PREFACE

THIS edition of the earliest surviving Wimbledon Vestry Minutes is published with the approval of the Vicar and Parochial Church Council of Wimbledon, and I am grateful to them for allowing its publication. The minutes are among the parish records deposited by them in the Surrey Record Office at County Hall, Kingston-upon-Thames.

The greater part of the text was prepared by Mr F. M. Cowe, B.A., while he was senior assistant archivist in Surrey, but the work was not part of his official duties. It is with much pleasure that I thank him for undertaking the task and for completing it at a distance.

A special grant towards printing this volume was made by the Surrey County Council to mark the jubilee of the Society. For their grants, as well as that from the Wimbledon Borough Council, I would add to the appreciation of the Council of the Record Society my own thanks as honorary editor and as county archivist. Thanks are also due to the County Council for the photographs of the text used in making the blocks for the illustrations.

INTRODUCTION

WIMBLEDON PARISH RECORDS

THE accumulation of Wimbledon parish records deposited in the Surrey Record Office at County Hall, Kingston-upon-Thames, by the vicar and parochial church council in 1954 is impressive in quantity, but from the point of view of age it is by no means outstanding.¹ The main series of vestry minutes commences in 1743, overseers' accounts date from 1750, and full churchwardens' accounts survive only from 1792. Apart from the registers there are very few records of earlier date than 1700. The principal reason for the absence of older records is that the accumulation was kept in damp conditions during most of the eighteenth century and many of the documents perished as a result. Evidence for this statement is to be found in the condition of the existing records at the time of their deposit,² and in an entry in the court rolls of the manor of Wimbledon.

At a court baron held on 2 May 1726 the bailiff of the manor gave the homage to understand that the rolls, writings and other muniments of the court, which for many years past had been placed in the vestry (in sacratio) of the parish church of Wimbledon in a chest there for safe custody, were about to perish because of the dampness of the place, and the homage therefore sought from the lady of the manor that these muniments might be removed from the vestry and delivered to the steward of the manor for repair and conservation.³ Two years later, on 6 May 1728, the homage requested that the manorial records might be placed in the vestry of Putney parish church.⁴ It is hardly to be doubted that the records in Wimbledon parish chest shared the same unsuitable repository and that they remained in it after the removal of the documents belonging to the manor.

The registers, according to general practice, received better care as their condition testifies. They were the first of the parish records to receive attention, however brief, from local historians, and in 1924 they were transcribed by A. W. Hughes Clarke (to the year 1812) and published by this Society in conjunction with the John Evelyn Club of Wimbledon, now the John Evelyn Society.⁵

² The first surviving poor rate book, for example, which is from 1780, showed the effects of damp in its decayed cover and outer pages (see Appendix III*f*). For a short description of the condition of the first vestry minute book before repair, see p. x.

³ Court Rolls, pp. 294-7.

⁴ Ibid., p. 297.

⁵ Frequent reference was made by local historians to the entry in the parish registers recording the birth of Georgi-Anna, daughter of the earl and countess of Exeter, on 13 July 1616, and her baptism by the bishop of London in the presence of Anne of Denmark on 30 July following (e.g. Rev. Daniel Lysons, The Environs of London . . . , vol. I (1792), p. 537; E. W. Brayley and others, A Topographical History of Surrey, vol. III (1850), p. 503n.; Bartlett, pp. 113-14). The reference was taken up by other historians and by writers on Christian names, this being apparently the first occurrence of the name Georgiana, which is otherwise unknown until the eighteenth century (e.g. Agnes Strickland, Lives of the Queens of England . . . , vol. V (1851), p. 168n.; C. M. Yonge, History of Christian Names (1884), p. 115; C. W. Bardsley, Curiosities of Puritan Nomenclature (1897), p. 224). The text, however, reads Sophi-Anna. The error was unfortunately perpetuated in the printed text of the registers (W.P.R., p. 12). The record of the child's burial in Westminster Abbey on

Bartlett, the historian of Wimbledon, made wider though by no means extensive use of the parish records as a whole, drawing some information from the vestry minute books and printing slightly inaccurate lists of churchwardens and overseers. It is clear that the main series of parish records were, at the time his book was published (1865), very much the same in extent as they are now.¹

The Wimbledon records were listed by Miss D. L. Powell for her pioneer survey of the parish records of the county, which was prepared on behalf of the Surrey County Council and issued by this Society and the County Council in 1927-8.² She noted then that many of the bundles of vouchers and poor law papers had recently been sorted by members of the John Evelyn Club. Since their deposit in the Surrey Record Office the documents have been listed and, where necessary, repaired.

WIMBLEDON VESTRY MINUTES

This volume is a calendar of the first surviving Wimbledon vestry minute book, 1743 to 1788,³ with additional material from an imperfect series of original or draft minutes.

The first vestry minute book is a paper volume bound in boards with stiff vellum covers. The pages, which are of a heavy laid paper bearing the watermark IV and a fleur de lis, measure 14 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ inches. The first and last gatherings consist of four leaves each, two of which were, in each case, originally stuck down on the boards as endpapers. There are fifteen intermediate gatherings of twelve leaves. Pagination commences with the recto of the fourth leaf of the first gathering. This formerly ran 1 to 93 and 84 to 352, followed by four unnumbered pages. The scribal error has been corrected and the pages are now numbered in pencil consecutively 1 to 366. Before its repair was undertaken in 1958 the volume showed the effects of long exposure to damp. The endpapers were unstuck and badly damaged. That at the end of the volume survived only in fragments and the last gathering was much decayed in its inner margin. The vellum spine was missing.

The original minutes are a series of unbound papers, containing mainly the signed records of vestry meetings with a few memoranda of vestry business.⁴ Though the text of the minute book can often be supplemented or corrected by reference to these minutes (see, e.g., no. 267), it is itself much more complete, as many of the original minutes are missing. One reason for this is that the signed minute, where it concerned a rate or the nomination of officers, was often given to the constable or an overseer to be carried to the justices of the peace for their approval or further action (cf. nos. 328 and 337).

The task of writing up the minutes, as well as the accounts and rate books, was that of the vestry clerk. There were two vestry clerks in the period with which we are concerned : ¹ William Jennings, from 1743 to 1774, whose repetitive, uneconomical and ungrammatical style of writing has been largely responsible for the adoption of calendar form for this edition (see, e.g., no. 81) ; and Joseph Andrews, a schoolmaster, from 1774 until his death in August 1788. Jennings's hand (illustrated in plates 1 and 2) appears on pages 1-193, 204, 207, 210-16, 364 and on the final endpaper of the minute book. An unidentified, unskilled, almost childish hand occurs on pages 194-203, 205-6 and 208-9, with a few words added by the vestry clerk here and there. The original minutes for these pages were written by Jennings himself, with the exception of part of that of 22 Sept. 1770 where the names of the surveyors were inserted in the unskilled hand.² Andrews was responsible for pages 217-362, and he shared pages 365-6 with Jennings. Examples of his handwriting are in plates 3 and 4.

15 Sept. 1621 gives her name as Sophia-Anna (The Marriage, Baptismal and Burial Registers of the Collegiate Church or Abbey of St Peter, Westminster (Harleian Society Publications, vol. X (1876)), p. 118).

The vestry clerk came to each meeting with the paper on which he was to take down the draft minute. At some time before the meeting he wrote in the date and heading, and often a preliminary note concerning the business if it was known in advance. For nominations or appointments of officers, for example, he left himself with nothing to do but to add the names of the persons proposed, or for rates the amounts to be assessed (see also no. 390 and note). At the end of the meeting some or all of the parishioners present signed the minute and the clerk entered it in the minute book at his leisure. From time to time he omitted to do this,³ or placed it out of order, in which case chronological order is restored in this edition. Occasionally the signed minute is in the minute book (e.g. no. 179).

Jennings usually copied into the minute book the names of those who had signed the original minute. Andrews sometimes wrote in two lists of names : one of attenders at the beginning of the minute immediately after the heading, and the other of signatories at the end. Sometimes he omitted one of the lists, generally the second. There were a few occasions when no names were written in at all.⁴

THE VESTRY AND ITS OFFICERS

The vestry or parish meeting, transformed from an entirely ecclesiastical body in the middle ages into a unit of civil administration by Tudor and subsequent legislation, was, by the eighteenth century, the most important local government authority in England outside the City of London and the boroughs. It had wide-ranging powers affecting nearly all aspects of life, some conferred by canon of the Church, some by statute and some by custom.⁵

¹ The name of the clerk responsible for the earliest surviving minute (no. 1) is not known.

² S.R.O. P5/3/67.

³ The record of the Easter Tuesday meeting of 1772 (21 April) is, for example, not now to be found in minute book or original minute.

⁴ For the treatment of lists of attenders and signatories in this edition, see p. xxi.

