OF DRESSING FISH.

To Fricassee a LOBSTER.

TAKE a fresh lobster, put it into boiling spring water, with a handfull of salt, boil it eight minutes if large, if small six minutes, when cold take the meat out of the claws and tail as whole as you can, split the meat of the tail in two, that of the claws use whole, take off the small claws and split the chine, season it with chyan and salt, strew over it a few bread crumbs, broil it before the fire, pick the meat out of the body and put it into a marble mortar, with a little of the coral or berries, to make it a pale red colour, put in a tea-cup full of good cream, rub these together till smooth, have ready a tea-cup full of white gravy, made of a little lean veal and a few white pepper corns, put it into a stew-pan, with the lobster, to which add a spoonfull of white-catchup, a spoonfull of walnut-catchup, and one of white wine, a little lemon-peel grated, grated nutmeg, an anchovy cut fine, squeeze in the juice of lemon, add chyan

and,

and salt to your taste, season the meat taken from the claws and the tail, with chyan, beaten mace, and salt, take care not to season too high, then put it into a slow oven to be made just hot; to serve it lay the small claws round your dish, and the chine cut in four, put the meat in the middle. To your sauce, put two spoonsfull of good melted butter, and give it a boil; pour it over it, and so send it up.

To pot LOBSTER.

TAKE lobster, pick the meat out of the shell, also the coral and berries, lay it in an earthen pot, strew on it a little chyan pepper, cover it with bay-leaves, then with butter; set it in a slow oven and let it stay till made quite hot, but not to boil, pour the butter from it, take out the bay-leaves, beat it a little, strew over it beaten mace, grated nutmeg, chyan, and salt, to your taste; do not make it too salt, put it close down in the pot, you intend to keep it in, when cold, warm the butter you took from it, and pour over it, and so keep it for use; small pots are the best to keep it in. Shrimps may be potted the same way.

To pot SALMON.

TAKE a piece of fresh salmon, put it into soft water boiling hot, let it boil a quarter of an hour, drain it from the water, when cold take off the skin, break it in flakes, put it into an earthen pot, strew over it a little chyan, cover it with bay-leaves and butter, put it into a slow oven till made hot, but not to boil, pour the butter from it, take out the bay-leaves, and the flakes as whole as you can,

can, then lay it in layers in your pots strewing between each layer, beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, and salt, till your pots are full; then warm the butter and pour over it; or after you have taken it out of the baking pot, beat it a little, and season it with beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, and salt, then put it into pots, and cover it with butter.

To make an AMULET of COCKLES.

TAKE four whites, and the yolks of two eggs, one pint of cream, a little flour, a nutmeg grated, a little salt, and a gill of cockles, mix all together and fry it brown.

An OYSTER AMULET.

TAKE six eggs, beat them with a gill of cream, and two tea spoonsfull of fine flour, season them with a little mace, chyan, and salt, take large oysters and shred them into the batter; either fry, or do them over a chafing-dish, and brown them with a salamander. Bacon may be used to the same ingredients, instead of oysters: or herbs, such as leeks, and sweet thyme for lent.

To pickle OYSTERS.

TAKE fresh oysters, cut off the black beards, put the liquor into a sauce-pan, with the same quantity of vinegar, tie in a piece of clean gauze a few white pepper corns, two or three blades of mace, boil these in the pickle five minutes then put it to your oysters and just let them boil; when cold put them into a jar or wide mouth'd bottle cover them with bladders, and keep them in a dry cool place.

To Stew OYSTERS.

TAKE large oysters, take off the beards, and put them into a stew-pan with their liquor, and a tea-cup full of good gravy, a lump of butter, a spoonfull of walnut-catchup, a tea spoonfull of lemon pickle, a little grated nutmeg, chyan and salt, and a spoonfull of thick flour and water, stew them five minutes, then dish them up with force-meat balls, and garnish with lemon.

To make SCOLLOP SHELLS of OYSTERS.

TAKE oysters, take off the beards, and have ready stale bread crumbs, seasoned with a little chyan, beaten mace, and salt, spread a few crumbs on the shell bottom, then a layer of oysters, stick small bits of butter on them, then cover them with crumbs, and so on, till your shells are full; set them in a tin oven before the fire, baste them a little and make them a nice brown, they will take half an hour doing, Cockles the same way.

To pickle COCKLES.

TAKE cockles when fresh, wash them well in the liquor, let it stand to settle, then drain it from the sand, wash them again till the cockles are free from sand, let the liquor stand to settle, drain it from the sand, and put it into a sauce-pan, with the same quantity of vinegar, and seasoning in a bag the same as the oysters.

To pickle SHRIMPS.

TAKE shrimps when fresh, take off the skins, and put them into as much spring water as will cover them, boil them well, strain them through a hair sieve, put the liquor into

into a sauce-pan with the same quantity of vinegar, and spices as to oysters, boil them five minutes, and pour it boiling hot over the shrimps, when cold bottle them as before directed.

To bake SMELTS.

TAKE out the guts at the gills, with a skewer leaving the roe, clean them well with a dry cloth, skewer their tails in their mouths, put them into a deep round earthen pot, put to them some white pepper corns, a few blades of mace, half a dozen cloves, half a dozen bay-leaves, as much good strong alegar, or vinegar, as will cover them, put them into an oven and let them stand till boiling hot, then take them out, when cold cover them close with paper; these look very well laid in a dish with bits of parsley and jelly poured over them. White herrings are done the same way, only lay them flat.

To roast HERRINGS.

TAKE white herrings, when quite fresh, cut off their heads, scale them, and wipe them with a dry cloth, open them, take out the back bone, and the roe, season them with chyan, and beaten mace, grated nutmeg and salt, season pretty high with chyan, roll them as they are split tight; lay them in an earthen pot, stick in a dozen bay-leaves, cover them very thick with fresh butter, put them into a slow oven till the butter is melted, and you think they are hot through, then take them out, cover them with a plate, and let them stand all night, put them into the oven again in the morning, when hot pour out the butter and gravy, take them out carefully with a knife, and and lay them in the pot you intend to keep them in, cover them very close, leave out the bay-leaves, put a spoonfull or two of gravy over them, lay something upon them to press them, when cold, clear the butter from the gravy, and put over them, if not enough clarify a little more. Eels may be potted the same way.

To pickle SALMON like STURGEON.

TAKE a large fresh salmon cut into four pieces, wipe it very clean from blood, season it with pepper, salt, and bay-salt very high; let it lay in the seasoning twenty four hours, then take three quarts of good aleger, and three pints of spring water, one ounce of whole black pepper, a quarter of an ounce of cloves, as much mace, five or six bay-leaves, and an egg shell full of salt; let the pickle boil, then put in the salmon bound up with the shreds of matting, like sturgeon, let it boil till thoroughly enough, take it off and let it stand ten minutes, then take out the salmon, and when both are cold, put the salmon into the pickle, and preserve it free from air; it will keep half a year.

To broil COD SOUNDS.

LAY them in hot water a few minutes, take them out, and rub them with salt to take off the skin and black dirt, then put them into water to steep, boil them in milk and water a quarter of an hour, drain them well, and dredge them with pepper and salt, broil them over a clear fire, then lay them on your dish, and pour melted butter over them, with a little mustard in it.

OYSTER

OYSTER LOAVES.

TAKE small round loaves, make a round hole, scrape out all the crumbs, then take off the beards from your oysters, and put them into a sauce-pan with their liquor, a few crumbs and a little butter, nutmeg, chyan, salt, and a little cream; stew them five minutes, keep stirring them, then fill your loaves, put on the bits of crust, carefully, and set them in the oven to crisp, so serve them.

To bake HOLYBUT'S or TURBOT'S HEAD.

CUT it according to the size you would have your dish, take out the gills and eyes, clean it very well, and rub it with a little salt, let it lay three or four hours, or more if you have time, then season it well with ground white pepper, and salt; make good savory stuffing as for any other fish, and put it where you took the gills out, then lay it in an earthen dish, with a small bunch of pot-marjoram, the same of thyme, a bunch of young onions, and a pint of water; stick bits of butter to your fish, dredge it with a little flour, put it into the oven (not too hot,) keep turning it; bake it an hour and a quarter, if large an hour and a half; then take it out of the oven and skim off the fat, put in two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, two of flour and water, two or three of melted butter, and a tea-cup full of gravy; mix these together and put them under your fish, put it into the oven a quarter of an hour more, (it is common to send it to table in the dish it is baked in, but if you will risk the breaking it, you may put it into a deep dish) garnish with horle-

horfe-radish and pickles: you may send up with it any kind of fish sauce. A cod's head may be done the same way only put the stuffing in the belly.

To collar EELS.

TAKE a large eel when fresh, skin and split it, take out the bone and wipe it well; have ready for seasoning a little sage and pot-marjoram shred fine, beaten mace, grated nutmeg, chyan and salt, season it pretty high, mix these together and spread them over the inside of the eel, roll it up as tight as you can, and bind it tight, roll it in a cloth and tie it fast at both ends, put it into boiling hard water with a few cloves and whole pepper, if a large eel it will take two hours gentle boiling, then take it out and set it on an end in a narrow pot; put a little salt and half a pint of vinegar into the liquor, and boil the liquor a quarter of an hour more, pour the pickle into an earthen pot, the next day take off the bandage from the eel and put it into the pickle. Those who dislike herbs may use lemon peel instead of them.

To boil SALMON.

TAKE six pounds of salmon, split it in two and wash it well; set on hard water and when it boils put in your salmon and a little salt, if thick boil it half an hour, garnish with liver and spawn, serve it with fennel and butter. Take a salmon sprint five or six pounds weight clean it well, put it into cold spring water, and let it boil gently half an hour, garnish with liver and spawn, serve it with fennel, butter, and coddled gooseberries; skewer the sprint round.

To

To dress PIKE.

SCALE and clean it well, skewer it round, make a pudding for the belly of stale bread crumbs and beef suet equal quantities, an anchovy, a little lemon peel, beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan pepper, a sprig of thyme, one of pot-marjoram and a little lemon juice, mix them up with an egg, and sew it in the belly; pin the fish up in a cloth, and put it into cold spring water with its back down, set it on a slow fire, half an hour will boil it; garnish with scraped horse-radish and lemon, and serve it up with anchovy sauce. If you roast it, lay it in the dripping-pan, rub it with the yolk of egg, strew over some bread crumbs, set it before a clear fire and when browned turn it, and add egg and crumbs as before; it will take three quarters of an hour; garnish and serve it up as the boiled. All fish except salmon should be put on in cold spring water.

To boil EELS.

TAKE a large eel, skin and clean it well, make a pudding the same as for the pike, put it in the belly, skewer it round, put it in hard water and set it on a slow fire, half an hour will boil it, garnish with crisp parsley, and serve it up with anchovy sauce. If you roast it, do it the same as the pike.

To pitchcock EELS.

TAKE middle sized eels, skin and clean them, cut off the fins, then cut them in pieces four or five inches long, season them with chyan, salt, and a little sage shred fine,

rub

rub them with yolk of egg, and strew bread crumbs over them, set them before a brisk fire, let them be made brown on both sides; garnish with crisp parsley and serve them up with caper sauce.

To stew EELS with red Wine.

SKIN and clean them, take off the fins and cut them in pieces four or five inches long, season them with chyan, salt, and beaten mace, rub them with yolk of egg, and strew over them bread crumbs, dredge with a little flour, and fry them in sweet drippings till a good brown, then lay them on a hair sieve to drain; have ready some good brown gravy, when cold put them into a stew-pan with as much of it as will cover them, put in a little beaten mace, lemon peel shred, chyan pepper, and anchovy, place them on a slow fire and stew them a quarter of an hour, then add half a pint of red wine, two or three spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, a little good melted butter, and half a lemon squeezed in, stew them a quarter more, dish them up, garnish with lemon and crisp parsley. Cod may be done in the like manner.

To stew EELS with Sorrel.

TAKE middle sized eels, when cleaned, cut them in pieces four or five inches long, put them into hard water, just scald them, then take them out and lay them on a hair sieve to drain, strew over them a little sage, chyan, and salt, when cold put them into a stew-pan with as much good gravy as will cover them, thicken it with a little flour and water, and put in a handfull of sorrel picked from from the stalks and shred fine, and a little lemon peel; stew them half an hour, then add a little good melted butter and squeeze in half a lemon, just give them a boil, dish them up and garnish with lemon.

To stew TENCH.

TAKE tench alive, stick a fork in the back of the heads, save the blood, scale and clean them well, wipe them very dry, then rub them with the yolk of egg, dredge a little flour on them, and fry them in sweet dripping till brown, then put them on a sieve to drain; have ready some good brown gravy, when cold put them into a stew-pan with a little mace, chyan, lemon peel shred, a little scraped horse-radish, a pint of gravy, and the same of red wine; stew them gently half an hour, then add a little good melted butter, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, a little lemon juice, and salt to your taste, give them just a boil; dish them up, and garnish with scraped horse-radish. Carp is stewed the same way. Remember to put the blood into them both.

To fry SOLES.

SKIN them, cut off the fins, wash and dry them with a cloth, rub them with yolk of egg, and strew bread crumbs over them, dredge with flour, and fry them with sweet dripping, let the pan be hot before you put them in, then let them fry till they are brown, (be careful not to burn them) lay them on a little clean straw before the fire to drain, garnish with crisp parsley and send them up with shrimp sauce.

To fry SMELTS.

TAKE the guts out at the gills with a skewer, wipe them with a clean dry cloth, put six or seven on one skewer, rub them with the yolk of egg, strew over them bread crumbs and dredge them; have ready a pan with sweet dripping made very hot, put them in and fry them a light brown, then take them out and lay them before the fire on clean straw to drain; serve them up with good melted butter. Fry gudgeons the same way.

To broil COD-FISH.

TAKE a cod twelve or fourteen pounds weight, take off the head and shoulders, then cut it in slices an inch and a half thick, rub them over with yolk of egg, strew them with bread crumbs, put them into a dripping-pan, and place them before a brisk fire, baste them, and when brown, turn them and do the other side the same; half an hour will broil them; garnish with scraped horse-radish and pickles, and serve them up with cockle or anchovy sauce.

To dress a COD'S HEAD.

TAKE out the gills and the sounds from the back bone, clip off the fins, take the eyes out and clean it well with cold water and a cloth, rub it with a little salt, put a little in the eyes, lay it with the back upwards upon a board, let it stay all night, put it into a pail of hard water an hour or two before you want it, then wash it well, put it into cold spring water, put in a handfull of salt and three spoonsfull of aleagar, set it on a slow fire, let it boil twenty twenty minutes, but if large half an hour; take it out very carefully and set it over the kettle a few minutes to drain; dish it up with a cloth over the fish plate, spread the founds on the back, and garnish with scraped horse-radish, lemon, and pickle; serve it up with either cockle, oyster, or lobster sauce.

To boil HADDOCKS.

TAKE out the gills, clean them well, make a pudding for the bellies, the same as for pike, skewer them round, pin them up in a cloth, put them into the pan with cold water the bellies upwards, set them on a slow fire, if large they will take twenty minutes, if small fifteen from the time they begin to boil; garnish with scraped horse-radish and pickles; serve up with cockle or anchovy sauce.

To broil HADDOCKS.

CLEAN them as for boiling, and put a pudding in their bellies, lay them in a dripping-pan and rub them with yolk of egg, strew over them bread crumbs, dredge them with flour, then set them before a brisk fire, baste them and make them a good brown on both sides; garnish and serve them up as the boiled.

To dry HADDOCKS.

TAKE haddocks two or three pounds weight, take out the gills and eyes, gut them and rub them with a dry cloth, so as to take all the blood from the back bone, rub them with a little salt, fill the eyes with salt, lay them on a board and let them stay all night, then hang them up in a dry place where they can get the open air, let them hang hang three or four days, (as it suits you) skin them, cut off their heads and fins, then lay them in a dripping-pan, rub them with yolk of egg, strew over them bread crumbs and set them before the fire, baste them and let them stand till brown on both sides; garnish with scraped horse radish, serve them up with egg sauce. You may do cod-fish the same way.

To fry OYSTERS.

TAKE the largest and finest oysters you can get, open them, and wash them clean in their own liquor, drain them, strain the liquor and make it into a batter with two eggs beaten well, two table spoonsfull of fine flour, and a little grated nutmeg; dip the oysters in this, and fry them with butter, they must be done quick and made a good brown, lay them in a tin oven on paper and keep them hot; they may be laid round a made dish, or placed for a little side dish; you may garnish them with any thing you please.

To butter a LOBSTER

TAKE a lobster, pick the meat clean out, and pull it fine with your fingers, season it with mace, nutmeg, chyan, anchovy, a lump of butter, and two spoonsfull of good cream, then put it into a sauce-pan, and set it on the fire till the butter is melted; take the back shell and split it in two, take a few bread crumbs, seasoned as you did the lobster, put a few at the bottom of the shells, then put in the meat and a few crumbs over it, make them a nice brown before the fire, and so serve them up. Do crabs the same way.

CHAP.

C H A P. II.

OF SOUPS.

To make MOCK TURTLE SOUP.

TAKE two beast heels, and two palates boiled tender, cut them into thin slices and put them into two quarts of good veal or mutton broth, all the fat taken from it, season with chyan, a tea spoonfull of salt, a little nutmeg, three large onions, some lemon peel, sweet herbs, sweet basil, six anchovies, twelve large oysters with their liquor, chop them fine, and put them all together into a stew-pan, with half a pint of madeira wine, cover it close and let it stew nearly an hour; when you are going to serve it squeeze in the juice of a large lemon, add force meat balls and eggs.

To make HARE SOUP.

