To my Worthy and Learned Friend, Dr. Walter Pope, Late Proffew of the University of Oxford.

SIR.

Know not what pleasure you could take in bestowing your Commands fo unprofitably, unless it be that for which Nature sometimes cherishes and allows Monsters, The Love of Variety. This only delight you will receive by turning over this rude and unpolish'd Copy, and comparing it with my excellent Patterns, the Greek and Latin. By this you will fee how much a noble Subject is changed and disfigured by an ill Hand, and what reason Alexander had to forbid his Picture to be drawn but by some celebrated Pencil. In Greek Thucydides fo well and fo lively expresses it. that I know not which is more a Poem, his description, or that of Lncretius Tho' it must be said, that the Historian had a vast advantage over the Poet; He having been present on the place, and assaulted by the disease himself, had the Horrour familiar to his Eyes, and all the shapes of the mifery still remaining on his mind, which must needs make a great Impression on his Pen and Fancy. Whereas the Poet was forced to allow his foot-steps, and only work on that matter he allow'd him. This I speak, because it may in some measure too excuse my own defects: For being so far removed from the place whereon the Difease acted his Tragedy; and time having denied us many of the Circumstances, Customs of the Country, and other small things which would be of great use to any one who did intend to be perfect on the Subject; befides, only writing by an Idea of that which I never yet faw, nor care to feel, (being not of the humour of the Painter in Sir Philip Sidney, who thrust himself into the midst of a Fight, that he might the better delineate it.) Having, I fay, all thefe Difadvantages, and many more, for which I must only blame my felf, it cannot be expected that I should come near equalling him, in whom none of the contrary Advanages were wanting. Thus then, Sir, by emboldening me to this rash Attempt, you have given opportunity to the Greek and Latin to triumph over our Mother. Tongue. Yet I would not have the Honour of the Countries or Languages engaged in the Comparison, but that the inequality should reach no farther than the Authors. But I have much reason to fear the just Indignation of that excellent Person, (the present Ornament and Honour of our Nation) whose way of writing I imitate: For he may think himself as much injured by my following him, as were the Heavens by that bold Man's counterfeiting the facred an unimitable noise of Thunder by the found of Brass and Horses Hoofs. I shall only say for my felf that I took Ciceroe's Advice, who bids us in imitation propose the noblest pattern to our Thoughts; for so we may be fure to be raised above the common level, though we come infinitely short of what we aim at. Yet I hope that renowned Poet will have none of my Crimes any way reflect on himselt; for it was not any fault in the excellent Musician, that the weak Bird, endeavouring by straining its Throat, to follow his Notes, de-Aroy's stroy'd her self in the Attempt. Well, Sir, by this, that I have chosen rather to expose my self than to be disobedient, you may guess with what zeal and hazard I strive to approve my self.

SIR, Your most humble and Affectionate Servant, THO. SPRATS

THUCYDIDES, Lib. II.

As it is excellently Translated by Mr. HOBBS.

In the very beginning of Summer, the Peloponnelians, and their Confederates, with two thirds of their Forces, as before invaded Attica, under the Conduct of Archidamus, the Son of Zeuxidamas, King of Lacademon, and after they had encamped themselves, wasted the Country about them.