In Wimbledon, a village throughout the century with a population in 1801 of only 1,591, the vestry carried out its duties with the confidence gained from a long tradition of public service. To the end of the period covered by this volume there is no sign of its powers decaying, and there is no indication that it was in any danger of being overwhelmed by its many duties.

It was an open vestry very similar in many ways to that at neighbouring Mitcham as described by the Webbs.¹ Everyone who paid 'scot and lot' to the parish could attend and participate in the business (no. 206). In practice this meant all men who paid the parish rates.² The poor rate assessment and collection book of 1780, which is printed in Appendix IIIf, shows that there were then about 105 ratepayers, excluding women, who would be entitled to vote at vestry meetings. The number subscribing to a church rate would be slightly larger. The actual average number of persons attending vestries was ten, the highest number being thirty-five (no. 334) and the lowest none (no. 348).

There were certain annual meetings of vestry which were obligatory, such as those for the appointment of churchwardens, and for the nomination of overseers of the poor and surveyors of the highways, and the vestrymen had also evolved their by no means rigid calendar for such recurring items as the granting of rates or the fixing of paupers' pensions. Other business could arise at any time, and meetings could be called at a week's notice, or after notice given at church on the Sunday preceding the day of the intended meeting. An active vestry would therefore meet several times each year. In Wimbledon the average was about ten times a year, but this is a somewhat exaggerated figure owing to the excessive number of adjournments, with little or no work done, in certain years, particularly 1777. The number also takes no account of committee meetings, but in Wimbledon these were much the same as ordinary meetings of vestry with the addition of some of the gentry and, occasionally, their ladies.

According to the minutes in the earlier part of the volume vestries were always held in the parish church.³ The list of meeting places up to 1751 (no. 455), which was written in at the end of the book, however, contains the names of keepers of public houses in the parish. It seems, therefore, that in Wimbledon, as elsewhere, many of the vestries were actually held (possibly by adjournment from the church) in the comfort of a tavern parlour. Explicit statements that this was the case are found in some of the headings to the minutes in the later part of the volume. Other meeting places for the vestry and its committees were the workhouse and the schoolhouse.

Wimbledon, like many other parishes near London, was, when the first volume of Defoe's description of Britain was published in 1724, already much in favour as place of residence for gentlemen of means.⁴ The gentry and other prosperous inhabitants provided valuable help and support in vestry and committee, particularly when new, exciting and costly schemes were being carried out. Some of them acted as parish officers, especially as surveyors, and some of them were justices of the peace. The main burden of parochial government, however, fell on the men of the middle class, shopkeepers, tradesmen, farmers, innkeepers and the like. Proof of this statement is to be found in Appendix Ia where details of attendance at vestry are given. Most notable perhaps are the records of individual members of the Jennings, Terry and Watney families, both for consistency of attendance and acceptance of office on many occasions.

A guide to the status of individual vestrymen within the parish is provided by the lists of Wimbledon freeholders for 1762 and 1788, which include the names of most of the wealthier inhabitants.¹ It is interesting to note that only one of the persons named in each list never attended a vestry meeting. They were Sir Abraham Janssen² and M. de Calonne who was an exile from France.³ Most of the freeholders listed also served as parish officers when chosen.

The officers of vestry were the churchwardens, the overseers of the poor, the surveyors of the highways, the petty constable and the headboroughs, all of whom were unpaid and only temporarily in office. The paid permanent officials were the vestry clerk, the uniformed beadle (employed mainly as a messenger), and the workhouse master or mistress. The parish clerk, who is occasionally referred to in the minutes, was an official of the church.

Churchwardens

The churchwarden was originally an ecclesiastical officer with responsibility for the fabric of the church and church property generally,⁴ but the office had gradually, particularly in Tudor times, attracted to itself many secular duties, some of which will be noted presently. In Wimbledon two churchwardens were chosen annually on the Tuesday of Easter week by the inhabitants in vestry. Choice was by nomination and, where necessary, show of hands (no. 320n.). The usual practice in the parish was to continue one churchwarden from the previous year as senior churchwarden, and to elect another to assist him who would in his turn become senior churchwarden in the following year.⁵ The senior churchwarden seems to have done most of the work and accepted most of the responsibility, but it is not clear how the duties were actually divided owing to the absence of detailed churchwardens' accounts before 1792.

Churchwardens were by statute ex officio overseers of the poor (43 Eliz. c. 2), and they joined with the overseers in signing such documents as poor rates and accounts. Responsibility for the payment of relief to paupers was divided between the two sets of officers. The overseers provided for the needs of poor persons settled in the parish and in receipt of long-term relief, while casual or occasional paupers were relieved by the churchwardens. Casual poor bills were passed in vestry and the churchwardens were reimbursed for their expenditure on this account by the overseers out of the money derived from the poor rate.

⁵ There were several departures from the custom. In 1761, 1780 and 1787 men were appointed to the office for their third successive year. In 1788 two entirely new churchwardens were appointed.

Bartlett's list of churchwardens is inaccurate in some particulars,¹ but the names of successive holders of the office can easily be obtained by reference to the appointments made annually at Easter vestry.²

Overseers of the Poor and the Workhouse

At the meeting at which the churchwardens were appointed the vestry also nominated from four to seven men from whom the justices for the western division of Brixton Hundred could appoint the overseers of the poor. Usually two were appointed.³ It is not easy to determine who were named in each case and, as Bartlett is occasionally misleading,⁴ a list of overseers is provided in Appendix Ib. It is based on the entries in the minute book, including the lists of vestrymen (Appendix Ia), and, from 1750, on the first overseers' account book.

Overseers' accounts for 1750-1 are transcribed and printed in Appendix IIIb, and a poor rate assessment for 1780 and accounts for 1780-1 are printed in Appendices IIIf and IIIg. There are two important differences between the two sets of accounts. In 1750-1 one overseer expended most of the money for the whole year, whereas in 1780-1 two overseers shared the responsibility equally, each accounting for the expenditure from one rate. This was the first year in which the duties of the overseers were separated in this way. The second difference concerns the way the money was spent. The earlier accounts show much expenditure on out-relief, mainly in the form of weekly pensions and clothing. In August 1752 the parish workhouse was opened and from then onwards the need for out-relief was greatly reduced. The accounts for 1780-1, therefore, give details of money paid out for the workhouse as a whole instead of for individual paupers.

The Workhouse Test Act, which permitted parishes to buy or erect buildings in which the poor could be maintained and set to work, was passed in 1723 (9 Geo. I c. 7), and Wimbledon was therefore comparatively late in providing one. Before 1752 some paupers had been lodged in parish almshouses (nos. 66 and 88), and even after the workhouse was built poor families were placed in small cottages belonging to the parish, which were usually situated at one of the gates leading to the Common or to the open fields (no. 274). Most of the poor had, however, to go into the 'house'.⁵

² But the record of the meeting of 21 April 1772, when William Gonston and William Watney were chosen, was omitted from the minute book. It should also be noted that although the Hon. Thomas Walker was continued in office after serving for one year in 1748, his place was filled by Charles Pigott.

³ On the care of the poor and the duties of the overseers see, in addition to the authorities already mentioned, S. and B. Webb, English Poor Law History: Part I. The Old Poor Law (1927), reissued in 1963 as 'English Local Government', vol. VII, with a new introduction by W. A. Robson; and Dorothy Marshall, The English Poor in the Eighteenth Century (1926).

⁵ An account of Mrs Hayball, matron of the workhouse, 1774-80, is printed in Appendix IIIe.

Spasmodic attempts were made to set the inmates to work (nos. 104 and 175), and in 1786 a factory building was added to the workhouse (no. 419). An overseers' account for the Wimbledon Manufactory, July 1787-Dec. 1788, unfortunately falls partly outside the period covered by this volume.¹ From the beginning of the account to May 1788 the sum of £197 5s. 11d. was spent on raw materials, mainly wool, leather, skins, oil, hair and mop sticks. By December 1788, by the sale of these materials fully or partly made up, £183 6s. 11½d. had been recovered. The profit (no. 453) anticipated by Thomas Wilkins, master of the workhouse, did not materialize, and in 1789 he was dismissed because of a deficiency of over £70.²

Surveyors of the Highways

The surveyors of the highways³ were appointed annually by the justices, in much the same way as the overseers, from a list of names of holders of land and sufficient inhabitants furnished by the vestry. The parish meeting for the purpose of compiling this list was at first held on 26 or 27 December each year (3 & 4 Wm. & Mary c. 12), but this date was altered by the Highways Act of 1766 (7 Geo. III c. 42) to 22 or 23 September, a change which is reflected in the text from 1767 onwards. In 1750 the vestry produced a list which was unacceptable to the justices and an awkward situation arose. It was resolved by the continuance of the surveyors already in office from the previous year, and by the provision of assistants for them. Up to 1766 the number of names submitted to the justices varied between five and nine, but after the Highways Act noted above the list consisted invariably of ten names, five 'Esquires' and five others, and the justices chose at least one man from each section.

