, page 180.

Touching, fays the ingenious Doctor, is performed by introducing the forefinger, lubricated with pomatum, into the Vogina, in order to feel the Os Internum, and Neck of the Uterus; and fometimes into the Rectum! to discover the stretching of the Fundus: By some we are advised to touch with the middle finger, as being the longest; and by others to employ both that and the first; but the middle is too much encumbered by that on each side, to answer the purpose purpose fully; and when two are introduced together, the patient never fails to complain. The defign of touching is to be informed whether the woman is, or is not with child; to know how far she is advanced in her pregnancy; if she is in danger of a miscarriage, &c. &c. &c. Thus far the ingenious Doctor : But as women's paffions are very unlike those of men, and generally lie dormant till ftirr'd by the dalliance of a man, may I not be permitted to observe, that the defign of touching also, may be to see if any emotions arife in the touched lady's breaft, that the Doctor may take advantage of. A man once admitted to fuch a liberty, knows not himfelf, and the woman, who through fimplicity, (or what, she is told, is neceffity) confents to it, cannot answer for the confequences that may arife from fuch transactions. I will suppose myself, for instance, a man-midwife, sent for by a lady of youth and beauty; the lady has not been long married; fhe is unwell; doubtful whether fhe is with child, and defirous of being informed.

Upon my arrival, if her hufband happens to be prefent, he muft retire; for I know too well the pain that he muft feel on hearing even the first necessary question! Therefore nothing but an affected, ftiff air, a grave face peeping out of a profound wig, and my hand kept warm in difficulties for fe

in my muff, must transpire till husband is gone out of the room, and from that inftant the dreffing-room becomes facred to me and my patient. I then proceed to afk fuch Queftions, with an air of gravity and importance, that must confound a woman of modesty beyond imagination; she is embarrassed : I then get up, take her by the hand, and tell her how very unlike her conduct is to my lady Sufan Squeamish's, whom I have just left; that her ladyship thought she was with child, but that I could perceive no circle round her nepples, nor by the Touch had I any reason to believe the was breeding : This reconciles my new patient; fhe hears, and wonders at lady Sufan's conduct; but believing it no more than is common, and that the Doctor has a licence to take, and the to grant these liberties, the acquiesces. I then proceed to examine ber breasts, nepples, &c. by which I can foon be able to difcover what further liberties I may proceed to, under the fanction of my great wig, and my grave face; and if once admitted to the touch, all difficulties for feven or eight months after are removed ; my patient and I understand one another; fecrecy is the word; my character, and her honour, feal it.

If men-midwives under these circumstances stand unmoved, they are a part of the human species I am a stranger to! Suppose then, for it is no more than natural to suppose it, that I should offer some further liberty, after the Touch, (a more indelicate liberty I cannot offer) fuppole then, I fay, my patient should fly out, and afk me what I mean by fuch infolent and unwarrantable conduct? make towards the Bell in order to call her hufband or fervants : what must be done? why step in between her and the bell, drop on my knees, and implore her pardon; telling her that my profession does not emasculate me; that my own and family's bread depends on my character and in my profession; that I never was to operated upon on any former occafion; that what had happened was more my misfortune than my fault; and that I must have been more or lefs than man, to have been unmoved on fuch an occasion, with fuch a woman. Here is a full and certain pardon obtained; for a fenfible woman would be too wife to tell her hufband, and a foolifh woman too vain.

However high the above fcenery may be coloured, it is no more than nature exhibits every day, not only in D the the capital of this kingdom, but almost in every country town. Whichever way I go out of London, far or near, every town is ornamented with a red door, and a bright knocker, and over it you are informed in gold letters, that the house in the property of Dr. Blowbladder. furgeon, apothecasy, and man-midwife 1 nay, often two names, as partners in this mysterious busines, ornament the board.

I know not which to difpife moft, the profeffors of this bawdry profeffion, or the hufbands who tamely fubmit their wives to be fo wantonly and unneceffarily handled by them; and I am perfuaded I am now fpeaking the fentiments of every man in England in proportion to his knowledge of human nature.

son: that wate had bapped

The dangerous confequences of iron inftruments, almost constantly used by men midwives, and which often deftroy the life of the child or mother, or both, and the certainty of rendering the woman's perfon lefs agreeable, and often loathfome to her husband, ought to have great weight with women and their husbands also, provided the matter of delicacy, decency and modestry, was out of the question: and yet it is no uncommon thing to hear a male a male midwife practitioner call the greateft calamity and misfortune that can befall a woman, by the ludicrous epithet of Laying Pit and Boxes together.