TAKE an old hare, scald it, steep it well, changing the water till all the blood be got out, cut it in pieces, season it well with chyan and salt, put it into a stew-pan with a small knuckle of veal well chopped, and half a pound of lean bacon, half a dozen large onions, two heads of celery, a small bunch of pot-marjoram, a few cloves and three quarts of soft water; stew it gently till the goodness is out, strain it, squeezing the meat well. All soups are the best made over night as the fat may be taken off best when cold.

To make FRENCH SOUP.

CUT three pounds of lean beef into thin slices, three slices

slices of ham or lean bacon, three turnips cut in slices, three carrots, six large onions sliced, and four or five heads of celery, a small bunch of thyme, one of pot-marjoram, and one of chervil if you can get it, some cloves and whole pepper, and put them into the stew-pan; lay a layer of meat and a layer of the other ingredients, cover it close that no steam can get out, set it on a trivet, a little from the fire, let it stand an hour, then pour out all the gravy you can get; put in five pints of boiling soft water, stew it till all the goodness is out, then strain it through a hair sieve, when cold pour it as clear as you can from the bottom, put to it your gravy, that you first poured off, give it a boil with a little chyan and salt to your taste.

To make GRAVY SOUP.

TAKE a stamp of beef, break the bone put it into a stew-pan or a kettle well tinned, add to it five or six quarts of soft water, six large onions, two heads of celery, one carrot, one turnip, some white pepper corns, a few cloves and a little salt, set it on a slow fire, cover it up close and stew it gently till all the goodness is out, then strain it into an earthen pot, when cold take off the fat, and take the clear part of the gravy for soup, as the bottom will make gravy fauce; serve it up with dry toast; you may put vermicelli or vegetables in the tureen.

To make PEASE SOUP in Winter.

TAKE a piece of lean beef or good roast beef bones, put them into a tin kettle with a quart of blue pease, twelve onions, three heads of celery, a bunch of green thyme, one

one of pot-marjoram, some pepper corns, a little lean bacon (or if no bacon, three or four anchovies will do) put to them four quarts of soft water, stew it gently five or six hours, then strain it through a hair sieve, rub the pease through the sieve so as to make it a proper thickness, taking care not to make it too thick; let it stand all night, then take off the fat, put the soup in a stew-pan, with three or four ounces of butter, three spoonsfull of flour and water, chyan pepper, four or five lumps of loaf sugar, and a little dried mint rubbed fine, boil all together a quarter of an hour, serve it up with dried toast; put boiled celery in the tureen.

To make PEASE SOUP in Lent.

TAKE a quart of pease, put them into a pot with a gallon of water, two or three large onions, half a dozen anchovies, a little whole pepper and salt; boil all together whilst your soup be thick, drain it into a stew-pan through a cullender, and put to it six ounces of butter worked in flour, to thicken it, also a little boiled celery, stewed spinage, crisped bread, and a little dried mint rubbed to powder; so serve it up.

To make GREEN PEASE SOUP.

TAKE the knuckle of a shoulder of veal, or the crag end of a neck, half a pound of lean bacon, put these into a stew-pan with three quarts of soft water, a bunch of sweet marjoram, one of thyme, and one of mint, six large onions, a quart of old green pease, twelve cloves and a few white pepper corns, stew these gently till you think all the goodness is out; then strain them squeezing them

well, when cold take off the fat, then put the soup into a stew-pan, have ready three large cucumbers, take out the seeds and cut them in small square pieces, lay them on a hair sieve with a little salt to drain, then put them into sweet butter made hot and fry them; take them out and lay them on the sieve again to drain; boil a goss lettuce in hard water, squeeze, chop, and fry it as the cucumber, have ready boiled half a pint of the youngest green pease you can get, put all these into the stew-pan to your soup, and add two spoonsfull of flour and water, three ounces of fresh butter, set it on a slow fire, keep stirring it till it boils, then pour it into the tureen, and send it up with toasted bread; this only fills a small tureen. Green it with the juice of spinage, if you like it.

To make LOBSTER SOUP.

TAKE a crag of veal, and a piece of a neck of mutton, put to them three quarts of water, six onions, six anchovies, some white pepper corns, five or six blades of mace, and a small bunch of sweet herbs, stew them all together till the goodness is out, then strain it, and when cold take off the fat; put the soup into a stew-pan, take the body and claws of a large lobster, (leaving out the tail) chop the meat very fine, put it in the soup with a lump of butter, a pint of good cream, chyan pepper and salt to your taste, add three spoonsfull of thick flour and water, beat the coral or berries in a marble mortar, put a little gravy or cream to your coral, squeeze as much into the soup through a cloth as will give it a red tinge, then set it on a slow fire or stove, stir it till it boils, let it boil five minutes, serve it up

up with dry toast, mind not to have it ready till you want to send it up. Crayfish soup may be made the same way.

To make WHITE SOUP.

TAKE a crag, or a small knuckle of veal, half a pound of lean bacon, a pound of lean mutton, three quarts of soft water, four large onions, three heads of celery, one turnip, a small bunch of sweet herbs, five or six blades 2 or 3 of mace, some white pepper corns, stew these till the goodness is out; then strain it through a hair sieve, when cold take off the fat, put the soup into a stew-pan with three ounces of butter, some chyan, four spoonsfull of thick flour and water, a little salt, and as much good cream as will make it white, stir it till it boils, let it boil five minutes; take care to let your soup be the thickness of good cream, serve it up with a plate of dry toast.

To make ONION SOUP.

TAKE a crag of veal, some lean mutton, eight large onions, one turnip, a small bunch of sweet herbs, a small bunch of chervil, some white pepper corns, a few cloves, two anchovies, and a little salt; put to them three quarts of soft water, stew it gently; when the onions and turnips are soft take them out, and rub them through a hair sieve, then let the rest stew till all the goodness is out, strain it through a hair sieve, take off the fat, put your soup into a stew-pan, put in the onions you rubbed through the sieve, and two ounces of butter, two spoonsfull of thick flour and water, a pint of good cream, and a little chyan pepper, set it on a stove, stir it till it boils, and let it boil five minutes; serve it up with dry toast. Carrot soup is made the same way.

To make SOUP MEAGRE.

TAKE half a pound of fresh butter, put it into a stew-pan, take two go's lettuces or endive, a large handfull of green beet, shred them very fine, take three heads of celery, a little chervil, and pot-marjoram, put these into your butter with six anchovies boned and chopped, stew them gently an hour; have ready three pints of boiling water and put it in, and two spoonsfull of thick flour and water, with chyan and salt to your taste; boil it five minutes, then serve it.

To make PORTABLE SOUP.

CUT in small pieces fifteen pounds of veal, about thirty pounds of lean beef, and three pounds of ham, butter the pan very well at the bottom, lay in the meat and bones with eight anchovies, and a quarter of an ounce of mace; cut off the green leaves of five or six heads of celery, wash them clean, cut them small and put them in, with three large carrots cut thin; cover the pan quite close, put it over a very moderate fire, and when you find the gravy begins to draw, keep taking it out, till you have got it all; then cover the meat with water, set it on the fire again, and let it boil four hours slowly, then strain it through a hair sieve into a clean pan, add to it the gravy you drew out first, and let it simmer eight or ten hours, (it should simmer till like glue) you must be very careful careful to skim off the fat as it rises, also that it does not burn to the pan, season it with chyan, and pour it into earthen dishes about a quarter of an inch deep, let it stand a day or two in a dry cool place, cut it out in small round cakes, about the size of a crown piece, when dry put them into a tin box with writing paper between one of these cakes, to half a pint of boiling water and a little salt, makes a good basin of soup. This gravy should be made in frosty weather.

To make STEW of OX CHEEK.

TAKE an ox cheek when fresh killed, take out the teeth and loose bones, rub it with a little salt, put it into soft water just warm, let it lay three or four hours, then put it into cold water, let it stand all night, wash it clean and drain it well, season it with ground pepper and salt, put it into a kettle well tinned, put to it five quarts of soft water, before it boils you must take care to skim it well, then put in six large onions, a small bunch of sweet herbs, stew it gently five or six hours, take out the herbs and let it stand all night, then take off all the fat, put in celery, carrots, and turnips, cut in pieces, also chyan pepper, and salt to your taste; stew it two hours more, send up altogether in a tureen, and dry toast on a plate. Make stew of tongue roots the same way.

To make STEW of a SHANK of BEEF.

TAKE a shank of beef seven or eight pounds weight, break the bone well, put it into a kettle well tinned, put to it six quarts of soft water, season it with pepper and salt, skim it when it boils, stew it five or six hours let it stand all all night, then take off the fat, and put in celery, carrots, turnips, chyan, and salt, stew it two hours more, then send it up as the other stew.

To stew a KNUCKLE of VEAL.

BREAK the bone well, put it into a tin kettle, adding three quarts of water and one large onion, take four or five blades of mace, and some white pepper corns, tye the seasoning in a bag made of gauze or muslin, then put it in with a quarter of a pound of rice, one head of celery, and a little salt, stew them gently till the veal leaves the bone; then take out the bones and seasoning, and send up the stew in a tureen with a plate of dry toast.

To make SOUP and BOUILLE.

TAKE a slice of a chine, or brisket of beef, two or three inches thick, cut it in square pieces, season it with chyan, salt and beaten mace, take a bunch of young onions, one of pot-marjoram, and of thyme, put all into a stew-pan with two quarts of water, stew it till the beef is tender, skim the fat off, put in a pint of green pease not very old, a goss lettuce fried in butter and drained in a hair sieve, put in an ounce of butter, a spoonfull of flour and water, stew it till the pease are enough, take out the bunches of herbs, and send up all the remainder in a tureen or soup dish.

To make COCK-A-LEEK.

TAKE a full grown fowl, two or three pounds of the knuckle of a shoulder of veal, put them to three quarts of soft water, take a little mace, white pepper and cinnamon, put

put them into a bag and stew all together in a tin sauce-pan two hours, skim it well, then take the whites of ten large leeks, slice and put them in with a little chyan and salt, stew it gently an hour and a half more, take out the bones and seasoning, and serve up the rest in a tureen with dry toast: you may add an ounce of pearl barley if liked, remembering to skim the fowl from it before you put it into the stew.

CHAP. III.

OF BOILING, ROASTING, &c.

To roast a SURLOIN of BEEF.

PAPER it on the outside when you put it down, mind your fire be as long as your beef, do not roast it too quick at the first, baste your paper well at the first to keep it from burning, then do not baste your meat any more; both beef and mutton are better without basting; if the beef be large and fat it will take three hours, if small two hours and a half, and so on according to the size; mind not to leave too much fat in the inside, if you like to have the inside frenched, do it thus: have ready some brown gravy, four shalots, one clove of garlic, a little lemon peel, chop these very fine, add a little beaten mace, and two anchovies chopped; when your beef is enough take out the inside without any fat, cut it in small pieces, as thin as you can, put it into a stew-pan with the gravy that came from it, a little brown gravy and
the

the other ingredients, with two spoonsfull of white wine vinegar; season pretty well with chyan and salt, just give it a boil, pour it into your dish, and draw your beef upon it; garnish with scraped horse-radish, and pickles. Take care your dish is hot.

To stew a RUMP of BEEF.

TAKE a small rump of beef cut with as little bone as possible, strew over it chyan, beaten mace, and salt; paper it very well, and roast it an hour and a quarter; have ready some good brown gravy, put it into a stew-pan, draw the beef, take off the paper, put it into the stew-pan with two or three shalots, two anchovies, a little lemon peel shred, a little scraped horse-radish, and a pint of red wine; stew these gently till you think the beef is done through, turn it over once or twice, skim off all the fat, stew morels with it, add a spoonfull or two of walnut-catch-up, thicken your gravy a little, put in a little more red wine, chyan, and salt to your taste, dish up your beef in a deep dish, just give your gravy a boil and pour it over; garnish with scraped horse-radish and pickles.

To dress BEEF STEAKS.

TAKE steaks of a rump of beef that has been some time kept, beat them a little, broil them upon a gridiron over a clear fire, keep turning them very quick, when they are nearly enough, strew over them a little chyan, and salt, chop a shalot very fine, strew it on a dish, lay your steaks upon it, rub them with a little butter, send up oyster sauce, and pickles. Mutton chops may be done the same way.

To boil a ROUND of BEEF.

TAKE a round of beef, salt it well with common salt; let it lay ten days, turning it over and rubbing it with the brine every other day, then wash it in soft water, tie it up as round as you can, and put it into cold soft water, boil it very gently, if it weighs thirty pounds, it will take three hours and a half; if you stuff it, do it thus; take half a pound of beef suet, some green beet, parsley, pot-marjoram, thyme, and leeks; chop all these very fine; put to them a handfull of stale bread crumbs, pepper and salt, mix these well together, make holes in your beef and put it in, tye it up in a cloth.

To boil a BRISKET of BEEF.

TAKE a thick piece of the brisket, salt it well with common salt, rub it with the brine every other day, and turn it over, let it lay a fortnight or three weeks, if you think it will be too salt, steep it all night in cold water; set it on to boil in cold water, keep it close covered, and stew it gently four hours, but if it be very thick it will take more; mind to skim your pot well when it begins to boil, which must be carefully observed in all kinds of boiled meats; if you take out the bones and roll it like collared meat, it will look much handsomer particularly to eat cold.

To stew a BRISKET of BEEF.

TAKE a square piece of the best side of a brisket, according to the size you would have your dish, strew over it a little common salt, let it lay a night or two, then

boil it in soft water very gently, till the bones and gristles will come out, then score it on the top side as you would do pork for roasting, strew on it whilst hot, chyan, salt and beaten mace, let it stand half an hour, then put it, and as much brown gravy as will cover it into a stew-pan, stew it gently three quarters of an hour, skim off the fat, if any, and put in two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, thicken it a little, have ready some onions boiled and cut in slices, celery, carrots, and turnips, cut in squares, boil them tender as you would for soup; dish up the beef in a deep dish, lay the vegetables round it, pour your gravy boiling hot over it, garnish the edge of your dish with boiled cabbage sprouts, or any other greens.

To cure BEEF for hanging.

TO a piece of lean beef that weighs about twenty pounds, take two pounds of common salt, half a pound of coarse sugar, mix them together, rub this well into the beef, and lay it in an earthen pot, when it has laid two nights, beat two ounces of salt petre, strew half of it on the beef, let it stand a night, then turn it over and strew on the other half; let it lay a fortnight, turn and wash it in the brine every other day, drain, and hang it, but not in too hot a place; in three weeks it will be fit for use; you may do any kind of small tongues such as sheep &c in the pickle, first rubbing them well with salt.

To cure a LEG of MUTTON for hanging.

TO a leg of mutton that weighs about ten pounds, take a pound of common salt, and two ounces of coarse sugar, sugar, with an ounce of salt petre, mix these together, and rub them well in, turn and rub it every day for a fortnight, then wipe it dry and dredge it, wrap it up in cap paper and hang it up; in three weeks it will be fit to use; it is not good kept too long, this will take two hours boiling; put it in cold water when you set it on, this eats the best cold, or very good broiled with poached eggs and spinage; the mutton must be cut in the shape of a haunch of venison and salted when fresh killed.

To boil and roast MUTTON.

TAKE a leg of mutton, that has been kept about ten days, boil it in soft water, if the weather is frosty put it in when the water is cold, throw a little oatmeal in and take off the scum as it rises, if it weighs about eight pounds, it will take two hours and a quarter boiling, if frosty two hours and a half. A neck of mutton of about six pounds, an hour and a quarter. A loin about the same. A leg of mutton will take nearly the same time roasting as boiling, if large, paper it, having the paper well greased. A shoulder of mutton that weighs six pounds will take an hour and a quarter by a brisk fire; a neck or loin of about six pounds the same, observe to take the skin off the loin before you put it down to the fire; it will roast best without either dredging or basting; you may strew on a little salt if you like it.

To dress VEAL.

TAKE a fillet of veal, about eight pounds, make a stuffing for it, put it in between the fat and the lean part, skewer it round, and tie it, put paper on the fat part, it will take two hours and a quarter roasting, baste it with butter or it will spoil and dredge it, do not roast it too quick at the first; if you like brown sauce, do it thus, put a piece of lemon peel, and an onion sliced into the dripping-pan when you put the veal down, half an hour before you draw the veal, put as much water as you want sauce, into the dripping-pan, stir it well about, then strain it, and put it into a sauce-pan with a little butter, grated nutmeg and salt, as much flour and water as to make it a proper thickness, and colour it with browning, keep stirring it and boil it a minute. A shoulder of veal may be done the same way. A loin of veal about eight pounds will require two hours and a quarter. A breast of veal about six pounds will roast in about an hour and a half. A neck the same. To boil a fillet of veal; take a small fillet, stuff and skewer it as for roasting, tie it in a cloth, and put it in milk and soft water, when it boils if it weighs about five pounds it will take an hour and a half boiling, and so on in proportion, mind to drain it well before you dish it up; you may pour over it white fricassée, celery or oyster sauce, garnish with lemon; send up with it chap or ham with greens. A neck of veal that weighs six pounds, will take an hour and a half; cut off the crag end, serve it up as the fillet, or with egg sauce.

To boil a LEG of PORK.

TAKE a leg of pork that has been salted a fortnight or three weeks, about eight pounds weight, put it into cold

cold soft water, and boil it three hours and a quarter, then take off the skin. All salt meats require gently boiling. It is common to send up pease pudding with boiled pork.

To roast a SHOULDER of PORK.

TAKE a shoulder of pork, salt it a little and score it, chop some sage and onions very fine, put a little between the shank and the skin, as it roasts baste it and dredge with a little sage and onion, it will take the same time roasting as boiling according to the size, send up apple sauce with it: All roast pork eats better a little salted.

To dress TONGUES out of pickle.