The roads in Wimbledon were largely repaired by statute labour, reinforced by the work of paid helpers when necessary. The workhouse was a convenient source of additional labour (no. 235). Money came from compositions paid by those parishioners who did not wish to do their statute duty in person or by substitute, and from infrequent highway rates.

Constable and Headboroughs

In Wimbledon the petty constable seems to have been regarded as an officer of the community as a whole, neither parish nor manor being able to claim him entirely as its own. The constable was originally a servant of the manor, and some appointments to the office were apparently still made at courts leet in Wimbledon in the eighteenth century.⁴ Lists of names were submitted by the vestry to the justices in quarter sessions for their choice of a constable on four occasions only according to the minute book,⁵ but, during most of the century, the constable in Surrey parishes was normally chosen each year at quarter sessions in this way, and Wimbledon seems to have been no exception.⁶ The reasons for the omission of the record of nominations for the position of constable from the vestry minutes are not apparent.

³ For the surveyors and the maintenance of the roads see S. and B. Webb, The Story of the King's Highway (1913), reissued in 1963 as 'English Local Government', vol. V, with a new introduction by G. J. Ponsonby.

⁴ Court Rolls, p. 304.

⁵ In three of these cases the appointments made were interim measures to fill vacancies caused by the death of the person already in office or by his departure from the parish.

⁶ Many of the lists submitted are retained in the Surrey Q.S. Bundles.

The constable was assisted in his task of keeping law and order by two head-boroughs,¹ but mention is made of no more than one of these officers at a time in the vestry minutes.

THE CHURCH

Wimbledon was a peculiar of the see of Canterbury in the archbishop's deanery of Croydon. The dean or commissary of the deaneries of the Arches, London, Shoreham and Croydon, usually acting through his surrogate, had powers in the parish similar to those exercised by archdeacons in other parishes. They included the right to conduct visitations. The deaneries and their constituent peculiars were administered from Doctors' Commons, the college of the doctors of civil law in London, where the Court of Arches and other ecclesiastical courts were held. This explains the applications made to 'the Commons' for faculties for alterations to the fabric of the church and for the confirmation of a new scale of burial fees (nos. 168, 228, 264).

The part the perpetual curates² or ministers of Wimbledon played in the conduct of parish affairs is difficult to assess. Their attendance at vestry meetings was not obligatory and Rev. John Cooksey (1738-77) was absent from them for many long periods, sometimes three or four years at a time. His successor, Rev. Herbert Randolph (1777-1819), was, on the other hand, a fairly consistent attender. It is probable that the ministers took the chair at some meetings as they did in other parishes.³

Matters in which the ministers took an active part were naturally mainly ecclesiastical—burial fees, registration, and the church rebuilding fund, for example. On one occasion Cooksey nominated a churchwarden (no. 300), but the record of his attendance at Easter vestries (ten out of a possible thirty-two) shows that this interest was exceptional. There was no equivalent of a vicar's warden at Wimbledon during this period of the church's history.

The most usual item of church business considered at vestry meetings, apart from the appointment of churchwardens, was for many years the allocation of pews. In 1785, however, a committee was formed to supervise the repairs of the church (no. 403), and from then onwards both vestry and committee were constantly occupied with this problem which became the most important single piece of business noted in the minutes during the next three years. The alterations undertaken were so extensive that they amounted to an almost complete rebuilding of the church. At the last meeting recorded in this minute book the vestry decided that the church should be re-opened on 6 July 1788 (no. 454), but it was not until 25 Jan. 1790 that John Johnson, surveyor or architect, was able to report that the work was completed.⁴ St Mary's as it now stood was not satisfactory and it was rebuilt in 1843.

² The living was a perpetual curacy until it was styled a vicarage in 1868 (The Victoria History of the County of Surrey, vol. IV (1912), p. 125).

³ But Corbyn Morris twice occupied the chair when Cooksey was present (Appendix Ia, nos. 280 and 293), and once when Randolph was there (Appendix Ia, no. 332). Sir Richard Hotham also presided over a meeting in which Randolph took part (Appendix Ia, no. 340).

CHARITIES

Three of the parish charities were either administered by the vestry or were used to finance its activities in some way.

Lady Dorothy Cecil, an unmarried daughter of Edward Cecil, viscount Wimbledon, who died in 1638 and was buried in the parish church, established the charity which bore her name by a deed dated 2 March 1650/1. This laid down the terms on which the trustees were to disburse an income of £25 a year. Eight pounds were set aside for the repair and maintenance of her father's tomb, and any surplus arising from this was to be used for buying materials on which to set the poor of the parish to work. A further £12 were allocated for the apprenticing of poor children, and the remaining £5 were to be spent on teaching poor children to read and write.

Failure to appoint successors to the original trustees in a regular and proper manner led to the mismanagement of the charity. By Chancery decree of 11 Feb. 1744/5 the appointment of new trustees was ordered.¹ These men and their successors frequently co-operated with the vestry by providing money from the funds of the charity for apprenticing pauper children, and they also donated £5 annually to the Subscription School.

Henry Smith, alderman of the City of London, died in 1627. The provisions of his charity were set out in a number of deeds, the first of which were dated 20 Oct. 1620. His estates, which produced an income of £2,246 6s. 9d. in 1768, benefited nearly every Surrey parish as well as many outside the county. In Wimbledon the charity was distributed in the form of greatcoats.²

The third charity, which is never mentioned by name in the vestry minute book, was founded by Thomas Hilliard, who, in 1651, left 10s. charged on a house in the parish to be distributed equally among four poor widows each year.³

WIMBLEDON SCHOOLS

There were two charity schools with fifty scholars between them in Wimbledon in 1724,⁴ but there is no evidence that they were in any way connected with the schools mentioned in the vestry minute book. A school of some sort was in existence in 1749 (no. 51), and this was probably the one run by Thomas Huntingford which was mentioned in 1754 (nos. 114-16). The first recorded move towards the provision of a school by the parish was made in 1755. It was decided to commence a subscription to encourage some good schoolmaster to teach the children (no. 123). In 1757 a committee was formed to prepare a plan and estimate for erecting a schoolhouse (no. 142), and on 9 Oct. 1758 the consent of the homage of the manor of Wimbledon to the inclosure of land on the Common for the use of a charity school was enrolled.⁵ It was apparently in this school that Robert Johnson taught from 1761-8. His pupils included workhouse children for whom he assumed he should be paid, but the vestry considered that a contribution of £5 a year made by the trustees of Lady Dorothy Cecil's Charity covered their liability in the matter.¹ Some of the documents in the dispute between schoolmaster and vestry are printed in Appendix IIIc.

The school may have then fallen into abeyance for a few years. The first entry in the minute book of the Charity School is dated 13 June 1773. It records that Earl Spencer had granted a new lease of the schoolhouse to certain gentlemen as trustees for the parish.² The subscription was begun anew and it therefore seems likely that the earlier subscription had provided a school building but had been insufficient to meet the cost of running it. However, the school, as recommenced in 1773, flourished, and its direct descendant is the Church of England Primary School on Wimbledon Common.³

It should be noted that the school was a parish enterprise run by the subscribers to the school fund and not by the vestry.

THE VESTRY AND OTHER LOCAL GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES

Justices of the Peace

Much of the vestry's work depended on the sanction and co-operation of the Surrey justices of the peace. Relations with the justices took place on three levels: locally with individual justices; at petty sessions; and at county level in quarter sessions.

Justices acting alone could examine persons suspected of being guilty of misdemeanours at the request of the vestry or its officers, and punish or commit them if necessary. Single justices also had non-judicial powers, but these were generally exercised by two or more of them acting together at the West Brixton 'bench'. Orders for increasing the amount of relief paid to paupers, for example, came from petty sessions rather than from individual justices. Two justices, also usually at petty sessions, examined paupers and others likely to become a burden on the parish rates, and signed removal orders if they were found not to have a legal settlement in Wimbledon. They signed settlement certificates and apprenticeship indentures. They appointed overseers and surveyors from lists of names submitted by vestry. They approved the accounts of these officers after they had been passed in vestry, and allowed the assessments for their respective rates, which had been drawn up by the parishioners. It is not clear how far these confirming actions by the justices were mere matters of form, but, as we have seen, they did refuse to accept the names put forward by the vestry for surveyors in 1750.⁴

To the justices in quarter sessions lay appeals against removal orders. Where such orders were issued in another county appeals against them were heard in the court of quarter sessions for that county.⁵

⁵ For the work and records of the court of quarter sessions in Surrey, see Surrey County Council, Quarter Sessions Records with other Records of the Justices of the Peace for the County of Surrey (1931). The volume was also issued by this Society (S.R.S. Publications, no. XXXII). Surrey sessions records, 1659 to 1666, are printed in S.R.S. Publications, vols. XIII, XIV and XVI (1934, 1935 and 1938). These three volumes were published in conjunction with the Surrey County Council which issued a further volume, 1666 to 1668 (1951).