They had not been many days in Attica, when the Plague first began among the Athenians, said also to have seized formerly on divers other parts, as about Lemnos, and elsewhere; but so great a Plague, and Mortality of Men was never remembred to have happed in any place before. For at first, neither were the Physicians able to cure it, through ignorance of what it was, but died fastest themselves, as being the Men that most approached the Sick; nor any other Art of Man availed what seever. All Supplications to the Gods, and enquiries of Oracles, and what soever other means they used of that kind proved all unprofitable; insomuch as subdued with the greatness of the evil, they gave them all over. It began (by report) first, in that part of Æthiopia that lieth upon Ægypt, and thence fell down into Ægypt and Africk, and into the greatest part of the Territories of the King. It invaded Athens on a sudden, and touched first upon those that dwelt in Pyraus, insomuch as they reported, that the Peloponnesians had cast Poison into their Wells; for Springs there were not any in that place. But afterwards it came up into the high City. and then they died a great deal faster. Now let every Man, Physician or other, concerning the ground of this Sickness, whence it sprung, and what causes he thinks able to produce so great an alteration, speak according to bis own knowledge; for my own part, I will deliver but the manner of it, and lay open only such things, as one may take his Mark by; to discover the same if it come again, having been both sick of it my self. and seen others sick of the same. This Year by confession of all Men was of all other, for other Diseases most free and healthful. If any Man were sick before, his Disease turned to this; if not, yet suddenly, without any apparent cause preceding, and being in perfect health, they were taken first with an extream ache in their Heads, redness and inflamation of the Eyes; and then inwardly their Throats and Tongues grew prefently bloody, and their breath noisom and unsavoury. Upon this followed a fneezing and hoar eness, and not long after, the pain, together with a mighty Cough, came down into the Breast. And when once it was settled in the Stomach, it caused Vomit, and with great Torment came up all mana manner of bilious purgation that the Physicians ever named. Most of them had also the Hickyene, which brought with it a strong Convulsion; and in some ceased quickly, but in others was long before it gave over. Their Bodies outwardly to the touch, were neither very hot nor pale, but reddiff, livid, and beflowred with little Pimples and Whelks; but 600 burned inwardly, as not to endure any the lightest cloaths or linen garment to be upon them, nor any thing but meer nakedness, but rather most willingly to have cast themselves into the cold Water. And many of thems that were not looked to, poffeffed with insatiate thirst, ran unto the Wells and to drink much or little, was indifferent, being still from ease and powaer to sleep as far as ever. As long as the Disease was at the height, their Bodies wasted not, but resisted the Torment beyond all expectation, infotnuch as the most of them either died of their inward burning in nine orseven days, whilft they had yet strength; or if they escaped that then the Disease falling down into their Bellies, and causing there great exulcerations and immoderate loofeness, they dyed many of them afterwards thro' Weakness: For the Disease (which took first the Head) began above, and came down, and passed through the whole Body: and he that overcame: the worst of it, was yet marked with the loss of his extream parts; for breaking out both at their privy Members, and at their Fingers and Toes, mamy with the loss of these sscaped. There were also some that lost their Eyes, and many that presently upon their recovery were taken with such an oblivion of all things what soever, as they neither knew themselves nor their Acquaintance. For this was a kind of Sickness which far surmounted all Expression of Words, and both exceeded Humane Nature in the cruelty wherewith it handled each one, and appeared also otherwise to be none of those Diseases that are bred amongst us, and that especially by this: For all, both Birds and Beafts, that use to feed on Humane Flesh, though many Men lay abroad unburied, either came not at them, or tafteing Perished. An Argument whereof as touching the Birds, is the manifest defect of such Fowl, which were not then seen, neither about the Carsasses, or any where else; but by the Dogs, because they are familiar with Men, this Effect was feen much clearer. So that this Difeafe (to pafs over many strange Particulars of the Accidents that some had differently from others) was in general such as I have shewn; and for other usual Sicknesses at that time, no Man was troubled with any. Now they dyed some for want of Attendance, and some again with all the Care and Phyfick that could be used. Nor was there any, to say, certain Medicine, that applied, must have helped them; for if it did good to one, it did harm to another; nor any difference of Body for frength or weakness that was able to refist it; but it carried all away what Physick seever was adminifired. But the greatest misery of all was the dejection of Mind in such as found themselves beginning to be sick (for they grew presently desperate. and gave themselves over without any resistance,) as also their dying thus like Sheep, infected by mutual visitation: For if Men forbore to visit therns

them for fear, thon they died forlorn. whereby many Families became empty, for want of such as sould take care of them. If they forbore not then they died themselves, and principally the honestest Men: For out of shame they would not spare themselves, but went in unto their Friends, especially after it was come to that pass, that even their Domesticks, wearsed with the Lamentations of them that died, and overcome with the greatness of the Calamity, were no longer moved therewith. But those that were recovered, had much Compassion both on them that dyed, and on them that lay fick, as having both known the Misery themselves, and none now more subject to the like danger: For this Disease never took any Man the second time so as to bemortal. And these Men were both by others counted happy, and they also themselves, through excels of present joy, conceived a kind of light hope never to die of any other Sickness hereafter. Besides the prefent Affliction, the reception of the Country People, and of their Substance into the City, oppressed both them, and much more the People themselves that so came in. For having no Houses, but dwelling at that time of the year in stifling Booths, the Mortality was now without all Form; and dying Menlay tumbling one upon another sn the Streets, and Men half dead about every Conduct through defire of Water. The Temples also where they dwelt in Tents were all full of the dead that died within them; for oppressed with the violence of the Calamity and not knowing what to do, Men grew careless, both of Holy and Prophane things alike. And the Laws which they formerly used touching Funerals, were all now broken, every one burying where he could find room. And many for want of things necessary after so many deaths before, we forced to become impudent in the Fanerals of their Friends. Forwhen one had made a Funeral Pile, another getting before. him, would throw on his dead and give it fire. And when one was in burning, exother would come and having cast thereon him whom he carried, go his way again. And the great licentiousness, which also in other kinds was used in the City, began at first from this Disease. For that which a Man. before would diffemble, and not acknowledge to be done for voluptuousness, he durst now do freely, seeing before his eyes such quick revolution, of the Rich dying, and Men worth nothing inheriting their Effates; infomuch as they justified a speedy fruition of their Goods, even for their pleasure, as men that thought they held their Lives but by the day. As for pains, no man was forward in any action of Honour, to take any, because they thought it uncertain whether they sould die or not before they atchieved it. But what any man know to be delightful; and to be profitable to pleasure, that was made both profitable and honourable. Neither the fear of the Gods, nor Laws of men, awed any man. Not the former, because they concluded it was alike to worship or not worship, from seeing that alike they all perishen ed . Nor the latter, because no man expected that his Life would last till he. received punishment of his Crimes by Judgment. But they thought there, up us now over their heads some far greater Judgment decreed against them & before which fell, they thought to enjoy some little part of their Lives.