TAKE beasts tongues when fresh killed, take off the outside of the roots, leave on all the fat part, wipe them with a dry cloth, salt them well with common salt, set them in a cool place, let them stay five or six days, then to every tongue, put an ounce of salt petre beaten very fine, just rub it on, then turn them over every other day in pickle; they are ready for use in a month, they will keep five or six weeks if the weather be cold; when you are going to use them steep them all night in water, set them on to boil in cold soft water, boil them gently, if large, three hours and a half, if small, three hours; and so on accordingly; take off the outside skin, dish up and lay carrots round.

To roast a TONGUE.

TAKE a tongue when fresh killed, trim the roots neatly, leave on the fat part, rub it clean with a dry cloth, take half an ounce of salt petre beaten fine, and a handfull of common common salt, rub them well in, let it lay two days, then turn it over and wash it in the brine every day for a week or ten days, then boil it till the skin will come off, stick the upper part with cloves, and roast it three quarters of an hour; baste it with butter, and dredge it with stale bread crumbs as it roasts; dish it up, pour some good brown gravy into the dish, (mind your dish is very hot) send up with it currant jelly dissolved in red wine, or bread sauce with red wine and sugar in it.

To stew OX PALATES.

TAKE ox palates, clean them well, rub them with a little common salt, let them lay two or three days, steep them in milk and water, and also boil them in milk and water till they are quite tender, whilst hot, season them with chyan, beaten mace and salt, stew them in a little good gravy with morels, a spoonfull of walnut-catchup, a little lemon pickle, a spoonfull of white wine, two or three spoonsfull of good cream, a little melted butter, flour and water to make it a proper thicknes, stew all together; then dish them up, put hard eggs in the dish and garnish with lemon.

To roast LAMB.

A fat quarter of lamb that weighs about seven pounds, will take an hour and a half roasting, baste it with butter and dredge it a little, have ready some chopped parsley, and just before you draw, strew it on. A loin of lamb that weighs three pounds, will take an hour, a neck or breast without the shoulders will take three quarters of an hour; lamb requires a brisk fire,

To

To dress a LAMB'S HEAD and PURTENANCE.

TAKE a lamb's head and purtenance when fresh killed, wash them well with water just aired, put them into cold soft water to steep, let them steep all night if you can, cut the liver into four or five slices before you steep it, boil the heart, lights, and tongue an hour, when cold mince them, but not so small as you would do veal; then put them into a stew-pan with a little of the liquor they were boiled in, put in a little lemon peel shred fine, a little beaten mace, a little nutmeg, chyan, salt, anchovy chopped, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, two spoonsfull of white wine, and the juice of half a lemon, boil them five minutes, add four or five spoonsfull of good melted butter, boil the head an hour in milk and water; season the slices of liver with sage, pepper and salt, fry them with slices of bacon the same size, make small cakes of the brains, and fry them; when you dish up, lay the mince meat on the dish first, drain the head well and lay it in the middle, lay the slices of liver, bacon, and brain cakes round it, garnish your dish edge with boiled spinage squeezed and cut in quarters, serve it up with coddled gooseberries or sorrel sauce; make the brain cakes thus; take the brains and wash them clean, drain the water well from them, chop them a little, put them into a basin and beat them with an egg, season them a little with lemon peel, and pot-marjoram shred, a little grated nutmeg, chyan, salt and a little lemon juice; put in stale bread crumbs, so as to make them the thickness of fritters, beat them well together, and fry them a pale brown.

To

To dress a CALF'S PLUCK.

TAKE a calf's pluck, when fresh killed, wash it in water just aired, put it in cold water, steep it three or four hours, cut off a piece of the liver, boil the rest with the lights an hour, take them out, when cold mince them and put them into a stew-pan, with a little of the liquor they were boiled in, put in a small onion shred fine, a little lemon peel shred fine, an anchovy chopped, some chyan, salt, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, three spoonsfull of vinegar, four or five spoonsfull of good melted butter, mix these well together, boil them five minutes then stuff the heart and roast it, cut the piece of liver in slices, season it with sage, pepper and salt, fry it in butter with some small slices of bacon, when you dish up, lay the mince meat on the dish first, the heart in the middle, and the liver and bacon round it; garnish with crisped parsley, send up greens with it.

To dress a LEG of LAMB with the LOIN.

TAKE the hind quarter of lamb, cut off the loin, trim it, cut it in neat steaks, season them with beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan and salt, fry them in butter a pale brown, they will take half an hour, make a little brown gravy in the pan, boil the leg in milk and water, if it is fat lamb it will take an hour and a quarter; when you dish it lay the steaks round the dish, pour your gravy over them, lay the leg in the middle, (mind to drain it well) garnish with crisped parsley, send up with it coddled gooseberries and spinage.

To

To dress PIG'S FEET and EARS.

TAKE pig's feet and ears, salt them well with common salt, they will not be fit for use for ten or eleven days; then boil them in soft water, until they are quite tender, when the ears are cold, cut them in large slips, (the length way of the ear) fry them in butter till they are a nice brown, drain them on a hair sieve; have ready a strong brown gravy, put them into a stew-pan, stew them half an hour, then put to them a large tea spoonfull of mustard, and two of good sharp vinegar, two of walnut-catchup, a little chyan, four spoonsfull of melted butter and a little salt, stew them five minutes; cut the feet and broil them with bread crumbs; put the ears in the middle of your dish and the feet round them, garnish with what you please. If they be long in the pickle before they are used, steep them a night in water.

A FRICANDO.

A small fillet of veal larded very thick with bacon, sprinkled with beaten mace and salt, stew it in the oven till tender, and a fine brown, take the fat off the gravy, thicken it a little and let it be a good brown, pour it over the veal, put morels and hard eggs into the dish; stewed sorrel is a very handsome garnish round the dish.

To dress LAMB'S EARS.

TAKE lamb's ears cut off as large as you can, scald them and take off the hair clean, then take a pair of scissars and snip them round the edge, about half an inch deep, stew them in milk and water till tender, then have ready

ready some fricassée sauce, as for any other fricassée, pour it over them when upon the dish, drop into your dish eggs boiled hard, and pickled mushrooms; garnish with lemon.

To make Mock Turtle.

TAKE a calf's head with the skin on, take off all the hair clean, split it and clean it well, steep it a night in soft water, put it in a cloth and boil it gently one hour in milk and water, when cold cut it into pieces an inch thick, two broad, and four long, season it with beaten mace salt and chyan, put it into a stew-pan (well tinned) with a quart of strong veal gravy, six anchovies taken from the bone and chopped, a sprig of sweet-marjoram and one of thyme, let it stew gentle an hour, keeping it close covered, then take out the herbs and skim off the fat, add a pint of madeira a little shred lemon-peel, grated nutmeg, two score of oysters with their liquor, the black beard taken off, the juice of three lemons a little more chyan if required, but do not make it too salt, and two spoonsfull of thick flour and water, stew it an hour and a half, just before you dish it up, add four spoonsfull of good melted butter, have ready the yolks of twelve eggs boiled hard and force-meat balls fried brown; pour it into a deep dish, drop in your eggs and balls, garnish with lemon and pickled mushrooms, so send it up.

To make SAUSAGES.

TAKE pork the finest lean part you can get, scrape it with a sharp knife, then weigh it, to half a pound of lean,
put

put a pound of solid fat pork, chop these with a sharp chopping knife, pick out all the strings, then chop it again, till you think it is as fine as possible, then put a quarter of a pound of beef suet, three eggs, chyan pepper and salt, a little grated nutmeg, and sage shred fine to your taste; mix these well together, and put it down into an earthen pot, keep it from air, as you want to use it, put it into your skins, mix a few bread crumbs with it if you use it out of the skins; make it into cakes or balls or what shapes you please, beat the yolk of an egg, and do it over them with a feather, dredge them with flour, and fry them a pale brown in butter.

To make CURRY POWDER.

TAKE an ounce of the best turmeric beaten and sifted very fine, fourteen bay-leaves beaten and sifted, one large nutmeg, a quarter of an ounce of mace, as much chyan as will lay upon a shilling, mix these well together, put them into a dry wide mouth'd bottle, and keep them in a dry place.

To make a CURRY.

TAKE a chicken or rabbit, cut it into small pieces as you would to fricassée it, take as much powder, as will lay on a shilling, rub it well with a little salt, fry it in butter a nice brown, drain it in a hair sieve, then stew it with a little gravy gently half an hour, take a small tea-cup full of cream, a tea-spoonfull of flour, one of curry powder, mix it well with the cream, put it into a stew-pan with a spoonfull of melted butter, chyan and salt to your taste, let it boil, add more powder as you would have it coloured, dish it up, garnish your dish with creed rice. You may do veal the same way. Do onions as thus; take middle sized onions, peel them, and tie them up seperately in fine cloths, boil them in milk and water till soft, take them out of the cloths, lay them on a dish, pour on them curry sauce as before directed, but do not use rice, portugal onions you may do the same, but when laid on the dish cut them into quarters. To make curry paste, take the yolk of an egg boiled very hard, and a lump of fresh butter the same size, beat it in a small mortar, mix it up with curry powder to a paste, make it up into balls the size of a nut, lay them on a saucer, and cover them with a piece of writing paper, set them into an oven, to be made hot, but not to burn them, so send them to table; these are to be sent on a dish by themselves, for those who like them to add to their sauce.

To dress VEAL White.

CUT thin slices off a leg of veal as you would for scotch scollops, beat them a little, season them with beaten mace, nutmeg, lemon-peel shred, chyan, and salt, put a lump of butter into a stew-pan make it hot, but do not brown it, lay your veal in, stew it five minutes, turn it over and stew it three or four more, put to it a little good white gravy, two spoonsfull of white and one of walnut-catchup, two spoonsfull of white wine, a little lemon juice, a little grated nutmeg, one gill of cream, as much flour and water as will make it a proper thickness, two spoonsfull of good melted butter, and salt to your taste; then boil it two minutes, dish it up, put pickled mushrooms in the dish, garnish with slices of lemon; you may add force-meat balls if you please.

To dress VEAL STEAKS.

TAKE the best end of a neck of veal, cut it into steaks, chop off the end of the bones, flatten them with a cleaver, season them with nutmeg, mace, chyan, lemon-peel, and salt; rub the steaks with the yolk of egg, strew over them bread crumbs a little pot-marjoram shred fine, put them into a dripping-pan, set them before a brisk fire, baste them and make them a light brown, on both sides, half an hour will do them; make the gravy of the trimmings of the veal, a little soft water, an onion, white pepper corns, five or six cloves, anchovy, a bay-leaf or lemon-peel, stew the goodness out, then strain it, take out the lemon-peel and shred it fine, put it into the gravy, with nutmeg, chyan, a spoonfull or two of white-catchup, the same of walnut, the same of white wine, a little lemon pickle, a lump of butter, flour and water to make it a proper thickness, boil all together, lay the steaks on the dish, add pickled mushrooms, hard eggs and morels, pour your gravy over them; garnish with sliced lemon, and pickles; let the morels be stewed in the gravy when you make it,

To dress VEAL another Way.

TAKE a slice off a leg of veal an inch thick, cut it into round or square pieces the size of the veal steaks, lard them well with fat bacon on both sides, season them as

as the steaks, fry them in butter a light brown, make gravy of the trimmings the same as the steaks, put them into the stew-pan with the gravy, stew them ten minutes, thicken it the same as the other, dish it up, and garnish with lemon and pickles as the other.

To make SCOTCH COLLOPS.

TAKE a piece of a leg of veal, cut it into slices the size of a crown piece, beat them a little, rub them with the yolk of egg on both sides, season them with beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, and salt, have some butter in a frying-pan, let it be very hot, fry them quick, make them a good brown but do not burn them, lay them into a deep pot one upon another, cover them close down, let them stand an hour or two, have ready some good brown gravy, put it into a stew-pan with your collops, add a little lemon-peel shred fine, grated nutmeg, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, two of red wine, the same of white, two spoonsfull of good ale, a little lemon pickle, some good melted butter, make it a proper thickness with flour and water, stew all together eight minutes; dish it up, and put in the dish with it force-meat balls, hard eggs, morels, and bits of broiled bacon, garnish with sliced lemon and pickles.

To dress LAMB STEAKS.

TAKE a loin of lamb, take off the kidney and fat whole, cut your lamb into steaks an inch thick, trim them neatly, flatten them with your cleaver, season them with beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, and salt, fry them in butter a good brown, make gravy of the trimmings in soft water, with a bunch of young onions, a piece of lemon-peel, two anchovies, some white pepper corns, and six cloves, stew them till the goodness is all out, strain it through a hair sieve, wipe your frying-pan, put the gravy into it, shred the lemon-peel that was stewed in the gravy, put it in with some grated nutmeg, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, the same of white, three or four spoonsfull of good melted butter, and the juice of half a lemon, chyan, and salt to your taste, boil all together one minute, lay the steaks on a dish, pour the sauce over them; garnish with crisped parsley and sliced lemon. Remember to cut the kidney into slices and fry them with the steaks. You may dress mutton the same way.

To hash MUTTON.

TAKE a leg of mutton, that has been roasted, cut it into thin slices, but not much fat, break the bone, make some gravy with whole pepper and onion, strain it, and take off the fat, put it into a stew-pan with your mutton, chop the onion that was boiled, put it in with an anchovy chopped, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, the same of mushroom, a little chyan, and salt to your taste, three spoonsfull of good melted butter, a little flour and water to thicken it, do not make it too thick, just give all a boil together; dish it up laying toasted bread round the dish, garnish with green pickles, you may add the gravy that was left when the leg was roasted.

To mince VEAL.

TAKE veal that has been roasted or boiled, mince it, make make a little gravy of the bones, or meat, with onion, anchovy, a few white pepper corns, four or five cloves, a little lemon-peel, boil them, then strain it, chop the lemon-peel, and put it into the gravy with the veal, a little nutmeg, beaten mace, chyan, and salt, a spoonfull or two of white-catchup, a lump of butter, a spoonfull of flour and water and a little lemon juice, boil all together two minutes, lay toasted bread round your dish, put the veal in the middle, garnish with sliced lemon.

To make SCOLLUP SHELLS of VEAL.

TAKE veal that has been roasted or boiled, and mince it small, put it into a sauce-pan with some shred lemon-peel, beaten mace, chyan, salt, two anchovies, a lump of butter, two or three spoonsfull of thick cream, have ready some stale bread crumbs, season them with a little nutmeg, and salt; spread some of them at the bottom of the shells, hot the veal, fill the shells, but not too full, cover it with the bread crumbs, baste it with butter and brown it before the fire. You may do cold turkey, chicken or partridge the same way.

To hash VEAL.

TAKE a fillet of veal that has been roasted, cut it into thin slices, season it with nutmeg, chyan, and salt; put a little small gravy into a stew-pan, then take a small onion, a little lemon-peel, an anchovy or two, four or five pickled mushrooms, chop them all together very small, put them into your gravy, just give it a boil, then put

put in the veal, and two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, one of mushroom, one of white-catchup, one of good ale, a little lemon pickle, three spoonsfull of good melted butter, chyan and salt, to your taste; make it a proper thicknes with flour and water, it must not be too thick, boil all together two minutes, dish it up, lay round dry toast and garnish with pickles!

To hash BEEF.

TAKE beef that has been roasted, or boiled if not salt, cut it into thin slices have ready some brown gravy in a stew-pan, with an onion and an anchovy chopped fine, give the gravy a boil, put in your beef with some walnut and mushroom-catchup, and a little melted butter, boil all together two minutes; you may put in the gravy that came from the beef when first dressed, dish it up and garnish with pickles.

A HARRICO of MUTTON.

TAKE a loin or neck of mutton cut it into steaks, take off most of the fat, season them with mace, nutmeg, pepper and salt, and a little chyan, fry them half enough, put them into a stew-pan, make as strong a gravy as you can, and put to them a spoonfull of walnut, and of mushroom-catchup, thicken with flour and water; give them a boil, when you think they are hot through, put in a little turnip, onion, celery and carrots cut into dice; let them be first boiled by themselves, put them in just before you dish up with two or three spoonsfull of melted butter; garnish with red cabbage.

To make BEEF OLIVES.

CUT slices off a rump of beef, six inches long and half an inch thick, beat them a little, rub them over with the yolk of egg, season them with pepper, salt and beaten mace, take the crumbs of a penny loaf, two ounces of marrow sliced fine, a little parsley, and lemon-peel chopped fine, strew it over your steaks, and roll them up, set them before the fire to brown, then put them into a stew-pan with some good gravy, a little walnut or mushroom-catchup, the same of lemon pickle, thicken with flour and butter, lay round them force-meat balls, mushrooms, or yolks of eggs, boiled hard.

To pot VEAL.

PUT your veal into a deep pot with bay-leaves, season with white pepper, mace, and salt, cover it with suet and bake it, when it is tender, take it out from the fat, and beat it fine, then season with mace and chyan to your taste, put in a little clarified butter, beat it again till smooth, then pot it and cover it with butter, and it is fit for use.

To stew a BREAST of VEAL brown.

TAKE a breast of veal, cut the ends off, roast the middle part enough, let it be a nice brown; then take the ends with some bits of beef and mutton, a bunch of sweet herbs, onion, mace, cloves, pepper, salt, and anchovy, put them into a sauce-pan with two quarts of water, make of them a good gravy, strain it and put it into a stew-pan, with the veal and a little chyan, two spoonsfull

spoonsfull of walnut, and one of white-catchup, three of strong ale, and a little lemon juice, cover it close and let it stew an hour, put in three or four spoonsfull of good melted butter; garnish with force-meat balls, hard eggs and mushrooms.

To stew a BREAST of VEAL White.