Wimbledon Manor

The courts of the manor of Wimbledon, a more ancient unit of secular local government than the parish, were active throughout the eighteenth century. The parish was much smaller in extent than the manor, which contained the greater part of the parishes of Mortlake and Barnes, and Putney with Roehampton, besides Wimbledon. The manor could scarcely be considered a rival to the parish, for the main business at the manorial courts was the transfer of land, the inclosure of waste, the regulation of commons and the appointment of officials. The only case of actual conflict between the vestry and the manor, which we have noted, occurred in 1792, outside the period covered by this volume, when the surveyors were accused of obstructing the common keepers.¹ The vestry was also usurping one of the original duties of the court leet when it ordered the building of new stocks (no. 63).

Commissioners of Sewers

The Surrey and Kent Board of Commissioners of Sewers, which was created in 1531, had certain powers in Wimbledon, though these were apparently rarely exercised. No reference to its work occurs in the vestry minutes, but there is amongst the parish records an order made at a General Court of Sewers at Southwark Town Hall to George Bond and William Wilberforce, surveyors of the highways in Wimbledon, requiring them to cleanse the Great Common Sewer from Coombe Bridge to Richmond New Park before 21 December 1769, or forfeit for every rod undone 3s. 4d.²

CONCLUSION

In the foregoing remarks an attempt has been made to sketch the history of the Wimbledon parish records, to describe the documents on which the text of this edition is based, and to indicate briefly how the vestry functioned in this particular parish. There remains only one final pleasant duty, that of acknowledging the editor's indebtedness for much generous help and encouragement accorded during the preparation of this book. Mrs F. M. G. Higham and Mr W. Myson read the typescript of the volume and made several excellent suggestions for its improvement. Mr F. J. Dallett, Miss R. Manning, Miss E. D. Mercer, Mr K. G. White and Miss A. Whittington gave advice and information on important points. Valuable assistance was also given on many occasions by members of the staff of the Surrey Record Office past and present. In particular, Mrs M. G. Dixon, formerly senior repairs assistant, provided the data on which the description of the vestry minute book is based.

Finally, gratitude must be expressed to Miss M. Gollancz, Surrey county archivist and honorary editor of the Surrey Record Society, who first conceived the idea for a volume of this nature and who has taken an active interest in every stage of its preparation. It has benefited much from her many suggestions.

EDITORIAL METHOD

THE text of the vestry minute book is in calendar or summary form, but a few entries are transcribed in full. These are placed within single inverted commas. Additions to the text from the original minutes are printed in italic type, and the reference to the document is in each case given in a footnote.

For convenience of reference vestry and committee meetings are numbered consecutively in this edition. There are no such numbers in the minute book. Headings to the minutes are shortened. All meetings were claimed to be held 'at the parish church' unless otherwise stated.¹

Words, letters and figures added to the text by the editor are printed within square brackets. Editorial comment is in italic type within square brackets. The page numbers of the minute book are inserted in the text in the form [p. 96], at the point where the page commences.

Consecutive entries related in subject matter are usually printed in one paragraph although they are separated in the minute book, and items in lists and accounts are also run together, where possible, into a single paragraph.

Lists of vestrymen and committee members attending each meeting are omitted from the text and presented in the form of an index in Appendix Ia. The number attending any particular meeting, or signing to its record, is given in italic figures in square brackets (e.g. [9]) at the point at which the list of names occurs in the minute book.

Spelling is usually modernized. Where the original spelling is preserved it is distinguished by the use of single inverted commas. Common Christian names are abbreviated (see List of Abbreviations, p. xxiii). Surnames are printed with the same spelling as is in the minute book.

The documents in the Appendices are printed in full except where otherwise stated.

As there is a vault erecting in the church next to the west door and it is, as this vestry is informed, intended to erect a monument over the vault that will block up the door, it is agreed that there shall be no such monument erected on any account to stop the passage to the door, and the door shall remain a free passage as it always was so that the inhabitants may have the same opportunity of going in and out as they always had. As the churchwardens have had no application made to them for leave for building the vault, it is absolutely agreed that no monument shall be erected. [16]

[p. 204] Memorandum. We Jo. Cooksey curate, Wi. Gonston and Wi. Watney churchwardens, and Jo. Edwards and Ri. Peacock overseers signify and declare that the vault lately made at the west end of the church, containing 10 ft 4 in. square in the extreme, together with the entrance into the vault [which] is in length 5 ft and in breadth 4 ft 6 in., is the sole property of Gen. Joseph Hudson of Petty France, Westminster, and his heirs for ever, subject to the payment of 1 guinea for opening the vault and half a guinea for surplice fees, together with 13s. 4d. to the clerk and 13s. 4d. for the use of the parish on every corpse to be interred in the vault. 8 March 1773. [Signed] Jo. Cooksey minister, Wi. Gonston churchwarden, Jo. Edwards overseer. Witnesses: David Watson, Th. Tegg, W. Jennings, Ch. Newsham Pigott.

262 [p. 205] Tues. 13 Apr. 1773. The following appointed churchwardens: Wi. Watney, Jo. Martin. The following put in nomination to be presented to the bench of justices for them to choose 2 or more of them to serve overseers: Wi. Rose, D. Watney, Edw. Stevens, He. Gilbert, Jo. Edwards, Ri. Peacock, Ja. Jennings.

From this day henceforth every person brought into this church or churchyard to be interred who is a non-parishioner shall pay to the churchwardens £1 1s. for the use of the parish, but if any parishioner should happen to have any mis-carriage so as to meet with any accident which ends in death, then he shall be brought into the parish and buried in the church or churchyard without paying this extra expense.

The officers are to pay £1 1s. for Jo. Lee towards his paying for a substitute to serve in the Surrey Militia, and if it should happen to be some little sum more [the paying of this] shall be left to the discretion of the officers. [16]

263 [p. 206] Sunday 9 May 1773. From this day henceforth all persons who are not parishioners of this parish who shall come to be buried in this church or churchyard shall pay £1 1s. to the minister as his dues and £1 1s. to the churchwardens for the use of the parish over and above the 13s. 4d. as has always been paid for burials in the church heretofore, and this is a final determination to all persons whom it may concern.¹

Jo. Humphrey constable has brought in his bill of expenses amounting to £1 6s. 10d. and ordered to be paid.

Jo. Brown baker has brought in a bill for board, lodging and [a] shirt, amounting to £1 17s. 6d. and ordered to be paid, and all the goods shall be taken from his house and carried to the workhouse for the security of the parish.

All the goods at Jo. Brown labourer's as have appeared by an inventory taken by the churchwardens are to be taken to the workhouse for the security of the parish and creditors.

Approved by me Jo. Cooksey minister.² [11]

It is recommended to the overseers to lay on the second Monday of every month the accounts of the poor-house for the preceding month before the committee of gentlemen.

A copy of these resolutions is to be immediately carried by the vestry clerk to the Rt Hon. Countess Spencer, and her ladyship is to be requested to grant her countenance and patronage towards 'effectually' carrying them into execution.

271 [p. 214] Sunday 24 July 1774. Wi. Jennings vestry clerk having acquainted the meeting that his business prevents his giving that due attendance he could wish at the parish meetings and having desired to resign, his resignation of the office is accepted and at the same time he is requested to keep the books and execute the business until another vestry clerk be chosen.

A steady prudent person capable of tenderly managing the sick and infirm and instructing the young and able in works of industry, and conducting the whole with proper economy, is to be appointed mistress of the workhouse, and Lady Spencer is to be desired to recommend such a person for the choice of the parishioners.

Notice to be given in church next Sunday of a vestry to be held the Sunday following after morning service for the choice of a vestry clerk in the room of Wi. Jennings.

272 [p. 215] Sunday 31 July 1774. Wi. Rose and Dan. Watney late overseers have brought in their accounts and they have been allowed, and on balance there remains due to the parish £11 6s. 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. which is paid to the succeeding overseers in presence of this vestry.

Ja. Jennings to go to see the condition of Jane Edmons who lives with her mother in Little Duke Street in the Mint, Southwark, who is to go out to service by application of her mother to this vestry. He is to see that she is put out to the said person³ if practicable and [she is] to be allowed such necessities as he in his judgment shall see needful.

Messrs Mason and Carter are to prepare an estimate of the expenses necessary for repair of the belfry and lay the same before the next vestry.