The Plague of ATHENS.

I. I Nhappy Man! by Nature made to sway, And yet is every Creatures prey, Destroy'd by those that should his power obey.

Of the whole World we call Mankind the Lords,

Flatt'ring our selves with mighty Words;

Of all things we the Monarchs are,

And so we rule, and so we dominner;

All Creatures else about us stand

Like some Pratorian Band,

To guard, to help, and to defend; Yet they fometimes prove Enemies,

Sometimes against us rise;

Our very Guards rebel, and tyrannize. Thousand Diseases sent by Fate,

(Unhappy Servants!) on us wait;

A thousand Treacheries within

Are laid weak Life to win,

Huge Troops of Maladies without,

(A grim, a meagre, and a dreadful rout:)

Some formal Sieges make, And with fure flowness do our Bodies take, Some with quick violence storm the Town,

And all in a moment down: Some one peculiar Fort affail,

Some by general Attempts prevail. Small Herbs, alas, can only us relieve, And small is the Affistance they can give, How can the fading Off-spring of the Field

Sure health and fuccour yied? What strong and certain remedy?

What firm and lasting Life can ours be? When that which makes us live doth ev'ry Winter die?

2. Nor is this all, we do not only breed Within our selves the fatal Seed

Of change and of decrease in ev'ry part, Head, Belly, Stomach, and root of Life the Heart, Not only have our Autum when we must Of our own Nature turn to Dust, When Leaves and Fruit must fall; But are exposed to mighty Tempelts too. Which do at once what they would flowly do. Which throw down Fruit and Tree of Life withal. From ruin we in vain Our Bodies by repair maintain, Bodies compos'd of Stuff, Mouldring and frail enough; Yet from without as shell we fear A dangerous and destructive War. From Heaven, from Earth, from Sea, from Air. We like the Roman Empire shoul decay, And our own Force would melt away By the intestine Jar Of Elephants, which on each other prey, The Cafars and the Pompeys which within we bear: Yet are (like that) in danger too Of foreign Armies, and external Foe, Sometimes the Gotbish and the barbarous rage Of Plague or Pestilence attends Man's Age Which neither Force nor Arts Affwage; Which cannot be avoided or withstood, But drowns and over-runs with unexpected Flood. 3. On Ethiopia, and the Southern Sands, The unfrequented Coasts, and parched Lands, Whither the Sun too kind a heat doth fend, (The Sun, which the worst Neighbour is, and the best Hither a mortal influence came, Friend) A fatal and unhappy Flame, Kindled by Heavens angry Beam. With dreadful Frowns, the Heavens scattered here Cruel infectious heats into the Air,

A 4

Now

Now, all the stores of Poyson sent, Threatning at once a general doom, Lavish'd out all their hate, and meant In future Ages to be innocent, Not to disturb the Word for many years to come. Hold! Heavens hold! why should your facred Which doth to all things Life inspire, By whose kind Beams you bring' Each year on every thing, A new and glorious Spring, Which doth th' Original Seed Of all things in the Womb of Earth that breed, With vital heat and quick'ning feed; Why should you now that here employ, The Earth, the Air, the Fields, the Cities to annoy? That which it before reviv'd, why should it now destroy? 4. Those Africk Desarts strait were double Desarts The Rav'nous Beasts were left alone, (grown, The rav'nous Beasts then first began To pity their old Enemy Man, And blam'd the Plague for what they would themselves Nor staid the cruel evil there, have done. Nor could be long confin'd unto one Air, Plagues presently forfake The Wilderness which they themselves do make: Away the deadly breaths their Journey take, Driven by a mighty Wind, They a new Booty and fresh Forrage find, The loaded Wind went fwiftly on, And as it past, was heard to figh and groan. On Egypt next it feiz'd, Nor could but by a general Ruin be appeas'd. Egypt in rage back on the South did look And wondred thence should come the unhappy stroke From whence before her fruitfulness she took. Egypt did now curse and revile Those very Lands from whence she has her Nile;

Egypt now fear'd another Hebrew God, Another Angel's Hand, a second Aaron's Rod.