Men were born, and women were delivered by the proper attendance of women only, for many generations, and without any bad confequences either to the mother or the child. Nature left to herfelf fcarce ever errs; if fhe does, it generally happens that fhe over-does, but never under-does her part. To wait the courfe of nature, receive her hints, and gently affift her efforts, is the part of a fkilfull midwife; he or fhe who does more, is ignorant of the little they have to do; and this bufinefs ought always to be done by the affiftance of women only, and a thoufand arguments might be produced to confirm it.

I am not unaware that it will be here faid, that difficult labours require not only the fkill, but ftrength of a man; and that it would be impoffible to deliver fome women without inftruments; it may be fo; but I will take upon me to fay, it only happens to fuch women who have been injured by hafty or forced labours with a former child, or by iron inftruments; it never happens to

to a woman with her first child; nor it never happens to the poor with any child; the reason is, that they are not injured by the former labours; and that the old lady mentioned above, is the faithful and unerring midwife of the latter. I fee continual accounts of the death of women in childbed that are women of fashion : I never hear in the country where I live, of the death of any of my unfashionable neighbours of this distemper, as Dr. Smellie calls it. When does a mare, a cow, a hare, a rabbit, or any part of the brute creation die, in bringing forth their young? Never: And has Providence been fo careful of the prefervation of brutes, and left the nobleft part of her production in danger ? Certainly no : Why then fhould women think it neceffary to expose their perfons, and their infirmities, and to be twifted and turned about in whatever posture or attitude the man midwife is pleafed to direct, either in bed or up, and to keep her hufband all this time in more pain of mind, than that which she suffers in body, for no other end but the vanity of having a doctor, as they call it; but what I call, an outrage to fense, dignity, love and virtue. who have been injured by hafty or forced labours with a fadTer child, or by fron infruments; it never Improve

That fome of these Touching Gentry have been profecuted and severely punished for their luftful attempts, in touching their patients, is a notorious truth; that hundreds of them get off, and that many succeed, cannot be doubted : nay, it can scarce be doubted but they all are liable to fall into the situation I just now supposed myself, and pointed the way to get out.

I could mention feveral profecutions of men midwives upon record ; but the following will be fufficient ; though a man who is robbed of his wife's fidelity, does not mifs it till it is too late to advertife the thief.

A merchant in this kingdom, who had a very young and beautiful wife, was attended by an eminent manmidwife, to cure him of a diforder he had got by going aftray, and amufing himfelf one evening in the environs of Covent-Garden, while his buxom wife imagined he was gone to his country houfe at Epfom: The merchant therefore defired the doctor to vifit his wife, whom he fufpected to be with child; and, to fave appearances, perfuade her, that, by a complaint he found (from touching I prefume) fhe laboured under, it was abfolutely neceffary to lie apart from her hufband. The doctor E undertook undertook the commission; when, inftead of faving the husband's credit, and faithfully keeping his fecret, he informed the wife with the whole truth of the matter; and made fuch inflammatory observations on the inconftancy of her husband, and the beauty of the wife, that, with the advantage of opportunity, her husband's falseness, and large doses of cantharides, which he adminiftered, he debauched the woman: But these flimulating medicines had such an effect that the died in confequence thereof; and, by way of attonement to her injured husband, declared the whole truth in her last hours.

a when, inford of fasting ind

Doctor Smellie, in the introduction to his treatife on midwifry, fays,---" It is natural to fuppofe, that, while " the fimplicity of the early ages remained, women would " have recourfe to none but perfons of their own fex in " difeafes peculiar to it! Accordingly, fays he, we find " that in Egypt midwifry was practifed by women."-----What a pity it was that the use of hooks and crotchets, pincers, boreing sciffars, tapes and filleting, was not known to the poor Egyptians! That Egyptians, who knew how to preferve dead bodies for three thousand years, and to keep their living form, should be so fhort of invention as never to have found out the method of scooping a child's brains out! and thereby have preferved the lives of the the poor Egyptian ladies is amazing ! I fuppofe all the Egyptian mummies brought over here, befides that in the Mufeum, to be the bodies of poor Egyptian ladies, who died in child-bed ! and that the bieroglyphics on their ficamore coffins, could they be decyphered, would appear to be the lamentations of their furviving hufbands, that no art could be difcovered whereby nature might be corrected, and made more perfect.

