They are four, one each side twisted; on the right side seven y ribs join the breast-bone (sternum) in front and are joined there together, and five articulate with back bone (lumbar vertebrae) these are called the back of false ribs.

There are four posterior ribs which are called jake, each one joins at the back with the backbone. Some men say that there are only eleven ribs - the seven chief ribs and four jake or back ribs - this is not so. They say that they find it true in a woman. These are called womb ribs - man & woman differ in this manner.