5. Then on it goes, and through the facred Land

Its angry Forces did command; But God did place an Angel there,

Its violence to withstand,

And turn into another Road the putrid Air. To Tyre it came, and there did all devour. Though that by Seas might think it self secure:

Nor staid as the great Conquerors did, Till it had fill'd and stopp'd the Tide, Which did it from the shore divide,

But past the waters, and did all posses,

And quickly all was Wilderness. Thence it did Persia over-run,

And all that facrifice unto the Sun; In every Limb a dreadful pain they felt,

Tortur'd with secret Coals did melt;

The Persians call'd their Sun in vain, Their God increas'd the pain.

But curse the beams they worshipped before, And hate the very fire which once they did adore.

6. Glutted with ruin on the East,

She took her wings and down to Athens past;

Just Plague! which dost no parties take.

But Greece, as well as Persia fack.

(Like Frogs and Mice) each other flay; Thou in thy ravenous Claws took'st both away. Thither it came and did destroy the Town, Whilst all his Ships and Soldiers look'd upon;

And now the Asian Plague did more Than all the Asian Force cou'd do before. Without the Walls the Spartan Army sate,

The Spartan Army came too late; For now there was no farther work for Fare.

(10) They faw the City open lay, An easie and a bootless prey; They saw the Rampires empty stand, The Fleet, the Walls, the Forts unmann'd No need of cruelty or Slaughters now, The Plague had finish'd what they came to do: They might now unrefifted enter there, Did they not the very Air, More than th' Athenians fear. The Air it self to them was Wall and Bulwarks too. 7. Unhappy Atbens! it is true thou wert The proudest work of Nature and of Art: Learning and strength did thee compose, As Soul and Body us: But yet thou only thence art made A noble nobler Prey for Fates t' invade. Those mighty numbers that within the breath Do only serve to make a fatter feast for Death. Death in the most frequented places lives, Most tribute from the Crowd receives; And though it bears a figh, and feems to own A rustick Life alone, It loves no Wilderness, No scatter'd Villages, But mighty populous Palaces, The Throng, the Tumult, and the Town; What strange unheard of Conqueror is this, Which by the Forces that refist it doth increase! When other Conquerors are Oblig'd to make a flower War, Nay sometimes for themselves may sear, And must proceed with watchful care. When thicker Troops of Enemies appear; This stronger still, and more successful grows, Down sooner all before it throws, If greater multitudes of Men do it oppose.

8. The Tyrant first the Heaven did subdue, Lately the Athenians (it knew)

Themselves by wooden Walls did save,

And therefore first to them the Insection gave,

Lest they new succour thence receive.

Cruel Pyraus! now thou hast undone,

The Honour thou before hadst won:

Not all thy Merchandize.

Thy Wealth thy Treasuries, Which from all Coasts thy Fleet supplies,

Can to attone this Crime fuffice. Next o'er the upper Town it spread, With mad and undifcerned speed, In every corner, every street,

Without a guide did set its feet, And too familiar every house did greet,

Unhappy Greece of Greece! great Thefeus now

Did thee a mortal injury do,

When first in Walls he did thee close,

When first he did the Cities reduce,

. Houses, and Government, and Laws to use.

It had been better if thy People still

Dispersed in some Field or Hill,

Though falvage and undisciplin'd did dwell,

Though barbarous untame and rude, Than by their Numbers thus to be subdu'd; To be by their own swarms annoy'd,

And to be civiliz'd only to be destroy'd.

9. Minerva started when she heard the noise,

And dying Mens confused voice.