Mr Jacomb on behalf of Mr Hopkins gave his consent for erecting a cottage at Townfield Gate on part of the ground of Mr Hopkins, upon condition that a stone with inscription denoting what quantity of land belonged to Mr Hopkins [be erected there], and the plan now produced by Mr Carter is approved of and [is to be] carried into execution forthwith. [10]

273 [p. 216] Sunday 7 Aug. 1774. Jos. Andrews master of the subscription school is elected vestry clerk during pleasure not exceeding one year from this time, at the end of which the parish will proceed to a new election either for continuing him or choosing another in his stead, and the books of accounts and of the minutes of the meetings are entrusted to his care but the bills and other vouchers are to be kept in the parish chest, the keys of which are to be constantly in the care of the churchwardens and overseers.

A meeting of the parishioners is to be had to-morrow at the schoolhouse at 12 o'clock to consider Lady Spencer's recommendation in respect to a mistress for the workhouse and what may be necessary for the repairs of the steeple, and further to examine the estimate of a new building by Lord Rockingham's. This vestry adjourned. [16]

274 [p. 217] 8 Aug. 1774. Adjournment at the schoolhouse. Corbyn Morris in the chair. [9 excluding the chairman]

Miss Lewis reported that in pursuance of a letter she had received from Lady Spencer she had seen Ann Staples, a person recommended by her ladyship for the office of mistress to the workhouse, who seemed willing to accept but had this day wrote to Miss Lewis to decline it, of which Miss Lewis is desired to acquaint Lady Spencer.

The estimate for repairs of the steeple not being completed and signed by the workmen the consideration of the repairs is deferred till this day sevenight.

Received plans and estimates from Mr Jennings bricklayer and Mr Carter carpenter for building a cottage at Townfield Gate for a poor family, the joint expense of which is about £41. They are authorised to begin immediately upon the building.

275 [p. 218] Sunday 28 Aug. 1774. A rate granted for the necessary relief of the poor for half a year from L.D. last to Mich. at 1s. in the pound.

Wi. Watney and Jo. Martin late churchwardens have brought in their account and on balance there remains due to the accountants £2 6s. 11½d.

Edw. Clarke and family shall be put into possession of the cottage at the Town Field Gate during pleasure. [9]

276 [p. 219] Sunday 11 Sept. 1774. [10]

Resolved unanimously that for the better taking the general sense of the parishioners at vestry meetings and for affording opportunities for the greatest number to be present, all such meetings be appointed to be held on Sundays in the vestry of the church immediately after morning service, subject to be adjourned from thence as the parishioners then present agree.

Sam. Mason, who has produced the particulars of the work necessary to be done for repairing the steeple and delivered in an estimate of the expense thereof as underwritten, is authorised to proceed to make such repairs without delay, and the whole work when completed is to be surveyed and examined if required for the satisfaction of the parishioners.

Adjourned to the schoolhouse to Monday sevenight 19 Sept., to consider matters respecting the poor and poor-house.

Signed [by all present].

Resolved unanimously that it may be an eligible method of providing for the poor to agree with a prudent steady person for the maintenance of them in every respect (except clothing) at a certain fixed weekly price upon a medium in the poor-house, subject to the constant inspection and direction of the overseers and of the committee appointed for superintending the poor and poor-house. Notice is to be given on Sunday of a vestry meeting to be held on Sunday sevenight after morning service for receiving the proposals of any persons who shall offer to maintain the poor in the workhouse according to these terms. These resolutions are to be communicated to the Rt Hon. Lady Spencer and she is to be acquainted that the parishioners will not proceed to choose or agree with any person till they are favoured with her ladyship's sentiments.

280 [p. 224] 17 Oct. 1774. An adjourned parish meeting at the schoolhouse. Corbyn Morris in the chair. [10 excluding the chairman]¹

Mrs Sarah Hayball having offered herself for mistress of the poor-house and appearing upon a personal examination before this meeting to be duly qualified, and having further referred this meeting to credible persons for testimonies of her good character, is (conditionally that the testimonies be found satisfactory) appointed mistress of the poor-house at a constant salary of £10 p.a. with half a guinea for every child put out apprentice from this poor-house or put out to service, and [she is to] continue therein during one year after her entry into this office. She is to receive no other advantage whatsoever and to be subject to be discharged at any time upon one month's notice. The appointment with the testimonies which shall be produced are to be laid before the parishioners in the vestry on Sunday next after morning service for confirmation in case the testimonies are found satisfactory. She is to be subject to such regulations and directions as the committee for superintending the poor and poor-house chosen on 26 June, or any 5 of them, with the overseers or either of them, shall from time to time see fit to appoint. The committee and overseers are authorised to put her into possession of the office after the choice of her shall have been confirmed. The ladies whose assistance in the management of the poor and poor-house was requested by the vestry of 26 June are to be earnestly desired to grant their countenance and support to the said mistress of the poor-house in the due execution of her office.

281 [p. 225] 23 Oct. 1774. [10]

Upon full consideration of the testimonies produced in support of the character of Mrs Sarah Hayball conditionally chosen on 17 inst. mistress of the poor-house, the choice of her is confirmed and she is to be put in possession of this office on Mon. 31 inst.

285 [p. 228] 29 Jan. 1775. [17]

The following additional rules are established for the government of the workhouse :

The mistress or matron is to rise early and to appear soon after in a decent clean dress amongst the poor under her management, and to see that the orders and directions prescribed for their conduct be duly observed, taking care to behave with kindness and tenderness towards them *and to avoid all hasty and passionate language, particularly calling any of the poor by harsh or reproachful names,*³ on every occasion.

The poor are to behave with constant respect to the matron and attentively obey her directions without entering into dispute or argument with her on any subject.

No poor person is to send for medicines or goods of any kind whatsoever to be brought to the workhouse, all which are to be ordered by the churchwardens or overseers or by the matron under their direction.

Upon any debate or noise they are every one of them immediately to become silent at the order of the matron and not to contradict her upon any occasion, taking care to avoid indecent and abusive language and all mocking and scoffing at each other, but upon any ground of complaint they may lay the same before one of the churchwardens or overseers.

Such of the poor as shall be guilty of any of the offences above mentioned shall be debarred by the matron from their next meal and where the offence is such as ought not to be slightly passed over immediate complaint shall be made thereof by the matron to the overseers who shall cause the offender to be duly punished without delay.

No person shall be admitted into the workhouse to be maintained there without an order in writing from a churchwarden or overseer delivered to the matron, and such poor persons shall at their admission, or as soon after as possible, deliver up all their goods and effects to the overseers for the benefit of the parish, and they are not to have any box, drawer or other receptacle under lock and key, but may each of them receive from the matron a proper box belonging to the workhouse with a lid thereto for holding their linen and wearing apparel, which boxes are to be continually open to the inspection of the matron whenever she sees proper.

[p. 229] All poor persons are diligently to perform to the utmost of their power any work allotted them at any place in this parish by the churchwardens or overseers, the whole profits arising from which are to be paid for the benefit of the parish to the overseers who may, if they see proper, allot any sum not exceeding one sixth of the profits to such grown poor persons, for their own use, by whose labour the same has been produced, as a reward for their industry.

The churchwardens and overseers are admonished and warned not to relieve any persons admitted into the workhouse out of the money assessed for the poor's rate except such as wear upon the shoulder of the right sleeve of their uppermost garment a badge as prescribed by the act of 8 & 9 William 3 cap. 30, and upon every neglect of this branch of their duty they are liable to be prosecuted for the same as the law directs.

The foregoing rules written in a fair legible hand are to be affixed in a conspicuous place in the workhouse and the same are to be publicly read by the matron on the first Sunday in every month, or oftener if she shall see fit, to the poor under her management.

303 Wed. 1 May 1776, adjournment to Mr Mason's at the Rose and Crown. [12]

Messrs Coleman, Newton and Cuffley calico printers near the Copper Mill Company's bridge at Wimbledon attended and proposed and agreed to allow a temporary bridge to be thrown from 'South Sea Barn Field' over the river Wandle into 'Iron Mill-Field' belonging to the said calico printers, and to allow a passage from this bridge through their field into 'Potters Field', the nearest way to 'Garrett Green' for the carts to go backwards and forwards carrying gravel for repairing 'Durnfords Lane', provided full satisfaction (such as shall be awarded by 3 indifferent persons) be made to them by the parish for every damage and inconvenience brought upon the calico printers. This meeting agrees to the proposal and the surveyors are empowered from time to time to make such satisfaction, previously communicating the same to the vestry and having their approbation. A fair copy of this resolution is to be delivered by the vestry clerk to Messrs Coleman, Newton and Cuffley with the thanks of this meeting for the accommodation they have so readily granted to the parish.