Little did the poor Egyptian ladies think that it would be three thousand years before doctor Smellie would be born, and the art of touching, and faving women's lives in this dangerous distemper, be brought to perfection.

But, to comfort my fair countrywomen, let it be remembered, that thefe were Jew ladies. Indeed the doctor obferves that a law was made at Athens, prohibiting women and flaves from practifing phyfic; but, fays he, " the miftaken modefty of the fex rendered it afterwards " abfolutely neceffary to allow free women the privi-" lege of fharing this art with the men." By this it appears how fimilar the practice in our own country at this day is, to the laws then in force at Athens. Free women were allowed there to practife midwifry; and Free women encourage the practice of it here.

Indeed we have many women amongft us, that would not fuffer a man midwife to attend them under any circumftances whatever: nay I could, without quitting this ifland, produce a King, a Queen, and eight or ten Princes of the Blood, who all came into the world (God be thanked) juft as the poor Egyptians did: but, I fuppofe it arofe from a miftaken modefty of the fex; or doctor Smellie, or fome of his brethren, had certainly been called in.

Much more might be faid to convince every man of fenfe, how very indecent, and how very indelicate, the necessary business of a man midwife must be carried on. But if he be wantonly difposed, he may turn your wife in. whatever attitude for fight, or touch, he pleafes; nay, he may fo place her, with her Breech towards him, on the fide of her bed, with a fheet thrown over him and her, as Smellie directs, fo as to gratify, unknown to the woman, any paffion he pleafes. I know it may be objected to, and faid, that a woman, under fuch circumstances, must be difgustful, and remove every fenfual appetite: But this I deny; it is faid a woman is like a riddle, nothing in it, when found out ! but a fine woman, unfound out, can appear in no fituation, except in the act of death, but fuch as may ftir the most unconquerable querable of paffions; and fuch as is, and will be excufed, by every man who knows human nature.

It is not practifing men midwives I am decrying; but the practice of men in midwifry: I own I never meet any of these charioted mungrel physicians, that I do not look on them as I fhould on the emperor of Morrocco, or the bashaw of Tangier, going to his feraglio. I really ferioufly confider, that, from the first peer in the kingdom, down to my butter-man's wife in Claremarket, (for she has ber Doctor) who open their doors for men midwives, open a way to difgrace their families; to injure the perfons, if not the morals of their wives; and invite every man, who ferioufly and prudently confiders this practice, to look on the hufband who confents to it, with contempt and indignation. As to myfelf, I ingenuoufly own, could my wife's mind be out of the question, I would sooner give her up to the embraces of any one man, once a year, than fubject her perfon to be fo exposed, touched, and handled, as she who is attended, and delivered of a child, must be, by a male midwife.

If the Reader is defirous of any further proofs of what I advance, let him read Doctor Smellie's book; and take the Doctor's word, inftead of mine.

G

There

There is very little difference, except the fex, between men and women; nor any thing that is neceffary relative to midwifry, but a woman can learn, and execute, with more propriety, and more fafety than men: Inftruments are always injurious, often dangerous, and never neceffary. The world was peopled much better, before the amphibious name of men midwives was known; they were imported here from France, at the fame time that tire-women were put down in England. The alteration of modes, within these thirty years, are very extraordinary : men midwives are become general; men hairdreffers, men flay-makers; in fhort, we want nothing now but the Italian Cheftisbea to be introduced here, in order to qualify our high bred fashionable ladies to be justly ranked with the ladies of Genoa: a country without wood, water without fifh, their men without honour, and women without virtue. And, if this should ever become the character of the fineft, and, till of late, the most efteemed women in the world, for their modesty, beauty, and fidelity; ftrange as it may appear, I will pronounce, their degeneracy began with the practice of men midwifry, and must end with their difuse; or have a worfe end.

