Regimen so steadily as to give one any opportunity of making any conclusions from it: indeed several own to me they are quite bewildered, not knowing wh way to turn themselves or whose advice to follow, what one says being quite contrary to the Directions given by another; Some to whom I have given my Directions have bled once, have given the purge once, but have not given the Oily Breach, or have given this once & have not repeated it, others have given the Chalky Breach once & not repeated it & have not followed the other parts of my Instructions; so that I am sorry to find that I can have no satisfactory Experiments made; yet as the State of the Disease seems so evidently to be a Peripneumony or Inflammation of the Lungs Windpipe & Nostrils, attended with an abundance of Galls I can't forbear urging to the publick the following method

while well
Give to all Cows in general, ~~before they fall~~ $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. or 1. oz. (according to the size of ~~cow~~ of cow) of Croci Metallorum. as soon as a Cow falls ~~off~~ her meat give her another Dose of Croci Metallorum; ~~and~~ give her warm mashes of Malt, Bran &c: when she runs at the Nose, lay a bag of malt meal ~~wetted~~ ^{moistened} with boiling water upon her forehead & nose, tying it to her ^{morning & evening} horns; pour warm vinegar & salt into the nostrils; if a short cough or Difficulty of breathing comes on bleed her 1 quart twice a day ~~for 4 days~~ ^{for 3 or 4 days} & every 6 hours give the Oily Breach. If a purging comes on, give another Dose of the Croci Metallorum, if it continue give the Chalky Breach every 6 hours, & if it does not abate, ~~inject the same~~ in 24. hours, inject the same Mixture by way of Glyster; & if the Hoarse cough continues with the purging give the Oily Breach one 3 hours & the Chalky Breach the next 3 hours.

Most of the Cows which have recovered from this Distemper recover their Milk again as their appetites mend; but they are observed to have scabby eruptions come out in their Groins & axilla, which itch much, for a Cow will stand still, hold out her leg & shew signs of great pleasure when a Man scratches these Injustles or Scabs for her.

I am informed that some Cow-leeches have given Coloquintida & Salt of Tartar, each 1 oz. in a quart of warm ale, but I imagine it must be too griping a purge & improper where the Guts are inflamed indeed I have not heard of any Cows recovering which took it.

As for the cause of this Distemper I am still at a loss; I think it can't be owing to the food, because the Cows which had it first in Essex eat only Grass, turnips & hay or straw; the cows about London eat