From Heaven in haste she came to see

What was the mighty produge

Upon the Castle Pinacles she sate,

And dar'd not nearer flie, Nor midst so many deaths to trust her very Deity. With pitying look the faw at every gate

Death and Destruction wait;

(12) She wrong her hands and call'd on Fove, And all the immortal Powers above, But though a Goddess now did pray, The Heavens refus'd, and turn'd their Ear away. She brought her Olive and her Shield, Neither of these alas! affistance yield She lookt upon Medusa's Face Was angry that she was Her felf of an immortal Race, Was angry that her Gorgon's Head Could not strike her as well as others dead; She sate and wept a while, and then away she fled. 10. Now death began her Sword to wher, Not all the Cyclops sweat, Nor Vulcan's mighty Anvils could prepare Weapons enough for her, No Weapon large enough but all the Air; Men felt the heat within 'em rage, And hop'd the Air did it affwage, Call'd for its help but th' Air did them deceive, And aggravate the ills it should relieve. The Air no more was Vital now, But did a mortal Poison grow; The Lungs which us' to fan the Heart, Only now ferv'd to fire each part, What should refresh, increas'd the smart. And now their very breath, 11. Upon the Head first the disease, As a bold Conqueror doth seize, Begins with Man's Metropolis,

The chiefest sign of life, turn'd the cause of death.

Secur'd the Capitol, and then it knew It cou'd at pleasure weaker parts subdue.

Blood started through each eye; The redness of that Skie, Foretold a Tempest nigh.

(13) The Tongue did flow all o'er With clotted filth and gore; As doth a Lion's, when some innocent prey He hath devour'd and brought away : Hoarseness and sores the throat did fill; And stopt the Passages of speech and life; No room was left for groans or grief; Too cruel and imperious ill! Which not content to kill, With Tyrannous and dreadful pain, Dolt take from Men the very power to complain! 12. Then down it went into the very breast; There all the seats and shops of life posses'd, Such noisom smells from thence did come, As if the Stomach were a Tomb; No food would there abide, Or if it did, turn'd to the Enemies side; The very Meat new Poysons to the Plague supply'd; Next to the Hear the fires came, The Heart did wonder what usurping flame, What unknown furnace shou'd On its more natural heat intrude, Stait call'd its Spirits up but found too well, It was too late now to rebel, The tainted Blood its course began, And carried death where e'er it ran, That which before was Nature's noblest Art, The Circulation from the Heart, Was most destructful now, And nature speedier did undo, For that the fooner did impart The Poyson and the smart, The infectious Blood to every distant part, 13. The Belly felt at last its Share, And all the subtile Labyrints there Of winding Bowels did new Monsters bear:

14) Here seven days it rul'd and sway'd, 'And oftner kill'd because it death lo long delay'd. But if through strength and heat of Age, The Body overcame its rage, The Plague departed as Devil doth, When driven by Prayers away he goeth. If Prayers and Heaven do him controul, And if it cannot have the Soul, Himself out of the roof or window throws, And will not all his labour lose. But takes away with him par of the House: So here the vanquish'd evil took from them Who conquer'd it some part, some Limb; Some lost the use of Hands or Eyes, Some Arms, some Legs, some Thighs, Some all their lives before forgot, Their minds were but one darker blot; Those various Pictures in the Head, And all the numerous shapes were fled; And now the ranfack'd memory Languish'd in nacked poverty, Had lost its mighty treasury; They pass'd the Letbe Lake, although they did not die. 14. Whatever leffer Maladies Men had, They all gave place and vanished; Those pretty Tyrants fled, And at this mighty Conqueror fhrunk their head. Fevers, Agues, Palsies, Stone, Gout, Cholick and Consumption, And all the milder Generation, By which Mankind is by degrees undone, Quickly were rooted out and gone; Men saw themselves freed from the pain, Rejoye'd, but all, alas, in vain.

Which cur'd 'em that they might both worse and sooner

Fiers

(15) 15. Physicians now could not prevail, They the first spoils to the proud Victor fall; Nor would the Plague their knowledge truft, But fear'd their skill, and therefore slew them first: So Tyrants when they would confirm their yoke, First make the chiefest Men to feel the stroke The chiefest and the wifest heads lest they Should foonest disobey, Should first rebel, and others learn from them the way! No aid of herbs or juices power. None of Apollo's art could cure, But help'd the Plague the speedier to devour. Physick it self was a difease, Physick the fatal Tortures did increase, Prescriptions did the pains renew, And Asculapius to the Sick did come, As afterwards to Rome, In form of Serpent, brought new Poisons with him too! 16. The Streams did wonder that so soon As they were from their native Mountains gone, They faw themselves drunk up, and fear Another Xerne's Army near. Some cast into the Pit the Urn, And drink it dry at its return: Again they drew, again they drank At first the coolness of the stream did thank, But strait the more were scorch'd the more did burn? And drunk with water in their drinking fank: That Urn which now to quench their thirst they

Shortly their ashes shall inclose.

