

Memoirs of the extraordinary life, works, and discoveries of Martinus Scriblerus / [John Arbuthnot].

Contributors

Arbuthnot, John, 1667-1735.
Pope, Alexander, 1688-1744.

Publication/Creation

[Place of publication not identified] : [publisher not identified], [between 1700 and 1799?]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/ep3ex3ae>

License and attribution

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

11,151/A

A. XX XVII

18/2

ARBUTHNOT (John.)
2

H. N. Bowman Spink.

MEMOIRS

OF THE

REPUBLICAN PARTY

OF

THE UNITED STATES

41340

M E M O I R S

Of the Extraordinary

Life, Works, and Discoveries

O F

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.

B

MEMORANDUM

OF THE

ROYAL SOCIETY OF MEDICINE

AND THE

INTRODUCTION

To the READER.

IN the Reign of Queen ANNE (which, notwithstanding those happy Times which succeeded, every Englishman may remember) thou may'st possibly, gentle Reader, have seen a certain venerable Person who frequented the outside of the Palace of St James's, and who, by the Gravity of his Deportment and Habit, was generally taken for a decay'd Gentleman of Spain. His stature was tall, his visage long, his complexion olive, his brows were black and even, his eyes hollow yet piercing, his nose inclined to aquiline, his beard neglected and mix'd with grey: All this contributed to spread a solemn Melancholy over his countenance. Pythagoras was not more silent, Pyrrho more motionless, nor Zeno more austere. His Wig was as black and smooth as the plumes of a Raven, and hung as strait as the hair of a River God rising from the water. His cloak so compleatly covered his whole person, that whether or no he had any other cloaths (much less any linnen) under it, I shall not say; but his sword appeared a full yard behind him, and his manner of wearing it was so stiff, that it seemed grown to his Thigh. His whole figure was so utterly unlike any thing of this world, that it was not natural for any man to ask him a question without blessing himself first. Those who never saw a Jesuite, took him for one, and others believed him some High Priest of the Jews.

But under this macerated form was concealed a Mind replete with Science, burning with a zeal of benefiting his fellow-creatures, and filled with an honest conscious Pride, mixed with a scorn of doing, or suffering the least thing beneath the dignity of a Philosopher. Accordingly he had a soul that would not let him accept of any offers of Charity; at the same time that his body seemed but too much to require it. His lodging was in a small chamber up four pair of stairs, where he regularly paid for what he had when he eat or drank: and he was often observed wholly to abstain from both. He declined speaking to any one, except the Queen, or her first Minister, to whom he attempted to make some applications: but his real business or intentions were utterly unknown to all men. Thus much is certain, that he was obnoxious to the Queen's Ministry; who, either out Jealousy or Envy, had him spirited away, and carried abroad as a dangerous person, without any regard to the known Laws of the Kingdom.

One day, as this Gentleman was walking about dinner-time alone in the Mall, it happened that a Manuscript dropt from under his cloak, which my servant pick'd up, and brought to me. It was written in the Latin tongue, and contained many most profound secrets, in an unusual turn of reasoning and style. The first leaf was inscribed with these words, Codicillus, seu Liber Memorialis, Martini Scribleri. The Book was of so wonderful a nature, that it is incredible what a desire I conceived that moment to be acquainted with the Author, who I clearly perceived was some great Philosopher in disguise. I several times endeavoured to speak to him, which he as often industriously avoided. At length I found an opportunity (as he stood under the Piazza by the Dancing-room in St James's) to acquaint him in the Latin tongue, that his Manuscript was fallen into my hands; and saying this, I presented it to him, with great encomiums on the learned Author. Hereupon he took me aside, survey'd me over with a fixed attention, and opening the clasps of the Parchment cover, spoke (to my great surprise) in English, as follows;

“ Courteous stranger, whoever thou art, I embrace thee as my best friend; for either the Stars “ and my Art are deceitful, or the destined time is “ come which is to manifest Martinus Scriblerus to

“ the world, and thou the person chosen by fate for “ this task. What thou seest in me, is a body ex“ hausted by the labours of the mind. I have found “ in Dame Nature not indeed an unkind, but a “ very coy Mistress: Watchful nights, anxious days, “ slender meals, and endless labours, must be the lot “ of all who pursue her, through her labyrinths and “ mæanders. My first vital air I drew in this island
“ (a soil fruitful of Philosophers) but my complexion “ is become adust, and my body arid, by visiting “ lands (as the poet has it) alio sub sole calentes. I “ have, through my whole life, passed under several “ disguises and unknown names, to screen myself “ from the envy and malice which mankind express “ against those who are possessed of the Arcanum
“ Magnum. But at present I am forced to take Sanc“ tuary in the British court, to avoid the Revenge
“ of a cruel Spaniard, who has pursued me almost “ through the whole terraqueous globe. Being about “ four years ago in the City of Madrid, in quest of “ natural knowledge, I was informed of a Lady who “ was marked with a Pomegranate upon the in“ side of her right Thigh, which blossom’d, and, as “ it were, seem’d to ripen in the due season. Forth“ with was I possessed with an insatiable curiosity to “ view this wonderful Phænomenon. I felt the ar“ dour of my passion increase as the season advan“ ced; till, in the month of July, I could no longer “ contain. I bribed her Duenna, was admitted to “ the Bath, saw her undress’d, and the wonder dis“ played. This was soon after discovered by the “ husband, who finding some letters I had writ to “ the Duenna, containing expressions of a doubtful “ meaning, suspected me of a crime most alien from “ the Purity of my Thoughts. Incontinently I left “ Madrid by the advice of Friends, have been pur“ sued, dogged, and way-laid through several na“ tions, and even now scarce think myself secure “ within the sacred walls of this Palace. It has “ been my good fortune to have seen all the grand “ Phænomena of Nature, excepting an Earthquake, “ which I waited for in Naples three years in vain;

“ and now by means of some British Ship (whose “ Colours no Spaniard dare approach ^a) I impa“ tiently expect a safe passage to Jamaica, for that “ benefit. To thee, my Friend, whom Fate has mar“ ked for my Historiographer, I leave these my Com“ mentaries, and others of my works. No more—be “ faithful and impartial.”

He soon after performed his promise, and left me the Commentaries, giving me also further lights by many Conferences; when he was unfortunately snatched away (as I before related) by the jealousy of the Queen’s Ministry.

^a This marks the time when the Introduction was written.

Tho' I was thus to my eternal grief deprived of his conversation, he for some years continued his Correspondence, and communicated to me many of his Projects for the benefit of mankind. He sent me some of his Writings, and recommended to my care the recovery of others, straggling about the world, and assumed by other men. The last time I heard from him was on occasion of his Strictures on the Dunciad: since, when several years being elapsed, I have reason to believe this excellent person is either dead, or carried by his vehement thirst of knowledge into some remote, or perhaps undiscovered Region of the world. In either case, I think it a debt no longer to be delayed, to reveal what I know of this Prodigy of Science, and to give the history of his life, and of his extensive merits to mankind; in which I dare promise the Reader, that, whenever he begins to think any one Chapter dull, the style will be immediately changed in the next.

MEMOIRS

O F

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.

BOOK I. CHAP I.

Of the Parentage and Family of Scriblerus, how he was begot, what care was taken of him before he was born, and what Prodigies attended his birth.

IN the City of Munster in Germany, lived a grave and learned Gentleman, by Profession an Antiquary; who, among all his invaluable Curiosities, esteemed none more highly, than a Skin of the true Pergamenian Parchment, which hung at the upper-end of his hall. On this was curiously traced the ancient Pedigree of the Scribleri, with all their Alliances and collateral Relations (among which were reckoned Albertus Magnus, Paracelsus Bombastus, and the famous Scaligers, in old time, Princes of Verona) and deduced even from the times of the Elder Pliny to Cornelius Scriblerus; for such was the name of this venerable Personage; whose glory it was, that, by the singular virtue of the Women, not one had a head of a different Cast from his family.

His wife was a Lady of singular beauty, whom not for that reason only he espoused, but because she was undoubted daughter either of the great Scriverius, or of Gasper Barthius. It happened, on a time the said Gasper made a visit to Scriverius at Harlem, taking with him a comely Lady of his acquaintance, who was skilful in the Greek Tongue, of whom the learned Scriverius became so enamoured, as to inebriate his friend, and be familiar with his Mistress. I am not ignorant of what ^a Columesius affirms, that the learned Barthius was not so overtaken, but he perceived it; and in Revenge suffered this unfortunate Gentlewoman to be drowned in the Rhine at return. But Mrs Scriblerus (the issue of that Amour) was a living proof of the falshood of this Report. Dr Cornelius was farther induced to his marriage, from the certain information that the aforesaid Lady, the mother of his wife, was related to Cardan on the father's side, and to Aldrovandus on the mother's: Besides which, her Ancestors had been professors of Physick, Astrology, or Chymistry, in German Univerſities, from generation to generation.

^a Columesius relates this from Isaac Vossius, in his Opuscul.
P. 402.

With this fair Gentlewoman had our Doctor lived in a comfortable Union for about ten years: But this our ſober and orderly pair, without any natural infirmity, and with a conſtant and frequent compliance to the chief duty of conjugal life, were yet unhappy, in that Heaven had not bleſſed them with any iſſue. This was the utmoſt grief to the good man; eſpecially conſidering what exact Precautions and Methods he had uſed to procure that Bleſſing: for he never had cohabitation with his ſpouſe, but he pondered on the Rules of the Ancients, for the generation of Children of Wit. He ordered his diet according to the preſcription of Galen, conſining himſelf and his wife, for almoſt the whole firſt year, to ^b Goat's Milk and Honey. It unfortunately beſel her, when ſhe was about four months gone with child, to long for ſomewhat, which that author inveighs againſt, as prejudicial to the underſtanding of the infant. This her huſband thought fit to deny her, affirming, it was better to be childleſs, than to become the Parent of a Fool. His wife miſcarried; but as the Abortion proved only a female Fœtus, he comforted himself, that, had it arrived to perfection, it would not have answered his account; his heart being wholly fixed upon the learned Sex. However, he disdained not to treasure up the Embryo in a Vial, among the curiosities of his family.

^b Galen. Lib. de Cibis boni et mali ſucc. cap. 3.

Having discovered that Galen's prescription could not determine the sex, he forthwith betook himself to Aristotle. Accordingly, he withheld the nuptial embrace when the wind was in any point of the South; this ^c Author asserting that the grossness and moisture of the southerly winds occasion the procreation of females, and not of males. But he redoubled his diligence when the wind was at West, a wind on which that great philosopher bestowed the Encomiums of father of the earth, Breath of the Elysian Fields, and other glorious Elogies. For our learned man was clearly of opinion, that the Semina out of which Animals are produced, are Animalcula ready formed, and received in with the Air. ^d

Under these regulations, his wife, to his unexpressible joy, grew pregnant a second time; and (what was no small addition to his happiness) he just then came to the possession of a considerable Estate by the death of her Uncle, a wealthy Jew, who resided at London. This made it necessary for him to take a Journey to England; nor would

^c Arist. xiv. Sect. Prob. 5.

Religion of nat. § v. par. 15.

the care of his posterity let him suffer his Wife to remain behind him. During the voyage, he was perpetually taken up on the one hand how to employ his great Riches, and on the other, how to educate his Child. He had already determined to set apart several annual Sums, for the recovery of Manuscripts, the effossion of Coins, the procuring of Mummies; and for all those curious discoveries by which he hoped to become (as himself was wont to say) a second Peireskius. He had already chalked out all possible schemes for the improvement of a male child, yet was so far prepared for the worst that could happen, that before the nine months were expired, he had composed two Treatises of Education; the one he called, A Daughter's Mirrour, and the other A Son's Monitor.

This is all we can find relating to Martinus, while he was in his mother's womb, excepting that he was entertained there with a concert of Musick once in twenty four hours, according to the custom of the Magi: and that on a^e particular day, he was observed to leap and kick exceedingly, which was on the first of April, the birth day of the great Basilus Valentinus.

The truth of this, and every preceding Fact, may be depended upon, being taken literally from the Memoirs. But I must be so ingenuous as to own, that the Accounts are not so certain of the exact time and place of his birth. As to the first, he had the common frailty of old men, to conceal his age : as to the second, I only remember to have heard him say, that he first saw the light in St Giles's Parish. But in the investigation of this point, Fortune hath favoured our diligence. For one day as I was passing by the Seven Dials, I overheard a dispute concerning the place of Nativity of a great Astrologer, which each man alledged to have been in his own street. The circumstances of the time, and the description of the person, made me imagine it might be that universal Genius whose life I am writing. I returned home, and having maturely considered their several arguments, which I found to be of equal weight, I quieted my curiosity with this natural conclusion, that he was born in some point common to all the seven streets ; which must be that on which the column is now erected. And it is with infinite pleasure that I since find my Conjecture confirmed, by the following passage in the Codicil to Mr Neal's Will.

I appoint my Executors to engrave the following Inscription on the Column in the Centre of the seven streets which I erected.

LOC. NAT. INCLVT. PHILOS. MAR. SCR.

But Mr Neal's Order was never performed, because the Executors durst not administer.

Nor was the Birth of this great man unattended with Prodigies: He himself has often told me, that on the night before he was born, Mrs Scriblerus dream'd she was brought to bed of a huge Ink-horn, out of which issued several large streams of Ink, as it had been a fountain. This dream was by her husband thought to signify, that the child should prove a very voluminous Writer. Likewise a Crab-tree that had been hitherto barren, appeared on a sudden laden with a vast quantity of Crabs: This sign also the old gentleman imagined to be a prognostic of the acuteness of his Wit. A great swarm of Wasps, played round his cradle without hurting him, but were very troublesome to all in the room besides: This seemed a certain presage of the effects of his Satire. A Dunghill was seen, within the space of one night, to be covered all over with Mushrooms: This some interpreted to promise the infant great fertility of fancy, but no long duration to his works; but the Father was of another opinion.

But what was of all most wonderful, was a thing that seemed a monstrous Fowl, which just then dropt through the sky-light, near his wife's apartment. It had a large body, two little disproportioned wings, a prodigious tail, but no head. As its colour was white, he took it at first sight for a Swan, and was concluding his son should be a Poet : but on a nearer view, he perceived it to be speckled with black, in the form of letters ; and that it was indeed a Paper-kite which had broke its leash by the impetuosity of the wind. His back was armed with the Art Military, his belly was filled with Physick, his wings were the wings of Quarles and Withers, the several Nodes of his voluminous tail were diversified with several branches of Science ; where the Doctor beheld, with great joy, a knot of Logick, a knot of Metaphysick, a knot of Casuistry, a knot of polemical Divinity, and a knot of common Law, with a Lanthorn of Jacob Behmen.

There went a report in the family, that as soon as he was born, he uttered the voice of nine several animals : he cry'd like a Calf, bleated like a Sheep, chatter'd like a Mag-pye, grunted like a Hog, neighed like a Foal, croaked like a Raven, mewed like a Cat, gabbled like a Goose, and bray'd like an Ass. And the next morning he was found playing in his bed with two Owls which came down the chimney. His Father greatly rejoiced at all these signs, which betokened the variety of his Eloquence and the extent of his Learning ; but he was more particularly pleased with the last, as it nearly resembled what happened at the birth of Homer ^h.

^h Vid. Eustath. in Odyss. l. xii. ex Alex. Paphio, et Leo. Allat. de patr. Hom. pag. 45.

C H A P. II.

The Speech of Cornelius over his Son,
at the Hour of his Birth.

NO sooner was the cry of the Infant heard, but the old gentleman rushed into the room, and snatching it in his Arms, examined every limb with attention. He was infinitely pleased to find, that the child had the Wart of Cicero, the wry neck of Alexander, knots upon his legs like Marius, and one of them shorter than the other like Agefilaus. The good Cornelius also hoped he would come to stammer like Demosthenes, in order to be as eloquent; and in time arrive at many other defects of famous men. He held the child so long, that the Midwife, grown out of all patience, snatched it from his arms in order to swaddle it. “Swaddle him! (quoth he) far be it from me to submit to such a pernicious Custom! Is not my son a Man! and is not Man the Lord of the universe? Is it thus you use this Monarch at his first arrival in his dominions, to manacle and shackle him hand and foot? Is this what you call to be free-born? If you have no regard to his natural Liberty, at “least have some to his natural Faculties. Behold “with what agility he spreadeth his Toes, and “moveth them with as great variety as his Fin“gers! a power which, in the small circle of a “year may be totally abolished, by the enormous “confinement of shoes and stockings. His Ears “ (which other animals turn with great advantage “ towards the sonorous object) may, by the mini“stry of some accursed Nurse, for ever lye flat and “immoveable. Not so the Ancients, they could “move them at pleasure, and accordingly are often “described arrectis auribus.” “What a devil (quoth

“the Midwife) would you have your son move his “Ears like a Drill?” “Yes, fool (said he) why “should he not have the perfection of a Drill, or “of any other animal?” Mrs Scriblerus, who lay all this while fretting at her husband’s discourse, at last broke out to this Purpose. “My dear, I “have had many disputes with you upon this sub“ject before I was a month gone: We have but “one child, and cannot afford to throw him away “upon experiments. I’ll have my boy bred up like “other gentlemen, at home, and always under my “own eye.” All the Gossips with one voice, cried,
Ay, ay; but Cornelius broke out in this manner,
“What, bred at home! Have I taken all this pains “for a creature that is to live the inglorious life of “a Cabbage, to suck the nutritious juices from the “spot where he was first planted! No; to peram-“ bulate this terraqueous Globe, is too small a “ Range ; were it permitted, he should at least make “ the Tour of the whole system of the Sun. Let “ other Mortals pore upon Maps, and swallow the “ legends of lying travellers ; the son of Cornelius “ shall make his own Legs his Compasses ; with “ those he shall measure Continents, Islands, Capes, “ Bays, Streights, and Isthmus’s : He shall himself “ take the altitude of the highest mountains, from “ the peak of Derby to the peak of Teneriff ; when “ he has visited the top of Taurus, Imaus, Caucasus, “ and the famous Ararat, where Noah’s Ark first “ moor’d, he may take a slight view of the snowy “ Riphæans ; nor would I have him neglect Athos

 “ and Olympus, renowned for poetical fictions.
 “ Those that vomit fire will deserve a more parti“ cular attention : I will therefore have him observe
 “ with great care Vesuvius, Ætna, the burning “ mountain of Java, but chiefly Hecla the greatest “ rarity in the Northern Regions. Then he may “ likewise contemplate the wonders of the Mephi“ tick cave. When he has dived into the bowels
 “ of the earth, and surveyed the works of Nature “ under ground, and instructed himself fully in “ the nature of Volcanoes, Earthquakes, Thunders, “ Tempests and Hurricanes, I hope he will bless
 “ the world with a more exact survey of the deserts “ of Arabia and Tartary, than as yet we are able “ to obtain : Then will I have him cross the seven “ Gulphs, measure the currents in the fifteen famous “ Streights, and search for those fountains of fresh “ water, that are at the bottom of the Ocean. ———

—At these last words Mrs Scriblerus fell into a trembling; the description of this terrible Scene made too violent an impression upon a woman in her condition, and threw her into a strong Hystericfit; which might have proved dangerous, if Cornelius had not been pushed out of the room by the united force of the women.

C H A P. III.

Shewing what befel the Doctor's Son and his Shield, on the Day of the Christ'ning.

THE day of the Christ'ning being come, and the house filled with Gossips, the Levity of whose Conversation suited but ill with the Gravity of Dr Cornelius, he cast about how to pass this day more agreeably to his Character; that is to say, not without some Profitable Conference, nor wholly without observance of some Ancient Custom.

He remembered to have read in Theocritus, that the Cradle of Hercules was a Shield: and being possess'd of an antique Buckler, which he held as a most inestimable Relick, he determin'd to have the infant laid therein, and in that manner brought into the Study, to be shown to certain learned men of his acquaintance.

The regard he had for this Shield, had caused him formerly to compile a Dissertation concerning itⁱ, proving from the several properties, and particularly the colour of the Rust, the exact chronology thereof.

With this treatise, and a moderate supper, he proposed to entertain his Guests; tho' he had also another design, to have their assistance in the calculation of his Son's Nativity.

He therefore took the Buckler out of a Case (in which he always kept it, lest it might contract any modern Rust) and intrusted it to his House-maid, with orders that when company was come she should lay the child carefully in it, covered with a mantle of blue Sattin.

The Guests were no sooner seated, but they entered into a warm Debate about the Triclinium and the manner of Decubitus of the Ancients, which Cornelius broke off in this manner:

‘ This day, my friends, I purpose to exhibit my son
‘ before you; a Child not wholly unworthy of inspection, as he is descended from a Race of Virtuosi.
‘ Let the Physiognomists examine his Features; let the ‘ Chirographists behold his Palm; but above all, let ‘ us consult for the calculation of his Nativity. To i See the Dissertation on Woodward's Shield.

‘ this end, as the child is not vulgar, I will not present
 ‘ him unto you in a vulgar manner. He shall be crad‘ led in my Ancient Shield, so famous through the U‘ niversities of Europe. You all know how I purcha‘ sed that invaluable piece of Antiquity at the great ‘ (though indeed inadequate) expence of all the Plate
 ‘ of our family, how happily I carried it off, and how ‘ triumphantly I transported it hither, to the inexpress-‘ sible grief of all Germany. Happy in every circum‘ stance, but that it broke the heart of the great Mel‘ chior Infipidus!’

Here he stopped his Speech, upon sight of the Maid, who entered the room with the Child: He took it in his arms and proceeded:

‘ Behold then my Child, but first behold the Shield:
 ‘ Behold this Rust,—or rather let me call it this preci‘ ous Ærugo,—behold this beautiful varnish of Time,—
 ‘ this venerable Verdure of so many ages—

In speaking these words, he slowly lifted up the Mantle, which covered it, inch by inch; but at every inch he uncovered, his cheeks grew paler, his hands trembled, his nerves failed, till on sight of the whole, the Tremor became universal: The Shield and the infant both dropt to the ground, and he had only strength enough to cry out, “ O God! my Shield, my “ Shield!”

The truth was, the Maid (extremely concern'd for the reputation of her own cleanliness, and her young master's honour) had scoured it as clean as her Andirons ^k.

Cornelius sunk back on a chair, the Guests stood astonished, the Infant squaul'd, the maid ran in, snatch'd it up again in her arms, flew into her mistress's room, and told what had happen'd. Down stairs in an instant hurried all the Gossips, where they found the Doctor in a Trance: Hungary water, Hartshorn, and the confused noise of shrill voices, at length awaken'd him: when opening his eyes, he saw the Shield in the hands of the House-maid. 'O Woman! Woman! he cry'd (and snatch'd it violently from her) was it to thy ignorance that this Relick owes its ruin? Where, where is the beautiful Crust that covered thee so long? where those Traces of Time, and Fingers as it were of Antiquity? Where all those beautiful obscurities, the cause of much delightful disputation, where doubt and curiosity went hand in hand, and eternally exercised the speculations of the learned? All this the rude Touch of an ignorant Woman hath done away? The curious Prominence at the belly of that figure, which some taking for the Cuspis of a sword, denominated a Roman Soldier; others accounting the Insignia Virilia, pronounced to

^k Poor Vadius, long with learned spleen devour'd,
Can taste no pleasure since his Shield was scour'd.

' be one of the Dii Termini ; behold she hath cleaned it
 ' in like shameful sort, and shewn to be the head of a ' Nail. O my Shield! my Shield! well may I say with
 ' Horace, non bene relicta Parmula.

The Gossips, not at all inquiring into the cause of his sorrow, only asked if the Child had no hurt? and cry'd
 ' Come, come, all is well ; what has the Woman done
 ' but her duty? a tight cleanly wench I warrant her;
 ' what a stir a man makes about a Bason, that an hour
 ' ago, before this labour was bestowed upon it, a Coun' try Barber would not have hung at his shop-door. A
 ' Bason! (cry'd another) no such matter, 'tis nothing
 ' but a paultry old Sconce, with the nozzle broke off.'

The learned Gentlemen, who till now had stood speechless, hereupon looking narrowly on the Shield, declared their Assent to this latter opinion; and desired Cornelius to be comforted, assuring him it was a Sconce, and no other. But this, instead of comforting, threw the Doctor into such a violent Fit of Passion, that he was carried off groaning and speechless to bed; where being quite spent, he fell into a kind of slumber.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Suction and Nutrition of the Great Scriblerus in his Infancy, and of the first Rudiments of his Learning.

AS soon as Cornelius awaked, he raised himself on his elbow, and casting his eye on Mrs Scriblerus, spoke as follows, ‘ Wisely was it said by Homer, that in the Cellar of Jupiter are two barrels, the one of good, the other of evil, which he never bestows on mortals separately, but constantly mingles them together. Thus at the same time hath Heav’n blessed me with the birth of a Son, and afflicted me with the scouring of my Shield. Yet let us not repine at his Dispensations, who gives and who takes away; but rather join in prayer, that the Rust of Antiquity which he hath been pleased to take from my Shield, may be added to my Son; and that so much of it, as it is my purpose he shall contract in his Education, may never be destroyed by any modern polishing.’

He could no longer bear the sight of the Shield, but ordered it should be removed for ever from his eyes.

It was not long after purchas'd by Dr Woodward, who, by the assistance of Mr Kemp, incrusted it with a new Rust, and is the same whereof a Cut hath been engraved, and exhibited to the great Contentation of the learned.