304 [p. 241] Sunday 21 July 1776. [12]

The surveyors acquainted the meeting that very pressing applications had been made to them by Sir Ri. Hotham for repairing that part of 'Durnford's Lane' which extends from 'Heyden's Farm' to the Epsom Road, and that, to prevent damage to carriages, they had caused the ruts in that part of the lane to be levelled with a declaration at the same time to Sir Richard that this occasional repair was not to prejudice the rights of the parish. Mr Rousell, attorney for the parish on their late trial with Sir Richard Hotham in regard to the other part of this lane, declared that by the late decision in the Court of King's Bench 'Durnford's Lane' was adjudged to be a highway and that part of it which was indicted was ordered to be repaired by the parishes of Wandsworth and Wimbledon respectively for such portions as lay within each of them, and the other part of the lane in this parish, not yet indicted but now complained of, appeared to him to be clearly determined by the said decision and equally subject to be repaired by this parish, unless any particular specialty or condition of tenure of the lands adjoining expressly subjecting the tenants to the burthen of this repair could be proved and which there did not appear any foundation for alleging. Upon consideration whereof and of other matters debated the surveyors are authorised to repair the remaining part of 'Durnfords Lane' in this parish now complained of and, if the lane be required to be widened, to make an agreement with Sir Ri. Hotham for completing the whole in the manner they judge best in behalf of this parish.

It being represented and confirmed by the overseers that some additional allotment is requisite to be made to Mrs Hayball matron of the workhouse for her more comfortable support, an annual allowance of £1 is added to her salary of £12 from Midsummer last.

419 [p. 326] Tues. 18 July 1786, an adjourned vestry at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown. [7]

A building is to be erected at the west end of the poor-house for the more conveniently carrying on the manufactory. An estimate of the expense was laid before this vestry which will amount to £45, the whole to be completed in a good and workmanlike manner by 1 Aug. 1786.

420 [p. 327] Mon. 7 Aug. 1786, at the schoolhouse. [19]

Adjourned to Wed. 9 inst. to the church at 11 o'clock in the morning.

¹ The first two names in the list are bracketed together.

² The words 'at least' were added in a hand different from that of the vestry clerk.

421 [p. 328] Wed. 9 Aug. 1786, an adjourned vestry, [13]

It was reported by the minister and churchwardens that £773 and upwards was subscribed for enlarging the church. It appeared at the same time that the necessary expenses for the repairs will amount to a larger sum than at first apprehended as the north wall and steeple are considerably out of repair as well as the south wall, so that the repairs are estimated at £300 and upwards. Mr Johnson surveyor [of the repairs] having delivered in a plan for enlarging and repairing the church amounting on a rough calculation to £900, he was desired to make a particular estimate of the whole expense and give in his answer as soon as possible.

A rate granted for the repairs of the highways at 6d. in the pound.

Note. Mr Andrews vestry clerk is desired to acquaint Mr Johnson of the desire of the gentlemen to have a particular estimate by Saturday next 12 inst.

422 [p. 329] Mon. 21 Aug. 1786, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [15]

Mr Mason and the other tradesmen produced an estimate of the repairs of the north and south wall with the taking down and repairing the belfry and steeple which amounted to £300. Jo. Johnson surveyor, of Berners St, produced a plan and estimate of enlarging the church, which would include the necessary repairs as stated above, amounting to £1,087.

The churchwardens reported that the subscription for enlarging the church amounted to £774 6s. and Rev. Mr Randolph mentioned that he had authority from a gentleman to subscribe £100 more provided a steeple was added to the plan of Mr Johnson. Resolved that Mr Johnson's plan be agreed to and, in consequence of the handsome offer of the gentleman, that a steeple be added thereto so that the difference of expense shall not exceed the gentleman's subscription.

A committee is to be appointed to make an agreement with Mr Johnson for enlarging and repairing the same agreeable to the plan so that the same shall not exceed (including the addition of the steeple) £1,187. Rev. Mr Randolph is to apply to the ordinary for a faculty for enlarging the same. Lord Spencer, Sir Ri. Hotham, Wi. B. Rush, Ch. E. Wilson, Ben. B. Hopkins, Ja. Meyrick, Sam. Castell, Mos. Is. Levy, He. Dundas, Wi. Wilberforce, Wi. Southouse, Jos. Hudson and Geo. Chamberlaine Esqs., with the minister and churchwardens for the time being, are to be a committee (or any 5 of them) for carrying the orders of this vestry into execution.

Rev. Herbert Randolph is appointed treasurer to receive the subscription from the churchwardens as also any rate granted in aid of the same. The treasurer is not to pay any monies without an order signed by at least 3 of the committee (exclusive of the minister). [p. 330] The minister and churchwardens are to collect the subscriptions as soon as possible and pay the same to the treasurer. The season being so far advanced the pulling down of the church is deferred until the spring of the year. The granting of a rate for the amount of the repairs as estimated by Mr Mason and others, to go in aid of Mr Johnson's plan, is postponed until the treasurer reports the amount of the subscriptions received.

423 Fri. 22 Sept. 1786, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [11]

The following put in nomination and returned to H.M. bench of J.P.s for the county for their appointment of 2 or more of them to serve the office of surveyors: Ch. Edw. Wilson, Ja. Meyrick, Fre. Pigou, Th. Scott Jackson and

Sam. Castill Esqs., Wi. Watney, Ben. Patterson, Jo. Terry, Th. Watney, Wi. Everatt.

Note. The original minute was signed by all present except Wi. Gonston, Wi. Watney and Jo. Terry.

A rate granted for the relief of the poor at 1s. 9d. in the pound to be assessed on the inhabitants, occupiers of houses, lands, tenements &c.

Signed by all present except Th. Watney and Jo. Dicker.

425 [p. 332] Mon. 18 Dec. 1786, at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [22]

Th. Wilkins to be employed with his wife to take care of the workhouse and manufactory therein established at an annual salary of 20 guineas.

Mr Akers and wife are allotted a room in the poor-house for accommodation of themselves but by no means to have any command in the house, or if they choose to remove from the house they are to be allowed 5 guineas p.a. for their maintenance.

426 [p. 333] Mon. 1 Jan. 1787, a meeting of the committee at the schoolhouse, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [5]

It is to be recommended to Mr Johnson to employ the workmen of Wimbledon for repairing and enlarging the church provided they can do the work as well and as cheap as other workmen.

Thanks to be returned to Wi. Pitt Esq., Chapel St, Westminster, for his liberal donation of £100 for erecting a steeple to the church.

The proctor's bill for the faculty, amounting to £17 13s. 6d., to be paid by the treasurer.

427 [p. 334] Sunday 7 Jan. 1787, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [14]

Ben. Hays, Ri. Bridger and Ri. Gaire Esqs., Ben. Patterson, Ja. Rose, Wi. Gonston, Ch. Newsham Pigott, Jo. Watney and Jo. Edwards are added to the committee appointed 21 Aug. 1786.

Mr Corbett allowed the liberty to remove the gate called the Shepherds Hatch at his own expense.

428 [p. 335] 15 Jan. 1787. A minute of the proceedings of the committee held at Mason's the Rose and Crown (appointed 21 Aug. 1786) empowered to take into consideration and determine on every occurrence relative to the repairing and enlarging the church. [7]

Minutes of last meeting confirmed.

Jo. Johnson attended and informed the committee that in consequence of an order signed by 5 of the committee dated 2 Sept. 1786, he had considered himself empowered to prepare the materials for enlarging and repairing the church agreeable to the plan and agreement delivered in, and of course he was to employ his own workmen and could not consent to comply with the request of the last committee recommending him to employ the Wimbledon tradesmen.

429 [p. 336] Sunday 28 Jan. 1787, notice given in church the preceding Sabbath day. [17]

¹ There were 14 vestrymen present according to the original minute (S.R.O. P5/3/220).

431 [p. 338] Tues. 13 Feb. 1787, a committee at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice given the preceding Sabbath day in church. [10]

Messrs Mason, Carter, Terry and Jennings having delivered in proposals for enlarging and repairing the church according to the plan and design of Jo. Johnson surveyor and [having] produced an estimate of the expense amounting to £1,182, an agreement is to be entered into with them for the performance of the works, and Sir Ri. Hotham and Geo. Chamberlaine are empowered to enter into an agreement with them in behalf of this committee.

The original minute was signed by [9 vestrymen].

432 [p. 339] Mon. 26 Feb. 1787, a committee at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice given the preceding Sabbath day in church. [5]

Rev. Mr Randolph reported that Jo. Carter called on him this morning and declined having any concern in the business of the enlarging and repairing of the church with Messrs Mason, Terry and Jennings. Sir Ri. Hotham and Geo. Chamberlaine have entered into an agreement with Messrs Mason, Terry and Jennings for executing all the said works [as in no. 431] which, being read, is confirmed. A letter is to be wrote to Jo. Johnson architect, Charles St, Berkeley Sq., enclosing the agreement and particulars, and he is to be desired to prepare and give orders for executing his plan for enlarging and repairing the church.