TAKE a breast of veal, take out the bones, cut off the bloody end, season with mace, nutmeg, lemon-peel shred, chyan, and salt, spread force-meat over it very thin, roll it up tight, and bind it round, stew it in milk and water an hour, have ready some white gravy, take off the binding, leave the skewer in, to keep it fast, put it into a stew-pan with a little lemon-peel, grated nutmeg, an anchovy chopped small, stew it an hour and a quarter, keep turning it in the gravy, put in two spoonsfull of white-catchup, two or three of white wine, a little lemon pickle, as much good cream as will make it white, make it a proper thickness with flour and water, put in three spoonsfull of good melted butter, chyan, and salt, to your taste, stew it ten minutes; you may dish it up whole, or cut into three pieces, put into your dish pickled mushrooms, the bottom of artichokes, garnish with lemon and rolls of bacon.

To dress a CALF'S HEAD plain.

TAKE a calf's head when fresh killed, split and clean it well, take care of the brains, wash it in soft water just aired, then put it into cold soft water, let it stand three or four hours, or all night if you have time, wrap it in a cloth and boil it in milk and soft water, if a large head it will take near two hours, tie the brains in a cloth with a few sage leaves and a little parsley, an hour will boil them, take them out and chop the sage and parsley well, and the brains a little, put them into a sauce-pan, with a little good melted butter, and a little salt, make them hot, then take up half the head, score it and do it over with the yolk of egg, season it with a little pepper and salt, strew over a few stale bread crumbs mixed with a little chopped parsley, set it before the fire till brown, baste it, but do not let it burn, then dish it up, lay the boiled and broiled both on a dish, and garnish with greens, skin the tongue and split it, lay the brains on a dish and the tongue upon them; it is common to send up greens and bacon with it.

To hash a CALF'S HEAD.

PREPARE it as for boiling, and boil it in milk and soft water three quarters of an hour, when cold cut it into pieces about two inches square, cut the tongue in long slices; chop the bones and put them into a sauce-pan with a little lean meat if you have it, three or four onions, a few cloves, a few white pepper corns, two anchovies, half a dozen morels, a sprig or two of pot-marjoram, a little chervil, as much soft water as will make a proper quantity of gravy, stew these gently till all the goodness is out; put your meat into a stew-pan and strain your gravy to it, take out your morels and put into the stew-pan, put in a little shred lemon-peel, a little beaten mace, chyan and salt, stew it gently an hour, skim off the fat

fat, then add two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, three of wine, two of good ale, a desert spoonfull of lemon pickle, and three or four spoonsfull of melted butter, flour and water to make it a proper thicknes and a little lemon juice, you may add oysters with their liquor if you have them; then stew all together a quarter of an hour more, dish it up, and put into your dish hard eggs, force-meat balls as suits you, and small bits of bacon broiled, lay the brain cakes round your dish and garnish with lemon: Make the brain cakes thus, wash the brains and pick out all the skins, drain them well, then beat them with two whites and the yolk of one egg, season with lemon-peel, grated nutmeg, chyan and salt, and the juice of lemon, mix them stiff with stale bread crumbs, fry them in fresh dripping a pale brown, let your dripping be very hot and drop them into it about the size of a crown piece but thicker, lay them on a hair sieve to drain.

To dress a BEAST'S FRY.

TAKE some sweets breads, some kidney skirts, cut them into slices, and beat them well, season with a little pepper and salt, fry them in butter over a slow fire for half an hour, drain them from the fat, make a little gravy of a bit of the skirts with two large onions, a little whole pepper, strain the gravy into the frying-pan, and put in a spoonfull of walnut-catchup, three spoonsfull of good melted butter, a little nutmeg, and a spoonfull of flour and water, stew all together three minutes; cut the onions into slices (that were boiled in the gravy) lay them in the dish, pour the fry on them, garnish with crisped parsley.

To ragoo a BREAST of VEAL.

TAKE a breast of veal, cut off both ends, then take out the bones, make a stuffing, the same as for a fillet of veal, skewer it round, put it under the skinny part of the top side of your veal then roll it up tight and bind it, stew it an hour and a half in milk and water, take it up and drain it, then take the ends of the veal put them into a sauce-pan with two quarts of water, put in some lemon-peel, three or four onions, two anchovies, cloves, and white pepper corns, stew them well, strain it, put it into the stew-pan with the veal and stew it half an hour; take the sweet bread, cut it into four parts, season it with pepper, salt, nutmeg, and a little mace, then rub it over with the yolk of egg, and a few bread crumbs, fry it a light brown, and put it upon your veal, when you dish it, thicken your sauce with egg and cream, garnish it with a little lemon.

BEEF A-LA-MODE.

TAKE a fleshy piece of beef without fat, beat it, lard it with pretty large pieces of bacon, fry it till the outside is a light brown, then put it into a deep stew-pan or glazed earthen vessel, with salt, pepper, and bay-leaves, a little lemon-peel, a few pickled mushrooms, six cloves, three cloves of garlic, four or five shalots, half a pint of red wine and a pint of water, cover it close and let it stew till tender, then take out the beef, strain the gravy and take off the fat, thicken it with a little flour and butter, put in the juice of half a lemon, give the gravy a boil, dish up the beef, and pour it over; garnish with pickles
and

and lemon; it is also good cold, cut into slices half an inch thick.

To roast a Pig.

TAKE your pig when fat, stick it in the throat with a pen-knife, when dead rub it with a little rosin beaten fine, have ready some scalding hot water with a little bran in it, dip it in till the hair comes off, mind you do not keep it in too long, when you have got the hair clean off, then wash it in soft water, take out the inside, cut off the legs at the first joint, then wash it again, dry it well with a cloth, put a dry cloth into the belly, lay it upon a board till you want it, take care of the feet, heart, kidney, liver and lights, when you roast the pig, chop a few sage leaves, rub the inside with a little white pepper ground, and salt, put the sage in with a white bread crust, sew the belly up close, as no gravy can run out, split it, and put it down to roast (mind your fire is longer than your pig and not too hot at the first) keep your fire clear at the ends, dredge it very thick with fine flour, let it roast three quarters of an hour, then take a clean goose wing, and wing off the flour quite clean, then rub it with a bit of butter, keep wiping it with a cloth as it roasts, till the skin is quite crisp, and a pale brown, when enough cut off the head, a little behind the ears, cut the ears off handsome, cut off the chaps, then split the face, and take out the brains, have ready some good melted butter, with a tea-cup full of white gravy in it, chop the brains and put in likewise, and a little salt, then draw the pig, you may send it up whole or split down the back,

which you like; lay the chops and ears round your dish, send up with it, plump currants, bread sauce with sugar and red wine if you like it. If the pig roasts too fast in the middle, put on the pig plate as the middle will be done first.

To collar a SUCKING PIG.

DRESS it as for roasting, cut it even in two down the back, take out all the bones, take care not to cut the skin, have ready for seasoning a few sage leaves, a sprig or two of pot-marjoram, a little chervil, the rind of a lemon very thin, chop these together very fine, and mix with it white pepper ground and salt, a little beaten mace, spread the seasoning on the inside, roll it up and bind it as you would any other thing for collaring; boil it in soft water with a little salt gently an hour and a half, take it out and set it into a deep narrow pot so as to keep it up straight; put into the water that it was boiled in a tea-cup full of good vinegar, three bay-leaves, some white pepper corns, and a little more salt, boil it a quarter of an hour; when both are cold take the cloth off the pig and put it into the pickle. You may send this up in rolls or in slices as you please.

To dress PIG'S PETTICOES.

WASH them clean, boil them in milk and water, with the insides, till they are tender, then take out the insides and mince them small, put them into a sauce-pan, with a lump of butter, two or three spoonsfull of milk and water, that they were boiled in, a little grated nutmeg, meg, a little chyan and salt, squeeze in a little lemon juice, a spoonfull of flour and water, give all a boil, then lay it on your dish, split the feet and lay them upon it; garnish with sliced lemon.

To force a LOIN of MUTTON.

TAKE a loin of mutton, take out the bones, cut off the lean end, to make it square, take off the outside skin with some of the fat, then make the force-meat, thus; chop the lean of the part you have cut off with a little beef suet, or marrow, season it very high with mace, chyan, nutmeg, and a little salt, two or three anchovies, one clove of garlic, two large shalots, a little thyme, pot-marjoram, winter savoury; put the force-meat into the mutton, where the bones are taken out, season the outside of the mutton, with mace, chyan, and salt, lay it flat in an oval baking dish, the fat part upwards, butter a piece of writing paper and put over it, set it into a slow oven let it stay three quarters of an hour, then have ready, half a pint of good brown gravy with a pint of red wine, put your mutton into a stew-pan, stew it gently three quarters of an hour be careful to take off the fat clear from the gravy, thicken it with good melted butter, squeeze in a little lemon juice, then serve it up with pickles, and horse-radish upon it.

To roll a PIG'S HEAD.

CLEAN it, rub it with common salt, then strew an ounce of salt petre on it, turn it every day for seven days, then boil it in soft water till the bones and gristles flip out, take four cow heels, dress them, boil them till the lantern will come off, lay the lantern on a cloth, beat the pig's head a little in a bowl, spread it upon the lantern, roll it up round and tight in a cloth, then put it into a pot or frame the size you wish it, it must be put in hot, set a lead weight upon it, and in a few days it will be fit to turn out, it is very good put into a frame or pot without the lantern, this will be good in a week or ten days, when you find the outside turns soft, make a pickle as thus, take a gallon of spring water, two handfull of common salt, and a large handfull of wheat bran, a quarter of an ounce of salt petre, boil these half an hour, strain it through a hair sieve, and when cold put the roll in.

flip

CHAP. IV.

OF DRESSING GAME, POULTRY, VENISON, &c.

To roast HARE.

TAKE a hare that has been kept, three or four days, scald it and clean it with a dry cloth but do not wash it, skewer it and roast it three quarters of an hour if large, if small in proportion, baste with butter, when cold cut it into pieces, put it into an earthen pot, with a few white pepper corns, a dozen cloves, onions whole, four or five bay-leaves, a quarter of a pound of butter, six ounces of beef suet shred fine, put the gravy in that came from it, but no water, cover it close, put it into an oven, not

not too hot, stew it till the meat will leave the bones, then pick the meat from the bones, beat it fine, moisten it with the gravy it was baked in, do not make it too moist, season it with a little chyan, beaten mace, and salt, to your taste, put it down into pots, and cover it with clarified butter.

To jug a HARE.

TAKE a hare that has been kept three or four days, ease and wash it well, cut it into small pieces; for seasoning, grate a large nutmeg, beaten mace, and salt, mix it well with the meat, then put it into a jug with two whole onions, half a pound of butter and a pint of water, then put upon it beef suet two inches thick, cover it close down, set it into a kettle of boiling water, boil it three hours if a young hare, if old it will require four, mind to put water into the kettle as it wastes away, then take out the suet, strain out all the gravy, take off the fat, put the hare into a stew-pan with the gravy, a little shred lemon-peel and chyan, let it stew a little, then add two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, a desert spoonfull of lemon pickle, two spoonsfull of good strong ale, a large tea-cup full of red wine, the juice of half a lemon, salt to your taste, as much thick flour and water as will make it a proper thickness, four table spoonsfull of good melted butter stew it gently a quarter of an hour, take out the onions, and dish it up, garnish with currant jelly and lemon.

To stew HARE.

TAKE a hare, skin, and wash it clean, put a few slices of fat bacon cut thin into the belly, sew up the belly, roast it three quarters of an hour, baste it well with butter, shred a little lemon-peel very fine, add to it a little chyan, and salt, and when you draw the hare, strew the seasoning all over it; when cold cut it into handsome pieces, leave out all the skin of the belly part, and the bacon likewise, put the hare into a stew-pan, with as much good brown gravy as covers it, some morels, a large onion whole, a little beaten mace, two anchovies chopped fine, if a young hare stew it half an hour, if old an hour, then take out the onion, put in half a pint of red wine, three spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, juice of half a lemon, two ounces of butter, flour and water to make it a proper thickness, chyan, and salt to your taste; then boil it five minutes, dish it up, put force-meat balls into the dish, and hard eggs; garnish with lemon and currant jelly.

To roast a HARE.

TAKE a hare when kept four or five days, case it and clean it well, put a pudding into the belly and sew it up, skewer it neatly, leave on the ears, turn the head, as if looking behind it, put it down to a clear fire, but not too near, baste it well with milk twenty minutes, clean the dripping-pan, and then baste it with butter, put into your dripping-pan a bit of lemon-peel, and a small onion sliced, a quarter of an hour before you draw it, put in half a pint of boiling water, stir the water and gravy well together, strain it through a hair sieve into a sauce-pan, add to it as much beef gravy, six ounces of butter, butter, grated nutmeg, as much flour and water as will make it a proper thickness, salt to your taste, set it on the fire, stir it till it boils, froth your hare well, dish it up, pour the sauce into the dish, (mind your dish is very hot) you may make a rich white sauce for it if you like. To make a pudding, take the crumbs of a stale penny loaf, nearly the same quantity of beef suet shred very fine, two anchovies boned and chopped, some lemon-peel shred, a little pot-marjoram, half of the liver, a little beaten mace, grated nutmeg, chyan, and salt, mix it up with an egg, a little cream and lemon juice.

To roast a HARE another Way.

TAKE very thin slices of bacon, and put them into the inside before you put in the pudding, sew it up and skewer it as before, and lard it neatly down the back, a small hare will take an hour roasting, a larger an hour and a quarter, so in proportion.

To stew PARTRIDGES or PIGEONS with red or white Cabbage.

SKEWER them neatly, season them with chyan, salt, and beaten mace, fry them in butter not too brown, put them into a stew-pan with a little brown gravy, cover them close, and stew them gently till tender, keep turning them over, prepare the cabbage, as thus, take red cabbage, when touch'd with frost, cut it round as you would to pickle, wash it, put it into a stew-pan, with three ounces of butter, a pint of spring water, a little chyan, and salt, a halfpenny worth of cochineal beat, cover cover it close, stew it gently quite tender, pour out some of the liquor, and put in some of the gravy that the pigeons are stewed in, squeeze in juice of lemon so as to make it taste, and a spoonfull of melted butter, and give it a boil, lay your pigeons, or partridges on the dish, with the remainder of the gravy they were stewed in, lay the cabbage over, and about them, so send them up; do white or green cabbage the same way cut into quarters, leaving out the cochineal; this may be sent up without meat, but remember to use a little gravy.

To pot MOOR-GAME.

TAKE your moor-game, truss them as you would any other game to pot; season them well with mace, nutmeg, chyan, black or white pepper, and salt, put them into the pot you mean them to remain in, with the breasts upwards, lay some butter over them, and bake them till you think they are enough, when cold cover them with clarified butter.

To roast WOODCOCKS.

TAKE woodcocks, and pick them clean, leave on the heads and legs, skewer the legs upon the breasts with the bills, hang them down, put a toast of white bread under them for the train to drop on, roast them twenty minutes, lay the toast on the dish, pour a little melted butter upon them, and lay the woodcocks on the toast, send them up with melted butter in a boat.

To dress WOODCOCKS another Way.

PUT your woodcocks down to roast, as before with a toast for the train to drop on, make a good brown gravy thickened a little, cut your toast in pieces, and lay them on the dish, pour your gravy upon it, and lay your woodcocks in the middle, you may send up dried bread crumbs and melted butter. Snipes, judcocks and plover, may be dressed the same way.

To roast PARTRIDGES.

TAKE partridges, pick and draw them, cut off the heads, and pinions, leave the legs on, skewer them as you would a pigeon, put them down, they will take half an hour before a brisk fire, dish them up, put some brown gravy into the dish; send up bread sauce in a boat; make it thus; take the giblets of the partridges with a bit of lean beef or mutton, a large onion, some white pepper corns, and six cloves, boil them in soft water till the goodness is out, strain it over some stale bread crumbs, put the crumbs into a sauce-pan with a lump of butter, the size of an egg, a tea-cup full of good cream, and a little salt to your taste, boil it a quarter of an hour. You may dress moor-game the same way only leave on the head; roast dotterel the same way.

To roast a haunch of VENISON.

TAKE one that has been kept eight or ten days, as the weather will permit, cover it with paper well greased with sweet dripping, wrap it up in brown bread paste an inch thick, then cover it again with greased paper, tie it on with packthread, roast it in a cradle spit (if you have one) put it down to a good fire, but not too hot at

at the first, if it weighs twenty pounds it will take three hours roasting, if fifteen, two and a half, mind to baste the paper that it does not burn, take off the paste, dish it up; pour some good gravy into the dish, take care your dish is very hot; send up with it currant jelly dissolved in red wine. You may roast a large leg of mutton cut in the shape of a haunch of venison the same way, it will require being kept longer; the shoulder and neck of venison may be done the same way.

To hash VENISON.

TAKE it when cold, cut it into thin slices, lay it into a stew-pan, with a little shallot chopped fine, a little chyan, and salt, its own gravy or any other good gravy, as much red wine as you have gravy, let there be as much as will cover it, just give it a boil, lay it on a hot dish, and send up currant jelly with it.

To pot VENISON.

TAKE any lean part of venison, put it into an earthen pot, with some pepper corns, a few cloves, a little salt, five or six bay-leaves, lay over it some sweet beef suet, put in a little water to keep it from burning, cover it close up, set it into a cool oven, it will take five or six hours baking gradually, then take it out into a bowl or mortar, pick out all the skin and gristles, beat it very fine whilst hot; mix beaten mace, grated nutmeg, chyan and salt together, strew it in as you beat it, you must season pretty high, then put it close down into pots and cover

cover it with clarified butter; mind your pots are dry, and keep it in a dry cool place; you may melt a little butter in a sauce-pan without flour or water, and pour it in as you beat it, take care you do not make it too moist; you may pot beef or hare the same way.

To stew PIGEONS.