Cornelius now began to regulate the Suction of his child. Seldom did there pass a day without disputes between him and the Mother, or the Nurse, concerning the nature of Aliment. The poor Woman never dined but he denied her some dish or other, which he judged prejudicial to her milk. One day she had a longing desire to a piece of beef, and as she stretched her hand towards it, the old Gentleman drew it away, and spoke to this effect. "Hadst thou read the Ancients, O Nurse, thou
 "would'st prefer the welfare of the Infant which "thou nourishest, to the indulging of an irregular
 "and voracious Appetite. Beef, it is true, may "confer a Robustness on the limbs of my son, but "will hebetate and clog his Intellectuals." While he spoke this, the Nurse looked upon him with much anger, and now and then cast a wishful eye upon the Beef.—"Passion, (continued the Doctor, still holding the dish) throws the mind into too "violent a fermentation; it is a kind of fever of "the soul, or, as Horace expresses it, a short Madness. Consider, Woman, that this day's Suction “ of my son may cause him to imbibe many ungo“ vernable Passions, and in a manner spoil him for “ the temper of a Philosopher. Romulus by suck“ ing a Wolf became of a fierce and savage dispo“ sition ; and were I to breed some Ottoman Em“ peror, or Founder of a Military Commonwealth, “ perhaps I might indulge thee in this carnivorous “ Appetite.”—What, interrupted the Nurse, Beef spoil the understanding? that’s fine indeed—how then could our Parson preach as he does upon Beef, and Pudding too, if you go to that? Don’t tell me of your Ancients, had not you almost killed the poor babe with a dish of Dæmonial black Broth?— “ Lacedemonian black Broth, thou would’st say, “ (replied Cornelius) but I cannot allow the surfeit “ to have been occasioned by that diet, since it was “ recommended by the Divine Lycurgus. No, “ Nurse, thou must certainly have eaten some meats

“ of ill Digestion the day before, and that was the “ real cause of his disorder. Consider, Woman,
“ the different Temperaments of different Nations:
“ What makes the English Phlegmatick and me“ lancholy, but Beef? what renders the Welsh so “ hot and cholerick, but Cheese and Leeks? the “ French derive their levity from their Soups, Frogs,
“ and Mushrooms: I would not let my son dine “ like an Italian, lest like an Italian he should be “ jealous and revengeful: The warm and solid diet
“ of Spain may be more beneficial, as it might en-

“due him with a profound Gravity, but at the “same time he might suck in with their food their “intolerable Vice of Pride. Therefore, Nurse, in “short, I hold it requisite to deny you at present, “not only Beef, but likewise whatsoever any of “those Nations eat.” During this speech, the Nurse remained pouting and marking the plate with the knife, nor would she touch a bit during the whole dinner. This the old Gentleman observing, ordered that the Child, to avoid the risque of imbibing ill humours, should be kept from her breast all that day, and to be fed with Butter mixed with Honey, according to a Prescription he had met with somewhere in Eustathius upon Homer. This indeed gave the Child a great looseness; but he was not concerned at it, in the opinion, that whatever harm it might do his body, would be amply recompensed by the improvements of his understanding. But from thenceforth he insisted every day upon a particular Diet to be observed by the Nurse; under which having been long uneasy, she at last parted from the family, on his ordering her for dinner the Paps of a Sow with Pig; taking it as the highest indignity, and a direct insult upon her Sex and Calling.

Four years of young Martin's life passed away in squabbles of this nature. Mrs Scriblerus considered it was now time to instruct him in the fundamentals of Religion, and to that end took no small pains in teaching him his Catechism. But Cornelius looked upon this as a tedious way of Instruction, and therefore employed his head to find out more pleasing methods, the better to induce him to be fond of learning. He would frequently carry him to the Puppet-show, of the Creation of the world, where the Child with exceeding delight gained a notion of the History of the Bible. His first rudiments in prophane history were acquired by seeing of Rare-shows, where he was brought acquainted with all the Princes of Europe. In short, the old Gentleman so contrived it, to make every thing contribute to the improvement of his knowledge, even to his very Dress. He invented for him a Geographical suit of cloaths, which might give him some hints of that Science, and likewise some knowledge of the Commerce of different Nations. He had a French Hat with an African Feather, Holland Shirts and Flanders Lace, English Cloth lined with Indian Silk, his Gloves were Italian, and his shoes were Spanish: He was made to observe this, and daily catechis'd thereupon, which his father was wont to call "Travelling at home." He never gave him a Fig or an Orange but he obliged him to give an account from what Country it came. In Natural history he was much assisted by his Curiosity in Sign-posts, in so much that he hath often confessed he owed to them the knowledge of many Creatures which he never found since in any Author, such as White Lions, Golden Dragons, &c. He once thought the same of Green Men, but had since found them mentioned by Kercherus, and verified in the History of William of Newbury ¹.

His disposition to the Mathematicks was discovered very early, by his drawing ^m parallel lines on his bread and butter, and intersecting them at equal Angles, so as to form the whole Superficies into Squares. But in the midst of all these improvements, a stop was put to his learning the Alphabet, nor would he let him proceed to Letter D, till he could truly and distinctly pronounce C in the ancient manner; at which the Child unhappily boggled for near three months. He was also obliged to delay his learning to write, having turned away the Writing Master because he knew nothing of Fabius's Waxed Tables.

Cornelius having read, and seriously weighed the methods by which the famous Montagne was educated, and resolved in some degree to exceed them, resolved he should speak and learn nothing but the learned Languages, and especially the Greek; in which he constantly eat and drank, according to Homer. But what most conduced to his easy attainment of this language, was his love of Ginger-bread; which his father serving, caused it to be stamp't with the letters of the Greek Alphabet; and the Child the very first day eat as far as Iota. By his particular application to this language above the rest, he attained so great a proficiencie therein, that Gronovious ingeniously confesses he durst not confer with this child in Greek at eight years old, and at fourteen he composed a Tragedy in the same language, as the younger P Pliny had done before him.

¹ Gul. Neubrig. Book i. ch. 27.

^m Pascal's life—Locke of Educat. etc.

He learned the Oriental Languages of Erpenius, who resided some time with his father for that purpose. He had so early a Relish for the eastern way of writing, that even at this time he composed (in imitation of it) the Thousand and one Arabian Tales, and also the Persian Tales, which have been since translated into several languages, and lately into our own with particular elegance, by Mr Ambrose Philips. In this work of his Childhood, he was not a little assisted by the historical Traditions of his Nurse.

P Plin. Epist. Lib. 7.

C H A P. V.

A Dissertation upon Play-things.

HERE follow the Instructions of Cornelius Scriblerus concerning the Plays and Play-things to be used by his son Martin.

“ Play was invented by the Lydians as a remedy “ against Hunger. Sophocles says of Palamedes, that “ he invented Dice to serve sometimes instead of a “ Dinner. It is therefore wisely contrived by “ Nature, that Children, as they have the keenest “ Appetites, are most addicted to Plays. From the “ same cause, and from the unprejudiced and incor“ rupt simplicity of their minds it proceeds, that the “ Plays of the Ancient Children are preserved more “ entire than any other of their Customs. In this “ matter I would recommend to all who have any “ concern in my Son’s Education, that they deviate “ not in the least from the primitive and simple “ Antiquity.

“ To speak first of the Whistle, as it is the first of “ all Play-things. I will have it exactly to corres-
 VOL. IV. F

spond with the ancient Fistula, and accordingly to be composed septem paribus disjuncta cicutis.

“ I heartily wish a diligent search may be made “ after the true Crepitaculum, or Rattle of the An“ cients, for that (as Archytas Tarentinus was of o“ pinion) kept the Children from breaking Earthen “ Ware. The China cups in these days are not at “ all the safer for the modern Rattles; which is “ an evident proof how far their Crepitacula ex“ ceeded ours.

“ I would not have Martin as yet to scourge a “ Top, till I am better informed whether the Tro- “ chus which was recommended by Cato be really “ our present Top, or rather the Hoop which the “ boys drive with a stick. Neither Cross and Pile, “ nor Ducks and Drakes, are quite so ancient as “ Handy-dandy, tho’ Macrobius and St Augustine
 “ take notice of the first, and Minutius Fœlix de“ scribes the latter; but Handy-dandy is mentioned
 “ by Aristotle, Plato, and Aristophanes.

“ The Play which the Italians call Cinque, and “ the French Mourre, is extremely ancient; it was “ played at by Hymen and Cupid at the Marriage of “ Psyche, and termed by the Latins, digitis micare.

“ Julius Pollux describes the Omilla or Chuckfar- “ thing: tho’ some will have our modern Chuckfar-

“ thing to be nearer the Alphetinda of the Anci“ ents. He also mentions the Basilinda, or King
 “ I am; and Myinda, or Hoopers-Hide.

“ But the Chytrindra described by the same Au“ thor is certainly not our Hot-cockle; for that was “ by pinching and not by striking; tho’ there are “ good authors who affirm the Rathapygismus to be “ yet nearer the modern Hot-cockles. My son Mar“ tin may use either of them indifferently, they be“ ing equally antique.

“ Building of Houses, and Riding upon Sticks have “ been used by children in all ages, Ædificare casas, “ equitare in arundine longa. Yet I much doubt whe“ ther the riding upon Sticks did not come into use
 “ after the age of the *Centaur*s.

“ There is one Play which shews the gravity of “ ancient Education, called the Acinetinda, in which “ children contended who could longest stand still.
 “ This we have suffered to perish entirely; and, if “ I might be allowed to guess, it was certainly first “ lost among the French.

“ I will permit my Son to play at Apodidas- “ cinda, which can be no other than our Fuss in a “ Corner.

“ Julius Pollux in his ninth book speaks of the “ Melolonthæ or the Kite; but I question whether “ the Kite of Antiquity was the same with ours;
 “ And though the Optuloxonia or Quail-fighting is “ what is most taken notice of, they had doubtless “ Cock matches also, as is evident from certain ancient “ Gems and Relievo's.

“ In a word, let my son Martin disport himself “ at any Game truly Antique, except one, which “ was invented by a people among the Thracians,
 “ who hung up one of their Companions in a Rope,
 “ and gave him a Knife to cut himself down; which “ if he failed in, he was suffered to hang till he “ was dead; and this was only reckoned a sort of “ joke. I am utterly against this, as barbarous
 “ and cruel.

“ I cannot conclude, without taking notice of the “ beauty of the Greek names, whose Etymologies “ acquaint us with the nature of the sports; and “ how infinitely, both in sense and sound, they excel
 “ our barbarous names of Plays.”

Notwithstanding the forgoing injunctions of Dr
 Cornelius, he yet condescended to allow the Child the use of some few modern Play-things; such as might prove of any benefit to his mind, by instilling an early notion of the sciences. For example, he found that Marbles taught him Percussion and the Laws of Motion; Nut-crackers the use of the Leaver; Swinging on the ends of a Board, the Balance; Bottle-screws, the Vice; Whirligigs, the Axis and Peritrochia; Bird-cages, the Pully; and Tops the Centrifugal motion.

Others of his sports were farther carried to improve his tender soul even in Virtue and Morality. We shall only instance one of the most useful and instructive, Bob-cherry, which teaches at once two noble Virtues, Patience and Constancy; the first in adhering to the pursuit of one end, the latter in bearing a disappointment.

Besides all these, he taught him as a diversion, an odd and secret manner of Stealing, according to the Custom of the Lacedemonians; wherein he succeeded so well, that he practised it to the day of his death.

C H A P. VI.

Of the Gymnaſticks, in what Exercises Martinus was educated; ſomething concerning Muſic; and what ſort of a Man his Uncle was.

NOR was Cornelius leſs careful in adhering to the rules of the pureſt Antiquity, in relation to the Exerciſes of his Son. He was ſtript, powder'd, and anointed, but not conſtantly bath'd, which occaſioned many heavy complaints of the Landreſs about dirtying his linen. When he played at Quoits, he was allowed his Breeches and Stockings; becauſe the Diſcoboli (as Cornelius well new) were naked to the middle only. The Mother often contended for modern Sports, and common Cuſtoms; but this was his conſtant reply, “ Let a Daughter be the care of her Mother, but the Education of a Son ſhould be the delight of his Father.”

It was about this time, he heard, to his exceeding content, the Harpallus of the Ancients was yet in uſe in Cornwall, and known there by the name of Hurling.

He was sensible the common Foot-ball was a very imperfect imitation of that exercise; and thought it necessary to send Martin into the West, to be initiated in that truly ancient and manly part of the Gymnastics. The poor boy was so unfortunate as to return with a broken leg. This Cornelius looked upon but as a slight ailment, and promised his Mother he would instantly cure it: He slit a green Reed, and cast the Knife upward, then tying the two parts of the Reed to the disjointed place, pronounced these words ^r, “Daries, daries, astataries dissunapiter; huat, hanat, huat, ista, pista fista, domi abo, damnaustra.” But finding, to his no small astonishment, that this had no effect, in five days he condescended to have it set by a modern Surgeon.

Mrs Scriblerus, to prevent him from exposing her son to the like dangerous Exercises for the future, proposed to send for a Dancing-Master, and to have him taught the Minuet and Rigadoon. “Dancing (quoth Cornelius) I must approve, for Socrates said the best “Dancers were the best Warriors; but not those “species of Dancing which you mention: They are “certainly Corruptions of the Comic and Satyric “Dance, which were utterly disliked by the founder “Ancients. Martin shall learn the Tragic Dance

^r Plin. Hist. Nat. lib. xvii. in fine. Carmen contra luxata membra, cujus verba inferere non equidem serio ausim, quamquam a Catone prodita. Vid. Caton. de re rust. c. 160.

“only, and I will send all over Europe, till I find an “Antiquary able to instruct him in the Saltatio “Pyrrhica. * Scaliger, from whom my Son is line-“ally descended, boasts to have performed this war“like Dance in the presence of the Emperor, to the “great admiration of all Germany. What would he “say could he look down and see one of his posterity
 “so ignorant, as not to know the least step of that “noble kind of Saltation?”

The poor Lady was at last enur'd to bear all these things with a laudable patience, till one day her husband was seized with a new thought. He had met with a saying, that “Spleen, Garter, and Girdle, are the three impediments to the Cursus.” Therefore Pliny (lib. xi. cap. 37.) says, that such as excel in that exercise have their Spleen cauterized, “My son “(quoth Cornelius) runs but heavily; therefore I “will have this operation performed upon him immediately. Moreover, it will cure that immoderate “Laughter to which I perceive he is addicted: For “Laughter (as the same author hath it, ibid.) is caused by the bigness of the Spleen.” This design was no sooner hinted to Mrs Scriblerus, but she burst into

s Scalig. Poetic. l. x. c. 9. Hanc saltationem Pyrrhicam, nos sæpe et diu, jussu Bonifacii patruī, coram Divo Maximiliano, non sine stupore totius Germaniæ, repræsentavimus. Quo tempore vox illa Imperatoris, Hic puer aut thoracem pro pelle aut pro cunis habuit.

tears, wrung her hands, and instantly sent to his Brother Albertus, begging him for the love of God to make haste to her Husband.

Albertus was a discreet man, sober in his opinions, clear of Pedantry, and knowing enough both in Books and in the World, to preserve a due regard for whatever was useful or excellent, whether ancient or modern: If he had not always the authority, he had at least the art, to divert Cornelius from many extravagancies. It was well he came speedily, or Martin could not have boasted the entire Quota of his Viscera. “What does it signify (quoth Albertus) whether my Nephew excels in the “Cursus or not? Speed is often a Symptom of “Cowardice; witness Hares and Deer.—Do not “forget Achilles (quoth Cornelius) I know that “Running has been condemned by the proud Spartans, as useless in war; and yet Demosthenes “could say. Ἄνθρωπος ὁ φεύγων ἔτι πάλιν μαχήσεται; “a thought which the English Hudibras has well “rendered,

*For he that runs may fight again,
Which he can never do that's slain.*

“That's true (quoth Albertus) but pray consider “on the other side, that Animals t spleened grow

VOL. IV.

G

t Blackmore's Essay on Spleen.

“ extremely falacious, an experiment well known “ in dogs. Cornelius was struck with this, and “ replied gravely; If it be so, I will defer the “ Operation, for I will not encrease the powers of “ my son's body at the expence of those of his “ mind. I am indeed disappointed in most of my “ projects, and fear I must sit down at last con“ tented with such methods of Education as mo“ dern barbarity affords. Happy had it been for “ us all, had we lived in the age of Augustus!
 “ Then my Son might have heard the Philosophers “ dispute in the Porticos of the Palæstra, and at “ the same time formed his Body and his Under“ standing.” “ It is true (reply'd Albertus) we “ have no Exedra for the Philosophers, adjoining
 “ to our Tennis Courts; but there are Ale-houses “ where he will hear very notable argumenta-“ tions: Tho' we come not up to the Ancients in “ the Tragic-dance, we excel them in the xu-“ six, or the art of Tumbling. The Ancients “ would have beat us at Quoits, but not so much
 “ at the Jaculum or pitching the Bar. The u Pu“ gilatus is in as great perfection in England as in “ old Rome, and the Cornish-Hug in the w Lucus
 “ is equal to the volutatoria of the Ancients.”
 “ You could not (answered Cornelius) have pro“ duced a more unlucky instance of modern folly

“ and barbarity, than what you say of the Jacu- “ lum. * The Cretans wisely forbid their servants “ Gymnasticks, as well as Arms; and yet your “ modern Footmen exercise themselves daily in “ the Jaculum at the corner of Hyde-park, whilst “ their enervated Lords are lolling in their chariots, “ a species of Vestigation seldom us’d amongst “ the Ancients, except by old Men. You say “ well (quoth Albertus) and we have several other “ kinds of Vestigation unknown to the Ancients; “ particularly flying Chariots, where the people
 “ may have the benefit of this exercise at the small “ expence of a farthing. But suppose (which I “ readily grant) that the Ancients excelled us almost “ in every thing, yet why this singularity? your son “ must take up with such masters as the present age “ affords; we have Dancing-masters, Writing-“ masters and Musick-masters.

The bare mention of Musick threw Cornelius into a passion. “ How can you dignify (quoth he) this “ modern fidling with the name of Musick? Will “ any of your best Hautboys encounter a Wolf
 “ now a-days with no other arms but their instru“ ments, as did that ancient piper Pythocaris? Have “ ever wild Boars, Elephants, Deer, Dolphins, “ Whales or Turbots, shew’d the least emotion at
 “ the most elaborate strains of your modern Sca-

* Aristot. politic. lib. ii. cap. 3.

“pers, all which have been, as it were, tamed and “humanized by ancient Musicians? Does not ^y “Ælian tell how the Lybian Mares were excited “to hoising by Musick: (which ought in truth to “be a caution to modest Women against frequenting “Operas; and consider, Brother, you are brought “to this dilemma, either to give up the virtue “of the Ladies, or the power of your Musick:)
 “Whence proceeds the degeneracy of our Morals!
 “Is it not from the loss of ancient Musick, by “which (says Aristotle) they taught all the Virtues?
 “Else might we turn Newgate into a College of “Dorian Musicians, who should teach moral Vir“tues to those people. Whence comes it that our “present diseases are so stubborn? whence is it that “I daily deplore my sciatick pains? Alas! because “we have lost their true cure, by the melody of “the Pipe. All this was well known to the Ancients,
 “as ^z Theophrastu, assures us, (whence ^a Cælius “calls it loca dolentia decantare) only indeed some “small remains of this skill are preserved in the “cure of the Tarantula. Did not ^b Pythagoras “stop a company of drunken Bullies from storming a “civil house, by changing the strain of the Pipe to “the sober Spondæus? and yet your modern Musi“cians want art to defend their windows from com-

^y Ælian Hist. Animal. lib. xi. cap. 18. and lib. xii. cap. 44.

^z Athenæus, lib. xiv.

^a Lib. de sanitate tuenda

cap. 2.

^b Quintilian. lib. i. cap. 10.

“ mon Nickers. It is well known that when the “ Lacedæmonian Mob were up, they ^c commonly “ sent for a Lesbian Musician to appease them, and “ they immedianelly grew calm as soon as they heard “ Terpander sing: Yet I don’t believe that the “ Pope’s whole band of Musick, though the best “ of this age, could keep his Holiness’s Image from “ being burnt on a fifth of November. Nor “ would Terpander himself (replied Albertus) at “ Billingsgate, nor Timotheus at Hockley in the “ Hole, have any manner of effect, nor both of “ them together bring ^d Horneck to common civi“ lity.” “ That’s a gross mistake (said Cornelius “ very warmly); and to prove it so, I have here a “ small Lyra of my own, framed, strung and tun’d
 “ after the ancient manner. I can play some frag“ ments of Lesbian tunes, and I wish I were to try “ them upon the most passionate creatures alive.”
 —“ You never had a better opportunity (says “ Albertus) for yonder are two Apple-women scold“ ing, and just ready to uncoil one another.”
 With that Cornelius, undressed as he was, jumps out into his Balcony, his Lyra in hand in his slippers, with his breeches hanging down to his ancles, a stocking upon his head, and a waistcoat of murreycoloured satin upon his body: He touched his Lyra with a very unusual sort of an Harpegiatura, nor were

^c Suidas in Timotheo.

^d Horneck, a scurrilous Scribler: who wrote a weekly paper, called the High German Doctor.

his hopes frustrated. The odd Equipage, the uncouth Instrument, the strangeness of the Man and of the Musick, drew the ears and eyes of the whole Mob that were got about the two female Champions, and at last of the Combatants themselves. They all approach'd the Balcony, in as close attention as Orpheus's first Audience of Cattle, or that of an Italian Opera, when some favourite Air is just awakened. This sudden effect of his Music encouraged him mightily, and it was observed he never touch'd his Lyre in such a truly chromatic and enharmonic manner as upon that occasion. The mob laughed, sung, jumped, danced, and used many odd gestures, all which he judged to be caused by the various strains and modulations. "Mark (quoth he) in this, the power of the Ionian, "in that, you see the effect of the Æolian." But in a little time they began to grow riotous, and threw stones: Cornelius then withdrew, but with the greatest air of triumph in the world. "Brother (said he) "do you observe I have mixed unawares too "much of the Phrygian; I might change it to the "Lydian, and soften their riotous tempers: But it is "enough: Learn from this Sample to speak with veneration of ancient Music. If this Lyre, in "my unskilful hands, can perform such wonders, "what must it not have done in those of a Timotheus or a Terpander?" Having said this, he retired with the utmost Exultation in himself, and Contempt of his Brother; and, it is said, behaved that night with such unusual haughtiness to his family, that they had all reason to wish for some ancient Tibicen to calm his Temper.

C H A P. VII.

Rhetoric, Logic, and Metaphysics.

Cornelius having (as hath been said) many ways been disappointed in his attempts of improving the bodily Forces of his son, thought it now high time to apply to the Culture of his Internal faculties. He judged it proper in the first place to instruct him in Rhetoric. But herein we shall not need to give the Reader any account of his wonderful progress, since it is already known to the learned world by his Treatise on this subject: I mean the admirable Discourse Περὶ Βαθύς, which he wrote at this time, but concealed from his Father, knowing his extreme partiality for the Ancients. It lay by him concealed, and perhaps forgot among the great multiplicity of other Writings, till, about the year 1727, he sent it us to be printed, with many additional examples drawn from the excellent live Poets of this present age. We proceed therefore to Logic and Metaphysics.

The wise Cornelius was convinced, that these being Polemical Arts, could no more be learned alone, than Fencing or Cudgel-playing. He thought it therefore necessary to look out for some Youth of pregnant parts, to be a sort of humble Companion to his son in those studies. His good fortune directed him to one of the most singular endowments, whose name was Conradus Crambe, who by the father's side was related to the Crouches of Cambridge, and his Mother was Cousin to Mr Swan, Gamester and Punster of the City of London. So that from both parents he drew a natural disposition to sport himself with Words, which, as they are said to be the counters of wise Men, and ready money of Fools, Crambe had great store of cash of the latter sort. Happy Martin in such a Parent and such a Companion! What might not he atchieve in Arts and Sciences!

Here I must premise a general observation of great benefit to mankind. That there are many people who have the use only of one Operation of the Intellect, though, like short-sighted men, they can hardly discover it themselves; they can form single apprehensions, but have neither of the other two faculties, the judicium or discursus. Now, as it is wisely ordered, that people deprived of one sense have the others in more perfection, such people will form single Ideas with a great deal of vivacity; and happy were it indeed if they would confine themselves to such, without forming judicia, much less argumentations.

Cornelius quickly discovered, that these two last operations of the intellect were very weak in Martin, and almost totally extinguished in Crambe; however, he used to say, that Rules of Logic are Spectacles to a purblind understanding, and therefore he resolved to proceed with his two Pupils.

Martin's understanding was so totally immersed in sensible objects, that he demanded examples from Material things of the abstracted Ideas of Logic: As for Crambe, he contented himself with the Words, and when he could but form some conceit upon them, was fully satisfied. Thus Crambe would tell his Instructor, that All men were not singular; that Individuality could hardly be prædicated of any man, for it was commonly said that a man is not the same he was, that madmen are beside themselves, and drunken men come to themselves; which shows, that few men have that most valuable logical endowment, Individuality. Cornelius told Martin, that a shoulder of mutton was an Individual; which Crambe denied, for he had seen it cut into commons: That's true (quoth the Tutor) but you never saw it cut into Shoulders of mutton: If it could (quoth Crambe) it would be the most lovely individual of the University. When he was told, a substance was that which was subject to accidents; then Soldiers (quoth Crambe) are the most substantial people in the world. Neither would he allow it to be a good definition of accident, that it could be “present or absent without the destruction of the “subject;” since there are a great many accidents that destroy the subject, as burning does a house, and death a man. But as to that, Cornelius informed him, that there was a natural death, and a logical death; that though a man after his natural death was not capable of the least parish-office, yet he might still keep his Stall amongst the logical prædica-ments.