Others into the Chrystal Brook,

With faint and wondring eyes did look, Saw what a ghaltly shape themselves had took, Away they would have fled, but them their Legs for fook.

Some fnate'd the Waters up, Their hands, their mouths the cup;

(16)

They drunk, and found they flam'd the more And only added to the burning store. So have I seen on lime cold water thrown, Strait all was to a ferment grown, And hidden Seeds of Fire together run: The heap was calm and temperate before, Such as the Finger could indure; But when the moistures it provoke,

Did rage, did swell, did smoke,

Did move and flame, and burn, and strait to ashes broke.
17. So strong the heat, so strong the torments were

They like some mighty burthen bear

The lightest covering of Air.

'All Sexes and all Ages do invade

The bounds which Nature laid,

The Laws of modesty which Nature mades

The Virgins blush not, yet uncloath'd appear,

Undress'd do run about yet never sear. The Pain and the Disease did now

Unwillingly reduce men to That nakedness once more,

Which perfect Health and Innocence caus'd before;

No sleep, no peace, no rest,

Their wandring and affrighted minds possess'd;

Upon their Souls and Eyes,
Hell and eternal horror lies,
Unusual Shapes and Images,

Dark Pictures and Refemblances

Of things to come, and of the World below,

O'er their distemper'd fancies go:

Sometimes they curse, sometimes they pray unto

The Gods above, the Gods beneath;

Sometimes they cruelties, and fury breath,

Not sleep, but waking now was sister unto death!

The Earth call'd to the Fowls to take their flesh away.

(17) In yain she call'd, they came not nigh Nor would their Food with their own Ruin buy But at full meals they hunger, pine and die, The Vultures afar off did see the Feast, Rejoye'd, and call'd their Friends to taste, They rallied up their Troops in haste; Along came mighty droves, For sook their young ones, and their groves, Each one his native Mountain and his Nest; They come, but all their Carcasses abhor, And now avoid the dead Men more Than weaker Birds did living Men before. But if some bolder Fowls the flesh affay, They were destroy'd by their own prey. The Dog no longer bark'd at coming Guest, Repents its being a domestick Beast, Did to the Woods and Mountains haste The very Owls at Athens are But seldom seen and rare, The Owlds depart in open day, Rather than infected I'vy more to stay. 19. Mountains of Bones and Carcasses, The Streets the Market-place posses Threatning to raise a new Acropolis. Here lies a Mother and her Child, The Infant fuck'd as yet and smil'd, But streight by its own food was kill'd. There Parents hugg'd their Children last, Here parting Lovers last embrac'd, But yet not parting neither, They both expir'd and went away together. Here Prisoners in the Dungeon die, And gain a two-fold Liberty,

Here

They meet and thank their pains

Which them from double chains

Of Body and of Iron free.

(18) Here others poyfon'd by the fent Which from corrupted Bodies went, Quickly return the death they did receive, And death to others give; Themselves now dead the Air pollute the more, For which they others curs'd before, Their Bodies kill all that come near, And even after Death they all are Murtherers here. 20. The Friend doth hear his Friends last Cries. Parteth his grief for him, and dies, Lives not enough to close his Eyes, The Father at his death Speaks his Son Heir with an infectious Breath; In the fame Hour the Son doth take His Father's Will, and his own make. The Servant need not here be flain, To serve his Master in the other World again; They languishing together lie, Their Souls away together fly; The Husband gaspeth and his Wife lies by, It must be her turn next to die, The Husband and the Wife Too truly now are one, and live one life, That Couple which the Gods did entertain, Had made their Prayer here in vain; No Fates in Death couln then divide, They must without their Privilege together both haw 21. There was no number now of death, The Sisters scarce stood still themselves to breath: The Sisters now quite wearied In cutting fingle Thread, Began at once to part whole Looms, One strokedid give whole Houses dooms; Now dy'd the frosty hairs, The aged and decripid years, They fell and only begg'd of Fate, Some few Months more, but 'twas alas too late. Then

(19) Then Death as if asham'd of that A Conquest so degenerate, Cut off the young and lusty too; The young were reckoning o'er What happy days, what Joys they had in store; But Fate e'er they had finish'd their Account, them slew The wretched Ulurer died, And had no time to tell where he his Treasures hid : The Merchant did behold His Ships return with Spice and Gold; He saw't and turn'd aside his head Nor thank'd the Gods, but fell amidst his Riches dead. 22. The Meetings and Assemblies cease, no more The People throng about the Orator, No course of Justice did appear, No noise of Lawyers fill'd the Ear, The Senate cast away The Robe of Honour, and obey Deaths more refiltless sway, Whilst that with Dictatorian power Doth all the great and lesser Officers devour. No Magistrates did walk about; No Purple aw'd the Rout, The Common People too A Purple of their own did fhew; And all their Bodies o'er The ruling Colours bore No Judge, no Legislatours sit Since this new Draco came, And harsher Laws did frame, Laws that like his in Blood are writ. The Benches and the pleading-place they leave, About the Streets they run and rave: The madness which great Solon did of late But counterfeit For the Advantage of the State, Now his Successors do too truly imitate, 23. Up (20)

23. Up starts the Soldier from his bed, He though Death's Servant is not freed Death him cashier'd, cause now his help she did not need.