TAKE pigeons that are fresh killed, pick them clean and draw them, cut off the pinions and feet, wash them well, truss them as you would a small chicken for boiling, dry them with a cloth, season them with mace, chyan, nutmeg and salt, put a little force-meat into the craws, sew up the pigeons at both ends, fry them in butter over a quick fire, make them a good brown, take them out of the pan and lay them on a hair sieve to drain, put them into a stew-pan with a pint of good brown gravy, season the gravy as you did the pigeons, put in a little shred lemon-peel with eight morels, stew them gently half an hour, then skim off the fat, put in two spoonsfull of walnut and two of white-catchup, two or three spoonsfull of white wine, the same of red, a little lemon pickle, three or four spoonsfull of good melted butter, a little flour and water to make it a proper thickness, stew them a quarter of an hour longer, dish them up, put into the dish hard eggs, and pickled mushrooms, garnish with lemon.

To jug PIGEONS.

TAKE pigeons when fresh, clean and truss them as for stewing, stuff and season them, sew them up, take a jug, put your trimmings in with an onion, some lean veal, a few white pepper corns, five or six cloves, a good blade of mace, put your pigeons in with the breasts downwards, put in half a pint of soft water, lay over them half a pound of butter, cover the jug close, so as no steam can get out, set your jug into a kettle or pan of cold water, let the water come up as high as the pigeons, so as not to run into the jug, they will take two hours stewing, mind to keep the pot boiling all the time, and keep up the quantity of water; take out the pigeons carefully, strain the gravy, take all the fat off, put the gravy and pigeons into a stew-pan, with a little shred lemon-peel, two anchovies, pickled mushrooms chopped small, grated nutmeg, two spoonsfull of white-catchup, the same of white wine, and two of good cream, a little lemon pickle, chyan and salt to your taste, three or four spoonsfull of good melted butter, stew all together fifteen minutes, add flour and water to make it a proper thickness, dish it up, put into the dish morels, and hard eggs, garnish with sliced lemon.

To roast PIGEONS.

TAKE pigeons when fresh, pick and clean them well, skewer them with the legs upon the breasts, season them with a little pepper and salt, chop the livers with some parsley, put some into the inside of every pigeon with a lump of butter, roast them half an hour before a brisk fire, dish them up, put a little good melted butter into the dish, garnish with crisped parsley and lemon.

To

To make FORCE-MEAT for PIGEONS.

TAKE a little fat bacon, beat it in a marble mortar, take two anchovies, two or three of the pigeons' livers, chop them together, add a little lemon-peel shred, a little beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, stale bread crumbs, and beef suet an equal quantity, mix all together with an egg.

To boil young CHICKENS.

TAKE chickens, pull and pick them clean whilst warm, let them hang one night, then drain them, cut off the heads and legs, then truss them, if your chickens be fat do not break the breast bone, lay them into milk and water two hours, rub their breasts with lemon juice, dredge them and put them into boiling milk and water, if they are fine chickens half an hour, if small twenty minutes; dish them up, and pour the sauce over them, garnish with sliced lemon and chopped parsley; to make the sauce, take the neck, gizzard and legs, steep them and wash them very clean, put them into a little soft water with white pepper corns, two or three blades of mace, one onion, one anchovy, a piece of lemon-peel, stew them till the goodness is out, then strain it, chop the lemon-peel and put it into the gravy again, with some grated nutmeg, a lump of butter about the size of an egg, a spoonfull of white-catchup a tea-cup full of thick cream, and a little flour and water, make it the thickness of your cream; boil it a minute.

To roast CHICKENS.

IF they are small truss them with the heads and legs on, do not break the breast bone, twenty minutes will roast them before a brisk fire, baste them with butter, and dredge them, before you draw them, strew some chopped parsley over their breasts, dish them up, and pour a little melted butter into the dish, garnish with boiled parsley and lemon.

To fricassée CHICKENS.

TAKE chickens and half roast them, when cold, cut them up, if your chickens be large cut the joints into two, take off the skin, season them with a little beaten mace, grated nutmeg, lemon-peel shred very fine, chyan and salt, stew them in butter ten minutes, turning them over in the butter, do not let them brown, then put in a tea-cup full of white gravy, one of good cream, two spoonsfull of white-catchup, one of white wine, a little grated nutmeg, and salt, thicken it with flour and water, dish it up with pickled mushrooms in the dish, garnish with sliced lemon and chopped parsley.

To pull CHICKENS.

TAKE chickens, either roasted or boiled, when cold, cut off the legs handsomely, pull the white part into small long shreds, season it with beaten mace, shred lemon-peel, chyan and salt; make gravy of the bones, with an anchovy and an onion, (boil the lemon-peel in the the gravy before you shred it,) put the meat into a stew-pan, strain the gravy to it, put in two or three spoonsfull of good cream, the same of melted butter, one of white-catchup, a little lemon juice, and a little flour and water to make it a proper thickness, boil it four or five minutes, lay it on the dish, score the legs, pepper and salt them, broil and lay them upon it, garnish with lemon. You may do turkey, partridge or any other cold fowl the same way.

To roast a PHEASANT.

TAKE a pheasant that has been kept in the feathers five or six days, and pull it leaving the feathers on the head, take care of the long feathers that came out of the tail, skewer the head to the breast as if looking forward, and skewer the legs on the breast, as you would partridge, cover the head with a little writing paper buttered to keep the feathers from burning, then put it down to a brisk fire, it will take half an hour if a middle size pheasant, and so in proportion, when you dish it up, take the paper from the head and stick the long feathers into the tail, pour some good brown gravy on the dish, and send up bread sauce with it.

To fricassée RABBITS.

TAKE young rabbits, wash them well, then cut them into small pieces, lay them into milk and water an hour to steep the blood out, then dry them with a cloth, season them with a little beaten mace, grated nutmeg, lemon-mon-peel shred fine, a little chyan and salt, put a lump of butter into a stew-pan with the rabbits, set it where it will be hot, take care not to brown them, stew them half an hour, keep turning them over in the butter, add a tea-cup full of white gravy, one of good cream, two spoonsfull of white-catchup, a little lemon pickle, two spoonsfull of good melted butter, a little flour and water to thicken it, stew all together ten minutes, dish them up as the chickens.

To boil a TURKEY.

TAKE a turkey, cut off the legs and head, truss it as you would a fowl for boiling, lay it in milk and water, an hour or two, drain it well, put some force-meat into the craw made of beef suet shred fine, stale bread crumbs an equal quantity, a bit of lean veal the size of an egg, beat it in a marble mortar, pick the skins out, put to it an anchovy chopped, a little beaten mace, a little nutmeg, chyan, salt, lemon-peel shred fine, and a little lemon juice, mix these all together with an egg; sew up the craw, rub the breast well with lemon juice, dredge it a little, pin it up in a clean cloth, boil it in soft water and milk, put your turkey in when it boils, boil it gently, if it is a large one it will take an hour and a quarter, if a middling size, an hour, dish it up, and garnish with lemon; you may serve it up with oyster sauce, celery, or or white sauce; you may dress a full grown fowl the same way.

To roast a TURKEY.

TAKE a turkey, cut off the feet, leave the head on, put force-meat into the craw made as for the boiled turkey; truss it up as you would a fowl for roasting, turn the head under the wing and skewer it, roast it an hour and a quarter, if small an hour will do, if the breast burns too quick, butter a piece of paper and put over it. dish it up and put some good brown gravy into the dish, garnish with lemon; serve it up with bread sauce. Dress a full grown fowl the same way.

To roast DUCKLINGS.

TAKE young ducks when fat, kill them in the morning on the day you intend to use them, pick, singe, and draw them, wipe them with a clean cloth, but do not wash them, season them with white pepper ground, salt, a sprig of thyme, and one of pot-marjoram, a small bunch of young onions chopped, put these into the inside with a lump of butter the size of a walnut, skewer them, tie up the ends; if they are fine ducks, they will take half an hour before a brisk fire, if small twenty minutes will do, dish them up, pour the gravy through them when they are on the dish, send up with them coddled gooseberries, or sorrel sauce; make the gravy as thus, take the necks, gizzards, liver and a few young onions, a little salt, stew them in soft water till the goodness is out. Dress a green goose the same way.

To dress Ducks in Winter.

TAKE ducks, season them with ground pepper and salt, a few sage leaves, an onion chopped, put these into the inside with a lump of butter, two spoonsfull of water, skewer them and tie up both ends, roast them half an hour, before a brisk fire, pour some good gravy into the dish.

To dress wild Ducks.

KEEP them ten days or a fortnight, when you draw them if there is any blood in the inside put it into a small dripping-pan with the necks, gizzards, and livers, put to them a large onion, stuck with cloves, and some pepper corns, put in a pint of water, set it before a fire in the dripping-pan, a quarter of an hour before you put the ducks down (neither season nor wash them) roast them twenty minutes before a brisk fire, if they are very fat and large they will take half an hour, stir the gravy in the pan as they roast, when enough, strain the gravy through a hair sieve into the dish, draw your ducks, strew bread crumbs brown'd round the dish, and send some up upon a plate.

To dress wild Ducks another Way.

TAKE wild ducks, draw them clean but do not wash them, leave the blood if any in the inside, season them with a very little pepper and salt, put into each duck a small onion, stuck full of cloves, a bit of butter, the size of a walnut, three sage leaves, tie them up at both ends, roast them before a brisk fire twenty minutes, or half an hour, according to the size, dish them up, pour some good brown gravy into the dish, with three spoonsfull of red wine, pour some of it into the ducks, strew bread crumbs round the dish, and send some upon a plate. You may dress teal and wild geese by either of these receipts,
of

To dress a STUBBLE GOOSE.

TAKE a goose, kill, and hang it up in the feathers, two or three nights as it suits you, when you dress it, season it well with pepper and salt, take two middle sized onions, half a four apple, a few sage leaves, chop these well, and put them into the inside with a lump of butter, the size of an egg, and a tea-cup full of water, tie it up close at both ends, if a large goose it will take an hour and a half, if a small one an hour, and so on in proportion, dish it up, pour into your dish some brown gravy, with two spoonsfull of red wine, the same of ale, serve it up with apple sauce.

CHAP. V.

OF PUDDINGS, AND PIES.

To make a PORK PYE.

TAKE from a loin, neck, or any nice part, an equal K quantity

quantity of fat and lean pork, cut it into pieces the size of a crown piece; shred some onion and apple not very small, season the meat with chyan, white pepper, salt, and dried sage, lay in your dish a layer of seasoning, and one of meat, alternatively till filled, then add some lumps of butter, and put on the lid: you may make it a raised pye.

To make a CALF'S HEAD PYE.

TAKE a fine calf's head, boil it till the bones come out, then season it with nutmeg, chyan, lemon-peel, and a little salt, make a rich paste, put it over a deep dish that will hold it, then put in your meat with a little good gravy and bake it three quarters of an hour, thicken your other gravy with flour and butter, put to your gravy a little beaten mace, nutmeg, chyan, lemon-peel and juice, two spoonsfull of ale, a small cup full of white wine, with walnut and white-catchup, according to your taste; take your pye out and add gravy as you see it wants, an hour will bake it, put over it brain cakes, force-meat balls, and hard eggs browned with a salamander, and garnish with lemon.

To make a CALF'S HEAD PYE another Way.

TAKE a calf's head and steep it a night in soft water; boil it in milk and water till you can take out the bones, then score it deep on the side you take out the bones, season it well whilst hot with chyan, beaten mace, nutmeg, lemon-peel shred, and salt, then put it close together ther into a deep dish with the lantern upwards, put to it a pint of good brown gravy with some morels; lay it half an inch thick with cold butter, put it into an oven, and stew it gently half an hour, then take it out, let it cool, take off the fat, then have ready, a good pye paste, lay it round your dish edge, then melt the butter you took off, with a little flour and water, two spoonsfull of walnut-catchup, a tea-cup full of madeira wine, and the juice of lemon; cut the tongues into small slices and spread it over the head, drop in a few force-meat balls and hard eggs, just boil the sauce and pour over it, put it into an oven and let it stay till the paste is nicely baked, so send it up.

To make WHITE PUDDINGS.

TAKE a pound of ground rice, a large stick of cinnamon, the rind of a lemon peel'd very thin, cree these in new milk very stiff, stir into it when hot a pound and a half of beef suet shred very fine, two spoonsfull of rose water, the same of almond water, a large nutmeg grated, a little salt and a very little chyan; take it off and when cold have ready beat, six eggs, a pound and a half of currants clean'd and well dried, mix these well together, if you think it too thick, thin it with cream, have ready candied orange, cut into small pieces, as you fill the skins put in bits of orange, as you do bits of fat into black puddings, mind to give them plenty of room in the skins, prick them with a pin, and put them into boiling soft water, boil them ten minutes, put them into clean straw till quite cold, lay them into a sieve and cover them with paper, keep them in a dry place.

To make BLACKCAPS.

TAKE fine large pippins, cut in two the cross way that the stalk may be uppermost, then take a flat pewter dish, put on it a little rose water, what sugar you please, fine sifted sugar is the best, a little lemon-peel, stick into the inside of the half apples some cinnamon, lay the outside of the apples down upon the dish, set them into a pretty hot oven, when cold put them on a dish, garnish with lemon-peel.

To make WATER CAKES.

TAKE a pound and a half of fine flour, six ounces of fine sugar beat and sifted, one ounce of caraway-seeds, rub them well together, mix them up with a pint of good cream, roll it out into very thin sheets and cut them into round cakes; bake them upon tin sheets and prick them very thick, or they will blister.

To make MINCE PIES.

TAKE six large lemons, roll them with your hands upon a table, cut them in two, take out all the inside, squeeze it well, and take care of the juice, then boil the rind in soft water, shifting the water till the skins are quite tender, beat them well in a marble mortar, put to them three

three eggs boiled very hard, and three baked apples chopped very fine, a pound and a half of beef suet chopped fine, two pounds of currants washed, picked, and dried well by the fire, two pounds of the best rasins, ston'd and chopped a little, five or six blades of mace, a large nutmeg, a quarter of an ounce of cloves, beat these well in a marble mortar, and half a pound of loaf sugar beat and sifted, mix these well together in the juice of lemons, and half a pint of the best brandy, a tea-cup full of white wine, put it close down into an earthen pot, put a tea-spoonfull of salt, cover it with a paper dipped into brandy, keep it close from the air in a cool dry place; when you take any out, stir it up well with your hand and cover it close again, this will keep five months, and be better at the last than at the first; every time you make pies add to the meat you take out a little brandy and the juice of a seville orange, bake it in small tins in a rich light paste.

To make MINCE PIES in a plain Way.

TAKE a pound of the inside of a back loin of beef when roasted, a pound of good baking apples, (pare and core them before you weigh them,) the rind of a large lemon, a pound and a half of beef suet, chop all these very fine, then have ready two pounds of currants washed, picked and dried as before, and two pounds of rasins ston'd and chopped, a quarter of an ounce of cloves beat and mix all these well together, with juice of lemon, a tea-cup full of brandy, the same of verjuice, or rasin wine, wine, half a pound of fugar beat, put it into a pot and cover it down as before directed, remember to add a tea-spoonfull of salt.

To make CURD for FINE CHEESECAKES.

TAKE twelve eggs and boil them hard, shred them fine, take a pound of currants cleaned, a pound of melted butter, three quarters of a pound of fugar, a nutmeg, and two raw eggs, mix all together, and bake it in a very fine paste.

To make MACAROONS.

TAKE a pound and a half of almonds, put them into cold water all night, then put them into warm water and blanch them into cold water, then hang them up in a bag to drain, rub them in a clean cloth, take half an ounce of lemon and orange-peel together, and slice it to a few of the almonds and beat them in a marble mortar, or a bowl very well then put in all the rest and beat them well, when almost enough beat, put in three spoonsfull of rose water, and when beat enough, put in a pound and a half of fine fugar all the lumps being broke, then take the whites of six eggs, and whisk them till they are of a froth, then put them to your almonds and fugar, stir them all together, then drop them upon double sheets of wafer paper, laid upon tins, grate a little double refined fugar upon them, put them into an oven to bake, that will not colour white paper, when you draw them cut them them all loose and set them in the oven three, or four minutes to dry.

To make BARBERRY CAKES.

DRAW off the juice as for currant jelly, take the weight of it in sugar, boil the sugar to sugar again; then put in the juice and keep stirring till the sugar is dissolved, let it be hot, but not to boil, then pour it out, and stir it three or four times, when it is near cold drop it on glasses in little cakes, and set them into a stove; or you may drop them into an earthen dish, and set them before a slow fire or in the sun to dry.

To make CARROT FRITTERS.

BOIL three large carrots very tender after you have scraped them, beat them to a very fine pulp in a mortar, then rub them through a hair sieve; to every carrot put the yolks of three eggs, and whites of two, a small handfull of flour wet with cream, beat them half an hour, sweeten them to your taste, and fry them as other fritters.

To make little ALMOND PUDDINGS.

BOIL a quart of milk, or thin cream, pour it over the crumbs of a stale penny loaf, clear half a pound of butter, take eight eggs, leave out four of the whites, beat them well, and put a spoonfull of the best flour, half a pound of sweet almonds blanch'd and beat, a little orange flower water, sweeten it to your taste, stir all well together, butter your cups, do not fill them too full, bake them twenty twenty minutes, serve them with the bottoms upwards; for fauce, wine and fugar.

To make YORK GINGERBREAD.

TAKE two pounds and a half of stale bread grated fine but not dried, two pounds of fine powder fugar, an ounce of cinnamon; half an ounce of mace, half an ounce of ginger, a quarter of an ounce of fanders, and a quarter of a pound of almonds, boil the fugar, fanders, ginger and mace in half a pint of red wine, then put in three spoonsfull of brandy, a little cinnamon and a quarter of an ounce of cloves, stir in half the bread, on the fire, but do not let it boil, pour it out and work in the rest of the bread with the almonds then smother it close half an hour, make it into cakes about an inch thick, and bake them a quarter of an hour, keep them dry.