Cornelius was forced to give Martin sensible images; thus calling up the Coachman he asked him what he had seen at the Bear Garden? The man answered, he saw two men fight a prize; one was a fair man, a Sergeant in the Guards; the other black, a Butcher; the Sergeant had red Breeches, the Butcher blue; they fought upon a Stage about four o’ Clock, and the Sergeant wounded the Butcher in the leg. “Mark (quoth Cornelius) how the fellow runs “through the prædicaments. Men, substantia; two “quantitas; fair and black, qualitas; Sergeant and “Butcher, relatio; wounded the other, actio et passio;
 “fighting, situs; Stage, ubi; four o’Clock, quando;
 “blue and red Breeches, habitus.” At the same time, he warned Martin, that what he now learn’d as a Logician, he must forget as a natural Philosopher;
 that tho’ he now taught them that accidents inhered in the subject, they would find in time there was no such thing; and that colour, taste, smell, heat, and cold, were not in the things, but only phantasms of our brains. He was forced to let them into this secret; for Martin could not conceive how a habit of dancing inhered in a dancing master, when he did not dance; nay, he would demand the Characteristicks of Relations: Crambe used to help him out, by telling him, a Cuckold, a losing gamester, a man that had not dined, a young heir that was kept short by his father, might be all known by their countenance; that, in this last case, the Paternity and Filiation leave very sensible impressions in the relatum and correlatum. The greatest difficulty was when they came to the Tenth prædicament: Crambe affirmed that his habitus was more a substance than he was; for his cloaths could better subsist without him, than he without his cloaths.

Martin supposed an Universal Man to be like a Knight of a Shire, or a Burgess of a Corporation, that represented a great many Individuals. His Father asked him, if he could not frame the Idea of an Universal Lord Mayor? Martin told him, that, never having seen but one Lord Mayor, the Idea of that Lord Mayor always returned to his mind; that he had great difficulty to abstract a Lord Mayor from his Fur, Gown, and Gold Chain; nay, that the horse he saw the Lord Mayor ride upon not a little disturbed his imagination. On the other hand, Crambe, to shew himself of a more penetrating genius, swore that he could frame a conception of a Lord Mayor not only without his Horse, Gown, and Gold Chain, but even without Stature, Feature, Colour, Hands, Head, Feet or any Body; which he supposed was the abstract of a Lord Mayor. Cornelius told him that he was a lying Rascal; that an Universale was not the object of imagination, and that there was no such thing in reality or a parte Rei. But I can prove (quoth Crambe) that there are Clysters a parte Rei but Clysters are universales; ergo. Thus I prove my Minor. Quod aptum est inesse multis, is an universale by definition: but every clyster before it is administred has that quality; therefore every clyster is an universale.

He also found fault with the Advertisements, that they were not strict logical definitions: In an advertisement of a Dog stoln or strayed, he said it ought to begin thus, An irrational animal of the Genus caninum, &c. Cornelius told them, that tho' those advertisements were not framed according to the exact rules of logical definitions, being only descriptions of things numero differentibus, yet they contained a faint image of the prædicabilia, and were highly subservient to the common purposes of life; often discovering things that were lost, both animate and inanimate. An Italian Greyhound, of a mouse-colour, a white speck in the neck, lame of one leg, belongs to such a Lady. Greyhound, genus; mouse-coloured, etc. differentia; lame of one leg, accidens; belongs to such a Lady, proprium.

Though I'm afraid I have transgressed upon my Reader's patience already, I cannot help taking notice of one thing more extraordinary than any yet mentioned; which was Crambe's Treatise of Syllogisms. He supposed that a Philosopher's brain was like a great Forest, where Ideas ranged like animals of several kinds; that those Ideas copulated, and engendered Conclusions; that when those of different Species copulate, they bring forth monsters or absurdities; that the Major is the male, the Minor the female, which copulate by the Middle Term, and engender the Conclusion. Hence they are called the præmissa, or Predecessors of the Conclusion; and it is properly said by the Logicians, quod pariant scientiam, opinionem, they beget science, opinion, etc. Universal Propositions are persons of quality; and therefore in Logick they are said to be of the first Figure. Singular Propositions are private persons, and therefore placed in the third or last figure, or rank. From those principles all the rules of Syllogisms naturally follow.

- I. That there are only three Terms, neither more nor less; for to a child there can be only one father and one mother.
- II. From universal premisses there follows an universal conclusion, as if one should say, that persons of quality always beget persons of quality.

- III. From the singular premisses follows only a singular conclusion, that is, if the parents be only private people, the issue must be so likewise.
- IV. From particular propositions nothing can be concluded, because the Individua vaga are (like whoremasters and common strumpets) barren.
- V. There cannot be more in the conclusion than was in the premisses, that is, children can only inherit from their parents.
- VI. The conclusion follows the weaker part, that is children inherit the diseases of their parents.
- VII. From two negatives nothing can be concluded, for from divorce or separation there can come no issue.
- VIII. The medium cannot enter the conclusion, that being logical incest.
- IX. An hypothetical proposition is only a contract, or a promise of marriage; from such therefore there can spring no real issue.
- X. When the premisses or parents are necessarily join'd (or in lawful wedlock) they beget lawful Issue; but contingently joined, they beget bastards,

So much for the Affirmative propositions; the Negative must be deferred to another occasion.

Crambe used to value himself upon this System, from whence he said one might see the propriety of the expression, such a one has a barren imagination; and how common is it for such people to adopt conclusions that are not the issue of their premisses? therefore, as an Absurdity is a Monster, a Falsity is a Bastard; and a true conclusion that followeth not from the premisses, may properly be said to be adopted. But then what is an Enthymem? (quoth Cornelius.) Why, an Enthymem (replied Crambe) is when the Major is indeed married to the Minor, but the Marriage kept secret.

METAPHYSICKS were a large field in which to exercise the Weapons Logick had put into their hands. Here Martin and Crambe used to engage like any Prize-fighters, before their Father, and his other learned companions of the Symposiacks. And as Prize-fighters will agree to lay aside a buckler, or some such defensive weapon, so would Crambe promise not to use simpliciter et secundum quid, provided Martin would part with materialiter et formaliter: But it was found that without the help of the defensive armour of those distinctions, the arguments cut so deep, that they fetched blood at every stroke. Their Theses were picked out of Suarez, Thomas Aquinas, and other learned writers on those subjects. I shall give the reader a taste of some of them.

- I. If the Innate Desire of the knowledge of Metaphysics was the cause of the Fall of Adam ; and the Arbor porphyriana, the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil ? affirmed.
- II. If transcendental goodness could be truly predicated of the Devil ? affirmed.
- III. Whether one, or many be first ? or if one doth not suppose the notion of many ? Suarez.
- IV. If the desire of News in Mankind be appetitus innatus, not elicitus ? affirmed.
- V. Whether there is in human understandings potential falsities ? affirmed.
- VI. Whether God loves a possible Angel better than an actually existent flye ? denied.
- VII. If Angels pass from one extreme to another without going through the middle ? Aquinas.
- VIII. If Angels know things more clearly in a morning ? Aquinas.
- IX. Whether every Angel hears what one Angel says to another ? denied. Aquinas.
- X. If temptation be proprium quarto modo of the Devil ? denied. Aquinas.
- XI. Whether one Devil can illuminate another ? Aquinas.
- XII. If there would have been any females born in the state of Innocence ? Aquinas.
- XIII. If the Creation was finished in six days, because six is the most perfect number ; or if six be the most perfect number, because the Creation was finished in six days? Aquinas.

There were several others, of which in the course of the life of this learned person we may have occasion to treat: and one particularly that remains undecided to this day; it was taken from the learned Suarez.

XIV. An præter esse reale actualis essentiae sit aliud esse necessarium quo res actualiter existat? In English thus. Whether, besides the real being of actual being, there be any other being necessary to cause a thing to be?

This brings into my mind a Project to banish Metaphysics out of Spain, which it was supposed might be effectuated by this method: That nobody should use any Compound or Decomposition of the Substantial Verbs but as they are read in the common conjugations; for every body will allow, that if you debar a Metaphysician from ens, essentia, entitas, subsistentia, &c. there is an end of him.

Crambe regretted extremely, that Substantial Forms, a race of harmless beings which had lasted for many years, and afforded a comfortable subsistence to many poor Philosophers, should be now hunted down like so many Wolves, without the possibility of a retreat. He considered that it had gone much harder with them than with Essences, which had retired from the Schools into the Apothecaries Shops, where some of them had been advanced into the degree of Quintessences. He thought there should be a retreat for poor substantial forms, amongst the Gentlemen-ushers at court; and that there were indeed substantial forms, such as forms of Prayer, and forms of Government, without which the things themselves could never long subsist. He also used to wonder that there was not a reward for such as could find out a fourth Figure in Logic, as well as for those who should discover the Longitude.

C H A P. VIII.

A N A T O M Y.

Cornelius, it is certain, had a most superstitious veneration for the Ancients; and if they contradicted each other, his Reason was so pliant and ductile, that he was always of the opinion of the last he read. But he reckoned it a point of honour never to be vanquished in a dispute; from which quality he acquired the Title of the Invincible Doctor. While the Professor of Anatomy was demonstrating to his son the several kinds of Intestines, Cornelius affirm'd that there were only two, the Colon and the Aichos, according to Hippocrates, who it was impossible could ever be mistaken. It was in vain to assure him this error proceeded from want of accuracy in dividing the whole Canal of the Guts: Say what you please (he replied) this is both mine and Hippocrates's opinion. You may with equal reason (answered the Professor) affirm, that a man's Liver hath five Lobes, and deny the Circulation of the blood. Ocular demonstration (said Cornelius) seems to be on your side, yet I shall not give it up: Show me any viscus of a human body, and I will bring you a monster that differs from the common rule in the structure of it. If Nature shews such variety in the same age, why may she not have extended it further in several ages? Produce me a man now of the age of an Antediluvian, of the strength of Samson, or the Size of the Giants. If in the whole, why not in parts of the body, may it not be possible the present generation of men may differ from the Ancients? The Moderns have perhaps lengthened the channel of the guts by Gluttony, and diminished the Liver by hard drinking. Though it shall be demonstrated that modern blood circulates, yet I will believe with Hippocrates, that the blood of the Ancients had a flux and reflux from the heart, like a Tide. Consider how Luxury hath introduced new diseases, and with them not improbably altered the whole course of the Fluids. Consider how the current of mighty Rivers, nay the very channels of the Ocean are changed from what they were in ancient days; and can we be so vain to imagine that the Microcosm of the human body alone is exempted from the fate of all things? I question not but plausible Conjectures may be made even as to the Time when the blood first began to circulate.—Such disputes as these frequently perplexed the Professor to that degree, that he would now and then in a passion leave him in the middle of a Lecture, as he did at this time

There unfortunately happened soon after, an unusual accident, which retarded the prosecution of the studies of Martin. Having purchased the body of a Malefactor, he hir'd a room for its dissection near the Pest-fields in St Giles's, at a little distance from Tyburn Road. Crambe (to whose care this body was committed) carried it thither about twelve o'clock at night in a Hackney-coach, few House-keepers being very willing to let their lodgings to such kind of Operators. As he was softly stalking up stairs in the dark, with the dead man in his arms, his burthen had like to have slipped from him, which he (to save from falling) grasp'd so hard about the belly, that it forced the wind through the Anus, with a noise exactly like the Crepitus of a living man. Crambe (who did not comprehend how this part of the Animal Oeconomy could remain in a dead man) was so terrified, that he threw down the body, ran up to his master, and had scarce breath to tell him what had happened. Martin with all his philosophy could not prevail upon him to return to his post. — You may say what you please (quoth Crambe) no man alive ever broke wind more naturally; nay, he seemed to be mightily relieved by it. — The rolling of the corpse down stairs made such a noise, that it awaked the whole house. The maid shrieked, the landlady cried out Thieves; but the Landlord, in his shirt as he was, taking a candle in one hand, and a drawn sword in the other, ventured out of the Room. The maid with only a single petticoat ran up stairs, but spurning at the dead body, fell upon it in a swoon. Now the landlord stood still and listen'd; then he looked behind him, and ventured down in this manner one stair after another, till he came where lay his maid, as dead, upon another corpse unknown. The wife ran into the street and cry'd out murder; the watch ran in, while Martin and Crambe, hearing all this uproar, were coming down stairs. The Watch imagined they were making their escape, seized them immediately, and carried them to a neighbouring Justice: where, upon searching them, several kind of knives and dreadful weapons were found upon them. The Justice first examined Crambe.—What is your Name? says the Justice. I have acquired (quoth Crambe) no great Name as yet; they call me Crambe or Crambo, no matter which, as to myself, though it may be some dispute to posterity.—What is yours and your Master's profession? “It is our business to imbrue our hands in blood; we cut off the heads, and pull out the hearts of those that never injured us; we rip up big-belly'd women, and tear children limb from limb.” Martin endeavoured to interrupt him; but the Justice, being strangely astonished with the frankness of Crambe's Confession, ordered him to proceed; upon which he made the following Speech.

“May it please your Worship, as touching the body of this man, I can answer each head that my accu“fers alledge against me to a hair. They have hi“therto talk’d like num-sculs without brains; but if “your Worship will not only give ear, but regard me

“with a favourable eye, I will not be brow-beaten “with the supercilious looks of my adversaries, who “now stand cheek by jowl by your Worship. I will “prove to their faces, that their foul mouths have “not opened their lips without a falsity; tho’ they “have showed their teeth as if they would bite off my “nose. Now, Sir, that I may fairly flip my neck “out of the collar, I beg this matter may not be “slightly skined over. Tho’ I have no man here to “back me, I will unbosom my self, since Truth is on “my side, and shall give them their bellies-full, tho’
“they think they have me upon the hip. Whereas “they say I came into their lodgings, with arms,
“and murdered this man without their Privy, I de“clare I had not the least finger in it; and since I am
“to stand upon my own legs, nothing of this matter “shall be left till I set it upon a right foot. In the “vein I am in, I cannot for my heart’s blood and “guts bear this usage: I shall not spare my lungs to “defend my good name: I was ever reckoned a “good liver; and I think I have the bowels of com“passion. I ask but justice, and from the crown of “my head to the soal of my foot I shall ever ac“knowledge myself your Worship’s humble Ser“vant.”

The Justice stared, the Landlord and Landlady lifted up their eyes, and Martin fretted, while Crambe talked in this rambling incoherent manner: till at length Martin begged to be heard. It was with great difficulty that the Justice was convinced, till they sent for the Finisher of human laws, of whom the Corpse had been purchased; who looking near the left ear, knew his own work, and gave oath accordingly.

No sooner was Martin got home, but he fell into a passion at Crambe. "What Dæmon, he cried, hath possessed thee, that thou wilt never forsake that impertinent custom of punning? Neither my counsel nor my example have thus misled thee; thou go verneest thyself by most erroneous Maxims." Far from it (answers Crambe) my life is as orderly as my Dictionary, for by my Dictionary I order my life. I have made a Kalender of radical words for all the seasons, months, and days of the year: Every day I am under the dominion of a certain Word: but this day in particular I cannot be misled, for I am governed by one that rules all sexes, ages, conditions, nay all animals rational and irrational. Who is not governed by the word Led? Our Noblemen and Drunkards are pimp-led, Physicians and Pulses fee-led, their Patients and Oranges pil-led, a new married Man and an Ass are bride-led, an old married Man and a Pack-horse are sad-led, Cats and Dice are rat-led, Swine and Nobility are Sty-led, a Coquet and a Tinder-box are spark-led, a Lover and a Blunderer are grove-led. And that I may not be tedious——Which thou art (replied Martin, stamping with his foot) which thou art, I say, beyond all human toleration. Such an unnatural, unaccountable, uncoherent, unintelligible, unprofitable——There it is now! (interrupted Crambe) this is your Day for Uns. Martin could bear no longer——however, composing his Countenance, Come hither, he cried, there are five pounds, seventeen shillings and nine-pence: thou hast been with me eight months, three weeks, two days, and four hours. Poor Crambe, upon the receipt of his Salary, fell into tears, flung the money upon the ground, and burst forth in these words:——O Cicero, Cicero! if to pun be a crime, 'tis a crime I have learned from thee: O Bias, Bias! if to pun be a crime, by thy example was I bias'd.——Whereupon Martin (considering that one of the greatest of Orators, and even a Sage of Greece had punned) hesitated, relented, and reinstated Crambe in his Service.

C H A P. IX.

How Martin became a great Critick.

IT was a most peculiar Talent in Martinus, to convert every trifle into a serious thing, either in the way of Life, or in Learning. This can no way be better exemplified, than in the effect which the Puns of Crambe had on the Mind and Studies of Martinus. He conceived, that somewhat of a like Talent to this of Crambe, of assembling parallel sounds, either syllables, or words, might conduce to the Emendation and Correction of Ancient Authors, if applied to their Works, with the same Diligence, and the same Liberty. He resolved to try first upon Virgil, Horace, and Terence; concluding, that, if the most correct Authors could be so served with any reputation to the Critick, the amendment and alteration of all the rest would easily follow; whereby a new, a vast, nay boundless Field of Glory would be opened to the true and absolute Critick.

This Specimen on Virgil he has given us, in the Addenda to his Notes on the Dunciad. His Terence and Horace are in every body's hands, under the names of Richard B——ley, and Francis H——re. And we have convincing proofs that the late Edition of Milton published in the name of the former of these, was in truth the Work of no other than our Scriblerus.

C H A P. X.

Of Martinus's uncommon Practice of Phyfic, and how he applied himself to the Diseases of the Mind.

BUT it is high time to return to the History of the Progress of Martinus in the Studies of Phyfic, and to enumerate some at least of the many Discoveries and Experiments he made therein.

One of the first was his Method of investigating latent Distempers, by the sagacious Quality of Setting-Dogs and Pointers. The success, and the Adventures that befel him, when he walked with these Animals, to smell them out in the Parks and public places about London, are what we would willingly relate; but that his own account, together with a List of those Gentlemen and Ladies at whom they made a Full Set, will be published in time convenient.
There will also be added the Representation, which,

on occasion of one distemper which was become almost epidemical, he thought himself obliged to lay before both Houses of Parliament, intituled, A Proposal for a General Flux, to exterminate at one blow the P—x out of this kingdom.

But being weary of all practice on fætid Bodies; from a certain niceness of Constitution, (especially when he attended Dr Woodward thro' a Twelve-month's course of Vomition) he determined to leave it off entirely, and to apply himself only to diseases of the Mind. He attempted to find out Specificks for all the Passions; and as other Physicians throw their Patients into sweats, vomits, purgations, etc. he cast them into Love, Hatred, Hope, Fear, Joy, Grief, etc. And indeed the great irregularity of the Passions in the English Nation, was the chief motive that induced him to apply his whole studies, while he continued among us, to the Diseases of the Mind.

To this purpose he directed, in the first place, his late acquired skill in Anatomy. He considered Virtues and Vices as certain Habits which proceed from the natural Formation and Structure of particular parts of the body. A bird flies because it has Wings, a Duck swims because it is web-footed: and there can be no question but the aduncity of the pounces and beaks of the Hawks, as well as the length of the fangs, the sharpness of the teeth, and the strength of the crural and maffeter-muscles * in Lions and Tygers, are the cause of the great and habitual Immorality of those Animals.

1st, He observed, that the Soul and Body mutually operate upon each other, and therefore if you deprive the Mind of the outward Instruments whereby she usually expresseth that Passion, you will in time abate the Passion itself, in like manner as Castration abates Lust.

2dly, That the Soul in mankind expresseth every Passion by the Motion of some particular Muscles.

3dly, That all Muscles grow stronger and thicker by being much used; therefore the habitual Passions may be discerned in particular persons by the strength and bigness of the Muscles used in the expression of that Passion.

4thly, That a Muscle may be strengthened or weakened by weakening or strengthening the force of its Antagonist. These things premised, he took notice,

That complaisance, humility, assent, approbation, and civility, were expressed by nodding the head and bowing the body forward: on the contrary, dissent, dislike, refusal, pride, and arrogance, were marked by tossing the head, and bending the body backwards; which two Passions of assent and dissent the Latins rightly express'd by the words adnuere and abnuere. Now he observed that complaisant and civil people had the Flexors of the head very strong; but in the proud and insolent there was a great overbalance of strength in the Extensors of the Neck and the Muscles of the Back, from whence they perform with great facility the motion of tossing, but with great difficulty that of bowing, and therefore have justly acquired the Title of stiff-necked. In order to reduce such persons to a just balance, he judged that the pair of Muscles called Recti interni, the Mastoidal, with other flexors of the head, neck, and body, must be strengthened; their Antagonist, the Splenii Complexi, and the Extensors of the Spine weakened: For which purpose Nature herself seems to have directed mankind to correct this Muscular Immorality, by tying such fellows Neck and heels.

* Μασσητήρις μύς.

Contrary to this, is the pernicious Custom of Mothers, who abolish the natural Signature of Modesty in their Daughters, by teaching them tossing and bridling, rather than the bashful posture of slooping, and hanging down the head. Martinus charged all husbands to take notice of the Posture of the Head of such as they courted to Matrimony, as that upon which their future happiness did much depend.

Flatterers, who have the flexor Muscles so strong that they are always bowing and cringing, he supposed might in some measure be corrected by being tied down upon a Tree by the back, like the children of the Indians; which doctrine was strongly confirmed by his observing the strength of the levator Scapulæ: This Muscle is called the Muscle of patience, because in that affection of Mind people shrug and raise up the shoulder to the tip of the ear. This Muscle also he observed to be exceedingly strong and large in Henpeck'd Husbands, in Italians and in English Ministers.

In pursuance of his Theory, he supposed the constrictors of the Eye-lids must be strengthened in the supercilious, the abductors in drunkards and contemplative men, who have the same steady and grave motion of the eye. That the buccinators or blowers up of the cheeks, and the dilators of the Nose, were too strong in Cholerick people; and therefore Nature here again directed us to a remedy, which was to correct such extraordinary dilatation by pulling by the Nose.

The rolling amorous Eye, in the Passion of Love, might be corrected by frequently looking through glasses. Impertinent fellows that jump upon Tables, and cut capers, might be cured by relaxing medicines applied to the Calves of their Legs, which in such people are too strong.

But there were two cases which he reckoned extremely difficult. First Affectation, in which there were so many Muscles of the bum, thighs, belly, neck, back, and the whole body, all in a false tone, that it required an impracticable multiplicity of applications.

The second case was immoderate Laughter: When any of that risible species were brought to the Doctor, and when he considered what an infinity of Muscles these laughing Rascals threw into a convulsive motion at the same time; whether we regard the spasms of the Diaphragm and all the muscles of respiration, the horrible ristus of the mouth, the distortion of the lower jaw, the crisping of the nose, twinkling of the eyes, or sphaerical convexity of the cheeks, with the tremulous succussion of the whole human body: when he considered, I say, all this, he used to cry out, Casus plane desplorabilis! and give such Patients over.

C H A P. XI.

The Case of a young Nobleman at Court, with the Doctor's Prescription for the same.

AN eminent Instance of Martinus's Sagacity in discovering the Distempers of the Mind, appeared in the case of a young Nobleman at Court, who was observed to grow extremely affected in his speech, and whimsical in all his behaviour. He began to ask odd questions, talk in verse to himself, shut himself up from his friends, and be accessible to none, but Flatterers, Poets, and Pick pockets; till his Relations and old Acquaintance judged him to be so far gone, as to be a fit Patient for the Doctor.

As soon as he had heard and examined all the symptoms, he pronounced his distemper to be Love.

His friends assured him that they had with great care observed all his motions, and were perfectly satisfied there was no woman in the case. Scriblerus was as positive that he was desperately in love with some person or other. "How can that be?" (said his Aunt, who came to ask the advice) "when he converses almost with none but himself?" Say you so? he replied, why then he is in love with himself, one of the most common cases in the world. I am astonished people do not enough attend this Disease, which has the same causes and symptoms, and admits of the same cure with the other: especially since here the case of the Patient is the more helpless and deplorable of the two, as this unfortunate passion is more blind than the other. There are people, who discover from their very youth a most amorous inclination to themselves; which is unhappily nurs'd by such Mothers, as, with their good will, would never suffer their children to be crossed in love. Ease, luxury, and idleness, blow up this flame as well as the other: Constant opportunities of conversation with the person beloved (the greatest of incentives) are here impossible to be prevented. Bawds and pimps in the other love, will be perpetually doing kind offices, speaking a good word for the party, and carry about Billet-doux. Therefore I ask you, Madam, if this Gentleman has not been much frequented by Flatterers, and a sort of people who bring him dedications and verses? "O Lord! Sir, quoth the Aunt) the house is haunted with them."

—There it is, (replied Scriblerus) those are the bawds and pimps that go between a man and himself. Are there no civil Ladies, that tell him he dresses well, has a gentlemanly air, and the like? "Why truly, Sir, my Nephew is not aukward."

—Look you, Madam, this is a misfortune to him: In former days these sort of lovers were happy in one respect, that they never had any rivals, but of late they have all the Ladies so—Be pleased to answer a few questions more. Whom does he generally talk of? Himself, quoth the Aunt.—Whose wit and breeding does he most commend? His own, quoth the Aunt.—Whom does he write letters to? Himself.—Whom does he dream of? All the dreams I ever heard were of himself.—Whom is he ogling yonder? Himself in his looking-glass—Why does he throw back his head in that languishing posture? Only to be blest with a smile of himself as he passes by.—Does he ever steal a kiss from himself, by biting his lips? Oh continually, till they are perfect vermillion.—Have you observed him to use Familiarities with any body? "With none but himself: he often embraces himself "with folded arms, he clasps his hand often upon
"his hip, nay sometimes thrusts it into his breast."

Madam, said the Doctor, all these are strong symptoms; but there remain a few more. Has this amorous gentleman presented himself with any Love toys; such as gold Snuff-boxes, repeating Watches, or Tweezer-cases? those are things that in time will soften the most obdurate heart. “Not only so (said the Aunt) but he bought the other day a very fine brilliant diamond Ring for his own wearing.”——Nay, if he has accepted of this Ring, the intrigue is very forward indeed, and it is high time for friends to interpose.—Pray Madam, a word or two more: Is he jealous that his acquaintance do not behave themselves with respect enough? will he bear jokes and innocent freedoms? “By no means; a familiar appellation makes him angry; if you shake him a little roughly by the hand, he is in a rage; but if you chuck him under the chin, he will return you a box on the ear.”——Then the case is plain: he has the true Pathognomick sign of Love, Jealousy; for no body will suffer his mistress to be treated at that rate. Madam, upon the whole, this case is extremely dangerous. There are some people who are far gone in this passion of self-love; but then they keep a very secret Intrigue with themselves, and hide it from all the world besides. But this Patient has not the least care of the Reputation of his Beloved; he is downright scandalous in his behaviour with himself; he is enchanted, bewitched, and almost past cure. However, let the following methods be try’d upon him.