It is my lot to know a great number of married women, who have always thought on this fubject as I write; it is my wife's lot to be acquainted with none other: I would as foon fend my wife a vifiting a Covent-Garden hoftefs, as be familiar with the female male midwife Trumpeters .---- Lard, Madam, who is your Doctor? fays one; well, I'll never have a woman; my Doctor is the fweetest man! fo gentle, fo bumane, fo patient ! and then he is fo fafe : with a thousand fuch fine things of the Doctor, that the Trumpeter foon makes half the circle in love with her dear Doctor, before they have even feen him, and determine to confult him the next morning. I ferioufly believe that most women really love their midwife, in fome degree equal to that which they feel towards their husbands; for, if the husband be an instrument to their pleasures, and comforts, the Doctor alfo is, in their opinion, the inftrument of their eafe, and their deliverer from extreme mifery. I never heard a woman speak of her midwife but with an uncommon degree of kindnefs; I have often heard a woman speak of an affectionate hufband, without betraying any.

That many innocent and chafte women have, and do employ men midwives, I make no doubt; and that many many men midwives may, and do acquit themfelves, as decently as their practice will admit of, I will not deny: But, that it is an immodeft, an unneceffary, and a fhameful practice to encourage, I will maintain; and that there lives not a man of fenfe and fentiment, who loves his wife, that ever returned to her bed with that degree of fatisfaction and affection, who has undergone a male midwife's Touch, as fhe whofe perfon is, or he fuppofes to be facred to him, and him alone. Whenever I fee a married woman nice in fentiments, and delicate in her expressions, and find the is attended by a male midwife; I confider her a pretender to both: I look on her with contempt; and I confider that, if the had the authority of cuftom to fupport it, the would permit me, or any other man to take the fame liberty.

Hard as this, and my former treatife, may feem to fall on the ladies, those who are warned by it, and apprized of the confequences, will find the Author their friend, and their deliverer; a friend of more importance to their happines, than the unthinking multitude are aware of; and a deliverer from worse evils than the pains of child-birth can produce.

Men

I defire every man who loves his wife, or regards his own honour, ferioufly to figure to himfelf a fmart manmidwife, locked into his wife's apartment, lubricating his finger with pomatum, in order to introduce it into his wife's Vagina 1 nay, if he pleafes, two fingers, or one finger in the Vagina, and the other into the Rectum, according to the ingenious Dr. Smellie's direction under the chapter Touching: 'Tis true, the doctor fays, the patient never fails to complain when two are introduced; but what need the doctor care for that? He knows fhe will not complain of it to her hufband; and her complaining to the humane, gentle doctor, furnifhes him with an opportunity to express his concern; to fhew a fresh inftance of his tendernes; and to profes his admiration of a woman fo exquisitely sufficients of the sufficients of the sufficients of the sufficients of the sum of the

And I defire every woman who loves her hufband, or who covets his love, ferioufly to confider whether fhe be ftrictly intitled to the appellation of being called a modeft woman, after fhe has admitted a male operator thus to infult her perfon and her underftanding, by taking a liberty that can give him no information whatever, but that fhe is a fool, or worfe, who fuffers it. Nay, I am thoroughly perfuaded, that every man midwife, who H happens to be possessed of either sense or sentiment, must, in his own breast, entertain but a very indifferent opinion of the understanding of his patients spouses.

That many women refufe their operator this liberty of Touching, I firmly believe; but the very attempt of the man, and the neceflary confequence of the refufal of the woman, is almost as bad; and either one or the other is fure to happen, where the fubject is, in the DoEtor's opinion, worthy of his inspection.

But fetting afide every confideration as to modefly, delicacy, fenfe, fentiment, and, above all, how this kind of proceeding may fit on the mind of an affectionate hufband, I will maintain it, that every woman runs a greater rifque of lofing her life with a fkilful manmidwife, than with even an ignorant fumbling old woman.