To make GINGERBREAD another Way.

TAKE a pound of treacle, one ounce of ginger powder, a quarter of a pound of fugar, a little butter, two wine glassees of brandy, mix as much flour by degrees as will make it into a soft paste to roll into cakes, it must be beat very well, and baked on tins, not in a very quick oven, you may put caraway seeds in if you like them.

To make GINGERBREAD in Tins.

TO three quarters of a pound of flour put half a pound of treacle, one pound of fugar, and a quarter of a pound of butter, mace, cloves and nutmeg, in all a quarter of an ounce;

ounce; a little ginger and a few caraway-seeds, melt the butter in a glass of brandy, mix all together with an egg, then butter the tins, and bake them in a pretty quick oven.

To make a LARGE PLUMB CAKE.

TAKE three pounds of the very finest flour, put it through a hair sieve, mix in it a pound of loaf sugar beat and sifted, two ounces of cinnamon and mace, a large nutmeg, all beat pretty fine, then have ready whisked sixteen eggs, take out six whites to beat for icing, mix the eggs very well and put them into the flour, with a pound of fine fresh yeast, not bitter, put this upon the eggs, have ready a pint of sweet thick cream and two pounds of butter, whisked to a cream, a small glass of brandy, beat into the butter, or cinnamon water, with your hands beat it smooth tough and white, let it stand some time before you bake it, to rise; have ready cleaned and well dried, five pounds of currants, two pounds of candied citron, the same of candied orange and lemon cut into proper pieces, a pound of blanched almonds cut into pieces; then make ready your cake rim papered and buttered; when the oven is ready, get the cake ready, take a little of the paste before you put in the currants, to put over the cake when in the frame, a very little will do, mix the currants and almonds in very well, as you put in your cake, strew in your sweet meats, as exact as possible, then cover it with

paste

paste left for that purpose, lay over the cake double paper buttered, bake it about two hours if a good oven, when baked take it out of the rim, let it stand till its pretty cold, for the icing keeps whiter and closer on the cake; you must make your cake rather hollow in the middle, it bakes better and prettier for the icing.

To make ICING for a PLUMB CAKE.

TAKE a pound of double refined sugar beat fine, and put through a tiffany, have ready steeped in rose water, or orange flower water, a pennyworth of gum dragon, steep it the day before you make your cakes, froth the whites of the six eggs you left for that purpose, on a plate with a knife till you make it like snow, and set it up like a hill, strain the gum through canvass, and with a little of the white beat it well in a marble mortar and some of the sugar with it, till its fine and smooth, then take out the beater, and with the back of a spoon beat it well about, keep mixing in the sugar and the whites, till its all mixed and of a proper thickness, so put it on your cake with a large knife over the top and sides, be sure not to make it too thin.

To make a SMALL PLUMB CAKE.

TAKE two pounds of flour, a pound and a half of butter, half a pound of sugar, rub the butter into the flour, grate in half a nutmeg, put in three or four spoonsfull of light yeast, six eggs, as much cream as will make it it a proper stiffness, set it before the fire to rise, about an hour before you bake it, then have ready washed and dried, a pound of currants, put them in, mix all together and bake it an hour and a half.

To make a POUND CAKE.

TAKE a pound of the best flour, dry it well and let it stand till cold, take three quarters of a pound of butter, work it well with your hands, for half an hour, then take eight eggs, (leave out the whites of three) a whole nutmeg grated, the rind of one lemon grated, a glass of brandy, three quarters of a pound of fine loaf sugar beat and sifted, a quarter of an ounce of caraway-seeds beat and sifted, then mix all together and beat them half an hour more, have ready a few currants, or whole caraway-seeds which you please, put a sheet of writing paper well buttered into your tin, put it in and cover it with the same, bake it an hour.

To make LITTLE SUGAR CAKES with Currants.

TAKE a pound of fine flour sifted, a pound of butter, rub your butter well into the flour; then take two or three spoonsfull of light yeast not bitter, and with it work it up to a stiff paste, put nothing else to it; have ready, better than a quarter of a pound of currants washed and dried, take four ounces of fine sifted sugar, a grated nutmeg; mix your currants, sugar and nutmeg well together, then break your paste into little bits, and work it round in your hand like a ball, put your thumb into the middle and raise it round like a pye, put in some currants, then lay it upon the table, dust your hands with flour, and flatten it down on the edges, but leave the middle rather high, then put them on half sheets of paper floured, and bake them, but not brown; when they are hot, dust them with fine sifted sugar over the tops; you may work currants all over the paste and make them into little cakes.

To make SHREWSBERRY CAKES.

TAKE a pound of fine flour sifted, a pound of fine sugar sifted, and a pound of butter; (rather less butter is better) rub into your flour, the sugar, and butter very fine, then beat the yolks of four eggs, with a spoonfull of rose water, orange flower water, put all together, and make a stiff paste, roll it out pretty thin, and cut it with the top of a glass, or what form you please, lay them on white paper floured, prick them with a fork pretty well and bake them in a slow oven, after you have taken other things out.

To make WIGS.

TAKE a pound of fine sifted flour, better then half a pound of butter, two spoonsfull of sifted sugar, rub your sugar, butter and flour together very well, strew in a few caraway-seeds, the yolks of two eggs, a little light yeast, and a little brandy; make it into a light paste, then into

into little round wigs, do the tops over with egg and milk, and strew over them caraway comfits; you may put in for seasoning, beaten cinnamon and a little grated nutmeg.

To make WIGS another Way.

TAKE two pounds of flour, dry it and let it stand till cold, melt a quarter of a pound of butter in as much newmilk as you think will mix the flour, take two spoonsfull of new yeast, (not bitter) four eggs, beat this as you would for french rolls, make your flour into a paste, let it stand to rise, then add sugar and caraway-seeds to your taste, with a glass of brandy, mix these well together, lay them on a tin and bake them after the bread is drawn; you may add currants if you please.

To make PUFF PASTE.

TAKE a pound and a half of fine flour well dried, a good spoonfull of sifted sugar, and break into it a pound of butter, have ready the yolk of one egg mixed with as much cold water as will make the flour into a stiff paste, work it smooth but not too much; this is for tarts, when you make a pasty omit the sugar.

To make PUFF PASTE another Way.

TAKE a pound of fine flour, put it through a sieve, have ready the whites of two eggs frothed like snow, and mixed with as much water as will make a stiff paste, let
the

the paste be very stiff, work it well and roll it smooth; take as much butter as there is paste in weight, roll the paste pretty thick on the table, put on thin bits of butter and flour, double it and roll it again, so on till the batter is done, be sure you touch it as little as possible; it is fit for tarts, or what you please.

To make HARD DUMPLINGS.

TAKE the best flour, shave in a little fresh beef or mutton suet, when your beef boils and your pot well skimmed, make this into a stiff paste with the boiling liquor, work it well, make it into very thick cakes, about the size of the bottom of a plate prick them when cool, put them into the pot, and let them remain till the beef is enough, take them out with a skimmer, and scrape the outside, serve them up with cold butter and yorkshire dip.

To make a LIGHT HASTY PUDDING.

TAKE a little new milk, put it into a brass-pan, beat an egg with a table spoonfull of flour, and a little salt; you may use stale bread crumbs instead of flour, set it on a slow fire, keep stirring till it boils, let it boil a quarter of an hour, stir it all the while; this may be eaten with wine and sugar.

MAIDS of HONOUR.

TAKE half a pint of sweet curds, beat them in a marble mortar till they are as smooth as cream; put in half

half a pint of cream, the yolks of four eggs, the whites of two, well beaten and strained, a quarter of a pound of fresh butter melted, a little lemon-peel grated, and nutmeg, one ounce of candied citron, shred very fine, a glass of brandy, and a spoonfull of orange flour water, sweeten it to your palate with powder sugar; mix these ingredients well together; have your patty pans very small, sprinkle them with flour, and cover them with a thin puff-paste, then fill them better than half full with the ingredients, and bake them in a moderate oven.

To make ALMOND CHEESE-CAKES.

TAKE six ounces of almonds blanched, and beat in rose water, six ounces of butter beaten to a cream, half a pound of sugar, six eggs well beaten, and a little mace, bake these on cold butter paste in little tins.

SHORT PASTE, and ICING for it.

TO four ounces of flour, put two ounces of butter, and one ounce of sugar, which must be heated as well as the flour, then work them together. For the icing, take the white of an egg beat it well, put it on your tarts, with a feather, dredge them with fine sugar, sprinkle a little cold water over them, to prevent them burning.

To make SAVOURY PATTIES.

TAKE cold roast lamb, or veal, chop it fine, put it into a sauce-pan, with anchovies chopped, garlic or shallots, lots, lemon-peel shred, beaten mace, chyan and salt to make it savoury, a lump of butter and a spoonfull of thick cream, stir it over the fire, till the butter is melted; then make a rich light paste, lay it into the tins, put in a piece of bread to keep it hollow, then put on the lid, bake them quick a light brown; then take them out of the oven, take off the lids and put in the meat hot, set them into the oven again a little while; you may put in stewed cockles or oysters.

To make BLACK PUDDINGS.

PUT a pint of thin cream to a quart of blood, the cream to be boiled and put to the blood when cold, take a quarter of a peck of onions, boil and squeeze them through a hair sieve, a pint of groits creed and put to them when cold, put a few bread crumbs, a pound of beef suet, shred fine, with some of the leaf cut small, and some of it rendered, add two leeks, a little thyme, penny-royal, a lemon-peel chopped small, with pepper, salt, mace and nutmeg, to your taste, add six eggs, mix all well together, put them into your skins, boil them in soft water twenty minutes gently; then take them out and lay them on clean straw till cold, then boiled again when used a quarter of an hour: do not fill the skins too full.

TAKE cauliflowers broken into neat pieces, white cabbage cut into small quantities, a few heads of celery neatly cut, a few small onions, and potatoes peeled, and some endive (if white and not bitter;) boil these separately in milk and water, drain and keep them hot; raise the walls of your pye; fill it with some thing to support it and lay on the lid, bake it sufficiently to stand, but not quite enough take off the lid, lay in the vegetables neatly in rows; thus, a row of cauliflower, a row of onions &c. add chyan, salt and beaten mace as you go on, then put on your lid again; bake your pye half an hour more, take care not to burn it; have ready good fricassée sauce, take off the lid, pour over it the sauce, and serve it up without the lid.

To make PLUMB FRITTERS.

TAKE five spoonsfull of the best flour, one of new yeast that is not bitter, four eggs, four ounces of butter melted in as much milk as will mix it, as you would rolls,

rolls, beat it well, till it leaves your hand and the bason, cover and set it by the fire till it rises, then add two spoonsfull of brandy, one of rose water, one of almond water, the rind of half a lemon and the juice, a little grated nutmeg and sugar to your taste, put half a pound of currants well cleaned, fry them well and send them up with grated sugar, wine sauce is proper.

To make APPLE FRITTERS.

MAKE your paste as before directed, pare and chop four good baking apples small, put to them a little grated nutmeg, shred lemon-peel and sugar to your taste, fry them as before, serve them up with grated sugar. The same paste will do for bacon and ham scraped very fine.

To make RICE FRITTERS.

TAKE a quarter of a pound of ground rice, as much cream as will cree it stiff, with a piece of lemon-peel, as it boils stir in six ounces of butter, a little grated nutmeg, stir all together till cold, take out the lemon-peel, shred it fine and put it in again, take eight eggs, leaving out three of the whites, a little sugar with a spoonfull of rose water, mix all well together and fry them neatly as any other fritters; send them up with seville orange.

To stew PIPPINS.

TAKE the little hard golden pippins, pare them fine and thin, bore a hole through them, to one pound of pippins

pippins take a pound of double refined fugar, put it into your pan, wet it with water, then let it boil and stand till cold, put your pippins into the pan to your fyrup, cover them well with it, and strew a little fugar over them, cover them with paper, set them on a clear fire, and skim them, when they boil take them off, let them stand till cool and set them on again, and so on till they are tender and very clear, then put to them a little renish wine, and the juice of one lemon, pare a lemon very thin and lay amongst them on the dish, so send them up to table, either hot or cold.

To make STRAWBERRY FOOL.

TAKE a quart of cream, let it boil, take it off, stir it till pretty cold, have ready beat with a little thick cream six yolks of eggs, and put to it, sweeten it to your taste with sifted fugar; add a quart of strawberries, make it hot, and serve it up, this is a pretty corner dish.

To make GOOSEBERRY FOOL.

TAKE young gooseberries, pick and coddle them, rub them through a hair sieve with the back of a spoon, have ready some thin cream (according to the quantity you wish to make) boil it with a stick of cinnamon, and a little lemon-peel, take out the seasoning, when cold mix all together, sweeten it with loaf fugar to your taste.

To make CURDS.

BEAT six eggs with a quart of sweet cream, set a quart of water on the fire with a little salt in; when it boils put in the cream and eggs, give it a boil, put it into a cullender with a piece of white linen cloth at the bottom to drain through, it will be twelve hours before it is fit for use.

To make SAVOURY JELLY.

TAKE a pound of lean beef, a small knuckle of veal, half a pound of lean bacon, one head of celery, a carrot washed and dried well, a few white pepper corns, three or four blades of mace, a dozen cloves, a small bunch of chervil, one ounce of isinglass cut fine, half an ounce of hartshorn shavings, put all these into a stew-pan well tinned, with two quarts of soft water, cover it close, set it on a slow charcoal fire, stew it gently, stir it sometime till all the goodness is out, you may add a calf's foot or two, it will make it stronger, strain it through a hair sieve, squeeze the ingredients well: when cold take off the fat, then put it into a stew-pan with the whites of three eggs and the shells beat well together, a little chyan and salt, set it over a slow fire, let it boil, run it through a jelly bag, put it into your frame before it is quite set, put into your dish a chicken neatly roasted and larded with the breast downwards, a partridge, a pheasant, a woodcock, larks, or any small birds that will suit you, according to the size you would have your dish, this jelly, makes very good soup thinned with a little small gravy.

To make JELLY for FISH or PICKLES.

TAKE a gang of calf's feet well cleaned, put to them three quarts of soft water, stew them gently five or six hours, strain them through a hair sieve, when the jelly is cold take off all the fat; put it into a stew-pan let it just melt, but not be made hot; beat the whites of five eggs with three of the shells, the rind of a lemon peeled thin and the juice of three, stir these well together, set it on the fire, let it boil one minute, then run it through a jelly bag, put the jelly back into the bag till it comes clear, before it is quite cold put it into your frame or mould; you may drop into it any kind of pickles you please; these turned out look very well among cold things in different shapes, you may lay pickled smelts, prawns, or pickled herrings upon a dish and pour the jelly over them, garnish with parsley.

To make CITRON JELLY.

TAKE two ounces of isinglass, pulled very fine, put it into a pint of spring water, stew it in a silver sauce-pan, or copper well tinned, till all the isinglass is nearly dissolved, it will take a long time, when cold put it into a stew-pan with as much good sherry as you have stock, the rind of two lemons peeled thin, the juice of four, three spoonsfull of the best brandy, four spoonsfull of citron water, the whites of four eggs beat well with two of the shells, sweeten it with loaf sugar, stir it well, set it on a slow fire, boil it one minute, then run it through a jelly bag, you may put it into what kind of moulds you please, drop in small shreds of candied citron.

To make CALF'S FOOT JELLY,

TAKE a gang of calf's feet well cleaned, put to them three quarts of soft water, cover them close, stew them gently till its reduced to three pints, then strain it through a hair sieve, when cold take off the fat, to a pint of the jelly put a pint of good sherry or madeira, a quarter of a pint of brandy, the rind of three lemons and the juice of four, beat the whites of five eggs with three of the shells, put all these into a stew-pan with loaf sugar to your taste, stir them till the sugar is melted on a slow fire, boil it a minute, then run it through a jelly bag, put the jelly back into the bag till it runs clear, then put it into the moulds, if they are pots dip them into cold water, if in tins hot water, wipe them dry, and rub them with a little sweet oil, when cold turn them out on a dish, garnish with parsley or flowers.

To stew PEARS.

TAKE good stewing pears, pare them thin, lay them into a baking dish, have your seasoning ready, which is cut lemon-peel, beaten cinnamon and mace, a little cut ginger

ginger, a little red fander finely beat, and sifted fugar, to your taste, strew these over the pears, stick the pears with cloves, or clove pepper beat, put in a little water and red wine, bake them all night, when you put them into the dish, garnish with lemon-peel cut narrow, squeeze some lemon juice into the fyrup you put over them.

To make a MOUSE TRAP.

TAKE a pint of cream and eggs, prepared as if for custards to put into cups, fill your dish and have ready some fine jar rafins stoned, or dried cherries, stick these into the custard, have ready some clear barley-sugar as none else will do, set it by the fire till it dissolves, so draw it out into lengths and cross it, draw some of it as small as a thread, let the custard be cold in the dish before this is put on, garnish as you please.

To make the MOON and STARS in JELLY.

TAKE the dish you intend for the table, have ready some white jelly, the same as for flummery; likewise a mould the shape of half a moon and two or three the shape of stars, fix them on your dish before you put in your white jelly, which is to represent the sky, have ready some clear jelly such as is for glasses, when your white jelly is cold on the dish, take out the moulds of the moon and stars carefully, and fill up the places with the clear jelly but not hot, least it dissolves the white; its a pretty dish by candle light.

To

To make a TRIFLE.

TAKE macaroons, or round favoy biscuits, put them into the bottom of a dish, season with a little grated nutmeg, and as much white wine as will cover them, then lay round them a few different sorts of sweet-meats, make a boiled custard, when cold, pour it over them about two inches thick, then heap it up neatly with frothed cream; if in a long dish it is proper for a corner, if round, for a middle dish. To froth the cream, take a pint of the thickest cream you can get, grate the rind of a lemon, and fine sugar, mix all together with the whites of two eggs, whisk them half an hour, before you skim it, lay the froth on a tiffany to drain, lay it on your trifle just before you send it up.