First, let him  Hiatus.  Secondly, let him wear a Bob-wig. Thirdly, shun the company of flatterers, nay of ceremonious people, and of all Frenchmen in general. It would not be amiss if he travelled over England in a Stage-coach, and made the Tour of Holland in a Track-scout. Let him return the Snuff-boxes, Tweezer-cases (and particularly the Diamond Ring) which he has received from himself. Let some knowing friend represent to him the many vile Qualities of this Mistress of his; let him be shown that her Extravagance, Pride, and Prodigality, will infallibly bring him to a morsel of bread: Let it be proved, that he has been false to himself, and if Treachery is not a sufficient cause to discard a Mistress, what is? In short, let him be made to see that no mortal besides himself either loves or can suffer this Creature. Let all Looking-glasses, polished Toys, and even clean Plates be removed from him, for fear of bringing back the admired object. Let him be taught to put off all those tender airs, affected smiles, languishing looks, wanton tosses of the head, coy motions of the body, that mincing gait, soft tone of voice, and all that enchanting woman-like behaviour, that has made him the charm of his own eyes, and the object of his own adoration. Let him surprize the Beauty he adores at a disadvantage, survey himself naked, divested of artificial charms, and he will find himself a forked stradling Animal, with bandy legs, a short neck, a dun hide, and a pot-belly. It would be yet better, if he took a strong purge once a week, in order to contemplate himself in that condition : at which time it will be convenient to make use of the Letters, Dedications, etc. abovesaid. Something like this has been observed by Lucretius and others to be a powerful remedy in the case of Women. If all this will not do, I must e'en leave the poor man to his destiny. Let him marry himself, and when he is condemned eternally to himself, perhaps he may run to the next pond to get rid of himself, the Fate of most violent Self-lovers.

C H A P. XII.

How Martinus endeavoured to find out the Seat of the Soul, and of his Correspondence with the Free-Thinkers.

IN this Design of Martin to investigate the Diseases of the Mind, he thought nothing so necessary as an Enquiry after the Seat of the Soul; in which at first he laboured under great uncertainties. Sometimes he was of opinion that it lodged in the Brain, sometimes in the Stomach, and sometimes in the Heart. Afterwards he thought it absurd to confine that sovereign Lady to one apartment, which made him infer, that she shifted it according to the several functions of life: The Brain was her Study, the Heart her State-room, and the Stomach her Kitchen. But as he saw several Offices of life went on at the same time, he was forced to give up this Hypothesis also. He now conjectured it was more for the dignity of the Soul to perform several Operations by her little Ministers, the Animal Spirits, from whence it was natural to conclude, that she resides in different parts according to different Inclinations, Sexes, Ages, and Professions. Thus in Epicures he seated her in the mouth of the Stomach, Philosophers have her in their Brain, Soldiers in their Heart, Women in their Tongues, Fiddlers in their Fingers, and Rope-dancers in their Toes. At length he grew fond of the Glandula Pinealis, dissecting many Subjects to find out the different Figure of this Gland, from whence he might discover the cause of the different Tempers in mankind. He supposed that in factious and restless-spirited people he should find it sharp and pointed, allowing no room for the soul to repose herself: that in quiet Tempers it was flat, smooth, and soft, affording to the Soul as it were an easy cushion. He was confirmed in this, by observing that Calves and Philosophers, Tygers and Statesmen, Foxes and Sharpers, Peacocks and Fops, Cock-sparrows and Coquets, Monkeys and Players, Courtiers, and Spaniels, Moles and Misers, exactly resemble one another in the conformation of the Pineal Gland. He did not doubt likewise to find the same resemblance in Highway-men and Conquerors: In order to satisfy himself in which, it was, that he purchased the body of one of the first Species (as hath been before related) at Tyburn, hoping in time to have the happiness of one of the latter too, under his Anatomical knife.

We must not omit taking notice here, that these Enquiries into the Seat of the Soul gave occasion to his first correspondence with the society of Free-Thinkers, who were then in their infancy in England, and so much taken with the promising endowments of Martin, that they ordered their Secretary to write him the following Letter.

To the learned Inquisitor into Nature MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS: The Society of Free-Thinkers greeting.

Grecian Coffee-House, May 7.

IT is with unspeakable joy we have heard of your inquisitive Genius, and we think it great pity that it should not be better employed, than in looking after that Theological Non-entity commonly called the Soul: Since, after all your enquiries, it will appear you have lost your labour, in seeking the Residence of such a Chimera, that never had being but in the brains of some dreaming Philosophers. Is it not Demonstration to a person of your Sense, that, since you cannot find it, there is no such thing? In order to set so hopeful a Genius right in this matter, we have sent you an answer to the ill-grounded Sophisms of those crackbrained fellows, and likewise an easy mechanical explication of Perception or Thinking.

^a One of their chief Arguments is, that Self-consciousness cannot inhere in any system of Matter, because all matter is made up of several distinct beings, which never can make up one individual thinking being.

This is easily answered by a familiar instance. In every Jack there is a meat roasting Quality, which neither resides in the fly, nor in the weight, nor in any particular wheel of the Jack, but is the result of the whole composition: So in an Animal, the Self-consciousness is not a real Quality inherent in one Being (any more than meat-roasting in a Jack) but the result of several modes or Qualities in the same subject. As the fly, the wheels, the chain, the weight, the cords, etc. make one Jack, so the several parts of the body make one Animal. As perception or consciousness is said to be inherent in this Animal, so is meat-roasting said to be inherent in the Jack. As sensation, reasoning, volition, memory, etc. are the several modes of thinking; so roasting of beef, roasting of mutton, roasting of pullets, geese, turkeys, etc. are the several modes of meat-roasting. And as the general Quality of meat-roasting, with its several modifications as to beef, mutton, pullets, etc. does not inhere in any one part of the Jack; so neither does Consciousness, with its several Modes of sensation, intellection, volition, etc. inhere in any one, but is the result from the mechanical composition of the whole Animal.

^a This whole Chapter is an inimitable ridicule on Collin's arguments against Clarke, to prove the Soul only a Quality.

Just so, the Quality or Disposition in a Fiddle to play tunes, with the several Modifications of this tune playing quality in playing of Preludes, Sarabands, Jigs, and Gavotts, are as much real qualities in the instrument, as the Thought or the Imagination is in the mind of the Person that composes them.

The parts (say they) of an animal body are perpetually changed, and the fluids which seem to be the subject of consciousness, are in a perpetual circulation? so that the same individual particles do not remain in the Brain; from whence it will follow, that the idea of Individual Consciousness must be constantly translated from one particle of matter to another, whereby the Particle A, for example, must not only be conscious, but conscious that it is the same being with the Particle B that went before.

We answer, this is only a fallacy of the imagination, and is to be understood in no other sense than that maxim of the English Law, that the King never dies. This power of thinking, self-moving, and governing the whole Machine, is communicated from every Particle to its immediate Successor; who, as soon as he is gone, immediately takes upon him the Government, which still preserves the Unity of the whole System.

They make a great noise about this Individuality: how a man is conscious to himself, that he is the same Individual he was twenty years ago; notwithstanding the flux state of the Particles of matter that compose his body. We think this is capable of a very plain answer, and may be easily illustrated by a familiar example.

Sir John Cutler had a pair of black worsted stockings, which his maid darned so often with silk, that they became at last a pair of silk stockings. Now supposing those stockings of Sir John's endued with some degree of Consciousness at every particular darning, they would have been sensible, that they were the same individual pair of stockings both before and after the darning; and this sensation would have continued in them through all the succession of darnings ; and yet after the last of all, there was not perhaps one thread left of the first pair of stockings, but they were grown to be silk stockings, as was said before.

And whereas it is affirmed, that every animal is conscious of some individual self-moving, self-determining principle ; it is answered, that, as in a House of Commons all things are determined by a Majority, so it is in every Animal system. As that which determines the House is said to be the reason of the whole assembly ; it is no otherwise with thinking Beings, who are determined by the greater force of several particles ; which, like so many unthinking Members, compose one thinking System.

And whereas it is likewise objected, that Punishments cannot be just that are not inflicted upon the same individual, which cannot subsist without the notion of a spiritual substance : We reply, that this is no greater difficulty to conceive, than that a Corporation, which is likewise a flux body, may be punished for the faults, and liable to the debts, of their Predecessors.

We proceed now to explain, by the structure of the Brain, the several Modes of thinking. It is well known to Anatomists, that the Brain is a Conge- ries of Glands, that separate the finer parts of the blood, called Animal Spirits; that a Gland is nothing but a Canal of a great length, variously intorted and wound up together. From the Arietation and Motion of the Spirits in those Canals, proceed all the different sorts of Thoughts. Simple Ideas are produced by the motion of the Spirits in one simple Canal: when two of these Canals disembogue themselves into one, they make what we call a Proposition; and when two of these propositional Channels empty themselves into a third, they form a Syllogism, or a Ratiocination. Memory is performed in a distinct apartment of the brain, made up of vessels similar, and like situated to the ideal, propositional, and syllogistical vessels, in the primary parts of the brain. After the same manner it is easy to explain the other modes of thinking; as also why some people think so wrong and perversely, which proceeds from the bad configuration of those Glands. Some, for example, are born without the propositional or syllogistical Canals; in others, that reason ill, they are of unequal capacities; in dull fellows, of too great a length, whereby the motion of the spirits is retarded; in trifling genius's, weak and small; in the over-refining spirits, too much intorted and winding; and so of the rest.

We are so much persuaded of the truth of this our Hypothesis, that we have employed one of our Members, a great Virtuoso at Nuremberg, to make a sort of an Hydraulick Engine, in which a chemical liquor, resembling blood, is driven through elastick channels, resembling arteries and veins, by the force of an Embolus like the heart, and wrought by a pneumatick Machine of the nature of the lungs, with ropes and pulleys, like the nerves, tendons, and muscles: and we are persuaded, that this our artificial Man will not only walk, and speak, and perform most of the outward actions of the animal life, but (being wound up once a week) will perhaps reason as well as most of your Country Parsons.

We wait with the utmost impatience for the honour of having you a Member of our Society, and beg leave to assure you that we are, etc.

What return Martin made to this obliging Letter, we must defer to another occasion: let it suffice at present to tell, that Crambe was in a great rage at them, for stealing (as he thought) a hint from his Theory of Syllogisms, without doing him the honour so much as to mention him. He advised his Master by no means to enter into their Society, unless they would give him sufficient security, to bear him harmless from any thing that might happen after this present life.

C H A P. XIII.

Of the Seceſſion of Martinus, and ſome Hint of his Travels.

IT was in the year 1699 that Martin ſet out on his Travels. Thou wilt certainly be very curious to know what they were. It is not yet time to inform thee. But what hints I am at liberty to give, I will.

Thou ſhalt know then, that, in his firſt Voyage, he was carried by a proſperous Storm, to a Diſcovery of the Remains of the ancient Pygmean Empire.

That in his ſecond, he was as happily ſhipwrecked on the Land of the Giants, now the moſt humane people in the world.

That in his third Voyage, he diſcovered a whole Kingdom of Philoſophers, who govern by the Mathematicks; with whoſe admirable Schemes and Projects he returned to benefit his own dear Country;

but had the misfortune to find them rejected by the envious Ministers of Queen Anne, and himself sent treacherously away.

And hence it is, that in his fourth Voyage he discovers a Vein of Melancholy, proceeding almost to a Disgust of his Species; but above all, a mortal Detestation to the whole flagitious Race of Ministers, and a final Resolution not to give in any Memorial to the Secretary of State, in order to subject the Lands he discovered to the Crown of Great-Britain.

Now if, by these hints, the Reader can help himself to a farther discovery of the Nature and Contents of these Travels, he is welcome to as much light as they afford him; I am obliged, by all the ties of honour, not to speak more openly.

But if any man shall ever see such very extraordinary Voyages, into such very extraordinary Nations, which manifest the most distinguishing marks of a Philosopher, a Politician, and a Legislator; and can imagine them to belong to a Surgeon of a Ship, or a Captain of a Merchantman, let him remain in his Ignorance.

And whoever he be, that shall farther observe, in every page of such a book, that cordial Love of Mankind, that inviolable Regard to Truth, that Passion for his dear Country, and that particular attachment to the excellent Princess Queen Anne; surely that man deserves to be pitied, if by all those visible signs and characters, he cannot distinguish and acknowledge the Great Scriblerus.

C H A P. XIV.

Of the Discoveries and Works of the Great Scriblerus, made and to be made, written and to be written, known and unknown.

H E R E therefore, at this great Period, we end our first Book. And here, O Reader, we entreat thee utterly to forget all thou hast hitherto read, and to cast thy eyes only forward, to that boundless Field the next shall open unto thee; the fruits of which (if thine, or our sins do not prevent) are to spread and multiply over this our work, and over all the face of the Earth.

In the mean time, know what thou owest, and what thou yet may'st owe, to this excellent Person, this Prodigy of our age; who may well be called, The Philosopher of ultimate Causes, since by a Sagacity peculiar to himself, he hath discovered Effects in their very cause: and without the trivial helps of Experiments, or Observations, hath been the Inventor of most of the modern Systems and Hypotheses.

He hath enriched Mathematicks with many precise and geometrical Quadratures of the Circle. He first discovered the Cause of Gravity, and the intestine Motion of Fluids.

To him we owe all the observations on the Parallax of the Pole Star, and all the new Theories of the Deluge.

He it was, that first taught the right use sometimes of the Fuga Vacui, and sometimes of the Materia Subtilis, in resolving the grand Phænomena of Nature.

He it was, that first found out the Palpability of Colours; and by the delicacy of his Touch, could distinguish the different Vibrations of the heterogeneous Rays of Light.

His were the Projects of Perpetuum Mobiles, Flying Engines, and Pacing Saddles; the Method of discovering the Longitude by Bomb-Vessels, and of increasing the Trade-Wind by vast plantations of Reeds and Sedges.

I shall mention only a few of his Philosophical and Mathematical Works.

1. A compleat Digest of the Laws of Nature, with a Review of those that are obsolete or repealed, and of those that are ready to be renewed and put in force.

2. A Mechanical Explication of the Formation of the Universe, according to the Epicurean Hypothesis.

3. An investigation of the Quantity of real Matter in the Universe, with the proportion of the specifick Gravity of solid matter to that of fluid.

4. Microscopical Observations of the Figure and Bulk of the constituent Parts of all fluids. A Calculation of the proportion in which the Fluids of the earth decrease, and of the period in which they will be totally exhausted.

5. A Computation of the Duration of the Sun, and how long it will last before it be burned out.

6. A Method to apply the Force arising from the immense Velocity of Light to mechanical purposes.

7. An answer to the question of a curious Gentleman; How long a New Star was lighted up before its appearance to the inhabitants of our earth? To which is subjoined a calculation, how much the inhabitants of the Moon eat for Supper, considering that they pass a Night equal to fifteen of our natural days.

8. A Demonstration of the natural Dominion of the Inhabitants of the Earth over those of the Moon, if ever an intercourse should be opened between them. With a Proposal of a Partition-Treaty among the earthly Potentates, in case of such discovery.

9. Tide-Tables, for a Comet, that is to approximate towards the Earth.

10. The Number of the Inhabitants of London determined by the Reports of the Gold-finders, and the Tonnage of their Carriages; with allowance for the extraordinary quantity of the Ingesta and Egesta of the people of England, and a deduction of what is left under dead walls, and dry ditches.

It will from hence be evident, how much all his Studies were directed to the universal Benefit of Mankind. Numerous have been his Projects to this end; of which Two alone will be sufficient to show the amazing Grandeur of his Genius. The first was a Proposal, by a general contribution of all Princes, to pierce the first crust or Nucleus of this our Earth, quite through, to the next concentrical Sphere. The advantage he proposed from it was, to find the Parallax of the Fixt Stars; but chiefly to refute Sir Isaac Newton's Theory of Gravity, and Mr Halley's of the variations. The second was, to build Two Poles to the Meridian, with immense Light-houses on the top of them; to supply the defect of Nature, and to make the Longitude as easy to be calculated as the Latitude. Both these he could not but think very practicable, by the Power of all the Potentates of the World.

May we presume after these to mention, how he descended from the sublime to the beneficial parts of Knowledge, and particularly his extraordinary practice of Physick. From the Age, Complexion, or Weight of the Person given, he contrived to prescribe at a distance, as well as at a Patient's bed-side. He taught the way to many modern Physicians, to cure their Patients by Intuition, and to others to cure without looking on them at all. He projected a Menstruum to dissolve the Stone, made of Dr. Woodward's Universal Deluge-water. His also was the device to relieve Consumptive or Asthmatick persons, by bringing fresh Air out of the Country to Town, by pipes of the nature of the Recipients of Air-pumps: And to introduce the native air of a man's country into any other in which he should travel, with a seasonable Intromission of such Steams as were most familiar to him; to the inexpressible comfort of many Scotsmen, Laplanders, and white Bears.

In Physiognomy, his penetration is such, that from the picture only of any person, he can write his Life, and from the features of the Parents, draw the Portrait of any Child that is to be born.

Nor hath he been so enrapt in these Studies, as to neglect the polite Arts of Painting, Architecture, Musick, Poetry, etc. It was he that gave the first hint to our modern Painters, to improve the Likeness of their Portraits by the use of such Colours as would faithfully and constantly accompany the Life, not only in its present state, but in all its alterations, decays, age, and death itself.

In Architecture, he builds not with so much regard to present symmetry or conveniency, as with a Thought, well worthy a true lover of Antiquity, to wit, the noble effect the building will have to posterity, when it shall fall and become a Ruin.

As to Musick, I think Heidegger has not the face to deny that he has been much beholden to his Scores.

In Poetry, he hath appeared under a hundred different names, of which we may one day give a Catalogue.

In Politicks, his writings are of a peculiar cast, for the most part Ironical, and the Drift of them often so delicate and refined, as to be mistaken by the vulgar. He once went so far as to write a Persuasive to people to eat their own Children, which was so little understood as to be taken in ill part ^b. He has often written against Liberty in the name of Freeman and Algernon Sydney, in vindication of the Measures of Spain under that of Raleigh, and in praise of Corruption under those of Cato and Publicola.

It is true, that at his last departure from England, in the Reign of Queen Anne, apprehending lest any of these might be perverted to the Scandal of the weak, or Encouragement of the flagitious, he cast them all, without mercy, into a Bog-house near St James's. Some however have been with great diligence recovered, and fished up with a hook and line, by the Ministerial Writers, which make at present the great Ornaments of their works.

Whatever he judged beneficial to mankind, he constantly communicated (not only during his stay

^b Swift's ironical tract on that subject,

among us, but ever since his absence) by some method or other, in which Ostentation had no part. With what incredible Modesty he concealed himself, is known to numbers of those to whom he addressed sometimes Epistles, sometimes Hints, sometimes whole Treatises, Advices to Friends, Projects to first Ministers, Letters to Members of Parliament, Accounts to the Royal Society, and innumerable others.

All these will be vindicated to the true Author, in the course of these Memoirs. I may venture to say they cannot be unacceptable to any, but to those, who will appear too much concerned as Plagiaries, to be admitted as Judges. Wherefore we warn the public, to take particular notice of all such as manifest any indecent Passion at the appearance of this Work, as Persons most certainly involved in the Guilt.

The End of the First Book.

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS,

ΠΕΡΙ ΒΑΘΟΥΣ:

O R,

Of the ART of

SINKING in POETRY.

Written in the Year 1727.

MARTINUS SCRIBERUS

HEPIBAOTZ

Of the ART of

SINKING in POTRY

and digested the art of ancient poetry, that has not often among in the art of poetry, in the
written in the Year 1717.
The art of poetry, that has not often among in the art of poetry, in the
written in the Year 1717.
The art of poetry, that has not often among in the art of poetry, in the
written in the Year 1717.
The art of poetry, that has not often among in the art of poetry, in the
written in the Year 1717.
The art of poetry, that has not often among in the art of poetry, in the
written in the Year 1717.

(III)
MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS

ΠΕΡΙ ΒΑΘΟΥΣ.

CHAP. I.

IT hath been long (my dear Countrymen) the subject of my concern and surprize, that whereas numberless Poets, Critics and Orators have compiled and digested the Art of ancient Poesy, there hath not arisen among us one person so public spirited, as to perform the like for the Modern. Although it is universally known, that our every-way industrious Moderns, both in the Weight of the writings, and in the Velocity of their judgments, do so infinitely excel the said Ancients.

Nevertheless, too true is it, that while a plain and direct road is paved to their ὑψος, or Sublime; no tract has been yet chalked out, to arrive at our βάθος, or Profound. The Latins, as they came between the Greeks and Us, make use of the word Altitudo, which implies equally height and depth. Wherefore considering with no small grief, how many promising Genius's of this age are wandering (as I may say) in the dark without a guide, I have undertaken this arduous but necessary task, to lead them as it were by the hand, and step by step, the gentle down-hill way to the Bathos; the bottom, the end, the central point, the non plus ultra, of true Modern Poesy!

When I consider (my dear Countrymen) the extent, fertility, and populousness of our Lowlands of Parnassus, the flourishing state of our Trade, and the plenty of our Manufacture; there are two reflections which administer great occasion of surprize: The one, that all dignities and honours should be bestowed upon the exceeding few meager inhabitants of the Top of the mountain; the other, that our own nation should have arrived to that pitch of greatness it now possesses, without any regular System of Laws. As to the first, it is with great pleasure I have observed of late the gradual Decay of Delicacy and Refinement among mankind, who are become too reasonable to require that we should labour with infinite pains to come up to the taste of these Mountaineers, when they without any may condescend to ours. But as we have now an unquestionable Majority on our side, I doubt not but we shall shortly be able to level the Highlanders, and procure a farther vent for our own product, which is already so much relished, encouraged, and rewarded, by the Nobility and Gentry of Great Britain.

Therefore to supply our former defect, I purpose to collect the scattered rules of our Art into regular Institutes, from the example and practice of the deep Genius's of our nation; imitating herein my predecessors, the Master of Alexander, and the Secretary of the renowned Zenobia. And in this my undertaking I am the more animated, as I expect more success than has attended even those great Critics; since their Laws (tho' they might be good) have ever been slackly executed, and their Precepts (however strict) obey'd only by fits, and by a very small number.

At the same time I intend to do justice upon our neighbours, inhabitants of the upper Parnassus; who taking advantage of the rising ground, are perpetually throwing down rubbish, dirt and stones upon us, never suffering us to live in peace. These men, while they enjoy the crystal stream of Helicon, envy us our common water, which (thank our stars) tho' it is somewhat muddy, flows in much greater abundance. Nor is this the greatest injustice that we have to complain of; for though it is evident that we never made the least attempt or inrode into their territories, but lived contented in our native fens, they have often not only committed Petty Larcenies upon our borders, but driven the country, and carried off at once whole Cart-loads of our manufacture; to reclaim some of which stolen goods is part of the design of this Treatise.

For we shall see, in the course of this work, that our greatest Adversaries have sometimes descended towards us; and, doubtless, might now and then have arrived at the Bathos itself, had it not been for that mistaken opinion they all entertained, that the Rules of the Ancients were equally necessary to the Moderns; than which there cannot be a more grievous Error, as will be amply proved in the following discourse.

And indeed when any of these have gone so far, as by the light of their own Genius to attempt new Models, it is wonderful to observe, how nearly they have approached us in those particular pieces; tho' in the others they differed toto cælo from us.

C H A P. II.

That the Bathos, or Profund, is the natural Taste of Man, and in particular, of the present Age.

THE Taste of the Bathos is implanted by Nature itself in the soul of man; till, perverted by custom or example, he is taught, or rather compelled, to relish the Sublime. Accordingly, we see the unprejudiced minds of Children delight only in such productions, and in such images, as our true-modern writers set before them. I have observed how fast the general Taste is returning to this first Simplicity and Innocence: and if the intent of all Poetry be to divert and instruct, certainly that kind which diverts and instructs the greatest number, is to be preferred. Let us look round among the Admirers of Poetry, we shall find those who have a taste of the Sublime to be very few; but the Profund strikes universally, and is adapted to every capacity.

'Tis a fruitless undertaking to write for men of a nice and foppish Gusto, whom, after all, it is almost impossible to please, and 'tis still more chimerical to write for Posterity, of whose Taste we cannot make any judgment, and whose Applause we can never enjoy. It must be confessed our wiser authors have a present end.

Et prodesse volunt, et delectare Poetæ.

Their true design is Profit or Gain ; in order to acquire which, 'tis necessary to procure applause by administering pleasure to the reader : From whence it follows demonstrably, that their productions must be suited to the present Taste. And I cannot but congratulate our age on this peculiar felicity, that, though we have made indeed great progress in all other branches of Luxury, we are not yet debauched with any high Relish in Poetry, but are, in this one Taste, less nice than our ancestors. If an Art is to be estimated by its success, I appeal to experience whether there have not been, in proportion to their number, as many starving good Poets, as bad ones.

Nevertheless, in making Gain the principal end of our Art, far be it from me to exclude any great Genius's of Rank or Fortune from diverting themselves this way. They ought to be praised no less than those Princes, who pass their vacant hours in some ingenious, mechanical, or manual Art. And to such as these, it would be ingratitude not to own, that our Art has been often infinitely indebted.

C H A P. III.

The Necessity of the Bathos, physically considered.