The man-midwife is for difpatch, and that difpatch cannot be obtained without a double force on nature; for it must be obtained with instruments, and, consequently, must bring into the world a child that ought not to have made its appearance for fome hours: I fufpect it will be faid, what fignifies an hour or two? But by by the fame reafon it may be afked, what fignifies a month, or a week? and yet either of these mistakes often prove fatal to the mother or child, or both. But fuppofe there were no other confideration but the prefervation of the woman's perfon; a circumftance of no fmall importance with the fair fex; yet that is inevitably fpoiled, fo fure as a man-midwife, and confequently an inftrument, comes near them; for they as certainly ufe them, as they prudently and cautioufly conceal them, according to Doctor Smellie's particular advice.

When the parts have been once extended for the convenience of the Doctor's hand and forceps, they never recover their former elafticity; and if the woman elcapes inward injuries that often terminate in ulcers many years after, the cannot elcape without rendering her perfon lefs agreeable, if not totally difagreeable to her hufband: For thefe people not only do injury at the time of delivery, but frequently three or four days after introduce their hand and arm to perform the office known amongft themfelves by the epithet of fweeping the womb! than which nothing can be a ftronger proof of the injury done the woman's perfon at her labour: for this act of wombfweeping cannot poffibly be performed on the perfon of a woman a woman who is delivered as fhe ought, by that unerring Old Lady mentioned with fo much honour in the first fheet of this letter; and to this old lady I hope to be the means of making known all the young and amiable part of my fair countrywomen, who may be affured that it is less indecent to read this letter to every man of their acquaintance in public, than to admit a male midwife in private; and those who are wise enough to rely on what is here wrote, without any other view than their happines, will find, by experience, that the author is as much their friend, as he seems to be an enemy to the male midwives; which, in truth, is not the case; for, as I faid above, it is the practice, not the men, that I mean to exhibit in a proper, and confequently an odious light.

I cannot conclude, without drawing forth the fting from the tale of my former letter, Addreffed to a young Lady on her Marriage, and levell'd at the Monthly and Critical Reviews; for tho' the Critical Review had the prudence to fpeak of that letter in the moft contemptuous way, the Monthly Review has had the candour to mention it in a manner that did honour to both; and has made his remarks with that cool and difpaffionate judgment, that is incumbent on Reviewers. It is not whether they themfelves approve or difapprove the fubject; but to inform their readers fairly and impartially with the fubject and fubftance of the performance; yet thefe critical critical monthly Book Midwives (for they murder books for want of infant-practice) cannot confine their pens within the bounds of decency, becaufe a letter is published decrying a profession they were bred to, but by which they cannot earn their bread; and therefore were obliged to lay afide the forceps for the pen, and endeavour to scoop out the brains of grown gentlemen and ladies who figure in print, inftead of reducing children's heads in their mother's womb. However, to convince you, Meffrs. Critical Reviewers, that I am not very angry with you, one word of friendly advice : If you are really wife, and wifh well to your brethren of the faculty, forget this indecent letter in your monthly catalogue; for in fpite of all you can fay as to the indecency of the writer, or the incorrect manner in which he writes, it will have its weight among men of fenfe, and women of virtue : And I flatter myfelf that it will open the eyes of a multitude of men, and women too, who never confidered this matter as they ought; and determine them to be fatisfied that Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Maddox, and many other women, can do all that is necessary to be done, with decency and fafety; and as the two first Perfonages in the kingdom have (when a crown was at stake) been content with the affistance only of Goody Nature, Goody Kennon, and Goody Draper, I hope to fee fee the Day, when butter or fifh women only, will venture to fend for any of the male goodys: to fuch people as thefe, a taudry chariot, and a ftill more taudry doctor, with a black velvet coat, lined with pink filk, ftopping at their doors, muft be a matter of no fmall confequence: But that people of fashion should be amused and cajoled by such external trapping, is very amazing: but it is what, I am perfuaded, I shall see for the future confined to that class of people only, who are void of fense and decency.

P. S. I do folemnly affure the Critical Reviewers; that meither my Mother nor Grandmother are Midwives; that Cheftifhea is fpelt according to auricular orthography, as I have no Italian diffionary near me; and that any information they may be pleafed to give me of my grammatical Errors (of which I am confcious there are many) will be kindly taken; but I enter a caveat againft a charge of indecency, without allowing me as much, at leaft, as their friend Dr. Smellie.