Adjourned to Monday next, 5 March, at the same time and place.

434 Mon. 5 March 1787, adjourned committee at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown. Present—Rev. Mr Randolph. Adjourned sine die.

435 [p. 341] Tues. 10 Apr. 1787. [13]

The following appointed churchwardens: Geo. Chamberlaine Esq., Ri. Peacock. The following put in nomination and returned to H.M. bench of ¹ The vestry book gives the date as 4 Feb. 1787.

J.P.s for this county for their appointment of 2 or more of them to serve the office of overseers : Ben. Patterson, Jo. Terry, Ja. Dalglish, Wi. Eades, Ja. Coote, Ja. Steele.

[As] a vault belonging to the family of Silvester will obstruct the entrance at the west end of the church and interfere with the foundation of the wall, the same is to be removed further to the west as many feet as will keep the same clear of the foundation, and the inscription stone is to be laid flat on the ground over the vault.

Signed by [7 vestrymen].

Note. The original minute was delivered to Edw. Eades overseer.

436 [p. 342] Thurs. 17 May 1787, meeting of the committee superintending the enlargement and repairing of the church, at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown, previous notice given by the beadle. [8]

Wi. Pitt Esq., Chapel St, Westminster, attended and proposed a more ornamental steeple than at first was intended and agreed to take the expense of the same upon himself provided it should not exceed £25 more. Mr Johnson architect is to be instructed to comply with Mr Pitt's proposal, and the committee's thanks are to be returned to Mr Pitt for the liberal offer.

The underwritten agreement to be endorsed on the original contract with the builders :

'Whereas the Roof of the Church was found to be so far decayed that the Contractors chose to take the whole of it down rather than to shore it up in the manner first proposed, in consequence of which Mr Johnson the Architect produced a Plan of a new Roof to be covered with Patent Slate, It is therefore hereby further agreed between the Contractors and the Committee that the Alterations in the said Roof proposed by Mr Johnson shall be executed by the Contractors for a Sum not exceeding Sixty Pounds or such smaller Sum as the same shall Amount to when surveyed by Mr Johnson.

'And if Mr Johnson the architect shall (at the desire of the Committee or any five of them) think it necessary to make any further Alterations in the finishing of the said Church and enter into any Agreement with the Contractors for the same, it is hereby understood that such Agreement shall not make void or any wise annul the within original Contract.

'As Witness our hands this Seventeenth Day of May 1787.'

N.B. It was signed by the contractors.

437 [p. 343] Tues. 12 June 1787, a committee at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown to consider the raising the floor of the church, notice previously given by the beadle. [5]

The raising of the floor of the church 3 ft would contribute to make the church more wholesome and free from damp. Mr Chamberlaine reported that Mr Townsend had called upon him from Lord Spencer intimating that his lordship had no objection to the same being raised 2 ft above the present floor of the chancel. Messrs Terry and Jennings, on the part of the contractors, said that raising the walls of the church all round 3 ft to admit raising the floor will amount to £38 or thereabouts. Mr Johnson architect is to be directed to make an agreement with Messrs Terry and Jennings (on behalf of this committee) for carrying the walls such a greater height than is the present plan as will admit of the floor being raised 2 ft above the chancel floor, and so as the same shall not exceed £38.

The original minute was signed by [all present].

438 [p. 344] Mon. 25 June 1787, a committee at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown to consider altering the entrance to the church by a porch agreeable to a plan designed by Mr Johnson, notice previously given by the beadle. [6]

Messrs Terry and Jennings informed the committee that the raising the church floor above 1 ft 9 in. would occasion the columns to be lowered 6 in., otherwise there must be a step up into the lobby and a step from thence down into the church. Likewise that Mr Johnson architect had delivered them a plan of a porch which was absolutely necessary to be built in addition to the entrance in consequence of raising the floor. If the committee agreed to erect the porch it would be necessary to remove the vault belonging to Mr Silvester's family as part of the foundation wall of the porch went through the middle of the same, otherwise to admit of the vault taking up the space of the porch.

Therefore resolved that (as the contractors had not yet entered into any agreement agreeable to the last order of the committee) the floor be only raised 1 ft 9 in. and that Mr Johnson be empowered to make an agreement with the contractors for [this], making an addition of a porch agreeable to the plan now before the committee with such alteration of Mr Silvester's vault as shall appear most commodious and reasonable both to the owners and the parishioners, so that [the whole] shall not exceed £90. Mr Chamberlaine is requested to enclose Mr Johnson a copy of this day's proceedings with a request that he would expedite the building of the church.

439 [p. 345] Mon. 6 Aug. 1787, a committee at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice previously given by the beadle. [6]

A large elm tree at the west end of the church, considered an obstruction, is to be taken up if the committee have power so to do. If any injury or detriment accrue to any person's property from the alterations the same shall be made good at the parish expense. As the alterations in some measure deviate from the faculty Mr Johnson architect is to state these alterations to the Commons and pray that the same be confirmed by the ordinary.

440 [p. 346] Fri. 24 Aug. 1787, at Ja. Steele's the Dog and Fox, notice given by the beadle. [10]

A rate granted for the relief of the poor at 1s. 9d. in the pound to be assessed on the inhabitants, occupiers of houses, lands, tenements &c.

Signed by all present except Ri. Cooke.

441 [p. 347] Mon. 27 Aug. 1787, a committee at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice given by the beadle. [5]

Earl Spencer having consented to the taking down the elm tree at the west end of the church, which was considered an obstruction to the building, the workmen are to be desired to take down the same as soon as the bell can be removed into the steeple.

The contractors having represented that the present state of the north wall of the chancel is so bad that they cannot make a complete finish to it until Lord Spencer's opinion is known relating to the repairs of the chancel, application is to be made to Earl Spencer to know his determination and Mr Randolph is requested to apply to him for that purpose.

442 [p. 348] Sat. 22 Sept. 1787, at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown. [10]

The following put in nomination and returned to H.M. bench of J.P.s for the county for their appointment of 2 or more of them to serve the office of surveyors : Sam. Castill, Ja. Meyrick, Th. Scott Jackson, Fra. Page and Jo. Mayor Esqs., Jo. Hierons, Wi. Jennings, Ja. Dalglish, Wi. Everatt, Edw. Eades.

Signed by all present except Wi. Jennings and Edw. Eades.

443 [p. 349] Mon. 3 Dec. 1787, a general vestry, notice previously given in the parish churches of Putney and Merton and a notice delivered by the beadle to every parishioner respectively. [20]

A petition to the ordinary is to be drawn up praying a new faculty to confirm the alterations in the building of the church, which is to be signed by the minister, churchwardens and principal inhabitants.

Instructions to be given to Mr Johnson architect for making so many new pews in the lower part of the church as were not included in the original contract together with a new pulpit and reading desk, and the committee to be directed to receive proposals for making an agreement for executing such new pews, pulpit and reading desk.

Whatever alterations are necessary to be made in the vault of Jos. Hudson Esq. on account of raising the floor of the church shall be done at the expense of the parish and with his approbation, and such alterations are to be inserted in the new faculty to be prayed for and in his own faculty if thought necessary.

444 [p. 350] Fri. 7 Dec. 1787, at Mr Mason's the Rose and Crown, previous notice given. [15]

The account[s] of Wi. Blake and Wi. Gonston surveyors were audited and allowed. The accounts of Wi. Jennings and Edw. Eades overseers were inspected.

It appeared that the parish are considerably in arrears in both the highways' and poor's rates' accounts. A vestry is to be called on Sat. 12 Jan. at 10 o'clock in the forenoon to take the arrears into consideration and order payment of the same.

445 [p. 351] Sat. 12 Jan. 1788, at Mr Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown. [10]

Wi. Jennings and Edw. Eades late overseers having exhibited a state of the accounts for the year ending L.D. 1787 the same was examined with the vouchers, and the balance appearing to be £14 11s. 6½d. due to the parish was then paid to Jo. Terry overseer.

The accompt[s] of Wi. Blake and Wi. Gonston [late] surveyors were finally examined and passed. Wi. Jennings surveyor represented that the amount of the outstanding debts due from the parish is £99 6s., therefore a rate granted at 6d. in the pound for the discharging the said and other debts.

It appeared on examination of the overseers' accompts that a bill delivered at Easter 1786 to the overseers, amounting to £39 14s. for flour for the poor-house, by Jo. Watney was unpaid. Also 2 bills to the overseers for the last years due to Boddicott and Hobbs for butcher's meat, amounting to £18 11s. 5d., was not [p. 352] paid owing to a deficiency of cash in hand. Likewise £10 due to Jo. Watney for flour and £11 5s. for casualty poor due to Ri. Peacock churchwarden.