To make CREAM of any SORT of JAM.

TAKE a spoonfull of jam, put it into a stone bowl with a spoonfull of cream, beat it well with the back of a spoon, then add more cream and the white of an egg well beat, whisk all together to a strong froth, lay a little of your jam on your dish or plate, put the froth upon it. To raspberry cream always add currant jelly.

To make a SYLLABUB.

TAKE half a gill of wine, the rind of a lemon, a little juice with sugar to your taste, a pint of thick cream, whisk it well, and lay the froth to drain all night, then put a spoonfull of red or white wine sweetened into your glasses and fill them up with the froth as high as you can, these are proper to set on a salver amongst jelly-glasses.

To make SYLLABUB another Way.

TAKE three pints of cream, boil it with cinnamon and mace, and a little lemon-peel, then take out the spices; take it off the fire and keep stirring it till it is new milk warm, then take a pint of white wine and the juice of a lemon, and as much sugar as will sweeten it, pour your warm cream to your wine, holding it very high, and pouring by little and little, cover it four hours or more; let it be in long glasses.

To make SNOW.

TAKE a pint of cream and the juice of a lemon, put it to a glass of white wine, and a glass of sack, pour it very high upon the cream by little and little, then take a wisk and tie a sprig of rosemary and some lemon-peel to it, and beat it till it is a froth, take it off into glasses, keep frothing it till you get it all.

To make WHITE ALMOND BUTTER.

TAKE four ounces of almonds blanched and beaten fine in a marble mortar, with a little cream, set it on the fire, take three yolks well beat, with a spoonfull of rose water, strain it into your cream, off the fire, as it must not boil, and put in your almonds, sweeten it to your taste, mix all well together, set it on a slow fire, stirring stirring it, only one way slowly, untill it is as thick as you can get it, then put it into a pot and let it stand till the next day, work it up with fine sifted sugar, and put it through a sqirt into a dish; it is pretty in a desert.

To make BARBADOES BUTTER.

TAKE a quart of good milk or thin cream, one nutmeg cut into four, a little cinnamon, tie them in a thin rag, take twelve eggs leave out six whites, and put to your eggs two spoonsfull of milk with a little rose water, strain them into your milk when it boils, keep it on the fire and keep stirring till it becomes a stiff curd, strain it very well through a clean cloth, till all the whey is out, take out the curd and beat it in a marble mortar with a little orange flower water, and some double refined sugar, beat it very fine and put it into a bason, smooth it down very close, the next day turn it out upon a dish, stick it with blanch'd almonds cut into lengths on the top, or green citron, lay round it frothed cream, if egg cheese you must put it into a mould made for that use, when it is turned out upon a dish you must put on it a thick custard, strewed with nonparel comfits, and serve it up, do not let the custard run off, the curd must be cold before the custard is laid on, this is pretty in cold entertainments.

To make LEMON CREAM.

TAKE a pint of water and the parings of two lemons, O (the

(the yellow or rind part only) let them stand three hours, put to it half a pound of fine loaf sugar, set it over a clear fire till the sugar is dissolved, add the juice of four lemons, beat the whites of six eggs but not to froth, when it is almost cold stir all well together, run it through a thin jelly bag, set it over the fire again, stir it and when thick take it off, put it into custard glasses.

To make a Dish of ROASTED APPLES.

TAKE small apples, roast them in a slow oven, till they are soft, mind they do not fall, have ready some rice, cree it stiff with a little lemon-peel in it and a stick of cinnamon, when the rice is enough take out the seasoning, put to it a spoonfull of rose water and one of almond water, sweeten it to your taste, when cold lay apples into the dish, lay the rice neatly over them, with a knife stick them with bit of candied orange, and garnish with any thing green.

To make a FLOATING ISLAND.

TAKE a quarter of a pound of the pulp of roasted apples, a quarter of a pound of sugar finely sifted, and the juice of three large lemons, the whites of three eggs; mix all together, and beat it two hours with a wooden spoon in a wooden dish, then put it into your dish and pour cream round it, the cream must be sweetened and some lemon-peel grated into it, heap up your rock as high as you can, which must be made of frothed cream.

To make a HEN'S NEST.

MAKE a very strong jelly and drop it into a large basin, then take three small eggs and blow them, fill them with blanc-mange, set them in wet bran, when cold break the shells off, put them into the basin before the jelly is quite cold or set, then take lemon-peel cut like straws, strew them carelessly upon the jelly like a nest, when it is quite cold turn it out into your dish for the table.

To make an ISLAND.

TAKE the whites of two new laid eggs and a little currant jelly, beat them together for an hour, have ready round your dish a little creed rice with some sugar, a little lemon-peel and a spoonfull of rose water, then put your island in the middle of your dish, and stick the rice with candied orange or lemon.

To make a CUSTARD.

TAKE a piece of sponge cake, or seed cake, lay it on a piece of paper in an oven, turn it over and toast it well, then cut it into square pieces, lay it on the dish you intend to send it up on, warm as much white wine with a little sugar and nutmeg as you think will soak it, pour it on the cake, keep turning it till its all soaked up, then pour over it a boiled custard, but let both be cold first, stick it with long pieces of candied orange, lay round the custard wine fours, damsons or any other red sweet-meats, garnish with flowers.

CHAP. VI.

OF DRESSING VEGETABLES, EGGS, AND CHEESE.

To stew CELERY.

TAKE large heads of celery, cut off the green ends and trim it neatly, stew it in water till soft, pour the water from it, then put in a little good gravy, a little lemon-peel shred, chyan and salt to your taste, thicken it a little, so send it up. You may make fricassée sauce to it if you choose.

To stew CUCUMBERS.

TAKE middle sized cucumbers, pare and cut them into four, take out the seeds and cut them into small squares, then put them into a sauce-pan with a few small onions whole, put a little water to them, boil them a quarter of an hour, then pour the water from them, and put gravy, chyan, salt, and a lump of butter, thicken with a little flower and water.

To stew CUCUMBERS another Way.

TAKE cucumbers, pare and cut them into slices half an inch thick; peel a few onions and cut them into slices, lay them on a hair sieve, strew a little salt over them, and let them stand to drain, dredge and fry them in a little fresh butter very hot, fry them brown, but take care not to burn them, lay them on a sieve again to drain, then stew them in a little good gravy half an hour, put in a little butter, thicken with flour and water, put in a spoonfull of walnut-catchup, season with chyan, and salt.

three

three onions, a little thyme, pot-marjoram, a small bunch of chervil, pepper corns, cloves, two or three bay-leaves, put to them boiling soft water, according to the quantity you want; one pound of beef will make a pint of gravy; cover it close, stew it gently, till the goodness is out, strain it, take off the fat, take care of the gravy which was left in the dripping-pan, when cold mix them together.

To make BREAD SAUCE.

TAKE the necks, gizzards and livers of turkies, chickens, partridges, or any kind of fowls you want the sauce for, and a bit of lean meat, put them into a sauce-pan with a little soft water, a few cloves, pepper corns and a large onion, boil them well, take some stale bread crumbs, and strain it upon them, put the crumbs and the gravy into the sauce-pan with two ounces of butter a tea-cup full of cream and salt to your taste, boil these well, if too thick add more cream.

CHAP. VIII.

OF PRESERVING.

To preserve PEACHES.

TAKE six pounds of double refined sugar, clarify this gradually

gradually; this quantity will do for an hundred peaches; when it is clear put in your fruit, which must be rubb'd in a cloth to take off the dawn, boil them quick, when they soften they are enough, lay them in a sieve to drain, when cold, put them into a glass jar, and as much brandy as will cover them, let them stand three days, boil the fyrup till clear, drain the brandy from the peaches, measure an equal quantity of each, mix them well together, pour it over the peaches and cover them up close; you may do apricots and nectarines the same way.

To preserve CUCUMBERS.

TAKE cucumbers fresh gathered, smooth and green, and not too ripe, the turkey sort are the best, put them into salt and water in an earthen pot and cover them with cabbage leaves, tie a paper over them, and set them by the fire till they are warm, keep them so till they are yellow, then put them into a brass pan with fresh salt and water, and fresh leaves, cover them close and set them on a slow fire till green, they must be made scalding hot, but not to boil, when green put them into fresh hot water and let them stand till cold, cut the large ones length ways and take out the pulp, put them into cold water changing them twice a day till the salt is out of them, then make a fyrup of double refined sugar, when cold, put the cucumbers in with a piece of race ginger clean washed and the outside scraped off, a little lemon-peel cut thin boil the fyrup every other day and when cold, cold, put the cucumbers in, skim it well till the syrup is thick and they look clear and crisp; it takes better than two pounds of sugar to one of fruit. You may do french beans or any other green thing the same way.

To preserve ORANGES whole.

TAKE seville oranges, with the smoothest and clearest skins you can get, grate a little of the rind off as even as you can, take a round bit out of the top, so as you can take the pulp all out, be careful not to break the sides of the orange, put them into spring water in an earthen pot, let them stand two days and two nights, change the water twice in the time, then tie them up singly in fine linen, put them into cold spring water, boil them gently an hour, take them out and drain them well, weigh them, and to every pound of orange take a pound and a half of fine sugar, put the sugar into a stew-pan and to every pound of sugar put half a pint of spring water, just melt the sugar, take it off the fire, beat the white of an egg in two spoonsfull of spring water, stir it well in the syrup, set it on the fire and as the skim rises take it off till clear, boil it ten minutes and pour it over the oranges, let it stand two days, then boil the syrup again, a quarter of an hour, and pour it over them (mind to skim it) let them stand three or four days, then put them into a stew-pan with the syrup, boil them gently a quarter of an hour, keep turning them all the time; then put them into the pot you mean to keep them in, pour

pour the fyrup over them, when cold, dip papers into brandy and lay over them, tie them up close.

To preserve ORANGES in quarters with the pulp and juice in.

one ounce of salt petre, beat fine, rub these well in, then take two large hands full of common salt, rub this well in, lay them into an earthen pot, let them stand a week, then turn them over and wash them with the brine once in three days, till they have been three weeks in pickle, then take them out, wipe them dry and dredge them with wheat flour, hang them up to dry, not too near the fire the slower they dry the better, when dry hang them in a cold dry place, till you want to use them, then steep them one night, set them on in cold soft water with a bit of clean hay, boil them very gently four or five hours as they are for size, set them up in an hair sieve to stand as high as you can, if you would have them black, rub them over with a little butter and burnt cork, while they are hot, if red take off the outside skin; these are proper to eat cold. The best time to cure them is from november to march, if the weather be frosty take care to keep them from it.

To stew MUSHROOMS to keep.

TAKE large buttons or small stewers, peel them into a jar with a little salt, take white pepper, mace and a few cloves, tie the spices up in a little gauze, stew them an hour in a slow oven, put them into a stew-pan, to a quart of mushrooms put half a pint of red wine, boil them three or four minutes, when cold, put them into a jar or wide mouthed bottle, cover them up very close, set them in a cool dry place, these will keep four or five months or more,

more, these are good in made dishes, or to send up as stewed mushrooms.

To make LEMON PICKLE.

TAKE two dozen of lemons, peel off the outside rind, cut them into four quarters, but do not cut the bottoms, take two ounces of bay salt and half a pound of common salt, rub it well in, lay them upon a dish and dry them before the fire or in a slow oven till the juice and salt are dried in, then put them into a jar with an ounce of mace, half an ounce of cloves, one of nutmeg beaten fine, four ounces of garlic beat and half a pint of white mustard seed tied up in a gauze, pour on them two quarts of boiling hot white wine vinegar, close the jar well up and let it stand five or six days by the fire, shake it up often, then let it stand three months in a dry cool place, then pour all together into a hair sieve, press the lemon so as to get all the juice out, let it stand till the next day then clear it off into bottles, cork them well up; it is best in pint bottles, then cut the lemons into four and put them into the jar with the ingredients, pour over them as much boiling hot white wine vinegar as will cover them, then cover the jar close, and let them stand a fortnight; strain it from them, boil it and pour it over them again, these are good to send up as pickles, or a little sliced into made dishes, a tea-spoonfull of the vinegar gives a pleasant tartness to sauces.

To make WALNUT-CATCHUP.

TAKE walnuts when young and soft before the kernel forms, crush them well in a marble mortar, put them into a canvas bag, then in a press so as to bring out all the juice, then to every quart of this juice, put a pint of the best white wine vinegar, one pound of anchovies chopped fine, stir these well together in an earthen pot, let it stand twenty four hours kept from the air; put all together into a stew-pan, set it over a slow fire, take off the scum as it rises, boil it ten minutes then strain it through a hair sieve, cover it close and let it stand all night, then clear it from the sediment, put the sediment into a flannel bag, hang it up and let it drop into it, then measure it again and to every quart put half an ounce of horse-radish cut into slices, half an ounce of race ginger, a quarter of a pound of shalots with two cloves of garlic, an ounce of white pepper corns, half an ounce of cloves, and a quarter of an ounce of mace, put your catchup into a stew-pan, with the horse-radish, ginger, pepper, shalots and garlic, boil it gently twenty minutes but do not skim it; put the rest of the seasoning into a pot, pour the catchup boiling hot over them, cover it close down and when cold put it in dry quart bottles with the spices in it, before you cork it up, put into every bottle a large nutmeg cut into pieces, cork them and rosin the corks, tie bladders over them and set them in a cool dry place, this will keep seven years, it should stand half a year before it is used.

To make MUSHROOM-CATCHUP.

TAKE large mushrooms, break them into small pieces, rub some salt amongst them and let them stand three or four days in a cool place, then put them into a pan, set them over a fire, just give them a boil, then squeeze them very dry, let the liquor stand to settle and clear it off, put it into a stew-pan with ginger, pepper corns, cloves, half a dozen bay-leaves, a dozen cloves of garlic, boil it gently half an hour, when cold put it into dry quart bottles, cork it up and set it in a cool dry place as before directed.

To make OYSTER-CATCHUP.

TAKE an hundred large oysters with all their liquor, a pound of anchovies, three pints of white wine, half the peel of a lemon and the lemon sliced, boil them gently half an hour, strain them through a hair sieve, add a quarter of an ounce of cloves, the same of mace, and of nutmeg, then boil them a quarter of an hour, put in two ounces of shalots, when cold bottle it with the spices and shalots in.

To make WHITE-CATCHUP.

TO a pint of white wine vinegar, put ten anchovies, simmer them over the fire till dissolved, then strain them, when cold put to them a pint of sherry or white port, two hands full of scraped horse-radish, the peel of a large lemon, lemon, two nutmegs sliced, a few cloves, a little mace, some white pepper and ginger, fifteen or twenty shalots; bottle it with the spices, and after six months clear it, and put more vinegar and wine prepared the same way to the same spices and it will be as good as at first. This is proper for white dishes.

To make GREEN PICKLES.

TAKE gerkins gathered dry, rub them with a dry cloth, put them into strong salt and water with a good many cabbage leaves free from worm eat and canker, a large handfull of fennel, the same of vine leaves, set them in a back kitchen or pantry not near a fire, stir them once or twice a week with your hand, let them stand till they are quite yellow, then pour the salt and water from them into a brass-pan, pour it over them boiling hot, cover them close, and set them within the air of the fire, repeat this once a day till they are a good green, then drain them well, tie your fennel in bunches and cut your cabbage leaves into shreds about an inch and a quarter in breadth, put them into a jar and pour as much boiling hot alegar over them as will cover them, boil it the next day and cover them, drop in a lump of allum the size of a walnut, let them stand three days then drain them well from this; take good alegar, a small stick of horse-radish cut into slices, a dozen shalots, four cloves of garlic, eight or ten bay leaves, some white pepper, some long pepper cloves, boil these five minutes, pour it into the jar you mean to keep it in, cover it close down, when cold put your your pickles in, tie them close with bladders, and keep them in a cold dry place. You may do french beans, mangoes, mellons for mangoes, storsion buds, radish pods, all in the same pots if they are ready. You may do small codlings the same way, but they are the best alone, they take so long greenning.

Directions for MANGOES.

TAKE large cucumbers, cut the ends off even, take out all the seeds with a narrow spoon; green them as for pickling, when green, take scraped horse-radish, black mustard and shalots, garlic, storsion buds if you have any, chop your shalots and garlic a little with some race ginger, a few cloves and long pepper, mix these together and fill your mangoes quite full, sew the end on neatly, make your pickles for them as for your gerkins only to every quart of alegar add an ounce of black mustard seed, when these pickles have stood a fortnight, strain the alegar from the seasoning and pickles, give it a boil and pour it over them boiling hot; if the alegar is wasted add more so as to cover them.

To make INDIA PICKLE.

TAKE the best white wine vinegar you can get, to every quart, put half an ounce of white pepper, a quarter of an ounce of race ginger, six shalots, four cloves of garlic, boil these over a clear fire five minutes, pour it into a very large jar, if you intend to make any quantity, let it it stand till cold, then sew up a piece of calico in the form of a pincushion, put into it a quarter of an ounce of mace, the same of cloves, two ounces of white mustard seed, half an ounce of the best turmeric root a little crushed, two drams of shred saffron, and twelve bay-leaves, sew these up close, but leave room in the bag for the seasoning to swell, put this bag into the vinegar, if this stands a month before any thing be put in it, it will be better, take cauliflowers before too much blown, break them into handsome pieces, do not pare the stalks, lay them into an earthen pot with salt, let them stand three days, then pour over them hard water boiling hot, let them stand a quarter of an hour, then drain the water from them into a brass-pan, boil it and pour it over them again, take them up with an egg slice, lay them upon a large hair sieve, cover them with a strainer, set them where there is both air and sun, bring them to the air of the fire every night, do so till they are as dry and hard as they can be made, then put in your pickle. To do cabbage for it, take a large cabbage that has stood, from early cabbage till white, take the outside leaves off, cut it round as you do red cabbage, pick out all the thick stalks, lay it into a pincushion with a little salt, treat it the same as the cauliflower till its ready for the pickle. To do codlings, take codlings when very small, gather them dry, lay them in salt as before and do them as the other, when they begin to wither put them into the pickle, they do not require much drying, do not put any asparagus gus tops or artichoke bottoms in as they turn soft and will spoil your pickle, as the vinegar soaks up into your pickle, boil more and let it stand till cold and keep your pot filled up, keep it covered close from the air, when you use this pickle take a spoon, do not put your hand in, if you wish to have it high coloured tie up a little saffron in a bit of clean gauze and put in it.