He that ne'er knew before to yield,
Or to give back or leave the Field,
Would fain now from himself have fled,
He snatch'd his Sword now rusted o'er,
Dreadful and sparkling now no more,
And thus in open streets did roar:

How have I, Death, so ill deserv'd of thee,
That now thy self thou shouldst revenge on me?
Have I so many Lives on thee bestow'd?
Have I the Earth so often dy'd in Blood?
Have I to flatter thee so many slain?
And must I now thy Prey remain?

Let me at least, if I must die,
Meet in the Field some gallant Enemy.
Send Gods the Persian Troop again.
No, they're a base and degenerate train;
They by our Women may be slain,

Give me great Heavens, some manful Foes,

Let me my Death amidst some valiant Grecians chuse, Let me survive to die at Syracuse,

Where my dear Country shall her Glory lose

For you, great Gods! into my dying mind infuse.

What miseries, what doom Mnst on my Athens shortly come:

My throughts inspir'd presage Slaughters and Battels to the coming Age;

Oh might I die upon that glorious Stage:

Oh that! but then he grasp'd his Sword, and Death concludes his Ragea.

24. Draw back, draw back thy Sword, O Fate!

Lest thou repent when 'tis too late,

Left by thy making now fo great a wafte, By spending all Mankind upon one feast,

Thou Starve thy felf at last:

What Men wilt thou referve in store, Whom in the time to come thou may'st devour, When thou shalt have destroyed all before?

But if thou wilt not yet give o'er,

If yet thy greedy Stomach calls for more,

If more remain whom thou must kill,

And if thy Jaws are craving still, Carry thy fury to the Sythian Coasts, The Northern Wilderness, and eternal Frosts! (21)

Against those barbarous Crowds thy Arrows whet, Where Arts and Laws are strangers yet;

Where thou mayst kill, and yet the loss will not be great,

There Rage, there spread, and there infect the Air,

Murther whole Towns and Families there, Thy worst against those Savage Nations dare,

Those whom Mankind can spare
Those whom Mankind it self doth fear;

Amidst that dreadful Night and faral Cold,

There thou mayst walk unseen and bold, There let thy Flames thy Empire hold.

Unto the farthest Seas, and Natures ends,

Where never Summers Sun its beams extends,

Carry thy Plagues, thy Pains, thy Hearts,
Thy raging Fires, thy torturing Sweats,
Where never ray or heat did come,
They will rejoyce at fuch a doom.
They'll bless thy pestilential Fire,

Though they by it expire,
They'll thank the very flames with which they do consume.

25. Then if that Banquet will not thee suffice,

Seek out new Lands where thou mayst tyrannize;

Search every Forrest, every Hill,

And all that in the hollow Mountains dwell;
Those wild and untame Troops devour,

Thereby thou wilt the rest of Men secure,

And that the rest of Men will thank thee for, Let all those Humane Beasts be slain,

Till scarce their memory remain;
Thy self with that Ignoble slaughter fill,

Twill be permitted thee that blood to spill,

Measure the ruder World throughout,

March all the Ocean shores about,

Only pass by and spare the British Isle.

Go on, and (what Columbus once shall do,

When days and time unto their ripeness grow)
Find out new Lands, and unknown Countries too.

Attempt those Lands which yet are hid
From all Mortality beside:
There thou mayst steal a Victory,
And none of this World hear the cry.
Of those that by thy Wounds shall die;
No Greek shall know thy cruelty,
An tell it to Posterity,

(22)

Go, and unpeople all those mighty Lands,
Destroy with unrelenting Hands;
Go, and the Spaniards Sword prevent;
Go, make the Spaniard innocent;
Go, and root out all Mankind there,
That when the Europian Armies shall appear,

Their Sin may be the less,

They may find all a Wilderhels,

And without blood the gold and filver there poffess.

26. Nor is this all which we thee grant; Rather than thou shouldst full employment want,

We do permit in Greece thy Kingdom plant.

