with difficulty for letters of absolute necessity accomplished, with Lucy as my amanuensis. Hence my neglect of you.

But after the first day I have made daily steady progress: and tomorrow Lucy & I are off to Malvern for a little country air and rest.

I am sorry to have to say so much about my old self, but I could not make you understand without doing so.

Lucy desires her very kind regards to you. Mine please to all your party yours ever affectionately

My dear Cameron

You must have been thinking it rather strange that I have not written at once in receipt of your last letter to congratulate you on Charlie's success. This I now do very cordially, though tardily.

The truth is that the many dinners