To make INDIA PICKLE for common use.

TAKE white wine vinegar or good alegar, boil it and let it stand till cold, mix half an ounce of the best flour of mustard smooth, and put it in with a tea-spoonfull of the best turmeric powder with some white pepper corns and race ginger, then treat your coulisflower and cabbage as before, you need not be quite so particular about the drying of this being for common use.

To pickle WALNUTS.

TAKE walnuts when young, gathered dry, prick them through with a large pin two or three times, put them into salt and water, shift them once in three days for a fortnight, put them into a sieve and let them stand a day in the air, then put them into an earthen pot, if you have any four ale or small bear, boil as much as will cover them well, pour it over them boiling hot, let them stand three days, put them into a sieve and let them stand in the air another day, if you have no four liquor you must use alegar for the pickle, take to every quart of liquor or alegar half an ounce of black mustard seed, half an ounce of horfe-radish cut into slices, a quarter of an ounce of long pepper, three cloves of garlic, a dozen cloves, four or five pieces of race ginger, and a few shalots. boil these ten minutes, and pour it boiling hot over your walnuts, let it stand a fortnight, if your liquor proves bitter, strain it from them, boil more alegar and put to them, but if not bitter they are fit for use; mind to put your seasoning in again, take the pickle that you strained from the walnuts (that is if you have occasion) and measure it, put it into a stew-pan, to every quart put a quarter of a pound of anchovies chopped small, let it stand an hour and stir it well, set it on a slow fire, take off the scum as it rises, boil it ten minutes, pour it into a narrow bottomed pot, cover it close and let it stand four and twenty hours, then strain it off, put it into dry bottles, into every bottle put six cloves, six bay-leaves and a piece or two of ginger, cork it up close, rosin the corks and keep it as any other catchup, this is very good for fish sauce or any other brown dish.

To pickle MUSHROOMS.

TAKE mushrooms as small as you can get, cut off the stalks, put them into a little salt and water a few at a time, rub them with a piece of fine flannel dipped in salt, then throw them into milk and water with a little salt, put them with the milk and water into a brass-pan, give them a boil, strain them through a hair sieve, spread them on a cloth on a table, cover them with another, boil some white wine vinegar, put it into a jar, when both are cold, put in your mushrooms, cover them close down, this will stand a fortnight, therefore if you do not get your quantity at first, you may take them as they come and prepare them and put them into the vinegar. To make the pickle, take the best white wine vinegar you can get, boil it well and skim it, put mace and white pepper corns in a pot, pour your vinegar boiling hot over it, cover it close down and let it stand till cold, then drain your mushrooms well from the vinegar, put them into dry wide mouthed bottles, put the vinegar and seasoning to them, give them a shake, cork and rosin them up, keep them dry as other pickles: I do not approve of sweet oil or any other thing put on the top: I find this answers better than double distilled vinegar.

To pickle MUSHROOMS brown.

TAKE mushrooms as before, cut off the stalks and clean them, you need not be so exact about the size if they are but close, you need not use any milk, salt and water will do, make your vinegar ready as before, put them in for a fortnight or three weeks as they fall in your way. To make pickle for them, take good aleger, to a pint put a tea-cup full of red wine, have ready in an earthen pot a few cloves, white pepper and a little ginger, pour the aleger boiling hot over them, then drain the mushrooms from the aleger, put them into dry bottles as before directed.

To pickle ONIONS.

TAKE small onions, the proper time is when the crop is dressed about michaelmas; peel them and throw them into milk and water with a little salt, let them stand two days and two nights, then drain them, put them into an earthen pot and strew a hand full of salt over them, then pour as much boiling hard water in as will cover them, let them stand twenty four hours, then drain them well, put them into a sieve and let them stand a day in the air, then put them into a jar and pour over them as much boiling hot alegar as will cover them, let them stand a fortnight, then make pickle as for mushrooms; drain them from the liquor they are in and bottle them as before directed.

To pickle ROCK-SAMPHIRE.

TAKE rock-samphire, scrape the stalks and cut them neatly, lay them into a broad pot, lay a layer of samphire and sprinkle a little salt, then a layer of samphire and so on till done, put as much four ale as will cover it if you have any, if not you must use vinegar, it must stand twenty four hours, then pour the liquor off into a brass-pan, when boiling hot pour it over it, let it stand a night and repeat the same, lay it on a hair sieve and set it in the air to dry, mind that all pickles set in the air get no wet. To make your pickle, boil good alegar with long pepper and ginger, when cold put in your samphire, tie it close and keep it as other pickles.

To pickle BARBERRIES.

TAKE barberries gathered dry, pick out some nice bunches, as many as you want; then pick the stalks and the dirt from the rest, beat them well in a marble mortar and squeeze them through a strainer, to a large tea-cup full of this put a small tea-cup full of the best white wine vinegar, stir it over a slow fire and let it boil ten minutes but do not skim it, pour it into a narrow bottomed pot, cover it with a plate, stir it two or three times whilst it is cooling, let it stand twenty four hours, then clear it off into a jar, when you are sure your barberries are dry, put them in and keep them as any other pickle; mind you get the maiden barberry, for the black stone barberry will neither pickle nor preserve.

To pickle RED CABBAGE.

TAKE red cabbage, take the outside leaves off, cut it round into thin slices, lay a layer of cabbage then a thin layer of salt into a tin cullender, let it stand two days, take a pennyworth of cochineal beat it in a marble mortar, then put your cabbage into a jar and strew your cochineal amongst it, make your pickle of good ale alegar with long pepper and ginger boiled well together, when cold pour it over your cabbage, in a week this is fit for use; red cabbage is not good for any use till michaelmas, when the frost has touched it.

To make GOOSEBERRY VINEGAR.

TO every gallon of water take two pounds and a half of the coarsest sugar, and boil it about a quarter of an hour, when almost cold, put to it a little yeast and work it for three days stirring it twice a day, then take gooseberries and prick them and press out the juice, which put to your sugar and water just before you put it into the barrel, let it stand four or five months before you bottle it; a quarter of a peck of gooseberries is sufficient for five gallons of water; a little red currant juice gives it a pretty colour.

To make SUGAR and WATER VINEGAR.

TO every four quarts of water put one pound of coarse sugar, mix the sugar and water together when cold, whisk the whites of two or three eggs, beat them to froth, put them in and boil it a quarter of an hour stirring it all the time, till the scum has done rising, then put it into a tub and when new milk warm, put in two or three spoonsfull of yeast, when it begins to work barrel it and in a few days put a paper over the bung and set it in the sun; this will not keep pickles.

CUCUMBER VINEGAR.

TAKE fifteen large cucumbers, pare and cut them into very thin slices, put them into an earthen pot, add two onions sliced, shalots, and half a good head of garlic, a hand full of salt, one of ground white pepper, and as much chyan as will lay upon a fix-pence, pour upon them a quart of boiling hot vinegar, let them stand four days, then filter the liquor and bottle it with whole pepper.

To cure HAMS or CHAPS of BACON.

TO a ham of twenty pounds weight, take half a pound of the coarsest sugar you can get, four ounces of salt petre beat fine, rub the sugar in with half the salt petre, take three large hands full of common salt, rub that well in, lay it upon a table with the skin downwards, sprinkle on the rest of the salt petre, let it lay a week, rub in another hand full of salt then let it lay a fortnight, turning it once in two or three days, rub it well with a clean cloth, dredge it with fine flour, hang it up to dry, keep it as far from the fire as you can, when fit to take down, keep it in a cool dry place, from this direction you may cure chaps and flitches, minding to add salt according to the weight.

To cure a HAM with TREACLE.

TO a ham of twenty pounds weight, take one pound of bay-salt, two pounds of common salt, two ounces of salt petre, and one ounce of black pepper, beat all together, and rub the ham well with it and let it lay four days turning it every day, then put half a pound of treacle and let it lay a month, turning and rubbing it with the

the brine every day, then put it into water twenty four hours, before you hang it up to dry, remember not to soak it any more when you use it, but put it into the water boiling.

To pickle RED CURRANTS.

TAKE currants when turned red but not quite ripe, gather them when dry; take the juice of currants, to half a pint of juice, put a tea-cup full of white wine vinegar, white pepper corns and a few pieces of white ginger, boil this half an hour, keep stirring it but do not skim it, pour it into the jar you mean to keep them in, cover it close and let it stand, spread your currants on a dish and let them stand two days, then put them into the pickle, look at them often, if they speck, boil your pickle again and pour it over them when cold.

CHAP. X.

OF MADE WINES, &c.

To make ELDER WINE.

TO every peck of berries, take four gallons of water, boil them together an hour, strain the liquor through a sieve and squeeze the berries well; to every gallon, put three

three pounds of fugar, to every ten gallons, put four ounces of ginger, boil all together one hour, when almost cold put in a little yeast, let it work three or four days, you may keep it in a cask six months, then bottle it.

To make ORANGE WINE.

TO six gallons of spring water, put twelve pounds of single refined fugar, and the whites of fourteen eggs well beaten, put these to the water cold, then let it boil three quarters of an hour taking off the scum as it rises, when cold, put in six spoonsfull of yeast, and six ounces of syrup of lemon beaten together, put in the juice and rind of fifteen large oranges thinly pared, mind that no white or seeds go in with the juice which should be strained, let all these stand two days and two nights in an open vessel, then put it into a barrel and in three or four days stop it down, when it has stood three weeks then draw it off into another barrel, and add one quart of brandy, then stop it close again and in a month it will be fine enough to bottle, and to use in a month after.

To make COWSLIP WINE.

TAKE four quarts of water, put in two pounds and a half of fugar, stir it till the fugar is melted, beat the white of an egg and stir it well in, then set it on a slow fire, stir it as it begins to warm with a brass ladle, then cover it, as the scum rises take it off, put in two ounces of white ginger a little bruised, and a stick of cinnamon, boil it half an hour, and pour it out; when cool have ready the rind of six lemons and one seville orange, two quarts of cowslip peeps, put them in and stir them well; have ready a toast of french bread an inch thick, spread it on both sides with new ale yeast, put it in before it is quite cold, and let it stand twenty four hours, then stir it with the ladle, mind not to put your hand in, repeat this for six days, then have ready a clean dry cask, take out the toast and squeeze it between two trenchers, put the wine into the cask, put in with it the juice of your lemons and orange, leave out a gill of the wine and dissolve in it an ounce of isinglass, put it into the cask, and stir it well once a day for three days, then make it up, let it stand a month in a cool dry place, then bottle it, to every bottle put two spoonsfull of the best brandy, this will be ready to drink in a month, it will keep a year, if you wish to keep it longer it must be made stronger. After this make good ginger wine, to a gallon of water take an ounce of the best race ginger a little crushed, to that put a pound and a half of good powder sugar, and the white of an egg, boil it and scum it as before directed, when cool, work it with a toast as before, take the toast out and put the wine into the cask you drew the other out, stir it with a stick for three days, then make it close up, this will be ready to drink in ten days, when it begins to taste strong enough of the ginger, bottle it off and to every bottle put a spoonfull of brandy, cork it close.

You

You may make ginger wine when no cowslips. As sugar in England is so dear, I shall not enlarge on made wines as bought wines are much cheaper.

To make GINGER WINE.

TO a gallon of water put a quarter of a pound of the best race ginger, a stick of cinnamon and twelve cloves, to them put a pound and a quarter of loaf sugar, stir it well till the sugar is melted, before you put it on the fire, skim it as it rises, boil it half an hour, pour it out into a pan-shion, add the rind of three lemons, when it is about new milk warm, make a toast of stale bread, toast it very brown but not to burn it, spread it on both sides with new ale yeast, put it in and cover it with a cloth; let it stand twenty four hours, then put in the juice of the lemons, stir it every day for three days, then put it into a dry clean barrel, bung it up, this is ready for use in three days, when you find it gets strong of the ginger and grows flat, bottle it off, and cork it well, this will keep five or six weeks, to make it for longer keeping, you must put two pounds of sugar to the gallon.

ELIXIR for the GOVT.

TAKE of the essence of daucus seed fourteen pints, seven ounces of virginia snake root cut very fine, english saffron in shreds, steep these together for seven days, then strain the liquor off, add extract of rhubarb and centaury of each seven ounces, extract of jalap root four ounces,

U 2

extract

extract of black hellebore one ounce, the rob of juniper and buckthorn-berries each four ounces, regenerated tarter two ounces, of white sugar candy in powder fourteen ounces, digest them twenty four hours, then strain it off through a flannel let it stand all night, pour the liquor off gently and keep it for use.

TINCTURE for the GOUT or CHOLIC or any sudden complaint of the STOMACH

TAKE a quarter of a pound of the best rhubarb, a pound and a quarter of raisins chopped small, half an ounce of corriander seeds, the same of fennel seed, a quarter of an ounce of cochineal and a quarter of an ounce of saffron, a quarter of a pound of legnum, put all these into a gallon of the best french brandy, infuse them in a stone bottle for ten days, strain it off, then put your ingredients again into your bottle, with the same quantity of brandy, bottle the tincture, it will keep seven years; when you use it, take two spoonsfull of peppermint water, to one of the tincture, this has taken place when no other thing could remove the gout from the stomach; where there is the gout I would advise them never to be without peppermint and tanfy water.

To make STOUGHTON'S DROPS.

TAKE the rind of three large seville oranges, peel them, lay them on a paper and dry them well, take a quarter of an ounce of gentian root when well dried, and one

one dram of shred saffron, put them into a wide mouthed bottle, boil a pint of spring water, and a quarter of a pound of refined sugar, boil it ten minutes, skim it well, when cold, put in a stick of cinnamon and bottle it with a quart of the best french brandy, shake this every day for a fortnight, then filter it, fill up your bottle and cork it.

To make TINCTURE of RHUBARB.

TAKE half an ounce of the best turkey rhubarb cut fine, two drams of gention root cut, two drams of cinnamon cut, and five grains of saffron, put them into a wide mouthed bottle, boil half a pint of spring water with a quarter of a pound of fine sugar, boil it well and skin it, put it into the bottle, set it within the air of the fire, shake it every day for ten days, then put in a pennyworth of the best sepatary aloes, with a quart of the best french brandy, it will keep seven years, when you use this, put a spoonfull of peppermint water or spring water to it,

SPIRITS of LAVENDER.

TAKE lavender flowers one ounce and a half, rosemary half an ounce, cinnamon and nutmeg of each a dram, cochineal a quarter of an ounce, infuse these ingredients in a pint of french brandy a fortnight, shake the bottle every day and filter it through cap paper.

ALE,

ALE POSSET.

TAKE stale white bread, cut off the crust, and cut the crumb into very small pieces, put them into new milk, let it boil, warm a little good ale with a little sugar and nutmeg; put the ale into a basin, pour your milk and bread upon it, give it a stir, so serve it up, if you wish your posset to curdle put as much ale as milk, if you prefer it smooth put in but a little. Make wine posset the same way.

To make MULLED WINE.

TAKE white wine (any kind but raisin) to a tea-cup full of wine, take two spoonsfull of water, some loaf sugar, a bit of cinnamon, a little grated nutmeg, stir this on the fire till it boils; have ready the yolks of two eggs well beaten, with two spoonsfull of cold wine, and two tea-spoonsfull of cream, mull it backwards and forwards till frothed and smooth. Mull ale the same way, only leave out the water.

To make MILK SAGO.

TAKE sago, wash it and pick it clean, put it into soft water, let it just boil, pour the water from it, put to it as much new milk as will cree it, keep adding more milk as it wastes to make it the thicknes of rice milk; a bit of cinnamon and lemon-peel must be put in with the milk, but taken out before it is served up, sweeten it to your taste taste, the last thing before you serve it up, send up dry toast.

SAGO with WINE.

WASH your sago, and scald it as before, pour off the first water, then add as much more water with cinnamon and lemon-peel as will cree it stiff; thin it with red wine and boil it a quarter of an hour stirring it all the time, sweeten it, and cut slices of lemon in your dish and pour your sago upon them, serve it up with dry toast.

RICE GRUEL.

TAKE rice, pick and wash it well, cree it in soft water, with a little cinnamon and ginger, till the rice is quite soft, then strain it off: the same rice will do again, as you want it warm it, adding a little wine or brandy as required with some sugar. If you have any pincushion rice it is much better in cases of sickness, take a small tea-cup full, put it into a silver sauce-pan with a quart of soft water, a bit of cinnamon, and two pieces of white ginger, stew this very gently over a clear fire till waisted to a pint, then pour it into a basin and when cold it will cut out like a jelly; a small quantity of this may be taken in any diet.

To make the best BLACK INK.

TAKE two quarts of rain water and one of white wine vinegar, add thereto twelve ounces of blue galls just broke, broke, let them stand by a fire five days, then put in five ounces and a half of green copperas and fix ounces of gum arabic beaten small, stir these six days more, bottle it up for use, after the liquor is drained off the ingredients will make half the quantity of good common ink more by adding two ounces of copperas and a little gum.