F Arthermore, it were great cruelty and injustice, if all such Authors as cannot write in the other way, were prohibited from writing at all. Against this I draw an argument from what seems to me an undoubted physical Maxim, That Poetry is a natural or morbid Secretion from the Brain. As I would not suddenly stop a cold in the head, or dry up my neighbour's Issue, I would as little hinder him from necessary writing. It may be affirmed with great truth, that there is hardly any human creature past childhood, but at one time or other has had some Poetical Evacuation, and, no question, was much the better for it in his health; so true is the saying, Nascimur Poetae. Therefore is the Desire of Writing properly termed Pruritus, the "Titillation" of the Generative Faculty of the Brain," and the Person is said to conceive: now such as conceive must bring forth. I have known a man thoughtful, melancholy and raving for divers days, who forthwith grew wonderfully easy, lightsome, and chearful, upon a discharge of the peccant humour, in exceeding pu-rulent Metre. Nor can I question, but abundance of untimely deaths are occasioned for want of this laudable vent of unruly passions: yea, perhaps, in poor wretches, (which is very lamentable) for mere want of pen, ink, and paper! From hence it follows, that a suppression of the very worst Poetry is of dangerous consequence to the State. We find by experience, that the same humours which vent themselves in summer in Ballads and Sonnets, are condensed by the winter's cold into Pamphlets and Speeches for and against the Ministry: nay, I know not, but many times a piece of Poetry may be the most innocent composition of a Minister himself.

It is therefore manifest that Mediocrity ought to be allowed, yea indulged, to the good Subjects of England. Nor can I conceive how the world has swallowed the contrary as a Maxim, upon the single authority of that ^b Horace? Why should the golden Mean, and quintessence of all Virtues, be deemed so offensive in this Art? or Coolness or Mediocrity be so amiable a quality in a Man, and so detestable in a Poet?

However, far be it from me to compare these Writers with those great Spirits, who are born with a Vivacité de pesanteur, or (as an English Author calls

^b Mediocribus esse poetis
Non dii, non homines, etc.

HOR.

it) an “Alacrity of sinking;” and who by strength of Nature alone can excel. All I mean is to evince the Necessity of Rules to these lesser Genius’s, as well as the Usefulness of them to the greater.

C H A P. IV.

That there is an Art of the Bathos, or Profund.

WE come now to prove, that there is an Art of Sinking in Poetry. Is there not an Architecture of Vaults and Cellars, as well as of lofty Domes and Pyramids? Is there not as much skill and labour in making Dikes, as in raising Mounts? Is there not an Art of Diving as well as of Flying? And will any sober practitioner affirm, that a diving Engine is not of singular use in making him long-winded, assisting his sight, and furnishing him with other ingenious means of keeping under water.

If we search the Authors of Antiquity, we shall find as few to have been distinguished in the true Profund, as in the true Sublime. And the very same thing (as it appears from Longinus) had been imagined of that, as now of this: namely, that it was entirely the Gift of Nature. I grant that to excel in the Bathos a Genius is requisite; yet the Rules of Art must be allowed so far useful, as to add weight, or, as I may say, hang on lead, to facilitate and enforce our descent, to guide us to the most advantageous declivities, and habituate our imagination to a depth of thinking. Many there are that can fall, but few can arrive at the felicity of falling gracefully; much more for a man who is amongst the lowest of the Creation, at the very bottom of the Atmosphere to descend beneath himself, is not so easy a task, unless he calls in Art in to his assistance. It is with the Bathos as with small Beer, which is indeed vapid and insipid, if left at large, and let abroad; but being by our Rules confined and well stopt, nothing grows so frothy, pert, and bouncing.

The Sublime of Nature is the Sky, the Sun, Moon, Stars, etc. The Profund of Nature is Gold, Pearls, precious Stones, and the Treasures of the Deep, which are inestimable as unknown. But all that lies between these, as Corn, Flower, Fruits, Animals, and things for the meer use of Man, are of mean price, and so common as not to be greatly esteemed by the curious. It being certain, that any thing, of which we know the true use, cannot be invaluable: Which affords a solution, why common Sense hath either been totally despised, or held in small repute, by the greatest modern Critics and Authors.

C H A P. V.

Of the true Genius for the Profund, and by what it is constituted.

AND I will venture to lay it down, as the first Maxim and Corner-Stone of this our Art; that whoever would excel therein, must studiously avoid, detest, and turn his head from all the ideas, ways, and workings of that pestilent Foe to Wit, and Destroyer of fine Figures, which is known by the Name of Common Sense. His business must be to contract the true Gout de travers; and to acquire a most happy, uncommon, unaccountable Way of Thinking.

He is to consider himself as a Grotesque painter, whose works would be spoiled by an imitation of nature, or uniformity of design. He is to mingle bits of the most various, or discordant kinds, landscape, history, portraits, animals, and connect them with a great deal of flourishing, by heads or tails, as it shall please his imagination, and contribute to his principal end, which is to glare by strong oppo-fictions of colours, and surprize by contrariety of images.

Serpentes avibus gementur; tigribus agni. Hor.

His design ought to be like a labyrinth, out of which no body can get clear but himself. And since the great Art of all poetry is to mix Truth with Fiction, in order to join the Credible with the Surprizing; our author shall produce the Credible, by painting nature in her lowest simplicity; and the Surprizing, by contradicting common opinion. In the very Manners he will affect the Marvellous; he will draw Achilles with the patience of Job; a prince talking like a Jack-pudding; a Maid of honour selling bargains; a footman speaking like a philosopher; and a fine gentleman like a scholar. Whoever is conversant in modern Plays, may make a most noble collection of this kind, and, at the same time, form a complete body of modern Ethics and Morality.

Nothing seemed more plain to our great authors, than that the world had long been weary of natural things. How much the contrary are formed to please, is evident from the universal applause daily given to the admirable entertainments of Harlequins and Magicians on our stage. When an audience behold a coach turned into a wheel-barrow, a conjurer into an old woman, or a man's head where his heels should be; how are they struck with transport and delight? Which can only be imputed to this cause, that each object is changed into that which hath been suggested to them by their own low ideas before.

He ought therefore to render himself master of this happy and anti-natural way of thinking to such a degree, as to be able, on the appearance of any object, to furnish his imagination with ideas infinitely below it. And his eyes should be like unto the wrong end of a prospective glass, by which all the objects of nature are lessened.

For example; when a true genius looks upon the Sky, he immediately catches the idea of a piece of blue lutestring, or a child's mantle.

*c The Skies, whose spreading volume scarce have room,
Spun thin, and wove in nature's finest loom,
The new-born world in their soft lap embrac'd,
And all around their starry mantle cast.*

If he looks upon a Tempest, he shall have an image of a tumbled bed, and describe a succeeding calm in this manner.

*a The ocean joy'd to see the tempest fled,
New lays his waves, and smooths his ruffled bed.*

The Triumphs and Acclamations of the Angels, at the Creation of the Universe, present to his imagination “the Rejoicings of the Lord Mayor’s “Day;” and he beholds those glorious beings celebrating the Creator, by huzzaing, making illuminations, and flinging squibs, crackers and sky-rockets.

*e Glorious illuminations, made on high
By all the Stars and planets of the sky,
In just degrees, and shining order plac’d,
Spectators charm’d, and the blest dwelling grac’d.
Thro’ all th’ enlighten’d air swift fireworks flew,
Which with repeated shouts glad Cherubs threw,
Comets ascended with their sweeping train,
Then fell in starry show’rs and glittering rain.
In air ten thousand meteors blazing hung,
Which from th’ eternal battlements were flung.*

If a man who is violently fond of Wit, will sacrifice to that passion his friend or his God, would it not be a shame, if he who is smit with the love of the Bathos should not sacrifice to it all other transitory regards? You shall hear a zealous Protestant

N. B. In order to do Justice to these great Poets, our Citations are taken from the best, the last, and most correct Editions of their Works. That which we use of Prince Arthur, is in Duodecimo, 1714. The fourth Edition revised.

Deacon invoke a Saint, and modestly beseech her to do more for us than Providence :

*f Look down blest'd saint, with pity then look down,
Shed on this land thy kinder influence,
And guide us through the mists of providence,
In which we stray.*

Neither will he, if a goodly Simile come in his way, scruple to affirm himself an eye-witness of things never yet beheld by man, or never in existence ; as thus,

*g Thus have I seen in Araby the blest'd.
A Phœnix couch'd upon her sun'ral nest.*

But to convince you that nothing is so great which a marvellous genius, prompted by this laudable zeal, is not able to lessen ; hear how the most sublime of all Beings is represented in the following images :

First he is a PAINTER.

h Sometimes the Lord of Nature in the air, Spreads forth his clouds, his sable canvas, where

f A. Philips on the death of Queen Mary.

g Anon.

h Black, opt. edit. duod. 1716. p. 172.

*His pencil, dipp'd in heav'nly colour bright,
Paints his fair rainbow, charming to the sight.*

Now he is a CHEMIST.

*i Th' Almighty Chemist does his work prepare,
Pours down his waters on the thirsty plain,
Digests his light'ning, and distils his rain.*

Now he is a WRESTLER.

*k Me in his griping arms th' Eternal took,
And with such mighty force my body shook,
That the strong grasp my members sorely bruis'd,
Broke all my bones, and all my sinews loos'd.*

Now a RECRUITING OFFICER.

*l For clouds, the sun-beams levy fresh supplies,
And raise recruits of vapours, which arise
Drawn from the seas, to muster in the skies.*

Now a peaceable GUARANTEE.

*m In leagues of peace the neighbours did agree,
And to maintain them, God was Guarantee.*

i Blackm. Pf. civ. p. 263.

k Page 75.

l P. 170.

m P. 70.

Then he is an ATTORNEY.

n Job, as a vile offender, God indites.
And terrible decrees against me writes.
God will not be my advocate,
My cause to manage or debate.

In the following Lines he is a GOLDBEATER.

o Who the rich metal beats, and then, with care,
Unfolds the golden leaves, to gild the fields of air.

Then a FULLER.

p ——— th' exhaling reeks that secret rise,
Born on rebounding sun-beams thro' the skies,
Are thicken'd, wrought, and whiten'd, till they grow
A heav'nly fleece.

A MERCER, OR PACKER.

q Didst thou one end of air's wide curtain hold,
And help the Bales of Æther to unfold;
Say, which cærulean pile was by thy hand unroll'd?

n P. 61.

o P. 181.

p P. 18.

q P. 174.

A BUTLER.

*He measures all the drops with wondrous skill,
Which the black clouds, his floating Bottles fill.*

And a BAKER.

*God in the wilderness his table spread,
And in his airy Ovens bak'd their bread.*

C H A P. VI.

Of the several Kinds of Genius's in the Profund, and the Marks and Characters of each.

I Doubt not but the reader, by this Cloud of examples, begins to be convinced of the truth of our assertion, that the Bathos is an Art; and that the Genius of no mortal whatever, following the mere ideas of Nature, and unassisted with an habitual, nay laborious peculiarity of thinking, could arrive at images so wonderfully low and unaccountable. The great author, from whose treasury we have drawn all these instances (the Father of the Bathos, and indeed the Homer of it) has, like that immortal Greek, confined his labours to the greater Poetry, and thereby left room for others to acquire a due share of praise in inferior kinds. Many painters who could never hit a nose or an eye, have with felicity copied a small-pox, or been admirable at a toad or a red herring. And seldom are we without genius's for Still-life, which they can work up and stiffen with incredible accuracy.

¹ P. 131.

² Blackm. Song of Moses, p. 218.

An universal Genius rises not in an age; but when he rises, armies rise in him! he pours forth five or six Epic Poems with greater facility, than five or six pages can be produced by an elaborate and servile copier after Nature or the Ancients. It is affirmed by Quintilian, that the same genius which made Germanicus so great a General, would, with equal application, have made him an excellent Heroic Poet. In like manner, reasoning from the affinity there appears between Arts and Sciences, I doubt not but an active catcher of butterflies, a careful and fanciful pattern-drawer, an industrious collector of shells, a laborious and tuneful bag-piper, or a diligent breeder of tame rabbits, might severally excel in their respective parts of the Bathos.

I shall range these confined and less copious Geniuses under proper classes, and (the better to give their pictures to the reader) under the names of Animals of some sort or other; whereby he will be enabled, at the first sight of such as shall daily come forth, to know to what kind to refer, and with what authors to compare them.

1. The Flying Fishes: These are writers who now and then rise upon their fins, and fly out of the Profund; but their wings are soon dry, and they drop down to the bottom. G. S. A. H. C. G.

2. The Swallows are authors that are eternally skimming and fluttering up and down, but all their agility is employed to catch flies. L. T. W. P. Lord H.

3. The Ostridges are such, whose heaviness rarely permits them to raise themselves from the ground; their wings are of no use to lift them up, and their motion is between flying and walking; but then they run very fast. D. F. L. E. The Hon. E. H.

4. The Parrots are they that repeat another's words, in such a hoarse odd voice, as makes them seem their own. W. B. W. H. C. C. The Reverend D. D.

5. The Didappers are authors that keep themselves long out of sight, under water, and come up now and then where you least expected them. L. W. G. D. Esq. The Hon. Sir W. Y.

6. The Porpoises are unweildy and big; they put all their numbers into a great turmoil and tempest; but whenever they appear in plain light (which is seldom) they are only shapeless and ugly monsters. I. D. C. G. I. O.

7. The Frogs are such as can neither walk nor fly, but can leap and bound to admiration: They live generally in the bottom of a ditch, and make a great noise whenever they thrust their heads above water. E. W. I. M. Esq; T. D, Gent.

8. The Eels are obscure authors, that wrap themselves up in their own mud, but are mighty nimble and pert. L. W. L. T. P. M. General C.

9. The Tortoises are slow and chill, and, like pastoral writers, delight much in gardens; they have for the most part a fine embroidered Shell, and underneath it, a heavy lump. A. P. W. B. L. E. The Right Hon. E of S.

These are the chief Characterisicks of the Bathos; and in each of these kinds we have the comfort to be blessed with fundry and manifold choice Spirits in this our Island.

CH A P. VII.

Of the Profund, when it consists in the Thought.

WE have already laid down the Principles upon which our author is to proceed, and the manner of forming his Thought by familiarizing his mind to the lowest objects; to which it may be added, that Vulgar conversation will greatly contribute. There is no question but the Garret or the Printer's boy may often be discerned in the compositions made in such scenes and company; and much of Mr Curl himself has been insensibly infused into the works of his learned writers.

The Physician, by the study and inspection of urine and ordure, approves himself in the science: and in like sort should our author accustom and exercise his imagination upon the dregs of nature.

This will render his thoughts truly and fundamentally low, and carry him many fathoms beyond

Mediocrity. For, certain it is (tho' some lukewarm heads imagine they may be safe by temporizing between the extremes) that where there is not a Triteness or Mediocrity in the Thought, it can never be sunk into the genuine and perfect Bathos, by the most elaborate low Expression. It can, at most, be only carefully obscured, or metaphorically debased. But 'tis the Thought alone that strikes, and gives the whole that spirit, which we admire and stare at. For instance, in that ingenious piece on a lady's drinking the Bath-waters:

† She drinks! She drinks! Behold the matchless dame!

To her 'tis water, but to us 'tis flame:

Thus fire is water, water fire by turns,

And the same stream at once both cools and burns.

What can be more easy and unaffected than the Diction of these verses? 'Tis the Turn of Thought alone, and the Variety of Imagination, that charm and surprize us. And when the same lady goes into the Bath, the Thought (as in justness it ought) goes still deeper.

‡ Venus beheld her, 'midst her croud of slaves,

And thought herself just risen from the waves.

† Anon.

‡ Idem.

How much out of the way of common sense is this reflection of Venus, not knowing herself from the lady?

Of the same nature is that noble mistake of a frightened stag in a full chace, who (saith the Poet)
*Hears his own feet, and thinks they sound like more ;
 And fears the hind feet will o'ertake the fore.*

So astonishing as these are, they yield to the following, which is Profundity itself,

 None but himself can be his Parallel.*

Unless it may seem borrowed from the Thought of that Master of a Show in Smithfield, who writ in large letters, over the picture of his elephant,

This is the greatest Elephant in the world, except Himself.

However our next instance is certainly an original: Speaking of a beautiful Infant,

*So fair thou art, that if great Cupid be A child, as Poets say, sure thou art he.
 Fair Venus would mistake thee for her own,
 Did not thy eyes proclaim thee not her son.*

 Theobald, Double Falshood.*

*There all the lightnings of thy Mother's shine,
And with a fatal brightness kill in thine.*

First he is Cupid, then he is not Cupid; first Venus would mistake him, then she would not mistake him; next his Eyes are his Mother's, and lastly they are not his Mother's, but his own.

Another author, describing a Poet that shines forth amidst a circle of Critics,

*Thus Phæbus thro' the Zodiac takes his way,
And amid Monsters rises into day.*

What a peculiarity is here of invention? The Author's pencil, like the wand of Circe, turns all into monsters at a stroke. A great Genius takes things in the lump, without stopping at minute considerations: In vain might the ram, the bull, the goat, the lion, the crab, the scorpion, the fishes, all stand in his way, as mere natural animals: much more might it be pleaded that a pair of scales, an old man, and two innocent children, were no monsters: There were only the Centaur and the Maid that could be esteemed out of nature. But what of that? with a boldness peculiar to these daring genius's, what he found not monsters, he made so.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Profund, consisting in the Circumstances, and of Amplification and Periphrase in general.

WHAT in a great measure distinguishes other writers from ours, is their chusing and separating such circumstances in a description as ennoble or elevate the subject.

The circumstances which are most natural are obvious, therefore not astounding or peculiar. But those that are far-fetched, or unexpected, or hardly compatible, will surprise prodigiously. These therefore we must principally hunt out; but above all, preserve a laudable Prolixity; presenting the whole and every side at once of the image to view. For Choice and Distinction are not only a curb to the spirit, and limit the descriptive faculty, but also lessen the book; which is frequently of the worst consequence of all to our author.

When Job says in short, "He washed his feet in butter," (a circumstance some Poets would have softned, or past over) now hear how this butter is spread out by the great Genius.

*y With teats distended with their milky store,
Such num'rous lowing herds, before my door,
Their painful burden to unload did meet,
That we with butter might have wash'd our feet.*

How cautious ! and particular ! He had (says our author) so many herds, which herds thrived so well, and thriving so well gave so much milk, and that milk produced so much butter, that, if he did not, he might have wash'd his feet in it.

The ensuing description of Hell is no less remarkable in the circumstances,

*z In flaming heaps the raging ocean rolls,
Whose livid waves involve despairing souls ;
The liquid burnings dreadful colours shew,
Some deeply red, and others faintly blue.*

Could the most minute Dutch-painters have been more exact ? How inimitably circumstantial is this also of a war-horse !

*a His eye-balls burn, he wounds the smoaking plain,
And knots of scarlet-ribbond deck his mane.*

VOL. IV.

S

y Blackm. Job, p. 133.

z Pr. Arth. p. 89.

a Anon.

Of certain Cudgel-players :

*b They brandish high in air their threatning slaves,
Their hands a woven guard of ozier saves,
In which they fix their hazle weapon's end.*

Who would not think the Poet had past his whole life at Wakes in such laudable diversions? since he teaches us how to hold, nay how to make a Cudgel!

Periphrase is another great aid to Prolixity; being a diffused circumlocutory manner of expressing a known idea, which should be so mysteriously couch'd, as to give the reader the pleasure of guessing what it is that the author can possibly mean, and a strange surprize when he finds it.

The Poet I last mentioned is incomparable in this figure.

*c A waving sea of heads was round me spread,
And still fresh streams the gazing deluge fed.*

Here is a waving sea of heads, which by a fresh stream of heads, grows to be a gazing deluge of heads. You come at last to find, it means a great crowd.

b Pr. Arth. p. 167.

c Job, p. 78.

How pretty and how genteel is the following?

^d *Nature's confectioner,
Whose suckets are moist alchemy:
The still of his refining mold
Minting the garden into gold.*

What is this but a Bee gathering honey?

^e *Little Syren of the stage,
Empty warbler, breathing lyre,
Wanton gale of fond desire,
Tuneful mischief, vocal spell.*

Who would think, this was only a poor gentlewoman that sung finely?

We may define Amplification to be making the most of a Thought; it is the Spinning-wheel of the Bathos, which draws out and spreads it in the finest thread. There are Amplifiers who can extend half a dozen thin thoughts over a whole Folio; but for which, the tale of many a vast Romance, and the substance of many a fair volume might be reduced, into the size of a primer.

In the book of Job are these words, "Hast thou "commanded the morning, and caused the day-

^d Cleveland.

^e A. Phillips to Cuzzona.

“spring to know his place?” How is this extended by the most celebrated Amplifier of our age?

*† Canst thou set forth th’ etherial mines on high,
Which the refulgent ore of light supply?
Is the celestial furnace to thee known,
In which I melt the golden metal down?
Treasures, from whence I deal out light as fast,
As all my stars and lavish suns can waste.*

The same author hath amplified a passage in the sixth Psalm; “He looks on the earth, and it trembles. He touches the hills, and they smoke.”

*‡ The hills forget they’re fix’d, and in their flight
Cast off their weight, and ease themselves for flight:
The woods, with terror wing’d, out-fly the wind,
And leave the heavy, panting hills behind.*

You here see the hills not only trembling, but shaking off the woods from their backs, to run the faster: After this you are presented with a foot-race of mountains and woods, where the woods distance the mountains, that, like corpulent purfy fellows, come puffing and panting a vast way behind them.

† Job, p. 108.

‡ P. 267.

C H A P. IX.

Of Imitation, and the Manner of imitating.

THAT the true authors of the Profund are to imitate diligently the examples in their own way, is not to be questioned, and that divers have by this means attained to a depth whereunto their own weight could never have carried them, is evident by sundry instances. Who sees not that De Foe was the poetical son of Withers, Tate of Ogilby, E. Ward of John Taylor, and E——n of Blackmore? Therefore when we sit down to write, let us bring some great author to our mind, and ask ourselves this question; How would Sir Richard have said this? Do I express myself as simply as Amb. Philips? Or flow my numbers with the quiet thoughtlessness of Mr Welsted.

But it may seem somewhat strange to assert, that our Proficient should also read the works of those famous Poets who have excelled in the Sublime: Yet is not this a paradox? As Virgil is said to have read Ennius, out of his dunghill to draw gold, so may our author read Shakespear, Milton, and Dryden for the contrary end, to bury their gold in his own dunghill. A true Genius, when he finds any thing lofty or shining in them, will have the skill to bring it down, take off the gloss, or quite discharge the colour, by some ingenious circumstance or Periphrase, some addition or diminution, or by some of those Figures, the use of which we shall shew in our next chapter.

The book of Job is acknowledged to be infinitely sublime, and yet has not the father of the Bathos reduced it in every page? Is there a passage in all Virgil more painted up and laboured than the description of Ætna in the third Æneid?

*Horrificis juxta tonat Ætna ruinis,
Interdumque atram prorumpit ad æthera nubem,
Turbine fumantem piceo et candente favilla,
Attollitque globos flammarum, et sidera lambit.
Interdum scopulos avulsaque viscera montis
Erigit eructans, liquefactaque saxa sub auras
Cum gemitu glomerat, fundoque exæstuat imo.*

(I beg pardon of the gentle English reader, and such of our writers as understand not Latin.) Lo! how this is taken down by our British Poet, by the single happy thought of throwing the mountain into a fit of the colic.

h *Ætna, and all the burning mountains, find Their kindled stores with inbred storms of wind
Blown up to rage; and, roaring out, complain
As torn with inward gripes, and tort'ring pain:
Lab'ring, they cast their dreadful vomit round,
And with their melted bowels spread the ground.*

Horace, in search of the Sublime, struck his head against the Stars ⁱ; but Empedocles, to fathom the Profund, threw himself into Ætna. And who but would imagine our excellent Modern had also been there, from this description?

Imitation is of two sorts; the first is when we force to our own purposes the Thoughts of others; the second consists in copying the Imperfections or Blemishes of celebrated authors. I have seen a Play professedly writ in the style of Shakespear; wherein the resemblance lay in one single line,

And so good morrow t'ye, good master Lieutenant.

And sundry poems in imitation of Milton, where with the utmost exactness, and not so much as one exception, nevertheless was constantly nathless, embroider'd was broider'd, hermits were cremites, dis^h Pr. Arthur, p. 75.

ⁱ Sublimi feriam sidera vertice.

dain'd was 'sdain'd, shady umbrageous, enterprize emprize, pagan paynim, pinnions pennous, sweet dulcet, orchards orchats, bridge-work pontifical; nay, her was hir, and their was thir thro' the whole poem. And in very deed, there is no other way by which the true modern poet could read, to any purpose, the works of such men as Milton and Shakespear.

It may be expected, that, like other Critics, I should next speak of the Passions: But as the main end and principal effect of the Bathos is to produce Tranquillity of Mind, (and sure it is a better design to promote sleep than madness) we have little to say on this subject. Nor will the short bounds of this discourse allow us to treat at large of the Emollients and the Opiats of Poesy, of the Cool, and the manner of producing it, or of the methods used by our authors in managing the Passions. I shall but transiently remark, that nothing contributes so much to the Cool, as the use of Wit in expressing passion: The true genius rarely fails of points, conceits, and proper similes on such occasions: This we may term the Pathetic epigrammatical, in which even puns are made use of with good success. Hereby our best authors have avoided throwing themselves or their readers into any indecent Transports.

But as it is sometimes needful to excite the passions of our antagonist in the polemic way, the true students in the law have constantly taken their methods from low life, where they observed, that, to move Anger, use is made of scolding and railing; to move Love, of bawdry; to beget Favour and Friendship, of gross flattery; and to produce Fear, of calumniating an adversary with crimes obnoxious to the State. As for Shame, it is a silly passion, of which as our authors are incapable themselves, so they would not produce it in others.

C H A P. X.

Of Tropes and Figures : And first of the variegating, confounding, and reversing Figures.

BUT we proceed to the Figures. We cannot too earnestly recommend to our authors the study of the Abuse of Speech. They ought to lay it down as a principle, to say nothing in the usual way, but (if possible) in the direct contrary. Therefore the Figures must be so turn'd as to manifest that intricate and wonderful Cast of Head which distinguishes all writers of this kind; or (as I may say) to refer exactly the Mold in which they were formed, in all its inequalities, cavities, obliquities, odd crannies, and distortions.