On 1 Aug. 1786¹ it was ordered the poor-house, for the more conveniently carrying on the manufactory, be repaired in consequence of which the parish stands indebted to the workmen as follows : Sam. Mason £32 7s. 9¼d. Wi. Jennings £24 13s. 8¾d. Jo. Withem £4 7s. Jo. Carter £16. [Total] £77 8s. 6d.

In consequence of the aforesaid debts, the whole of which amount to £156 18s. 11½d., an additional rate for the discharge of the arrears is immediately granted at 1s. in the pound, also another rate of 1s. in the pound for the present year, Jo. Terry being overseer, from Mich. last to L.D., amounting together to 2s. in the pound to be assessed on the inhabitants.

The beadle is to desire the gentlemen of the committee to attend at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown on Mon. 21 Jan. at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

446 [p. 353] Mon. 21 Jan. 1788, a committee at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice previously given by the beadle. [7]

Mr Johnson surveyor [of the repairs to the church] having proposed a plan for altering the chancel and Earl Spencer's seat, bringing the communion table to the west end of it and placing the pulpit over it and the minister's desk and the clerk's desk on each side of the same, it appeared to the committee that the plan would finish the church very completely if Earl Spencer would consent. The contractors are to make an estimate of such expense of the same as Earl Spencer is liable to as lessee of the impropriation, to be submitted to him for his approbation.

Adjourned to Monday next to take the matter into further consideration and to determine upon the same.

447 [p. 354] Mon. [28] ¹ Jan. 1788, an adjourned committee at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown. [6]

Mr Johnson surveyor [of the repairs to the church] having produced a plan for new pewing the body of the church, an estimate is to be made of the expense of the same agreeable to an order of vestry dated 3 Dec. 1787, and a vestry is to be called to determine the same and other matters on Mon. 4 Feb.

448 [p. 355] Mon. 4 Feb. 1788, notice given by the beadle to each parishioner respectively. [18]

A proposal being delivered in by Messrs Mason, Terry and Jennings for new pewing the body of the church and making a new pulpit, reading desk and clerk's desk, and a new communion table, rail &c. according to the design of Mr Johnson architect, as mentioned in the particulars of the said proposal, and in which an abatement is mentioned for the pews in the original contract of £49 12s., which proposal amounts to £241 17s. 11d. including the plastering, the said design is to be carried into execution. Mr Johnson is to take the proposal into consideration and adjust the value of the several works, and value them as he shall judge equitable and report to the committee.

[p. 356] A vestry to be held on Mon. 18 Feb. at the Rose and Crown for granting a rate for the necessary repairs and enlargement of the church agreeable to order of 21 Aug. 1786, and proper notice to be given of the same.

449 Mon. 11 Feb. [1788], a committee at the Rose and Crown for receiving Mr Johnson's report of the estimate of new pewing ² the body of the church &c. [5]

The committee having considered the reduced estimate of the contractors for new pewing ² the body of the church &c. as adjusted by Mr Johnson, amounting to £212 7s. 4d., it is resolved to agree with them for carrying the same into execution. The committee has on behalf of the vestry agreed with Messrs

Terry, Jennings and Mason accordingly. The agreement to be laid before next vestry.

450 [p. 357] Mon. 18 Feb. 1788, at the Rose and Crown, notice given by the beadle to each parishioner respectively. [13]

The agreement made with the contractors for completing the works of the church confirmed.

The treasurer having reported that £934 4s. has been received from voluntary subscriptions towards enlarging the church, out of which he has paid the contractors £840, which with some other disbursements reduces the balance in hand to about £60, and the contractors having applied for a further advancement, he is unable to comply with their request without a rate or additional subscription. It appearing in consequence of the original contract and others as underneath specified amounting in the whole to £1,569 and upwards, and in consequence of the progress of the several works, that the contractors are entitled to a further advancement, a rate is granted for that purpose at 2s. [p. 358] in the pound, the same to be paid to Rev. Herbert Randolph treasurer to the committee.

The churchwarden's bill for casual poor, 5 Dec. 1787 to 18 Jan. 1788, is confirmed and the overseers are desired to pay it.

No pension to be allowed out of the workhouse except to such as are bedridden.

451 [p. 359] Tues. 25 March 1788, notice given by the beadle. [16]

The following appointed churchwardens: Ch. Edw. Wilson Esq., Sam. Mason. The following put in nomination and returned to H.M. bench of J.P.s for this county for their appointment of 2 or more of them to serve the office of overseers: Th. Dicker, Ja. Dalglish, Th. Saunders, Wi. Eades, Ja. Steele, Ja. Coote.

The surveyors having reported that Ro. Nettleton refuses to pay the rate demanded of him, he is to be summoned before the bench of justices to signify his reasons.

452 [p. 360] Tues. 6 May 1788, at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, for taking into consideration the better managing of the manufactory in the workhouse, notice previously given by the beadle. [16]

Further consideration of the above-mentioned business is referred to a vestry to be holden at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown on Tuesday next, and proper notice is to be given by the beadle, mentioning the business to each parishioner respectively.

453 [p. 361] Tues. 13 May 1788, at Sam. Mason's the Rose and Crown, notice given by the beadle. [19]

Th. Wilkins master of the workhouse having made a proposal to support the poor in the workhouse and to find them in necessary provision, clothing &c. at 3s. per head, and at the same time to allow the parish £40 p.a. for the profits of the manufacture now carrying on in the workhouse, it was agreed to accept provided he can find proper securities.

None of the poor supported in the workhouse shall be allowed to do work out of the workhouse, but shall be employed in the manufacture there carrying on, or in other business relating to the workhouse.

454 [p. 362] Mon. 26 May [1788], for considering painting the pews, erecting the King's arms and all matters relative to completing the church, and other parish business, notice previously given by the beadle to each parishioner respectively. [27]

Th. Wilkins having provided 2 securities, viz. Ro. Nettleton and Jo. Terry, they are approved of and the overseers are to enter into an agreement with Wilkins to commence at Midsummer day.

There is no immediate occasion for painting the pews. The King's arms are to be put up in the church and the committee is to contract for a sum not exceeding 15 guineas, and the committee is to meet at the schoolhouse on Monday for that purpose.

The church is to be opened for divine service on Sunday 6 July.

Adjourned to Mon. 30 June for allotting the pews to the parishioners, proper notice to be given of the same.

APPENDIX 1a

WIMBLEDON VESTRYMEN

THE names of men and women attending meetings of the vestry and its committees have been removed from the text to this list. The references are to the numbers allotted to the meetings in this edition. Where variations of surnames occur the most usual form is given first. Christian names are abbreviated in the same way as those in the printed text (see List of Abbreviations, p. xxiii). Official positions held by the vestrymen are noted frequently but by no means consistently by the vestry clerks. In the list they are abbreviated as follows :

chwn	churchwarden	ovr	overseer of the poor
const.	constable	survr	surveyor of the highways
hdbh	headborough

An attempt has been made to distinguish between different people of the same name, the authority for making such a distinction being cited, but some of the entries may still refer to more than one person, and some of the lines of division may have been drawn in the wrong place. The letter M following an entry indicates that the person concerned signed the original minutes with a mark, or is noted in the vestry book as having done this.

Gentlemen—I have frequently Acquainted the parish Officers of this village that the parish of Wimbledon has no Connection with me, nor my School, for Notwithstanding the Trustees of Lady Dorothy Ciecils Charity Annually Subscribe five pounds, it will not tye me under any Obligation to teach your Workhouse Children and to find Materials for them for Nothing, Neither Can you Oblidge the Trustees to pay for those Children, for they Send into my School a Sufficient Number of poor house-keepers Children of this parish, which I am Able to prove when Required. The whole affair is Left Gentlemen to your Consideration.

From your most faithfull, humble & Obedient Servant
Robert Johnson

Gentlemen, if Kirby Swift had been but Slow, Your officer of Old
His little Debt he might have had, And not a lawyer told,
The Blow he's Struck, the term's at hand, I hope he will not rend
For fear if wanted, I have been to town, His Action to Defend.

APPENDIX IV

WIMBLEDON FREEHOLDERS 1762 AND 1788

The Surrey Freeholders' Books, 1697-1703 and 1762-1824, are records of the Court of Quarter Sessions. They contain the names of the men in each parish between the ages of 21 and 70, who owned freehold or copyhold lands worth at least £10 a year or who held substantial long term leases, these being the qualifications for jury service. The lists therefore give the names of the more important parishioners. The Wimbledon entries for 1762 (the first available in the period covered by this volume) and for 1788 are printed here.

References in roman numerals are to the pages of the Introduction.

References in arabic numerals are to the numbers allotted to the vestry and committee meetings in the text, except where it is specifically indicated that they refer to pages.

Personal names are indexed under the form most commonly used in the text, followed by variants. It was found to be impracticable to separate different persons of the same name in all but a few cases. For abbreviations of Christian names see p. xxiii.

Major place names are printed in block letters.
