the Editorial I thought mischievous, although not intentionally so. Dawson Williams was in bed all last week with lumbago. There is a poor editorial in the "Scotsman" about yesterday's ceremony here; in so far as it tries to bracket Simpson (chloroform) with you in the progress of Surgery! If Simpson could have killed the antiseptic method of treatment in its cradle, he would have done it! I shall try, when I go out in a letter. I have received many congratulations in regard to it and I send you one, which is from your old pupil and admirer - Fraser of Paisley.

My only nervousness was lest I said anything of which you might not approve.

I have sent a "Herald" to your brother, addressed