It would be endless, nay impossible to enumerate all such Figures; but we shall content ourselves to range the principal, which most powerfully contribute to the Bathos, under three Classes.

- I. The Variegating, Confounding, or Reversing Tropes and Figures.
- II. The Magnifying, and
- III. The Diminishing.

We cannot avoid giving to these the Greek or Roman Names; but in tenderness to our countrymen and fellow writers, many of whom, however exquisite, are wholly ignorant of those languages, we have also explained them in our mother tongue.

I. Of the first sort, nothing so much conduces to the Bathos, as the

C A T A C H R E S I S.

A Master of this will say,

Mow the Beard,
Shave the Grass,

Pin the Plank,
Nail my Sleeve.

From whence results the same kind of pleasure to the mind as to the eye, when we behold Harlequin trimming himself with a hatchet, hewing down a tree with a rasor, making his tea in a cauldron, and brewing his ale in a tea-pot, to the incredible satisfaction of the British Spectator. Another source of the Bathos is, the invention of Causes for Effects, of Inventors for Inventions, etc.

The METONYMY,

*Laced in her ^f Cosins new appear'd the bride,
A ^g Bubble-boy and ^h Tompion at her side,
And with an air divine her ⁱ Colmar ply'd:
Then oh! she cries, what slaves I round me see?
Here a bright Redcoat, there a smart ^k Toupee.*

The SYNECDOCHE,

which consists, in the use of a part for the whole.
You may call a young woman sometimes Pretty-face

^f Stays. ^g Tweezer-case. ^h Watch. ⁱ Fan.

^k A sort of Perriwig: All words in use in this present Year.

and Pigs-eyes, and sometimes Snotty-nose and Draggle-tail. Or of Accidents for Persons; as a Lawyer is called Split-cause, a Taylor Prick-louse, etc. Or of things belonging to a man, for the man himself; as a Sword-man, a Gown-man, a T-m-T-d-man: a White staff, a Turn-key, etc.

THE APOSIOPESIS.

An excellent figure for the Ignorant, as, "What shall I say?" when one has nothing to say: or I "can no more," when one really can no more. Expressions which the gentle reader is so good as never to take in earnest.

THE METAPHOR.

The first rule is to draw it from the lowest things, which is a certain way to sink the highest; as when you speak of the Thunder of Heaven, say,

¹ The Lords above are angry and talk big.

If you would describe a rich man refunding his treasures, express it thus,

^m Tho' he (as said) may Riches gorge, the Spoil Painful in massy Vomit shall recoil,

¹ Lee Alex.

^m Blackm, Job, p. 91, 93.

*Soon shall he perish with a swift decay,
Like his own Ordure, cast with scorn away.*

The Second, that, whenever you start a Metaphor, you must be sure to run it down, and pursue it as far as it can go. If you get the scent of a State negotiation, follow it in this manner.

*n The stones and all the elements with thee Shall ratify a strict confederacy ;
Wild beasts their savage temper shall forget,
And for a firm alliance with thee treat ;
The finny tyrant of the spacious seas
Shall send a scaly embassy for peace ;
His plighted faith the Crocodile shall keep,
And seeing thee, for joy sincerely weep.*

Or if you represent the Creator, denouncing war against the wicked, be sure not to omit one circumstance usual in proclaiming and levying war.

*o Envoys and Agents, who by command Reside in Palestina's land,
To whom commissions I have given,
To manage there the interests of heaven :
Ye holy heralds who proclaim
Or war or peace, in mine your master's name :*

n Job, p. 22.

o Blackm. Isaac, xl.

*Ye pioneers of heaven, prepare a road,
 Make it plain, direct and broad;
 For I in person will my people head;
 For the divine deliverer
 Will on his march in majesty appear,
 And needs the aid of no confed'rate power.*

Under the article of the Confounding, we rank

1. The MIXTURE OF FIGURES, which raises so many images, as to give you no image at all. But its principal beauty is when it gives an unexpected picture of Winter. Of this sort is the following:

p The gaping clouds pour lakes of sulphur down Whose livid flashes sickning sunbeams drown.

What a noble Confusion? clouds, lakes, brimstone, flames, sun-beams, gaping, pouring, sickning, drowning! all in two lines.

2. The J A R G O N.

*q Thy head shall rise, tho' buried in the dust,
 And 'midst the clouds his glittering turrets thrust.*

Quere, What are the glittering turrets of a man's head?

*Upon the shore, as frequent as the sand,
To meet the Prince, the glad Dimetians stand.*

Quere, Where these Dimetians stood? and of what size they were? Add also to the Jargen such as the following.

*Destruction's empire shall no longer last,
And Desolation lye for ever waste.*

*Here Niobe, sad mother makes her moan,
And seems converted to a stone in stone.*

But for Variegation nothing is more useful than

3. The PARANOMASIA, or PUN, where a Word, like the tongue of a jack-daw, speaks twice as much by being split: As this of Mr Dennis w,

Bullets that wound, like Parthians as they fly;

or this excellent one of Mr Welsted x,

r Pr. Arthur, p. 157.
poems.

s Job, p. 89.
w Poems, 1663, p. 13.

t T. Cook,

Behold the Virgin lye.

Naked, and only cover'd by the Sky.

To which thou may'st add,

*To see her beauties no man needs to stoop,
She has the whole Horizon for her hoop.*

4. The ANTITHESIS, or SEE-SAW, whereby Contraries and Oppositions are ballanced in such a way, as to cause a reader to remain suspended between them, to his exceeding delight and recreation. Such as these, on a lady who made herself appear out of size, by hiding a young princess under her cloaths.

y While the kind nymph changing her faultless shape Becomes unhandsome, handsomely to scape.

On the Maids of Honour in mourning.

z Sadly they charm, and dismally they please.

His eyes so bright

a Let in the object and let out the light.

x Welsted, Poems, Acon and Lavin. y Waller.

z Steel on Queen Mary. a Quarles.

^b The Gods look pale to see us look so red.

*The ^c Fairies and their Queen
In mantles blue came tripping o'er the green.*

^d *All nature felt a reverential shock,
The sea stood still to see the mountains rock.*

CHAP. XI.

The Figures continued: Of the Magnifying and Diminishing Figures.

A Genuine Writer of the Profund will take care never to magnify any object without clouding it at the same time: His Thought will appear in a true mist, and very unlike what is in nature. It must always be remember'd that Darkness is an essential

VOL. IV.

U

^b Lee, Alex.

^c Phil. Past.

^d Black. Job. p. 176.

quality of the Profund, or, if there chance to be a glimmering, it must be as Milton expresses it,

No light, but rather darknes visible.

The chief Figure of this sort is,

I. The HYPERBOLE, or Impossible.

For instance of a Lion;

*e He roar'd so loud, and look'd so wond'rous grim,
His very shadow durst not follow him.*

Of a Lady at Dinner.

*The silver whiteness that adorns thy neck,
Sullies the plate, and makes the napkin black.*

Of the same.

*Th^e obscureness of her birth Cannot eclipse the lustre of her eyes,
Which make her all one light.*

Of a Bull-baiting.

*z Up to the stars the sprawling mastives fly,
And add new monsters to the frighted sky.*

e Vet. Ant.

f Theob. Double Falshood.

g Blackm.

Of a Scene of Misery.

*Behold a scene of misery and woe!
Here Argus soon might weep himself quite blind,
Ev'n tho' he had Briareus' hundred hands
To wipe those hundred eyes.*

And that modest request of two absent lovers.

*Ye Gods! annihilate but Space and Time,
And make two lovers happy.*

2. The PERIPHRAISIS, which the Moderns call the Circumbendibus, whereof we have given examples in the ninth chapter, and shall again in the twelfth.

To the same class of the Magnifying may be referred the following, which are so excellently modern, that we have yet no name for them. In describing a country prospect,

*I'd call them mountains, but can't call them so,
For fear to wrong them with a name too low;
While the fair vales beneath so humbly lie,
That even humble seems a term too high.*

III. The third Class remains, of the Diminishing Figures: And 1. the ANTICLIMAX, where the second line drops quite short of the first, than which nothing creates greater surprize.

On the extent of the British Arms.

 Under the Tropicks is our language spoke,
And part of Flanders hath receiv'd our Yoke.*

On a Warrior.

† And thou Dalhouffy the great God of War, Lieutenant Colonel to the Earl of Mar.

On the Valour of the English.

*‡ Nor Art nor Nature has the force
To stop its steddý course,
Nor Alps nor Pyrenæans keep it out,
Nor fortify'd Redoubt.*

At other times this figure operates in a larger extent; and when the gentle reader is in expectation of some great image, he either finds it surprizingly imperfect, or is presented with something low, or quite ridiculous. A surprize resembling that of a curious person in a cabinet of Antique Statues, who beholds on the Pedestal the names of Homer, or Cato; but looking up, finds Homer without a head, and nothing to be seen of Cato but his privy-member.

Such are these lines of a Leviathan at sea.

u *His motion works, and beats the oozy mud,
And with its slime incorporates the flood,
'Till all th' encumber'd, thick, fermenting stream
Does like one Pot of boiling Ointment seem.
Where'er he swims, he leaves along the lake,
Such frothy furrows, such a foamy track,
That all the waters of the deep appear Hoary—with age, or grey with sudden fear.*

But perhaps even these are excelled by the ensuing.

o *Now the resisted flames and fiery store
By winds assaulted, in wide forges roar,
And raging seas flow down of melted Ore.
Sometimes they hear long Iron Bars remov'd,
And to and fro huge Heaps of Cinders shov'd.*

2. The VULGAR,

is also a Species of the Diminishing: By this a spear flying into the air is compared to a boy whistling as he goes on an errand.

n Blackm. Job, p. 197.

o Pr. Arthur. p. 157.

p The mighty Stuffa threw a massy spear,
Which, with its Errand pleas'd, fung thro' the air.

A Man raging with grief to a Mastiff Dog:

q I cannot fesse this gigantic woe,
Nor on my raging grief a muzzle throw.

And Clouds big with water to a woman in great necessity:

Distended with the Waters in 'em pent,
The clouds hang deep in air, but hang unrent.

3. The INFANTINE.

This is when a Poet grows so very simple, as to think and talk like a child. I shall take my examples from the greatest Master in this way: Hear how he fondles, like a meer stammerer.

r Little Charm of placid mien,
Miniature of beauty's queen,
Hither, British muse of mine,
Hither, all ye Græcian Nine,

p Pr. Arthur.
on Miss Cuzzona.

q Job, p. 41.

r Amb. Phillips

*With the lovely Graces Three,
And your pretty Nurfeling see.*

*When the meadows next are seen,
Sweet enamel, white and green,
When again the lambkins play,
Pretty Sportlings full of May.
Then the neck so white and round,
(Little Neck with brilliants bound.)
And thy Gentleness of mind,
(Gentle from a gentle kind) etc.
Happy thrice, and thrice agen,
Happiest he of happy men, etc.*

and the rest of those excellent Lullabies of his composition.

How prettily he asks the sheep to teach him to bleat ?

 Teach me to grieve with bleating moan, my sheep.*

Hear how a babe would reason on his nurse's death :

 That ever she could die ! Oh most unkind !
To die, and leave poor Colinet behind ?
And yet,—Why blame I her !—*

With no less simplicity does he suppose that shepherdesses tear their hair and beat their breasts, at their own deaths:

*u Ye brighter maids, faint emblems of my fair,
With looks cast down, and with dishevel'd hair,
In bitter anguish beat your breasts, and moan
Her death untimely, as it were your own.*

4. The INANITY, or NOTHINGNESS.

Of this the same author furnishes us with most beautiful instances:

y Ah silly I, more silly than my sheep, (Which on the flow'ry plain I once did keep.)

z To the grave Senate she could counsel give, (Which with astonishment they did receive.)

a He whom loud cannon could not terrify, Falls (from the grandeur of his Majesty.)

b Happy merry as a king, Sipping dew, you sip, and sing.

The Noise returning with returning Light,

What did it?

c Dispers'd the Silence, and dispell'd the Night.

y Ibid
on a Grasshopper.

z Phil. on Q. Mary

c Anon.

a Ibid.

b T. Cook

You easily perceive the Nothingness of every second Verse.

^d *The glories of proud London to survey,
The Sun himself shall rise—by break of day.*

5. The EXPLETIVE,

admirably exemplified in the Epithets of many authors.

*Th' umbrageous shadow, and the verdant green,
The running current, and odorous fragrance,
Chear my lone solitude with joyous gladness.*

Or in pretty drawling words like these,

^e *All men his tomb, all men his sons adore,
And his son's sons till there shall be no more.
The rising sun our grief did see,
The setting sun did see the same,
While wretched we remembred thee,
^f O Sion, Sion, lovely name.*

6. The MACROLOGY and PLEONASM are as generally coupled, as a lean rabbit with a fat one; nor is it a wonder, the superfluity of words and

VOL. IV.

X

^h Autor. Vet.

^e T. Cook, Poems.

^f Ibid.

vacuity of sense, being just the same thing. I am pleased to see one of our greatest adversaries employ this figure.

*g The growth of meadows, and the pride of fields
The food of armies and support of wars:
Refuse of swords, and gleanings of a fight,
Lessen his numbers, and contract his host.
Where'er his friends retire, or foes succeed,
Cover'd with Tempests, and in oceans drown'd.*

Of all which the Perfection is

THE TAUTOLOGY.

*h Break thro' the billows, and—divide the main
In smoother numbers, and—in softer verse.
i Divide—and part—the sever'd World—in two.—*

With ten thousand others equally musical, and plentifully flowing thro' most of our celebrated modern Poems

g Camp. h Tonsc. Misc. 12mo, vol. iv. p. 291. 4th Edit.
† Ibid. vol. vi. p. 121.

C H A P. XII.

Of Expression, and the several Sorts of Style of the present Age.

THE Expression is adequate, when it is proportionably low to the Profundity of the Thought. It must not be always Grammatical, lest it appear pedantic and ungentlemanly; nor too clear, for fear it becomes vulgar; for obscurity bestows a cast of the wonderful, and throws an oracular dignity upon a piece which hath no meaning.

For example, sometimes use the wrong Number; The sword and Pestilence at once devours, instead of devour. * Sometimes the wrong Case; And who more fit to sooth the God than thee? instead of thou: And rather than say, Thetis saw Achilles weep, she heard him weep.

We must be exceeding careful in two things; first, in the Choice of low Words: secondly, in the sober and orderly way of ranging them. Many of our Poets are naturally blessed with this talent, insomuch that they are in the circumstance of that honest Citizen, who had made Prose all his life without knowing it. Let verses run in this manner, just to be a vehicle to the words: (I take them from my last cited author, who, tho' otherwise by no means of our rank, seem'd once in his life to have a mind to be simple.)

* Ti. Hom. Il. i.

¹ *If not, a prize I will myself decree,
From him, or him, or else perhaps from thee.*

^m *full of Days was he;
Two ages past, he liv'd the third to see.*

ⁿ *The king of forty kings, and honour'd more
By mighty Jove than e'er was king before.*

^o *That I may know, if thou my pray'r deny,
The most despis'd of all the Gods am I.*

² Then let my mother once be rul'd by me, Tha' much more wise than I pretend to be.

Or these of the same hand.

³ *I leave the arts of poetry and verse
To them that practise them with more success:*

¹ Ti. Hom. Il. i. p. 11. ^m Idem. p. 17. ⁿ Idem. p. 19.
^o P. 34. ^p P. 38. ^q Tons. Misc. 12mo, vol. iv. p. 292.
fourth Edit.

*Of greater truths I now prepare to tell,
And so at once, dear friend and muse, farewell.*

Sometimes a single Word will vulgarise a poetical idea; as where a Ship set on fire owes all the Spirit of the Bathos to one choice word that ends the line.

And his scorch'd ribs the hot Contagion fry'd.

And in that description of a World in ruins,

*Should the whole frame of nature round him break,
He unconcern'd would bear the mighty Crack.*

So also in these,

*Beasts tame and savage to the river's brink
Come, from the fields and wild abodes—to drink.*

Frequently two or three words will do it effectually,

*He from the clouds does the sweet liquor squeeze,
That cheers the Forest and the Garden trees.*

It is also useful to employ Technical Terms, which estrange your style from the great and general ideas

^r Pr. Arth. p. 151.

^s Tonf. Misc. vol. vi. p. 119.

^t Job, 263.

^u Id. Job, 264.

of nature: and the higher your subject is, the lower should you search into mechanicks for your expression. If you describe the garment of an angel, say that his x Linnen was finely spun, and bleached on the happy Plains, y Call an army of Angels, Angelic Cuirassiers, and, if you have occasion to mention a number of misfortunes, style them

z Fresh Troop, of Pains, and regimented Woes.

STYLE is divided by the Rhetoricians into the Proper and the Figured. Of the Figured we have already treated, and the Proper is what our authors have nothing to do with. Of Styles we shall mention only the Principal which owe to the moderns either their chief Improvement, or entire Invention.

I. The FLORID Style, than which none is more proper to the Bathos, as flowers, which are the Lowest of vegetables, are most Gaudy, and do many times grow in great plenty at the bottom of Ponds and Ditches.

A fine writer in this kind presents you with the following Poëie:

x Pr. Arthur, p. 19.

y Ibid. p. 339.

z Job, p. 86.

^a *The groves appear all drest with wreaths of flowers,
And from their leaves drop aromatic showers,
Whose fragrant heads in mystic twines above,
Exchang'd their sweets, and mix'd with thousand kisses,
As if the willing branches strove
To beautify and shade the grove.—*

(which indeed most branches do.) But this is still excelled by our Laureat,

^b *Branches in branches twin'd compose the grove,
And shoot and spread, and blossom into love.
The trembling palms their mutual vows repeat,
And bending poplars bending poplars meet.
The distant plantanes seem to press more nigh,
And to the sighing alders, alders sigh.*

Hear also our Homer.

^c *His Robe of State is form'd of light refin'd,
And endless Train of lustre spreads behind.
His throne's of bright compacted Glory made,
With Pearl celestial, and with Gems inlaid:*

^a Behn's Poems, p. 2.

^b Guardian, 12mo, 127.

^c Black Pl. civ.

*Whence Floods of joy, and Seas of Splendor flow,
On all th' angelic gazing throng below.*

2. The PERT Style.

This does in as peculiar a manner become the low in wit, as a pert air does the low in stature. Mr Thomas Brown, the author of the London Spy, and all the Spies and Trips in general, are herein to be diligently studied: In Verse Mr Cibber's Prologues.

But the beauty and energy of it is never so conspicuous, as when it is employed in Modernizing and Adapting to the Taste of the Times the works of the Ancients. This we rightly phrase Doing them into English, and Making them English: two expressions of great Propriety, the one denoting our Neglect of the Manner how, the other the Force and Compulsion with which it is brought about. It is by virtue of this Style that Tacitus talks like a Coffee-House Politician, Josephus like the British Gazetter, Tully is as short and smart as Seneca or Mr Apgill, Marcus Aurelius is excellent at Snipsnap, and honest Thomas à Kempis as Prim and Polite as any preacher at court.

3. The ALAMODE Style, which is fine by being new, and has this happiness attending it, that it is as durable and extensive as the poem itself. Take some examples of it, in the description of the Sun in a Mourning-coach upon the death of Queen Mary.

Of the ART OF SINKING IN POETRY. 169

^d See Phœbus now, as once for Phaeton,
Has mask'd his face, and put deep Mourning on:
Dark clouds his fable Chariot do surround,
And the dull Steeds stalk o'er the melancholy round.

Of Prince Arthur's Soldiers drinking.

^e While rich Burgundian wine, and bright Champaign
Chase from their minds the terrors of the main.

(whence we also learn, that Burgundy and Champaign make a man on shore despise a storm at sea.

Of the Almighty encamping his Regiments.

^f He sunk a vast capacious deep,
Where he his liquid Regiments does keep;
Thither the waves file off, and make their way,
To form the mighty body of the sea;

VOL. IV.

Y

^d Amb. Philips.
civ. p. 261.

^e Pr. Arthur, p. 16.

^f Blackm, Pf.

Where they encamp, and in their station stand, Entrench'd in Works of Rock, and Lines of Sand.

Of two Armies on the Point of engaging.

*Ye Yon' armies are the Cards which both must play;
At least come off a Saver if you may:
Throw boldly at the Sum the Gods have set;
These on your side with all their fortunes bet.*

All perfectly agreeable to the present Customs and best Fashions of our Metropolis.

But the principal branch of the Alamode is the PRURIENT, a Style greatly advanced and honoured of late by the practice of persons of the first Quality; and by the encouragement of the Ladies, not unsuccessfully introduced even into the Drawing-room. Indeed its incredible Progress and Conquests may be compared to those of the great Se- sostris, and are every where known by the same Marks, the images of the genital parts of men or women. It consists wholly of metaphors drawn from two most fruitful sources or springs, the very Bathos of the human body, that is to say, * * *
and * * * Hiatus magnus lachrymabilis. * * *
* * * * *

And selling of Bargains, and double Entendre, and Κιβέρισμος and 'Ολδφιδισμος, all derived from the said sources.

4. The FINICAL Style, which consists of the most curious, affected, mincing metaphors, and partakes of the alamode.

As this, of a Brook dry'd by the Sun.

^h Won by the summer's importuning ray,
Th' eloping stream did from her channel stray,
And with enticing sun-beams stole away.

Of an easy Death.

ⁱ When watchful death shall on his harvest look,
And see thee ripe with age, invite the hook;
He'll gently cut thy bending Stalk, and thee
Lay kindly in the Grave, his Granary.

Of Trees in a Storm.

^k Oaks whose extended arms the winds defy,
The tempest sees their strength, and sighs, and passes by.

^h Blackm. Job, p. 26.

ⁱ Ibid. p. 23.

^k Deann.

Of Water simmering over the Fire.

¹ The sparkling flames raise water to a Smile, Yet the pleas'd liquor pines, and lessens all the while.

5. LASTLY, I shall place the CUMBROUS, which moves heavily under a load of metaphors, and draws after it a long train of words. And the BUSKIN, or Stately, frequently and with great felicity mixed with the former. For as the first is the proper engine to depress what is high, so is the second to raise what is base and low to a ridiculous Visibility: When both these can be done at once, then is the Bathos in perfection; as when a man is set with his head downward, and his breech upright, his degradation is compleat: One end of him as high as ever, only that end is the wrong one. Will not every true lover of the Profund be delighted to behold the most vulgar and low actions of life exalted in the following manner?

Who knocks at the Door?

*From whom thus rudely pleads my loud-tongu'd gate,
That he may enter?——*

¹ Anon. Tonf. Misc. Part. vi. p. 224.

Unable to display this page

Open the Letter.

Wax! render up thy trust.—

Uncork the Bottle, and chip the Bread.

*Apply thine engine to the spongy door,
Set Bacchus from his glassy prison free,
And strip white Ceres of her nut-brown coat.*

C H A P. XIII.

A Project for the Advancement of the Bathos.

THUS have I (my dear Countrymen) with incredible pains and diligence, discovered the hidden sources of the Bathos, or, as I may say, broke open the Abysses of this Great Deep. And having now established good and wholesome Laws, what remains but that all true moderns with their utmost n Theob. Double Falshood.

might do proceed to put the same in execution? In order whereto, I think I shall in the second place highly deserve of my Country, by proposing such a Scheme, as may facilitate this great end.

As our number is confessedly far superior to that of the enemy, there seems nothing wanting but Unanimity among ourselves. It is therefore humbly offered, that all and every individual of the Bathos do enter into a firm association, and incorporate into One regular Body, whereof every member, even the meanest, will some way contribute to the support of the whole; in like manner, as the weakest reeds, when joined in one bundle, become infrangible. To which end our Art ought to be put upon the same foot with other Arts of this Age. The vast improvement of modern manufactures ariseth from their being divided into several branches, and parcelled out to several trades: For instance, in Clock-making, one artist makes the balance, another the spring, another the crown-wheels, a fourth the case, and the principal workman puts all together: To this œconomy we owe the perfection of our modern watches, and doubtless we also might that of our modern Poetry and Rhetoric, were the several parts branched out in the like manner.

Nothing is more evident than that divers persons, no other way remarkable, have each a strong disposition to the formation of some particular Trope or Figure. Aristotle saith, that the Hyperbole is an ornament fit for young Men of Quality; accordingly we find in those Gentlemen a wonderful propensity toward it, which is marvellously improved by Travelling: Soldiers also and Seamen are very happy in the same Figure. The Periphrasis or Circumlocution is the peculiar talent of Country Farmers; the Proverb and Apologue of old men at their clubs; the Eilipsis or Speech by half words, of Ministers and Politicians; the Aposiopesis of Courtiers; the Litotes or Diminution, of Ladies, Whisperers and Backbiters; and the Anadiplosis of common Cryers and Hawkers, who, by redoubling the same words, persuade people to buy their oysters, green haatings, or new ballads. Epithets may be found in great plenty at Billingsgate, Sarcasm and Irony learned upon the Water, and the Epiphonema or Exclamation frequently from the Beargarden, and as frequently from the Hear him of the House of Commons.

Now each man applying his whole time and genius upon his particular Figure, would doubtless attain to perfection; and when each became incorporated and sworn into the Society (as hath been proposed) a Poet or Orator would have no more to do but to send to the particular Traders in each Kind, to the Metaphorist for his Allegories, to the Simile-maker for his Comparisons, to the Ironist for his Sarcasms, to the Apothegmatist for his Sentences, etc.

whereby a Dedication or Speech would be composed in a moment, the superior artist having nothing to do but to put together all the Materials.

I therefore propose that there be contrived with all convenient dispatch, at the publick expence, a Rhetorical Chest of Drawers, consisting of three Stories, the highest for the Deliberative, the middle for the Demonstrative, and the lowest for the Judicial. These shall be divided into Loci, or Places, being repositories for Matter and Argument in the several kinds of oration or writing; and every Drawer shall again be subdivided into Cells, resembling those of Cabinets for Rarities. The apartment for Peace or War, and that of the Liberty of the Press, may in a very few days be filled with several arguments perfectly new; and the Vituperative Partition will as easily be replenished with a most choice collection, entirely of the growth and manufacture of the present age. Every composer will soon be taught the use of this Cabinet, and how to manage all the Registers of it, which will be drawn out much in the manner of those in an Organ.