Ranfack Lycurgus Streets throughout,

They've no defence of Walls to keep thee out.

On wanton and proud Corinth seize, Not let her double waves thy slames appease.

Let Cyprus feel more fires than those of Love :

Let Delos which at first did give the Sun See unknown flames in her begun,

Now let her wish she might unconstant move,

And from her place might truly prove:

Let Lemnos all thy anger feel, And think that a new Vulcan fell,

And brought with him new Anvils, and new Hell,

Nay, at Athens too we give thee up,

All that thou find'st in Field, or Camp, or Shop,

Make havock there without controul
Of every ignorant and common Soul.
But then, kind Plague, thy Conquests stop;
Let Arts, and let the Learned there escape,
Upon Minerva's self commit no Rape;

Touch not the facred throng,

And let Apollo's Priests be (like him) young,
Let him be healthful too, and strong.

But ah! too ravenous Plague, whilst I

Strive to keep off the misery,

The Learned too as fast as others round me die;

They from Corruption are not free,

Are mortal though they give an immortality.
27. They turn'd their Authors o'er to try

What help, what Cure, what remedy
All Nature's stores against this Plage supply,

And though besids they shun'd it every where,

They fearch'd it in their Books, and fain would meet it there.

They turn'd the Records of the ancient times; And chiefly those that were made famous by their Crimes; (23)

To find if Men were punish'd so before, But found not the disease nor cure. Nature, alas! was now surpriz'd And all her Forces seiz'd,

Before the was how to refift advis'd: So when the Elephants did first affright

The Romans with unufual fight, They many Battels lofe,

Before they knew their Foes,

Before they understood such dreadful Troops t'oppose.

28. Now ev'ry different Sect agrees

Against their common adversary the disease, And all their little wranglings cease;

The Pythagoreans from their Precepts swerve,

No more their filence they observe, Out of their Schools they run, Lament, and cry, and groan;

They now desir'd their Metempsycosis; Not only to dispute, but wish

That they might turn to beafts, or Fowls, or Fifth.

If the Platonicks had been here,

They would have curs'd their Masters year, When all things shall be as they were.

When they again the same Disease should bear:

And all the Philosophers would now, What the great Stagyrite shall do,

Themselves into the waters headlong throw.

29. The Stoick felt the deadly stroke, At first assault their Courage was not broke,

They call'd to all the Cobweb aid,

Of Rules and Precepts which in store they had;

They bid their Hearts stand out, Bid them be calm and stour,

But all the strength of Precepts will not do'c. They cann't the storms of Passions now assuage.

As common Men are angry, grieve and rage.

The Gods are call'd upon in vain,
The Gods gave no release unto their pain,
The Gods to sear even for themselves began.
For now the sick unto the Temples came,

And brought more than an holy flame, There at the Alters made their Prayer, They facrific'd and died there, A Sacrifice not feen before; That Heaven, only us'd unto the gore (24)

Of Lambs or Bulls should now
Loaded with Priests see its own Altars too.
The Woods gave fun'ral Piles no more.

The Dead the very fire devour,

And that Almighty Conqueror over-power.

The noble and the common dust Into each others Graves are Thrus, No place is facred, and no Tomb, Tis now a privilege to consume; Their Ashes no distinction had;

Too truly all by Death are equal made.

The Ghosts of those great Heroes that had fled From Athens long since banished,
Now o'er the City hover'd;
Their Anger yielded to their Love,

They left th' immortal Joys above, So much their Athens danger did them move,

They came to pity and to aid,

But now, alas! were quite dismay'd, When they beheld the Marbles open lay'd, And poor Mens Bones the noble Urns invade:

Back to the bleffed feats they went, And now did thank their Banishment,

By which they were to die in foreign Countries fent.

31. But what great Gods was worst of all, Hell forth its Magazines of Lusts did call,

Nor would it be content

With the thick Troos of Souls were thither sent;
Into the upper World it went.
Such guilt, such wickedness,
Such irreligion did increase,

Were angry with the Plague for suffering them to live; More for the living than the dead did grieve,

Some robb'd the very dead,

Though fure to be infected e'er they fled, Though in the very Air fure to be punished. Some nor the Shrines nor the Temples spar'd

Nor Gods nor Heavens fear'd

Though such Example of their Power appear'd. Vertue was now esteem'd and empty name,

And honesty the foolish voice of Fame;

For having past those tort'ring slames before, They thought the punishment already o'er,

Thought Heaven no worse torments had in store; Here having felt one Hell, the thought there was no more.

FINIS.