The Keys of it must be kept in honest hands, by some Reverend Prelate, or Valiant Officer, of unquestioned Loyalty and Affection to every present Establishment in Church and State; which will suffice

ently guard against any mischief which might otherwise be apprehended from it.

And being lodged in such hands, it may be at discretion let out by the Day, to several great Orators in both Houses, from whence it is to be hoped much Profit and Gain will also accrue to our Society.

C H A P. XIV.

How to make Dedications, Panegyrics, or Satires, and of the Colours of Honourable and Dishonourable.

NOW of what necessity the foregoing Project may prove, will appear from this single consideration, that nothing is of equal consequence to the success of our Works, as Speed and Dispatch. Great pity it is, that solid brains are not, like other solid bodies, constantly endowed with a velocity in sinking, proportioned to their heaviness: For it is with the flowers of the Bathos as with those of Nature, which if the careful gardener brings not hastily to market in the Morning, must unprofitably perish and wither before Night. And of all our Productions none is so short-lived as the Dedication and Panegyric, which are often but the Praise of a Day, and become by the next utterly useless, improper, indecent, and false. This is the more to be lamented, inasmuch as these two are the sorts whereon in a manner depends that Profit, which must still be remembered to be the main end of our Writers and Speakers.

We shall therefore employ this chapter in shewing the quickest method of composing them; after which we will teach a short Way to Epic Poetry. And these being confessedly the works of most Importance and Difficulty, it is presumed we may leave the rest to each author's own learning or practice.

First of Panegyric: Every man is honourable, who is so by Law, Custom, or Title. The Publick are better judges of what is honourable than private Men. The Virtues of great Men, like those of Plants, are inherent in them, whether they are exerted or not; and the more strongly inherent, the less they are exerted; as a man is the more rich, the less he spends. All great Ministers, without either private or œconomical Virtue, are virtuous by their Posts; liberal and generous upon the Publick Money, provident upon Publick Supplies, just by paying Publick Interest, couragious and magnanimous by the Fleets and Armies, magnificent upon the Publick Expences, and prudent by Publick Success. They have by their Office, a right to a share of the Publick Stock of Virtues; besides, they are, by Prescription immemorial, invested in all the celebrated virtues of their Predecessors in the same stations, especially those of their own Ancestors.

As to what are commonly called the Colours of Honourable and Dishonourable, they are various in different Countries: In this they are Blue, Green, and Red.

But forasmuch as the duty we owe to the Publick doth often require that we should put some things in a strong light, and throw a shade over others, I shall explain the method of turning a vicious Man into a Hero.

The first and chief rule is the Golden Rule of Transformation, which consists in converting Vices into their bordering Virtues. A Man who is a Spendthrift, and will not pay a just Debt, may have his Injustice transformed into Liberality; Cowardice may be metamorphosed into Prudence; Intemperance into good Nature and good-Fellowship; Corruption into Patriotism; and Lewdness into Tenderness and Facility.

The second is the Rule of Contraries: It is certain, the less a Man is endued with any Virtue, the more need he has to have it plentifully bestowed, especially those good qualities of which the world generally believes he hath none at all: For who will thank a Man for giving him that which he has?

The Reverse of these Precepts will serve for Satire, wherein we are ever to remark, that whoso loseth his place, or becomes out of favour with the Government, hath forfeited his share in publick Praise and Honour. Therefore the truly publick spirited writer ought in duty to strip him whom the government hath stripped; which is the real poetical Justice of this age. For a full collection of Topicks and Epithets to be used in the Praise and Dispraise of Ministerial and Unministerial Persons, I refer to our Rhetorical Cabinet; concluding with an earnest exhortation to all my brethren, to observe the Precepts here laid down, the neglect of which hath cost some of them their Ears in a Pillory.

C H A P. XV.

A Receipt to make an Epic Poem.

AN Epic Poem, the Critics agree, is the greatest work human nature is capable of. They have already laid down many mechanical rules for compositions of this sort, but at the same time they cut off almost all undertakers from the possibility of ever performing them; for the first qualification they unanimously require in a Poet, is a Genius. I shall here endeavour (for the benefit of my countrymen) to make it manifest, that Epic Poems may be made without a Genius, nay without Learning or much Reading. This must necessarily be of great use to all those who confess they never Read, and of whom the world is convinced they never Learn. Moliere observes of making a dinner, that any man can do it with Money, and if a professed Cook cannot do it without, he has his Art for nothing; the same may be said of making a Poem, 'tis easily brought about by him that has a Genius, but the skill lies in doing it without one. In pursuance of this end I shall present the reader with a plain and certain Recipe, by which any author in the Bathos may be qualified for this grand performance.

For the FABLE.

Take out of any old Poem, History-book, Romance, or Legend (for instance, Gioffry of Monmouth or Don Belianis of Greece) those parts of story which afford most scope for long Descriptions: Put these pieces together, and throw all the adventures you fancy into one Tale. Then take a Hero, whom you may chuse for the sound of his name, and put him into the midst of these adventures: There let him work for twelve books; at the end of which you may take him out, ready prepared to conquer or to marry; it being necessary that the conclusion of an Epic Poem be fortunate.

To make an EPISODE.

Take any remaining adventure of your former collection, in which you could no way involve your Hero; or any unfortunate accident that was too good to be thrown away; and it will be of use, applied to any other person, who may be lost and evaporate in the course of the work, without the least damage to the composition.

For the MORAL and ALLEGORY.

These you may extract out of the Fable afterwards, at your leisure: Be sure you strain them sufficiently.

For the MANNERS.

For those of the Hero, take all the best qualities you can find in the most celebrated Heroes of antiquity; if they will not be reduced to a Consistency, lay them all on a heap upon him. But be sure they are qualities which your Patron would be thought to have; and to prevent any mistake which the world may be subject to, select from the alphabet those capital letters that compose his name, and set them at the head of a Dedication before your Poem. However, do not absolutely observe the exact quantity of these Virtues, it not being determined whether or no it be necessary for the Hero of a Poem to be an honest Man. For the Under-Characters, gather them from Homer and Virgil, and change the names as occasion serves.

For the MACHINES.

Take of Deities, male and female, as many as you can use: Separate them into two equal parts, and keep Jupiter in the middle: Let Juno put him in a ferment, and Venus mollify him. Remember on all occasions to make use of volatile Mercury. If you have need of Devils, draw them out of Milton's Paradise, and extract your Spirits from Tasso. The use of these Machines is evident; since no Epic Poem can possibly subsist without them, the wisest way is to reserve them for your greatest necessities: When you cannot extricate your Hero by any human means, or yourself by your own wit, seek relief from Heaven, and the Gods will do your business very readily. This is according to the direct Prescription of Horace in his Art of Poetry,

Of the ART OF SINKING IN POETRY. 185

Nec Deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice Nodus Inciderit.——

That is to say, A Poet should never call upon the Gods for their Assistance, but when he is in great Perplexity.

For the DESCRIPTIONS.

For a Tempest. Take Eurus, Zephyr, Auster, and Boreas, and cast them together in one verse: add to these of Rain, Lightning and Thunder (the loudest you can) quantum sufficit; mix your Clouds and Billows well together till they foam, and thicken your Description here and there with a Quicksand. Brew your Tempest well in your head, before you set it a blowing.

For a Battle. Pick a large quantity of Images and Descriptions from Homer's Iliads, with a spice or two of Virgil, and if there remain any overplus, you may lay them by for a Skirmish. Season it well with Similes, and it will make an excellent Battle.

For a Burning Town. If such a Description be necessary (because it is certain there is one in Virgil) old Troy is ready burnt to your hands. But if you fear that would be thought borrowed, a Chapter or two of the Theory of the Conflagration, well circumstanced and done into verse, will be a good Succedaneum.

As for Similes and Metaphors, they may be found all over the Creation; the most ignorant may gather them, but the difficulty is in applying them. For this advise with your Bookseller.

C H A P. XVI.

A Project for the Advancement of the Stage.

IT may be thought that we should not wholly omit the Drama, which makes so great and so lucrative a part of Poetry. But this Province is so well taken care of, by the present Managers of the Theatre, that it is perfectly needless to suggest to them any other Methods than they have already practised for the advancement of the Bathos.

Here therefore, in the Name of all our Brethren, let me return our sincere and humble Thanks to the most August Mr Barton Booth, the most Serene Mr Robert Wilks, and the most Undaunted Mr Colly Cibber; of whom let it be known, when the People of this Age shall be Ancestors, and to all the Succession of our Successors, that to this present Day they continue to Out-do even their own Out-doings: And when the inevitable Hand of sweeping Time shall have brushed off all the Works of To-day, may this Testimony of a Co-temporary Critic to their Fame, be extended as far as To-morrow.

Yet, if to so wise an Administration it be possible any thing can be added, it is that more ample and comprehensive Scheme which Mr Dennis and Mr Gildon (the two greatest Critics and Reformers then living) made publick in the year 1720, in a Project signed with their names, and dated the 2^d of February. I cannot better conclude than by presenting the Reader with the Substance of it.

1. It is propos'd, That the two Theatres be incorporated into one Company; that the Royal Academy of Musick be added to them as an Orchestra; and that Mr Figg with his Prize-fighters, and Violante with the Rope-dancers, be admitted in Partnership.

2. That a spacious Building be erected at the public expence, capable of containing at least ten thousand Spectators, which is become absolutely necessary by the great addition of Children and Nurfs to the Audience, since the new Entertainments. That there be a Stage as large as the Athenian, which was near ninety thousand geometrical paces square, and separate divisions for the two Houses of Parliament, my Lords the Judges, the honourable the Directors of the Academy, and the Court of Aldermen, who shall all have their Places frank.

3. If Westminster-Hall be not allotted to this service (which by reason of its proximity to the two Chambers of Parliament above-mentioned, seems not altogether improper;) it is left to the wisdom of the Nation whether Somerset-House may not be demolished, and a Theatre built upon that Site, which lies convenient to receive Spectators from the County of Surrey, who may be wafted thither by water carriage, esteemed by all Projectors the cheapest whatsoever. To this may be added, that the river Thames may in the readiest manner convey those eminent Personages from Courts beyond the seas, who may be drawn either by Curiosity to behold some of our most celebrated Pieces, or by Affection to see their Countrymen, the Harlequins and Eunuchs; of which convenient notice may be given, for two or three months before, in the public Prints.

4. That the Theatre abovesaid be environed with a fair Quadrangle of Buildings, fitted for the accommodation of decayed Critics and Poets; out of whom Six of the most aged (their age to be computed from the year wherein their first work was published) shall be elected to manage the affairs of the society, provided nevertheless that the Laureat for the time being, may be always one. The Head or President over all (to prevent disputes, but too frequent among the learned) shall be the most ancient Poet and Critic to be found in the whole Island.

5. The Male-Players are to be lodged in the garrets of the said Quadrangle, and to attend the persons of the Poets, dwelling under them, by brushing their apparel, drawing on their shoes, and the like. The Actresses are to make their beds, and wash their linen.

6. A large room shall be set apart for a Library to consist of all the modern Dramatic Poems, and all the Criticisms extant. In the midst of this room shall be a round table for the Council of Six to sit and deliberate on the Merits of Plays. The Majority shall determine the Dispute; and if it should happen that three and three should be of each side, the President shall have a casting Voice, unless where the Contention may run so high as to require a decision by Single Combat.

7. It may be convenient to place the Council of Six in some conspicuous situation in the Theatre, where after the manner usually practised by composers in music, they may give Signs (before settled and agreed upon) of Dislike or Approbation. In consequence of these Signs the whole audience shall be required to clap or hiss, that the Town may learn certainly when and how far they ought to be pleas'd?

8. It is submitted whether it would not be proper to distinguish the Council of Six by some particular Habit or Gown of an honourable shape and colour, to which may be added a square Cap and a white Wand.

9. That to prevent unmarried Actresses making away with their Infants, a competent provision be allowed for the nurture of them, who shall for that reason be deemed the Children of the society; and that they may be educated according to the Genius of their parents, the said Actresses shall declare upon Oath (as far as their memory will allow) the true names and qualities of their several fathers. A private Gentleman's Son shall at the public expence be brought up a Page to attend the Council of Six: A more ample provision shall be made for the son of a Poet; and a greater still for the son of a Critic.

10. If it be discovered that any Actress is got with Child, during the Interludes of any Play wherein she hath a Part, it shall be reckoned a neglect of her business, and she shall forfeit accordingly. If any Actor for the future shall commit Murder, except upon the stage, he shall be left to the laws of the land; the like is to be understood of Rabbery and Theft. In all other cases, particularly in those for Debt, it is proposed that this, like the other Courts of Whitehall and St. James's, may be held a Place of Privilege. And whereas it has been found, that an obligation to satisfy poultry Creditors has been a Discouragement to Men of Letters, if any Person of Quality or others shall send for any Poet or Critic of this Society to any remote quarter of the town, the said Poet or Critic shall freely pass and repass without being liable to an Arrest.

11. The forementioned Scheme in its several regulations may be supported by Profits arising from every Third-night throughout the year. And as it would be hard to suppose that so many persons could live without any food (though from the former course of their lives, a very little will be deemed sufficient) the masters of calculation will, we believe, agree, that out of those Profits, the said persons might be subsisted in a sober and decent manner. We will venture to affirm further, that not only the proper magazines of Thunder and Lightning, but Patnt, Diet-drinks, Spitting-pots, and all other Necessaries of Life, may in like manner fairly be provided for.

12. If some of the Articles may at first view seem liable to Objections, particularly those that give so vast a power to the Council of Six (which is indeed larger than any entrusted to the great Officers of state) this may be obviated, by swearing those Six Persons of his Majesty's Privy Council, and obliging them to pass every thing of moment, previously, at that most honourable Board.

C O N T E N T S.

TO THE

ART OF SINKING IN POETRY.

CHAP.	Page.
I. I N T R O D U C T I O N	111
II. That the Bathos, or Profund, is the natural Taste of Man, and in particular, of the present Age	115
III. The Necessity of the Bathos, physically considered	117
IV. That there is an Art of the Bathos or Profund	119
V. Of the true Genius for the Profund, and by what it is constituted	121
VI. Of the several Kinds of Genius in the Profund, and the Marks and Characters of each	128
VII. Of the Profund, when it consists in the Thought	132
VIII. Of the Profund, consisting in the Circumstances, and of Amplification and Periphrase in general.	136
IX. Of Imitation, and the Manner of Imitating	141

CHAP.	Page.
X. Of Tropes and Figures; and first of the variegating, confounding, and reversing Figures	145
XI. The Figures continued: Of the magnifying and diminishing Figures	155
XII. Of Expression, and the several Sorts of Style of the present Age	163
XIII. A Project for the Advancement of the Bathos	174
XIV. How to make Dedications, Panegyricks or Satires, and of the Colours of Honourable and Dishonourable	178
XV. A Receipt to make an Epic Poem	182
XVI. A Project for the Advancement of the Stage	187

1. The first part of the work is devoted to a general survey of the subject.	1
2. The second part is devoted to a detailed examination of the various aspects of the subject.	10
3. The third part is devoted to a discussion of the various theories and methods of the subject.	20
4. The fourth part is devoted to a discussion of the various applications of the subject.	30
5. The fifth part is devoted to a discussion of the various results of the subject.	40
6. The sixth part is devoted to a discussion of the various conclusions of the subject.	50
7. The seventh part is devoted to a discussion of the various prospects of the subject.	60
8. The eighth part is devoted to a discussion of the various problems of the subject.	70
9. The ninth part is devoted to a discussion of the various questions of the subject.	80
10. The tenth part is devoted to a discussion of the various topics of the subject.	90

Virgilius Restauratus :

S E U

MARTINI SCRIBLERI,

Summi Critici,

Castigationum in Aeneidem

S P E C I M E N.

AENEIDEM totam, Amice Lector, innumerabilibus poene mendis scaturientem, ad pristinum sensum revocabimus. In singulis fere versibus spuriae occurrunt lectiones, in omnibus quos unquam vidi codicibus, aut vulgatis aut ineditis, ad opprobrium usque Criticorum, in hunc diem existentes. Interea adverte oculos, et his paucis frui. At si quae sint in hisce castigationibus, de quibus non satis liquet, syllabarum quantitates, προλεγόμενα nostra Libro ipsi praefigenda, ut consulas, moneo.

I. SPECIMEN LIBRI PRIMI:

VER. I.

ARMA Virumque cano, Trojae qui primus ab oris

Italiam, fato profugus, Lavinaque venit

Littora. multum ille et terris jaçtatus et alto,

Vi superûm——

Arma Virumque cano, Trojae qui primus ab aris

Italiam, flatu profugus Latinaque venit

Littora. multum ille et terris vexatus et alto,

Vi superum——

Ab aris, nempe Hercaei Jovis. vide lib. ii. v. 512.
550.—Flatu, ventorum Aeoli, ut sequitur—Latina certe littora cum Aeneas aderat, Lavina non nisi postea ab ipso nominata, lib. xii. v. 193 — Jaçtatus terris non convenit.

II. VER. 52.

Et quisquis Numen Junonis adoret?

Et quisquis Nomen Junonis adoret?

Longe melius, quam, ut antea, Nunien. et procul-dubio sic Virgilius.

III. VER. 86.

Venti, velut agmine facto,
Qua data porta ruunt

Venti, velut aggere fracto,
Qua data porta ruunt.
Sic corrige, meo periculo.

IV. VER. 117.

Fidumque vehebat Orontem,

Fortemque vehebat Orontem.

Non fidum. quia Epitheton Achatae notissimum
Oronti nunquam datur.

V. VER. 119.

Excutitur, pronusque magister

Volvitur in caput.

Excutitur : pronusque magis ter

Volvitur in caput.

Aio Virgilium aliter non scripsisse, quod plane confirmatur ex sequentibus—Ast illum ter fluctus ibidem Torquet.

VI. VER. 122.

Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto
Arma virum.

Armi hominum: Ridicule antea Arma virum, quae, ex ferro conflata, quomodo possunt natare?

VII. VER. 151.

Atque rotis summas leviter perlabitur undas.

Atque rotis spumas leviter perlabitur undas.

Summas, et leviter perlabi, pleonasmus est: Mirifice altera lectio Neptuni agilitatem et celeritatem exprimit. simili modo Noster de Camilla, Æn. xi. Illa vel intactae segetis per summa volaret, etc. hyperbolice.

VIII. VER. 154.

Jamque faeces et saxa volant, furor arma ministrat.

Jam faeces et saxa volant, fugiuntque ministri:

uti solent, instanti periculo——Faeces facibus longe praestant; quid enim nisi faeces jactarent vulgus sordidum?

IX. VER. 170.

Fronte sub adversa scopulis pendentibus antrum,
 Intus aquae dulces, vivoque sedilia saxo.

Fronte sub adversa populis prudentibus antrum.
 Sic malim, longe potius quam scopulis pendentibus :
 Nugae! nonne vides versu sequenti dulces aquas ad potandum et sedilia ad discumbendum dari? In quorum usum? quippe prudentium.

X. VER. 183.

Tres littore cervos
 Prospicit errantes : hos tota armenta sequuntur
 A tergo — —

Tres littore corvos
 Aspicit errantes: hos agmina tota sequuntur
 A tergo — —
Cervi, lectio vulgata, absurditas notissima: haec ani-malia in Africa non inventa, quis nescit? At mottus et ambulandi ritus Corvorum, quis non agnorit hoc loco?
Littore, locus ubi errant Corvi, uti Noster alibi,

Et sola in sicca secum spatiatur arena.

Omen praeclarissimum, immo et agminibus militum
 frequenter observatum, ut patet ex Historicis.

XI. VER. 748.

Arcturum, pluviasque Hyades, geminosque Triones.
 Error gravissimus. Corrigo, — septemque Triones.

XII. VER. 631.

Quare agite, o juvenes, lectis succedite nostris Lectis potius dicebat Dido, polita magis oratione, et quae unica voce et torum et mensam exprimebat.
 Hanc lectionem probe confirmat appellatio o juvenes!
 Duplicem hunc sensum alibi etiam Maro lepide in-nuit, Æn. iv. ver. 19.

Huic uni forsan potui succumbere culpa:

Anna! fatebor enim——

Sic corriges,

Huic uni [viro scil.] potui succumbere; culpa,

Anna? fatebor enim, etc.

Vox succumbere quam eleganter ambigua!

LIBER SECUNDUS.

VER. I.

CONTICUERE omnes, intentique ora tenebant;

Inde toro Pater Aeneas sic orsus ab alto;

Concubuerunt omnes intenteque ora tenebant;

Inde toro satur Aeneas sic orsus ab alto.

Concubuerunt, quia toro Aeneam vidimus accumbentem: quin et altera ratio, scil. conticuere et ora tenebant; tautologice dictum. In manuscripto perquam rarissimo in patris museo legitur, ore gemebant; sed magis ingeniose quam vere. Satur Aeneas, quippe qui jamjam a prandio surrexit: pater nihil ad rem.

II. VER. 3.

Infandum, Regina, jubes renovare dolorem.

Infantum, Regina, jubes renovare dolorem.

Sic haud dubito veterrimis codicibus scriptum fuisse: quod satis constat ex perantiqua illa Britanorum cantilena vocata Chevy Chace, cujus autor hunc locum sibi ascivit in haec verba,

The Child may rue that is unborn.

III. VER. 4.

Trojanas ut opes, et lamentabile regnum
Eruerint Danaï.

Trojanas ut oves, et lamentabile regnum Diruerint
 —Mallem oves potius quam opes, quoniam in anti-quissimis illis temporibus oves et armenta divitiarum regum fuere. Vel fortasse oves Paridis innuit, quas super Idam nuperrime pascebat, et jam in vindictam pro Helenae raptu, a Menelao, Ajace, [vid. Hor.
 Sat. ii. 3.] aliisque ducibus, merito occisas.

IV. VER. 5.

Quaeque ipse miserrima vidi,
 Et quorum pars magna fui.

Quaeque ipse miserrimus audi,
 Et quorum pars magna fui——

Omnia tam audita quam visa recta distinctione enarrare hic Aeneas profitetur; multa, quorum nox ea fa-talis sola conscia fuit, vir probus et pius tanquam visa referre non potuit.

V. VER. 7.

Quis talia fando
 Temperet a lacrymis?

Quis talia flendo

Temperet in lacrymis? —

Major enim doloris indicatio, absque modo lacrymare, quam solummodo a lacrymis non temperare.

VI. VER. 9.

Et jam nox humida coelo

Praecipitat, suadentque cadentia sidera somnos.

Et jam nox lumina coelo

Praecipitat, suadentque latentia sidera somnos.

Lectio, humida, vespertinum rorem solum innuere videtur magis mi aridet lumina, quae latentia postquam praecipitantur, Aurorae adventum annunciant.

Sed si tantus amor casus cognoscere nostros,

Et breviter Trojae supremum audire laborem.

Sed si tantus amor curas cognoscere noctis,

Et breve ter Trojae superumque audire labores.

Curae noctis (scilicet noctis excidii Trojani) magis compendiose (vel, ut dixit ipse, breviter) totam belli catastrophem denotat, quam diffusa illa et indeterminata lectio, casus nostros. Ter audire gratum fuisse Didoni patet ex libro quarto, ubi dicitur, Iliacosque iterum demens audire labores exposcit: Ter enim pro saepe usurpatur. Trojae, superumque labores; recte, quia non tantum homines sed et Dii sese his laboribus immiscuerunt. Vide Æn. ii. ver. 610, etc.

Quamquam animus meminisse horret, luctusque refugit,

Incipiam. —

Quamquam animus meminisse horret, luctusque resurgit.

Resurgit multo proprius dolorem renascentem notat, quam, ut hactenus, refugit.

VII. VER. 19.

Fracti bello, fatisque repulsi
Ductores Danaum, tot jam labentibus annis, Instar montis Equum, divina Palladis arte, Aedificant — etc.

Tracti bello, fatisque repulsi.

Tracti et repulsi, Antithesis perpulchra! Fracti frigide et vulgariter.

Equum jam Trojanem (ut vulgus loquitur) adeamus; quem si Equam Graecam vocabis, lector, minime pecces; solae enim femellae utero gestant. Uterumque *armato milite complent—Uteroque recusso Insonuere cavae—Atque utero sonitum quater arma dedere—Inclusos utero Danaos, etc. Vox fœta non convenit maribus, —Scandit fatalis machina muros, Foeta armis—Palladem virginem, equo mari fabricando invigilare decuisse, quis putet? Incredibile prorsus! quamobrem existimo veram equae lectionem passim restituendam, nisi ubi forte, metri causa, equum potius quam equam, genus pro sexu, dixit Maro. Vale! dum! haec paucula corriges, majus opus moveo.*

A
S P E C I M E N
O F
S C R I B L E R U S ' s R E P O R T S .

Stradling versus Stiles.

Le Report del Case argue en le commen Banke devant tous les Justices de mesme le Banke, en le quart an du raygne de Roy Jacques, entre Matthew Stradling, Plant. et Peter Stiles, Def. en un Action propter certos Equos coloratos, Anglice, Wyed Horses, post. per le dit Matthew vers le dit Peter.

Le recitel S I R John Swale, of Swale-Hall in Swaledale Case. Dale fast by the River Swale, Kt. made his Last Will and Testament: In which, among other Bequests was this, viz. Out of the kind Love and Respect that I bear unto my much honoured and good Friend Mr. Matthew Stradling, Gent. I do bequeath unto the said Mat-threw Stradling, Gent. all my black and white Horses. The Testator had six black Horses, six white Horses, and six pyped Horses.

The Debate therefore was, Whether or no Le Point. the said Matthew Stradling should have the said pyped Horses by virtue of the said Bequest.

Pour le Pl. Atkins Apprentice pour le Pl. moy semble que le Pl. recobera.

And first of all it seemeth expedient to consider what is the Nature of Horses, and also what is the Nature of Colours; and so the argument will consequently divide itself in a twofold way, that is to say, the Formal Part and Substantial Part. Horses are the Substantial Part, or thing bequeathed: Black and White the Formal or descriptive Part.

Horse, in a physical Sense, doth import a certain Quadrupede or four-footed Animal, which by the apt and regular Disposition of certain proper and convenient Parts, is adapted, fitted and constituted for the Use and Need of Man. Yea, so necessary and conducive was this Animal conceived to be to the Behoof of the Commonwealth, that sundry and divers Acts of Parliament have from time to time been made in Favour of Horses.

1st Edward VI. Makes the Transporting of Horses out of the Kingdom, no less a Penalty than the forfeiture of 40 l.

2d and 3d Edward VI. Takes from Horse-stealers, the Benefit of their Clergy.

And the Statutes of the 27th and 32d of Henry VIII. condescend so far as to take Care of their very Breed: These our wise Ancestors prudently foreseeing, that they could not better take care of their own Posterity, than by also taking care of that of their Horses.

And of so great esteem are Horses in the Eye of the Common Law, that when a Knight of the Bath committeth any great and enormous Crime, his Punishment is to have his Spurs chopt off with a Clever, being, as Master Bracton well observeth, unworthy to ride on a Horse.

Littleton, Sect. 315, saith. If Tenants in Common make a Lease, reserving for Rent a Horse, they shall have but one Assize, because, said the Book, the Law will not suffer a Horse to be severed. Another Argument of what high Estimation the Law maketh of an Horse.

But as the great difference seemeth not to be so much touching the substantial Part, Horses, let us proceed to the formal or descriptive Part, viz. What Horses they are that come within this Bequest.

Colours are commonly of various Kinds and different Sorts; of which White and Black are the two Extremes, and consequently comprehend within them all other Colours whatsoever.

By a Bequest therefore of black and white Horses, grey or pyed Horses may well pass; for when two Extremes, or remotest Ends, of any thing are devised, the Law, by common Intendment, will intend whatsoever is contained between them to be devised too.

But the present Case is still stronger, coming not only within the Intendment, but also the very Letter of the Words.

By the Word Black, all the Horses that are black are devised; by the Word White, are devised those that are White; and by the same Word, with the Conjunction Copulative, And, between them, the Horses that are Black and White, that is to say Pyed, are devised also.

Whatever is Black and White is Pyed, and whatever is Pyed is Black and White; ergo, Black and White is Pyed, and, vice versa, Pyed is Black and White.

If therefore Black and White Horses are devised, Pyed Horses shall pass by such Devise; but Black and White Horses are devised; ergo, the Pl. shall have the Pyed Horses.

Catlyn Serjeant, Moy semble al'contrary, Pour le The Plaintiff shall not have the Pyed Horses by Defend. Intendment; for if by the devise of Black and White Horses, not only black and white Horses, but Horses of any Colour between these two Extremes may pass, then not only Pyed and Grey Horses, but also Red or Bay Horses would pass likewise; which would be absurd, and against Reason. And this is another strong Argument in Law, Nihil, quod est contra rationem, est licitum; for Reason is the Life of the Law, nay the common Law is nothing but Reason: which is to be understood of artificial Perfection and Reason gotten by long Study, and not of Man's natural Reason; for nemo nascitur artifex, and legal Reason est summa ratio; and therefore if all the Reason that is dispersed into so many different Heads, were united into one, he could not make such a Law as the Law of England; because by many Successions of Ages it has been fixed and refixed by grave and learned Men; so that the old Rule may be verified in it, Neminem oportet esse legibus sapientiores.

As therefore pyed Horses do not come within the Intendment of the Bequest, so neither do they within the Letter of the Words.

A pyed Horse is not a white Horse, neither is a pyed a black Horse; how then can pyed Horses come under the words of Black and white Horses?

Besides, where Custom hath adapted a certain determinate Name to any one thing, in all Devises, Feoffments, and Grants, that certain Names shall be made use of, and no uncertain circumlocutory Descriptions shall be allowed; for Certainty is the Father of Right, and the Mother of Justice.

Le reste del Argument jeo ne pouvois oyer, car jeo fui disturb en mon place.

Le Court fuit longement en doubt' de c'est Matter; et apres grand deliberation eu, Judgment fuit donne pour le Pl. nisi causa.

Motion in Arrest of Judgment, that the pyed Horses were Mares; and thereupon an Inspection was prayed.

Et sur ceo le Court advisare vult.

MEMOIRS of P. P.

CLERK of this PARISH.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The Original of the following extraordinary Treatise consisted of two large Volumes in Folio; which might justly be entitled, The importance of a Man to himself: But, as it can be of very little to any body besides, I have contented myself to give only this short Abstract of it, as a Taste of the true Spirit of Memoir-Writers.

IN the name of the Lord. Amen. I, P. P. by the Grace of God, Clerk of this Parish, writeth this History.

Ever since I arrived at the age of discretion, I had a call to take upon me the function of a Parish-clerk; and to that end, it seemed unto me meet and profitable to associate myself with the Parish-clerks of this Land; such I mean, as were right worthy in their calling, men of a clear and sweet voice, and of becoming gravity.

Now it came to pass, that I was born in the year of our Lord Anno Domini 1655, the year wherein our worthy benefactor, Esquire Bret, did add one Bell to the ring of this Parish. So that it hath been wittily said, "That one and the same day did give "to this our Church two rare gifts, its great Bell
"and its Clerk.

Even when I was at school, my mistress did ever extol me above the rest of the youth, in that I had a laudable voice. And it was further-more observed, that I took a kindly affection unto that Black letter in which our Bibles are printed. Yea, often did I exercise myself in singing godly ballads, such as The Lady and Death, The Children in the Wood, and Chevy Chase; and not like other children, in lewd and trivial ditties. Moreover, while I was a boy, I always adventured to lead the Psalm next after Master William Harris, my predecessor, who (it must be confessed to the Glory of God) was a most excellent Parish-clerk in that his day.

Yet be it acknowledged, that at the age of sixteen I became a Company-keeper, being led into idle conversation by my extraordinary love to Ringing; insomuch, that in a short time I was acquainted with every set of bells in the whole country: Neither could I be prevailed upon to absent myself from Wakes, being called thereunto by the harmony of the steeple. While I was in these societies, I gave myself up to unspiritual pastimes, such as wrestling, dancing, and cudgel-playing; so that I often returned to my father's house with a broken pate. I had my head broken at Milton by Thomas Wyat, as we played a bout or two for an Hat, that was edged with silver galloon. But in the year following I broke the head of Henry Stubbs, and obtained an hat not inferior to the former. At Yelverton I encountered George Cummins, Weaver, and behold my head was broken a second time! At the wake of Waybrook I engaged William Simkins, Tanner, when lo! thus was my head broken a third time, and much blood trickled therefrom. But I administered to my comfort, saying within myself, "What man is there, howsoever dextrous in "any craft, who is for aye on his guard?" A week after I had a base-born child laid unto me; for in the days of my youth I was looked upon as a follower of venereal fantasies: Thus was I led into sin by the comeliness of Susannah Smith, who first tempted me, and then put me to shame; for indeed she was a maiden of a seducing eye, and pleasant feature. I humbled myself before the Justice, I acknowledged my crime to our Curate; and to do away mine offences, and make her some atonement, was joined to her in holy wedlock on the sabbath-day following.

How often do those things which seem unto us misfortunes, redound to our advantage! For the Minister (who had long looked on Susanna as the most lovely of his parishioners) liked so well of my demeanour, that he recommended me to the honour of being his Clerk, which was then become vacant by the decease of good Master William Harris.

Here ends the first chapter; after which follow fifty or sixty pages of his amours in general, and that particular one with Susanna his present wife; but I proceed to chapter the ninth.

No sooner was I elected into mine office, but I laid aside the powder'd gallantries of my youth, and became a new man. I considered myself as in some wise of ecclesiastical dignity, since by wearing a band, which is no small part of the ornament of our Clergy, I might not unworthily be deemed as it were a shred of the linnen vestment of Aaron.

Thou may'st conceive, O reader, with what concern I perceived the eyes of the congregation fixed upon me, when I first took my place at the feet of the Priest. When I raised the psalm, how did my voice quaver for fear! and when I arrayed the shoulders of the Minister with the surplice, how did my joints tremble under me! I said within myself,

“Remember, Paul, thou stand’st before men of high “worship, the wise Mr Justice Freeman, the grave “Mr Justice Tonson, the good Lady Jones, and “the two virtuous gentlewomen her daughters, nay,
 “the great Sir Thomas Truby, Knight and Baronet,
 “and my young master the Esquire, who shall one “day be Lord of this Manor:” Notwithstanding which, it was my good hap to acquit myself to the good liking of the whole congregation; but the Lord forbid I should glory therein.

The next chapter contains an account how he discharged the several duties of his office : in particular he insists on the following :

I was determined to reform the manifold Corruptions and Abuses which had crept into the Church.

First, I was especially severe in whipping forth dogs from the Temple, all excepting the lap-dog of the good widow Howard, a sober dog which yelped not, nor was there offence in his mouth.

Secondly, I did even proceed to moroseness, tho’ fore against my heart, unto poor babes, in tearing from them the half-eaten apples which they privily munch’d at Church. But verily it pity’d me, for I remember’d the days of my youth.

Thirdly, With the sweat of my own hands, I did make plain and smooth the dogs ears throughout our great Bible.

Fourthly, The pews and benches which were formerly swept but once in three years, I caus'd every Saturday to be swept with a besom and trimmed.

Fifthly and lastly, I caus'd the surplice to be neatly darned, washed, and laid in fresh lavender, (yea, and sometimes to be sprinkled with rose-water) and I had great laud and praise from all the neighbouring Clergy, forasmuch as no parish kept the Minister in cleaner linnen.

Notwithstanding these his publick cares, in the eleventh chapter he informs us he did not neglect his usual occupations as a handy craftsman.

Shoes, saith he, did I make, (and if intreated, mend) with good approbation. Faces also did I shave, and I clipped the hair. Chirurgery also I practis'd in the worming of Dogs; but to bleed adventured I not, except the poor. Upon this my twofold profession, there pass'd among men a merry tale delectable enough to be rehearsed: How that being overtaken with liquor on Saturday evening, I shav'd the Priest with Spanish blacking for shoes instead of a wash-ball, and with lamp-black Powder'd his perriwig. But these were sayings of men, delighting in their own conceits more than in the truth. For it is well known, that great was my care and skill in these my crafts; yea, I once had the honour of trimming Sir Thomas himself, without fetching blood. Furthermore, I was sought unto to geld the Lady Frances her spaniel, which was wont to go astray: He was called Toby, that is to say, Tobias. And 3dly, I was entrusted with a gorgeous pair of shoes of the said Lady, to set an heel-piece thereon; and I received such praise therefore, that it was said all over the parish, I should be recommended unto the King to mend shoes for his Majesty: whom God preserve! Amen.

The rest of this chapter I purposely omit, for it must be owned that when he speaks as a Shoemaker he is very absurd. He talks of Moses's pulling off his shoes, of tanning the hides of the Bulls of Basan, of Simon the Tanner, etc. and takes up four or five pages to prove that when the Apostles were instructed to travel without shoes, the precept did not extend to their successors.

The next chapter relates how he discovered a Thief with a bible and key, and experimented verses of the Psalms that had cured Agues.

I pass over many others which inform us of parish affairs only, such as of the Succession of Curates; a list of the weekly Texts; what Psalms he chose on proper occasions; and what children were born and buried: the last of which articles he concludes thus:

That the shame of women may not endure, I speak not of Bastards; neither will I name the Mothers, although thereby I might delight many grave women of the parish: Even her who hath done penance in the sheet will I not mention, forasmuch as the church hath been witness of her disgrace: Let the father who hath made due composition with the Church-wardens to conceal his infirmity, rest in peace; my pen shall not bewray him, for I also have sinned.

The next chapter contains what he calls a great Revolution in the Church, part of which I transcribe.

Now was the long expected time arrived, when the psalms of king David should be hymn'd unto the same tunes to which he played them upon his harp: (so was I informed by my Singing-master, a man right cunning in Psalmody:) Now was our over-abundant quaver and trilling done away, and in lieu thereof was instituted the Sol-fa, in such guise as is sung in his Majesty's chapel. We had London singing masters sent into every parish, like unto Excise-men; and I also was ordained to adjoin myself unto them, though an unworthy disciple, in order to instruct my fellow-parishioners in this new manner of Worship. What tho' they accused me of humming through the nostril, as a Sacbut? yet would I not forego that harmony, it having been agreed by the worthy parish-clerks of London still to preserve the same. I tutored the young men and maidens to tune their voices as it were a psaltery, and the Church on the Sunday was filled with these new Hallelujahs.

Then follow full seventy chapters, containing an exact detail of the Law-suits of the Parson and his Parishioners concerning tythes, and near a hundred pages left blank, with an earnest desire that the history might be compleated by any of his successors, in whose time these suits should be ended.

The next chapter contains an account of the Briefs read in the church, and the sums collected upon each. For the reparation of nine churches, collected at nine several times, 2 s. and 7d. $\frac{3}{4}$. For fifty families ruined by fire, 1 s. $\frac{1}{2}$. For an inundation, a King Charles's groat given by Lady Frances, etc.

In the next he laments the disuse of Wedding-sermons, and celebrates the benefits arising from those at Funerals, concluding with these Words: Ah! let not the relations of the deceased grudge the small expence of an hat-band, a pair of gloves, and ten shillings, for the satisfaction they are sure to receive from a pious Divine, that their father, brother, or bosom wife, are certainly in heaven.

In another, he draws a panegyrick on one Mrs Margaret Wilkins; but after great encomiums concludes, that notwithstanding all, she was an unprofitable vessel, being a barren woman, and never once having furnished God's church with a christening.

We find in another chapter, how he was much stagger'd in his belief, and disturbed in his conscience, by an Oxford scholar, who had proved to him by logick, that Animals might have rational, nay, immortal souls; but how he was again comforted with the reflection, that if so, they might be allowed christian burial, and greatly augment the fees of the parish.

In the two following chapters he is overpower'd with Vanity. We are told, how he was constantly admitted to all the feasts and banquets of the Church-officers, and the speeches he there made for the good of the parish. How he gave hints to young Clergymen to preach; but above all, how he gave a Text for the 30th of Jannary, which occasioned a most excellent sermon, the merits of which he takes entirely to himself. He gives an account of a conference he had with the Vicar concerning the Use of Texts. Let a preacher (saith he) consider the assembly before whom he preacheth, and unto them adapt his text. Micah the iii^d and 11th affordeth good matter for Courtiers and court-serving men. The heads of the land judge for reward; and the people thereof judge for hire; and the prophets thereof divine for money; yet will they lean upon the Lord, and say, Is not the Lord among us? Were the first Minister to appoint a preacher before the House of Commons, would not he be wise to make choice of these words? Give, and it shall be given unto ye. Or before the Lords, Giving no offence, that the Ministry be not blamed, 2 Cor. vi. 3. Or praising the warm zeal of an Administration, Who maketh his Ministers a flaming fire, Psalm civ. 4. We omit many other of his texts, as too tedious.

From this period, the style of the book rises extremely. Before the next chapter was pasted the Effigies of Dr Sacheverel, and I found the opposite page all on a foam with Politicks.

We are now (says he) arrived at that celebrated year, in which the Church of England was tried in the person of Dr Sacheverel. I had ever the interest of our High-Church at heart, neither would I at any season mingle myself in the societies of Fanaticks, whom I from my Infancy abhorred, more than the Heathen or Gentile. It was in these days I bethought myself, that much profit might accrue unto our Parish, and even unto the Nation, could there be assembled together a number of chosen men of the right spirit, who might argue, refine and define, upon high and great matters. Unto this purpose, I did institute a weekly Assembly of divers worthy men at the Rose and Crown Alehouse, over whom myself (though unworthy) did preside. Yea, I did read unto them the Post-Boy of Mr Roper, and the written letter of Mr Dyer, upon which we communed afterwards among ourselves. Our society was composed of the following Persons; Robert Jenkins, Farrier; Amos Turner, Collar-maker; George Pilcocks, late Exciseman; Thomas White, Wheel-wright; and myself. First, of the first, Robert Jenkins.

He was a man of bright parts and shrewd conceit, for he never shoed an horse of a Whig or a Fanatick, but he lamed him sorely.

Amos Turner, a worthy person, rightly esteemed among us for his sufferings, in that he had been honoured in the stocks for wearing an Oaken bough.

George Pilcocks, a sufferer also; of zealous and laudable freedom of Speech, insomuch that his occupation had been taken from him.

Thomas White, of good repute likewise, for that his uncle, by the Mother's side, had formerly been Servitor at Maudling college, where the glorious Sacheverel was educated.

Now were the eyes of all the parish upon these our weekly councils. In a short space, the Minister came among us; he spake concerning us and our councils to a multitude of other Ministers at the Visitation, and they spake thereof unto the Ministers at London, so that even the Bishops heard and marvelled thereat. Moreover, Sir Thomas, member of Parliament, spake of the same to other members of Parliament; who spake thereof unto the Peers of the Realm. Lo! thus did our counsels enter into the hearts of our Generals and our Law-givers; and from henceforth, even as we devised, thus did they.

After this, the whole book is turned on a sudden, from his own Life, to a History of all the publick Transactions of Europe, compiled from the News-papers of those times. I could not comprehend the meaning of this, till I perceived at last (to my no small Astonishment) that all the Measures of the four last years of the Queen, together with the peace at Utrecht which have been usually attributed to the E—— of O——, D—— of O——, Lords H—— and B——, and other great men; do here most plainly appear, to have been wholly owing to Robert Jenkins, Amos Turner, George Pilcocks, Thomas White, but above all, to P. P.

The reader may be sure I was very inquisitive after this extraordinary writer, whose work I have here abstracted. I took a journey into the Country on purpose; but could not find the least trace of him: till by accident I met an old Clergyman, who said he could not be positive, but thought it might be one Paul Phillips, who had been dead about twelve years. And upon enquiry, all he could learn of that person from the neighbourhood, was, That he had been taken notice of for swallowing Loaches, and remembered by some people by a black and white Cur with one Ear, that constantly followed him.

In the Church-yard, I read his Epitaph, said to be written by himself.

O Reader, if that thou canst read,
Look down upon this Stone;
Do all we can, Death is a man,
That never spareth none.

OF THE POET LAUREATE.

November 19, 1729.

THE time of the election of a Poet Laureate being now at hand, it may be proper to give some account of the rites and ceremonies anciently used at that Solemnity, and only discontinued through the neglect and degeneracy of later times. These we have extracted from an historian of undoubted credit, a reverend bishop, the learned Paulus Jovius; and are the same that were practised under the pontificate of Leo X. the great restorer of learning.

As we now see an age and a court, that for the encouragement of poetry, rivals, if not exceeds, that of this famous Pope, we cannot but wish a restoration of all its honours to poesy; the rather, since there are so many parallel circumstances in the person who was then honoured with the laurel, and in him, who (in all probability) is now to wear it.

I shall translate my author exactly as I find it in the 82d chapter of his Elogia Vir. Doct. He begins with the character of the poet himself, who was the original and father of all Laureates, and called Camillo. He was a plain country-man of Apulia, (whether a shepherd or thresher, is not material.) “ This man (says Jovius) excited by the fame of the “ great encouragement given to poets at court, and “ the high honour in which they were held, came to “ the city, bringing with him a strange kind of lyre “ in his hand, and at least some twenty thousand of “ verses. All the wits and critics of the court flocked “ about him, delighted to see a clown, with a ruddy, “ hale complexion, and in his own long hair, so top “ full of poetry; and at the first sight of him all a“ greed he was born to be Poet Laureate^a. He had “ a most hearty welcome in an island of the river “ Tiber (an agreeable place, not unlike our Rich“ mond) where he was first made to eat and drink
 “ plentifully, and to repeat his Verses to every body.
 “ Then they adorned him with a new and elegant “ garland composed of vine-leaves, laurel, and brast- “ sica (a sort of cabbage) so composed, says my au“ thor, emblematically, Ut tam sales quam lepide ejus “ temulentia, brassicæ remedio cohibenda, notaretur.
 “ He was then saluted by common consent with the

^a Apulus praepingui vultu alacer, et prolixæ comatus, omnino dignus festâ laurea videretur.

“ title of archi-poeta, or arch-poet, in the style of those “ days, in ours, Poet Laureate. This honour the “ poor man received with the most sensible demon“ strations of joy, his eyes drunk with tears and glad“ ness ^b. Next, the public acclamation was ex“ pressed in a canticle, which is transmitted to us, as “ follows:

Salve, brassicea virens corona,
 Et lauro, archipoeta, pampinoque !
 Dignus principis auribus Leonis.

*All hail, arch-poet, without peer !
 Vine, bay, or cabbage, fit to wear,
 And worthy of the prince's ear.*

From hence he was conducted in pomp to the Capitol of Rome, mounted on an elephant, thro' the shouts of the populace, where the ceremony ended.

The historian tells us further, “ That at his in“ troduction to Leo, he not only poured forth ver“ ses, innumerable, like a torrent, but also sung them
 “ with open mouth. Nor was he only once introdu“ ced, or on stated days (like our Laureates) but “ made a companion to his master, and entertained as

^b Manantibus præ gaudio oculis.

“ one of the instruments of his most elegant pleasures.
 “ When the prince was at table, the poet had his “ place at the window. When the prince had ^a half “ eaten his meat, he gave with his own hands the “ rest to the poet. When the poet drank, it was “ out of the prince’s own flaggon, insomuch (says
 “ the historian) that thro’ so great good eating and “ drinking he contracted a most terrible gout.”
 Sorry I am to relate what follows, but that I cannot leave my reader’s curiosity unsatisfied in the catastrophe of this extraordinary man. To use my author’s words, which are remarkable, mortuo Leone profligatisque poetis, etc. “ When Leo died, and poets “ were no more;” (for I would not understand profligatis literally, as if poets then were profligate) this unhappy Laureate was forthwith reduced to return to his country, where, oppressed with old age and want, he miserably perished in a common hospital.

We see from this sad conclusion (which may be of example to the poets of our time) that it were happier to meet with no encouragement at all, to remain at the plough, or other lawful occupation, than to be elevated above their condition, and taken out of the common means of life, without a surer support than the temporary, or at best, mortal favours of the great. It was doubtless for this consideration that when the Royal Bounty was lately extended to a rural genius, care was taken to settle it upon him for life. And it hath been the practice of our Princes, never to remove from the station of Poet Laureate any man who hath once been chosen, tho' never so much greater Genius's might arise in his time. A noble instance, how much the charity of our monarchs hath exceeded their love of fame.

To come now to the intent of this paper. We have here the whole ancient ceremonial of the Laureate. In the first place, the crown is to be mixed with vine-leaves, as the vine is the plant of Bacchus. and full as essential to the honour, as the butt of sack to the salary.

Secondly, the brassica must be made use of as a qualifier of the former. It seems the cabbage was antiently accounted a remedy for drunkenness; a power the French now ascribe to the onion, and style a soup made of it, soupe d'Yvrogne. I would recommend a large mixture of the brassica, if Mr DENNIS be chosen; but if Mr TIBBALD, it is not so necessary, unless the cabbage be supposed to signify the same thing with respect to poets as to taylors, viz. stealing. I should judge it not amiss to add another plant to this garland, to wit, ivy: Not only as it antiently belonged to poets in general, but as it is emblematical of the three virtues of a court poet in particular; it is creeping, dirty, and dangling.

In the next place, a canticle must be composed and sung in laud and praise of the new poet. If Mr CIBBER be laureated, it is my opinion no man can write this but himself: And no man, I am sure, can sing it so affectingly. But what this canticle should be, either in his or the other candidate's case, I shall not pretend to determine.

Thirdly, there ought to be a public show, or entry of the poet: To settle the order or procession of which, Mr ANSTIS and Mr DENNIS ought to have a conference. I apprehend here two difficulties; one, of procuring an elephant; the other of teaching the poet to ride him: Therefore I should imagine the next animal in size or dignity would do best: either a mule or a large ass; particularly if that noble one could be had, whose portraiture makes so great an ornament of the Dunciad, and which (unless I am misinformed) is yet in the park of a nobleman near this city:—Unless Mr CIBBER be the man; who may, with great propriety and beauty, ride on a dragon, if he goes by land; or if he choose the water, upon one of his own swans from Cæsar in Egypt.

We have spoken sufficiently of the ceremony; let us now speak of the qualifications and privileges of the Laureate. First, we see he must be able to make verses extempore, and to pour forth innumerable, if required. In this I doubt Mr TIBBALD. Secondly, he ought to sing, and intrepidly, patulo ore; Here I confess the excellency of Mr CIBBER. Thirdly, he ought to carry a lyre about with him: If a large one be thought too cumbersome, a small one may be contrived to hang about the neck like an order; and be very much a grace to the person. Fourthly, he ought to have a good stomach, to eat and drink whatever his betters think fit; and therefore it is in this high office as in many others, no puny constitution can discharge it. I do not think CIBBER or TIBBALD here so happy: but rather a stanch, vigorous, season'd, and dry old gentleman, whom I have in my eye.

I could also wish at this juncture, such a person as is truly jealous of the honour and dignity of poetry; no joker, or trifler; but a bard in good earnest; nay, not amiss if a critic, and the better if a little obstinate. For when we consider what great privileges have been lost from this office (as we see from the forecited authentick record of Jovius) namely those of feeding from the prince's table, drinking out of his own flaggon, becoming even his domestick and companion; it requires a man warm and resolute, to be able to claim and obtain the restoring of these high honours. I have cause to fear, most of the candidates would be liable, either through the influence of ministers, or for rewards or favours, to give up the glorious rights of the Laureate: Yet I am not without hopes, there is one, from whom a serious and steady assertion of these privileges may be expected; and, if there be such a one, I must do him the justice to say, it is Mr DENNIS the worthy president of our society.

